For 'unique' Canton plan

Developer acquiring land

BY KEN VOYLES

One of the potentially most significant developments in Canton's history -- one which may set new standards for future developers -- is coming closer to a reality this week.

Paul Reschke, president of a partnership which includes FWS Golf Inc., of Southfield, said his development group is trying to acquire more than 600 acres of land to develop a residential community and possibly an 18-hole golf course in the area bounded by Canton Center Road, Beck Road, Cherry Hill Road and part of the Lower Rouge River.

"I can tell you we are progressing along. It's getting close," said

Reschke. "I'd anticipate that within a month we'll be in a position to say more."

Canton to save Mettetal Airport?

BY W. EDWARD WENDOVER

Will Canton be getting into the airport business?

There's a long answer to that question that begins with Supervisor Tom Yack's helicopter ride yesterday afternoon around Mettetal Airport.

Then, he will host a meeting this afternoon where the questions relating to municipal ownership will be discussed with Mettetal Airport's current operator, the Michigan Aeronautics Commission and pilots.

The first stumbling block, Yack has

In manager search

The final 4

BY W. EDWARD WENDOVER

Four men are the final candidates -- out of 80 original applicants and seven semi-finalists -- for Plymouth City Manager.

Included among them is Acting City Manager William Graham.

Public interviews with the four are scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 10 although the exact time has not yet been set, said Mayor Dennis Bila. That meeting will probably afford each candidate 90 minutes -- with half that time devoted to an interview by Rod Bartell, the consultant hired by the city to help with the search, and half devoted to questions from the city commissioners.

Although the public may attend, they will not be able to question the candidates, Bila said.

The finalists were announced at noon yesterday following a weekend meeting by the city's search committee.

To Vorva settlement

Commission says 'no'

BY PATRICIA BROWN

Following almost two hours of closed session Monday, the City of Plymouth Commission voted 6-0 to reject any current settlements made on behalf of Commissioner Jerry Vorva.

Once back in open session, the commission voted on a motion made by Mayor Dennis Bila.

Bila said, "The commission rejects Mr. Vorva's current offer as a settlement and allows Mr. (Howard) Shifman to continue negotiations."

When hearing about the commission's decision and the way in which it was phrased Vorva said, "I resent the implication projected by the mayor and the commission that Jerry Vorva, once he won the election and dealing from a position of power, demanded a settlement.

"It's a lie. Once again they're (the commission) taking advantage of a nice person," said Vorva.

Vorva said that the city came to him with "their hat in their hand" and presented an offer to him. "I demand a public apology from the mayor, city manager and each one of the commissioners," he said.

Vorva also said that he was unsure exactly what Monday night's offer was; commission members declined to comment on the discussion after the meeting ended.

The entire commission was present, except Vorva who was had been excused from the proceedings. City of Plymouth Attorney Ron Lowe, and Shifman, the city's labor attorney, also attended the meeting. Shifman is with the law firm Cummings, McClorey, Davis and Acho.

Police Officers of Michigan counsel Frank Guido was not present Monday.

Settlement negotiations are expected to continue.

"I find it unfortunate that they as politicians are so narrow sighted, that they didn't have the presence of mind to characterize the truth," said Guido.

"I'm surprised they rejected it. I thought this was pretty much a done issue," he added. "No more fooling around on the part of the union. They better get out their checkbook and pay their attorney because we are going forward on all three pieces of litigation."

PLUS: This week's Crier includes the bridal section -- "The Perfect Wedding." See pg. 11.

Also attending today's meeting will be Canton pilot John Vergona, who has been a leader among Mettetal pilots pushing to save Mettetal.

Parking lot may be illegal School building plans side-tracked

BY TODD LANGTON
 Efforts by the school district to gain site plan approval for a proposed renovation of the school board building were side-tracked last Wednesday by a legal opinion.

The opinion, that of City of Plymouth attorney Ron Lowe, reversed the city's prior stance that the construction of a controversial parking lot adjacent to the Plymouth Canton Community Schools Board of Education offices was a legal use.

As a result of recently obtained information, Lowe said that the school board cannot build a parking lot on two pieces of property it owns along Ann Arbor Trail without obtaining either a variance or a rezoning of the properties.

Michael Pollard, attorney for the school district, stated in an opinion Monday that the school board office, as a "municipal building," is allowed to construct a parking lot under city zoning ordinances.

The lot, Pollard asserts, is a permitted use because it will be located on an "assembly of lots" which are associated with the board office building.

Pollard and school board members also received input from City Planning Commission members and residents of the city at a special meeting last Wednesday.

Even if the special use is not allowed the board has other options, said Doug Miller, who chaired the special meeting of the Planning Commission.

The school board could request a rezoning, a planned unit development, a variance or a special land use only, Miller said.

The district did not expect the proposed expansion to be quite as controversial as it turned out to be, Pollard said.

In an effort to compromise with the city the board presented a revised site plan which included a wider green belt between the proposed parking lot and the adjacent residential lot, a one way access into the parking lot from Ann Arbor Trail and angled parking spaces.

Pollard said at the meeting that the proposed structure could increase the value of the property in the area of the board offices.

He also stated that there were at least 13 other places in the city where a parking area sat adjacent to an area zoned residential.

The district has also decided that it would sell the two houses which sit on the property slated to become a parking lot for one dollar each if whoever bought them would remove them from the property, said Dean Swartzwelder, president of the school board.

Plymouth residents at the meeting had a lot to say about the proposed project.

The school district is "going to raze two homes for the convenience of school board employees," said City of Plymouth resident Craig Mauro.

"I feel it's a disgrace," to disregard the feelings of residents for the sake of convenience, Mauro said.

The bond issue was passed partly for the purpose of renovating the school board offices, said Lester Walker, a former school board member.

To not use the money for that purpose would be "a betrayal of the voters intentions at that time," Walker said.

The planning commission members had a few observations of their own.

Because the proposed parking area contains 70 spaces, where only 57 are required by the city, the district might consider eliminating altogether the entrance along Ann Arbor Trail, thereby reducing the traffic flow and creating an even larger greenbelt, said Commissioner Richard Moyer.

The school board office makes a good transitional use between the business district and the residential district, said Commissioner Robert Jones.

"I would prefer no driveway at all," along Ann Arbor Trail but could accept one because, according Richard Myers, the chief of the City of Plymouth Police, the intersection of Harvey and Ann Arbor Trail is not even in the top 10 for number of accidents, Jones said.

The proposed renovation is also better than what a commercial developer could produce, he said.

"I believe this building will be an enhancement," he added.

"The current building is not an asset to the community," said Doug Miller, chair of the meeting.

The city and the school board will have to compromise in order to see that the renovation is completed, Miller said.

N'ville Twp. considering safety director

BY KEN VOYLES
 Northville Township is delaying a decision to hire a new police chief to replace Kenneth Hardesty, who resigned under fire last December.

The township may instead seek a different administrative approach to operating its police and fire departments, said Georgina Goss, Northville Township's supervisor.

Phil Presnell, a police captain, is currently the acting police chief in the township. He will remain in that post until the administration and board of trustees decide whether or not to hire a new chief, said Goss.

"The manager and treasurer are preparing a report on the possible benefits of hiring a public safety director over a new chief," said Goss. The report is being prepared by Township Manager Richard Henningsen and Treasurer Betty Lennox.

Goss added, "I think it would be helpful to have a professional administrator running our police and fire departments."

Northville Township does not, however, currently have a full time fire department, Goss said.

"If they (Henningsen and Lennox) come back with a recommendation for a public safety director then we'll be ready to consider hiring a consulting firm," Goss said. "We've got to look at some things before we move ahead on this."

