

A 'random' compromise for selection?

BY RACHAEL DOLSON

The sibling exemption to the random selection process at Plymouth Canton Schools has been extended from three to four years, beginning with current eighth graders.

The extension will allow eighth graders with an older brother or sister at one of the high schools to opt to go to the same school. Previously the sibling rule was limited to three years, so that sometimes an incoming 10th grader would enter the opposite school that his older brother or sister had graduated from.

During the eighth grade students are randomly designated by computer to attend Salem or Canton, the two high schools at Centennial Education Park.

Although the board did agree Monday to extend the sibling rule from three to four years, two other proposals to change the random selection process fell short.

Trustee Dean Swartzwelter proposed an exemption be made for the child of staff employed at CEP. If the student was not chosen by computer to go to the same school that his parent worked at, he could opt to change to the school.

During discussion on the proposal it became apparent that there would not be enough votes to pass it and Swartzwelter formally withdrew his proposal from the table. Some board members indicated they were opposed to the concept of staff exemptions, others said there were too many unknowns in the proposal.

About 50 coaches, parents and students attended the Monday meeting to plea for the staff exemption. Most were concerned about students being assigned to the opposite school that their parents coach for.

A third proposal, to have no year limit on the sibling rule, was tabled.

A workshop is planned for Monday night for the board to define what other areas of random selection should be explored. Following the workshop, the administration will

New Plymouth Police Chief to grab City reins

BY BRIAN LYSAGHT

The City Commission will be asked April 1 to confirm Richard W. Myers as police chief.

The police chief selection committee chose Myers, currently chief of police in Atlas Township near Flint, from dozens of applicants, and four finalists interviewed over the last month.

Myers will take the city post April 15 from retiring Police Chief Ralph White, assuming the the City Commission approves the move as expected.

Myers will be asked to guide the department through any changes that may occur following the loss of the city-township police services contract, said City Manager Henry Graper. The City Commission hasn't publicly announced their plans for the size of the department -- whether it will remain at its current 20-officer staffing or reduce staffing through layoffs or attrition.

Myers was involved in the restructuring of the Atlas Township and Village of Goodrich police departments, which were merged during his tenure as police chief there.

"He was our first choice as far as the professionals were concerned and as far as I was concerned," Graper said. Consultants from Bartell and Bartell Ltd. interviewed candidates and helped in the selection process.

He will earn a salary of $35,500.

Myers has been chief in Atlas Township since Jan. 1984. Before that he was an Oakland County Deputy Sheriff and an Oak Park Public Safety Officer.

Graper said Myers wasn't hired because of his experience as a public safety officer, which has been studied and considered by the City Commission.

"We didn't hire Mr. Myers to deal with public safety," Graper said. "We hired him to run the police department and bring in any changes necessary."

Myers resigned effective April 12 from the Atlas Township Police Department, which is made up of three full-time, three part-time and four reserve officers. Atlas Township and Goodrich have a combined population of 7,500.

Myers said he thinks the job as Plymouth Police Chief represents a good opportunity and said he plans to move to Plymouth.

"This is a step up for me," Myers said. "But in many ways its the same type of job on a larger scale. Numbers don't scare me."

Myers said he may make minor changes in the department and that any larger changes, if made at all, will be decided by others.

This issue of The Community Crier marks an important change for our readers. We have switched body copy typefaces to make the paper more readable, clean and attractive.

Our new English Times body copy typeface is slightly larger than the Bodoni typeface we formerly used. It will reproduce easier on a printing press, thus making the final paper sharper, easier and clearer to read.

With this change, we will continue to produce a quality product for The Plymouth-Canton Community.

Graper said he will submit his proposal for the size of the police department to the City Commission along with budget recommendations on April 1. While he won't reveal his recommendation, he said the city budget would balance with a department of 12 officers and a chief.

Myers will be responsible for training two men as possible successors, a requirement of all city department heads, Graper said.

White says good-bye to City force

BY BRIAN LYSAGHT

Ralph White says the change will be both difficult and exciting.

He resigned last week after 17 years with the Plymouth Police Department last week after 17 years, the last two years of which he spent as chief.

He says it's probably the end of his police career because he's looking at employment opportunities, which he declined to discuss, in other fields.

He says he will miss police work -- parts of it at least -- and is looking forward to starting a second career in the business world.

"It's hard," White, 41, said. "(Seventeen years) is the good part of a lifetime. It's a majority of my career lifetime. Obviously after 17 years you build allegiances with a lot of people. That will be hard to leave.

"It's also an adventure."

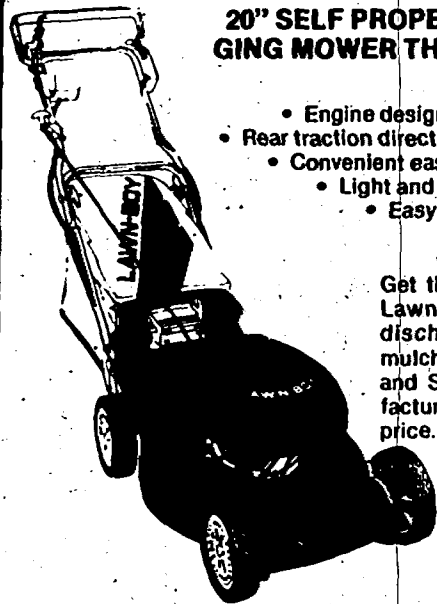

White's resignation is effective mid-April but he took a leave of absence beginning today. Lt. Robert Commire will be acting chief until Richard Myers, the recently selected police chief, takes over April 15.

White said he was vesting his retirement. The city offered him a

O.V. merchants seek B&E solution

BY BRIAN LYSAGHT

Please, can you help? We have had so many shop break-ins in Old Village that we are desperate. Please call the police if you see or hear anything.

Thanks so much

The note, left in mailboxes along Liberty Street, indicates the feelings of many merchants in Old Village and around the city who have been plagued with break-ins.

Some stores in the city have been burglarized as many as five times. Storeowners say they are frustrated and some say they're worried.

Plymouth Police have been unable to catch the burglars, though they say privately they have some suspects.

"A group of people out there are seeking opportunity and the opportunity is there," said Acting Police Chief Ralph White.

Old Village merchants gathered for a City Commission meeting last week and told commissioners that something needs to be done. Some said they didn't think it was a good time for the city to be considering cutting the size of its police department.

Two Liberty Street stores were burglarized the night of the City Commission meeting.

"I think the first priority of every city is to protect its citizens," said Brian Cross, of Brian's Sweet Shop on Mill Street. Cross' store hasn't been burglarized but he says he's concerned.

Old Village merchants are collecting signatures for a letter to be sent to local newspapers. The letter states opposition to proposed police manpower cutbacks.

Betty Nelson, of the Pineapple Sconce on Mill Street, began circulating the letter. She and other city merchants met with White and Acting Detective Mike Gardner last week to consider solutions to the burglary epidemic. She said merchants were told that the police department doesn't have the manpower necessary to keep city stores under constant surveillance.

"Basically what we're concerned about is if they are reducing the size of the police department; they still won't have the personnel," Nelson said.

Old Village merchants are considering starting a Neighborhood Watch group in response to the break-ins.

Tom Caviston, owner of Caviston insurance on Amelia, said his building has been burglarized three times since October. He said he has paid out $1,000 for stolen and damaged doors; glass and cash.

Police have told him they know who is committing some of the break-ins, he said.

"If they know who these guys are, why the hell don't they go out and pick them up?" Caviston said.

He said he has talked to other merchants frustrated with the break-ins and lack of arrests and said he plans to protect his property.

"I will not make any foolish statements and say I'm going to shoot someone but I will protect my property as need be," Caviston said.

Canton, schools discuss future, ways to work with each other

BY CHERYL EBERWEIN

The tone of the meeting was cooperation, the topics -- speculation.

Although discussion focused on speculative actions, however, a recent workshop held between the Plymouth-Canton School Board and the Canton Board of Trustees also brought several mutual interests to light.

Board members from both units of government discussed issues such as vacant school and township property and its potential uses, the collection of summer taxes and the addition of sidewalks to some school areas of the township.

At least two parcels of property were specifically discussed by board members. A 15.5 acre parcel of school land on the south side of Procter Road between Beck and Canton Center roads was studied as potential park property.

