Michigan Happenings

Cold Blooded Murder.

Tuesday evening Muskegon was the scene of a cold blooded murder. Chas. H. Easton, 45 years of age, shot and killed Mrs. Ellen Leonard, housekeeper for his father, who is 84 years of age. Easton then went to a nearby saloon and notified officers, who arrested him. He claims Mrs. Leonard had undue influence over his father, who last week turned a younger son out of the house. At this time Easton told his father that Mrs. Leonard would have to leave. The old man objected, whereupon the son is reported to have said, "Very well, she will be a corpse if she stays." Easton has been employed by the Thayer Lumber Co. He quit work about 4 p. m. and went to a store, where he purchased a small pistol. His father and the housekeeper had just finished dinner when he reached home. Mrs. Leonard saw the pistol, and realizing her danger, ran into another room and shut the door. The old man tried to intervene, but the son pushed him away and broke open the door. He at once fired upon the housekeeper, who was crouching in a closet in the next room. The first shot struck her in the left temple and she fell to the floor. The infuriated man then fired again, the ball taking effect at the base of the brain. Another bullet imbedded itself in the wall.

The Phelps Failure.

Nell S. Phelps, of Battle Creek, accredited a pure food millionaire, was confronted in his own sanatorium Wednesday by a crowd of impatient creditors who had assembled in response to his own call for a conference. Two years ago, Mr. Phelps, conservative bankers say, could have been worth $2,000,000 if he had not well enough alone, but he was not satisfied to do this, and now he finds himself so involved that the wildest rumors concerning his financial condition are current. Mr. Phelps was asked how much money he had. He answered that his assets—all that had any value at all to him—consisted of $51,000 worth of Ellis Publishing Co. stock and $800,000 worth of Malta Vita stock. Asked what the latter was worth in his estimation he frankly confessed that the stock had no market value, as no one wanted it. The depreciation and non-dividend paying feature he credited to bad management and tight money. Asked what his liabilities were, he informed the meeting that he owed $25,000, and that 47 of his creditors were those who held as collateral securing his notes stock in the Phelps Medical and Surgical Sanatorium built three years ago to compete with the gigantic Adventist institution at the other side of the street.

Florence Has a Tragedy.

Three Rivers was greatly excited Saturday over a tragedy at Florence, 4 miles south, that occurred Saturday evening. Clyde Lamb, after taking in all the saloons, hired a heavy rig and drove to his mother-in-law's home in Florence. When he arrived there he called his wife outside and deliberately blew the top of her head off with a 44-caliber revolver. The sight of blood crazed him, and he then started to see who else he could shoot. His mother-in-law, who heard the report of the revolver, rushed out of the house to see what was the matter and before she could really comprehend the terrible affair was herself shot. After committing the bloody deed Lamb drove away in a mad rage, making all kinds of threats and also saying when found he would be dead. Lamb had trouble with his wife, who was suing him for divorce.

Murder in Lawrence.

Arba Martin, a fruit grower, 30 years old, was murdered in the main street of Lawrence, Saturday night, being killed by a shot fired from a rifle in the hands of Harry Fairbanks. The ball pierced the heart of Martin, causing instant death. Martin and Fairbanks had never quarreled until this time, when the two men met and engaged in a heated discussion over some trifling matter. Fairbanks became enraged, it is said, and throwing a rifle which he carried to his shoulder, deliberately fired at Martin. Fairbanks at the time was accompanied by Jay Smith, his stepfather. Both were immediately placed under arrest and taken to jail.

Threatened Lynching.

William Lovelass, of Howard City, was arrested Sunday on the charge that he assaulted Mrs. Abram Hamlet, of Kalamazoo, choked her and tore her clothing. She says that when she came Saturday night to visit her father, Ezra Barton, Lovelass met her on her way from the train and volunteered to carry her parcels. She accepted his help and when she was near her father's she said he attacked her. Lovelass has a bad reputation. There were so many threats of lynching that a heavy guard was placed around the jail.

Turkey at Fancy Prices.

All over the country the reports are that turkeys are few and prices high. The person who insists upon eating turkey this year will have to pay 20 cents or over per pound for the bird. The extremely cold weather which prevailed all over Michigan until well on in the summer is to blame, as the young birds are extremely sensitive and easily succumb to the wintry blasts. It is said that there is hardly more than half a crop, and poultry raisers are holding out for fancy prices.

West Indian Superstitions.

If you kill a spider you will soon have a plate.

If you carry a tree pepper in your pocket, you will become poor.

If you give a thing away and take it back again you will have a sty.

If you roll your eyes when the moon changes they will stay crooked.

If a cock crows at the door, a gentleman is going to visit the house; if a hen crows, some member of the family will die.

If a lizard jumps into a tub in which clothes are being washed the washerwoman must not touch them for four hours or they will tear in her hands.

If a John Crow (turkey buzzard) flies into the house some terrible misfortune will happen. When birds nest in your house a wedding may be expected.

Whenever a negro hurts a black dog he always begs its pardon, because the spirits of black dogs are supposed to go into men's bodies after death and cause them to walk the earth in the shape of a black dog.—New York Sun.

Chinfaune.

What might have been is generally what you wish was.

