Delayed Justice.

There are at present said to be over eighty prisoners in the Wayne county jail awaiting trial on some criminal charge or other, and every day seems to add to the number. Some of these prisoners have been confined for weeks and months without being given an opportunity to prove their innocence or make any defense, and the newspapers of the city are properly cudgeling the prosecuting officers for their seeming indifference in the matter. The expense of maintaining the prisoners foots up quite a bill and some action is demanded.

The Free Press of Wednesday editorially alludes to the state of affairs as follows: From time to time the police and prosecutor are seized with the belief that the city is in need of a spectacular demonstration of the majesty of the law. Thereupon a criminal is arrested, arraigned, tried, convicted and sent to the penitentiary within a few hours after the offense was committed, and the responsible officials settle back to admire the expeditious methods they have adopted in a specific case. One of these theatrical effects has just been achieved in the case of Joseph Muenier, who murdered his mistress Saturday and was taken to the penitentiary Monday. There was no doubt of Muenier's guilt, and the penitentiary is the place for him; but there was no occasion for official hysterics. There are prisoners in the county jail who have been waiting months for trial; and it is better to dispose of all these cases regularly and in order. The administration of the law gains nothing in dignity and impressiveness by adopting the tricks of the cheap theatre. No public lesson is taught by railroading an occasional criminal into the penitentiary. What is demanded more than anything else is the speedy and impartial trial of all persons accused of crime, and the prompt administration of justice in all cases. There is nothing particularly impressive in a speedy vindication of the law every two or three years; it is the speedy vindication of the law six days in the week and fifty-two weeks in the year that makes for the restraint of the criminally disposed.

Important News From All Parts of Michigan

Happenings of the Week Chronicled Briefly For Busy Readers

Titles of Bills.

In the quo warranto proceedings of the Kent county board of supervisors to determine the validity of the law creating a county board of auditors, the supreme court reversed the decision of the circuit court and ordered judgments of ouster entered against the present auditors. The court made a ruling of interest as to the sufficiency of the titles of bills introduced in the legislature. In this case the original bill providing for a board of auditors for Jackson county. The committee reported out this bill amended and over the bill creating a county board in Kent county. The court says that the substitute appeared to be a clear evasion of the constitutional provisions governing the introduction and passage of bills.

Horses Frozen to Death.

Farmers near Climax found a herd of 35 horses in fearful suffering from the cold on a farm six miles from the town. A half dozen of the poor animals were dead in the field and more will die. The surviving beasts were found with their tongues hanging out of their mouths. The brook from which they might have gotten water was frozen over with ice several inches thick. The horses had gnawed through the fence in places around the field in desperate attempts to get out for food. The farmers brought the case to the attention of Prosecuting Attorney Jackson, who sent an officer to investigate. The neighbors say the horses were left over from a drove shipped from the west to Wilber B. Snow, ex-state food commissioner.

Hogus Nickel Makers.

In a little house, several miles north of the village, North Adams, Howard Gray and Carleton W. Main set up a counterfeiting machine in which they used habit alloy, old spoons and lead to manufacture the coins that recently filled the slot machines in Hillsdale. Usually the men patronized only the nickel machines, but often they flattened their hogus coins to make them serve in the more pretentious quarter machines. It is also believed that they circulated some counterfeit half dollars. When the two operators heard of the arrest of their chief, Goodwin, they broke their dies and tried to escape, but the officers soon found the presses of the machines and traced the men.

Prisoners of the State.

The labor commissioner's report shows that on December 1 last, when the census was taken, there were 3,114 inmates in the seven penal institutions of the state, a net decrease of 183 in five years. The enrollment in each of the institutions was as follows: Jackson state prison, 718; Ionia reformatory, 397; branch prison at Marquette, 244; Detroit house of correction, 438; state asylum for the criminally insane at Ionia, 284; Industrial school for boys at Lansing, 479; Industrial home for girls at Adrian, 363. The total cost of clothing and feeding these convicts is $405 a day or an average of 13 cents.

Stock Starving.

Daniel R. Granger, a wealthy baconer farmer, living in Clayton township, is under arrest on a charge of cruelty to animals, preferred by his neighbors. They declared that Granger has kept his horses, cattle, hogs and sheep turned out in the barn yard with the thermometer registering 20 below zero, and has given them no feed. The hogs became so hungry that they attacked each other. Five were killed. The cries of the hungry horses and cows at night disturbed the entire community.

His Wishes Fulfilled.