Hardesty resigned after coming under fire for the illegal sale of an automatic weapon to the township clerk. The sale violated both state and federal laws and Hardesty was placed on administrative leave during the initial investigation.

The weapon, a Glock automatic pistol, was sold out of the department for a price only allowed of local law enforcement agencies. It was later returned to the department and Hardesty resigned before facing disciplinary action by the township board of trustees.

State begins investigation into City's audit

State of Michigan auditors met with City of Plymouth officials last Wednesday to begin their investigation into the expense account of former City Manager Henry Graper.

According to Mayor Dennis Bila, the auditors met with City Attorney Ron Lowe and Acting City Manager Bill Graham early Wednesday and then spent the day reviewing the year's expense accounts for Graper.

An audit was suggested by former City Commissioner Bob Jones and by Graper following Graper's "under fire" resignation on July 3.

State Rep. Gerald Law, whose district includes Plymouth, said last week that he had asked the state treasurer's office to expedite the audit.

"I talked to Bill Graham, and he said that they (city officials and auditors) had a meeting. They're (the auditors) going to come back this week. They couldn't give the city a deadline because that's predicated upon caseload," said Law.

Law said that he intends to keep in touch with Graham to make sure the state follows through with the audit investigation.

Car pulled from lake

BY TODD LANGTON

Members of the Wayne County Sheriffs Department, with the help of two tow trucks, pulled a red Firebird out of Phoenix Lake Friday afternoon after being alerted to its whereabouts by a Wayne County work crew.

Plymouth Township Police units assisted.

The vehicle was found near a concrete abutment almost completely submerged in the semi-frozen lake along Northville Road (just north of Five Mile Road) in Plymouth Township.

John Michael Langston, a resident of the City of Plymouth, reported to the City of Plymouth Police Department that the car had been stolen early Thursday morning, according to police reports.

When the vehicle was located, the Sheriffs department called in two members of the department's marine patrol division. Officer Larry Crider, after suiting up, hooked up a cable to the Firebird's rear axle.

Parents voice concerns

Boundary changes

BY TODD LANGTON

Between 80-100 people aired their concerns and reservations about proposed boundary changes at a public forum held by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education Monday.

The forum, at Central Middle School, was the first of two hearings held to give residents in the district a chance to give their input on housing task force recommended boundary changes throughout the district.

Most of the criticisms leveled at the proposed changes focused on safety concerns and the stability of the students' educational environment.

"No children should be moved while their are bigger changes ahead," said City of Plymouth resident Lois Moyer in reference to proposals to turn Central Middle School into the district's third high school facility.

The proposed boundary changes include moving some students from West Middle School to Central, even though current proposals also call for Central to become a high school facility within three or four years.

"We urge you to be visionaries and not reactionaries," Moyer said. "Any decision now is premature."

The decisions made by the board should be well thought out and not "a temporary solution to a permanent problem," said Sally Janz, a Plymouth resident.

"Give us a long term solution," she said.

Plymouth resident Linda Kato asked the board to look at the "big picture" and take student stability into consideration.

Almost 2,000 more vehicles a day travel on Sheldon Road than travel on North Territorial Road, said Plymouth resident Tony Welsh, addressing the safety issue.

Under the proposed changes, Welsh said, some students living west of Sheldon who currently attend West Middle School would have to cross the five lane Sheldon Road instead of the two lane North Territorial.

The safety concerns raised by the increased level of traffic on Sheldon makes the proposed boundary changes "unacceptable," Plymouth resident Pamela Lemerand said.

School Board President Dean Swartzwelter said that the board is well aware of the safety concerns and is weighing them heavily in the decision making process.

One and a half hours and many concerns, suggestions and criticisms later, the forum came to a close.

"I assure you that everything you have indicated to us we will consider," said Swartzwelter at the end of the meeting.

A second public forum will be held in the Hoben Elementary School cafeteria on Feb. 5 from 7-9 p.m.

Releasing results

City police study

BY PATRICIA BROWN

The results of a study of the City of Plymouth Police Department are tentatively expected to be presented before the Plymouth City Commission at the Feb. 5 commission meeting.

More than four years ago a similar study was conducted by the consulting firm Bartell and Bartell. That study included an analysis of the department's organizational structure.

Acting City of Plymouth Manager Bill Graham said, "As a result (of the prior study) Police Chief (Richard) Myers was hired."

The current study, also being conducted by Bartell and Bartell, was initiated last May. It will look at how far the department has progressed from the original study, according to Myers.

"The study will concentrate on various areas within the department," said Myers. "Hopefully it will give us an idea of what our training needs and staffing needs are and how we can take it to the next step, to keep the machine running smoothly."

Myers also said that the study gives the community a way to evaluate the department's performance.

Another area Myers mentioned was in supervision. "In prior years, there has been a void in terms of responsibility and accountability in supervision," he said.

Overall, Myers said, the study is a "healthy way" of asking, "What's the purpose of our organization?"

Valentine dinner and song

Love songs from "Phantom of the Opera," "West Side Story" and "South Pacific," will be featured during an evening of food and song as the Plymouth Historical Society and Plymouth Rotary Club host their Second Annual Gala Valentine Dinner.

Support DARE program

EDITOR:

This letter is in response to saving the DARE program in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district.

My son had the opportunity to "graduate" from the DARE program last year in fifth grade. He still speaks very highly of Trooper Bob Garcia and all the things he learned from the DARE program.

You are correct in stating that it does not appeal to the community because it does focus on prevention and more importantly it does reach our children at a very impressionable age.

I believe prevention comes from educating our young. This program certainly captured my son's attention.

I urge parents in the community to support this very effective program by demanding DARE stay in our elementary school curriculum. Your son's or daughter's life may one day depend on it. It's that important.

Thanks to The Crier for bringing this to our attention. I didn't know we were facing losing our DARE program.

Board's split surprising

In the margin

By Ken Voyles

A special land use request by the Selective Group to develop land along Geddes Road between Canton Center and Beck roads created a massive fissure last week in the usually united Canton Board of Trustees.

The board split 4-3 in granting the special land use and site plan approval for the River Meadow development. Supervisor Tom Yack, Clerk Loren Bennett and Trustee Phil LaJoy opposed the project, while Robert Shefferly, John Preniczky, Elaine Kirchgatter and Gerald Brown supported the residential project.

The two hour discussion, which proceeded last week's vote, pointed to the precedent setting nature of the land use request.

The project, next to Holiday Estates Mobile Home Park, will be on 77 acres and contain a cluster style single family residential community.

The debate really centered on the density of the project, although also of concern was the utility right-of-ways along the development streets.

"I don't know if we could have a nicer development there," Bennett admitted. "I believe we could have a less dense use on the property."

Preniczky said the project "looks good," while also echoing the concern that Canton might be getting the best it can get out of the project considering its location next to a mobile home park. "It's a difficult piece of land to work with," he said.

Kirchgatter also wondered "what alternative" Canton had considering the site.

Brown said he wasn't sure "we are going to get better than this."

Steve Fisher, a representative of the Selective Group, said his firm had addressed all of Canton's concerns during the development of the project over the past year.

"We've worked closely with Canton to offer the kind of development people in the community want," Fisher said, adding that it will fill a need in Canton not currently being met.

That, too, may have been at the crux of the apparent board split: some Canton boosters want the community to launch into $250-300,000 homes, while others want to see more affordable housing make its return.

The Selective Group plans to sell the homes at $85-95,000.

With the building explosion continuing in the township (the board seems to look at a new housing proposal every week), it's no wonder that the board fought a fierce struggle over this one plan.

Most of the proposals to date have received overwhelming support from the board (except from Shefferly), so it was probably good that last week's debate seemed destined to refresh everyone's perspective.