The property, which backs up to the Canton Recreation Complex, is currently being leased by Canton Township from the school board for $1 per year. Michael Gouin, supervisor of Canton's parks and recreation program, said, however, the township

Schoolcraft seeks candidates

Nominating petitions for candidates to the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees are now available in the President's Office on campus.

A pair of six-year terms on the seven-member board will be filled at the general school election on June 10. College trustees receive no pay for their duties.

On the ballot will be the seats currently held by Livonia resident Sharon Sarris and Canton resident Michael Butley, who is chairman of the Schoolcraft board this year.

Candidates must be residents of the college district and registered voters. Board members are elected at large from the college district, with no regard for geographical representation. The signatures of not less than 50 nor more than 200 qualified voters is required for nomination. There is no cost to file.

The deadline for completed petitions is 4 p.m. April 23. For more information, contact the president's office at 591-6400, ext. 217.

Three seek board seats

BY RACHAEL DOLSON

Three candidates have so far shown an interest in running for positions on the Plymouth Canton School Board in the June 10 election.

Incumbent David Artley and board appointee Dean Swartzwelter have taken petitions out at the board office. Swartzwelter, of 12560 Lighthouse Court in Plymouth Township, has already returned his nominating petitions and had them certified.

Richard W. Sumpter, of 42675 Beechwood in Canton, has taken out petitions and says he plans to challenge Artley for the four-year term. Sumpter ran unsuccessfully in a field of 11 candidates for two positions last year.

Any resident of the school district may pick up a nominating petition from the school board office at 454 South Harvey Street. The petitions should be returned to the school board office by April 8 with the signatures of at least 20 registered voters of the district.

Artley, of 8350 Honeytree in Canton, was elected to a two-year term in June of 1983. He plans to run for election, he said, to harvest the seeds planted by the board in the last two years. "I feel good about the time I've spent. It's like planting a crop and watering it and watching it grow, you can't always see the results today, it may take a few months," he said.

"With six other people (on the board) and the administrative staff I think we've done well. We've come along way in two years," he said.

Swartzwelter was appointed by the board three months ago to fill a vacancy created when Thomas Yack resigned. Swartzwelter finished third in the field of 11 last year that saw Nancy Quinn and Les Walker win board seats. Swartzwelter also ran unsuccessfully three years ago.

Cherry Hill culprits uproot tombstones

Vandals broke two tombstones and uprooted five others in the Cherry Hill Cemetery, March 19.

The damage was discovered by the president of the cemetery association and police were called in to investigate the crime.

Police said the front gate of the cemetery was open and two tombstones in the historic burial site had been destroyed. They were valued at $300.

Police said the vandals struck between 7:30 p.m. and 11:45 a.m. There are no suspects in the case.

Dog tracks thief

The nose knows... and in a recent Canton burglary the adage couldn't have been more true.

Canton police recently solved seven burglary cases with one arrest -- thanks to the combined efforts of Officer Ernie Sayre and his police dog Rico.

According to Detective William Keppen, Canton Police were called to the Wagon Wheel Mobile Home Park on Geddes Road at approximately 4 a.m. March 20. Keppen said the police received a call of a burglary in progress at one of the homes.

Upon arrival at the scene, officers learned a VCR unit had been stolen from the home minutes earlier. The officers called in Sayre and Rico and the dog picked up the trail of the thief.

Keppen said Sayre and Rico tracked the defendant over one and a half miles through fields, woods, a stream and across a road to his residence on Geddes Road. After a brief discussion, Keppen said Darrin Michael Strasdin, 19, was arrested and charged with breaking and entering in an occupied dwelling.

Keppen said after Strasdin was arrested, he also confessed to five other Wagon Wheel burglaries and one Van Buren burglary. Jewelry, stereo and television equipment and firearms have been recovered from Strasdin's home and other undisclosed places.

Strasdin was arraigned March 20 before 35th District Court Judge John MacDonald. He faces a preliminary exam April 1. He was released on a $3,000 personal bond.

Schools need 2 bond questions, should try Central renovation

Plymouth-Canton Schools would be smarter to extensively renovate Central Middle School, rather than construct a new middle school building in Canton.

There are legitimate problems at Central. Years of cutting from the maintenance budget have reduced that school, and others, to a sad state of disrepair. It will take millions of dollars to fix Central's roofs and hallways, repair bathrooms, replace classroom laboratories, and work on the heating system.

But school dollars are better spent on Central renovations than on a new school. Central is still sound enough to offer educational opportunities into the next century.

The proposed new school would have the supposed advantage of a Canton location -- a relatively immaterial point when most students would still be bused. A new school built at today's prices could not feasibly have the amenities -- pool, large gymnasium, stage -- that Central has.

Although a new $7 million school could have a wing for elementary classrooms badly needed in Canton, the folly of abandoning Central's 180,000 square feet is too great.

The school board would be best advised to place two bond options before the voters.

Option A would renovate Central and add new classrooms at the three overcrowded elementary schools in Canton. Option B -- somewhat more expensive -- would construct a new school for middle school and elementary students.

Both millage options would include money for other improvements everyone seems to agree on, such as permanent interior walls for Eriksson, Field and Hulsing; site improvement at all schools; technological equipment such as computers; individual school equipment needs; more warehousing space in the district.

Before leaping into future construction, the school board should take a humbling look at the folly of an earlier board which approved construction of Eriksson, Field and Hulsing in the 'open classroom' concept popular with the teaching staff then. That educational trend has just one decade later become a costly dinosaur simply because it's out of fashion. A lot of folks are saying, "We told you so," about building the schools around open classrooms or any other program.

Now is the time to remind the board members again about the need for long-term planning in constructing school facilities which are adaptable.

Should taxpayers of the 1990s be saddled with payments on a new school thought to be needed in 1985, that may later stand embarrassingly empty as the school population continues to decline? The school board should remember the angry reaction of voters to a school construction bond issue proposed while Central sat boarded up.

Let's see two bond issue proposals on the ballot. No doubt the less expensive route -- renovating Central -- will get a stronger show of voter support.

Are schools safe?

EDITOR:

Did you know that no one makes regular safety inspections in our schools?

The roof leaks in eight classrooms at Fiegel School. Plaster and ceiling panels have fallen, even hitting a parent on the head and children have dodged falling debris too. Lights have shorted out and new carpet is wet and will be ruined if this continues. It's so common that the kids take it for granted.

Fiegel isn't the only school in our district in this condition, there are many. Central, for example, will take over $1 million dollars JUST to bring it up to code to sell it. They need such basics as fire escapes!

We assume we're sending our children to school in a safe environment. I think parents should go to their children's schools and take a look around and ask some questions.

I have contacted the school board, the state Board of Education, Canton Township safety inspector, the Wayne County Health Dept. and state fire marshall — all to no avail. The School Board IS aware of this hazard. I was told "It's unsafe, yet it's safe."

Our principal has gone through proper channels and gotten nowhere. A new roof has been promised now for seven years.

Since September, we have passed a millage AND a millage renewal. We pay high taxes, which should maintain standards for safety. The state board of Education and our own board should make periodic checks for safety violations on a regular basis. We have enough money for salaries, but not enough to properly maintain our school buildings.

Are they waiting for someone to get hurt or maybe for the roof to collapse on a school full of children before they take action? What really concerns me is that in talking to all of these officials — not one of them seems willing to take immediate action to insure the safety of these children.

If they were — it would have been done seven years ago.

Down The Road

By Brian Lysaght

The $400,000 question in the city these days is: How small will the police department be in July?

Few seem to know the answer and those who may know are only whispering.

Though the newspaper business isn't always what I had cracked it up to be, I'm glad I'm not a low seniority cop in the city. While I don't think five years on the job makes low seniority, it won't be long enough to save a job if the police department is cut to 13 officers from its current 20. If the cuts go to 12, one six-year vet will get the axe.

A funny thing was happening last week. City Manager Henry Graper began talking about the police department and mentioning the number 13 in the same sentence. It had been some time since he had done that. More recently, I was used to hearing him mention the police department in the context of 20 officers.

Graper said he had had it with the police union. They offered him a concessions plan which he said he couldn't stomach so he offered them an "outlandish (as the union saw it) counter proposal.

Now neither side is talking too much. The union says there will be no concessions if there are layoffs.