Charles J. Warner, father of Editor Warner, of the Pottersville Press, who died at the home of his son, made a request that his remains be kept until his friends were sure he would not be buried alive. For this reason his funeral was not held until six days after his death. Another request that he made before dying was that his son should be one of the speakers at his funeral and Editor Warner accompanied the remains to Maple Rapids to carry out the request.

Girlswald Is Out.

Dr. Roy W. Griswold, who was convicted of manslaughter in causing the death of Agnes Eberstein, and sentenced to two years in the Ionia reformatory on January 7, 1903, has been pardoned by Gov. Bliss. E. T. Bennett, the Bay City editor, convicted of the same charge in the same case, is still in prison. The pardon board says they are satisfied the crime was committed in Detroit.

Davis' Cuts Walk.

Thomas Davis, aged 19, was found on the streets of Flint Thursday night by Fire Chief Rose and given shelter at the jail. He said he had walked from Saginaw, 33 miles, and was heading for Detroit. Davis was severely frosted on his trunk. He is an epileptic and was afraid to steal a ride on a train because of the danger of falling under the cars in a fit.

Three Killed.

By the blowing out of a steam pipe on the boiler at the Metropolitan hotel, Detroit, Friday morning, George Vincent, engineer; William Kupp, fireman, and Frank Casper, an employee of the Brunswick hotel, were so badly scalded that they died a little after noon. The pipe which blew out was one which fitted into an elbow, and when it gave way the place was flooded with steam.

Only two houses were left standing after fire swept over Hollandale, Miss. The loss is $200,000.

Natives Need Tanning.

Official advices have reached Washington from San Domingo and Port au Prince showing a distressing condition of affairs in San Domingo and Haiti. Business is declared to be almost at a standstill, in both countries, and foreigners have well nigh exhausted their patience in endeavoring to maintain friendly relations with the natives. Dispatches from St. Thomas, D. W. I., say former President Jimenez has received supplies which will enable him to continue his fight against Morales. There has been hard fighting around Monte Cristi and Santiago de los Caballeros. Hundreds of men have been killed and business is paralyzed.

Married His Step-Daughter.

Ephraim Wycoff, of Berrien Springs, is now in the county jail, charged with having married the 15-year-old daughter of his former wife, who died a few years ago. To secure the license it is alleged that he committed perjury. The girl became a mother a week ago and the case so aroused the community that they asked for an investigation which resulted in his arrest.

Opens Parliament.

King Edward opened parliament Tuesday with all the ceremonial that has been in vogue since his accession to the throne. None of the familiar outdoor features was lacking. The weather conditions, however, were too depressing to permit of much enthusiasm. The king read his speech from the throne, touching briefly on the trials in the far east.

The News of the World Told by the Telegraph

Items of Current Interest Gathered From All Parts of the New and the Old World

Died in the Desert.

The bodies of between 20 and 30 men who perished from thirst while attempting to cross the desert between Moama and Las Vegas, Nevada, have been found within a few weeks, according to advices received from the latter place. The men, it is believed, were mostly tramps who attempted to make the long journey on foot without sufficient supplies of food and water to carry them across. Many of the bodies found were without clothing, and it was believed the victims had gone insane from thirst and had wandered about in a nude condition in search of water. Some of the victims are supposed to have drunk water from "Dead Man's Well," which is located almost in the center of the desert. The water from this well, while temporarily alleviating thirst, is sure death to those who drink it.

Across the Isthmus.

American warships have been signaling to each other, a distance of fifty miles, by searchlight rays, over and across the mountains of the Isthmus of Panama. The cruiser Dixie, lying at anchor in Limon Bay, off Colon, on the Atlantic side, has been able to spell out the letters of a message by throwing the searchlight on the clouds so that the officers of the monitor Wyoming, lying at anchor off Panama, on the Pacific side of the Isthmus, could read and understand, and the answer has been sent back via the sky in the same manner.

Communication has been maintained in the same way between Colon and whatever warship has been on guard at Porto Bello, sixteen miles further down the coast.

The officers in the interior have been much amused and not a little frightened by the brilliant light rays during back and forth from horizon to zenith and back to earth again.

Learned to Keep Cool.

Notwithstanding recent experience with smoke and flame, tenants of the Chicago Masonic Temple failed to scare Friday when a fire broke out in the Cosmopolitan building, adjoining. The occupants of the Cosmopolitan made a hasty exit. On the upper stories of the Cosmopolitan, a number of women became hysterical, and, blinded by the smoke, made efforts to spring from the windows. Cooler heads, however, prevented this, and the women were carried down the fire escape. Miss Norma Verva was so severely burned that it is believed she cannot live. Chemicals she was mixing on the sixth floor exploded and caused the fire. In a dying condition she was carried down a fire escape by C. W. Randolph. Several other persons were burned, but not seriously.