There is never any difficulty about finding fault if you look for it.

The smoking of a cigarette is not a right, but a privilege extended with the hope that it will kill the recipient.

Did you ever notice the indecision of a woman about choosing a seat in a street car with but few passengers?

It is human nature to kick a goose for its innocent awkwardness, while allowing a dog with teeth to go its way unscathed.—"Uncle Dick" in Milwaukee Sentinel.

(To help in avoiding mistakes, in improving the present, and in assuring true success.)

When you come to the Hill of Difficulty, it may be better to go through it than around it.

The love of God for man can never be twisted into selfishness; no more should our love for our neighbor.

A reputation is no trifle. Years must be the price paid for it, though it may be lost in a day. A good reputation is better than a bank account.—Boy's World.

THE MAGIC OF THE VIOLIN.

Its Wonderful Charm in the Hands of a Master Described.

Arthur Symons thus describes the great violinist Ysaye as he appeared while playing his instrument: "Then the 'Kreutzer Sonata' began and I looked at Ysaye as he stood, an almost shapeless mass of flesh, holding the violin between his fat fingers and looking vaguely into the air. He put the violin to his shoulder. The face had been like a mass of clay waiting the sculptor's thumb. As the music came an invisible touch seemed to pass over it; the heavy mouth and chin remained firm, pressed down on the violin, but the eyelids and the eyebrows began to move, as if the eyes saw the sound and were drawing it in luxuriously with a kind of sleeping ecstasy, as one draws in perfume out of a flower. Then, in that instant, a beauty which had never been in the world came into the world; a new thing was created, lived, died, having revealed itself to all those who were capable of receiving it."

The Minister's Threat.

LIKED HIS "NIP."

Not a Whisky, but a Coffee Tepper.

Give coffee half a chance and with some people it sets its grip hard and fast. "Up to a couple of years ago," says a business man of Brooklyn, N. Y., "I was as constant a coffee drinker as it was possible to be, indeed, my craving for coffee was equal to that of a drunkard for his regular 'tip' and the effect of the coffee drug upon my system was indeed deplorable. "My skin lacked its natural color, my features were pinched and my nerves were shattered to such an extent as to render me very irritable. I also suffered from palpitation of the heart. "It was while in this condition I read an article about Postum Food Coffee and concluded to try it. It was not long before Postum had entirely destroyed my raging passion for coffee and in a short time I had entirely given up coffee for delicious Postum. "The change that followed was so extraordinary I am unable to describe it. Suffice it to say, however, that all my troubles have disappeared. I am my original happy self again and on the whole the soothing and pleasant effects produced by my cup of Postum make me feel as though I have been 'landed at another station.' "Not long ago I converted one of my friends to Postum and he is now as loud in its praise as I am." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

For Physical Development.

The old fair grounds as a play-ground or athletic field are closed, and for a few days past interested parties have been endeavoring to secure new grounds. The land back of the school-house is considered available for all purposes, if some three rods wide on the west side can be obtained, or a small piece of land purchased on the south side. Either would suffice, but both would be better. A subscription was circulated to obtain funds to put the grounds as now owned by the school district in some proper shape by grading and leveling and purchasing necessary equipment, including a small building for storage and where players may effect a change of clothing. In the meantime it is known that one of the things desirable also is a gymnasium for the girls as well as the boys. The school board found itself unable to supply any of these things, so the boys who want an athletic training appealed to the public. The subscription paper met with some success, but altogether inadequate for the purpose involved.

W. F. Markham was one of the few more especially interested and at his desire a meeting of citizens and the school-board was held at the office of P. W. Voorhies Wednesday evening—not largely attended. However, what it lacked in numbers was overbalanced in enthusiasm. Mr. Markham declared the development of the physical body was essential—and more even—than the development of mental faculties and it was the duty of the school district to provide appliances and appurtenances. It appeared to be a necessity to do so to keep up with the procession of schools in other towns and Plymouth ought not to stay in the rear. Mr. Markham favored a liberal expenditure of money in this direction and suggested the appointment of a committee of four—two members of the school board and two citizens—to look over the grounds proposed to be acquired, suitable buildings and above all to confer with the tax payers of the district and impress them with the necessity of providing something in the way above outlined. Later to call a meeting of the district and provide funds to carry out the project. He was quite sanguine if the matter was properly presented there would be no trouble to carry the same through. Mr. Markham was most enthusiastic in support of the proposition and will go his utmost to provide for its establishment. At his request, a special meeting of the school board will be called for the purpose of appointing this committee.

Mr. Hough suggested that it was almost imperative that more school-room be provided and that if this were done, a gymnasium could be very nicely arranged for on the second floor.

Mr. Conner wanted the committee appointed at once that there might be no delay. John McLaren offered to sell the fair ground grand-stand to the district for just what it cost him—$100—although to build a new one would cost near a $1,000.

It is most probable that temporary work will be done this fall only to build a suitable foot ball ground, and the more elaborate plans deferred until next spring.

It was talked that the grounds, if all plans go through, be leased to the public for a consideration, but to remain under direct control of the school board.

Woman's Literary Club.

