IMPRESSIVE SERVICE

WAS HELD IN THE VILLAGE HALL, MONDAY, MAY 30,

To Honor the Memory of Our Fallen Heroes.

Monday was an ideal day for Decoration Day, as far as weather was concerned—an exception to the general rule—and preparations which had been in progress during the past month for the due observance of the occasion, culminated in a grand service at village hall.

Eddy Post, G. A. R., and the fire department formed into line at the park at 9 o'clock and marched to the hall which had been tastefully decorated with flags, bunting, flowers, etc. Everyone was presented with a button-hole bouquet which had been thoughtfully arranged for by the ladies of the W. R. C. and W. C. T. U.

The services consisted of music, recitations, and addresses by Hon. George A. Starkweather and Rev. I. J. Bicknell, of the Baptist church.

The large number present were evidently pleased with the service as the strictest attention prevailed throughout. The discourses were ably handled and showed careful preparation. The existing condition of things in our land added much to the enthusiasm and interest of the meeting.

From the hall the members of Eddy Post and the fire department proceeded to the cemeteries and decorated the graves of deceased soldiers.

The fire department took advantage of the opportunity to strew with flowers the graves of their two deceased members, F. D. Holloway and Harry Markham.

The ceremonies from beginning to end were simple, entertaining and instructive, and nothing occurred to mar the solemnity of the occasion.

Notes From the School Room.

Two weeks more of school during this year.

There are two members of the graduating class this year—Norman C. Miller and Willard Pooler.

Rev. J. B. Oliver will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon to the members of the class on Sunday evening, June 12, at the M. E. church. The public are cordially invited to attend this service.

The graduating exercises will be held at the village hall on Friday evening, June 17. On account of the smallness of the class, it has been deemed advisable to have a speaker for the evening. Prin. Chas. H. Horn, of the Traverse City High School, has been secured. Mr. Horn is a graduate of Olivet College and is a speaker of ability and experience.

We are to depart from the usual custom in regard to music for commencement exercises. Instead of foreign talent we are to utilize home ability. Miss Dumlum is drilling choruses composed of pupils of the high school and upper grades. Selections will be furnished by the quartettes. This music will show some results of instruction in music in our schools during the past two years.

MICHIGAN NEWS SUMMARY.

Doings of the Week Recorded in a Brief Style.

CONCISE AND INTERESTING.

The 24th Convention of the W. C. T. U.—
Marshal at Marcellus Kills a Burglar —Four Children Perish in a Fire at Iron Mountain.

Michigan W. C. T. U.

The 24th annual convention of the Michigan Woman's Christian Temperance Union was opened at Saginaw by President Mrs. A. Benjamin. All officers were present and the 12 districts fully represented. An elaborate four days' program was carried out. It was voted to give 100 hymn books to the 33d Michigan volunteers, by request of Chaplain C. H. Sage.

Secretary Mrs. C. H. Johnson, of Flint, read a list of 70 names of deceased members who passed away during the year, including Mrs. Laura Haviland, of Grand Rapids. A memorial exercise was held in honor of the late national president, Frances E. Willard.

The sessions were largely attended, and many interesting papers were read and five-minute talks given. Forty-three new unions were instituted during the year, and the total membership is now over 7,000. Mrs. Voorhies, the treasurer, reported that 303 unions had paid dues during the year amounting to $1,634.52, and the treasury has a balance of over $1,000.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the re-election of the old officers as follows: President, Mrs. A. S. Benjamin; vice-president-at-large, Mrs. C. C. Faxon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Julia R. Parish; recording secretary, Mrs. C. H. Johnson; treasurer, Mrs. Jennie Voorhies. The vice-presidents were re-elected also.

Michigan's Soldier Boys.

When the last company had been mustered at Camp Eaton it was found that Michigan had furnished 4,062 men to help Uncle Sam fight Spain. This is 42 men short of the full quota asked for and was caused by rejections by the surgeons at the last hour of muster, or by the throwing out of minors not properly authorized by legal papers in due form to enlist. Capt. Irvine, the mustering officer, rejected one man on the final muster of the 34th because he had left at home a family of eleven children.

Dr. C. B. Nanerode, formerly a U. of M. professor now major-surgeon of the 33d Michigan Volunteers have been presented with a fine horse by ex-Régent L. L. Barbour, of Detroit, and the students of the medical department presented him with an equipment.

The kind of soldiers that Michigan is sending to the front is shown by the fact that Roy Alberts, a private in Co. C, 34th regiment (Muskegon graduates from the military academy at Orchard Lake as senior captain.

Corporal W. B. Carr, Co. G, 33d Michigan, of Owosso, was married to Alice Whiting, of Flint. They were to have been married in September, but she insisted on their marriage before his departure.

Michigan's quota under President McKinley's second call for volunteers will be about 2,623 men.

Col. McGarrin, 32d Mich., now Brig.-Gen.

Col. McGarrin, of the 32d Michigan regiment, at Tampa, is receiving congratulations of the entire regiment over his appointment as brigadier-general of the Second brigade of the First division of the Seventh army corps. Maj.-Gen. Fitzhugh Lee is in command of the Seventh army corps. The appointment was made by Gen. Shafter, and was a complete surprise to the colonel. As soon as the appointment was made known the colonel's quarters were soon crowded with officers, who expressed their congratulations. Later the bands serenaded the colonel and a general happy time was had.

Four Children Burned to Death.

The residence of A. Richter, at Iron Mountain, was destroyed by fire. A boy aged 9 and a girl aged 11 were burned to a crisp, while two others, aged 6 and 4, were so badly burned that they cannot live. It is not known how the fire originated. The house was a mass of flames when discovered. Richter and wife and nine children were sleeping on the second floor. Richter and wife escaped by jumping through a window, the former having his arm so badly cut by glass that he came near bleeding to death, and he may yet lose the arm. Five of the children escaped almost uninjured.

Two Young Men Drowned.

While rowing about Muskegon river at Grand Rapids, two well known young men drowned in sight of those powerless to help by reason of rushing waters at the foot of the dam. Lancelet Graham, aged 20, and Edward Falardeau, 21, found their frail boat drawn into the whirlpool, and boat and men were sucked down almost instantly. Falardeau's brother is captain of the Big Rapids company, 34th regiment, Island Lake.

The U. of M. will graduate over 700 students this year—200 more than last year.

Michigan has had a total of $831,478.23 refunded by the general government for war expenses incurred in 1861-62.

Geo. B. Knight, a C. & N. M. freight conductor, caught his foot in a switch at Ann Arbor, and was killed by the train. He died in 10 minutes.

Thomas Herra, of Calumet, was drowned in Bear Lake, while on a fishing trip. His boat was capsized and he attempted to swim to shore.

Burglar Killed at Marcellus.

About 2 a. m. burglars were discovered in Moon & Russell's hardware store at Marcellus by Night Watchman O. J. Gardner. Gardner called Marshal Scott and they started for the rear of the store. In the alley the officers encountered a man who ordered them to throw up their hands. Instead of obeying Scott quickly fired his revolver and the burglar fell to the ground. The bullet struck him in the chest and he was instantly killed. Another man on the inside of the store jumped through the window, carrying sash and all with him, and made his escape.

The dead burglar was unknown. A man supposed to be his pal was arrested at Cassopolis. He gave his name as Elmer Hogan, and was taken to Marcellus and identified the man killed by Marshal Scott as Eddie Helmer, aged 18, whose mother resides at Flint, and is reported to be wealthy.

THE WAR SITUATION.

Camp Thomas, at Chickamauga, is now well supplied with water by pipe lines.