If I had to make a wager, and I'm aware it is a bit grim to bet on the number of men who will lose their jobs, I would pick 14 officers plus a chief. That makes 15.

A 15 officer department would be larger than Graper wants. He says the budget will balance nicely with 12 officers and a chief and Graper is, in the end, a bean counter, a man who seeks the budget balance. And I think he likes to balance budgets easily without too much taking from that fund to give to that fund, at least as far as the police department budget is concerned.

The City Commission must approve the final plan for the police department. And there is a bit of heat on the commission these days, which is not uncommon, though it is election eve. Old Village merchants are organized and most are saying they oppose police layoffs. I'm not sure how much influence they have, though they certainly have potential.

And while voters will be choosing their favorite commissioners at the polls in August, perhaps the commission will be more accommodating of the concerns of Old Village and other city merchants.

Ralph White quietly slipped out of the police chief's office yesterday. He retired to make room for the new police chief.

He had been burned by Graper, and resigned as police chief in July. He became acting chief, whatever that means. It seems to me Ralph was a straight shooter. He worked hard and wanted to be chief. He reached his goal but may have found the job wasn't what he had expected. He was ordered to do things he didn't think needed to be done.

So he's looking now at starting a new career after 17 years as a Plymouth cop. He gave his best to the job and that's all you can ask from anyone.

Good Luck Ralph.

Unsolicited Remarks

By Rachael Dolson

School board races need more qualified candidates

There seems to be decreased interest in the Plymouth Canton School Board election this year. The fervor that brought 11 people out last year to run for two seats on the board seems to be lacking this year.

Is it an absence of strike-fever? A fear that current incumbents are too entrenched? A satisfaction with the current board? General apathy?

The first probably. The second probably not. Incumbent David Artley is attempting to be re-elected to his seat. Dean Swartzwelter is running to stay in for two years in the spot he was just appointed to several months ago — he can hardly be termed a strong incumbent.

Richard Sumpter, last year's no-millage-extreme-fiscal conservative candidate, plans to run to unseat Artley. Sumpter has been doing his homework well, and has kept his pledge made after last year's defeat that he would attend board meetings throughout the year and run again.

But where are the other candidates? Where is Steve Harper, nearly drafted into the appointee spot Dean Swartzwelter had. A true concern for the experience and continuity of the board — a sentiment he expressed while under consideration — would lead him to take out petitions now.

What about Carol Boll, Harvey Failor, and some of the other unsuccessful candidates of last year? Incumbent Glen Schroeder was dumped by the voters last year. Artley and Swartzwelter are at least as vulnerable, if not more so, than Schroeder was.

A good field of candidates makes for a more exciting race, for a better debate of the issues and more public accountability. So come on out!

Also on the local June 10 ballot will be two six-year terms on the Schoolcraft board. Incumbents Michael Burley of Canton and Sharon Sarris of Livonia will run again, according to the rumor mill. Canton's Burley is current chairman of the Schoolcraft board, but perhaps another local candidate should enter the field and add another voice to the typically Livonia-dominated board.

Some important land decisions face the school soon too. The board must develop a policy to deal with parcels of land still owned by the college in their square mile kingdom. As more and more development goes on there, the question becomes to sell to the private sector or to public or quasi-public service organizations and college spin-off groups.

For more information on running for school board, contact the Plymouth-Canton School office 451-6418 or the Schoolcraft College Office of the president at 591-6400.

Random selection may cause erosion of the family

EDITOR:

With regard to Rachael Dolson's Feb. 27 column: why should a school system impose emotional strain on a child and their family? It seems that educators continually complain that parents are responsible for their children's emotional and mental attitude in school. We as parents spend years developing the relationship with our children — why jeopardize it?

Possibly Rachael Dolson or those supporting her Feb. 27 article have never developed young people and experienced the feelings and closeness associated with their development. This relationship is extremely important when coaching or being a parent.

Why should a situation, an unnecessary situation, be created by putting a sibling in a competitive position against his parents? Should the parent step down as coach to prevent emotional strain to the family?

Your article in the Friends and Neighbors' department about Terri Bennett and myself and the Detroit Kennel Club, dog shows, etc. was very well done. Thank you and congratulations.

I have read a lot of newspaper articles about dog shows and the hobby over the years and have never read a better one. You are accurate in your quotes and anyone who has been misquoted will know how much accuracy is appreciated.

Chris Boyd did a great job with the photographs. My dogs are good watch dogs and since there is a new litter in the house they are even more protective than usual. At times he must have wondered if he was going to be eaten. Animal photography isn't the easiest of jobs.

Best wishes to you and The Community Crier. I think your newspaper generally does an excellent job.

The simple answer is yes! But is life, simple — no! What about the other 20 or more kids who desire coaching by this person! Is it fair to them?

Why should we develop a situation which can create more strain to a parent/child relationship? Isn't there enough pressure on our teenagers? Why take the chance of eroding the family base concept? How parents properly support their child when that child competes in one place and the parents coach elsewhere? What happens when the two teams meet?

Recently I coached for Northville High School in the league against Canton. I had developed relationships with Canton athletes through my daughter only to feel poorly that I couldn't encourage the boys against my team, unless it isn't head to head competition.

Strain was created for me due to the mixed feelings — how would it be for the kids? I would feel guilty if I encouraged a Northville girl against my daughter, if I had the opportunity to see her run which seldom occurred due to the schedule conflict.

Should the selection process continue as rigid — what about making the selection to the seventh grade level? My daughters attended different high schools, having different coaches because one was a ninth grader when the other was in 12th grade. The system didn't recognize ninth graders in the high school.

The ninth grader practiced and competed with Salem, only to be told in the spring she would go to Canton. Obviously, she and I realized she was being deprived of continuing in a successful program.

Emotionally ties were developed with Salem students and coaches through association with her older sister and athletics. Then the computer told her to mentally restructure her life and give up her attachments.

Why should a machine have that power?

Making the selection at an earlier year would properly prepare the child should they want to be involved in the programs. Possibly the younger child would want to be in the other school — let the computer make the selection but give the child the choice — if there is one!

This was an arrangement when moving into the school district and I had a step-daughter who drew Salem and my daughter drew Canton but was allowed to select Salem due to the older child's selection.

Let's not lose track of why we as parents and educators are here. It is to guide — emotionally, educationally and physically — our children and students.

My daughters always had a fear that I would coach against them — knowing how much I like coaching, the possibility was strong! It made me think twice about doing it!

From the Inside Looking Out

By Cheryl Eberwein

Do balloons make adults into kids?

A month ago, two hot-headed, egocentric residents met to duke out differences.

The Plymouth-Canton Community lost.

In one corner, allegedly holding the interests of his citizens and township close at heart, was Maurie Breen — Plymouth Township supervisor and unruly watchdog over his influence at the top.

In the other corner, allegedly holding the interests of his hotel, truth, fairness and government cooperation close at heart, was Scott Lorenz, general manager of the Mayflower Hotel and extravaganza entrepreneur.

The two had come to blows over the recently founded Mayflower Hot Air Balloon Festival. This two-year-old event was just beginning to soar when their angry explosion popped a hole in its bag and grounded it unnecessarily.

The turbulence began a month ago when talk of the festival first surfaced.

What shock awaited Lorenz when Breen welcomed him back like a prodigal son. Breen maintained Plymouth Township Park had suffered damage as a result of the festival. Breen himself had been forced to park cars throughout the weekend to deal with traffic congestion problems.

Lorenz, for his part, was angered the township would not welcome his event with open arms. Here was free publicity, color, fame and even some fortune if one got creative about shuttle bus service to the park.

The two argued for several weeks. Joint cooperation was not a legitimate point to consider.

The board intervened once — almost convincing Lorenz Plymouth Township was really interested in hosting his festival again.

But then came the big bust... Breen demanded 10 per cent of Lorenz's concession profits. It was the final blow — and Lorenz blew.

He called off his balloon festival, called upon other communities which might offer greener pastures and called Breen a stubborn idiot.

Breen retaliated appropriately, of course. If the hot air from that fight could have been harnessed, it may have fueled 10 balloon festivals.

But somewhere in all of this heated anger, an important element was lost. In bowing to egocentric behavior, both individuals displayed an inordinate amount of poor judgement.

The Plymouth-Canton Community lost more than two days of pretty balloons. It also lost some confidence in how its community leaders deal with conflict and work to resolve differences.

