Pencil and Pastepot

In answer to the question, "what is a rig?" the editor of an exchange furnishes the information that it is an outfit for which a young man blows in the fruits of the labor of a week for the privilege of letting his best girl hold the reins for half an hour, while he squeezes her corset.

An editor is frequently blamed because items do not appear in his local or personal columns. But if the people do not give him some little show how can they reasonably expect him to know everything. Hand him the names of your guests and the particulars of the happenings of public interest in your homes. Aid him, for he is but a man after all.

President McKinley ascended to the top of the Washington Monument for the first time about a week ago, his appearance causing quite a flutter among the tourists, guides and others who frequent the Monument. It is not generally known, but the Washington Monument like all high shafts deflects to a considerable extent from the perpendicular. The aluminum point which surmounts the monument swings around in a circle of six or seven inches in diameter, and the great mass of stone and mortar swings with it.

They sat on the steps at midnight two fools that were better in bed; murmuring "honeyed nothings," while the moon hung o'er their heads. Two fools with joyous elation swapped microbes on their lips, and thrilled with a queer sensation from toes to finger tips. Telling the same stuff over that was nothing when it was new; giggling, gushing and burning, but frozen through and through. This is fond affection the young folks have to bear; they think it love undying and angels in every stare. The bachelor says it's nothing, the old maid says it's vice, and mamma says it's naughty but the youngsters know it's nice.—Hudson Post.

W. C. Childs, secretary of the Wash-taw Mutual Fire Ins. Co. has given the question of lightning rods considerable study. He believes they are a good thing if up-put right. The important point is to see that the ends are properly anchored in the ground away from the building. The glass conductors, to which the ordinary rods are fastened, are of less importance. A rod of iron without these will carry the fluid as well. In the 14 years that he has been secretary of the company, he has never known a barn or house to burn down by being struck by lightning on which there was a rod. The lightning will clear the building but not set it on fire.

The need of more room at the White House is so pressing, and the disputes over all plans for enlarging that historic edifice are so warm, that it is now proposed to build a new residence for the President and leave the present White House for official purposes. The suggestion is made that Lafayette Square immediately opposite the White House could be utilized for the purpose without in any way detracting from its value as a park. In fact it is believed that the location of a handsome two or three story marble or granite house in the center of the large square, which could then be cut off by a picket fence, would be much more acceptable than the present park.

The Post Office Department has concluded that there is a band of clever thieves operating in different parts of the country who dress themselves in second hand uniforms obtained from carriers and rob mail boxes almost with impunity. It is said at the Department that if the thief familiarizes himself with the times of delivery and collection at important boxes, there will be no danger of his being interfered with so long as he wears the familiar gray uniform. It is a crime to personate a government officer in certain cases, and of course it is a crime to rob a mail box, but any man could wear a carrier's uniform without being subject to prosecution and it may be necessary to pass a specific law to prevent it.

Consumption Threatened.

C. Unger, 313 Maple St., Champaign, Ill., writes: "I was troubled with a hacking cough for a year and I thought I had consumption. I tried a great many remedies and was under the doctor's care for several months. I used one bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. It cured me, and I have not been troubled since." 98 Pharmacy.

Uncle Sam began the new century with an overflowing treasury. At the close of business on the 31st, the books in the Treasury showed an available cash balance on hand in excess of all reserve funds of $144,414,744.65. The Treasury year begins July 1st, and the receipts for the first six months of the fiscal year have been $291,841,851.23, against $284,763,404.35 for the corresponding months of the last fiscal year. The expenditures have been $272,300,532.52 against $263,576,500.22 last year, and the surplus of receipts over current expenditures has been $19,541,351.51, against $21,116,294.22. As will be seen, the expenditures have grown faster than the receipts.

J. A. Lambert of Rachel, N. C., writes: "I heartily endorse Foley's Kidney Cure. It does what you claim it will do, and there is nothing equal to it, and I thank you for the good it has done me." Accepted as substitute for 98 Pharmacy.

The commerce of the Great Lakes for the closing year of the century seems likely to show a larger tonnage movement than in any preceding year. The figures just completed by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics and which cover the entire navigation season up to December 1st, are especially interesting as demonstrating the relative importance of the principal ports as handlers of the water-borne commerce of the inland seas. Chicago remains well in the lead as a receiving port for hard coal, with Milwaukee second and South Chicago and Duluth third and fourth. About two thirds of the hard coal was shipped from Buffalo.