During a sham battle at Chickamauga Lieut. Batty, 16th Pennsylvania, received a blank shot directly in the face, destroying his sight.

The Spanish government is alleged to have offered complete independence to the Cubans if they will turn against the United States and aid her in thrashing the Americans.

Washington authorities are of the opinion that Spain is about to abandon all effort to conduct a campaign in Cuban and West Indian waters, but will concentrate all her energies to retaining the Philippines.

It is again asserted that the United States is negotiating for the purchase of the islands of St. Thomas, Santa Cruz and St. John, Denmark's possessions in the West Indies, with a good prospect of securing them. They would be invaluable to the U. S. at the present time.

The North German Lloyd steamship Havel (German) has been sold to the Spanish and has gone to Barcelona. The Havel is a steel vessel, built in 1890, gross tonnage 6,785. She has developed a speed of 18 knots in crossing the Atlantic between New York and Southampton.

Senator Capon, vice-president of the Cuban republic, arrived on the north side of Jamaica in an open boat en route to Washington. Vice-President Capon denied indignantly the story that Gomez opposes the landing of American troops, and asserts that the Cubans are eagerly awaiting their arrival and are preparing to co-operate. Relative to an American protectorate, he says the Cubans would welcome such, though the subject has not yet been diplomatically discussed.

Gov. Bradley, of Kentucky, will credit a regiment of colored troops under the second call for volunteers.

INVASION OF CUBA BEGUN.

Gen. Miles Orders Troops to Embark on Transports at Once.

TO MOVE ON SANTIAGO FIRST.

An Irresistible Force to be Thrown Into Cuba by Uncle Sam—Four Separate Expeditions—Insurgents Have Been Well Supplied With Arms, Etc.

Washington: The invasion of Cuba has begun. The President ordered at once Commodore Schley's cable message came to the navy department, and Gen. Miles at once gave the word to Gen. Shafter at Tampa that at last would set the army in motion. It is absolutely known that within 24 hours the loading of the numerous transports at Tampa was begun. About 25 of these ships, the biggest and fastest that could be obtained suitable for the purpose, had been gathered ready to receive the troops. They will accommodate about 30,000 men for a short voyage like that from the gulf ports to Cuba. How many troops started, where they took ship, where they are bound, are questions which the directing spirits of the campaign refuse positively to answer. They have no desire that the Spanish should have opportunity afforded them to gather forces to attack our soldiers as they land. Therefore nothing of the details of this first movement can be learned. It is known that Admiral Sampson's flagship New York and several other war vessels were at Key West ready to convoy the expedition to Cuba to ensure the transports against attack at the hands of some stray Spanish cruiser or gunboat.

It is probable that there will be no less than four separate military expeditions, and that these will be landed at four different points.

Arrangements have been made to utilize the services of the insurgents to the largest possible extent. The government already has sent expeditions to a large number of points on the island and landed arms for the insurgents. Most of the parties succeeded perfectly in their object and it is said at the war department that a sufficient number of the insurgents have been armed to constitute a very effective support for the troops as they land.

The opinion has gained ground that the first action will be in the neighborhood of Santiago. The President believes that the dispatch of 10,000 to 15,000 soldiers to land at and take Santiago would be an effective blow at Spain.

75,000 MORE VOLUNTEERS.

The President's Second Call Raises the Army to Over 250,000 Men.

The President has issued a proclamation calling for 75,000 more volunteers. This will make the total army strength, regular and volunteers, 280,000. The proclamation is as follows:

Whereas, An act of congress was approved on the 25th day of April, 1898, entitled "An act declaring that war exists between the United States of America and the kingdom of Spain," and Whereas, By an act of congress entitled "An act to provide for temporarily increasing the military establishment of the United States in the time of war, and for other purposes," approved April 22, 1898, the President is authorized in order to raise a volunteer army, to issue his proclamation calling for volunteers to serve in the army of the United States.

Now, therefore, I, William McKinley, President of the United States, by virtue of the power vested in me by the constitution, and the laws and deeming sufficient occasion to exist, have thought fit to call forth and hereby do call forth, volunteers to the aggregate number of 75,000 in addition to the volunteers called forth by my proclamation of the 23d day of April in the present year; the same to be apportioned, as far as practicable, among the several states and territories and the District of Columbia, according to population, and to serve for two years unless sooner discharged. The proportion of each state and the details of enlistment and organization will be made known through the war department.

Secretary Alger said the additional volunteers called for will not be recruited from the National Guard, as were the first 125,000, but that the enlistments will be open. The regulations referred to in the proclamation under which the enlistments will be conducted have not yet been prepared.

Oregon Arrives and Sails Again.

Secretary Long received an official dispatch announcing the arrival of the battleship Oregon in Jupiter Inlet, Fla. Lieut. Davis, of the Oregon, came ashore and announced that the Marietta and Buffalo were lying out with the Oregon. "Our race," said Lieut. Davis, "was a most exciting one, and especially after we left Bahia, for we then knew of the possibility of interception. Capt. Clark, however, kept the little fleet in constant readiness, and had we run into the Spanish fleet we should have been heard from. As it is, we are all happy that our race from San Francisco is now ended, and that we shall have a chance to take part with the fleets now looking for the Spaniards."

Later—the U. S. battleship Oregon left Jupiter, Fla., and arrived at Key West to await orders.

A rumor was current in Liverpool that France is trying to buy the Canary islands of Spain for $30,000,000.

Maj.-Gen. Merritt has received instructions from the President that when he inaugurates his military governorship at Manila he is to open the ports of the islands to American merchants. All goods shipped to the Philippines will be admitted free of duty. This policy will also be followed with reference to Cuba and Porto Rico.

THE INVASION OF CUBA.

No Necessity for Longer Delay and the Troops Will Move Soon.

President McKinley has demonstrated that it is the policy of the United States to have an army of about 300,000 men ready for business within a month. This army will consist of 60,000 regulars, 200,000 volunteers, 10,000 especially enlisted men who have suffered from contagious disease likely to be encountered in the tropics, and who are therefore considered impervious to such complaints, 3,500 "rough riders" cavalrymen, and about 3,000 more special men forming an engineer corps and a signal corps of the volunteers.

According to the best advices the President's intention is to have 40,000 or 50,000 of these troops sent to the Philippines for the purpose of occupying those islands completely. These men will be sent from San Francisco just as rapidly as they can be equipped for the journey and embarked on transports. About 100,000 will be transported to Cuba just as soon as Maj.-Gen. Miles can complete his arrangements. About 20,000 more are destined for Porto Rico, which island it is the intention of the United States to capture and hold. The President favors having Gen. Miles lead the way to Cuba with as near 70,000 men as can be prepared for service within two weeks, and Gen. Brooke to command the expedition to Porto Rico. The Cuban invaders will go first and will comprise two-thirds of the regular troops and as many of the volunteers as can be prepared. The Porto Rico expedition will, as far as possible, embrace the volunteers from the eastern states.

NOTES ON THE WAR SITUATION

Madrid newspapers urge the cutting of American cable connections across the Atlantic if the Cuban cables are severed.

Maj. Gen. Wheeler, of Alabama, has requested the President to appoint Wm. Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, to a high position on his staff.

Port Au Prince, Hayti: It is reported here that a Spanish fleet of 11 vessels passed the Mole St. Nicholas, going northward through the Windward Passage.

Blanco is having large quantities of sweet potatoes, yams and other vegetables planted in the immediate vicinity of Havana to furnish food for the besieged city.

Since the bombardment of San Juan, Porto Rico, the Spanish have planted new torpedo mines in the exact spots occupied by the U. S. vessels during the bombardment.