The Girl Couldn't Go.

Dressed in her brother's clothes, and with her long brown hair cut short and crammed into a man's wig, May Bondel, 22 years old, of Terre Haute, Ind., applied to the recruiting sergeant at Fort Sheridan, Chicago, to be mustered into Co. I, which is ordered to join the Twentieth regiment in the Philippines as soon as it is at full strength. The girl broke down when informed that she must undergo the regular physical examination, and confessed her sex. Heart-broken at the thought of separation from her sweetheart, Carl Pfahm, who is a private in the company, she said that she tried to enlist as a man in order to accompany him and share his dangers.

The Great Treaty.

At a caucus of Democratic senators on Saturday all the speeches were favorable to the constitution of Columbia, and the feeling was expressed by a number of the speakers that an assurance of such a course on the part of the United States would secure the votes of a large majority of the Democratic senators for the treaty. There was also a feeling that there should be a cessation of speeches on the Panama question until replies are received to the resolutions of inquiry which already have been adopted.

Mayor Ames Out.

The Minnesota supreme court has quashed the indictment against former Mayor Ames, of Minneapolis, and the entire court held that the indictment was faulty. Judges Start, Collins and Lewis concurred in the majority opinion that the offense was not proven, while Judges Lovely and Brown disagreed with that part of the opinion of the majority. Dr. Ames was charged and convicted in the district court of Hennepin county of receiving money illegally as mayor of Minneapolis, from women.

Unsafe Hospitals.

Building Commissioner Williams, of Chicago, has notified those in charge of eight prominent hospitals that they must receive no new patients in their institutions until certain specified changes are made. The hospitals involved are: The Englewood, the Post-Graduate, the West Side, the Chicago Woman's, the Homeopathic, the Emergency, the Baptist and the Hering Medical College.

A shortage of $240,000 has been revealed by expert examination of the books of the Franklin bank of Cincinnati. Cashier Henry Burkhold is prostrated and cannot recover.

The war department has announced that by the latter part of next summer or early fall there will be enough new Springfield rifles on hand to equip the entire army and that this will be done as quickly as possible.

Condensed.

Three miles of coal barges, 37 in number, belonging to the Monongahela River Coal Co. and loaded with coal, are grounded and going to pieces on the Ohio, near Jeffersonville, Ind. Two hundred men are at work trying to save them. It is estimated the loss will be $500,000.

Rep. McClary of Minnesota has introduced a bill appropriating $100,000 for a statue of Abraham Lincoln in the city of Washington.

Rep. Otjen, of Wisconsin, introduced a resolution extending the thanks of congress to the people of Wisconsin for the statue of Marquette, which occupies a place in statuary hall in the capitol at Washington.

A proposed new article to the constitution has been introduced by Rep. McMillan, of New Jersey, prohibiting the incorporation by states of corporations to engage in business out side of the state.

Charges have been filed at the interior department against Bird S. McGuire, the delegate in the house from Oklahoma, charging that in violation of the law he has been prosecuting claims in behalf of Indians and accepting fees therefor while serving as a delegate in congress.

Cause of the Explosion.

Mine Inspector Cunningham is satisfied he has discovered the cause of the explosion at the Harwick, Pa., mine and the room in which it occurred. The inspectors find that the gas was lighted by a defective shot, one that was not properly tamped and which threw a bit of burning paper from the hole drilled in the coal. Near this point was found the lamp of Fire Boss J. A. Gordon, who was also the head shooter in the mine. The mine had given up 114 dead at noon Friday. Preparations are already making for an early resumption of work at the mine. The company expects to start again in two weeks, or as soon as the bodies have all been removed, the mine inspected and repairs made.

Ex-Secretary Whitney.

Septicemia was the cause of the death of Wm. C. Whitney, former secretary of the navy, who passed away Tuesday evening at his home, in New York, after a second operation for appendicitis. William Collins Whitney was born in Conway, Mass., July 15, 1841. He was of English descent, his ancestors having come to this country in 1635. In 1885 he became a member of President Cleveland's cabinet as secretary of the navy. He was one of the most efficient secretaries that ever held that office, and did much to put the navy in its present high standing. Since 1880 he had taken a prominent part in political campaigns.

No Double Mileage.

