NOTICE.

I hereby resolve that the only way boys and girls can keep sweet is by eating GOOD Candy. That's firstly. Secondly, the ONLY place to get it, is at Mrs. Hickmott's Kandy Kitchen, Hoops block.

Yours truly,
BUSTER BROWN.

P. S.—Tige wishes the public to sympathize with him since his plea for some of the good candy has gone unheeded, because of the capacity I have for the confections bought at that Kandy Kitchen.

BUSTER.

We can convince you in ten minutes that a Garland, the Stove with the revolving Firepot, is so far in advance of other stoves that you will wonder how the other fellow finds a buyer for his stove at any price, and mind you, while a Garland costs more to make, costs the dealer more by ten per cent than any standard make, it don't cost you one penny more to buy, nor as much as some dealers ask for inferior makes. That's pretty plain, but it's the straight from the shoulder truth—and that's what you want.

The Revolving Firepot you'll Find Only on the Garland,

Remember that—and it's worth the price of one ton of coal every year you use it. Look out for one thing, if you ask dealers selling other makes of stoves, if their stove has a revolving firepot you'll probably be told "yes." They hate to admit their stove is not up-to-date. They'll probably "take hold of the firepot and give it a turn to show you that it revolves;" look at it, then it will do you good to see a scientifically constructed revolving firepot—a firepot that's made in two pieces, instead of one—and it's made so you can have a clean heat-producing fire by a "simple twist of the wrist." No dust, no muss, no fuss, just heat—all there is in the coal that you pay your money for.

Old Parliament House, Dublin, Where New Irish Council May Meet.

The old Parliament House in Dublin, in which, it is expected, the new Irish council, or parliament, soon to be erected, will hold its sessions, is one of the historic buildings of the old world. It stands in what is known as College Green, and is placed nearly at right angles with the west front of Dublin University. At present the structure is used as the head offices of the Bank of Ireland, but before its rooms were arranged for banking purposes the apartments of the old Parliament House were spacious and eminently fitted for the purposes for which they had been constructed. The room where the house of commons met was circular in form and about fifty-five feet in diameter. All around the commons room was a beautiful corridor, giving access to committee-rooms, cloakrooms, etc. The chamber in which the house of lords met was 40 feet long by 22 feet wide. At one end was a circular niche for the throne of the English viceroy, over which was a canopy of rich crimson velvet. Artistic decorations marked both apartments, with beautiful Corinthian pillars and tapestry pictures. The first stone of the building was laid on Feb. 3, 1728, and it was completed in 1739. The independence of the Irish parliament was declared in 1782, but this was nullified by the act of union, which was adopted in 1800, and a few months later the historic structure was sold for £40,000. The expense of making arrangements for the meetings of the new Irish council would be inconsiderable. This body, as intimated, will consist of 103 members, the number of Irish members in the British house of commons, with the addition of forty-eight councillors directly elected for larger areas having a taxable value of more than $100. In the scheme, as mapped out, arrangement is made to have the chief secretary for Ireland ex-officio chairman of the Irish council, and Irish representation at Westminster will remain as at present. The old Parliament House stands on the spot formerly occupied by the building known as Chichester House, where the first parliament convened in Ireland after the restoration assembled on May 8, 1661, and where the first parliament convened in Ireland after the wars of the revolution in 1692.

A REAL ENOCH ARDEN

SOUTH DAKOTA MAN GREW WEALTHY IN ALASKA.

Came Home After 14 Years, Found Wife Married to Another Man, but His Children Welcomed Him.

Mitchell, S. D.—The Klondike country has furnished its share of romantic stories of separated families and the return of wealthy individuals who have been grub staked and returned home with wealth untold, but there is more to the story of Judson E. Lathrop than the mere returning with gold galore, for he finds that his wife is divorced and that his mother and sister have passed away. For 14 years Lathrop had not been heard from by his relatives, and it was generally believed he was dead.

Fourteen years ago Mr. Lathrop was traveling on the road for a milling company, but very little of his money went for the comforts of his family; in fact, he did very little to support them, and they were left more or less to their own devices. This was due to the fact that his love for drink took what belonged rightfully to his wife and children. Starting out on one of his trips, he left home 14 years ago and remained away until the present, not even writing home or giving any clue to his whereabouts.

Two weeks ago he returned to his home at Appleton and informed his son Alfred, who is employed in a railroad office at Milwaukee, of his desire to renew his standing with his family. His son notified him of his acceptance after writing to his sisters, Misses Hazel and Bernice Lathrop, of this city. The meeting occurred at Summit, S. D., where Mr. Lathrop has a brother teaching school. The Misses Lathrop returned to their home here to-day and gave the incidents of their father's absence.

Mr. Lathrop started for the Klondike with $50 in cash, and on reaching Seattle he was without funds, but was taken through by a party of friends who were making the trip together. On reaching the gold fields the party went 3,000 miles into the interior and started their operations. At the end of five years Mr. Lathrop had amassed $20,000, and with that he started back home. On reaching Ketchikan he was taken ill with the scurvy, and for one year he lay in the hospital, and when

TO BREAK UP THE OIL TRUST.

Secretary Wilson Will Try to Do It with Potatoes.

Washington—Secretary Wilson is taking the first steps toward the establishment of a laboratory for the testing of apparatus for the use of denatured alcohol. He is establishing it on the assumption that it is his duty to assist in the discovery of burners that will consume that kind of fuel and do it in such a way that there will be a permanent market for the denatured product.

The secretary is a firm believer in the theory that an American farmer in a few years will become a rival of the Standard Oil company in the markets of the world. The apparatus for the burning of alcohol will be tested in a scientific manner, with but little cost to the inventors. There is a big demand for burners that will bring out all the heat units contained in alcohol. The thoroughly reformed man. At Seattle and in Alaska he has given large sums of money to aid in church work. In talking with his daughters about his former drinking he urged them never to marry a man who had the slightest desire for drink, as he insisted it would grow upon him.

Mr. Lathrop will settle an annuity of his children to provide for them as long as they live, the details of which will be settled this week. Three years after Mr. Lathrop went away his wife secured a divorce on the ground of desertion, and at that time moved out to Ashton, S. D., and made her home with relatives. Nine years ago she was married to L. W. Seaman, of this city, a wealthy ranch and stock owner, who owns a handsome residence near the business district. The two daughters will continue to make their residence with him. Both are accomplished young ladies, Miss Hazel being an exceptionally fine musician, both in voice and instrumental.

Mr. Lathrop expressed himself to his daughters as being satisfied with his lot and does not blame any member of his family for all that has taken place. As soon as he finishes his business in the country, which is for the purpose of buying an immense quantity of machinery for his mining plants, he will return to the Klondike country, there to pick up the thread of life.

AN AGED WOMAN LOST IN THE WOODS.

Grandmother Stover, of Livonia, Pa., Found After Fifty Hours' Search.

Bellefonte, Pa.—Lost in the woods for two days and two nights, without food or water, Mrs. Susan Stover, of Livonia, this county, 72 years old, was found on a mountain top nine miles from her home by a lumberman. Her clothing was torn from her body and her hands and feet were bleeding from the efforts she had made to find her way out.

Mrs. Susan Stover left her home to go to a grove to gather chestnuts. Not returning by supper time search was instituted for her, but without avail. News that Grandmother Stover was lost in the woods soon spread and 20 or more men, equipped with lanterns and armed with guns, took up the trail through the woods. At night the search was kept up and no trace of the aged woman found. Fifty or more men found the trail where she had gone through the woods and followed it for four or five miles, when all trace was lost. The search was kept up the following night without avail.

The next morning fully 150 people started out to make a thorough search of the mountains, which are the wildest in this part of the state.