The Spanish government has ordered all the Spanish steamers from 1,000 tons up, capable of steaming a minimum of 12 knots, to be impressed as auxiliary cruisers.

Col. Grigsby's battalion 186 cowboys from the northwest, dressed in full cowboy outfit, created a sensation in Chicago where they stopped one day on their way to the front.

Maj. G. Shiba of the Japanese army, is at Chickamauga to study American tactics and conditions of army life in this country, as a representative of the mikado. Maj. Shiba reported to Maj.-Gen. Brooke and was made an honorary member of his staff.

The postoffice department requests all persons addressing mail to officers or privates in military camps to plainly write upon the letter or parcel the company, regiment and state, for example, "John Doe, Co. D, 16th Illinois Infantry, Falls Church, Va."

The battery offered to the U. S. government by John Jacob Astor has been accepted. It will be a mountain battery. The gun carriages and guns are detachable and are packed on the backs of mules for transportation. The battery will be made up of six Hotchkiss rapid-fire guns.

It is asserted on the best authority that both cable lines between Kingston, Jamaica, and Santiago de Cuba are working and also that the line between Kingston and San Juan de Porto Rico continues in operation, in spite of the endeavors of the American fleet to cut the cables.

In anticipation of the early occupation of the Philippine islands by the military and navy forces of the United States the treasury department has already begun the formulation of regulations and a scheme of customs tariffs which will be collected by the military authorities and turned into the treasury of the United States as a military contribution.

Grave foreign complications may grow out of the action of the Hawaiian government in allowing the United States to make Honolulu a base of supplies and naval operations in the Pacific France and Germany, through their consular representatives in Honolulu, have taken action which is construed to indicate their displeasure at the course of Hawaii.

A courier from Brig.-Gen. Rafael de Cardenas, commander of the insurgent forces in Havana province, has arrived at Key West. The insurgent forces in that province now number 3,000, better mounted and armed than ever before. They move almost up to the outskirts of the city. The insurgents are pinched for food, but will wait eagerly for the order to co-operate with the U. S. army.

Panama: Passengers arriving here on an Italian steamer from Cartagena report that they saw seven warships, supposed to belong to the Spanish fleet. The ships were apparently heading for Port Limon, Costa Rica. A correspondent at Port Limon cables that eight ships were sighted about ten miles from the port. Owing to a heavy fog it was impossible to distinguish the flags of the fleet, but they were warships. The eight vessels were going in a northerly direction. The Senate passed the bill allowing Secretary of War Alger a second assistant secretary.

CERVERA CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

Cornered by American War Ships in Santiago Harbor.

MUST SURRENDER OR STARVE

Authorities Undecided Whether to Try to Reduce the Fortifications and Enter the Harbor or to Keep Cervera Bottled up—He's Doomed, Anyway.

Authentic dispatches received at Washington state that the Spanish fleet under Admiral Cervera is in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba and the U. S. fleets under Admiral Sampson and Commodore Schley are maneuvering outside. The great naval battle of the war may take place in or near the harbor of Santiago. Now that Sampson and Schley have met and found Cervera in Santiago the question is how to get at him. To run the guns of the Morro (round) castle and other strong fortifications and the torpedo defenses will be difficult. Only one ship can pass in at a time. The dangers of such exposure are tremendous. An attack on the fortifications by bombardment will probably be the first movement. Even with the mines destroyed the Spanish men-of-war can operate with deadly effect in guarding the pass to their haven. No better position could have been chosen by the Spanish admiral. To overcome him a procession of the American ships will have to fire broadside after broadside through and beyond the land-locked pass. A blockade might starve Cervera out and make him issue from the bay to fight in desperation, but the place is believed to be well stocked with food.

Havana is well invested by Commodore Watson's squadron of 14 vessels. At Washington opinions differ as to what should be done. There is a sentiment in the navy in favor of keeping the Spanish fleet pocketed in Santiago harbor. There is a sentiment equally strong in favor of wiping out the Santiago batteries and the Cervera fleet by a combined land and naval attack. Naval officers all agree on one point, that the Spanish position is strong and the problem difficult. It is confidently expected that should the Spanish attempt to force a passage to sea the news of the total destruction of their fleet may be expected at any time.

It is authoritatively stated that the situation of the Santiago harbor is such that our gunboats, which are available for the purpose, could successfully prevent the escape of the Spaniards, thus relieving a considerable part of both Sampson's and Schley's fleets for operations elsewhere. Members of the administration regard the present situation as most favorable for our cause and do not doubt that in a very short time the Spanish fleet will be utterly destroyed and active operations begun against Havana by both our military and naval forces.

The published report that another and more formidable fleet is on route from Cadiz to the relief of the imprisoned squadron is not credited by members of the administration, but should this prove to be the fact, the move would be welcomed by our naval authorities, as it would certainly result, it is said, in the destruction of the two fleets instead of one.

We Will Have to Annex Hawaii, Now.

The sending of the invading expeditions to the Philippines will affect the Hawaiian question vitally. Like the cruiser Charleston, the transports which carry troops must stop at Hawaii to replenish their coal bunkers. If the Hawaiians refuse to take this coal without the pretext that we are using it to make our way to our nearest home port, as is required by international law in such cases, they will stand convicted of a gross breach of neutrality that, in the eyes of the law of nations, allies them with the United States in hostility to Spain. The taking of coal by the American ships at Hawaii to make an extensive campaign against the Spanish possessions will undoubtedly result in compelling the United States either to assume a protectorate over the islands or to annex them.

Cruiser Columbia Badly Injured.

During a thick fog in New York harbor the new U. S. cruiser Columbia was run into by the British steamer Foscolia bound for Bordeaux, grain laden. The Foscolia struck the Columbia on the starboard quarter just forward of the after barrette, cutting clean into the hull, making a hole 10 feet across filling a compartment with water. The Foscolia sank almost immediately but the Columbia succeeded in rescuing all of her crew and landed them. The Columbia was at once sent to the Brooklyn navy yard to be docked for repairs.

Schley Has Seen 'Em.

There can no longer be any doubt that Admiral Cervera's Spanish fleet is bottled up in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba. Commodore Schley by clever maneuvering drew at least four of the Spanish vessels to the mouth of the harbor where they could be plainly recognized. Schley at once notified the navy department to that effect.

Maj.-Gen. Shafter, in command of the troops about Tampa, says that 75,000 troops, with artillery, would certainly be all that would be needed for the invasion of Cuba. There are encamped about Tampa one brigade of light artillery, five regiments of cavalry, 15 regiments of infantry, and three companies of engineers. Besides these there are over 20,000 volunteers from various states in Gen. Shafter's district. Heavy batteries and huge siege guns will follow the troops to Cuba as soon as a base of supplies is established.

UNCLE SAM WILL KEEP THEM.

Martial Law to be Declared in the Philippines by Maj.-Gen. Merritt.

Maj.-Gen. Merritt, who is to go to the Philippine islands as military governor, is expected to govern them under martial law until congress decides what shall finally be done with them. There is now little doubt that they will be permanently held by the United States. In view of this belief some consideration is already being given to the problem of devising a civil government for the islands when the war is ended. The proposition that seems to meet most favor is to have the government of the islands administered by a board of three commissioners, to be composed of two civilians and one officer of the U. S. army, as in the District of Columbia. When the number of Americans in the islands increases sufficiently a very limited form of popular government would be introduced, to be expanded in the future. Tariff taxes are to be collected by military authority, and are to be turned into the treasury of the United States.