Compromise is a much maligned word these days. To compromise one's position is to take on the personality of a wimp. Or so the reasoning seems to go. But had Lorenz or Breen compromised their position, the festival would be on, both sides would have what they want and the residents would enjoy another year of unique color.

Breen insisted on a 10 per cent concession commission. Okay, so the demand doesn't properly address the benefits the township derives from the festival. Is 10 per cent really worth haggling over?

How wonderful it would have been if Lorenz had agreed to give the township its cut — but done it in a way which really would benefit the citizens. How about stipulating the 10 per cent be used for park improvements and tree plantings in Plymouth Township Park.

Breen may have been happy with the plan, Lorenz should have been happy to do it, and a reasonable alternative saved face for them both.

But, both men decided it was easier to gather their marbles and go home — depriving their residents and patrons the joy of participating in such a unique event.

Too bad for the balloon festival, but more importantly, is this the type of adult leadership The Plymouth-Canton Community can expect to see in the future?

If so, it may be a long, hot summer.

Why is Breen anti-Balloon?

EDITOR:

I do not understand Maurice Breen's attitude toward the Balloon Festival. This event plus the Ice Festival have been two positive happenings that should help the many new store owners in this money oriented area.

Surely there are Plymouth Township people who will profit from this lovely event.

I am 71-years-old and a recent resident of Plymouth, but I feel a bit of cooperation would help to continue a family oriented, good project.

How Ballenger hiked horse racing odds of success

The Sport of Kings, which has declined in Michigan in recent years to being the sport of serfs — and not many of them at that, will start its climb back to royal status Friday at 2 p.m. when the first call to post echoes across the 218 acres of the Detroit Race Course.

From abroad has come a savior, the ultra rich Ladbroke Group, PLC, (Publicly Licensed Corporation) which converted enough of its mother country English pounds into about $13 million U.S. dollars to buy operational control of the thoroughbred horse racing meets at the Livonia facility at Schoolcraft and Middlebelt roads.

"Aha," you say, "where's the local angle?"

It lies, fellow lovers of the turf, in the fact that the unsung hero of this equine rescue has his headquarters in downtown Plymouth (our Plymouth, not England's) as State of Michigan Racing Commissioner.

His name is William S. Ballenger, a tall and lean gentleman who will observe his 44th birthday tomorrow, the 28th, and who has received too little credit for engineering the biggest development in Michigan's thoroughbred industry since our Legislature approved pari-mutuel wagering in 1933.

Ladbroke bespeaks class. So does the name Ballenger, linked by old-timers in Bill's native Flint with formation of a spiffy little buggy manufacturing enterprise now known to the world as General Motors.

The commissioner's youthful educational pursuits led to degrees from Princeton and Harvard, plus post-graduate study in Europe, and then by golly if he didn't forsake it all to become a working newspaper reporter in Evansville, Ind.

A year of that underpaid, over-worked travail convinced him there must be greater rewards at the political trough, and he has been in public service ever since — including stints in the Michigan Senate and House of Representatives.

The thing is, despite never, never, ever having seen a horse race at an American track, Ballenger's qualities so impressed our then governor, William Milliken, that the governor appointed Ballenger racing commissioner in 1982.

Milliken needed a gutsy man for the job and he found one. In 1980, the Legislature had decreed that the two men who owned both DRC and Hazel Park must divest themselves of one or the other. It was Ballenger's vigorous pursuit of this edict that finally brought it about.

Within five years, the class of racing, and treatment of patrons, hopefully will be back at a major league level.

There was a time when the Dodge, Fisher and other great families of the Motor City raced their champion thoroughbreds here; Eddie Arcaro rode at Detroit; Calumet Farm, which produced such as Citation and

Through Bifocals

By Fred DeLano

Whirlaway, sent a challenger or two for the Michigan Mile trophy. But in 1984 thoroughbred attendance was its-worst in 43 years because management and racing were equally bad.

For one conclusive bit of evidence pointing toward where Ladbroke is headed, consider that Don Drew quit as executive vice-president of the New York Racing Association to run the Detroit Race Course. That's like 'Bo Schembechler coming here to coach ninth grade football!

Presumably you know that a horse is of the same family as the ass and zebra. Each has a single hoof, meaning the hoof is solid, and without toes, distinguishing it from all other animals. A day at the track can be fun, but when you visit the reborn DRC be careful you don't lose more than your horse!

retirement package he described as "very good for me."

White was named chief in August 1983 but resigned in July 1984 to become acting chief. That resignation reportedly resulted from a disagreement with City Manager Henry Graper but white declined to discuss the matter.

"I took the job knowing the political situation. No one had to tell me," he said.

He joined the department in 1968 after a two-year stint in the U.S. Navy. Sgt. Henry Berghoff and Patrolman Carl Berry broke in the rookie White.

In White's early police years, downtown Plymouth was locked up tight by 10 p.m. He walked a beat. "We knew everybody on the street. We knew where they lived."

Crime wasn't then as common in Plymouth as it is now and drunks, family disputes and larcenies were the police work norm.

"House burglaries made us really mad," he said with a smile.

He said he is proud he worked his way up through the ranks from patrolman to top cop. "I started here at the bottom floor, kept my nose to the grindstone and made it to the top."

He said he enjoyed most working as a detective and feeling the tangible results when following a case to conviction. "The results as a detective felt best, helping the citizens, the people. You'd work good and hard on a case, following it through to a conviction and bringing restitution to the victim."

While he said he feels a part of Plymouth, he said his job as police chief was time consuming and prevented him from becoming more involved in the community. "If I had to do change anything the last two years as an administrative officer, I would've become more visible in the community."

White said he is disappointed the city-township police contract dissolved. It's scheduled to expire July 1 when Plymouth Township starts its own police force.

"It's not unrealistic to think the township would start its own department. But the timing could've been better. If it was, some of the problems could've been avoided."

White said some city police officers feel "betrayed" by the township. "They feel they gave 100 per cent in the township."

And while there is talk of layoffs as the city restructures its police department following the termination of the agreement, White said the city department will survive alright.

"I think regardless of what the repercussions are from losing the township contract -- the proposed downsizing -- it won't be long before the department bounces back and attains its former status. It's too mature to sulk."

Satellite dishes now regulated by Plymouth

BY BRIAN LYSAGHT

There's a new chapter in the City Code book. It's entitled "Regulations of Dish-Type Satellite Signal-Receiving Antennas."

The City Commission on March 18 unanimously approved the second reading of the satellite dish ordinance which had been revised from its original form.

The ordinance covers residential, commercial and industrial uses, and requires a permit be obtained before the structures are installed.

City Attorney Ron Lowe said the city revamped the ordinance when questions were raised at its first reading Jan. 7. The Planning Commission offered suggestions after reviewing the wording of the original ordinance at a lengthy meeting last month.

"This ordinance, as written, is unique to the City of Plymouth," Lowe said in response to a question.

The dishes, which receive satellite communications including cable television, are ugly and present an aesthetics problem, said City Manager Henry Graper in January.

Graper said he was concerned that too many dishes would be built before the city could get a regulating ordinance on the books.

The ordinance approved last Monday requires plot, site and construction plans, plus a structural engineering analysis to be submitted with each permit request.

Ground-mounted dishes are permitted only in back yards and must be partially covered to limit view from adjacent properties.

The ordinance limits the dish portion of roof-mounted structures to three feet in diameter in residential areas and 12-feet in business, industrial and multi-residential areas.

Violation of the ordinance is punishable by a fine of up to $500 for each day the violation occurs.

has no immediate plans to purchase the property.

"We're currently using that land for a soccer field now," Gouin said. "But we're not actively seeking to buy the property."

"I wouldn't rule it out," Gouin continued, "but first we'll have to consider the status of 50 acres of property to the south of the complex -- that's most desirable. We'll have to evaluate if we want to purchase the (school district's) property based on that."

Dick Egli, community relations director for the schools, said school board members are looking at what school properties are surplus lands not being used.

"They (the school board members) want to get that land back on the tax rolls if they can," Egli said, "but first they want to offer it to someone else who could use it."

Egli said the schools are interested in leasing property to the township for a minimal price because of the flexibility such an arrangement could provide. If the schools need the property at a later date, Egli indicated, they would have an option to obtain it through nonrenewal of the lease.