By a vote of 167 to 0 the house on Saturday decided that its members would not accept double mileage for the extraordinary and the present regular sessions of the fifty-eighth congress. This means that the government will be saved $149,000 and possibly $190,000, which would be the amount if the senators had been included in the arrangement, as would undoubtedly have been the case had the provision passed both branches.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

(From "Commemorative Ode," by JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.)

For him her old world molds aside she threw,
And, choosing sweet clay from the breast
Of the unexhausted west,
With stuff untainted shaped a hero new,
Wire, steadfast in the strength of God, and true.

His was no lonely mountain peak of mind,
Thrusting to thin air o'er our cloudy bars,
A sea mark now, now lost in vapors blind;
Broad prairie rather, genial, level lined.

Hawthorne's Pen Pictures of Abraham Lincoln.

The renowned writer, Hawthorne, once penned the following memorable sketch of Abraham Lincoln's character:

"Mr. Lincoln's whole physiognomy is a coarse one, but withal it is redeemed, illuminated, softened and brightened by a kindly though serious look out of his eyes, and an expression of only sagacity that seemed weighted with rich results of village experience. A great deal of native sense, no bookish cultivation, no refinement, honest at heart, and yet in some sort shy—at least endowed with a sort of tact and wisdom that are akin to craft and would impel him, I think, to take an antagonist in flank rather than to make a bull run at him right in front. But on the whole, I liked this sallow, queer, sagacious visage, with the homely human sympathies that warmed him; and for my small share in the matter would as lief have Uncle Abe for a ruler as any man who would have been likely to be put in his place."

Lincoln was a human being. He was not a god, although Mr. Pratt approvingly quoted from Mr. John Hay this absurd paragraph: "I consider Lincoln Republicanism incarnate, with all its faults and virtues, and in spite of some movements Republicanism is the sole hope of a sick world, so Lincoln, with all his follies, is the greatest character since Christ."

He may not have been that, but he was too great a man to be emasculated, toned down and falsified into a conventionalized puppet. His faults were a part of his rugged manhood and individuality. Paint him with his warts on; that is how he would have wished to be painted.

It must have been a pleasure to Mr. Pratt to have recorded the statements of an artist, a clergyman and of William H. Seward, that they never heard the President tell any anecdotes which could not have been repeated with propriety in the presence of ladies. "Nevertheless," said he, "the clergyman and the artist must have been comparative strangers to Lincoln, and Mr. Seward, if correctly quoted, was doubtless lying in the interest of what he conceived to be propriety. Hawthorne did not deem it necessary to dab a fig leaf over Lincoln's nudity of speech. He regrets that he himself had not lingered longer in the Presidential presence and see him cross his legs (which, I am told, is a very extraordinary performance), and hear him tell one of his electrical stories, for which he was so famous. A good many of these are afloat in the common talk of Washington and are certainly the aptest, prettiest and funniest little things imaginable; though, to be sure, they smack of the frontier freedom and would not always bear repetition in the drawing room."

Gov. Andrew G. Curtin was one of Pennsylvania's greatest men. He was twice elected governor during war times. Col. Alec McClure was the power behind the throne of Gov. Curtin. McClure was asked why he didn't run for governor of Pennsylvania himself, but replied: "It is better to own a governor than to be a governor." He turned Curtin against the administration, and three days before the battle of Gettysburg the governor, in a speech to the soldiers in the public square said: "Soldiers, remember, I promise you I will not play the administration at Washington on you." This angered Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, very much. He complained to Lincoln of the manner in which the Governor of Pennsylvania performed the orders of the War Department, complaining bitterly over the order and yet performing them. In other words, he kept the word of promise to the hope, but broke it to the ear.

Mr. Lincoln was a good judge of men, and quickly learned the peculiar traits of character of those with whom he had to deal. He pointed out a marked trait in Gov. Andrew G. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, who was earnest, able and untiring in keeping up the war spirit of his state, but was at times overbearing and exacting in his intercourse with the general government.

Upon one occasion he complained and protested more bitterly than usual and warned those in authority that the execution of the War Department orders in this state would be beset with difficulties and dangers.

The tone of the dispatches gave rise to an apprehension that he might not co-operate fully in the enterprise at hand. The Secretary of War, in anger, laid the dispatches before the President for advisory instructions. They did not disturb Mr. Lincoln in the least. In fact, they rather amused him. After reading all the papers he said, in a cheerful and reassuring tone, "Mr. Secretary, never mind these dispatches; they don't mean anything; just go right ahead. Gov. Curtin is like a boy I once saw at the launching of a ship. When everything was ready they picked out this boy and set him on the ship to knock away the trigger and let her go. At the critical moment everything depended on that boy. He had to do the job well, by a direct, vigorous blow, and then lie flat and keep still while the ship moved over him. The boy did everything right; but he yelled as if he were being murdered from the time he got under the keel until he got out. I thought the skin was all scraped off his back, but his hide was not touched."