To Cure a Cough stop coughing, as it irritates the lung, and gives them no chance to heal. Foley's Honey and Tar cures without causing a strain in showing of the phlegm like common cough expectorants. 98 Pharmacy.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discovery of Swamp-Gout at Work in the Laboratory. There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble. Dr. Klinger's Swamp-Gout Cure is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. A druggist in New York and Detroit, each, has a circular which contains full details. Address: Dr. Klinger & Co., Birmingham, N. Y. See inside this paper.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.

When you open your heart to lust, love will leave your life.

A well-read man must hump himself if he would be original.

AT LAST.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unassuming
spaces bloom,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay.

Be near me when all else is from me drifting,
Earth, sky, home's picture, days of shade and shine
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, O Father! Let Thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm, I merit;
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if, my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy abundant grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There from the music found about me healing,
I faint would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

—John G. Whittier.

For Love of Madelaine.

BY JAMES O'SHAUGHNESSY.

(Copyright, 1900, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Although I had been a frequent caller at the home of Madelaine Zimmer, as I had a right to be, I had never met Charles Newkirk there. Indeed, there were many other young men of my acquaintance whom I had never met at her home, for that matter, but the fact that Newkirk and I never happened to be callers in the luxurious house of the Zimmers at the same time is worthy of mention. This was the Newkirk who was in love with Madelaine.

His tenderness for her was hardly within my knowledge, as he had never told me of it, but it was so firmly a matter of belief with me that it interfered with my ease of mind. I knew he called to see her; that was sufficient to make out a plain case of rivalry against him. After that whenever I encountered him at the club or at receptions the very sight of him quickened my sense of envy.

His handsome features, his rakish mustache, his correct clothes and his graceful carriage had the distressing effect of putting me in despair of winning Madelaine so long as he was in the field. For that reason I was glad I had never met him when I was paying my devotions to her, as I felt I would suffer, by comparison, in her eyes.

If he was handsome and dashing, he was devoid of some of the essentials for a good husband. I knew this, Madelaine, I was sure, did not know it. Therefore, as one who loved her with every fiber of his heart that was sensitive to passion, I felt a double purpose in my wooing—to save her from him and to win her for myself.

I wanted to tell her what sort of a fellow at heart Newkirk was. Being his rival, however, I dared not. I knew from the discoveries LeBryere made in dissecting the souls of women that it would have a contrary effect.

Newkirk never spoke of her to me. I never spoke of her to him. She never mentioned him to me. Still he kept calling to see her. So did I. Still he and I never met there. When he called I stayed away. When I called he did not come. It might have appeared to Madelaine we were dodging each other. I was glad we were, for I feared my impetuous disposition would have spoiled my chances.

Fortunately I was able to preserve an unruffled demeanor, but I was watchful and determined. Newkirk had affairs of business that called him often to New York. I heard also in the club gossip that he had an affair of the heart there, too. From that moment I was resolved to put a literal construction on the maxim: "All is fair in love and war."

Soon after this Newkirk went East to remain a month, he said. In happy coincidence the Zimmers left the very next day to pass the summer season at Charlevoix. The day following I called for Charlevoix to pass my vacation. She welcomed me there with evidences of delight. It was a period of supreme happiness to be near and to know that Newkirk would not be there for a whole month.

That was my time, if ever, I realized to win her. As a wise general must be preparatory to attacking a citadel, I made a plan. It was simple enough. I was to tell her that Newkirk was dead. That would leave the field clear. In her moment of bereavement I would naturally be the one man to whom she would turn for consolation. The rest would be easy.

I broke the sad news to her one day while we were strolling along the cliffs. She didn't take it so well to hear, and I feared for my success. Women are so much more confiding in times of grief. It was too late to change the plan then. I did the best I could. I held her hand, I pressed it to my lips, I muttered things so tender that they escaped my articulation. When I thought there was nothing proper left for me to do but jump over the cliff and hope they would never find my body, she turned to me with an expression of tenderness in her great brown eyes that filled my soul with joy.

"And you love me, Madelaine?" I sighed.

"I have loved you with all my heart for a long, long time, John," she whispered.

There we plighted our troth. The birds sang sweeter than ever they sang before. The sun shone brighter; the lake and the sky were bluer and the air was perfumed as we slowly paced along. We forgot the dinner hour and didn't care, for we were happy.

She gave a scream and threw herself fainting in my arms.

It was late in the afternoon when we returned to the hotel. We were sitting in the cooling shade of the great veranda. Another boatload of visitors hauled up from the wharf were being discharged from the backs and we were studying them as they passed into the hotel.

My eye fell on one of them and it made my love-laden heart stop beating. Madelaine saw my sudden emotion.

"What is the matter, John, dear?" she exclaimed in affright.

I could not find words at that moment, but she followed my fixed stare with her terrified glances until she, too, saw the cause of my attack of momentary paralysis.