One has to wonder how a debate over one housing development can drain so much energy from the board, and how it will affect any future decisions about development in Canton.

It may no longer be possible for the board to give a rubberstamp to residential developments.

"Kentucky Fried development" has already been slowed considerably by this board, but it's hard to imagine that the same will happen when it comes to residential housing. The board, led by Yack, has already made it pretty clear that Canton's future lies in developing land west of Canton Center Road, developing it under strict controls favoring subdivisions.

City, Twp. social meeting

Good 1st step

EDITOR:

I am glad that Supervisor Maurice Breen and Mayor Dennis Bila have organized a joint, social meeting of the trustees and commissioners of Plymouth.

My interest in better government leads me to hope for a similar meeting where we can discuss some of the following:

1. Recreation - Fine Arts Coordinator, Tennis Courts, Soccer Fields.
2. DPW - Backing up each other like the Police and Fire Departments.
3. AMPLIMS Computer or Police information Management Systems.
4. Community Promotion.

While the representatives of each of the governmental units will only proceed in the "best interest" of the citizens, I am hopeful that we are making a step in the right direction on Feb. 6.

Pete lives on

Folks who gently, but firmly, stand up for what's right -- despite overwhelming public odds -- are few and far between.

Pete Schweitzer was one of those folks.

His untimely death last Tuesday at age 50 caught his family and friends by surprise, but the many victories he notched will live forever.

Pete changed state law when he ran for the Plymouth City Commission in 1967. At that time, the City Charter required a person to be a property owner to run for the commission; Pete was renting an apartment. He fought the case until the Michigan Supreme Court agreed that the Michigan Appeals Court was right in finding for Pete and renters everywhere.

Pete changed minds in more than a couple of social fights. He actively backed the Open Housing Act for the city in 1967 and then sought rights for group homes during the 1970s and '80s.

After Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, D.C., Pete was ordained a Methodist minister and came here to serve as associate pastor of First United Methodist in 1964. He served as the youth minister during the start of anti-Vietnam War activities.

Obviously, not all of Pete's causes were popular.

"We used to get the most terrible

PETE SCHWEITZER

With malice toward none

phone calls in the middle of the night," said his wife of 22 years, Bonnie.

But Pete will be remembered as a gentle man in those tough fights.

He was the community relations director of the Plymouth Center for Human Development up to its closing in 1982 -- serving as a spokesman for the disabled youths' center during health care controversies at the hospital and then during the final move to phase the Center's youths into group homes. Pete's theological background often came through during those emotional arguments... he was a gentle speaker even though he was firm in his convictions.

Just as the Center was closed, Pete suffered a surprise heart attack at age 42. His smoking was blamed -- not the stress of his many civic battles.

Pete recovered and went on to head up Camp Fowler (formerly Camp Happy Hollow) in Mayville near Caro. He was serving as head of that facility for developmentally disabled youths when he died.

Other activities which Pete found time for were: Youth, Inc., the YMCA, Community Federal Credit Union, and St. John's Episcopal Church. He also served as a Plymouth volunteer fireman.

Pete was a proud father, close to his son, Jason, a 15-year-old Salem sophomore.

Also, Pete is survived by: his brother, Robert, of St. Petersburg, FL; a niece, Roseanne Schweitzer, of Flint; and an aunt, Helen Jaccard, of Bellaire.

Funeral services were led by Rev. Robert Shank, Jr. at St. John's on Saturday morning. Burial followed in Riverside Cemetery; Schrader Funeral Home handled the arrangements. Memorial contributions are being made to Camp Fowler or to St. John's.

But Pete's contributions live on.

That's the way it is with gentle giants who stand up for what they feel is right in The Plymouth-Canton Community -- despite the odds.

Tanger dilemma

With all the hoopla about boundary changes in the school district, the possible construction of a new middle school and the proposed alteration of Central into a high school, one small thing has faded into the background - Tanger.

What should the district do with the school?

The changes proposed by the housing committee were prompted by a lack of available space for the students in the district.

What sits, all by its lonesome, in the far northeast corner of the district?

Tanger

So the school, once being used for elementary purposes, was designed for small children. I bet the cost of Forest through the trees

By Todd Langton

renovating and modifying the facility would be less than that of constructing an entire new school.

The district says that Tanger is too far away from the majority of the student population.

Farrand Elementary is practically next door. It might have the student population for a feeder system like the one between Bird and West.

The district also says that the center of the district is constantly shifting south and west.

If that is so and if that trend will only continue, then what use will the district ever have for the facility.

If, by the shifting of the entire district, Tanger becomes more and more remote, all the while becoming less and less accessible, then sell it.

A radical thought, definitely controversial, probably unpopular, but so what.

If the district cannot find a use for the property or the facility then sell it.

Don't hang on to it like some comic book that sits around gathering dust because it will be a collectors item and worth a lot of money some day.

Even the housing committee couldn't figure out what to do with Tanger. The only thing they could come up with was that the school should not be sold and that there should be further study regarding potential uses.

This district has far too many financial concerns to let that building sit practically idle.

Part of Tanger is being put to good use as the valuable and necessary IPSEP program is being run there.

But the facility could be used for so much more.

Vorva or Vos?

EDITOR:

I was amazed to see that the memo from Commissioner John Vos regarding the judgment fee added to the tax bills has received so much press, particularly since Commissioner Jerry Vorva submitted a prior memo to Mayor Dennis Bila on Nov. 10 raising the same questions.

Mayor Bila, acting City Manager Bill Graham, and City Attorney Ronald Lowe, immediately began to investigate the variables raised by Commissioner Vorva and request documents from the courts and Risk Management Insurance attorneys who handled the case.

I am extremely disappointed by what appears to be "grandstanding" as opposed to sound investigative practices getting the coverage.

I hope that the reason The Crier has given Commissioner Vos this coverage is because it was not aware of the Vorva memo and previous month's work by the commissioners, administrators and attorneys acting as a team to get these answers for the public.

CAROL A. LEVITTE

Paparazzo?

There is this image of the media.

Some people feel as if reporters are waiting around every corner with a pad of paper and a pen, just hoping to find someone saying or doing the wrong thing.

In some cases that is probably true. Yes, there are some reporters out there who would stoop so low as to hide behind bushes or put their ear up to the key hole of a closed door for the opportunity to hear what isn't meant for all ears.

On Monday night, while waiting for the City of Plymouth Commission to come out of closed session, I happened to be standing in the doorway of the commission chambers reading the notice on the door that explains public meeting policies. (That's how bored I was.)

Within Reason

By Patricia Brown

At that moment the mayor came out of the pre-commission chambers where the commission was meeting (behind closed doors) and walked to the restroom.

About 10 minutes after he returned to the meeting, Plymouth Police Chief Richard Myers came out and offered me some advice. He said that I shouldn't be "poking around the door," and trying to listen to what was being said.

For one thing, I couldn't have heard much of anything even if I wanted to, and I couldn't have written about it even if I had heard something.

Come on people, let's try not to be so paranoid. Why not worry about the issue at hand, instead of some reporter who's just doing her job?

Art auction draws bidders

BY MICHELLE IRANI

They scratched their ears and noses, nodded their heads, lifted their glasses an inch over their eyes, and waved their hands and arms wildly about.

All of those auction idiosyncrasies came alive during an art auction held at the Plymouth Historic Museum Saturday and organized by RJM Auctioneers, an firm based in the City of Plymouth's Old Village.

There was standing room only in the museum Saturday as prospective bidders filled the 80 or so chairs set up for the auction, while 20-30 more stood in the back of the room.

