FATAL ACCIDENT!

HENRY WALKER DIED SUNDAY MORNING.

Lock-Jaw, Caused From a Gun-Shot Wound, Caused His Death.

HENRY WALKER, mention of whom was made in these columns week before last, is dead from the effects of the gun-shot wound received. It was thought at first that the injury would give but little trouble, but the latter part of last week it began to get worse and finally resulted in lock-jaw, causing death in a few hours. He died Sunday morning and the funeral was held Wednesday. He leaves many sympathizing friends and relatives to mourn his untimely death.

It is good for passage upon any regular passenger train (excepting limited trains) of any and all the lines parties to this agreement, upon presentation to the conductor of the train, on compliance with the reasonable provisions of the ticket required for the purpose of identification.

It will be sold to the public at all principal ticket offices of lines parties to this agreement, for the sum of thirty dollars, with rebate of ten dollars after use or upon expiration, upon compliance with the agreement upon which the ticket is issued.

This ticket will be placed on sale February 1, 1898.

This ticket, of course, can be used only upon the lines of roads parties to this agreement, and will be issued in addition to the tickets of the Mileage Bureau of the Central Passenger Association.

The interchangeable mileage tickets issued by the Mileage Bureau of the Central Passenger Association will be accepted by such of the above mentioned lines as are parties to the Central Passenger Association, upon compliance with the terms and provisions of that ticket.

Passengers desiring to hold tickets good upon all the lines of the Central Passenger Association can procure such tickets until further notice on the lines of the parties which are members of the C. P. A., but must present and exchange mileage for passage tickets at the ticket office before boarding the train, and comply with all the conditions of the Central Passenger Association tickets.

CHAPTER V.
HILDED RAN-
 SOME was engaged to be married; she was to be Lady Caraven, and on this day her lover was to visit her.

Arley Ransome
 went off to business early. The first thing he did was to send a note to the earl, saying that all difficulty was removed; his daughter had consented; the "only thing remaining was for him to ask her to settle the wedding day.

Lord Caraven read it through, then crushed it in his hands, and finally tore it into shreds and threw it under his feet. He had not brought himself to a proper state of submission yet.
 He would have given the whole world to escape from Arley Ransome; but the choice was plain enough—ruin, shame, despair, or marriage with the dark-eyed girl who was "not his style," and whom he was quite sure he should never like.

The marriage should take place in due course. The Ransomes had as it were drawn him—nay, forced him into it; the consequences must recoil on themselves. In his own mind he considered the daughter quite as bad as the father—indeed he made little distinction between them. The union was to be; there was no further need of scruple. They wanted his title, he wanted their money. He would be civil to them, they could not expect more.

On that evening Hildred Ransome received a letter and a ring. The envelope bore a crest and she knew at once that it was from Lord Caraven.
 The contents were short, but to the surprise of Hildred Ransome, for she was not a love letter, for she had never seen the countenance of her betrothed. "I have to thank you for your consent to my then came a word that had been carefully obliterated and "wishes" written over it. "With your permission I will call to-morrow. I have sent you an engagement ring—will you wear it? I am yours"—here there was an illegible word—

"ULRICH CARAVEN."
 She laid the letter down with a sigh and a smile. She had fancied that a love letter would be very different.
 She opened the little parcel that accompanied the note; it contained a magnificent diamond ring—her engagement ring. She placed it on her finger, and the sun falling on it made it shine like fire. Still, as she looked at it, her eyes filled with tears. She would have liked some one to put the ring on her finger; although she was engaged to be married, and was to be a countess, she felt very lonely and desolate.

Arley Ransome smiled when he saw the ring. At least it was an earnest of good things to come.
 "Very nice, very appropriate," said the lawyer—"really a ring suitable for the coming Lady Caraven." The day after brought Lord Caraven himself.

That interview was something to be remembered. Mr. Ransome, hoping to make matters smooth and pleasant, had invited his future son-in-law to dine with him, and that he might not feel dull had asked the humorous and brilliant talker Mr. Carway to join them.

It was well that he had done so, for the actual presence of her lover seemed to strike Hildred dumb. She looked at him whenever she found that he was looking elsewhere. She thought him very handsome. His indolent, careless grace contrasted so favorably with her father's sharp, brisk manner.
 She wondered why the earl looked worn and haggard. He was only twenty-eight, her father said. She wondered, too, why he was not more expressive in his manner. He took her down to dinner, and the only words they exchanged were about the warmth of the day. During dinner they never spoke, save for the most ordinary civilities. When dinner was over, the earl evidently preferred the society of Mr. Carway to hers.

insisted that the marriage should take place at St. George, Hanover Square.
 "And so, my lord," he said, "let us distinctly understand each other. My daughter is bringing you a fortune that might be the dower of a princess, and she must be treated with due respect. I will not have one detail omitted. The marriage must be conducted as though you were espousing a lady of your own rank." Lord Caraven laughed; he knew that there was no opposing such a decree —it must be complied with. He made the best of it. He invited his half-cousin, the Lady Frances Riche, a superannuated coquette, who still believed herself young and charming, to be bridesmaid. Lord St. Maure was "best man." A small but select party of guests were invited. Nothing was omitted.