The third regular meeting of the Woman's Literary Club, which met in the Club parlor Oct. 30th was a pleasant and profitable one, there being a large number present. The meeting was called to order by the President, followed by roll call and critic's report. A letter from Mrs. F. B. Adams was greatly enjoyed by the club. After this came other business, the Shakespeare lesson was taken up and much interest shown. The program for the day was in charge of Mrs. Edith Sayles, chairman of the third division. The subjects under Sculpture were "The Decadence—from Angelo to Houdon."—Miss Shattuck. "French Sculpture."—Mrs. Conner. Picture Studies—Bernini's "Apollo and Daphne," also DuBois' "Jean of Arc," Miss Sayles.—See.

City vs. Country.

The Detroit Free Press seems to be trying to arraign the city and suburbs against the country towns in a political way and rubs it in on Cass Benton, of Northville, because he "fell down" in his fight against the tax commission, and also some of the "other farmers" who tried to help him. Well, the city got the best of the fight, but when it comes to Republican votes the city politicians have to look to the "farmers of the rural districts" for majorities. They would be hopelessly lost without them. The "farmers" may some day turn the tables on some of these Republican office-holders and seekers and set down on them very hard. It is the only way the outside towns seem to be able to get recognition. Already a fight is on to turn out the only country Republican office-holder in the county building, and if the "farmers" meekly submit to being used only on election day to the interest of the city politicians they are a lot of chumps that ought to be relegated to the "farm." The country towns can afford to give the cityites a good wholesome lesson and should do so.

Wayne County S. S. Convention.

Extensive plans are being made for the Fifteenth Annual Convention of the Wayne County S. S. Association, to be held in the Central M. E. Church, Detroit, Friday Nov. 13th, afternoon and evening, and Saturday Nov. 14th, morning afternoon and evening. Special music will be rendered throughout the sessions, under the direction of Mr. Harry Beard. Leading soloists of the city will appear. The ladies of the city churches are arranging for a complimentary banquet Friday between sessions and county delegates will be entertained over night.

The first afternoon, "Our Young People" will receive special attention, also Mens' Classes. "Pastors' Evening" will follow topic, "Elements of Success in Sunday-School Work, from a Pastor's standpoint" will be discussed by city and county pastors. Saturday morning will bring Primary work, in charge of the State Primary Superintendent, Mrs. G. L. Fox, of Grand Rapids. Business session will follow and Alfred Day will introduce "Library Problems and Plans." In the afternoon "Our Racial Problems" will be considered and the Intermediate Department given prominence. Saturday evening Addresses will be made by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, and State General Secretary, Alfred Day.

As there are 125 or more Sunday Schools in Detroit and nearly 100 in the Townships of Wayne County, it is expected a large delegation will be in attendance at this convention. The Association expends $1000 annually upon its work among the Sunday-schools of the county and its contributions to the State Association. All Sunday-schools that have not yet contributed are asked to bring their annual offering to this convention.

Free Press—An effort has been made during the last few days to put ginger into John J. Carton's boom for the governorship, but Warner men say the Farmington cheesemaker's campaign is in better condition than ever. At present, the upper peninsula workers seem to be in his favor, while, in Wayne county, he will have nearly 200 census workers employed under him at just about the time the caucuses will be held. The influential Chippert crowd of Springwells, is said to be lined up for Warner, while a number of the county officers favor him.

Did you ever hear of the famous Dr. Deimel (Linen Mesh) Und'rwe'r

Well, we have just received some Ladies' and Gents' Vests, made of the 'Deimel' Mesh Linen. Little too warm to talk chest protectors just now, but colder weather is due in a couple of weeks. The objection to chest protectors hitherto offered to the public is that while they supply a measure of warmth to the body they cannot be washed without destroying them. A self-respecting person necessarily desires cleanliness for his garments. Wool, chamois skin or combinations of them cannot be kept clean. They afford breeding grounds for all sorts of bacteria and absorb in them all the poisonous excretions of the skin. The Linen Vests are tailor-made, so as to fit snug, and made be worn next to the skin or over the undergarments. All sizes. Ask to see them.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

How To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail.

The new machinery for the electric lighting plant is arriving, but as yet the building is not ready. Delay was occasioned by the frost last week acting on some of the "green" cement blocks, which were rendered useless.

The council meeting last Monday evening was productive of nothing but routine work with some minor transactions, among which was the order for the trimming of shade trees and another to "scape" Main street.

The village should set an example by painting its electric light poles and then requiring that every other pole in the village be similarly treated. It's a disgrace to the town to allow the many unsightly poles to remain as they are.

About Railroad Crossings.

As is known, the Farmer street railroad crossing case is in court, where it may be held by the railroad company for several years. Councilman John McLaren had an interview with a high-up representative of the road Wednesday at which some figures were presented. The railroad people are figuring on a sub-way, the building of which would cost at the very least $6,000. They declare it is most impracticable for them to allow a grade crossing, as trains are sometimes held at that particular point for a long time. The official queried if a subway was built by them, if the village would pay $2,500. This proposition would be out of the question on the part of the village at this time.

Councilman McLaren asked the official—Mr. Simpson—if the railroad would build a side-track to the electric lighting plant, which was met by a significant counter query—What is the village going to do about the Farmer street crossing?