The bidders, many representing art galleries, were on hand for a bankruptcy estate sale from Flint, which included five silver prints by Ansel Adams, and eight platinum and silver prints by Edward S. Curtis.

Adams, an American photographer, is most widely recognized for his stunning black and white nature photographs, especially California's Yosemite Valley. Curtis is well known for his pictures of American Indians.

Adams' "Clearing Winter Storm," went for the highest bid Saturday, said Richard Montgomery, president of the Plymouth firm. The print sold for $8,000 to a local gallery.

The second highest bid of the night was called in from New York City. Several bids, in fact, were placed from both New York and Chicago, said Montgomery.

Prior to the bidding, Montgomery said, "I'm sure there (are) people here in town who are from out of state strictly for this table here." He was referring to the table displaying the Adams and Curtis pieces.

Montgomery, who has operated out of Plymouth for four years, said he hopes to have future auctions at the museum. "We're hoping to make Plymouth the center of auctions in this area," said the Plymouth resident.

Montgomery, who brought his business to Plymouth from Lincoln Park, said the museum was an ideal setting for the auction.

Several last minute additions to the auction (part of a group of items from New York) caught the bidders by surprise and added to the excitement Saturday.

Among those last minute surprises were original works by Picasso, Erte, Rodin, Braque, Brackman, Renior and Bonnard.

Other auction highlights included a page from an early English Bible, a page from an Islamic manuscript, Chinese and Romanian rugs, four bronze sculptures, chairs, clocks, an ancient cannonball, and a box of old dirty bottles that went for $5.

The local Three Cities Art Club also took part in the auction, displaying some 88 works, but the competition was a bit too tough and very few items sold.

"It's too bad for the local artists," said Montgomery. "I was hoping to see more of their works go."

Helping the homeless -- a local touch

BY PATRICIA BROWN

A number of residents of The Plymouth-Canton Community are involved in an organization known for helping the homeless -- Active Friends of the Homeless (AFOTH).

The group, which is based out of City of Plymouth resident Sister Sue Brorby's home, was inspired by a television movie that aired in 1988.

The name of the drama was "God Bless the Child" and it focused on the the inability of one mother to take care of her child.

After months of living in poverty and being forced to wait day by day for a bed at shelters, the young mother is forced to give up her child by abandoning her. One of the movie's major issues was that the mother had promised the child that she would never leave her.

Every day, such themes are relived by homeless families all over the country. Non-profit agencies like AFOTH donate time and money to helping the nation's ever increasing numbers of homeless.

According to Sister Nancy Jamiroz, the organization helps the homeless in many different ways. It donates money to various soup kitchens and shelters in the Detroit area, for example.

"Last week we helped feed 500 people at the Manhouse Shelter," said Jamiroz.

Since the organization first began (October of 1988) it has assisted in rehabilitating a house for a single mother with two children; provided a heater for a woman without heat; purchased, prepared and served food in a local soup kitchen; paid for shelter and insurance for a woman who lost all she had due to illness, until she got back on her feet; and collaborated with other groups helping the homeless people to establish a transitional personal-childcare facility.

The organization also helps through tithing programs -- donations sent to other charities that help the homeless. Still another way it contributes is through trust gifts, which are direct gifts given to homeless individuals with specific emergencies.

AFOTH also conducts major projects. One of the most recent projects the group has become involved in is the establishing of the Women and Children's Sanctuary.

According to Sylvia McNarney, director of the Women and Children's Sanctuary, many shelters only provide escape from the elements during the evening and night hours. During the day, "many of these women with families have no place to go," said McNarney.

It is the goal of the Women and Children's Sanctuary, "to provide a daytime program designed to be the initial step in the homeless mother's permanent exodus from the streets," said McNarney.

There are more than 30,000 homeless residents in the City of Detroit alone, said McNarney. More and more of these numbers are women and children, and since many shelters cater to homeless males with substance abuse problems, many homeless mother's try to avoid staying in a shelter and end up on the street.

McNarney said that the sanctuary will be located on the westside of Detroit and that right now they just don't have the money to open their doors.

When it does open, said McNarney, "The women can come to the shelter (sanctuary) with their children, and we can stabilize her immediate needs. She can stay with us until she gets her GED or goes through a training program, like WARM, which takes unemployed people and trains them."

"The Women and Children's Sanctuary hopes to work with WARM to get these women into a training program to help them support their families," said McNarney.

Playing games is great entertainment for the entire family. I grew up playing all kinds of card games with my brothers, dad, mom, grandparents and cousins. In fact, I think I learned to count by using a deck of cards.

In the past few years a lot of new games have appeared on the shelves in stores across the country. When Trivial Pursuit hit the market it was big deal and is still a top selling game. I suppose it's a good game when you have a group of people together, but since I have enough trouble remembering the important things in life, I don't do well with stupid little trivia facts.

Pictionary is another good game when you have a group of friends or family together. You don't have to be an art major to do well in this game, but it helps if you have the same thought patterns as your partners. To enjoy this game you should play with people you are comfortable enough to laugh with or laugh at.

There are hundreds of other new games hitting the market each year (especially just before Christmas). Some of the new games are kind of boring and some depend on how many people play to make them more exciting. Outburst can be a lot of fun in the right group situation and last weekend four of us played Talk About which was fun with a small group.

UNO is a favorite game at our house (since I won the other night). It's a fun game to play when you have an odd number of people or when you're playing with different age groups. Besides, it's relaxing and you don't have to think a lot.

BINGO used to be a fun and easy game when I was growing up. However, when I went to play at a hall a few weeks ago with my daughter and some friends I learned that it isn't something you relax and have fun playing. Those people take the game serious and you wouldn't believe how fast they call those numbers. I probably could have won big bucks if I could have kept up with them. It was amazing to note that most of the people were older than me and were able to keep up with three times the number of cards. With a little help from my friends I did manage to win a couple dollars. This is one game when winning definitely makes playing it a lot more fun.

We even interrupted a game last Sunday to watch some of the Super Bowl. It's funny how different numbers on the scoreboard can make that game much more fun and interesting.

Playing games is cheap entertainment. Besides, we all need to take more time to laugh and enjoy friends and family.

Sticker shock

Wedding costs

BY TODD LANGTON

One magical star-filled night your significant other decides that it's time for a commitment, one that is supposed to last a lifetime.

He, or she, sets up a night filled with romance; a night that is supposed to sweep you right off your feet.

Later in the evening, while drinking bubbly in front of a roaring fire, he or she pops the question. Reeling from the romance of the evening, or a little too much bubbly, you answer with an emphatic yes and the celebration begins.

One problem is that, unless the happy couple just hit the lottery or plans to elope and do a quick justice of the peace number, the cost of a traditional wedding may put a slight crimp in what is supposed to be a time of bliss.

A traditional wedding, complete with church ceremony and reception, can very easily run into the thousands of dollars.

Think about what goes into a traditional wedding.

There are invitations, flowers and decorations, photographers, churches, banquet facilities, caterers, liquor, bands or disk jockeys, and limousines, not to mention the wedding dress and tuxedo for the bride and the groom.

After all of that, there is still the cost of the honeymoon.

But luckily, despite all the costs involved, people are tying the knot on a very regular basis.

It really adds up

The expense of marriage

The costs of a traditional wedding can vary greatly depending on the number of people invited to the event.

The average cost for 100 invitations, which includes invitations, response cards, reception and thank you cards, is around $125 dollars, said Betty Buzubis, owner of Paper Parade in downtown Plymouth.

One way to save money, Buzubis said, is to forego the reception cards. Reception information can be printed on the wedding invitations, she said.

Without the reception cards the cost may run around $100 for the invitations, she added.

Buzubis said she tries to provide "what is necessary and what is nice without having it cost them a fortune."