"The master of the yard told me that this boy was always chosen for that job; that he did his work well; that he had never been hurt, but that he always squealed in that way. That's just the way," continued Mr. Lincoln. "That Gov. Andy Curtin does. Make up your mind that he is not hurt, that he is doing the work right, and pay no attention to his squealing. He only wants to make you understand how hard his task is."

Sometimes the President yielded to Secretary Stanton's judgment. Rev. Charles W. Heister, a Methodist minister, who still survives, had rather a "soft snap" as chaplain of a hospital in Philadelphia. His wife was very ill, and the Secretary of War had just ordered him to his post of duty at the Dry Tortugas, or some place equally unsatisfactory. Heister wanted the order rescinded. He saw Mr. Lincoln, explained the whole matter to the President, who said: "I think this preacher ought to be allowed to remain where he is."

Lincoln reached to a pigeon hole in his desk and took out a card, on which he wrote:

"Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War: If the exigencies of the service will permit, let up on Mr. Heister, and leave him where he is. A. Lincoln"

Rev. Heister went over to the War Office in high spirits. Stanton was in one of his uproarious humors. For the modern Carnot, in spite of his many virtues and his solid Presbyterianism, could, when angered, swear like a moss-trooper. He read Mr. Lincoln's card and said to the minister, "Go back and tell Mr. Lincoln I will be d—d if I will do what he requests." After the President had listened patiently to Stanton's message he said with a twinkle in his eye, "Well, I never did have much influence with this administration."

Rev. Mr. Heister resigned next day as chaplain in the United States service. The next time the writer saw the President the first thing he said was: "I did something this morning which has aroused the ire of Secretary Stanton. Congressman Dennison, of Pennsylvania, came to me with the mother of John Russell, a soldier who was to be shot within forty-eight hours for insubordination, and I gave a peremptory order pardoning the soldier and restoring him to his regiment. At a recent battle in the face of the enemy John Russell's captain ran away. When the battle was over, in which half of the company was lost, this soldier met his captain, and walking up to him, rifle in hand, he said: 'Captain ———, you are a d—d coward, and ought to be shot for cowardice.'"

"The captain pulled out his revolver and attempted to kill Russell. They were separated. The captain preferred charges of insubordination against the soldier, and a subservient court-martial sentenced Russell to be shot, and did not even censure the cowardly officer. Congressman Dennison has just given me all the facts of this case, and I have just made the poor mother happy by saying the boy, and I did more. I dismissed the cowardly captain from the army."

John Russell still lives to tell this story how the great head of the army and navy had saved his life. He enrolled at the end of his term of service and fought to the end of the war and still wears "his wounds and honors" a front.

Two boys, named Snyder and Ratcliffe, ran away from their parents, while under age, and enlisted in the navy. The parents got an interview with Mr. Lincoln. They told him the only fault the boys had was this one of disobedience to their parents.

"Well," he said, reaching for a blank card, "I think I can help you." He wrote to Secretary Welles: "Two United States don't need the services of boys who disobey their parents. Let both Snyder and Ratcliffe be discharged."

"A. LINCOLN."

This card is still retained by the parents of the runaway boys, and they often tell the tale as one of Mr. Lincoln's pranks.

In the congressional delegation from a western state were two members who were intensely jealous of each other. He listened to the hot contest between these two congressmen about the appointment of a big postmaster. He heard them patiently, and said: "I will take your papers and decide your case the last of the week. Your rivalries recall to my mind the intense feeling between two class leaders in Sangamon County Methodist Church. Farmer Jones was exceptionally gifted in prayer. Farmer Simpkins, Jones' neighbor, was a large land owner, who could not boast of a similar gift, but was known all over the country for his skill as a fiddler, which made him a welcome guest at every country 'hoe down.' Simpkins never concealed his jealousy of Jones' power when he appealed to the throne of grace. After a remarkably effective display of Jones' vigor and eloquence as a praying man at Wednesday evening service Jones seated himself. Simpkins walked up the aisle of the little frame church and began: 'Brethering and Sistering—I know very well that I can't begin to make half as good a brayer as old man Jones can, but, by the grace of God, I can fiddle the shirt off of him.'"