"The school board is exploring whatever way the two communities (governmental units) can work together to use property for the betterment of the community," Egli said.

Gouin said the school board was asked to supply a report of what lands

it was willing to sell over a year ago. "When we have that, then we can sit down and determine how this fits in with the master plan."

A piece of township property at the corner of Warren and Sheldon roads was also the topic of discussion. Egli said Canton Supervisor James Poole had mentioned the site might be an ideal spot for a new middle school in the township.

Egli said the site, approximately 10-12 acres, was not large enough for a school. A new school will need at least 15 acres.

Both board agreed to form subcommittees to explore vacant school and township land parcels. The subcommittees will meet in a joint session the week of April 15 to discuss their findings.

On other issues, both boards agreed it was more beneficial for the Plymouth-Canton School District to request a bank to collect Canton's summer school taxes.

Both boards also discussed sidewalks, particularly in the Gallimore-School vicinity, and elected to form subcommittees to discuss the issue at the meeting slated for the week of April 15.

Roland Thomas, school board president, asked the township board to give the schools notice when Canton granted tax abatements to new businesses moving into the communities. Board members also discussed the school's current in-formula status.

Mr. Breen asked that the minutes reflect the fact that it is the consensus of the Board that an answer to Mr. McKeon's letter is unnecessary as his letter states "it is to present a point of view"; therefore, does not require an answer.

Mr. Tivadar Balogh, resident, submitted a letter to the Board expressing his concerns of competitive bidding of the D.P.W. garage building (future police department). Mr. Balogh had been sent a copy of the minutes of February 12, 1985 in answer to his concerns regarding competitive bidding.

A special meeting of the Township Board of the Charter Township of Canton was held on Tuesday, March 19, 1985 at 7:00 p.m. at 454 S. Harvey Street in Plymouth in joint session with the Plymouth School District.

Members present: Bennett, Brown, Chuhran, Padgett, Preniczky. Absent: Poole, Larson.

Others: Richard Egli, Dean Swartzwelter, Nancy Quinn, Roland Thomas, Elaine Kirchgatter, Mr. Artley, Lester Walker, Dr. Hoben, Dr. McLendon.

Discussed sale of school owned property on 15 acres on Proctor Road west of Canton Center Road. Mr. Thomas inquired if the township were interested in a long term lease or sale. The school board has three new members and they have not discussed this. Dr. Hoben stated that this property known to them as site #13 was purchased by the school out of district funds January 13, 1975 for $5,317. per acre. The property was appraised by Michigan Appraisal Co. in May of 1984 at $70,000. Dr. Hoben handed out a document listing seven properties considered as surplus expendable properties:

The Hough or Hix site; Maben site #4, site #6 in front of Hulsing School, 9.58 ac. on Barchester, site #9 on Joy Road next to George Lawton's house, the Waldecker farm piece next to Palmer's (SW corner), and site #13 Folker site.

Dr. Hoben stated that most pressure for a new elementary school would probably be on Saltz Road. They are not ready to consider building a junior high school.

There was discussion on Canton's use of Truesdell property for soccer fields.

Sidewalk need by the Gallimore School was acknowledged by the school board people, but they need more information on the road cutoff.

It was decided that each unit will form a committee to get together on April 15th to consider the Proctor Road property and sidewalk needs of the schools.

Dr. Hoben stated that he thought it important that we should share services whenever possible and complimentary goals. They will send catalogs of warehouse paper supplies available at cost.

Summer tax collection was discussed. Treasurer Brown handed out a document that he had prepared, pointing out certain facts dealing with figures, seasonal help, union restrictions. Various banks collecting the summer taxes for the schools are charging from $2.67 to $2.85 per parcel, so it seems the banks can collect for a lesser amount than the township can.

There was general discussion and contemplation on what can be done to better service each other.

Dr. Hoben brought up a development plan discussed with Philip Dingeldey in 1969 or 70, dealing with a two or three acre retention pond in the flood plain which could be used as a nature pond refuge. Could not come up with an agreement at that time because Wade, Trim & Associates had problems with this. Treasurer Brown will follow up on this and will contact James Kosteva for more information.

Mr. Thomas expressed some concern about the township granting industrial tax abatements because of the impact they may have on school revenues. There was lengthy discussion of the figures and formula used for state funding. Employment anticipated is of interest to the school board; also projections for single family homes in the next 3 to 5 years. Uncertainty of sewer capacity was discussed.

The meeting ended at 8:45 p.m.

'Lunch Box' caters to learning the food business

BY NICOLE ROBERTSON

Most high school students have only a vague idea, at best, what to do after graduation. The students in Carey Gary's Commercial Foods class not only know what they can do, they know they are good at it.

Gary's students run the "Lunch Box" restaurant on the first floor of Plymouth Salem High School. The restaurant serves daily breakfast and lunch menus, all made from scratch, and they specialize in pastry baking. They even do catering.

"We have a hundred dozen cookies we've got to have done by Friday," Gary said in a recent interview.

The bakers, cooks, hosts and hostesses, waiters, dishwashers and managers are all Salem students, and each gets a chance to try his or her hand at every job.

"Some are not that good at waiting on tables," Gary said, "but it's not fair to take them off. They've got to learn."

The class is broken into two sessions of two hours each. The first session does all the food preparation in the morning, and the second comes in at 10:30 a.m. to open the restaurant. They do the serving and cleaning up.

On Fridays, the front counter sells pastries to passers-by, but for the most part, the restaurant does not serve students. In fact, the students may only come if they are invited by a staff member.

"Because we only have 45 tables, we need them for paying staff," Gary said. The public is welcome, too, although restaurant aid Bonny Kline said the location isn't very conducive to casual business. Even so, those 45 tables fill up every day. But that doesn't mean the Lunch Box is earning huge profits.

"We cover our expenses and that's about all we hope to do," Gary said. "The prices are very reasonable." And so they are, with a typical daily special being less than $2.50 and a salad bar $1.80. In addition, the students who work in the restaurant receive class credit, but no pay for it.

"The interest is so high...they are happy to do it even if they don't get paid," Gary said. "Their enthusiasm is so high, once you turn them on, there's no stopping them."

Tips are accepted, however, in a bin near the cash register. They mount up there until the end of the year, when Gary takes the entire class out for dinner. "It gives them a chance to have somebody wait on them for a change," she said.

Midway through the year, the classes change so that the early session and late session change places with each other. That way, students learn both preparation and serving techniques.

"We try to keep it as realistic as possible," Gary said. "If they can't be here for their shift, they are expected to call in, and if they come in late, they will be docked in their grade."

"It is a pressure situation for everybody, including me. So many of them don't know how to deal with a job, and I think we're teaching them that."

PLYMOUTH'S

tell it to Phyllis

I've recently made a great discovery about parents and their children. It is not the fact that people are usually in their 40's when their kids become teenagers that causes their hair to turn gray. Age has nothing to do with gray hair or premature baldness (sometimes referred to as pulling your hair out), but having teenagers has everything to do with it.

When the kids were little, learning to ride a bike was quite an accomplishment. It was their first step in learning how to get around on wheels. However, it didn't prepare parents with how to deal with the kid's second step in mobility with wheels — learning how to drive a car.

I'm not sure if driver's ed teachers deserve my respect, sympathy or my signature on a petition to have them locked up. Anyone who is willing to put themselves through the torture of riding with these kids day after day, has got to be crazy.

What I really hate about driver's ed is that after a couple of weeks of class and a few out on the road driving sessions the kid is handed a permit and told to drive with his parents. Hey wait a minute, you teachers were the ones who volunteered to teach the kid to drive, not me. Besides I don't have a brake on the passenger side in my car and if I push any harder I'll put my foot right through the floor.

I've been through this ordeal once and I'm finally getting to the point where I can tolerate (and almost feel comfortable with) my daughter's driving. My nerves aren't ready to try going through this again. Maybe if the kid waited until he was about 22, I could handle it.

Do you know how many gray hairs it takes to teach a kid how to drive? I don't know either but it's more hair than I have attached to my head.

getting down to business

Canton Cinemas 6 opening planned for late May

BY NICHOLE ROBERTSON

The new Canton Cinemas 6 will be open for business May 24 if all goes as planned, said Tim Jahn, the manager of the new complex.

The complex will employ about 64 people from the Plymouth-Canton area, Jahn said, and he already has a few applications on file. Jahn presently manages the Livonia Cinema, but will shift to Canton in May.