Upon the proclamation of martial law by Maj.-Gen. Merritt the civil government of Spanish authorities will be completely superseded and Gov. Augusti will become virtually a prisoner of war. Under the joint supervision of Gen. Merritt and Admiral Dewey the captured Spanish fortifications will be placed in the best defensive condition and should the Cadiz fleet attempt to retake the islands it will meet with a hot reception.

Official advices received from Admiral Dewey, while confirming the belief that his control of Manila harbor is as firm as ever, indicate that the necessity for reinforcing him with a powerful military force is daily increasing. Gen. Merritt's demand for forces has been acceded to, and has resulted in securing the President's promise that 25,000 additional soldiers would be cheerfully furnished if they were required.

War Penchings.

War news is just now exasperatingly contingent in its importance upon "ifs." If Commodore Schley has that Spanish fleet bottled up in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba, as the administration confidently believes that he has, the invasion of Cuba can be proceeded with as it has been definitely decided and officially announced that the invasion is not to be postponed a minute longer than is considered absolutely necessary to insure the safety from capture by Spanish warships of the transports that will carry our soldiers. The transports to carry 25,000 or 30,000 men are ready and waiting, and that many men thoroughly equipped for service are at the points of embarkation ready to start. But, if the Spanish fleet is not bottled up, and there are doubters in high circles, the country is in for another period of vexatious uncertainty and guessing.

It is contended by Gen. Miles and others that nothing will be gained by invading Cuba until we can send at least 100,000 men, because it will be useless to make an attack upon Havana with a land force much smaller than that. Although nothing official has been or will be given out on this subject, there is excellent authority for saying that it will require at least three or four more weeks to equip enough of the volunteers to make up that number. Although extra efforts were put forth to make a good showing at Camp Alger when the President went to review the volunteers there, the lack of equipment was made painfully apparent by the fact that only two-thirds of the 20,000 men in camp could take part in the parade, and the equipment of many that were in line is utterly worthless for fighting purposes. The same condition exists at all the mobilizing points. The men are ready and anxious to fight, but they are not yet properly prepared to do so. But the work of preparing them is not being allowed to lag.

That Americans are tolerant is well known. It is also well known that the sentiment of the country was overwhelmingly in favor of the annexation of Hawaii, even before it had been declared by the administration to be a military necessity. Should the pressure of European governments compel Hawaii to declare neutrality and refuse to allow ships bound to and from the Philippine Islands to coal at Honolulu, while the question of annexing Hawaii, is hung up in Congress by a combination of the power of the sugar trust lobby, personal spite, and political spleen, not even the habitual tolerance of Americans will prevent the political punishment of those responsible. Should no trouble arise on account of the minority hold up in Congress that is now on, the parts played by individuals in the hold-up will soon be forgotten by the people, notwithstanding the present use of such words as "traitors" and "treason." An amendment to the war revenue bill providing for annexation has been offered by Senator Lodge. It will be pushed or not according to what Speaker Reed does. If he allows the House to vote on the annexation resolution—he has partly promised to do so—the amendment will be withdrawn; if not, it will be pushed to a vote, regardless of the delay it may cause in disposing of the war revenue bill. President McKinley has intimated very plainly that unless Congress acts at once he intends to seize Hawaii as a war measure. There are precedents for such action.

Senator Teller always has positive opinions, and they are usually interesting. Of the war he said in a short speech: "Those who ought to know estimate that the present war will cost $300,000,000 if it be prosecuted one year. It ought not to last a year; it will not last a year. It is not a war of conquest, but a war of humanity. However, since we have taken the Philippines we ought to hold them until some decision can be reached as to their disposition. We ought to take every foot of Spanish soil, outside of Spain itself, whether it be in this hemisphere or in the other. We ought, I believe, to drive the Spanish flag from the waters of both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans."

Senator Gorman's statement in a speech on the war revenue bill, that unless that bill authorizes an issue of bonds, the President will issue bonds under the same law that President Cleveland did—the resumption of 1876—is regarded as one of the most significant that has been made during the Senate debate on that bill. Although Senator Gorman is a democrat, he has enjoyed the confidence of Presdent McKinley and has been called on for advice constantly since the war troubles began; consequently his statement is regarded as an official notification that the administration intended to issue bonds to raise the money needed to carry on the war, whenever, in its judgment, it might become necessary, regardless of the action of the Senate on the war revenue bill. It is still very positively asserted that a majority of the Senate will vote for bonds, and it is hoped that the final vote will be reached this week, but anti-annexation Senators say it will never be reached unless the Lodge annexation amendment is defeated or withdrawn. That is an extreme view, but the matter has unquestionably been complicated by the introduction of the annexation question.

A Plucky Advertiser.
Tiedtke Bros., Toledo grocers, recently inserted an advertisement in the Blade in which eggs were quoted at 13 1/2 cents a dozen. In making up the form the figure 1 dropped out and the price appeared throughout the edition as 3 1/2 cents. A great rush ensued at the store, and after a hasty conference, the grocers decided to stand by the printed price and hold the Blade responsible. Twenty-seven hundred dozen were sold throughout the day, and suit brought against the Blade for $270. A jury trial awarded the grocers $5 damages.

The fact that the grocers won the suit, although the damages were placed very low, would indicate a disposition to construe the law and the facts presented as holding printers responsible for typographical errors. In the absence of specific knowledge of the position taken by the defense, we presume it was pleaded that the price printed was so ridiculously low that a reasonable person could easily see that it was an error. Yet we cannot quite comprehend how that could relieve the grocers, who felt their reputation at stake when the demand was made upon them to fulfill their apparent agreement. They could scarcely be expected to repudiate the price and take the chance of losing their trade and recovering damages on that score. And yet, no power on earth can be invoked to prevent such vexatious errors.—Carlton Cavest.

An American at Court.

Formerly such divinity hedged kings—and queens—that treason was not alone in fearing to peep at them. Americans, in citizen's dress, also were kept at a distance. In the North American Review Sir William Russell, LL.D., narrates an anecdote in this connection in which Secretary Seward had part. Mr. Seward, who had been received with great respect in Russia, came to England, and naturally desired to go to court. He was to be presented at the levee by the United States minister as a senator of the United States. He drove off at the appointed time to the palace, but was stopped in the corridor by a gentleman in uniform, who said he could not pass because he was not "properly dressed." Mr. Seward was in full evening dress, black frock coat, waistcoat and trousers and white cravat, but it would not do. The gentleman explained that he must have knee-breeches, shoes and stockings—that was absolutely necessary. An idea struck Mr. Seward. There was a nice old man about his size, the porter of the hotel he was staying at, who sat in a box in the hall, and off he drove. Immense success! The porter had a beautiful new pair of knee-breeches and black silk stockings and low shoes. A few dollars for the loan was all that was needed. Mr. Seward was speedily equipped, drove back to the palace, where he was admitted and finally had the pleasure of making his bow in the hotel porter's clothes to her majesty. Now all that is changed, and American citizens attend European courts in plain evening dress.

AN INTERESTING QUESTION

Truthfully Explained by

The Plymouth Star-Cash-Laundry.

Our Laundry is not the biggest in the world, but we really believe it is equal to the best. Size of the Laundry and size of the city has nothing to do with the style of the work. The things that make your goods look nice is good material and a good laundryman. Every piece of goods that comes into our Laundry is honestly done up as you want it. That you can depend upon absolutely. Our proposition is to do your Laundry work better than nine laundrymen out of ten. There is no reason why we should not have a trial bundle from every person who likes to wear well done up Laundry and who likes to have it done up at home, for it equals that which is being sent away.