"You must have a clever maid, Hilddred," said Arley Ransome. "Ask Lady Riche to find you one."
 Lady Riche succeeded, and Hildred rejoiced in the attendance of a bright, quick Parisienne, who foretold that the day would come when her mistress would be acknowledged one of the most beautiful women in England.
 "She wants a little training; she will have to travel and mix in society—then you will see," reported Amlee. "I have never seen a face or figure of greater promise."

The day before Hildred's wedding day the Hollies had been one scene of excitement and confusion; there had been so many visitors, the number of presents was so great. Late in the evening, a magnificent bridal bouquet arrived from Lord Caraven. The wedding breakfast was all prepared; the trunks containing all that was needed of the grand trousseau were packed and corded—the labels were already addressed. "Lady Caraven, passenger to Paris," for the earl had decided on spending the so-called honeymoon there; every detail of the morrow's ceremony was arranged, and late at night Hildred Ransome stood with the earl's bouquet in her hand.

They revealed nothing to her, those odoriferous flowers; they were of magical sweetness, but they brought her no message. There was something pathetic in the picture—the drawing-room full of strange shadows, the light of the lamp falling where she stood, a contrast to the darkness around. She wore a dressing-gown of white, soft, clinging material, fastened with crimson bows, her wealth of dark hair lay negligently over her shoulders, her eyes were bright with unshed tears.

It was a sweet, sad, girlish face; a motherly woman looking at it would have drawn the girl's head down to her breast, and have soothed her with loving words. The morrow would be her wedding day; the tired servants had all sleeping, her attentive little maid had gone to rest, her father had retired quite early to his room. The morrow would be her wedding day, and they had told her that she could live without love. Her wedding day!
 (To be continued.)

Undeserved Calf.
 It was undeserved, but the circumstances were so peculiar that even the recipient of the blow must have been more amused than angry. The story is told by a London journal: The Rev.
 Dr. X., a popular minister, suffers from a habit in his gait, a peculiarity which he inherited from his father. One day when the reverend doctor was still a student, he was walking along Princes street, Edinburgh, in company with his father, and on coming to a path where the footway was narrowed on account of some building operations, the old gentleman stepped on before him. As they were proceeding thus, a sober-looking countryman behind them, evidently unaware of the relationship of the pair, frowned once or twice at the limping youth, and shook his head at him reprovingly. Young X. was wondering what this could mean, when he was speedily enlightened by the countryman giving him a smart box on the ear, at the same time exclaiming indignantly: "Tak' that, ye young jacksnapes! Ye should be ashamed o' yourself for mimicking the auld gentleman's infirmity. Ye tooth-less young scoundrel, ye'll may be lame yourself some day."

Proved True.
 A lawyer whose office was on one of the upper floors of a tall building was about to enter the elevator one morning, but stepped back in order to let a lady who seemed to be in a hurry precede him. The "conductor," it appeared, had been waiting for just one more passenger to complete his load, and when the lady stepped inside he shut the door and the elevator shot upward. "Politeness," muttered the lawyer, "is not always its own reward." A few minutes later, however, ascending by another "lift," he passed that load of passengers stuck half-way between floors—where they remained half an hour—by some accident to the machinery. "I take it back," he muttered, in the same tone as before. "Politeness is its own reward!"

WHAT MAN DOES NOT LOVE BEAUTY?

Mrs. Pinkham Counsels Young Wives to Keep Their Attractiveness.
 A Letter From a Young Wife.

Seven-eighths of the men in this world marry a woman because she is beautiful in their eyes.
 What a disappointment then to see the fair young wife's beauty fading away before a year passes over her head!
 I feel as if I would like to say to every young woman whose about to be married—"Strengthen yourself in advance, so that you will not break down under the new strain on your powers." Keep your beauty, it is a precious possession! Your husband loves your beauty, he is proud to be seen in public with you; try to keep it for his sake, and your own.

The pale cheeks, the dark shadows under the eyes, the general drooping of the young wife's form, what do they mean? They mean that her nerves are failing, that her strength is going and that something must be done to help her through the coming trials of maternity.
 Build her up at once by a course of some tonic with specific powers. Such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You can get it at any druggist.
 Following we publish by request a letter from a young wife—of her own author she addresses it to her "suffering sisters," and while from modesty she asks to withhold her name, she gives her initials and street number in Chambersburg, Pa., so she can easily be found personally or by letter:

To my Suffering Sisters:—Let me write this for your benefit, telling you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I am but nineteen and suffered with painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, dizziness, burning sensation back of ears and on top of my head, nervousness, pain and soreness of muscles, bearing-down pains, could not sleep well, was unable to stand without pain, and oh! how I longed to be well!
 One day I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham telling her all, knowing I could do so in perfect confidence.
 She wrote me a lovely letter in reply, telling me exactly what to do.
 After taking nine bottles of the Compound, one box of Liver pills, and using one-half package of Sanative wash, I can say I am cured. I am so happy, and owe my happiness to none other than Mrs. Pinkham.

Why will women suffer when help is near? Let me, as one who has had some experience, urge all suffering women, especially young wives, to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice.—Mrs. R. S. R., 113 E. Catherine St., Chambersburg, Pa.