Even church was abandoned, preachers and others joining the search. The entire party returned without the woman and completely baffled as to where she could have gone. Her sons were well-nigh distracted, when about dark a man and woman appeared in a buggy who brought the joyful news that Grandmother Stover had been found by a lumberman on top of the fourth mountain, distant about nine miles from her home. She had been away over 50 hours, and had had nothing to eat or drink after leaving home, and had slept in the woods two nights, hearing on all sides the roar of the wild animals which infest the mountains. Drenched to the skin from the heavy rain, the aged woman presented a pitiful spectacle, her clothing being torn from her body and her hands and feet badly cut and bruised from climbing over and falling on the huge rocks. She was brought home, and although in a serious condition from the exposure to which she was subjected, her recovery is expected.

Both Eyes Rarely Equal.—Many persons who think their sight perfect have a greater visual power in one eye than in the other. With regard to the respective power of the right and left eye a well-known optician finds that a person occupied in writing all day has as a rule stronger vision in the left. Writing with the right hand and his left arm resting on the table, his left eye is nearer his work and its vision is more concentrated. This expert says that eye race will never become so short sighted as the German while football, tennis, hockey, etc., are encouraged in our public schools. $10,000 for a Book of Poems. London.—An American bibliophile has secured for $10,000 a volume of poems of the late sixteenth and early seventeenth century, including Shakespeare's "The Passionate Pilgrim." It is believed that only one other copy is in existence—that in the Bodleian library at Oxford.

Horrible Death.
Edgar Gifford, chief engineer of the steamer Mary, met a horrible death in the engine room of the boat on Lake St. Clair Thursday afternoon. His clothing caught in the machinery and he was hurled round and round, his head and body beating against the floor and beams of the hold. Gifford had gone into the hold to oil the machinery and soon the second engineer heard a peculiar thumping noise. The engine would shiver a trifle with each revolution and going into the hold to ascertain the trouble the second engineer was horrified to see Gifford's body whirling around. The engine was immediately stopped and the mangled remains were extricated and brought to Detroit. The unfortunate man was about 50 years of age and resided in Willow, Mich. He leaves a widow and one son.

Severed Head From Body.
Eddie McGuire, 5-year-old son of Patrick McGuire, of Kitchville, with several school companions climbed on a heavily loaded wagon for a ride home. The McGuire boy slipped off and the rear wheel passed over his neck and his head was practically severed from his body. His playmates knew nothing of the accident until looking behind they were horrified to see the body of the crushed lad in the road. He was instantly killed.

Claudio Fields, aged 35, of Charlotte, was killed by a train on which he was conductor, at Jolter, Ill.

THE FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FIELD

THE HURRICANE DAMAGE IN CUBA LESS THAN FIRST REPORTED.

TWO CITIES SUFFER MOST

Sweep of the Cyclone Covered Only a Limited Area—Nine Killed in City of Batabano.

Latest Reports.
Reports received by Gov. Magoon from the provincial governors of Cuba show that the hurricane was less destructive in its results than was at first believed. The storm was confined mainly to the provinces of Havana and Pinar del Rio.

Batabano, 30 miles southeast of Havana, was the only other town except the capital which suffered greatly. The mayor of that place reports that nine persons were killed and that many are missing.

The American steamer Campbell, plying between the Isle of Pines and the coast, and the Sara, went ashore, and many small craft were wrecked. Numerous houses were blown down and hundreds of persons are homeless and destitute. The loss there is estimated at $800,000.

Gov. Magoon has directed Gov. Nuñez, of Havana province, to extend assistance to Batabano, declaring that if the provincial treasury has not sufficient funds he will find other means for relieving distress.

The mayor of San Luis, in the province of Pinar del Rio, and the center of the rich tobacco district, reports great damage to seed tobacco but no loss of life.

At Matanzas, where the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry is encamped, and at Cardenas, where the Fifth United States Infantry is quartered, tents were blown down and considerable damage was done to property. No persons, however, were injured.

All the southern portion of Havana province is flooded, and great damage was done to crops and buildings. The Isle of Pines escaped without damage.

Roving Armed Bands.

While tranquility prevails generally in Cuba, reports received in Havana show the existence of roving armed bands at various places. At Guines armed ex-rebels are hovering in the outskirts of the town and declare that they fear to enter because of alleged threats of persecution by the police.

At San Domingo bands of armed negroes, ex-rebels, dissatisfied with the terms of peace, threaten to commit depredations, but are overawed by the garrison, which consists of 75 United States marines. In the vicinity of Cienfuegos armed bands are reported to be engaged in depredations. A band of 50 mounted negroes, the members of which call themselves insurgents, is roving about the country near Las Jajas.

A delegation of six liberal members of the provisional council today visited Gov. Magoon and announced that they would attend no further meetings of the council because the moderate members of the body were illegally seated at the last election. Gov. Magoon, however, argued with the disgruntled councilmen and induced all of them to reconsider their decision and agree to continue to serve.

Thanksgiving.

The president issued a proclamation naming Thursday, November 29, as a day of Thanksgiving. The proclamation is in part as follows:

"Never before in our history or in the history of any other nation has a people enjoyed more abounding material prosperity than is ours; a prosperity so great that it should arouse in us no spirit of reckless pride, and least of all a spirit of heedless disregard of our responsibilities; but rather a sober sense of our many blessings, and a resolute purpose, under providence, not to forfeit them by any action of our town.

"Upon our material well-being must be built up a superstructure of individual and natural life lived in accordance with the laws of the highest morality, or else our prosperity itself will in the long run turn out a curse instead of a blessing. We should be both reverently thankful for what we have received and earnestly bent upon turning it into a means of grace and not of destruction."

John's View of It.

John D. Rockefeller, when asked what view he took of the Findlay verdict against the Standard Oil Co., and what he thought the future results would be, smilingly replied:

"I don't think I care to say anything about that verdict, as I do not believe that it would be becoming for me to do so. Of course I have my own opinion regarding that verdict, and I feel confident that my opinion on that subject coincides with that of a great many people, but, as I said before, I do not care to express my views on the matter publicly, as I am sure it would not be proper for me to criticize the court.

"I feel confident, however, that the entire matter will be smoothed out satisfactorily before long."

Lansing police put a stop to the initiation of high school girls into a sorority on complaint of a police commissioner, who said that the girls in short dresses or bloomers wheeling others similarly attired through the streets was not at all edifying.

THIS IS RICH.

Wisconsin Has So Much Money Only School Taxes Are Levied.

All the state taxes, with the exception of the school tax, which was reduced to half of one mill, were remitted by the state board of assessors. There already is so much money in the state treasury that none of the officials knew what to do with it. With the prospect of more than $2,500,000 coming in from this year's taxes, State Treasurer Kempf threw up his hands in despair and said there was no way to spend it. Accordingly Gov. Davidson, Secretary of State Houser and Mr. Kempf met and decided to remit the taxes.

The railroads are footing the bills. That, in the main, is the reason for the action, the first time such a sweeping move has been made in the history of the state. It is one of the results of Senator La Follette's long fight when he was in the governor's chair. Under the new ad valorem law the roads pay about $2,600,000 annually, or one-third more than they did under the old license fee system.

The amount of taxes remitted is $1,818,355. Instead of raising this amount from the taxpayers it will be deducted from the general fund of the state to meet certain fixed expenditures. The school tax, amounting to $643,680, goes back to the taxpayers in the support of the public schools.

Verdict War 'Guilty.'

After deliberating 32 hours, the jury in the case of the State of Ohio against the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, in Findlay, returned a verdict of "guilty" to the charge of conspiracy against trade in violation of the Valentine anti-trust law. The first ballot of the jury stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal. Thursday morning, one of the three for acquittal joined the majority. Thursday night another went over and at 4 o'clock Friday morning the last of the three gave way.