Last month we sent out subscription notices aggregating close to $500. Some have very kindly responded, for which we are thankful. We wish to extend to our patrons all the courtesy possible in conducting this business successfully, and we believe you wish us to succeed. In order to do this we must have the subscription money that is due us. We trust that those who are in arrears for their paper, and especially those who are from two to four years behind, will promptly respond to this request and make arrangement for the continuance of their paper.

No amusement place in Detroit has stood the test like Wonderland. Each week new and attractive features make up the program. Not only does the manager furnish up-to-date amusement, but great care is taken for the comfort of patrons. Excursionists are requested to bring their baskets and lunch in the cool parlors. Room has been provided for 250 bikes, which are cared for free. The phonograph parlors, the haunted swing, the crystal maze, Eden museum and a number of other departments are provided with pleasant scenes and entertainment. Not the least by any means is the great menagerie, to which 40 monkeys has just been added. 10 cents admits to all. Do not miss it when in Detroit.

The show which was given Monday evening by the Oden Stevens Co., for the benefit of the Plymouth fire department did not fulfill the expectations of the large crowd that patronized it. The recitation by Mark Dow was a pleasing number but the balance of the entertainment, according to the opinion of a large number who attended, was not up to the standard. The fire department netted a snug sum. If the efforts of the company to give us a good show had been as great as the efforts of Chief Hunter in getting out a large crowd, there would have been satisfaction all around.

Newburg.

Mrs. Philport, who left here nine years ago, has returned and will make this her future home. Mrs. Philport has been unfortunate in losing both husband and children, and is now left alone.

"I understand that you be ther boss o' this yere ranch," remarked Catamount Zack as he entered the private office of the president of the Central Electric Railroad Company. "And I have been delegated by ther citizens o' ther flourishing city o' Newburg ter interview yer in regards ter this yere railroad erbout to be projected through Wayne county.

It was announced in Newburg yesterday that this yere corporation hev decided to run its lines through ther miserable hamlet uv Starkville (which air about thirty minutes from our own flourishing city) on ther grounds that the population uv Starkville air about 103, and that of Newburg only 158. Now ther citizens o' Newburg don't perpose ter let a measly 9 head o' population stand between them and ther railroad.

An indignation meetin war convened immediate and it war voted ter rekwest this yere corporation fur a stay of execution so ter speak, ontill next Saturday night, an then let ther railroad go where thars ther largest population.

"It war also voted to take immediate steps fur increasin ther population o' Newburg and especially ter discouragin ther uv Starkville, in consequence, every married man in Newburg hev sot out ter attend ther Methodist church sociable at Starkville this evenin, an when ther boys git down ter ther discouragin business thar'll be ther purest ruction ever witnessed in Wayne county. Of course thar'll be losses on both sides but we kalkulate ther ther not results 'll be in favor o' Newburg.

"Meanwhile, every unmarried bachelor in town hev been given three days ter rustle round ther kuntry an git hisself hitched, returnin by Saturday night shore. Your humble servant hev already quite a large family o' kids, but no woman, but he hev also made hisself agreeable to a widder with nine children, hev popped ther question, allowed ther widder ter sleep on it and expects ter get spliced tomorrer mornin' at jest haf past seven, makin an increase o' two an seven-tenths per cent in ther population o' Newburg.

Mike Noreese air already hitched ter a divorcee with six, and I hear ther Gopher Joy air striven ter rope an old maid with four young sisters, one mother and three grandparents, with ther odds twelve ter one on Gopher.

"Now Guvener ef you'll hold of ther railroad er rekwested, me an sixty-four other able bodied bachelors 'll guarantee ther by Saturday night ther beautiful and flourishing city o' Newburg 'll be on ther broad road ter ther county seat, hevlin population ter burn, so ter speak, while ther depopulated hamlet uv Starkville, not bein able ter legalize polygamy by a city ordinance, will be clean discouraged, an ready ter wipe itself off the map.

IMPORTANT EVENTS FROM OUR EXCHANGE CONDENSED AND RECORDED HERE.

Kline & Co.'s north show window has been quite an attraction this week. It contains a cat with five small foxes, which the cat has brought up since they were a day old. The mother fox was killed at that time, and the young foxes were dug from their nest and given to the cat, which had just a short time before given birth to a family of kittens, but which had been taken from her and drowned. She has taken care of the foxes, handled them as carefully as though they were her own kittens. The curious little family is owned by James Criter, of Mooserville, and is about five weeks old.—Hillsdale Leader.

A new stamping machine has just been put into the Ann Arbor postoffice, to take the place of the hand stamping of letters which has hitherto been in vogue here. The government pays a rental of $175 a year for the machine, which is the only machine of the kind in the state of Michigan. It prints the postmark in one straight line instead of a circle as has hitherto been done by hand and secures much greater legibility. The motive power of the machine is electricity, and its speed is about 6,000 letters an hour. Postmaster Beakes secured the machine for the office several months ago but began to think that his term would expire before he would see it in operation. Mr. Landfear, of New York, the inventor of the machine, set it up in the office in person.—Ann Arbor Argus.

Starr Hallett had an experience, while fishing, last week, that few people would care to enjoy at this season of the year. He had just hooked a fine pickerel and was hauling the fish in, when the line became entangled in a snag at the bottom of the river. The prospect of losing that fish was galling to Starr, and as there was nothing else to do, he simply stripped off his clothes and dove into the chilly waters of the Raisin. It made the goose pimples start out in bold relief, but he got the pickerel, which weighed about 2 1/2 pounds. Thus bravery hath its own reward.—Blissfield Advance.

For years a certain well known professor here was in the habit of turning quickly into a side street with his horse, which was afraid of electric cars, to avoid a runaway. Recently he acquired a wheel, and while spinning along the railroad track he heard an electric car coming from behind. He proceeded to scorch to the nearest crossing, when he turned off, dismounted and wiped his face, in answer to a question he replied: "My horse is terribly afraid of street cars and I just reached this crossing in time to turn off and avoid a runaway."—Washtenaw Times.

The Strub Brewing Co., are endeavoring to purchase the Varney House at Wayne. $6,000 dollars is the price at which it is held.

It is reported that a mild mannered Sunday school teacher at Bad Axe was inexpressibly shocked one Sunday lately, when in response to her question, "What is the first commandment?" a youngster promptly replied "Remember the Maine."

"An Italian woman named Granata is said to have given birth to 63 children, all of whom are living. Of this extraordinary family six boys were born at one birth, five daughters at another, while the rest came in groups of four, three and two at a time. The mother of this prolific family was married when 28 years old, and she is now only in her 56th year. The largest family of which there is any record was that of Fedora Vassilef, a French woman, which was composed of 83 children. A family of 67 children was reported in Belgium in the last century, as was also that of Signora Frescobaldi, in France in the 15th century, with 52 children." A few like this in Plymouth and we would soon have a city.

The ball game Monday between the Northville-Plymouth and D. A. C. cigar teams, was a miserable exhibition of the national game. The whole secret to such playing can be summed up in two words—no practice. In the home team were good ball players, and there is no reason why practice should not be applied to put them in form, that is if they intend to make a club of it. At least ten of the Detroit runs were made on wild throws to bases. In two instances, with two men out each time, two flies were dropped that would have retired the side. The result was five runs more for the D. A. C's.

It is hoped, if the club is to be kept up, that the boys will get together and make some plans for practice. Northville and Plymouth combined can put a strong team in the field if properly handled.

The score:
D. A. C.—2 7 1 1 8 3 0 —20
N.—P.—2 1 1 1 0 1 1 —7
Czar Penney umpired the game, giving better satisfaction than has been expressed on the grounds in some time.

