From the Orient.

Our friend, C. H. Bennett, who started last fall on a trip around the world, has been kind enough to send us a number of foreign newspapers from different localities and, as he says, we are interested in them and like to see them. The Mail also received the following letter from him a few days ago dated Nov. 30th, 1906, on board the Dampfer Prinz Eitel Friedrich, enroute from Rangoon to Singapore:

I am again enclosing a foreign newspaper; this time the Rangoon Gazette. I feel you take an interest in what is being done in the way of newspaper work about this old world and as the subject is also one of interest to me I'll keep you posted as I make this journey. I think you newspaper fellows need never starve if your printing press is not too heavy, for if you can get it over in this part of the world there is certainly money in the business. The paper is at 4d., or eight cents of our money over in these parts, and I wonder why.

BROKE THE LAW AND AS A RESULT BOTH SINNERS GO TO A MAD HOUSE.

STAGE STRUCK GIRL'S END

Reverent Priest And His Unholy Alliance—Life On The Stage Was Not One of Ease.

To The Mad House.

Lena Reginski has joined in a mad house the man who lured her to a life of dishonor. Twenty-one years ago, when her husband was drafted into the Russian army, love sprang up between her, and her parish priest. They eloped to America, where the young priest took the name of Reginski.

When they appeared in Whitewater township several years ago and got work in the sugar beet fields they had six children. The ex-priest's sin so bore in upon him that he became insane and when he attacked the mother of his children and pulled her hair out he was sent to the asylum.

The family was sent to a Catholic institution in Grand Rapids, but the mother soon returned to Traverse City with her oldest child. The poor commissioner found a house for the woman to live in but she soon after appeared in his office and declared the house was haunted by the spirit form of her wronged husband. That was the first intimation of the breakdown of her mind. She appeared in probate court last week.

Was Steel a Bigamist?

Did R. J. Steel, the man who wrecked a Philadelphia bank and killed himself by throwing a bomb, commit bigamy before his final lawless act? Steel's present wife is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Goodno, who lived in Lamont, seven miles west of Grand Rapids. He married her in Greenville, June 12, 1904. Steel is the second husband of the woman, her first, J. D. Osterhouse, a Pere Marquette employe, having been killed at Traverse City, January 26, 1904. Six months after his death the widow married Steel, who at that time was traveling under the name of Henry Rowland.

Steel, or Rowland, told the young widow that he was a widower by divorce. He said his wife lived in Chicago. Recent developments show that he had never been divorced. His second wife is now in Lynchburg, Va., and according to a message from her, she intends to return to Grand Rapids.

Ended Her Life.

Lured from her home by the glitter of the footlights and the promise, she told, of an easy life upon the stage, Edna Seitz, 17 years old, pretty and winsome, had her hopes blasted in Grand Rapids when the vaudeville company with which she was connected went on the rocks. In the reorganization a month ago Edna was left out.

Friendless and friendless, too proud to ask assistance of her friends and relatives in Marion, Ind., she took poison Dec. 16 in an attempt to end her life. Physicians made a brave fight to save her. She lived until Sunday night when she passed away in U. S. A. hospital.

Conklin Talks.

Melvin Conklin, the Lansing tobacco fiend, who is under arrest charged with shooting to death his brother recently, and who had maintained a stubborn silence ever since the crime, talked to the officers for the first time Wednesday. He told a wild story about a woman having committed the crime, and says he knew nothing about it. He had started to commit suicide, he declares, and was insensible from the effects of poison.

"How'd you know your brother was dead?" asked Chief Behrendt. Thereupon Conklin began to get sulen and ugly again.

Dime Novel Heroes.

Lurid pictures of far-off lands, framed in youthful minds through reading of the exploits of "Dare Devil Dick," caused John Bowen, Jack Kelly and George Simon, Detroit boys, to abandon cosy homes and positions for the adventures of the road.

Then came a wild midnight ride in a freight car, in darkness, cold and discomfort, to Lansing; discovery by the trainmen, escape, pursuit and imprisonment on the charge of stealing a ride and breaking open the car door. The lads are 15 and 16 years old.

Gaining Slowly.