The penalty is a fine of from $50 to $5,000 which may be repeated for each day of the offense, or imprisonment of from six to 12 months.

To the state, the suit, the verdict and the ultimate appeal is important particularly because it initiates an entirely new method of proceeding against alleged trade monopolies that is by information and affidavit instead of by grand jury indictment.

Disposal of Fines.

Upon request of Attorney General Bird the Kalamazoo supervisors have ordered an investigation into the fines that have been collected in that county for the past fifteen years and what the county has spent the money for.

Just the reason for the request is not known. It is not believed that there has been any irregularity in the fine system of the county, but the request of the attorney general causes considerable surprise.

The supervisors ordered the work begun at once and made an appropriation to cover the expense. The fines collected in that county during the period stated will amount to probably hundreds of thousands of dollars and to find out what the amount has been spent for will take months.

Heavily Fined.

Judge Holt in the United States circuit court today imposed a fine of $108,600 on the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co. for granting rebates to Lowell M. Palmer, who has charge of transportation for the American Sugar Refining Co. There were six counts and a fine of $18,000 was imposed in each.

Frederick L. Pomeroy, assistant traffic manager of the New York Central, was fined $1,000 on each count, a total of $6,000.

Hurricane Was Destructive.

Reports from Cuba indicate great loss of life and property by the hurricane which swept Havana and crossed over to Florida. Fully one hundred houses were blown down in Miami and the city is in a demoralized condition. The handsome churches of the Episcopal and Methodist denominations are both blown down. The concrete jail was leaning, with danger of turning over, and the prisoners had to be released. The car sheds were torn down and the roof blown off the Occidental steamer sheds. A two-story brick, occupied as a saloon, partly collapsed.

Three Killed and Many Injured.

Passenger train No. 8, of the Wabash railroad, running from Kansas City to Buffalo, N. Y., known as the Buffalo mail, and due in Danville, Ill., at 4:52 a. m., ran into an open switch west of Cahlin, Ill., early Wednesday, and crashed into a section of a freight train. The passenger coaches, except one, turned over and burned.

Three persons are known to have been killed. Several others are missing. Thirty-seven injured are being taken care of at Danville hospitals.

Insane Man's Escape.

Louis Moquin, of Spanking, who was adjudged insane last spring and sent to the Newberry asylum, escaped recently and has just turned up at his home, having walked the entire distance of nearly 200 miles. He bore marks of great suffering, and how he lived during the trip is a mystery. He has a mania that a girl is in love with him.

Farmer Fleischflessen, of Menominee, mourns his 2-year-old son who set fire to his clothes and burned to death during the absence of his parents. George Kalmbach, of Jackson, was fined $5 with 30 days in jail and 30 additional days if the fine is not paid, for shooting one of the Loosmink park squirrels. Alleging that she was thrown from a car as she was waiting and has been permanently injured, Mrs. Elizabeth Whitman, of Ann Arbor, has brought suit against the Michigan United Railroads for $2,000.

A scrub game was played Wednesday night between the regular and the Baptist Sunday-school team, which gave the high school fine practice.
The foot ball game which was to have been played at Mt. Clemens last Friday was called off, giving the team a chance to rest up for the Wayne game.

For that Dandruff
There is one thing that will cure it—Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is a regular scalp-medicine. It quickly destroys the germs which cause this disease. The unhealthy scalp becomes healthy. The dandruff disappears, had to disappear. A healthy scalp means a great deal to you—healthy hair, no dandruff, no pimples, no eruptions.

NOT WORTH THE TROUBLE.

Irishman Didn't Want Whole Town Turned Up to Find Watch.

Kid Gleason of the Philadelphia National League team, is telling his friends a little story on a Hibernian friend. The kid and his friend had attended a boxing bout and when leaving the building the Irishman discovered that his watch was gone. The sergeant of police promised to "leave no stone unturned" in the effort to recover the timepiece.

"Great operation, isn't it?" the ball-player asked.
"Yis, it is, indade. Phat's it all fer?" asked Pat.
"Why, don't you remember that the police sergeant said he would leave no stone unturned to get back your watch? See, there he is now directing the work."

The kid's friend from the old sod was amazed, and, walking up to the sergeant said: "I thank yez very much, sergeant, but if yez is going to tear up the whole town, let the watch go to the devil. It's not worth the trouble."

FRIEND HELD THE PHONE.

Washington Official Got Even for Broken Engagement.

He is a prominent official in the post office department, and his friend, with whom he had nipped an engagement, and who had sworn to get even, is prominent in the Navy department. About one o'clock the navy department man called up his friend over the telephone.

"Hello, Brown," he said, "please hold the 'phone a minute."
Brown held the 'phone, getting more fidgety all the while. At least three times a minute he was obliged to tell central that he was "waiting." Time rolled on, and he still clung to the receiver though his arm was well-nigh breaking.

Brown was just on the point of hanging up the receiver, when his friend at the navy department dashed into the room.
"Ah, you're still holding the 'phone, I see," he said. "I'm glad of it; for I wanted to catch you here this time, that's all."

And the two officials went across the street to get a lunch.—Washington Post.

Metals of Early Age.

Excavations at the ancient city of Gezer, mentioned in early sacred history, carried on by members of the Palestine exploration fund for the past three years, have developed numerous "finds." Eight cities have been discovered, superimposed upon each other, on the site of the old defense to the western road to Jerusalem. The culture, history, religion and customs of the inhabitants from as far back as 500 B. C. have been revealed by architecture, jugs, weapons and masonry. Dr. E. W. G. Masterman, a member of the excavating party, writes as follows: "The earliest inhabitants lived in caves and made all their weapons and instruments of flint. In the middle period bronze is the only metal known, while at a time roughly synchronous with the coming of Israel, iron appears and gradually replaces bronze."

When Friends Are Needed.

The late Thomas Coldwell, inventor of the lawn mower, was noted in Newburg for his charity. A citizen of Newburg once stole some money. He was bitterly attacked in consequence. But Mr. Coldwell stood by him and to a certain man who was maligning him he said one day: "You, I see, are a fair-weather friend, George. Well, you are not singular there. Most friends are like you. There was a man who said to a convict: 'Always do right and your friends will stand by you.'"

"Yes," the convict answered bitterly, "but the time a man needs friends to stand by him is when he does wrong."

Sponging.

"After trying in vain to get any credit," began Dr. Lustig. "Jones borrowed a demijohn and hurried to Eddie Graney's place and had the bartender fill it with the real thing. But when he asked to have it charged, he found himself face to face with adamant. 'All right; pour it out,' said Jones. The incident repeated itself at other saloons, and by midnight Jones was very drunk. 'Was it the psychological effect of seeing the whisky poured in and out?' Dr. Lustig was asked. 'No, it was the fact that he kept a sponge hidden in the demijohn but easy to fish out with a bit of wire when properly saturated.'—San Francisco Chronicle.

A One-Sided Affair.

"If you consent to our engagement," said the young man, impressively, "you must not falter in your ardor. You must be prepared to make all kinds of sacrifices, and must love me the more passionately the colder I get to you, and when I finally shake up my mind to desert you, you must forgive everything and love me still. Are you prepared to do all this?"

She bowed her head assentingly, and without emotion of any sort. For he was the stage manager who also played the villain, who was engaging the wronged and deserted heroine of the piece.

SKILL MORE THAN STRENGTH.

Latter is of Little Avail in Proper Race.

Strength has nothing to do with hands, or rather, it is a distinct drawback to their acquirement. The winning man uses his hands to attain his ends; the strength man disdains the delicate effects which make for every thing of the best in horsemanship. A little 80-pound boy will control perfectly a rattle-blained race horse that no man could hold by main strength; a slight woman will guide four horses as few men can—it is the combination of the attributes named that enables them to do it.