They had seen nothing of John Blantyre since his abrupt dismissal. The earl had been told that he had left Mere Cottage, but that he was living at Court Raven. That piece of intelligence did not trouble him; the unjust steward was part and parcel of the past—a past he was beginning to think of with regret. Nevertheless, John Blantyre lived only for his revenge.

Autumn came with the golden wheat, its ripe fruit, its gorgeous beauty of coloring. The spirit of improvement was at work at Ravensmere; already the obnoxious cottages had disappeared, and in their places clean, healthy, well-drafted dwelling-houses were springing up. Lady Caraven worked hard, allowing herself little rest, and the earl was filled with wonder at her systematic method.

They worked together. She made their duties so pleasant to him that he would not for the world have renounced them. Husband and wife became, as the earl said, good companions, good friends. They had many interests now in common—the improvement of the estate, the building of model cottages, the education of the young, the relief of the aged and distressed. With a thoughtful look in his blue eyes the earl would sometimes say to his wife: "I cannot imagine why I thought all

CHAPTER XXXVI.

It was almost autumn, and people were saying to each other smilingly that a summer seemed unwilling to go. The wheat was standing now in great golden sheaves, the fruit hung ripe upon the trees.

One morning a letter came to Ravensmere. It was from Lady Hamilton, to say that she was returning from Cowes, where she had been staying some time, and would be glad to pay her promised visit.

Lord Caraven's first sensation on reading the coquettish little note was not one of unmitigated pleasure. They had been spending a very happy week alone, the earl, the countess and Sir Raoul—a week that he had thoroughly enjoyed because the greater part of it had been spent in the open air with his wife and Sir Raoul. They had been watching the builders' progress, watching the improvements; and the earl was more pleased than he would have cared to say at seeing once more a smile on the faces around him. He did not feel quite sure at first that he cared for the coming interruption. He gave the letter to Lady Caraven.

"If she comes," he said, "it is pretty certain we must invite a party to meet her."

The young countess looked up. "We are a party," she told him—"we are three."

Lord Caraven laughed. "Three is a very small number, Hildred. What would Lady Hamilton say if she came here and found that we had not invited any one to meet her? Raoul and I would be exhausted by the amount of homage we should have to pay. Lady Hamilton is the very queen of coquettes."

"I do not like coquettes," said Lady Caraven, curtly.

"It would be wonderful if you did," laughed her husband. "Dark-eyed and dark-haired women like you, Hildred, are generally severe; golden hair and blue eyes take naturally to flirtation. But that is no settlement of our difficulty. There is but one course open to us—to write and say that we shall be delighted. You will write, of course?"

"If you wish it," said Hildred, quietly.

"Then we will draw up a list of people to invite while she is here. We must have some eligible men."

"What does she want eligible men for?" asked Hildred; and the two gentlemen laughed at the question.

"Is she a widow?" continued the young countess.

"One of the youngest, prettiest, wealthiest widows in England," said the earl.

Lady Caraven felt a vague dawning of jealous dislike.

"I am almost sorry that she is coming now," put in Sir Raoul; "we are so very happy—all our quietness will be broken up and destroyed."

In his heart Lord Caraven almost re-echoed the wish.

"Perhaps the Countess of Caraven had never undertaken a task more unpleasant to her than the writing of this letter, yet it had to be done with all the graceful courtesy imaginable. Then the earl made out a list of people whom he thought the brilliant young widow would like to meet.

"There," he said—"we have an eligible marquis, a court favorite, a millionaire, a philosopher, and a soldier. Surely between them her ladyship will receive homage enough."

His wife noted with infinite satisfaction that he had not mentioned himself. Evidently he had no idea of paying homage to her; but the words, "one of the youngest, prettiest widows in England," had made a disagreeable impression on her. She could not tell why, but she had an unpleasant foreboding that evil would come from the widow's visit, evil both bitter and sore.

"There is another thing, Hildred," said Lord Caraven—"Lady Hamilton must have amusement. You will have to lay aside your work for a time and attend to it. We must have a ball—a grand ball, not a mere dancing party—we must have dinner parties and this so tiresome before, or what gives me so much pleasure to do it now."

No one was more gratified than Sir Raoul. He crinkled in the sheet that his predictions were fulfilled.

"I always thought a good woman's influence beneficial," he said; "and now I am sure of it."

But he was not misled; he saw exactly how things were—that the earl had started with the conviction that his wife was an unformed school-girl, and that, though believing her now to be a very clever woman, he still retained much of his early impression. Lord Caraven had accepted the fact that he did not love her with a lover's love, and that their marriage was a fatal mistake into which his own folly had led him—and he had not changed his opinion; he absolutely never thought of love with reference to her. They were good friends, with one common interest—that was all.

But with Hildred it was not quite the same thing. She had once loved him; and now, as his better nature appeared, she began to care for him again. Not that she ever betrayed such a feeling to him. She was kind, affectionate, patient; she devoted herself to his service; but no word indicating a warmer feeling than friendship ever escaped her lips. She did not even own to herself or know that she was beginning to love him.

One day, after luncheon, when some visitors were staying with them, the conversation turned on a certain Lady Hamilton, who had just returned, a widow, from India.

"Lady Hamilton was one of your early loves, Ulrich, was she not?" said Sir Raoul, laughingly.

"I suppose so," replied the earl, carelessly. "I had a great many early loves, if one may believe all the stories told. Do you know what my opinion is?"

"No," answered Sir Raoul, "I do not."

"I do not believe that I have ever loved at all—that is, using the word 'love' in its best and highest sense."

"Then it is for want of appreciation," said Sir Raoul, curtly.

Neither of them knew that Hildred had overheard the few chance words, but they had pierced her heart as with a two-edged sword.

A kind of jealousy that she could not understand took possession of her. If, on looking at pictures or photographs, Lord Caraven praised one or thought is pretty, she would examine it in detail to find out if possible what he admired in it. If, in speaking of any lady friend or visitor, the earl expressed his admiration of her, a vague unrest would come over his wife; she would try to understand what attracted him. He had a frank, careless, easy way of expressing himself. Often when she heard him, her face would suddenly grow pale even to her lips. If he loved at all, he must love her.

Lord Caraven discerned nothing of this, but Sir Raoul was more deeply versed in human nature, and he saw that the young countess was beginning to love her husband with a passionate love. He did not know whether to be glad or to grieve, but he was sure she would never be returned. Yet he could not help himself.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

It was the evening of the day on which Lady Hamilton was expected. Several of the guests invited to meet her had already arrived, and the young Countess of Caraven anxiously expected her visitor. She had a strange kind of foreboding about her.

"I wonder," she said to Sir Raoul, "if some people do bring misfortune with them. I have an idea that Lady Hamilton will bring evil to me."

Sir Raoul laughed, and told her in his simple chivalrous fashion that a beautiful woman could bring only sunshine and happiness; but the young countess sighed.

"Helen of Troy did not bring much sunshine," she said, "and she was beautiful enough."

"But," objected Sir Raoul, "there is a difference; Lady Hamilton has not her fatal loveliness. Times have altered; no woman's face, I think, will ever cause another thirty years' war."

The young countess resolved upon being armed at all points. Her maid felt that at length her mistress was doing justice to herself. She was that evening very difficult to please—no dress was pretty enough; she chose one at length of purple velvet, long, graceful, and made after a picturesque fashion that Hildred particularly affected—cut square so as to show the beautiful neck and shoulders, with wide hanging sleeves, fastened with a diamond knot on the shoulder—a dress that was the triumph of good taste; no ribbon, no flowers, no ornaments nor trimmings marred its grand simplicity. She wore nothing but diamonds with it—a small tiara that crowned the queenly head, a necklace round the white throat, a small cross on the white breast, and a bracelet on one of her beautifully molded arms. Nothing could have been more magnificent, in better or simpler taste.