For those who would like to spend a fortune, engraved invitations can cost as much as $1,000 for 100 copies, she said.

Although dramatic invitations have been fairly popular in the past, "a lot of people are going back to the very traditional" cards, Buzubis said.

The traditional invitations are mostly white or soft pastel colors, she said.

Flowers are definitely traditional aspects of a weddings.

People are moving back to using real flowers in wedding ceremonies, said Beatrice Flanigan, owner of Bea's Flowers and Gifts in Plymth Township.

Ten years ago many people used silk flowers, Flanigan said.

"Very few people use silks or artificials today," she said. "I think flowers are a very important part of the wedding."

Flower arrangements for weddings can range anywhere from $150 to several thousand dollars, Flanigan said.

Gardinas and lillies are very popular for weddings, she said.

Renting banquet facilities can be one of the largest expenses involved in planning a wedding.

The cost of renting a banquet facility can range from $1,500 to $10,000 or more, said Nick Ristich, owner of The Plymouth Manor, a banquet and catering facility in Plymouth.

The average cost of a reception in the main ballroom, which seats 300 people, for 200-250 people is $5,000 to $6,000, Ristich said.

Dinners at the facility cost $16.45 and $19.23 per plate, he said. The dinners are served at the tables.

Per plate dinners can cost from $17 on up at many banquet facilities, he added.

The overall cost depends on the size of the ballroom, the number of people attending and the additional services required, he said.

The Plymouth Manor offers in-house services such as photographers, disc-jockeys and more, Ristich said.

They also plan to build an in-house chapel for non-denominational weddings, which are on the rise, he said.

Wedding gowns can also be rather expensive items.

Brides to be just about always choose traditional gowns, said Carol Kuffel, owner of Beginnings Bridal Shop in old village.

The less elaborate traditional gowns are selling well this year, Kuffel said.

The majority of gowns that she sells are either white or ivory, she said.

Because she likes to keep the gowns in her store under $1,000, the top of the line dress in her store is approximately $900, Kuffel said.

The least expensive dress in her store is $300, she said.

"This is going to be a really big bridal year," Kuffel said.

DELICIOUS MEMORIES

Problems encountered

The second time

BY PATRICIA BROWN

For most people getting married can be a big adjustment. For those who are marrying for the second time, the institution of marriage can be just as difficult.

According to Fr. Joseph Plawecki of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Plymouth, "If there are children involved in the second marriage, a lot of good communication is important before the couple gets into the marriage."

One of the biggest problems that couples who have children from a previous marriage face is adjusting to the new spouse or the spouse to be.

A good way to ease children into the relationship, according to Plawecki, is to "plan things together as a family."

Another problem that exists in second marriages is for the spouse that has lived alone either after a first marriage or who has never been married and now is planning to marry someone with children.

Plawecki said that it takes time for the spouse to get used to living with people and at the same time they are adjusting to caring for the children.

On the other side, if the person who is getting married for the second time has children and the person has also been divorced for a long time, it will be difficult for the children to adjust to another environment, he said.

"The children have had to get over a divorce and now a new person is coming into the situation," said Plawecki. He added that the child needs to feel secure and that the constant change threatens the security.

If the couple plans on having a traditional wedding ceremony, Plawecki said that it is a good idea to involve the children in the wedding.

Most of the second marriages Plawecki deals with in the Catholic Church are usually the traditional service, but a scaled down version.

"It's usually a smaller group and more intimate," he said.

One local organization that deals with marriage and family problems is the Plymouth Family Service. The organization is set up to see patients on an outpatient basis.

According to David Breeden, director of Plymouth Family Service, "The biggest thing is the blending of the two families, and the issues of the parenting role.

"If you are getting into a marriage with children, you have the issue of negotiating a consistent form of togetherness," said Breeden.

Breeden said that the children have to get used to the new step-parent and step-siblings. He also said that in trying to get along the children and parents have to learn to accept differences in each other.

"The children have to get used to the differences in values and discipline," said Breeden.

One of the biggest problems between step-children and step-parents is that the new parent tries to exert too much influence over the child. "They (the stepparent) really should take a second position and do their influencing through the main parent.

"Just try and enjoy the kids," said Breeden. "They already have a mother and father.

"The best advice I can give to a step-parent is to not try and do too much," he continued.

Acting City of Plymouth Manager William Graham said that when he remarried he had the traditional wedding ceremony.

Graham, who is a father of two grown daughters, said, "I think the children have a desire to hang onto the family unit."

He said that his younger daughter accepted his new spouse better than his older daughter. "Because of her young age, there was a greater level of acceptance," said Graham.

He also said that because of the good relationship with his ex-wife, things are a little easier on his daughters.

A mother's perspective

Mothers, daughters and weddings

They have been through it all before -- sometimes. They can relate to what you are going through -- just about always.

They are the mothers of the bride...

...And they have a unique perspective on what their daughters are going through when they engage and marry.

Bonnie West's daughter, Amy, is getting married in May, 1991, and the planning and work on the ceremony have already begun.

"It's just the fun stuff so far," said West, a resident of Plymouth. "We haven't had to worry a lot yet. We're not too haggard."

With her daughter in East Lansing attending Michigan State University, West said finding time for the early planning means seeing Amy every third weekend or so.

"So far we've got the wedding dress and the church," said West, who is making the bride's maids dresses based on a pattern her daughter picked out. Amy originally wanted her mother to make the wedding gown, but the Wests found one instead.

"We've started with plenty of time," West said. "But finding that it takes a lot of time."

"Maybe the whole thing will be fun," she continued.

Amy will be transferring to the University of Michigan in the fall so that mother and daughter can spend more time working on the wedding plans.

West said she is helping with the planning wherever her daughter wants. "I just let her do what she wants and follow her lead," West said. "We're taking one thing at a time, trying to follow a schedule."

The Wests are planning a traditional wedding ceremony, while talking about "unique" ways to make the event memorable, including using a horse drawn carriage.

"We're hashing that stuff out," said West. "We're just trying to get a foundation down and decide on the other touches later."

So far, though, West said she has been mostly surprised by "how long it takes to do these things."

Agnes Wheeler has seen it all before. Her daughter, LeAnna, will wed in July this year. It will be the Wheelers fourth wedding -- two daughters and a son have already tied the knot.

"From my perspective, it's been very simple," said the City of Plymouth resident. "Children nowadays do more for themselves than they use to. That's just the way we raised them. Girls are very, very independent."

Wheeler said her daughter is doing most of the planning long distance from Pennsylvania, where LeAnna lives and works.

Wheeler said her first daughter did most of the work on her own wedding, but Wheeler was heavily involved with her second daughter's wedding ceremony. Wheeler's son and his bride did most of their own planning.

"They just tell us what they want and we've told them what we'll do," Wheeler said. "They're doing most of the planning -- they started last fall."

With LeAnna in Pennsylvania, and the groom, Bruce Christenson, in Hillsdale, the plans have been kept as simple as possible, said Wheeler, because of the vast distances separating the couple.

"They're trying to keep it simple, but still make it something they'll always remember," said Wheeler. "We intend to help them out as much as possible."

One way Wheeler might help her daughter is to possibly make the wedding gown. "We're still deciding on that," Wheeler said.

Wheeler will also be busy as the date nears planning and organizing for all of the out-of-town relatives who will be coming to the community for the ceremony.

"It gets complicated with everyone coming in from out-of-state," said Wheeler.

One of Wheeler's biggest disappointments during her last daughter's wedding -- when she was heavily involved in planning and executing the ceremony -- was that she couldn't spend much time with family.

Besides making arrangements for family guests, Wheeler said she expects that she'll be able to enjoy their company more this time.