Gen. Campbell, of Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, was one of the ablest members of the Union side in Congress. He was a close friend of Jay Cooke, and vastly useful to him in his great enterprise, the Northern Pacific railroad. Gen. Campbell was much beloved by both Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Stevens, the grand old commander of Pennsylvania. Gen. Campbell said: "The last time I was in Washington I had a lovely interview with Abraham Lincoln." Mr. Campbell had just been Minister to Norway and Sweden. The President was in one of his brightest humors. He said to the general: "I am as happy to-day as if our army had won a victory over the rebels. Thaddeus Stevens brought me one of his constituents, a lady of sixty-five years old, with white hair. Her son, only 19 years of age, was sentenced to be shot to-morrow at noon for sleeping at his post. I took half the night to examine into the case. I cannot consent that a farmer lad, brought up to keep early hours in going to bed and in rising, shall be shot to death for being found asleep when he ought to have been awake. I pardoned the boy and I sent a messenger early this morning with the welcome news to the boy's regiment. The mother, like Niobe, all tears, has just left me, and as she went out, my heart came up in my throat, when, between her tears, she got up to old Thad Stevens, who had helped her to save her son's life, and sobbing, said: 'You told me Mr. Lincoln was ugly. How could you say that, Mr. Stevens? I think he has one of the most beautiful faces that I ever saw.' Then the President laughed his sweet, soft laugh, as merry as a boy, but there were tears in his eyes."

Mr. Lincoln's Philadelphia speech, on his way to his first inauguration, was the key to the unselfish and pathetic self-abnegation of a pure and lofty life, and he died as did the common soldier in battle, slain by a dastard in defense of the rights of man, imperishable and imperishable.—James Matlock Scovill to Cincinnati Enquirer.

Great Because Sincere.

Paul speaks of the Christians at Corinth as "epistles, known and read of all men." Each noble human life becomes a chapter in that larger Bible which is made up of the acts of the apostles of all time. Men who could not read an epistle in Greek or Aramaic could understand every jot and tittle of Christianity that found expression in men and women.

Thousands, nay, millions, doubtless have thus come to a clearer apprehension of real Christianity through the life of Abraham Lincoln than through Holy Scripture itself. He became to many minds a concrete illuminative beauty, purity and nobility of his character and conduct.

Lincoln was a great man because he was animated by a great principle. That principle gave him the fortitude to stand fast for right when he stood almost alone; it is imparted to him that noble and unselfish character which so easily forgave and cherished no resentment; that principle aroused within him an intense hatred of injustice; it fired his heart with that unquenchable ardor for liberty; that principle made him a great statesman, because it made him God's statesman, for he took his statesmanship not from the axioms of worldly policy, but from the teachings of the Word of God.

Here is the secret of that in him which shall compel the admiration of ages yet to come; he was saturated in mind and in spirit with the teachings of Jesus Christ.—Rev. Frank D. Burhans.

SUMMER RESORTS OF THE ROMANS

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)

When the summer reaches its height and the days are hot and the air is heavy, the dweller in Rome seeks for temporary coolness on the shores of the mediterranean. Along the western coast, from north to south, there are numerous seaside resorts, most of them occupying sites already rendered celebrated in ancient history as having been chosen by the wealthy patricians of Imperial Rome.

Notable as all the places on this coast are, there is perhaps none so beautiful by nature and so interesting in its memories as the shore that lies on either side of the little town of Porto d'Anzio, which has usurped the name and the site of the once celebrated Antium. Here the curve of the fretting sea."

The historian of Antium, Calcedonio Soffredini, notes that the Aufidius family was of Antium, and this is proved by many episodes of Roman history and by the inscription on stone regarding Q. Aufidius Frontone found amidst the ruins of the Temple of Esculapine, in which this god is described as presiding over Antium and as being the tutelary deity of the Aufidius family.

The first of the race, according to the same local historian, is said to have been that Attius Aulius, as Dionysius and Levy call him, or Tullius Aufidius, as Plutarch names him, and who reposed in his house at Antium the banished Coriolanus when exiled the coast is as gentle as the bend of a placid lake; the distant hills are exquisitely varied in outline and in color and the evening light reveals the white pearl-like cities on their heights; while away in the distance the lonely tower of Astura, and the farther promontory of Monte Circeo, complete the features of a view that in picturesqueness as well as in legend and story may well be deemed unique.

However small and mean Anzio may look now, it is a city that has a past, going back even into the legendary age. It is now a fishing village, and in the summer a bathing station. Modern villas, with the pretty attractions of the present day, line the curved shore that ends at Nettuno, a couple of miles away. As you walk along the flex bordered road between the two towns the sound of the piano is heard of an evening, and youthful voices are raised in song. Crowds flood the place on holidays.