Mr. McLaren thinks the railroad people would be willing to allow a crossing at grade on Union street for the asking if the other crossing was abandoned.

A STORY OF THE PLAINS

CHAPTER I.

The Erazen Tongues.
The band major was a poet. His name is lost to history, but it deserves a place among the titles of the great. Only in the soul of a poet, a great man, could there have been conceived that thought by which the music of triumph should pass the little pinnacle of human exultation, and reach the higher plane of human sympathy.

Forty black horses, keeping step; forty trumpeters, keeping unison; this procession, headed by a mere musician, who none the less was a poet, a great man, crossed the field of Louisiana as it lay dotted with the heaps of slain, and dotted also with the groups of those who sought their slain; crossed that field of woe, meeting only hatred and despair, yet leaving behind only tears and grief. Tears and grief, it is true, yet grief that knows of sympathy, and tears that reeked of other tears.

For a long time the lines of invasion had tightened about the old city of Louisiana, and Louisiana grew weaker in the end. The wheat lay green upon the fields and the odor of the blossoms of the peach trees hung heavy on the air; but there was none who thought of fruitage or of harvest. Out there in front, where the guns were pulsing, there went on that grim harvest with which the souls of all were intimately concerned. The boys who threw up their hats to greet the infantry were fewer than they had been before the blossoming of the peach. The war had grown less particular of its food. A boy could speed a bullet, or could stop one. There were yet the boys.

Of all the old-time families of this ancient little city none held position more secure or more willingly accorded than the Fairfaxs and the Beauchamps. There had always been a suckle. Had Mary Ellen's eyes not been hid beneath the lids they might have seen a face pale and sad as her own. They sat silent, for it was no time for human speech. The hour came for parting, and he rose. His lips just lightly touched her cheek. It seemed to him he heard a faint "good-bye." He stepped slowly down the long walk in the moonlight, and his hand was at his face. Turning at the gate for the last wrench of separation, he gazed back at a drooping form upon the gallery. Then Mrs. Beauchamp came and took Ellen's head upon her bosom, seeing that now she was a woman, and that her sufferings had begun.

CHAPTER II.

The Players of the Game.
When the band major was twenty miles away in front of Louisiana his trumpets sounded always the advance. The main intrenchments erected in the defenses of Louisiana lay at right angles to the road along which came the Northern advance, and upon the side of the wood nearest to the town.

In the fields both the wheat and the flowers were now trampled, and a thousand industrious and complaining bees buzzed protest at the losing of their commerce. The defenses themselves were but earthworks, though skillfully laid out. Along their front, well hidden by the forest growth, ran a line of entangling abattis of stakes and sharpened interwoven boughs.

In the center of the line of defense lay the reserves, the boys of Louisiana, flanked on either side by regiments of veterans, the lean and black-haired Georgians and Carolinians, whose steadiness and unconcern gave comfort to more than one bursting boyish heart. The veterans had long played the game of war. They had long since said good-bye to their wom-noarse, deep, cheering, a bearing wave of menace made up of little sounds. An officer sprang up to the top of the breastworks and waved his sword, shouting out something which no one heard or cared to hear. The line in the trenches, boys and veterans, reserves and remnants of the columns of defense, rose and poured volley after volley, as they could, into the thick and concealing woods that lay before them. None the less, there appeared soon a long, dusty, faded line, trotting, running, walking, falling, stumbling, but coming on. It swept like a long serpent parallel to the works, writhing, smitten but surviving. It came on through the wood, writhing, tearing at the cruel abattis laid to entrap it. It writhed, roared, but it broke through. It swept over the rail fences that lay between the lines and the abattis, and still came on! This was not war, but Fate!

There came a cloud of smoke, hiding the face of the intrenchment. Then the boys of Louisiana saw bursting through this suffocating curtain a few faces, many faces, long rows of faces, some pale, some red, some laughing, some horrified, some shouting, some swearing—a long row of faces that swept through the smoke, following a line of steel—a line of steel that flickered, waved and dipped.

CHAPTER III.

The Victory.

The bandmaster marshaled his music at the head of the column of occupation which was to march into Louisiana. The game had been admirably played. The victory was complete. There was no need to occupy the trenches, for those who lay in them or near them would never rally for another battle. There was no longer need for hurry. Before the middle of the morning the lines would start on the march of the few short miles.

During the delay a young officer of engineers, Captain Edward Franklin by name, asked permission of his colonel to advance along the line of march until he came to the earthworks, to which he wished to give some examination, joining his regiment as it passed beyond the fortifications on its march. The colonel gave his consent, not altogether willingly. "You may see more over there than you want to see, young man," said he.

Franklin went on, following as nearly as he could the line of the assault of the previous day, a track all too boldly marked by the horrid debris of the fight. As he reached the first edge of the wood, where the victorious column had made its entrance, it seemed to him that there could have been no such thing as war. The air was soft and sweet, just cold enough to stir the leaves upon the trees and set them whispering intimately. All about was the suggestion of calm and rest and happiness. Surely it had been a dream! There could have been no battle here.