Carol Kuffel, owner of Beginnings bridal shop, in Plymouth, said she sees a lot of mothers in her shop busy helping their daughters any way they can.

Kuffel's own daughter, Christine, is getting married in April in Dearborn, and "everything has been going very well."

In this case, Kuffel's daughter is handling all of the arrangements, and without any problems, letting mom attend to things at the shop.

Besides helping their daughters, mothers have to concern themselves with other family matters -- like Wheeler -- including, of course, finding the right dress for the ceremony.

Nothing, in a wedding, is mundane -- there are long hours of preparation to find a few moments glory for the bride (and groom).

Not an easy task, but not one without its rewards.

County sale agreement announced

N'ville Twp. awaits DeMattia project proposals

BY KEN VOYLES

With the sale of Wayne County land to the R.A. DeMattia Company a definite possibility, Northville Township officials said they are ready to get "involved" to make sure the project is in keeping with the character of the community.

An agreement recommending the sale of county property in Northville Township (between Five and Six Mile roads and Beck Road and Edward Hines Drive) was announced last week by Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara.

The agreement, which still must be approved by the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, would call for the sale of some 930 acres of county land.

Officials at the Plymouth Township based development firm estimate that there will be 5,500 jobs in the non-residential portion of the project upon completion in 1999. Of that number, some 1,800 will be new jobs, said DeMattia officials.

The Huntington Falls project (as it is being called) centers on a mixed-use strategy, including residential, recreational, office, retail, research and light industrial facilities, and an 18-hole Lee Trevino designed golf course on some 250 acres.

In addition to the price tag of $31,750,000 for the land, DeMattia will pay more than $4 million to prepare the site. Demolition work will include some 20 buildings in the now-defunct Michigan State Training School west of Sheldon Road as well as another 40 buildings east of Sheldon in the Wayne County Child Development Center, which closed in the 1970s.

DeMattia officials said tennis courts, riding stables with trails leading to Hines Park, and a health club are also envisioned for the site.

McNamara said the project could add $8 million in new county tax revenues in addition to new local and state taxes. Plante & Moran, the county's financial consultants, said the state equalization valuation (SEV) when completed could be as much as $2 billion.

The project's development team includes the DeMattia firm, the Selective Group, Heritage Development Company and the Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Company.

"We will now be very much involved," said Northville Township Supervisor Georgina Goss. "They'll have to come to us for zoning, so our part of this whole arrangement should be starting now."

"It does look like it is a project that will be a real asset to this community," she added. "The county asked us for input so we let them know we wanted something in character with our community and something that would not be detrimental."

Goss, who said she will be glad to see the land put back on the tax rolls, added that she did not think the project would have a negative impact on that part of Northville Township, which has remained in a fairly natural state since the closing of county facilities.

"We want to make sure that it's not a very dense development project, though," Goss said.

DeMattia has asked to meet with township officials before beginning the formal approval process, said Goss. The project will have to be approved by the township planning commission and the board of trustees.

"This is a good deal for Wayne County," said McNamara, who is planning to forward his recommendation to the county commission. "One of the priorities of my administration since taking office in 1987 was to get this on our tax rolls."

McNamara said revenues from the sale will be used to renovate the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice, construct a new county morgue and relocate the kitchen facilities for the Senior Citizen Food Program.

City, Twp. plan social gathering

BY PATRICIA BROWN

Elected officials from the City of Plymouth and Plymouth Township will be meeting informally on Feb. 6 at an Italian restaurant in Plymouth Township.

The party, which is not being paid for by the taxpayers, said officials, will be held to allow elected officials to get to know each other. The gathering is not being posted as an official meeting, said the organizers.

According to Plymouth Mayor Dennis Bila, "The party is purely social."

Breen and Bila felt that before the (two boards meet on an officials basis, the two groups should get to know each other in a more informal setting.)

There will be no agenda or posting for the meeting, said City Commissioner John Vos III, who is arranging the gathering.

Vos said, "It's a way for the elected officials to get to know one another on a social basis and discuss some similar municipal problems."

The idea of the two municipalities combining services and working together to cut costs has been a theme sounded throughout the past few years.

4 City candidates -- not ranked

That committee also met briefly with Graham on Monday night in a closed session, the results of which were not released. He was apparently the only candidate who met twice with the search committee.

Bila said the four candidates are not placed in any order. "We decided not to rank any at all," he explained.

The candidates, in alphabetical order, are:

RANDY. BYRNE, 37, the city manager of Grand Blanc since 1981. He is married with one child and holds a masters in public administration from Oakland University.

GRAHAM, 47, the city clerk and currently acting city manager of Plymouth. He is married and has two daughters. A 1961 graduate of Plymouth High School, he has a bachelors degree from Hillsdale College. Graham, who entered banking 25 years ago, left banking to join the city three years ago.

JEROME KISSCORNIE, 37, the city manager of Tecumseh since 1985. He is married with two children and received a masters from Western.

JOHN STRUTNER, 39, the community services representative of the southwest region of Virginia. Married with two children, he lives in Abingdon, VA and formerly served as city manager in Pearisburg, VA. He holds a masters in public administration from Ohio State.

Graham said, "I'm glad the commission has included me in the final four, recognizing that my years of local involvement count even though I've only been in municipal government for three years."

Twp. approves cable 'action plan'

BY PATRICIA BROWN

The Plymouth Township Board of Trustees voted unanimously last week to authorize the administration to prepare an action plan for the renewal process of Omnicom Cable of Michigan's franchise.

"I'm going to present along with the attorney a schedule of processes--where the process should start and look over whether we should recommend the process," said Supervisor Maurice Breen.

Breen said that under the United States Cable Communications-Policy Act of 1984, in order for the township to investigate the present cable company, they must comply with the three stage proceedings and begin renewal proceedings at least 36 months prior to the expiration date of the franchise.

In stage one of the proceedings, the board will look at the future cable needs of the community and evaluate the company's past performance.

In January, Omnicom increased its rates in The Plymouth-Canton Community from $17 a month to $18.50 a month. About the increase Breen said, "Somewhere along the line, I'm going to find out about cost increases."

Breen said that the township will take advantage of renewal proceedings to investigate Omnicom's reasons for cost increases and to evaluate the company's past performance along with the community's future cable needs.

Twp. man's exam delayed

The preliminary examination for Nathan E. Frank Jr., a Wayne County Sheriff's corporal and former Plymouth Township Board candidate has been postponed until Feb. 16, according to 35th District Court Administrator Marion Belding.

The original examination was to have taken place on Friday but was adjourned because Frank is "under a doctor's care," said Frank's attorney Stephen Boak.

Frank was apprehended by Plymouth Township Police officers at Don Massey Cadillac Jan. 19 and later charged with carrying a concealed weapon. He was allegedly carrying a loaded .45 caliber automatic pistol, for which he had no permit, according to police.

Frank waived the 12-day rule which requires that a preliminary examination be held within 12 days of a person's arraignment, said Boak.

"Apparently he is hospitalized. That is all we know," said Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry.

The charges against Frank will not be dropped, Berry said.

Sunken car

Officers in the marine patrol division had been running a training exercise in the Detroit River earlier the same day, he said.

"We get these routinely," Crider said of the vehicle in the water.

Officers found the vehicle unoccupied when it was pulled from the lake, but the event drew a substantial number of onlookers, many of whom pulled off Northville Road to watch the action.

The post recovery investigation, which is continuing, will be handled by the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, according to City of Plymouth police.

Rock's volleyball team improves match record

BY RITA DERBIN

Practice makes perfect — or in the case of the Salem volleyball team — a little experience is making a big difference.

The young Rocks aren't perfect by a long shot but they are steadily improving.