Built by General Cinema, the nation's largest theater chain, the complex will house about 1,800 seats, or approximately 300 in each of six theaters.

General Cinema, which also runs the Livonia Cinema and the Macomb Cinema, has a long-standing policy of showing only "family" type movies. That doesn't mean it won't show R-rated films, but it will refuse to screen pornographic ones.

The physical appearance of the new complex will be a bit of a departure from the style of General Cinema's other theaters, Jahn said. For example, it will return to the older style of theater, with curtains and wide screens.

At this point, walls are in place and the projection equipment is expected to arrive April 15. The seats and concession equipment should also be in place by the end of April.

Dave Nicholson, director of economic growth and planning for Canton Township, said General Cinema began considering the Ford Road location three years ago.

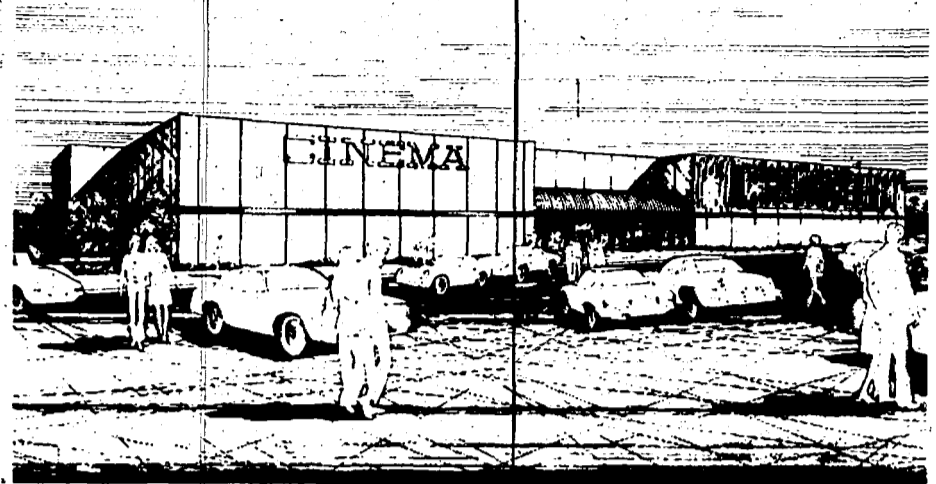

"The basic reason they moved here is because they are not well-penetrated into the Southeast Michigan market. They are seeking that market by going into a community that is growing and in a growth corridor.

"Usually, they are looking for a younger population. The median age of Canton is 26.6 years."

Other reasons for the move are the accessibility to Plymouth and Westland markets. The junction of I-275 and Ford makes the location nearly ideal.

The only real competition General Cinema has in this area now is the Penn Theater on Penniman Avenue, and the Quo Vadis in Westland. Penn general manager Lauren Falcusan said she doubts if the new theater will draw many customers away from the Plymouth establishment because the crowds are different.

General Cinemas run the new releases, at the current rate of $4.50 per adult seat.

Program products donated

The career and vocational education program at Plymouth Canton Schools has again been blessed with valuable donations from the private sector, vocational education director Harold Gaertner said.

Program Products, 9800 Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth, donated approximately $1,200 in plexiglass and wafer board for the plastics and construction technology programs at Canton High School.

"We are fortunate that our vocational program has been enriched by contributions from community and business people such as yourselves," Gaertner told Program Products. "Your thoughtfulness in providing this material will help to provide class experiences that are important in our preparing young people to enter the job market."

The auto body program at Canton High School received a commercial spray booth and air compressor donated by Jerome B. Kurtis, a dentist who resides in Detroit. The spray booth, valued at $7,210 is being installed in the auto body area at Canton and will be used for refinishing small parts as part of the auto body program, Gaertner said.

"The spray booth will be a considerable help to our auto body students in gaining the occupational skills necessary to succeed in today's competitive world-of-work," he said.

Self-directed IRAs popular

First of America has announced the introduction of a new self-directed individual retirement account (IRA) that provides greater investment opportunities for account holders.

"Traditionally customers have opened an IRA to realize an immediate tax break and to accumulate a retirement savings account," said Kenneth D. Currie, president of First of America Bank-Plymouth. "Today, customers are more aware of the IRA as an investment tool."

The self-directed IRA allows customers to direct their funds into one or many investment alternatives, such as money market funds, certificates of deposit, stocks, bonds, and mutual funds.

"The self-directed IRA allows customers to individually decide whether security or a high rate of investment return is their first priority," Currie said. Customer-directed investments accounted for nearly 25 per cent of the money invested in IRAs at the end of last year, a recent study reported.

Gilbert attends funds conference

I.R.E. is a 13-year old financial services firm that today serves more than 15,000 investors nationwide.

Old Village takes theft concerns 'to the streets'

Earlene Woodard of Yesterday and Today, an antique store on Liberty Street, said her store has been burglarized twice with a third attempt. The store now has a new front door, a replacement for the old door which was damaged in a break-in.

"I don't leave anything in here anymore of any value at night," she said. She has plans to install an alarm system in the store.

Woodard too, opposes cuts in police. "I just can't see putting money somewhere else when the first three priorities for a city are police, EMS and the fire department."

Useful Uniques on Mill Street has been burglarized twice with an attempt the third time.

The first time burglars netted a day's worth of sales, the second some checks, said store owner Barb Every.

Selection change

investigate the areas as directed by the board and return with a report.

Questions about the second two proposals included: Who is defined as an 'employee' at CEP? How many potential students that could opt to change under a staff exemption? And would students with older siblings at both schools be able to attend either?

The proposal to extend the sibling rule from three to four years for this year's eighth graders passed 4-3. Nancy Quinn, E.J. McClendon, and Elaine Kirchgatter opposed the proposal because it would take affect this year.

"I favor the four year, but this implies we didn't know what we were doing (in random selecting earlier this year). What's done is done, and I think we have to have the courage to stick with it," McClendon said.

Super evaluation

contract. Superintendent John Hoben said Monday that if the board takes no action by the April deadline, his contract is automatically extended for another year, in this case through the 1986-87 school year.

"Well, because we are into March already I think we are stuck with this time line for this year," McClendon said.

The board plans to meet with the superintendent to discuss the evaluation once the report is completed. A new state law allows that session to be closed to the public if the superintendent requests.

She said she's a bit leery each morning wondering if she will discover any damage.

"Prior to this we even left the door open a few times," Every said. "We didn't worry. It was kind of an old time atmosphere."

The Old Village Association invited Acting Detective Gardner to their April 9 meeting. Nelson said the meeting, which will be held at 7:15 p.m. in Station 885, is open to any merchant or resident interested.

"We don't want to paint Plymouth as a bad place to do business," Nelson said. "We want to do everything we can to keep Plymouth a good place to live."

Acting Police Chief Ralph White said police are working on the burglary problem but can't make promises to merchants.

"We have a problem and that problem is recognized," White said.

School director takes leave

Plymouth Canton Schools director of special education, Edwin Page, is currently on sick leave, said Norm Kee, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Kee said questions and concerns about special education are being handled by Harold Weiner, supervisor of special education. Some administrative functions are also being picked up by Mike Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction.

Building principals, Kee said, will have more responsibility for the supervision of the special education classrooms in their buildings during Page's absence.

Kee said he did not know how long Page would be out, but he said the special education director would be gone at least for two or three more weeks.

Musical concert's great listening, fun to watch

BY CHERYL SZYNISZEWSKI

There are times when the last thing you want to do is to go out somewhere. Sunday was one of those days.

After a long busy week my desire was to just stay home and relax, with full realization that a hectic schedule would not allow me another day to unwind for weeks.

Committed to a review, I resolved myself to the fact that I was going out but seemed to have no expectations for this concert.

The afternoon's experience was invigorating.

review

The last Plymouth Musicales concert for the season was held at St. John's Provincial Seminary last Sunday. The performers were Kevin McMahon, violin, Peter Longworth, piano, Theodore Weber, cello, and Catherine Miller on the french horn.

All of the performers are students at the of doing either graduate or undergraduate studies in music. All but Longworth are regular members of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

As I walked into the chapel, the difficult decision was where to sit. Sometimes I find that if I have a clear view of the pianist's hands I become so absorbed with the hand positions and movements that I lose the full awareness of all of the elements of a musical work: So, I opted to sit across from the piano and observe facial expressions.