Appropriate biting has much to do with success, but the novice is apt to proceed to the extremes of severity in his desire to get that delicacy of touch and promptness of response which he thinks should follow sharp restraint. The reverse of this should always be the rule, and the horse should be constantly tried with lighter biting effects until the least possible restraint is employed. Hands and mouths vary from day to day, according to various circumstances of irritability and sensitiveness, and no arrangement is likely to be for the best interest of both biper and quadruped. A balanced horse is always a light-mouthed horse, and it is "up to" the driver or rider to find what best brings about this result. No balanced horse can pull; no puller is in balance.—Outing.

Two Necessary Books.

A Boston man being unexpectedly summoned to New York on business which threatened to detain him for several weeks, hurried home to invite his wife to accompany him. They were to start in an hour and the baggage was limited to one trunk. At the last minute, just as the trunk lid was descending, a sudden wall was heard.

"Oh, wait a minute, Charlie. I haven't put in a single book! The idea of going to New York of all places without a book!" and she rushed out to the library.

"Well, hurry up!" called her husband, impatiently, "there isn't room for more than two, anyway. Do you hear, Fanny? Not more than two!"

"All right, then take those!" and she handed over a Bible and a volume of Browning. "I must have those, anyhow!"

The Better Way

The tissues of the throat are inflamed and irritated; you cough, and there is more irritation—more coughing. You take a cough mixture and it eases the irritation—for a while. You take and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

SERIAL STORY

THE GOSPEL OF LAUGHTER.

Gospel of laughter, he preached it to me. Man who once troubled and wearied himself.

Keep the world smiling and glad, said he; Birth is a helpful, benevolent elf. Ha, ha, ha! ha, ha, ha! ho, ho, ho! Never keep worry and bother about; Smile at your trouble, it's likely to go. Laughter's spontaneous; tears are squeezed out.

Gospel of laughter: World wants to laugh—So said my teacher, and he ought to know.

Rather o'erfed on adversity's chaff; Wishes its riddles given a show. Ha, ha, ha! ha, ha, ha! ho, ho, ho! This is the creed that sets trouble to rout. Makes us forget the cares that we know. Laughter's spontaneous; tears are squeezed out.

Gospel of laughter: World has a song; Tune your soul to it, it's easy to catch. Better go cheery and smiling along. Dimples of laughter and thousands to match.

Ha, ha, ha! ha, ha, ha! ho, ho, ho, ho! Fling a defiance—ha, ha, ha!—to doubt; Never give worry—ho, ho, ho!—a show. Laughter's spontaneous; tears are squeezed out. —Alfred J. Waters '94, in Success Magazine.

THE SPENDERS

A Tale of the Third Generation

By HARRY LEON WILSON

"No, no—that ain't the way to handle him. Say, I don't expect to quit cussin' him for another 30 days yet. I want him to think he ain't got a friend on earth but himself. Why, I'd have made this play just as I have done, Mr. Shepler, if there hadn't been a chance to get back a cent of it—if we'd had to go plumb broke—back to the west in an emigrant car, with bologna and crackers to eat, that's what I'd have done. No, sir, no help for him!"

"Aren't you a little hard on him?" "Not a bit! don't I know the stock, and know just what he needs? Most men you couldn't treat as I'm treatin' him; but with him, the harder you beat down on him the more you'll get out of him. That was the way with his pa—he was a different man after things got to comin' too easy for him. This fellow, the way I'm treatin' him, will keep his head even after he gets things comin' easy again, or I miss my guess. He thinks I despise him now. If you told him I was proud of him, I almost believe you could get a bet out of him, stick as he is of gambler."

"Has he suspected anything?" "Sure not! Why, he just thanked me about an hour ago for savin' him—made me shake hands with him—and I could see the tears back in his eyes." "The old man chuckled."

"It was like Len Carey's Nigger Jim. Len had Jim set apart on the plantation for his own nigger. They fished and went huntin' and swimmin' together. One day they'd been swimmin', and was lyin' up on the bank. Len got thinkin' he'd never seen anyone drown. He knew Jim couldn't swim a lick, so he thought he'd have Jim go down. He says to him: 'Jim, go jump off that rock there!' That was where the deep hole was. Jim was scared, but he had to go. After he'd gone down once, Len says to him: 'Drown now, you damn nigger!' and Jim come up and went down twice more. Then Len begun to think Jim was worth a good bit of money, and maybe he'd be almighty walloped if the truth come out, so he dives in after Jim and gets him ashore, and after while he brought him to. Anywise, he said, Jim had already sure-enough drowned as far as there was any fun in it. Well, Len Carey is an old man now, and Jim is an old white-headed nigger still hangin' around the old place, and when Len goes back there to visit his relatives, old Nigger Jim shows him up with tears in his eyes, and thanks Mister Leonard for savin' his life that time. Say, I felt this mornin' like Len Carey must feel them times when Jim's thankin' him."

"HAS HE SUSPECTED ANYTHING?"

"You're a fine man, Mr. Bines. I'll hope to have your cheerful, gay views of life if I ever lose my hold here in the street. I hope I'll have the old Bines philosophy and the young Bines spirit. That reminds me," he continued, as Uncle Peter rose to go, "we've been pretty confidential, Mr. Bines, and I don't mind telling you I was a bit afraid of that young man until yesterday. Oh, not on the stock proposition. On another matter. You may have noticed that night at the Oldaker's—well, women, Mr. Bines, are uncertain. I know something about markets and the ways of a dollar, but all I know about women is that they're good to have. You can't know any more about them, because they don't know any more themselves. Just between us, now, I never felt any too sure of a certain young woman's state of mind until copper reached 51 and Union Cordage had been blown up from inside."

They parted with warm expressions of good-will, and Uncle Peter, in high spirits at the success of his machinations, had himself driven up-town. The only point where his plans had failed was in Mrs. Wybert's refusal to consider Mauburn after the birth of the Casselthorpe twins. Yet he felt that matters, in spite of this happening, must go as he wished them to. The Englishman—Uncle Peter cherished the strong anti-British sentiment peculiar to his generation—could surely never marry a girl who was all but penniless, and the consideration of an alliance with Mrs. Wybert, when the fortune should be lost, had, after all, been an incident—a means of showing the girl, if she should prove to be too deeply infatuated with Mauburn for her own peace of mind—how unworthy and mercenary he was; for he had meant, in that event, to disillusion her by disclosing something of Mrs. Wybert's history—the woman Mauburn should prefer to her. He still counted confidently on the loss of the fortune sufficing to break the match.

When he reached the Hightower that night for dinner, he found Percival downstairs in great glee over what he conceived to be a funny situation. "Don't ask me, Uncle Peter. I couldn't get it straight; but as near as I could make out, Mauburn came up here afraid the blow of losing him was going to kill his sis with a broken heart, and sis was afraid the blow was going to kill Mauburn, because she wouldn't have married him anyway, rich or poor, after he'd lost the title. They found each other some way, and then Mauburn accused her of being heartless, of caring only for his title, and she accused him of caring only for her money, and he insisted she ought to marry him anyway, but she wouldn't have it because of the twins."

Uncle Peter rubbed his big brown hands with the first signs of cheerfulness he had permitted Percival to detect in him. "Good fur Pish—that's the way to take down them conceited Britishers—" "But then they went at matters again from a new standpoint, and the result is they've made it up."

"What? Has them precious twin Casselthorpes perished?" "Not at all, both doing finely—haven't even had colic—growing fast—probably learned to say 'fancy, now,' by this time. But Mauburn's going west with us if we'll take him."