Such is Anzio today; what it was in the past is suggested by its history, and by the remains of once noble mansions lining the shore and even invading the sea itself. On the other side of the little town is what has been described as a more interesting curve, the cliffs whereof are Roman masonry, from which sometimes shapeless masses have rolled like bowlders into the waters; but which sometimes present symmetrical recesses and deep arcades, kept clean washed by the waves when high; and occasionally rising lofty above their from Rome. The exiled noble having assumed the leadership of a Volscian army, conquered the confederate cities and threatened to destroy Rome itself. How the danger of Rome was avoided is told with much pathos by Shakespeare.

It is strange to think that Coriolanus should be legendary, and that Tullius Aufidius should be real. There must be reality in the founder of a family, for the name Aufidius of Antium endures for a period of no less than seven centuries. Cicero in his work, "De Oratore," warmly praises the ability of Onclus Aufidius in jurisprudence; another Aufidius fought in the Asiatic war under Sertorius, and being condemned to death by Pompey for conspiracy he sought refuge among the barbarians. In the inscriptions on tombs discovered on the Grabinia Prenestina Way, there is mention of a certain Aufidia Torquata Massima, and of an Aufidia Tuella Massima, both vestal virgins. The latest mention of the name in history is probably that of C. Vettius Aufidius Aticus, who was consul in the year A. D. 242.

All around Antium, between this "lovely city" and Rome, the whole country recalls to mind the story of Coriolanus as made familiar to modern readers by the great drama of the English poet. Here the very stage directions, or statement of scenery, assists the tale.

spray, retain such traces of ancient grandeur as time and man have spared.

And the traveler who so accurately and eloquently describes these remains adds that "to conjecture further the magnificence of this Neroian port, it is sufficient to say that the Apollo Belvedere of the Vatican was found among its ruins. And even now the shrine on which we walk is composed of broken and crumbled, marbles of every precious quality, ground, rounded and polished into pebbles, by that most industrious of lapidaries, the banishment of Coriolanus and its consequences. You know that the place where they met is near Antium, for the Volscian says: "You have well saved me a day's journey," and that is about the distance between the two cities.

Nearer still to Rome, on a solitary round hill on the southern slope of the Alban mount, a sort of fortified farmhouse is all that marks the site of the once glorious Corioli, whose armies threatened the very existence of Rome itself. Only one house to show where Corioli stood.

YOUNGSTER BROUGHT THEM TO.

Appeal for the Dog Saved Remnant of Buckwheat Cakes.

The crowd was discussing hospitality as each had enjoyed it in different sections of the country. North, South, East and West had been canvassed when it came to Congressman James M. E. O'Grady's turn to contribute.

"Well," said Mr. O'Grady, "I remember being up in New Brunswick on a fishing trip once, and for free-hearted people go up there. Everywhere you happen to be, you are asked to come in, sit down, and eat. It makes no difference whether the fare is good or poor, you are welcome, and no apologies will be made.

"I remember one place we went where apprehension was felt. We had called to get a drink of water, and as it was supper time we were gravely commanded to come in and sit down. Three or four children were ousted to make room for us. I remember they had some delicious buckwheat cakes with maple syrup, and the way we made them disappear was simply outrageous. At last one little tow-headed youngster could stand it no longer. He had observed us from the kitchen window, where he stood beside a big dog. The pup had his fore feet on the window sill, and looked every bit as disconsolate as his young master.

"Say, Mist'ers, hain't you going to leave one for the dog?" piped the youngster. And we came to."—New York Times.

HARMONY A MATTER OF TIME.

Some Facts That Plighted Lovers Should Remember.

The harmonizing of the personalities of even the best mated couples is usually a work of time. Before they can learn readily to make those little concessions which keep two natures in harmony there is generally more or less twanging of false chords, and if these false notes can be eliminated before marriage so much the better. Besides it is more difficult to sink one's pride before marriage than after, and the object lesson is, accordingly, the more valuable, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Quarrels, it should be remembered, are ill which fall to the lot of most of us. They should be treated carefully and quickly, as one treats a cut finger. Neglected, a cut finger may lead to serious complications, endangering one's life. In the same way little quarrels may endanger one's life happiness.

All lovers quarrel, but some make the foolish mistake of parting at once without allowing time for reflection. If two people become separated and can still think with affection of each other after two or three years' absence they are fitted to marry. It is foolish and absurd to allow pride to stand in the way.

Love renewed is better than first love, more sincere. It is love that is refined by years of reflection and is the golden output of a pure affection.