This that had been a dream was changed into a horrid nightmare as the young officer advanced into the wood. About him lay the awful evidences. Coats, caps, weapons, bit of gear, all marked and emphasized with many, many shapeless, ghastly things. Here they lay, these integers of the line, huddled, jumbled. They had all the contortions, all the frozen ultimate agonies left for survivors to see and remember, so that they should no more go to war. Again, they lay so peacefully calm that all the lesson was acclaim for happy, painless war. Some lay upon their backs where they had turned, thrusting up a knee in the last struggle. Some lay face downward as the slaughtered fall. It was all a hideous and cruel dream. Surely it could be nothing more. It could not be reality. The birds gurgled and twittered. The squirrels barked and played. The sky was innocent. It must be a dream.

No Time for Kindness.

Don't you think the modern woman is in danger of getting so busy she has no time to be kind?" asked a sweet old lady the other day. "We hear so much about making every minute count and always having some work or course of study for spare hours and systematizing our activities that there is no room left for way-side kindnesses. We get so tremendously absorbed in our own affairs, so self-centered, so intent on not missing anything that is going on, that we pass by a thousand little gracious acts that, if we had been living fifty years that, instead of now, we should have thought of. It isn't only the lame, the halt and the blind that need our love. There are hundreds who never fall by the way or ask publicly for the cup of cold water, who yet are perishing for lack of it. I think the old-fashioned woman had the advantage over the so-called new woman in quickness of sympathy and responsiveness."—New York Tribune.

A Technical Point.

"You say your road carried a million passengers last year?"
"Yes, sir; and I can prove it."
"You can?"
"Yes, sir."
"Well, now, let's get right down to facts. Can you make two passengers out of one man?"
"Of course not."
"No doubt in some cases you've carried the same man fifteen or twenty times."
"Unquestionably."
"Well, does that make fifteen or twenty passengers of him?"
"No."
"In view of that, can you say that you've carried a million?"
But the railroad man retired angrily. He never did have any use for a technically exact man anyway.

Took Ellen's head upon her bosom.

Colonel Fairfax, the leader at the local bar, perhaps the representative in the legislature, or in some position of yet higher trust. The Beauchamps had always had men in the ranks of the professions or in stations of responsibility. They held large lands, and in the almost feudal creed of the times they gave large services in return.

It was considered a matter of course that young Henry Fairfax, son of Colonel Fairfax, should, after completing his studies at the ancient institution of William and Mary College, step into his father's law office, eventually to be admitted to the bar and to become his father's partner; after which he should marry Miss Ellen Beauchamp, loveliest daughter of a family noted for its beautiful women. So much was this taken for granted, and so fully did it meet the approval of both families, that the tide of the young people's plans ran on with little to disturb its current. Young Fairfax seemed so perfectly to represent the traditions of his family, and his future seemed so secure, and Mary Ellen herself, tall and slender, bound to be stately and of noble grace, seemed so eminently fit to be a Beauchamp beauty, and a Fairfax bride.

For the young people themselves it may be doubted if there had yet awakened the passion of genuine, personal love. They met, but, under the strict code of that land and time, they never met alone.

For two years Colonel Fairfax had been with his regiment, fighting for what he considered the welfare of his country and for the institutions in whose justice he had been taught to believe. There remained at the old Fairfax home in Louisiana only the wife of Colonel Fairfax and the son Henry, the latter chafing at a part which seemed to him so obviously ignominious. Spirited and proud, restive under comparisons which he had never heard but always dreaded to hear, Henry Fairfax begged his mother to let him go, though still she said, "Not yet."

But the lines of the enemy tightened ever about Louisiana. Then came a day—a fatal day—fraught with the tidings of what seemed a double death. The wife of Colonel Fairfax was stricken, she died, and she was buried, her husband and sent away her son. There were yet traditions to support.

Henry Fairfax said good-bye to Mary Ellen upon the gallery of the old home, beneath a pale, white-faced moon, and the odors of the drooping honey-on. They had seen how small a thing is life, how easily and swiftly to be ended.

In front of the trenches were other regiments, out ahead in the woods, unseen, somewhere toward that place whence came the steadiest jarring of artillery and the loudest rattling of the bass-drums. It was very hard to lie and listen, to imagine, to suspect, to dread. For hours the game went on, the reserves at the trenches hearing now distinctly and now faintly the tumult of the line, now receding, now coming on.

These young men, who but lately had said good-bye to the women of their kin, began to learn what war might mean. It had been heretofore a distant, unmeasured, undreaded thing, conquerable, not to be feared. It seemed so sweet and fit to go forth, even though it had been hard to say good-bye.

Now there began to appear in the woods before the trenches the figures of men, at first scattered, then becoming steadily more numerous. There came men bearing other men whose arms lopped loosely. Some men walked with a hand gripped tightly to an arm; others hobbled painfully. Two men sometimes supported a third, whose head, heavy and adrop, would now and then be kept erect with difficulty, the eyes staring with a ghastly, sheepish gaze, the face in a look of horrified surprise. This awful rabble, the parings of the defeated line, in front, dropped back through the woods, dropped back upon the young reserves, who lay there in the line. Some of them could go no farther, but fell there and lay silent. Others passed back into the fields where drenched the protesting bees, or where here and there a wide tree offered shelter. Suddenly all the summer air was filled with anguish and horror. Was this, then, the War?