"Get out!" "Fact! Say, it must have been an awful blow to him when he found sis wouldn't think of him at all without his title, even if she was broke. They had a stormy time of it from all I can hear. He said he was strong enough to work and all that, and since he'd cared for her, and not for her money, it was low down of her to throw him over; then she said she wouldn't leave her mother and us; now that we might need her, not for him or any other man—and he said that only made him love her all the more, and then he got chasty, and said he was just as good as any American, even if he never would have a title; so pretty soon they got kind of interested in each other again, and by the time I came home it was all over. They ratified the preliminary agreement for a merger."

"Well, I snum!" "That's right, go ahead and snum. I'd snum myself if I knew how—it knocked me. Better come upstairs and congratulate the happy couple."

"Shoo, now! I certainly am mighty disappointed in that fellow. Still, he is well spotted, and them freckles mean iron in the blood. Maybe we can develop him along with the other properties."

They found Psyche already radiant, though showing about her eyes traces of the storm's devastations. Mauburn was looking happy; also defiant and stubborn. "Mr. Bines," he said to Uncle Peter, "I hope you'll side with me. I know something about horses, and I've nearly a thousand pounds that I'll be glad to put in, with you out there if you can make a place for me."

The old man looked him over quizzically. Psyche put her arm through Mauburn's.

you can't do much yourself at first. And won't Mrs. Dreimer be delighted to know it's all settled?"

"Well," said Uncle Peter to Percival, later in the evening, "Pish has done better than you have here. It's a pity you didn't pick out some good, sensible girl, and marry her in the midst of your other doings."

"I couldn't find one that liked cats. I saw a lot that suited every other way, but I always said to myself: 'Remember Uncle Peter's warning!' so I'd go to an animal store and get a basket of kittens and take them around, and not one of the dozen stood your test. Of course I'd never disregard your advice."

"Hum," remarked Uncle Peter, in a tone to be noticed for its extreme dryness. "Too bad, though—you certainly need a wife to take the conceit out of you."

"I lost that in the street, along with the rest."

"Well, son, I ain't no ways alarmed but what you'll soon be on your feet again in that respect—say by next Tuesday or Wednesday. I wish the money was comin' back as easy."

"Well, there are girls in Montana City."

"You could do worse. That reminds me—I happened to meet Shepler today and he got kind of confidential—talkin' over matters. He said he'd never really felt sure about the affections of a certain young woman, especially after that night at the Oldaker's—he'd never felt dead sure of her until you went broke. He said you never could know anything about a woman—not really."

"He knows something about that one, all right, if he knows she wouldn't have any use for me now. Shepler's coming on with the ladies. I feel quite hopeful about him."

CHAPTER XXVII. THE DEPARTURE OF UNCLE PETER. The Bineses, with the exception of Psyche, were at breakfast a week later. Miss Bines had been missing since the day that Mr. and Mrs. Cecil G. H. Mauburn had left for Montana City to put the Bines home in order.

Uncle Peter and Mrs. Bines had now determined to go, leaving Percival to follow when he had closed his business affairs.

"It's like starting west again to make our fortune," said Uncle Peter. He had suffered himself to regain something of his old cheerfulness of manner.

"I wish you two would wait until we can get the car here, and go back with me," said Percival. "We can go back in style even if we didn't save much more than a get-away stake."

But his persuasions were unavailing. "I can't stand it another day," said Mrs. Bines, "and those letters keep coming in from poor suffering people that haven't heard the news."

"I'm too restless to stay," declared Uncle Peter. "I declare, with spring all greenin' up this way I'd be found campin' up in Central park some night and took off to the calaboose. I just got to get out again where you can feel the wind blow and see a hundred miles and don't have to dodge horseless horse cars every minute. It's a wonder one of 'em ain't got me in this town. You come on in the car, and do the style fur the family. One of them common Pullmans is good enough for Marthy and me. And besides, I got to get Billy Brue back. He's givin' plumb daft lookin' night and day fur that man that got his $30 and his breast-plate. He says there'll be an ambulance backed up at the spot where he meets him—makes no difference if it's right on Fifth avenue. Billy's kind of near-sighted at that, so I'm mortal afraid he'll make a mistake one of these nights, and take some honest man's money and trinkets away from him."

Percival saw them to the train. "Take care of yourself," said Uncle Peter at parting. "You know I ain't any good any more, and you got a whole family, includin' an Englishman, dependin' on you—we'll throw him on the town, though, if he don't take out his first papers the minute I get there." His last shot from the rear platform was: "Change your name back to 'Pete,' son, when you get west of Chicago. 'Tain't anything fancy, but it's a crack-in-a-good business name for a hustler!"

"All right, Uncle Peter—and I hope I'll have a grandson that thinks as much of it as I do of yours."

little; but, on the whole, it was what Percival described it, "a lovely autopsy."

At last the vexatious work was finished, and he was free again. At the end of the final day's work he left the office of Fouts in Wall street, and walked up Broadway. He went slowly, enjoying the freedom from care. It was the afternoon of a day when the first summer heat had been felt, and as he loitered before shop windows or walked slowly through that street where all move quickly and most very hurriedly, a welcome little breeze came up from the bay to fan him and encourage his spirit of leisure.

At Union square, when he would have taken a car to go the remainder of the distance, he saw Shepler, accompanied by Mrs. Van Geist and Miss Milbrey, alight from a victoria and enter a jeweler's.

He would have passed on, but Miss Milbrey had seen him and stood waiting in the doorway, while Shepler and Mrs. Van Geist went on into the store. "Mr. Bines—I'm so glad!"

She stood, flushed with pleasure, radiant in stuff of filmy pink, with little flecks at her throat and waist of the first tender green of new leaves. She was unaffectedly delighted to see him.

"You are Miss Spring?" he said when she had given him her hand—"and you've come into all your mother had that was worth inheritin', haven't you?"

"Mr. Bines, shall we not see you now? I wanted so much to talk with you when I heard everything. Would it be impertinent to say I sympathized with you?"

He looked over her shoulder in where Shepler and Mrs. Van Geist were inspecting a tray of jewels.

"Of course not impertinent—very kind—only I'm really not in need of any sympathy at all. You won't understand it; but we don't care so much for money in the west—for the loss of it—not so much as you New Yorkers would. Besides, we can always make a plenty more."

The situation was, emphatically, not as he had so often dreamed it when she should marvel, perhaps regretfully, over his superiority to her husband as a money-maker. His only relief was to belittle the importance of his loss.

Fine Animals for Anyone in Adirondacks Who Will Transport and Keep Them.

A wealthy friend of the Adirondacks and of the cause of large game propagation has authorized me to offer to any responsible organization or individual, who will liberate them on unfenced forest land in the Adirondacks, and give a pledge that they will be protected after liberation, a herd of 25 elk, all wild bred and in splendid condition, says a correspondent of the New York Times. Such organization or individual to assume the expense of transportation and liberation, which would be about $200 or $300.

The best time to ship these elk to the Adirondacks and liberate them is early in May. They will not need any feeding or care after liberation, and will be amply able to shift for themselves in the wild state, as they have always lived wild in the forest. The elk which have been liberated in the Adirondacks during the last five years have done well, and the state forest, fish and game commission in its last report places the number of wild elk in the Adirondacks at 200, as against 22 in 1901.

I expect during the next few years to receive additional gifts of elk from public-spirited persons who are interested in the experiment of reintroducing the elk, as well as the moose and beaver, into their former home in the Adirondacks so that there will always be ample new blood infused into the Adirondack herds to prevent inbreeding. The experience of the last few winters has shown that the elk withstand deep snow and severe cold even better than the Adirondack deer.