She gave a scream and threw herself fainting, in my arms.

There, among the new arrivals, stood Charles Newkirk, back from the grave in which I had so recently placed him.

"What does this mean, Newkirk?" I demanded as savagely as I could when I recovered a part of my senses.

Whatever answer he made was lost to me, for at that moment Madelaine's mother came shrieking to her daughter's aid. A score of other women rushed in upon me. I surrendered my fainting loved one to their more skillful attentions, and extricating myself from the hysterical concourse, I went to meet Newkirk face to face. Madelaine was mine at last and I had nothing to fear from him. As her protector I felt it to be my plain duty to punish him for his impertinent intrusion.

He was gone from the veranda. I went into the hotel rotunda looking for him, but he was not there. I went to the clerk's desk.

"Where did that insolent fellow go?" I demanded.

"Whom do you mean?" asked the apprehensive clerk.

"Why that fellow Newkirk?"

"They have gone to their room."

"They? Who are they? Newkirk is the only one I want."

"I mean Mr. and Mrs. Newkirk. They just arrived—on their wedding trip, I believe."

I looked at the hotel register and there was Newkirk's familiar handwriting tracing the words:

"Charles Newkirk and wife."
"Shall I send up your card?" asked the clerk.

"No; I guess I have made a mistake," I said softly.

Then I hurried back to see if Madelaine had recovered. She was sitting beside her mother looking pale. I sat on the other side of her. She leaned over to me with a faded expression in her erstwhile lustrous eyes.

"Was it his ghost, John?" she asked in a hoarse whisper.

"No, dear, that was his wife you saw with him," I said calmly.

"But you told me he was dead," she said, with a tone of deep injury in her voice.

"Well, aren't you more surprised to hear that he is married?"

"Why, no. He told me he was going East to marry some other girl when I jilted him the week before last."

Wayne Review:—The factory started in again Monday with nearly a full force of men, who may now work to advantage, as during the holidays the machinery and every thing in the building was overhauled and put in first-class condition. People kiss their dead who never stoop to kiss their living: they hover over open caskets with hysterical sobs, but fail to throw their arms about their loved ones who are fighting the stern battle of life. A word of cheer to a struggling soul in life is worth more than all the roses in Christendom piled high on casket covers. The dead cannot smell the flowers but the living can; scatter them broadcast in their pathway therefore, pluck out thorns.—Ex.

South Lyons had an experience with bank burglars Monday night. Six men broke into the store of Carpenter & Jarobus, where the bank is located, and forced open the safe with dynamite. The explosion awakened some of the citizens and they started out with guns. A guard was found patrolling the street and one man was ordered to go back. He dodged behind a building and opened fire instead. The fire was returned and the burglars taking alarm fled to the depot where a hand-car was in waiting. Meantime other citizens had come up and there was a regular rattle of guns on both sides. No one was hurt and the robbers made their escape, securing about $300, overlooking another package of $300. There seems to be an organized gang of these gentry.

Bad Railroad Wreck!

A fearful railroad wreck occurred in the Plymouth yards last Saturday evening, in which three lives were lost, the accident being due to direct carelessness or disobedience of orders. It was a head on collision between the nine o'clock passenger from the north and a freight. Fortunately the freight was backing up slowly, so that the collision was less disastrous in its results. Otherwise the loss of life would undoubtedly have been more numerous.

An extra freight in charge of Conductor Fred Burson, of Grand Rapids, pulled into the Plymouth yards about 7:30 from the East bound for Grand Rapids. The freight crew went out on the north end of the yards to do some switching and while engaged there the south bound passenger, running at the rate of forty miles an hour, came around the bend a few rods north of the yards and crashed into the freight, which was then on the main track backing down out of the way of the passenger. For working on the main track on the time of the passenger train was considered gross carelessness on the part of the conductor of the freight, and upon him was laid the blame of the wreck by the people, who at once congregated on the scene. By a statement published by the conductor, however, it seems the blame was not altogether his.

The passenger train was composed of engine, express and baggage cars two day coaches and sleeper. The collision telescoped the express car onto the tender of the engine, catching Engineer Elliott Moore and Fireman John C. Kennedy between the tank and engine boiler, where both were found the latter cut almost in two and dead, the former with his hand on the throttle of his engine, yet alive, but expiring a few minutes after the arrival of the rescuers. Expressman W. J. Mamer, of Detroit, was found jammed up in the rear end of his car, somewhat injured and shaken up, but miraculously escaping with his life.

The baggageman, Fred Conde, and Conductor Ruben Packard, were standing in the baggage car, the shock throwing them to the floor and bruising them up somewhat.