The first number was the Sonata in E minor, K.304 by Mozart. This sonata for violin and piano was well performed. There was an excellent balance of sound and musical flow. To assure the maintenance and continuity of the long musical line in Mozart, the tempos have to be just right. For instance, Mozart's allerge often falls between too fast if conducted in four and too slow if conducted in two.

McMahon and Longworth made a good choice in tempos for this performance. Brahms Trio in E Flat Major, Opus 40, for piano, violin, and horn was performed next.

For this work, Brahms rejected the use of a valve-horn thus depriving himself of many technical possibilities as he recovered the noble tone of the French horn. The spirit of the horn in this work is very delicate and melancholy. The intensity of feeling is of an earthy natural flavor, very veiled until the horn is given a hunting scene in the finale and the sound is allowed to break through.

There is such an interweaving of sound in this work that at times I found myself straining to hear the horn as a single instrument. The interaction between the piano and the horn in this performance was so appropriate that I could not separate the sound of the instruments. This ensemble truly functioned as a unit making their performance very exciting.

The last work performed was Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor, Opus 49. This is a lively four movement trio for piano, violin, and cello. Once again the performers demonstrated their eclectic musical skills, with strong entrances, ambitious playing, and precise endings, functioning as one unit.

During the afternoon I found many small things to appreciate that added enjoyment to the experience.

In recital performances I find it interesting to watch the performers as they take that one deep breath that acts as a beat and signals the beginning of playing. It's fun to watch the facial expressions of the musicians as they perform certain emotional passages, or the slight smile that shows the successful completion of a difficult spot.

When I see that a string player is coming to the end of the bow, I watch the bow while listing to see if all instruments stop their sound just as the bow is lifted off the strings. And many times I observe, with great pleasure, the relatives of the performers as they are enraptured by watching the one they are so close to.

As I left the concert I was really happy that I had gone. The concert had given me renewed energy, and I couldn't imagine having missed such an enjoyable time.

One experience, that will always stick in my mind, happened that day with my daughter. At one point in the concert I pointed out that if you watched the pianist you could read his lips as he counted certain passages. For year. I have been explaining the importance of counting to her. She finally believed me. She came home and went straight to the piano and counted loud, working through a piece that had troubled her for weeks.

She played it perfect.

Youthful Rock squad plans some door knockin'

Soccer girls to challenge league

BY DAVID PIERINI

After a hard week of drills and conditioning, it was a nice change of pace.

Ken Johnson broke his Salem girls up into groups of four and formed his own version of the World Cup soccer tournament.

"The winner gets ice cream when the weather gets warmer," said Johnson.

The four teams were well represented. Names like Balconi for Italy, McNamara for Ireland, Krajewski for Poland and Easton for England.

Italy took the championship and the ice cream away from England on a goal in the last two minutes of the final game.

Pool the four teams together to form one, chances are they'll take the ice cream from a lot of teams this season.

Returning veterans along with an excellent influx of freshman, should have the Rocks "knocking on the door for league," as Johnson says.

"We will possibly be the youngest team in league with four seniors, three juniors, nine sophomores and seven freshman."

Of those seven freshmen, two will be counted on in big ways. Karen Phillppi will be the starting goalie. Dena Head, weaned in the Bonanza leagues, will be in the right wing position opposite of center Julie Tortora and left winger Fran Whittaker.

"This attack should be pretty potent," said Johnson.

Making the attack potent will be co-captain Tortora who as a junior, has 35 career goals.

"It's like having another coach on the field," said Johnson. "They call me Mr. Softy. She'll get them to do extra push ups, things like that. In the three weeks, the team has really taken to her. Best captain I've ever had."

Johnson said the pressure will be off Tortora who played minus a strong right winger last season. "Dena should take some of the pressure off Julie," said Johnson. "Those two will probably be sharing it." (The bulk of the scoring).

Johnson also said that Whittaker, Head and Tortora are able to play in other positions. "Those three positions aren't really solid," said Johnson, "they could change. They're that versatile."

Salem's defensive nucleus of co-captain Ruth Knoerl, Nikki Stojeba, Chris Casler and Michelle Cygan returned this year, but they'll be minus the action of Knoerl for awhile because of a broken leg suffered in practice.

Aerobics and soccer

Chief kickers work hard for post season goals

BY DAVID PIERINI

Jane Fonda has taken Canton by storm.

Well, not quite. Canton soccer coach Mike Morgan is using aerobics to get his girls ready for the 85 campaign.

"It builds up stamina, it's good for endurance, it makes you more flexible and it helps build up lower body strength," Morgan said. "It works, I've been doing it. It doesn't seem like work when you do it to music."

Professional aerobics teacher Shellie McCulloch has been putting the Chiefs through a special routine made for soccer. "These girls are going to have the best legs around," said McCulloch.

Morgan, along with the aerobics, has included special stretching exercises introduced by sports doctors, and new drills that were brought in by ex-Detroit Express players.

All of the extra fuss is for a reason.

"We've got a small team," Morgan said, "so they're going to have to play for a long time, we can't afford the injuries."

Though small in both size and number, Morgan has put together a well balanced team which includes ninth graders as well as seasoned returnees.

The Chiefs, however, will be without the services of three seniors because of jobs. "Two of them were all-league honorable mention last year and the other was my starting goalie," Morgan said. "We'll have to fill in with younger people."

Those young players will include freshman Michelle Lonigro who will be playing on the front line opposite Beth Frigge and Kendra Whitely.

Another froshy that will make big contributions is midfielder Renee Rice. "She's got a lot of ball control and speed. She's one of the biggest girls on the team," Morgan said.

preview

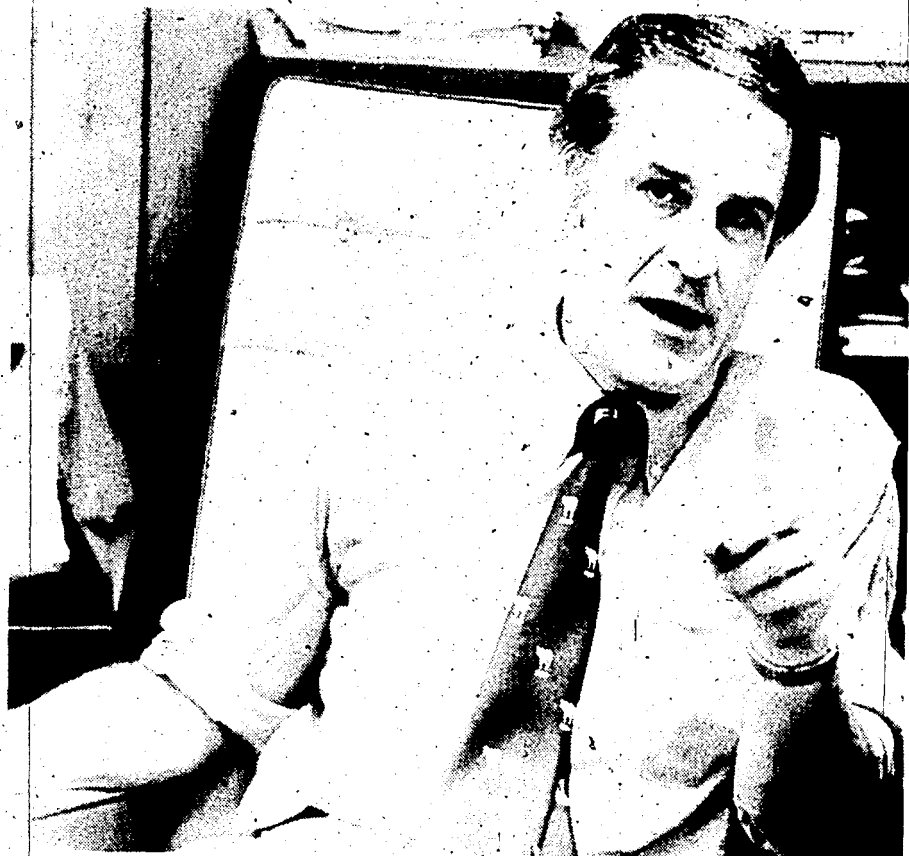

Center halfback Lisa Russell will be playing in her final season for Canton. Russell along with Frigge were the team leaders and major scorers from last season.