Britons as Beef Eaters. A recent publication by the department of agriculture shows that Great Britain imports more meat animals and packing house products than all the other countries of Europe combined. The value of such British imports for 1904 was $283,000,000. Nearly all the live meat animals imported in Great Britain comes from the United States and Canada. The British fresh beef trade seems to be drifting away from the United States. Five years ago 76 per cent. was supplied from this country; two per cent. from Argentina and 22 per cent. from other countries. In 1904 55 per cent. came from the United States, 39 per cent. from Argentina and six per cent. from other countries. Argentina, with a population no larger than Pennsylvania, is fast establishing an important rivalry with the United States in furnishing to our most important customer not only fresh meats but breadstuffs.—Philadelphia Record.

The Loafer's Deserts. The man who hangs about loafing places, who spends his evenings away from home and his nickels and dimes over the bar, has no right to complain of ill fortune. Even hard-headed men of the world do not seek for trustworthy men in drinking resorts. The world has no sonnets for the loafer. Good fortune makes friends of the man who is trying to do his best.—United Presbyterian.

Chance for Reformation. Mrs. Waggis—Bobby said to me to-day that he couldn't tell a lie. Waggis—Well, what of it? Mrs. Waggis—Why, perhaps he'll be president some day. Waggis—Possibly. He's young yet.—Chicago Daily News.

HER HOUSE IN ORDER

By ELLIS WYBURD

Miss Dennett-Brown was much elated. The post had brought her two gratifying communications—one from her banker announcing the advantageous sale of some shares in a company she believed to be unsound; the other from her married sister in London telling her that Lady MacIntyre had made up her mind to settle in Chipperton.

She was only the widow of a city knight, it is true, but she had a handle to her name, and was supposed to be wealthy.

"It is just what we want in Chipperton," Miss Dennett-Brown remarked to her unmarried sister, Olivia, "some one to give tone to the place and lead society."

And already she saw visions of garden parties, at which she would be an honored guest, and bazaars at which she would be asked to hold a stall. With her mind's eye she even began to range rapidly over her somewhat antiquated wardrobe and to reckon up its possibilities.

"She will be a great acquisition, but"—turning to her letter—"she is not to be here till the end of the London season, Carrie says."

Having decided that this was to be regretted but could not be helped, she armed herself with a sheath of tracts and went forth in great good humor to visit those of her neighbors who, being poor, had apparently forfeited the Englishman's right to consider his house his castle.

She went first to some pretty chalet-like cottages just on the outskirts of the town, in two of which new tenants had lately come, whose acquaintance she was anxious to make.

The door of the first was invitingly open. Through it she saw, in the little sitting-room opposite, a woman who was engaged in ironing some lacey-looking articles. She was of a pleasant, but homely countenance.

Miss Dennett-Brown rapped sharply on the door with the handle of her umbrella, and without waiting for permission, entered.

"I hope I do not interrupt you," she said. The woman's face expressed surprise—and could it be possible?—a shade of annoyance. But she said politely:

"Oh, not at all; if you will go into the front room I will be with you in a minute."

"Don't move," exclaimed the other. "Go on with your work—I will sit here," and she plumped herself down into a chair by the table. "I love to watch people work."

"I expect it is fascinating sometimes to those who themselves have nothing to do."

Miss Dennett-Brown was a little taken aback and tried to look severe. "Oh, I am a very busy woman, I assure you. Do you always do your own ironing in here?"

"No, not always. I sometimes iron in the kitchen—but to-day the kitchen is rather in a pickle."

"Ah, that is a pity. Do you not think it is a good rule to clean your kitchen early? An ill-kept kitchen is—well, you know, so very untidy. I think I have a little paper on that very subject. I am sure you will find it useful," and diving into her string bag, she produced a tract.

"Her House in Order," it is called," she said; "it is most interesting."

"Thank you. Kindly put it down, and I will show it by and by to Susan."

THEY CURE ANEMIA

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the Most Successful Remedy for All Forms of Debility.

Anemia, whether it results from actual loss of blood, from lack of nutrition due to stomach trouble, or whatever its cause, is simply a deficiency of the vital fluid. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They do that one thing and they do it well.

"As a girl," says Mrs. Jessie Fink, of 190 East Mill street, Akron, Ohio, "I suffered from nervous indigestion and when I was eighteen years old I was reduced in weight to 93 pounds. I was anemic, nervous, couldn't eat, or sleep, was short of breath after the least exertion and had headaches almost constantly. I had a doctor, of course, but I might as well have taken so much water for all the good his medicine did me. Finally my vitality and strength were so reduced that I had to take up my bed for several weeks at a time. I could not digest any solid food and for weeks I did not take any other nourishment than a cup of tea or beef broth."

"While I was sick in bed I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I stopped all other medicine and began to take the pills. Soon my improvement was very noticeable. My strength began to return, my stomach gave me no pain and just as soon as I began to take solid food I gained in weight. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills certainly saved my life. I am now perfectly well, have regained my normal weight of 130 pounds and I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful medicine."

These celebrated pills are recommended for stubborn stomach trouble, for all cases of weakness and debility, such as result from fevers and other acute diseases. All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury. as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous membrane. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from a reliable physician, as the damage they will do to the food is too great to be possible. Agents from the U. S. Dept. of Health, Washington, D. C., will send you a free copy of the book "Mercury in the Blood and its Effects on the System." In buying the "Mercury in the Blood" book, be sure you get the real one. It is the only one that is published by the U. S. Dept. of Health, Washington, D. C. Sold by Druggists. Price, 10c. per bottle. This book is a family book for all families.

Gasoline and Alcohol. The greater safety of alcohol, as compared with gasoline for commercial uses, is due to the fact that it will not ignite from pure radiated heat, as gasoline does; that water will extinguish burning alcohol while it will only spread a fire of gasoline, and that the flames of burning alcohol radiates very little heat while that of gasoline radiates heat very rapidly.

Longest and Oldest Tunnel. The near completion of the Pennsylvania tunnel reminds the American Israelite of the oldest known tunnel in the world, that of Shiloh, near Jerusalem. It was used as an aqueduct. The famous inscription, discovered a few years ago, celebrates the first meeting of the diggers from both sides. Newspapers did not appear in those days, and so the event cannot be exactly dated, but it most probably took place under King Hezekiah, about 700 B. C., and is an interesting testimony to the high state of civilization among the Jews at a time when Europe was inhabited by savages.

UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Dyspepsia is often caused by Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and is therefore a Remedy for Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. In order to cure catarrh of the stomach the catarrh must be eradicated. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available. Peruna exactly meets the indications.

Repartee Won Hearers.
A good story is told of Frances Lady Waldegrave, who long since paid her debt to nature. She was a woman of quick repartee and many husbands. It was soon after her fourth matrimonial venture with Chichester Fortescue, an Irishman, that she appeared in a Dublin theater with the bridegroom. From the gallery a man shouted down to her, "And which is the four do you like best?" From her box her answer rang out: "The Irishman, of course." And the Irish people house rang with applause.

TERRIBLE SCALP HUMOR.
Badly Affected with Sores and Crusts—Extended Down Behind the Ears—Another Cure by Cuticura.

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sore and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in places, also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies, so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as directed, etc., and after two weeks I think, 'Yuse, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, combined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. H. M. F. Weiss, Rosemond, Christiania Co., Ill., Aug. 31, 1905."

Monkey's Bite Fatal.
Though bitten twice by a monkey and warned that a third bite would be fatal, Mrs. Powell, of Bath, England, refused to part with the animal. She was bitten again, blood poisoning set in and death from heart failure followed.