Some of the passengers on the train were slightly bruised by being thrown over seats and into the aisles.
Fireman Wm. Moore, of the freight, states that the engineer of his engine, saw the passenger coming and said so. Moore jumped from the cab and sustained no injuries. The engineer, William Blische was caught under the tender and received injuries which resulted fatally. He was sent to a Detroit hospital in charge of Dr. Oliver, on the 9:30 passenger from Grand Rapids, but died there as he was about to be placed on the operating table.

As soon as the accident became known, Drs. Oliver, Cooper and Hubbell hastened to the wreck and rendered all assistance possible. Many citizens also went down to the scene.

The remains of Engineer Moore and Fireman Kennedy were taken to the undertaking rooms of Bassett & Son and prepared for burial, being taken on the afternoon train to their homes in Saginaw.

Engineer Moore was one of the best known engineers in the State. He was a student of mechanical engineering and was valuable to the road in its engineering department. During the past few years Mr. Moore had been employed by the state as a mechanical engineer under Railroad Commissioner Billings, afterward under Railroad Commissioner Wessellus, and later under Commissioner Osborn. He left the service of the state a year ago and returned to his locomotive.

John C. Kennedy, the fireman of the passenger train, was a young man. He was single, and lived with his mother, at 251 Dwight street, Saginaw.

Engineer William Blische, of the freight train, was only recently promoted from fireman. His wife and family live at 317 Front street, Ionia. He was 37 years old, and just started on what seemed a bright future in the railroad business.

Conductor Burson, of the freight, makes a statement of the accident at Grand Rapids, Monday, to the Detroit Journal, from which we take extracts, as follows:

"After supper," Burson says, "I went to the yard office to check up and sent the crew up the track to do the switching, which was very little, as our train was composed of only twelve cars. At 7:30 I gave the engineer his orders which were the same as mine, saying: 'You have 30 minutes until No. 106 is due; remember and get out of the way.'"

"I went back to the yard office to resume my duty, when the switching was done, and I noted that only five minutes remained. The brakemen, Crowley of this city and McGowan of Detroit, were on the caboose, swinging the engineer back, who was doing something around his engine in the cab. I signaled at four minutes of the time the passenger was due to hurry in, but the train came back slowly, only a puff of steam occasionally being heard. I signaled again and in the meantime had gone from the yard office with Conductor Miller, of another freight, towards the switch. I walked 50 lengths of a car in that time, all the while hurrying the engine in and the two brakemen continued to give the signal until the crash came. In that time the engineer did not move any faster and could have covered twice the ground I did."

"Now, about the cause, I want to say this: The men who are dead are to blame for that wreck, although because I was in charge of the freight naturally enough the public will blame me. I had trouble all day with my engineer. He was bucking me hard. It was his disobedience to orders that lost his life. He would not mind my signals, nor the signals of the brakemen. At Beech, below Plymouth, he whistled the flag in twice and I had to go personally and order it out again. He would pay no attention to me and acted very sulky. He had five minutes to back about fifty car lengths, but didn't get one-quarter of the way while I walked the entire distance.

"Then, too, Engineer Moore was past the yard limit without abutting off or easing-up, as the air brakes were not set until about ten seconds before the crash. Although he was supposed to have a clear track, yet he had no right to run past the yard limit at full speed. His train was running 40 miles an hour. Had he shut off at the yard limit, as the law directs, he could have stopped his train before hitting the freight, even if Engineer Blische did refuse to obey my orders. It's too bad, but I can see where no one is to blame except the two engineers."

Justice Robert Malden, acting as coroner, impanelled a jury, who viewed the remains of the dead engineer and fireman and then adjourned until today at ten o'clock. The jury is composed as follows: Geo. Springer, Myron Fuller, Chas. Hubbell, Chas. A. Blain, Chas. Blackburn and Will Spencer.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however, you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, for a greasy one will surprise you. SCOTT & BOWNE Chemists, 409 Pearl Street, New York. 50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

er, which was a complete surprise to the gentleman, so much so in fact that it was several minutes before he could find his voice to reply. When he did so, it was to be scarcely heard. It was plain to be seen that Mr. Stephens was deeply touched by the unexpected gift of the Post and Corps, but he soon warmed to his work and made a very happy response, which had the effect of endearing him still more into the hearts of those who listened to him. Hark to this bit of wisdom from Editor Hubbell of the Mariette Leader, which ought to be indorsed by every farmer in Michigan: "There should be a genuine overhauling of road laws and methods in Michigan and some plan carried out that would do away with the semi-annual closing up of transportation. The farmer loses more every year in increased expense of getting to market than good roads would cost him and the business man's loss is fully as much. A law that would compel the building of roads by contract and do away with the road work farce should be welcomed."