The girls are not making the mental mistakes they were making earlier in the season, according to coach Allie Suffety.

"I'm pleased with their progress," Suffety said. "They're getting better every week."

On Monday night, the Rocks defeated Westland John Glenn in straight games 15-8, 15-10, 15-11, to improve their record to 3-2 in the Lakes Division and 3-4 in conference play.

Two players are leading the way for the Rocks. Martha Bol is blocking and setting well and Kolleen Lawrence is playing a very good all around game, according to Suffety.

"We're also getting great back row production from all our players," he added.

On Saturday, the Rocks hosted the Plymouth Invitational and made it to the semi-finals before being eliminated.

Salem was 5-3 in their pool. They were defeated by Garden City in the first match up, 15-13, 16-14. The Rocks then rebounded by taking the next five games. They defeated Livonia Franklin, 15-3, 15-10 and Crestwood 15-8, 15-0 before splitting with Gabriel Richard 15-8, 12-15 to reach the semifinals.

In the semifinals, Northville defeated the Rocks 16-14, 15-10. Salem then lost the consolation game 15-6 to Garden City.

Birmingham Marian won the invitational by defeating Northville 12-15, 15-7, 15-10.

Canton also participated in the tournament. The Chiefs split with Dearborn High School 9-15, 15-8; lost to Northville 15-5, 15-13 and then lost two games to North Farmington 15-9, 15-12 before splitting with Birmingham Marian 15-13, 8-15.

"The girls played real well," said Suffety about his team. "They were playing hard — they're passing the ball and attack receiving real well."

By the end of the tournament the Rocks were tired, according to Suffety.

"We were mentally fatigued at the end of the day," he said. "The girls were making fine errors — the little things were causing them difficulties."

The Rocks host Farmington tonight (Jan. 31) with junior varsity beginning at 6:30 p.m. Monday they will travel to Livonia Stevenson.

Salem pins Rockets

BY RITA DERBIN

The beat goes on.

The Salem wrestling team grounded the Westland John Glenn Rockets 40-19, in a Lakes Division showdown on Thursday.

In the meet Scott Martin pinned Tom Pace; Dan Bonnett pinned Damian Tacher; Chad Wilson beat Mike Pace at the buzzer for a 2-1 victory; Ken Stopa lost to Karl Pace 5-1; and Julian Sell beat Eric Ewing 5-1. In other results Jeff Coleman was pinned by Tony Pietrzyk; Jeff Schumate lost to Cory Buckley; Ron Miller pinned Ryan Ryan Wilson; Charlie Apigian beat Wes Lopez 18-9; Steve Burlison pinned his opponent; Pete Israel was pinned by Kraig Kuban; Brian Burlison beat Garnett Woody 5-2 and Ken Coker beat Jason Dunn 5-0.

"Glenn was a tough match," said coach Ron Krueger. "We lost some weights I didn't want to lose but we wrestle pretty well."

On Tuesday, the Rocks wrestled Walled Lake Central in a make-up meet and won 62-10.

Martin, Bonnett, Stopa, Sell, Schumate, Scott Valentine, Steve Burlison, Israel, Brian Burlison and Coker all pinned their opponents and Coleman won on points.

The Rocks will host Livonia Stevenson tomorrow night at 6:30 in their last dual meet of the season. If they win, Salem will be the Lakes Division champions.

The Rocks will defend their conference title at the conference meet on Saturday at John Glenn.

"I expect to win but you never know," said coach Ron Krueger, whose team has been hobbled by sickness and injuries. "It's ours to lose."

"What I want is our kids to go out and wrestle to their capabilities," he added. "We should do well."

In the conference Salem cagers undefeated

BY RITA DERBIN

The Rocks are using their size and depth to roll over opponents.

Salem High's basketball team remained undefeated in conference play — 4-0 and 9-1 overall — after defeating Westland John Glenn and Livonia Franklin last week.

On Friday, the Rocks outplayed John Glenn in the fourth quarter to come up with a 66-55 victory.

Jake Baker led the way with 23 points — 13 in the fourth quarter. He also pulled down 13 rebounds.

Guards Tom Noonan (13 points) and Jeff Gold (11 points) also played solid games.

The Rocks led by one point after the first quarter, were down by three at halftime and tied after three quarters before taking over in the fourth quarter.

Baker, described by Salem coach Bob Brodie as being the "team horse," carried the Rocks and controlled the game as they outscored the Rockets 22-11 for an 11-point victory.

"Everyone's contributing," said Brodie. "We're rotating all 12 players and everyone I put out there gives a good effort."

"The reserves are coming off the bench and playing well," Brodie added. "They're giving the starters a rest so they'll be fresh in the fourth quarter."

Last Tuesday the Rocks defeated Livonia Franklin, 68-58.

Center K.C. Kirkpatrick led the assault with 19 points and 12 rebounds. Baker (15 rebounds) and Ryan Johnson chipped in with 11 points each.

"We started out quick and got a big lead," Brodie said. "(Franklin) was scrappy — they outscored us 17-10 in the fourth quarter but we've got good finishers."

"Our guards are doing a great job defending and getting the ball into the big guys," Brodie added. "We've been using our height advantage to win games by going inside and rebounding everyone."

The Rocks played Farmington last night and will travel to Livonia Stevenson on Friday for "round two" of that heated rivalry. Salem won "round one" with a thrilling 76-74 overtime victory at home a couple weeks ago but Brodie is expecting the Spartans to be tougher at home.

"Round two on Friday," said Brodie. "There's a lot of good teams in this league so we're taking one game at a time but Stevenson is real tough against us, it should be a great game."

On Tuesday (Feb. 6) the Rocks will play at Canton. The game starts at 7:30 p.m.

Escapes held on federal charges

BY PATRICIA BROWN

Two prisoners who escaped from the Western Wayne Correctional Facility (WWCF) Dec. 24 and were captured in Wytheville, VA, four days later, have been returned to Michigan.

Charles White, 28, of Pontiac, and Frank Schanault, 33, of Westland, are being held in the Wayne County Jail on federal charges of kidnapping and interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle, according to FBI Special Agent Nancy Schuëster.

They were arraigned Jan. 23 in federal court on those charges, she said.

Schuëster also said that at some time later this week a pre-trial conference is expected to be held concerning the two prisoners, but at this time no date has been set for their trial.

Before their escape, Schanault was serving time in the local prison for armed robbery and White was in WWCF for rape and armed robbery.

After they escaped from the prison, the two men were not sighted again until they allegedly kidnapped Susan Bixler, 21, of Dearborn Heights from in front of a Dearborn Heights insurance company, according to police.

After abducting Bixler, the men drove Bixler in her car to Bristol, VA, where they met a relative of theirs who gave them money and a change of clothes, said police.

At that point, they released Bixler unharmed and then they boarded a bus enroute for Jacksonville, FL.

When the bus stopped in Wtheville, VA, a stop along the route, the two men were apprehended by Wytheville Police and later taken into custody by the FBI and transported to Bristol, where they were held until two weeks ago, according to police.

CSX hires corporate liaison

BY PATRICIA BROWN

Various problems with the railroad system which cuts through the community have been an on-going concern for Plymouth-Canton residents.

In an effort to combat what has been a public relations nightmare, in Plymouth-Canton at least, Chessie System Transportation (CSX) has hired Tom Drake as a corporate liaison to deal with rail system problems as they affect municipalities.

One of Drake's jobs will be to assist communities in obtaining federal and state money available to local governments for the improvement of gradings at major crossings.

"CSX is taking a pro-active role and that's good to see," said William Graham, the City of Plymouth's acting city manager.