I Get Even With Kitty

By Paul Creswick

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"It's my turn to treat," I observed, distinctly.
"Oh, how you startled me! Fancy meeting you at this hour," cried Kitty, who was looking extremely charming in her new costume. "What good angel prompted you to come west to-day?"
"I wanted a new tie—to be brutally frank. Of course, I ought to say that it was in the hope of meeting you."
"You needn't. But you'll pay for my tea, all the same. We'll go to the Koh-i-noor; it's cosy and tete-a-tete. You deserve a lecture for your rudeness."
"So long as it hasn't a moral—"
"You're incorrigible, Reggie! All my trouble to make you a nice boy is being wasted."
"How's the editor—or was it artist? And did he tell you that story you aimed at me the other day?"
"What story? Oh, I remember; the one about perseverance and never saying die. Well, he did certainly suggest the outlines of it. But I filled them in. Rather neatly, I flatter myself."
"Not bad—for a beginner," I admitted.

I led her into the Koh-i-noor, past the coffee grinding machines, into the comfortable privacy of the tea-rooms. We found a secluded corner; I drew the curtains, shutting off the next tables, and gave our orders to one of the three beautifully disdainful damsels who preside.

"She might have given you a smile," remarked her ladyship, sympathetically, "had you been alone."

"I would gladly forfeit even the chance of that—to be with you," I responded, in a low voice.

"Dear soul," purred Kitty, gratefully, "He is beginning to behave, after all! Shall I give him two lumps?"

"And cream," I told her. "By the way, I met an artist last Sunday. A most remarkable chap."

"I don't think I want to hear about him."

"You must. I listened to your story, didn't I? And it had a moral, too! Now you shall have mine—without even the ghost of a moral. I'm not too revengeful, you perceive."

"Is it long?" Kitty sighed, patiently, and poured herself a second cup of tea.

"Extremely short. This man's name is Cliffe, and he's rather a genius—from all accounts. He's Scotch, about six feet high; a regular raw-boned laddie, cut drift, hopelessly, from his native heather. He has a house in Hammersmith overlooking the river—a queer, old-fashioned show. He lives in the upper part of it; the ground floor is given over to emptiness, and circulars, which the nobility and gentry of Ravenscourt Park thrust hourly through the letter-box and front windows. Sometimes Cliffe does weird drawings, in color, for the American magazines."

"Reggie!"

"It's perfectly correct. He signs 'em 'Felspar K. Cliffe,' and sells them through a New York agent. He says it's simple. He has been successful over here as well. Besides painting, he does hypnotism and the fiddle."

"I don't believe a word—"

"There's worse to follow. He gives garden parties on Sundays, quite irrespective of season. If it snows, we go into the empty lower apartments of his house, and pretend. Girls come, and wait on the men; and dabble Cliffe's forehead with scent—whilst he recites."

"What girls?"

"Oh, student girls in long smocks, with no waists and untidy hair—the sort that a merciful Providence made good because they were so plain. They go home after tea; and then the men sit round in Cliffe's studio, make omelette, and drink whisky."

"Mr. Cliffe still reciting?"

"No, he either plays the fiddle then—or perhaps listens. It all depends. Well, last Sunday I stayed on with Deborah. We were last to go. And Cliffe left off being eccentric, and begged us to have another pipe with him. He said we could walk home, after all—but I wasn't sure. However, we stayed, and we all talked about hypnotism. Presently, Cliffe be-

"At what hour?"
"That's immaterial. Cliffe is, under deadly secrecy—but I know you're quite safe, Kit—that one Sunday night he was sitting at his window looking out at a most pre-lapsarian sort of moon, which was arranging a bilious nocturne with the low tide. He was thinking about a girl he had met at a friend's house that afternoon, and whom he had unsuccessfully tried to mesmerize—for neuralgia, or something."

"Not a student girl?"
"Oh, dear me, no. Somebody quite normal, and pretty. She was a 'dear bit of a body'—so Cliffe stated. Well, the neuralgia, or something, had proved too much for him, and he was just sitting there in his studio, watching the green moon, and trying to discover why he had failed. He went through, in a soft voice—he was alone, you know, and it was midnight—the entire passes with the hands, and staring eyes, and—"

"Incantations?"
"The very word. The entire incantation was performed by him, and he felt sure that he hadn't left out a single thing—any more than he had in the afternoon. So why had it failed? Such a dear, suffering body, too—thought Cliffe. And as he remembered, her little mouth all tense with pain, and her deep gray eyes suffused with tears, he gently and pityingly uttered her name."

"Dear me!" exclaimed her ladyship, stirring her third cup of tea. "Amazing!"

"For a full minute—says Cliffe—he remained silent; as though exhausted by the mental effort of—"

"The incantation?"
"Thank you. The hour was silent as the grave; the moon and the tide combined to achieve even more astonishing effects. Somewhere, eastwards, a clock commenced to strike the hour. Cliffe counted to seven, mechanically—and then suddenly started up, galvanizing back to every-day things. Some one was ringing the front door bell."

"Mercy me!"
"Don't interrupt. Cliffe compelled himself to descend to the blackness of the lower apartments; and, rather nervously, opened the door about half a foot. There, under the mysterious porch, faintly silhouetted by the moon, was the statue-like figure of a girl."

"The dear bit of a body with the neuralgia, of course?"
"Without the neuralgia. 'You called me?' she breathed, in dull, heavy tones. 'You called me, and I am here.' Cliffe thereupon opened the door promptly, and she at once walked into the hall. He took her hand, and, leading her up the stairs to the studio, was made certain of that which he had already guessed. The girl was in a trance."

"I consider your story to be as improbable," remarked Kitty, "as it is improper."

"It hasn't any moral, I know, but it's quite proper. Cliffe says that he made up the fire, drew the curtains over the bilious moon, and forthwith willed the girl to go home."

"Well!"
"She didn't seem to understand, but simply stared back at him, out of unseeing eyes. Gave him a horribly utterly perplexed, he fell back as usual, upon his fiddle—for inspiration. He stood with his back to the fire, and played Braga's 'Serenata,' as well as he could remember it. When he had reached the phrase, 'I cannot stay, I must away,' he threw his whole soul into the business. The girl gave a shudder, and incontinently vanished."

"That all?" inquired Kitty, after a long pause.

"Practically. Cliffe says that three days after she wrote to him from Ireland, where she had gone on that very Sunday evening. In fact, she was actually traveling in the night mail to Holyhead, when her astral body appeared to him. She wrote to thank him for having cured her neuralgia completely; it had suddenly left her just after 12 o'clock, when she, exhausted, had at once fallen asleep. The going of the pain seemed like music, she added, gratefully."

"Are you going to work to-day, Reggie?"
"I didn't think of doing so. Why?"
"I should go home, dear, and take a rest, if I were you," advised her ladyship. "I'm certain you must be feeling very tired."

"I'm all right. Let me finish my story. The incident suggested Cliffe's great picture, 'The Sonata Sentimentale,' which you may recollect as being the talk of the academy of nineteen hundred and—"

"Come along, dear," interrupted Kitty. "They want the money for our tea. I'll put you in a cab, which shall take you right to your door. I have so enjoyed this afternoon; but we mustn't attempt too much. Good-by, Reggie; be sure you put your feet into hot water and mustard directly you get back, and then go instantly to bed."

Rough on the Dog.
John Lawrence Toole, England's veteran comedian, who died not long ago, once played a practical joke on his dog with fatal results. In order to get her husband home at a reasonable early hour after his work in the theater was over Mrs. Toole used to promise him just as good a meal as could be found in any restaurant or club in London. This meal his wife would provide and leave on the table for the comedian. Toole didn't like to disappoint his wife, and so used to give the food to his dog. Next morning the plates would be cleaned and Mrs. Toole happy. By this device the comedian managed to eat his club suppers until the dog died of over-

A WOMAN'S KIDNEYS.