And now there appeared yet other figures among the trees, a straggling, broken line, which fell back, halted, stood and fired always calmly, coolly, at some unseen thing in front of them. But this line resolved itself into individuals, who came back to the edge of the wood, methodically picking their way through the abattis, climbing the intervening fences, and finally clambering into the earthworks to take their places for the final stand. They spoke with grinning respect of that which was out there ahead, coming on. They threw off their coats and tightened their belts, making themselves comfortable for what time there yet remained.

At last there came a continued,

How a Farmer was freed from Misery

WORTHY of a higher recommendation than I can find words to express. This is what Mr. J. H. Flangman (of Sherman, Tex.) says of Doan's Kidney Pills. He tells his experience in the following words: He says, "Sometime in September I was taken with a dull aching pain across the small of my back, directly over the kidneys. I paid small attention to this at first, thinking it would pass off. But instead of getting better it became worse and in a short time the pain centered through my left hip and down my left leg as far as the knee." This is precisely what kidney trouble will do with the body.

It does not always show itself at first, but appears just in this way, when some unusual movement or action brings sharp pains and exhaustive aches, and telling of sick kidneys.

So Mr. Flangman's experience bore this out. Continuing, he says: "I did not know the cause of the trouble, but I am led to believe now that it was first brought about by jumping in and out of the wagon and in some way I may have strained my back."

"I was constantly growing worse," he continues, "and I became very much alarmed about my condition. I knew that something had to be done or serious results were sure to follow. I went to a specialist here in Sherman, and underwent a rigid examination."

Then he relates how the doctor told him that it was a serious case, but that he could cure him for fifty dollars.

However, necessity knows no law and Mr. Flangman paid half down and took the treatment and followed it faithfully for four weeks.

Naturally, he thought that he would soon be rid of the trouble, but in spite of the doctoring he goes on to add, "I was in such misery that it was almost impossible for me to do my work."

"It was at this juncture that Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and I procured some from the drug store of C. E. Craycroft. I used these pills according to directions and to my surprise I was considerably relieved on the second day and in a short time completely cured."

This is the universal experience of those who have been sufferers from kidney trouble and who have been fortunate enough to test the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills.

There is nothing wonderful or magical about this remedy, it simply does the work by direct action on the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only and this accounts for their speedy and certain action.

Early indications of kidney trouble come from two sources, the back and the bladder. The back becomes weak and lame because the kidneys are sick, and relief from backache can only be complete when the kidneys are set right.

Irritation of the bladder shows that the kidneys are out of order. Prompt relief often causes serious complication.

Relieve and cure sick kidneys and ward off dangerous diabetes, drowsed dropsy and Bright's disease, by using Doan's Kidney Pills.

They begin by healing the delicate membranes and reducing any inflammation of the kidneys, and thus making the action of the kidneys regular and natural.

Aching backs, eye spots, Hip, back, and leg pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs, rheumatism and dropsy signs vanish.

They correct urinal with brick-dust sediment, high-colored, excessive, pain in passing, dribbling, frequency. Doan's Kidney Pills dissolve and remove calcium and gravel. Relieve heart palpitation, sleeplessness, headache, nervousness.

W. C. T. U.

The children's hour was a bright feature of the recent district convention of the W. C. T. U. Credit for this is due to Misses McKinnon and Hunter, teachers in our public school—the former for the recitations and the latter a pretty little drill. Mrs. G. W. Stephens and Misses Pearl and Winnie Joffe trained the children in their music. The orchestra, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Quackenbush, Lewis Cable and son Arthur, and Mr. Beatty, was enjoyable, and but for the necessity for haste, the encores of the audience would have met with a response.—Supt. Press.

AMERICAN OYSTERS THE BEST.

United States Leads Easily in the Matter of Sea Foods.

In the part of Australia in which I live we get oysters as big as a saucer," said Mr. Thomas Lewis of Adelaide, to the Washington Post. "They are twice the size of any I have seen in the United States, but in quality there is nothing to recommend them, for they have no flavor, and are so tough that it takes a pretty sharp knife to make any impression on them. Still, there are people who manage to eat them after they have been stewed sufficiently long. In other parts of our country we have a better grade, approaching nearly to your American oyster, but hardly its equal. In fact, after my acquaintance with the Chesapeake bay products, I am firmly of the opinion that in the matter of sea food the United States leads all nations, an assertion that will be backed up by any man of wide travel."

SUBDUING OF A TERROR.

One Position in Which Even the Bravest of Men Quail.

He would terrorize the neighbors in a most outrageous way, uroke the wide world's standing records in athletics every day; while in pugilistic circles he could wipe men in the dust, and show master tricks at fencing—laugh at every cut and thrust. He slew tigers in the jungle, and scalped Redskins on the plain. He chased lions across the mountains and harpooned upon the main. He could break a bucking broncho, yes, and rope a Texan steer; sling a bowie knife or hatchet, throw the boomerang or spear. In hairbreadth escapes he gloried, did this worthy son of Mars. And he'd lick his weight in wildcats—kick them higher than the stars. But his shoes were in his pocket and his face was ghastly white; he was silent as an oyster when he climbed the stairs at night.