Track transfer Kelly Murphy will loom large in the midfield along with defensive anchors Cheryl Nippa and Jenny Thomas.

Racing czar says tracks must compete to survive

BY BRIAN LYSAGHT

Hard work and a touch of innovation are needed to breathe new life into Michigan's horse racing industry, says the state Racing Commissioner.

Michigan's race tracks have seen a decline in attendance and betting revenues since the golden years of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Thoroughbred racing was down in both attendance and handle last year, while harness racing handle was up and attendance down only slightly, Racing Commissioner William Ballenger said. Average attendance and handle at Michigan's tracks is down by one-half from the late 1960s, following a trend nationwide, Ballenger said.

Part of the problem, he said, is competition for the entertainment dollar. Better promotion and marketing efforts are necessary to reach the young and affluent crowd, many of whom had never set foot in a race track, he said.

"Detroit has always been a sports town, everyone knows that," said Ballenger, a Milliken appointee, and former state senator. "The question is how to get people going from Pistons, Tigers, and Red Wings games, to the race track. And how to make them feel good about it when they leave (the track)."

Simulcast racing and off-track betting would benefit the Michigan's horse racing industry, Ballenger said. A reduction in the state's tax on bets, rule revision and maybe a few new tracks may help too, he said.

Simulcasting, or beaming in races from other tracks, could possibly be considered by the state Legislature this year, he said. Tracks would do well offering bettors opportunity to wager on big races like the Breeders Cup or the Little Brown Jug, he said.

And Ballenger said the state's tax on betting, which is six per cent in the Detroit area, is higher than similar taxes in 78 per cent of other states. "Anything we can do to that tax would be good," he said.

His proposals include reducing it to three or four per cent, or earmarking a large share of the revenue to the racing industry, and less to the state's general fund.

Ballenger said a system of simulcast and off-track betting could help offset reduction in the state's take if the racing tax were revised.

He said he is optimistic the recent sale of the Detroit Race Course to Ladbroke Company, the London-based hotel and betting corporation, will be good for horseracing.

Ballenger forced Bernard Hartman and Herbert Tyner, owners of both DRC and Hazel Park the two major Detroit area tracks, to divest their interest in DRC last year.

Ballenger said Ladbroke's DRC's improvements may force Hazel Park to improve its facility.

He said Ladbroke would be interested in seeing off-track betting in Michigan.

Horse racing should be made to offer something for the entire family, Ballenger said, making the race track an educational experience with tours, and opportunity for children to pet the horses and more.

"I don't think racing can survive if it's viewed as an esoteric adult sport rather than something with broad family appeal."

Ballenger said horse racing in Michigan and across the nation has always been a victim of a double standard. Because it is a form of legalized gambling regulated by the state, some people choose to view it as dishonest, he said.

But Ballenger said the merits of racing industry developments like drug testing or the photo finish have never been properly recognized. He said other sports like baseball are beginning to get attention for problems like drugs, which most sports chose to ignore.

"I honestly believe horse racing -- and horse racing in Michigan -- is as clean a sport as any you'll find in the country or the world."

FINNISH FANTASY

Picture yourself in an open-air theatre. The first scene starts, continues, and ends. It's time for the second scene and a change of sets. But instead of the sets moving — YOU move! The audience moves, actually moving around the stage. It happens in a town called Tampere in Finland. To the Finns, the theatre, which goes back to the 12th century, is more than a tradition — it's a way of life. Winter and summer the shows go on, with almost every town boasting a theatre. There are also many outdoor festivities during the summer, including folk music, folk dancing, and concerts.

Besides theatre-lovers, gourmets will also enjoy Finland. Finnish cooking combines the best of Swedish, Russian, and French techniques. Smoked fish, salmon, and reindeer are popular dishes, but there are many other mouth-watering delights, including a thickened fruit called "Klisseli."

Helsinki is over 400 years old, but you'd never think so to look at it. The Scandinavian architecture gives it a highly modern, contemporary appearance. The visitor often gets the impression that the city is one big park ... open space takes up 30% of the city.

In Bold Print

By David Pierini

I wouldn't be saying anything new when I say that the random selection process is a ridiculous system that in some ways hurts the Plymouth-Canton school district especially in athletics.

But I think I'll stew about it some more.

Wrestling coach Ron Krueger and swim coach Chuck Olson, both of Salem, will soon be facing a problem that surrounds the random selection process and their families.

Krueger's son and Olson's daughter drew red chips out of the computer making them property of Canton. Both kids are active in the sports their fathers coach which means when it comes to a Salem-Canton meet, Olson and Krueger will almost be forced to coach against their own kids.

The school board considered the matter Monday night. They extended the sibling rule for one extra year but a proposal to grant exclusions to the selection process for children of school employes was dropped. That means the Olson and Krueger kids will keep their red chips.

Krueger has enrolled his son in Catholic Central and says he will send him there rather than Canton.

It means Olson, and possibly Krueger will see their children compete but as the opposition Krueger is considering quitting as wrestling coach.

If this does occur, there has got to be a way of getting through this as a family. If these gentlemen are as family oriented as they profess they are, then they can find some kind of solution.

Things can be worked out some how. First of all, communication lines must be kept open. Parent and child can face the facts and discuss freely their feelings of the situation.

One thing that the parent must realize is that the pressure is greater on the child. The parent-coach must take it from there and do anything that he or she can to relieve that pressure. And as a coach, they must also recognize the pressure that is put on the players when they must face the coaches kid.

Plymouth resident George Croll is in a similar situation. Croll, a teacher and tennis coach at Stevenson, has a daughter on the Canton tennis team. In the two years that his daughter Jennifer has played, Canton has lost the duel meet against Stevenson 4-3. On both occasions, Jennifer lost her matches.

Croll said he can't speak for Krueger and Olson but he does say that he can appreciate what they're going through and that their problem maybe a little more difficult because they'd be coaching in the same community their kids are competing in.

"You have to take it in the right spirit, you have to be careful," said Croll.

Croll says that he stays away from the court when his daughter is playing. The only coaching his player gets during that meet is before the match. He's not going to say, "My daughter has a weak overhead, so lob to her," but he will tell her to do the best that she can.

After the match, nothing is said. They don't talk about the meet, they put it behind them. There still is difficulty as there is in any situation like this, but they seem to be coping and he does take pride in his daughters involvement and success in the sport.

"I'm an enthusiast as far as a parent is concerned and I am a strong positive supporter of the Plymouth schools," said Croll. "But when it came down to the match, as coach of the Stevenson tennis team, I was hoping that Stevenson would win."

"Part of it will come down to a coaching philosophy. Winning isn't everything. The goal of high school sports is good sportsmanship, fair play and a sense of accomplishment."

You can understand Krueger's reasons for wanting to quit but is it absolutely necessary?

I'm in favor of the option of a child attending either school but if the board doesn't go for the idea, you have to think what if and deal with it.

Salem sees stiff competition

The forwards will be helped out by midfielders Tracy Greenhalge and Susie Balconi.

Though Johnson said chances of a division or even league title are good, the competition will be stiff with five of the 10 teams in the conference ranked in the top 10 of the state. Stevenson; Northville, Bentley, Churchill and Canton will be the obstacles in the way of the Rocks this season.

"We've got a lot of horses with a lot of stamina," said Johnson.

Salem will get their first taste of competition on April 1, in a four way scrimmage against Churchill, Brighton and Troy. They will then open the season on Apr. 12-13, at the 16 team Schoolcraft Invitational.

Canton eyes division honors

Goal tending duty will be in the hands of Carol Kliensmith.

Morgan doesn't have a set line up yet, so he's not counting out Kellie Daily, Julie Buyers, Alane Geisler and Kelly Lowers. "We're going to get a lot of help at many positions," Morgan said. "These girls could start! They'll add to our strength and depth."

Canton's goal is to improve on last season's 11-5-1 record, shoot for a division crown, and go far in the regional and state tournament. Morgan said they have the potential and they're physically ready to accept the challenge.

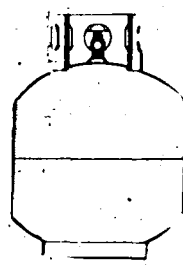

"All of these girls are in excellent shape," Morgan said. "We've worked hard on fitness. We didn't have any injuries last year because we were in such good shape."