Women have much to do, so many pains to suffer, so many critical periods to go through, that it is important to keep the kidneys well, and avoid the backache, bearing-down pain, headache, dizziness, languor and other common signs of weak kidneys.

Mrs. Charles E. Smith, of 22 Boyden St., Woonsocket, R. I., says: "My kidneys were weak from childhood, and for eight or ten years past my back was very painful and I had many annoying symptoms besides. When I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I weighed only 120. To-day I weigh 165, and am in better health than for years. Doan's Kidney Pills have been my only kidney medicine during four years past. They bring me out of every attack."

Round and Square Balls.
A few years ago there was started in Chelsea, Mass., a semi-secret political organization, and after a few meetings it was decided that a ballot box and ballots were needed. A brother made a motion that a committee be appointed by the chair to procure the same. A brother who was always suggesting amendments moved an amendment that the committee be instructed to procure round white balls and square black balls. Another brother asked him to describe a square ball, which brought the house down and caused the mover of the amendment to ejaculate: "You think you are d-d smart, don't you?"

Rulers Look for "Rainy Day."
Nearly all European kings and queens have money invested in foreign countries. Every year the czar and czarine of Russia intrust a large portion of their private savings to the British and French national banks. King Leopold, of Belgium, has a universal reputation, and not an enviable one, as Leopold & Co., rubber merchants. He founded the Congo Free State and is one of the largest rubber and ivory dealers in the world. He is also one of the cleverest of financiers, and knows his way about all the bourses of Europe. King George of Greece speculates largely in agricultural products, follows carefully all the fluctuations of the financial markets and is assiduous in putting his money into good things. The sultan of Turkey declines to trust any Turkish bank with his savings, which are nearly all deposited in British banks.

A FOOD CONVERT.
Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve dyspepsia, keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to stimulants is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash increases his loss of power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an adv. I tried Grape-Nuts food, and after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved."

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way."

"I rellish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four teaspoonfuls at a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the lit-

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from female trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded.

Our hospitals are full of women who are there for just such operations. It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Margrite Ryan, Treasurer of St. Andrew's Society, Indianapolis, Ind., writes of her cure as follows:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot find words to express my thanks for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me. The doctor said I could not get well unless I had an operation for the trouble from which I suffered. I knew I could not stand the strain of an operation and made up my mind I would be an invalid for life. Hearing how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured so many women, I decided to try it. I am now as well as ever and I can express my thanks for what it has done for me."

Serious feminine troubles are steadily on the increase among women—and before submitting to an operation every woman should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been curing the worst forms of female complaints, all functional troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement, weakness, irregularities, indigestion and nervous prostration. Any woman who could read the many grateful letters on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office would be convinced of the efficiency of her advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

or McClellan's Story Not a Great Deal Exaggerated.

For McClellan, of New York, at a dinner party about the way some Americans rush through sightseeing during their summer road.

"I have been told," he said, "that American once drove in a hansom to the British museum, leaped out, and aside the pigeons that were flying in the court, and said to the janitor at the door: 'Have you still got the Elgin marble?'"

"Yes, sir. Of course, sir."

"Good. And the Assyrian winged?"

"They are still here, sir."

"What about those 6,000 year old Egyptian remains on the second floor—have they not sold yet, are they?"

"No, indeed, sir. Won't you step in and see them?"

"No, thank you. I'll just take them as per catalogue. You see, I've got Westminster, St. Paul's, the houses of parliament and the South Kensington to do this morning, and I must get a train for Oxford in time to run over the colleges before starting for Stratford for the night. So long, sir."

Treatment of Modern Bullet Wounds.

A most interesting and far-reaching experiment on a large scale was performed at the battlefield of Mukden, says the Post-Graduate. Several sanitary officers with good surgical training being present, out of 100 soldiers wounded in the abdomen, 50 were operated upon by laparotomy, the 50 others left alone, the only treatment consisting in absolute rest and in keeping the external wound opening clean. Of the 50 soldiers operated upon 40 died, of the non-operated 40 survived. This striking result indicated the manner of treatment of abdominal wounds throughout the whole war. Laparotomy on or in the year of the battlefield was afterward hardly ever performed, but strict care was taken that all soldiers wounded in the abdomen had absolute rest for the first three days.

Korean Omen of Good Fortune.

The Koreans are greatly excited over the appearance of a bamboo tree through the cracks of the floor last occupied by the late Gen. Min Yong Whan. Since the suicide of the general in November last the room has been kept closed, and when the room was opened two days ago the bamboo had already attained the height of more than four feet.

The Koreans find a parallel in this phenomenon in an event that occurred in Songdo 500 years ago, when a patriot defending the emperor was taken to death on a stone bridge just outside the city. Several months after his death a bamboo sprouted up between the stones on the very spot where the patriot had breathed his last.—South China Post.

The Famous Baron Roederer.

A New York wine agent is compiling a volume of anecdotes of the famous wine dealers of the past.

Of the late Baron Roederer he said the other day:

"Roederer once received a letter that read:

"'Sir—I have not a centime to my name, but I adore champagne. Be good enough to send me a case of your delicious nectar. With its help I hope to forget my wretched poverty.'"

Roederer replied by return mail:

"'Sir—The means wherewith you propose to forget your poverty will not avail. The incessant and persistent presentation of my account would remind you every moment of your sad condition.'"

Journal of the Deceased.

"A young man in Paris," said the man who knows everything worth while, "has conceived the idea of founding a daily newspaper there, to be called the Journal of the Deceased."

"This paper, as I understand it, will publish the names of all the people who die in Paris, with suitable remarks, but to these will be added—and that is the novel point—the names of the physicians who have treated them. The necrologues will be sent in proof form to the physicians in question, and if they pay all amount in proportion to their wealth as estimated by the honorable editor, the announcement concerning the doctor in the case will not be published."

His Golden Opportunity.

A Baltimore man tells of an advertisement to some school children in the city by a member of the board of trustees:

"My young friends," said the speaker, "let me urge upon you the necessity of not only reading good books, but of owning them, so that you may have access to them at all times. When I was a young man, I used frequently to work all night to earn money to buy books, and then get before daylight to read them!"—Success Magazine.

You Can Easily Operate This Typewriter Yourself.

Don't worry your correspondent. Don't write him anything by hand that takes time to make out—that may leave him in doubt—that he can't easily read.

And don't fill out legal papers or card memos—or make out accounts or hotel menus in your own handwriting.

It looks bad reflects on your standing, makes people think you can't write, and is sometimes ambiguous.

You can write, out your letter—make out an abstract—fill in an insurance policy—enter your card memos—make out your accounts, or a hotel menu—do any kind of writing you need, on any kind, size or thickness of paper, and space any way you want on

The OLIVER Typewriter

The Standard Visible Writer.

You can write any of these things yourself if you do not happen to have a stenographer.

For you can easily learn, with a little practice to write just as rapidly, and as perfectly, as an expert operator on the OLIVER. Because the OLIVER is the simplest typewriter. And you can see every word that you write. About 80 per cent more durable than any other typewriter, because it has about 80 per cent less wearing points than most other typewriters.

80 per cent easier to write with than these other complicated, intricate machines that require "thorough" technical knowledge—long practice and special skill to operate.

Than machines which cannot be adjusted to any special space—with which it is impossible to write outside the insurance policies, or odd-sized documents except you buy expensive special attachments requiring experts to operate.

You can adjust the OLIVER to any reasonable space—you can write on any reasonable size and thickness of paper right out to the very edge, without the aid of any expensive attachment or special, and your work will be neat, appearing, legible and clear.

For the OLIVER is the typewriter for the doctor, the lawyer, the insurance agent, the merchant, the hotel proprietor—or any man who does his own writing.

Write to us for our booklet on the simplified features of the OLIVER.