A Remarkable Watch. In one of the chief watchmaking establishments in Zurich there is a we seem a remarkable curiosity in the way of watch or clock making. The timepiece is in the form of a ball, which moves imperceptibly down an inclined surface without rolling. The length of this inclined surface, which is sixteen inches long, is accomplished from top to bottom in twenty-four hours. Then the "ball" only needs lifting to the top again. This extraordinary timepiece has no spring, and therefore needs no winding. The "hands" are kept in motion by the sliding along an inclined plane.—London Globe.

Honor the American Hen.

Permit us to indulge in a few cheers for the American hen. As a student of the census figures has shown, the poultry and eggs produced and consumed in the United States last year were worth more than all the silver and gold mined in the world during the year. The egg and poultry product exceeds in value the wheat crop of twenty-eight of the most productive states of the union. Let us honor the hen. She is an important member of American industrial society.

Society of the Dilletanti.

An interesting old organization which formerly existed in London—the Dilletanti society—originated with certain gentlemen who, having traveled in Italy, tried to encourage at home what they had enjoyed abroad. This society of lovers of the fine arts lasted 130 years. Walpole does not seem to have looked upon it with a very favorable eye, for he says: "The nominal qualification was to have been to Italy, the real one was being drunk."

Dugald in Edinburgh.

Dugald McTavish, when on a visit to Edinburgh, was taken by a fellow-Highlander to see the sights of the city. The visitor was thirsty and determined to give Donald, his guide, a hint as to his condition. Consequently on passing a bonded warehouse, he said: "Donald, what wad pe in these barrels?" "What wud pe in them but whusky?" replied the guide. "Then," said Dugald, "I wish I was a parrel."—Scottish American.

He Could Hardly Get Up.

P. H. Duffy of Ashley, Ill., writes "This is to certify that I have taken two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure and it has helped me more than any other medicine. I tried many advertised remedies, but none of them gave me any relief. My druggist recommended Foley's Kidney Cure and it has cured me. Before commencing its use I was in such a shape that I could hardly get up when once down." Hubbell's Pharmacy.

PROPER USE OF THE LUNGS.

Writer Asserts That Few Persons Understand How to Breathe.

Mr. Ryder talks entertainingly, and with apparent certainty. "Three times every minute," he declares, "the blood makes a complete circuit of the system, carrying oxygen to the tissues, and coming back to the lungs laden with poison." One-third of all the poison generated by the body is excreted through the lungs. The remainder is, normally, carried off by the bowels, skin and kidneys. People often talk of needing a change of air. What they need is not so much a change of air as a change in their manner of using the air they have. Most people in breathing use only a small portion of the lungs. A recent investigator makes the startling statement that in an examination covering several thousand cases, he found less than 1 per cent. that breathed correctly.

READING AS A SCIENCE.

The Acquisition of Knowledge Properly Portioned Out.

Edith Wharton writes: "The mechanical reader, as he always reads consciously, knows exactly how much he reads, and will tell you so with the pride of the careful housekeeper who has calculated to within half an ounce the daily consumption of food in her household. As the housekeeper is apt to go to market every day at a certain hour, so the mechanical reader has often a fixed time for laying in his intellectual stores; and not infrequently he reads for just so many hours a day. The statement in one of Hamerton's youthful diaries, 'I shall now commence a course of poetical reading, beginning with fifty hours of Chaucer, and I gave him one and one-half hours last night it leaves me exactly forty-eight and one-half,' is a good example of this kind of reading."

Bird and Man Flight.

No amount of study nor the carefulst anticipation of conditions that science can secure out take the place of the hereditary instinct that enables the bird to maintain its equilibrium at first flight. This is the principal reason why progress in aeronautics is so slow. Practically all the mechanical problems have been worked out over and over again, and the solutions tested in every way that science knows. But one equation remains to be solved and that is the human equation. By short and hazardous experimentary flights the inventors must learn what is lacking to complete their labors.

About Women.

A woman who marries a second time runs two risks; she may regret that she lost her first husband or that she did not always have the second one. But, in the first case, her second husband may regret her first husband even more than she does, and tell her so, too. The woman who looks amiable and cheerful is naturally beautiful, far more so than a woman with irreproachable sculptural outlines and features so regular that she makes you wish she had some redeeming defect or other. Perfection was attractive in ancient Greece; it is not now.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Scholastic Rabbits.

A company of scholars going together to catch rabbits had one scholar with them who had not much more wit than he was born with and him they cautioned to be silent if he saw any rabbits for fear of scaring them. But he saw a company of rabbits before the rest and cried out in Latin: "Behold, many rabbits!" He had no sooner said this than the rabbits ran to their burrows. Being reproved by his companions for it, he answered: "Who the devil would have thought that the rabbits understood Latin?"

The Voice of Experience.

"Not for me?" said the sharper when the guileless countryman was pointed out to him; "never again for me. The man with the carpetbag looks like a mark, but the last one I tackled sold me a coupon ticket for seventeen gallons of mineral water from a spring on his place and never took my gold brick. When you get down to facts you can land a city man who thinks he knows it all a good deal easier than you can the country man who knows he doesn't."

June and December.

That youth of thine. Dear love, I do remember. Though thy blue eyes no longer shine With June's delight, and pale December Hath heaped her snows upon thee; But still thou dost remember The gentleness that won me.