Too Much Like a Real "Rip."

Forty years have passed since Joseph Jefferson made a prolonged and brilliantly successful tour in Australia. It was, indeed, in Melbourne, Sydney and the gold fields that he made his first great hit as Rip Van Winkle, which has ever since been the leading character in his repertory. He has never recrossed the equator, although handsome offers for another Australian tour have repeatedly been submitted to him. In reply to another of these invitations, Mr. Jefferson, who is now in his seventy-fifth year, wrote recently: "I was four years in Australia and the kind reception given me by its generous people and the dear friends I made while in Melbourne and Sydney will never be forgotten by me. Some years ago I had an idea of returning, but when I thought of the many friends who had joined the great majority and how like a real Rip Van Winkle I should feel on walking through the streets unknown and forgotten my heart failed me."

A Dangerous Weed.

While the improvement clubs are giving attention to the removal of unsightly weeds they should not forget the most noxious of all, the widows' weeds, which overrun and infest the whole city. If the Thousand Widows' Association could be induced to lay aside crepe and then chirk up a bit, it would no doubt be a heavy blow to the undertakers, but it would act like a tonic to many people who come here to regain health. If you cannot help mourning, do it in the privacy of your own home, but give to the world smiles and bright tints. Assumed mourning—and crepe and bombazine is nothing else—is an offense to religion, sanitary science and common sense. Destroy the widows' weeds.—Ralph Elliot Field's "Wealth."

Romance of Vienna.

A romantic incident in connection with the untimely end of the young Count von Harbuval, who died the other day as the result of an accident, has just come to light in Vienna. Seeing that his end was near, he sent for Miss Wanda Blaszczak, a popular music hall artist, and married her, after first drawing up a will leaving her all his fortune. He was too near death to sign either the marriage record or the will, but the officiating priest and the lawyers present certifi- cally the mark he was, and he made while his hand was guided. The count died a few hours afterward. He had an income of $60,000 a year. His widowed mother and sisters will probably attack the validity of both the marriage and the will.

While there has been some talk about the removal of the postoffice to the bank building to be vacated soon, there will be nothing definite known until Uncle Sam can be consulted in the matter, and he may veto the whole proposition.

By unaccountable reason a notice of the marriage of Orlo L. Brown and Miss Maude Vrooman was omitted last week. The marriage took place in Detroit and Mr. and Mrs. Brown are congratulated by their many friends over the happy event.

Miss Angeline Mead, violin teacher. For terms apply at home of Chauncey Baker.

The new electric lights were turned on for the first time last week Thursday night at a public entertainment in the opera house. A cluster of eight is arranged in the center of the auditorium, with others for the stage, hallway, etc. The new light gives great satisfaction to the populace, and we now have a darkened room when the play goes on on the stage, just like city theaters. Nothing like being up-to-date.

Supt. Halstead, of the Detroit, division of the Pere Marquette, has, with the approval of General Supt. A. M. Smith, appointed J. L. Hayes as trainmaster on that part of the line from Toledo to Saginaw and the branch from Flint to Fostoria. Heretofore Mr. Halstead has been getting along with one trainmaster, but as the duties were too heavy, the road has given him another man. Mr. Hayes has been yardmaster at Toledo. He will be succeeded there by the present night man at Toledo. J. W. Steadman, at present night man at Plymouth, will succeed the night man at Toledo. Mr. Hayes will have his headquarters in Plymouth.

NOTICE.—Having sold our furniture and undertaking business to Schrader Bros., we wish all persons having accounts with us to call and settle at once.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ruthuff, of Fargo, N. D., are visiting at James Pattison's. Although coming from the land of blizzards, Mr. and Mrs. Ruthuff think the weather of Michigan is severe enough for them. They were former residents of this vicinity, but went west some fifteen years ago.

A regular old Dakota blizzard struck the State Tuesday afternoon and Plymouth got its share of it. The snow was piled up in great drifts and packed as hard as sand almost. It was the worst weather experienced here this winter. Trains were all late from half an hour to eight hours. If the traditional ground-hog came out of his burrow and saw his shadow, we don't blame him if he crawled back into his hole for another snooze.

Escaped an awful Fate.

Mr. H. Haggins, of Melbourne, Fla., writes, "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. The offer of a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, induced me to try it. Results were startling. I am now on the road to recovery and owe all to Dr. King's New Discovery. It surely saved my life." This great cure is guaranteed for all throat and lung diseases by Jno. L. Gale and Wolverine Drug Co. Price 50c & 1.00. Trial Bottles free.