Sir Raoul looked delighted when he saw her. "Lady Hamilton may be very fair," he thought, "but she will not look like Hildred."

The earl did not notice either her face or her dress; he admired her skill, her genius, but he was certainly not in love with his young wife.

It was with some little curiosity that the young countess went to meet her guest. Lady Hamilton had been shown into a pretty little boudoir, where she awaited her hostess; and these two women who were so strangely to cross each other's lives looked almost eagerly at each other.

Lady Caraven saw before her a tall, graceful, lovely blonde, whose sunny eyes and golden hair were bright and beautiful, whose red lips smiling showed teeth like pearls. After returning in the most musical of voices the greetings of her hostess, she requested that she might be shown to her room.

She was in some measure just what Lady Caraven had expected to see. She appeared in the drawing-room two minutes before the announcement of dinner was made, and then Hildred examined her more critically. Her entrance made a sensation amongst the gentlemen. Hildred stood watching the scene, watching the pretty maneuvers of the royally beautiful coquette, and how soon they took effect.

Hildred sighed as she turned away. This was the kind of beauty that her husband loved—blonde, tall and graceful.

Lord Caraven's first sensation on reading the coquettish little note was not one of unmitigated pleasure. They had been spending a very happy week alone, the earl, the countess and Sir Raoul—a week that he had thoroughly enjoyed because the greater part of it had been spent in the open air with his wife and Sir Raoul. They had been watching the builders' progress, watching the improvements; and the earl was more pleased than he would have cared to say at seeing once more a smile on the faces around him. He did not feel quite sure at first that he cared for the coming interruption. He gave the letter to Lady Caraven.

"If she comes," he said, "it is pretty certain we must invite a party to meet her."

The young countess looked up. "We are a party," she told him—"we are three."

Lord Caraven laughed. "Three is a very small number, Hildred. What would Lady Hamilton say if she came here and found that we had not invited any one to meet her? Raoul and I would be exhausted by the amount of homage we should have to pay. Lady Hamilton is the very queen of coquettes."

"I do not like coquettes," said Lady Caraven, curtly.

"It would be wonderful if you did," laughed her husband. "Dark-eyed and dark-haired women like you, Hildred, are generally severe; golden hair and blue eyes take naturally to flirtation. But that is no settlement of our difficulty. There is but one course open to us—to write and say that we shall be delighted. You will write, of course?"

"If you wish it," said Hildred, quietly.

"Then we will draw up a list of people to invite while she is here. We must have some eligible men."

"What does she want eligible men for?" asked Hildred; and the two gentlemen laughed at the question.

"Is she a widow?" continued the young countess.

"One of the youngest, prettiest, wealthiest widows in England," said the earl.

Lady Caraven felt a vague dawning of jealous dislike.

"I am almost sorry that she is coming now," put in Sir Raoul; "we are so very happy—all our quietness will be broken up and destroyed."

In his heart Lord Caraven almost re-echoed the wish.

"Perhaps the Countess of Caraven had never undertaken a task more unpleasant to her than the writing of this letter, yet it had to be done with all the graceful courtesy imaginable. Then the earl made out a list of people whom he thought the brilliant young widow would like to meet.

"There," he said—"we have an eligible marquis, a court favorite, a millionaire, a philosopher, and a soldier. Surely between them her ladyship will receive homage enough."

His wife noted with infinite satisfaction that he had not mentioned himself. Evidently he had no idea of paying homage to her; but the words, "one of the youngest, prettiest widows in England," had made a disagreeable impression on her. She could not tell why, but she had an unpleasant foreboding that evil would come from the widow's visit, evil both bitter and sore.

"There is another thing, Hildred," said Lord Caraven—"Lady Hamilton must have amusement. You will have to lay aside your work for a time and attend to it. We must have a ball—a grand ball, not a mere dancing party—we must have dinner parties and

CHAPTER XXXIX.

It was the evening of the day on which Lady Hamilton was expected. Several of the guests invited to meet her had already arrived, and the young Countess of Caraven anxiously expected her visitor. She had a strange kind of foreboding about her.

"I wonder," she said to Sir Raoul, "if some people do bring misfortune with them. I have an idea that Lady Hamilton will bring evil to me."

Sir Raoul laughed, and told her in his simple chivalrous fashion that a beautiful woman could bring only sunshine and happiness; but the young countess sighed.

"Helen of Troy did not bring much sunshine," she said, "and she was beautiful enough."

"But," objected Sir Raoul, "there is a difference; Lady Hamilton has not her fatal loveliness. Times have altered; no woman's face, I think, will ever cause another thirty years' war."

The young countess resolved upon being armed at all points. Her maid felt that at length her mistress was doing justice to herself. She was that evening very difficult to please—no dress was pretty enough; she chose one at length of purple velvet, long, graceful, and made after a picturesque fashion that Hildred particularly affected—cut square so as to show the beautiful neck and shoulders, with wide hanging sleeves, fastened with a diamond knot on the shoulder—a dress that was the triumph of good taste; no ribbon, no flowers, no ornaments nor trimmings marred its grand simplicity. She wore nothing but diamonds with it—a small tiara that crowned the queenly head, a necklace round the white throat, a small cross on the white breast, and a bracelet on one of her beautifully molded arms. Nothing could have been more magnificent, in better or simpler taste.

Sir Raoul looked delighted when he saw her. "Lady Hamilton may be very fair," he thought, "but she will not look like Hildred."

The earl did not notice either her face or her dress; he admired her skill, her genius, but he was certainly not in love with his young wife.

It was with some little curiosity that the young countess went to meet her guest. Lady Hamilton had been shown into a pretty little boudoir, where she awaited her hostess; and these two women who were so strangely to cross each other's lives looked almost eagerly at each other.

Lady Caraven saw before her a tall, graceful, lovely blonde, whose sunny eyes and golden hair were bright and beautiful, whose red lips smiling showed teeth like pearls. After returning in the most musical of voices the greetings of her hostess, she requested that she might be shown to her room.

She was in some measure just what Lady Caraven had expected to see. She appeared in the drawing-room two minutes before the announcement of dinner was made, and then Hildred examined her more critically. Her entrance made a sensation amongst the gentlemen. Hildred stood watching the scene, watching the pretty maneuvers of the royally beautiful coquette, and how soon they took effect.

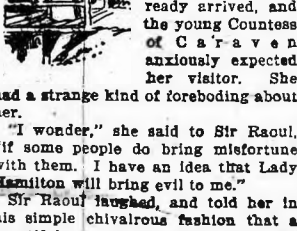

Hildred sighed as she turned away. This was the kind of beauty that her husband loved—blonde, tall and graceful.

pleats, a regular round of entertainments. "And my work must stand still," she interrupted, regretfully.

"I am sorry for it, because I have that your heart is in it; but rank and position have duties that we cannot ignore. When a lady like Lady Hamilton volunteers a visit, it is necessary to receive her with all courtesy. You will be able to do something, but not much."

It was almost autumn, and people were saying to each other smilingly that a summer seemed unwilling to go. The wheat was standing now in great golden sheaves, the fruit hung ripe upon the trees.

One morning a letter came to Ravensmere. It was from Lady Hamilton, to say that she was returning from Cowes, where she had been staying some time, and would be glad to pay her promised visit.