Thou art the same.

As when I first beheld thee. For youth, forsooth, is but a name; And all the graces that impelled thee Have so exalted duty That youth hath never excelled thee In perfectness of beauty.—Louise Morgan Still in Harper's Weekly.

Dances Sold by Auction.

A custom that has existed for several centuries is still maintained in some towns on the Lower Rhine. Early in the year—on auction day—the town crier or clerk calls all the young people together, and to the highest bidder sells the privilege of dancing with the chosen girl, and her only, during the entire year that follows. The fees flow into the public poor-box.

The Secret of Success.

A countrywoman remarked to her neighbor during a conversation on their return from market. "How is it, Mary, that you have been married four times, and I've never been married at all, and I'm much handsomer than you?" "Aye, to be sure," returned Mary, "but it ain't handsomeness that does it, Sarah; it's the 'come hither' in your eye."

FAMOUS OLD RABY CASTLE.

Long Ago the Stronghold of the Warlike Nevilles.

Raby castle, the seat of Lord Barnard, is a famous old structure. On the ground floor is a mighty hall into which one might drive a coach. Above it runs a dining chamber, nicely fest in length and thirty-six in breadth. It remains to-day as it stood in the days when the barons for whose entertainment it was fashioned were almost the paramount power in the land. Seven hundred of the mightiest and noblest in the kingdom dined simultaneously in this hall when the warlike Nevilles were established at Raby castle. The ancient chamber is good for as many to-day and there is accommodation enough for the cooking. The kitchen is a square of thirty feet, with an oven so huge that at one time it was converted into a wine cellar, the sides being divided into ten parts, each side holding a hoghead of wine in bottles.

FROM FRIEND TO ENEMY.

Transition That is All Too Easy of Accomplishment.

"How little we know what is behind the smiling masks of flesh and blood which are really all that we can see of our dearest friends!" said a woman. "De Montesquieu tells us that if we 'scratch a Russian we find a Tartar,' but it is a criticism that in a way applies to every one, for it needs only a little abrasion to transform our former intimates into hostile acquaintances, and we can hardly recognize the people whom we once so much liked in the 'Tartars' whom a slight scratch has so completely changed. We fail to ask ourselves which is the real person, the friend whom we formerly knew or the individual who seems so entirely different. It behooves us, therefore, to walk warily and refrain from jostling our companions if we would keep to our friendships."—London Telegraph.

Cure for the Blues.

(Specially adapted to Monday morning readings.) I'll tell you a cure for the worst case of blues That ever drove man to commingle with booze. I've tried it myself quite as numerous times As I've fingers and toes or occasion for rhymes. 'Tis this: When a purging horizon I see, I jolly some fellow that's bluer than me.

You never have felt in your life, I'll assert, So deep and so strong a sensation of hurt. But if you sought 'mid the men that you knew, You'd find some poor devil whose tinting of blue Would make your own color seem tame by its side— So try on this rule I so often have tried.

When next the blue devils have camped on your trail, And all you can see for yourself is to fall, Just hustle around till you find some poor cuss Who's muddled to death with some terrible mussy— Just size up his trouble, forget you are blue, And jolly the fellow that's bluer than you.—S. W. Gillman in the Baltimore American.

His Ambition Realized.

"At last, after forty years of hard work, my highest ambition is about to be realized," said a worthy fellow citizen who began on a capital of brains and push and is now counting his wealth in seven figures. "I have bought a house before whose doors nearly every parade of consequence will pass. I can sit in the window night or day and see the crowds go by, hear the cheering and listen to the music of the bands without having myself squeezed flat by my toes trodden upon, my clothes disarranged, my hat knocked off and all that sort of thing. Ever since I was old enough to run 'away from home to witness a procession I have envied the possessors of doors or windows along the line of arch, and at last I'm happy."

An Ancient Invention.

Archimedes of Syracuse, when he was in Egypt, invented the earliest machine for pumping bilge water out of the holds of ships. The instrument was also used in the Delta for purposes of irrigation. Diodorus Siculus twice refers to it in his writings. A curious model of such an instrument, probably of the late Ptolemaic period, has been found in Lower Egypt. It consists of a terra-cotta cylinder with a screw inside it, ten inches long and four and a half inches in diameter. Near the center of the outside is a band with cross-pieces. These may represent footholds, and suggest that the machine was worked after the manner of the treadmill. Such screws were probably made of wood.

Beauty and the Beast.

A strange affair happened in a village on the Lake of Constance. A local photographer, wishing to obtain an original design for an illustration post-card, persuaded a young girl, the village beauty, to pose with a camera long to a wandering stranger. The photograph was to represent the girl caught in the act of kissing a beast. The bear gave the girl a frightful embrace that she fell senseless. It was some time before she was revived, but, fortunately, no bones were broken.—London Mail.

Some Pertinent Questions.

When you see a young man flaunting his quickly gained wealth in your face, just ask yourself, "How much did he lose in getting it? How much of himself has he parted with in exchange for the money? Does it pay to sell one's manhood and character in order to get rich a little faster? Isn't it safer to take the slower and approved method? Doesn't a youth lose unless his hits is square and clean, no matter what money he gets?"—Success.