"I will be available to the community leaders," said Drake. "Most communities have common problems - crossing blockages and conditions of the crossings. Those are the two areas we are going to try and solve."

Drake said he also hopes to implement training programs in the various communities through which the trains travel.

Getting down to business

Dawn McAllister Buda, Kate Daniel and Cathy Dasher specialize in helping people design the look of anything from a room to an entire home. (Crier photo by Robert Richards)

Offer clients a choice Designing women

BY KEN VOYLES

Growing up around her parents, Dawn McAllister Buda, almost couldn't help but be influenced in her career choice.

Though never pressured into the same business as her parents, Bruce and Beverly McAllister, Buda said it was hard to resist the attraction of the designing business. The McAllisters operated their own Northville based company -- House of Decorating -- for many years.

Today Buda has a new office and showroom -- Designers Choice -- in Plymouth's Old Village where she concentrates on providing a unique design consulting service.

The Northville resident has more than 23 years of design experience, through her work with her family and as a freelance designer.

Open since June, the goal of the new business is, "To obtain a unique home that will function and reflect your lifestyle and personality at a fair price."

Besides learning the furniture business in Ypsilanti and doing freelance design work, Buda also spent 12 years running the family business after her parents retired.

"We try to accommodate whatever the customer needs," she said. "We'll do one room or a whole house."

"I'd like to stress that we design for our clients and not ourselves," she continued. "We give them the options and they give us their choices."

Most of the firm's business is focused on local homeowners needs, but the company will also perform work for businesses that may need design consulting advice. Buda has had clients from as far away as Texas, Arizona and Florida.

"We're really happy here," said Buda of the revamped storefront facing Starkweather Road in Old Village. "We have the showroom space to show furniture and stuff we'd use in a design." The showroom materials are just a small example of the kinds of design elements Buda can access through her many contacts in the business.

She added that customers can stop in and talk with her or other designers -- Kate Daniel, Cathy Dasher and Jolie Gutkowski -- for no charge. For a small fee a designer will visit a home and give a homeowner advice, or a customer can take advantage of more extensive design services.

"A lot of our clients like this service," Buda said. "It takes the load off them. They'll leave it in our hands."

Buda said expansion of the company in a couple of years is already a distinct possibility. "We could use more space right now," she said.

She also stressed that her company can design a room or entire home for customers "much faster" than most people would realize.

"It's an extensive process, though," Buda said. "We interview the clients and take account of their needs and budget. We'll then do a master plan and then the work can be done over a short time or a couple years depending on the clients."

"There's no pressure on the clients to buy certain things or to finish the project right away," she continued. "It's a case by case service."

In times of uncertainty, consumers are careful and a little reluctant to spend. They want to be sure before they buy; they want information.

One of the main ways they get information about products, services, prices and values is from advertising. Yours -- or somebody else's.

Development may set new standards

PG. 25 THE COMMUNITY CRIER: January 31, 1990

Reschke, who wanted to keep details of the possible development "hush, hush," said his partnership hoped to have something concrete in the near future.

"We don't have an agreement yet with the township," he continued. "There are still some things to iron out."

Canton Supervisor Tom Yack said the potential development plan has all the earmarks to be the "most significant residential development in the history of Canton because of its location."

Yack added, "It will be a first in the sense that we have more control over how the land is going to be used and how it will look in the end."

"This development will set new standards for the community," he continued. "It will influence what happens to the east side of Canton Center Road as well as to the west."

Yack said the idea for a residential community centered around a golf course in the "civic" core of Canton first took form at the beginning of his administration.

"We tested out the idea with some people and they felt it had merit," Yack said. "We were talking about a high quality development around township hall."

Canton eventually developed a conceptual plan for that segment of the township, covering more than 900 acres of land. Originally, Yack wanted Canton to purchase most of the land and then sell it to a developer, but that idea evolved with the concept itself.

Although no plans are available from the development group, it appears, according to information from Yack, that the development will feature $200-250,000 homes, possibly on half-acre lots, a public or private golf course, and possibly some "village commercial" around a clubhouse.

Canton is currently the largest landowner in the area, said Yack, with some 250 acres, not including another 150 acres or so which makes up part of the township's recreation complex.

Yack said the idea for the community was discussed with seven development firms, but FWS Golf Inc. clearly took the most interest. "They have a track record, an interest, and the money to do it," Yack said.

As a demonstration of its own commitment, Canton went out and purchased some of the land with hopes to turn it over at a later date.

At the present time FWS Golf Inc. has offers out on just about all of the property in the area, said Yack, who added that Canton has committed its land to the project.

The supervisor said there were "no pre-conceived notions of what could be on the land," adding that he hoped to "ink" the deal "soon" with FWS for the township property.

Yack said that that can be done once the Southfield firm conducts an environmental impact study of the land.

"I think it's fair to say there is a genuine, sincere effort under way to move the project forward, but there's always a chance it might not happen," said Yack. But the supervisor said FWS has already committed enough money to "know they're serious."

The golf course and homes would fill a niche in Canton, said Yack, as well as provide another recreational outlet for residents.

He added that the project already "bears the mark" of Canton's involvement.

"If we do nothing to this land

(currently zoned agricultural) we'll get piecemeal development," said Yack. "We need to make sure as we move west that we get the kind of development we want."

Yack said he did not think the "civic" development plan was in direct conflict with an attempt to rekindle interest in the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) district at Ford and Sheldon roads.

As Yack sees it, the DDA district is potentially the "commercial core" of Canton, while the proposed development along Canton Center Road will be the "civic core."

"We have to go with where we are at now," he said. "Every community needs an example of a standard of excellence. We're just getting a few now."

CALLING ALL ARTISTS

"Art should bring people closer together." With those words Joe DeLauro, an artist/sculptor and Canton resident, has issued a call to all Canton residents that consider themselves artists to contact the Canton Arts Council. The newly formed organization is compiling a list of Canton residents that are involved either personally or professionally in the arts. From this list will come a reception, to be held in the Spring, of Canton artists. It will be an attempt to develop a sense of community within the art world in Canton.

The Canton Arts Council is comprised of ten people including DeLauro, Carol Stefanni, Ed Wendover, Scott Kappler, Carey Peters, Bill Sharpe, Joanne Zavias, Joyce Younk and Carol Ann Karol.

To add your name to the list of Canton artists (drama, music, art, etc.) you may write the Arts Council, in care of the Canton Community Foundation, 44920 Ford Road, Canton, 48187, or you may call Ed Wendover, 453-6900 and leave your name and address.

CANTON WASTE RECYCLING UNITED EARTH SANITATION CO.

This month the Canton Community Foundation would like to acknowledge the support of CANTON WASTE RECYCLING and UNITED EARTH SANITATION CO. for making this page possible. By providing financial support for the WEDNESDAY REPORT, they make it possible for Foundation money, raised in the Community, to be spent on our other programs ... SCHOLARSHIPS ... ART ... HUMAN SERVICES ... OUTREACH ... AND LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS.

CANTON WASTE RECYCLING is located on Van Born Road, East of Lily. The recycling center will take plastic, newspapers, glass, grass clippings used for composting, and yard waste such as brush which can be mulched. Other items accepted include aluminum, car parts (no tires), used oil, concrete, paint, auto metal, batteries, cardboard, and white goods (appliances). Proceeds from the collection of newspapers are donated to the League of Women Voters.

This Christmas CANTON WASTE RECYCLING participated in a Christmas tree collection program. Over 16,000 Christmas trees were collected and made into mulch instead of being dumped into the landfill. This mulch is available free to CANTON residents who want to go and pick it up.

CANTON WASTE RECYCLING (367-5601) is open between the hours of 10 am and 4 pm on Friday, and 10 am to 2 pm on Saturday.