Lord Caraven's first sensation on reading the coquettish little note was not one of unmitigated pleasure. CORRESPONDENCE.

W. C. T. U.

The work of the National Suffrage Association has been watched with great interest. It is carried on, as a rule, by women without any salary, by means of donations from those who are interested in the cause, but cannot work for it, yet, can help others to do so. In many places men are members and often speak for the cause and occasionally there is a man who is an officer. The Michigan State Society has a man for treasurer. Still women are doing most of the work for this society that Wendell Phillips declared to be "the most momentous reform that had yet been launched on the world."

"In February last was held the thirtieth annual convention of the National Society, also the fiftieth anniversary of the first convention ever held by women to ask for equal rights. At the opening of this meeting in Washington, a small old-fashioned round table stood on the platform, draped with the American flag. Miss Anthony said, "On this table the original declaration of rights for women was written, at the house of Mary Ann McClintock, of Seneca Falls, N. Y. Four of the five women who wrote it were Quakers. They did not dare sign their names, but published the call anonymously. It is worth mentioning that the demands they made are nearly all conceded." It might be well, just here, to relate why those women felt it their duty to make the call for that convention. In 1840, the World's anti-Slavery convention was held in London. Societies from all countries were invited to send delegates. As American women had taken an active part in the anti-slavery struggle, some of them were sent as delegates, but were denied seats in the convention. Wm. Lloyd Garrison refused to take his seat on account of the insult to the women, and as a silent spectator in the gallery, watched the proceedings for twelve days. In which he had gone three thousand miles to participate. He said he demanded freedom for the slave because he was a human being and equal rights for women for the same reason."

Some things are very strange. We expect that the people of the twentieth century will look back and wonder why women were so long denied what was rightfully theirs. We now look back over twenty-five years and see how women were treated who wished to have the higher education along with their brothers. The bitter prejudices that existed then, belongs to the dark ages. It took brave hearts to be college girls in those days. One professor even in Michigan University would address the girls as 'gentlemen' or if spoken to individually would say 'Mr. So and So.' I know of one young woman student who paid for and occupied a pew in a popular church in Ann Arbor for one whole year and was never spoken to by a person in that church or congregation except the treasurer. However there was one church in that college town where they were differently treated. There was always some one to extend a hand even to a co-ed. But behold the change! Now the ladies of the faculty and the town vie with each other to add the girls in all their plans for pleasure or profit. Many university girls of today do not appreciate at what cost their freedom was purchased.

Quite recently another great gain has been made for woman's cause, by the passage of the Irish local government bill by the parliament of Great Britain. Municipal suffrage conferred on English women in 1868, proved so satisfactory that it was extended to the women of Scotland in 1891. Now after the experience of twenty-five years, it is extended to the women of Ireland also.

Perhaps all of us may not understand that looking the four states in the west,

Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho which have full suffrage for women, Arizona at the last session of its legislature, granted municipal suffrage to all tax-paying women. The latest news from Louisiana says, that tax paying women have been given the right to vote upon all questions submitted to the tax payers. This was secured at the constitutional convention which is held once in twenty years. Mississippi is nearly ready to give suffrage to women.

Miss Frances E. Willard, the beloved sister of humanity, in her last address to the National Union, as she spoke of the enfranchisement of women, said, "This greatest of all movements, looking toward a real republic, moves forward as steadily as the stars in their orbits, for nothing can arrest the progress of a true principle on its way to the hearts of an intelligent people." Miss Willard was an enthusiastic worker in behalf of woman's ballot. She surpassed all women as a leader. She never hesitated because a thing might be unpopular. If it was right and ought to be done she would join hands with God and do her best, believing that some day we will win. Through her efforts thousands upon thousands of men and women have been educated up to the level of the suffrage movement. She did not come to it through temperance as many others have done but was a suffragist first and all the time. In happy childhood, she played with her brother at founding and governing a city. When only seventeen, she wrote in her journal, "This is election day and my brother is twenty-one years old. How proud he seemed as he dressed up in his best clothes and drove off with father and the hired man to vote for John C. Fremont. My sister and I stood at the window and looked after them. Somehow I felt a lump in my throat and I couldn't see the wagon any more. My sister too seemed wonderfully sober. I said, "Mary wouldn't you like to vote as well as Oliver? Don't you and I love the country just as well as he? and doesn't the country need our ballots?" Then she answered, course we do, but don't you go and say so, for then we would be called strong-minded." Twenty years later, came a memorable event foreshadowed by this incident. An inner voice commanded Francis Willard to speak for woman's ballot as a protection to her home. Obeying this voice, she prepared an address and before the Woman's Congress in Philadelphia she first publicly avowed her faith in the enfranchisement of women. Disregarding the earnest pleadings of her friends she repeated that speech at the National convention of the W. C. T. U. in Newark, N. J., in 1876. The chairman of the meeting made some bitter remarks, and as this dauntless suffragist left the hall, the National president, Mrs. Wittenmeyer whispered, "You might have been a leader now you'll only be a scout." Miss Willard followed her convictions, and from that night won her victories under the white banner entwined with yellow. In 1879 she was elected president of the National W. C. T. U., and in her first annual address she sounded the bugle note which has echoed through all the states and nations and around the world, "Women ought to vote." She has stood steadfast to the principle "No sex in citizenship," and she has led thousands to believe in the truth of her saying "The mother heart must be enthroned in all places of power, before its edicts will be heeded."

INDIGESTION—DYSPEPSIA.

Medical Science has Produced a Cure at Last.

The increasing prevalence of dyspepsia has been a matter of the gravest concern to the medical profession, and for years leading scientists have been experimenting to produce a remedy. Constant effort in this direction has introduced many preparations, which barely afford temporary relief to sufferers. It remained for Prof. Drake, a chemist of many years experience, to produce a treatment which has proven to be a positive cure for the disease in all of its manifold forms, and which is known as Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer. In order to obviate a common disadvantage to sufferers—that of buying medicine which has lain perhaps for years in drug stores as must necessarily be the case where all druggists handle the same article—the manufacturers are placing Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer with a limited number of druggists consequently you are sure to always receive the treatment fresh, although being put up in tablets and tightly sealed boxes, it will retain its freshness longer than in any other form.

If you are troubled with indigestion, sour stomach, acid fermentation, water brash, headache, sleeplessness, or any form of nervous dyspepsia, call at either drug store Plymouth, and ask for Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer. A book on Stomach and Nerve troubles, their symptoms and cure, given free for the asking at the above mentioned stores.

INDIGESTION—DYSPEPSIA.

Medical Science has Produced a Cure at Last.

The increasing prevalence of dyspepsia has been a matter of the gravest concern to the medical profession, and for years leading scientists have been experimenting to produce a remedy. Constant effort in this direction has introduced many preparations, which barely afford temporary relief to sufferers. It remained for Prof. Drake, a chemist of many years experience, to produce a treatment which has proven to be a positive cure for the disease in all of its manifold forms, and which is known as Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer. In order to obviate a common disadvantage to sufferers—that of buying medicine which has lain perhaps for years in drug stores as must necessarily be the case where all druggists handle the same article—the manufacturers are placing Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer with a limited number of druggists consequently you are sure to always receive the treatment fresh, although being put up in tablets and tightly sealed boxes, it will retain its freshness longer than in any other form.

If you are troubled with indigestion, sour stomach, acid fermentation, water brash, headache, sleeplessness, or any form of nervous dyspepsia, call at either drug store Plymouth, and ask for Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer. A book on Stomach and Nerve troubles, their symptoms and cure, given free for the asking at the above mentioned stores.