Dr. H. J. Hartz, of Detroit, on his return from Farmington Saturday night, stated in reference to the health of Gov. Warner:

"Despite the enforced quiet and excellent nursing, the governor is progressing rather slowly toward recovery. Dr. Miller, his family physician, is watchful and constant attendance. The patient's right bronchial tube is congested and give rise to coughing. In all likelihood Gov. Warner will regain his full strength in a few weeks from now."

minister Thunder Shower.

A terrific thunder shower awakened Detroiters at half past 3 Tuesday morning. "Heavy thunder at this time of the year is rather unusual," says Weather Forecaster Conger. "It resulted from the low areas that exist from the Atlantic coast west to the upper Missouri. So long as these conditions exist we are likely to have a good old-fashioned thunder-storm at almost any time."

A regular midsummer thunderstorm swept over Kalamazoo at 1:30 a. m. For half an hour lightning flashed and thunder boomed with all the fury usually evidenced in July. Dr. J. E. White's house was struck by lightning and badly damaged. The chimney was torn down and floors, carpets and walls of three rooms were almost cut to pieces. The heavy rain undermined the foundation of an addition to the First Presbyterian church, causing the structure to fall when just ready for the roof, entailing a loss of $2,000.

John Olson, together with his wife and hired man, were chocked by lightning during the storm at Benton Harbor. Olson and the man were at work with a team in the field when a flash came and threw them all to the ground. Olson was badly burned about the head. The same flash struck a telephone pole and ran along the wire into the house, burning out the phone and throwing Mrs. Olson to the floor. She escaped without serious injury.

Seymour Ashley's barn, in Penfield, was struck and burned with its contents, representing a loss of $3,000. W. H. Harrington's residence in the Post addition, Battle Creek, was badly damaged. There was a small cloudburst with hail lasting several hours.

Industry Stops Temporarily

MICHIGAN STOVE WORKS SWEEPED BY FIRE WHICH DESTROYS THE PLANT.

ONE KILLED, SIX INJURED

Twenty-Two Hundred Men out of Work and a Loss of Over Five Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Cause Unknown.

Fire, fierce, spectacular and devastating, invaded the plant of the Michigan Stove company, Jefferson Avenue and Adair street, early Tuesday night, and within a few hours the immense building, with its costly contents, was reduced to a great heap of smoldering and blackened ruins, with here and there a charred and broken wall to mark the path of the flames.

The plant, the main part of which was six stories in height, and extended from Jefferson Avenue toward the river to Wight street—a distance of three blocks, with half a block frontage—was practically destroyed, the main office being the only part of the structure left intact at the time the fire was gotten under control.

George H. Barbour, general manager of the company, estimates the loss at considerably beyond $500,000, the amount of the insurance. It may be more than $500,000.

Through the burning of the plant 2,200 men are thrown out of employment, and the fire removes from Detroit's principal may one of its oldest and most honored business institutions.

Death in violent form came to one man and several other persons were more or less seriously injured. The dead man's body lies unidentified at the county morgue—the others are being cared for at various institutions. Despite the fact that their great plant was almost swept away by fire, the officials of the Michigan Stove Co. immediately began preparations to rebuild and resume operations. General Manager Barbour said, as he stood by the smoldering ruins: "Our engineer informs me that the power of the plant remains intact. The engines and boilers are practically uninjured, and we shall go to work to rebuild as rapidly as possible. The main office fronting on Jefferson Avenue, the display room, the foundry and one storage building remain in very good shape. It is difficult at this time to estimate the loss. It may be anywhere from $500,000 to $750,000. In exact figures our insurance is $380,000."

There is absolutely no clue as to the origin of the fire. It started at a most inopportune time of the day; at a time when a great many of the firemen were at supper.

Cattle Go Mad.

Smith's Crossing, five miles beyond Freeland, Saginaw county, is in a turmoil of excitement over an epidemic of hydrophobia. Eight weeks ago a mad dog came down the river road from the direction of Midland biting everything in its path. It was finally dispatched by a farmer, whom it attacked, after a fierce battle. So vicious was the dog that the farmer's horses would not pass it in the road, trembling in their tracks. He beat it off and later with a neighbor killed the animal.

Within the last few days every dog in the hamlet has gone mad, four foaming-mouthed canines being killed in one day. Three hogs belonging to one man went mad from hydrophobia and five cows were killed.

The Michigan Central railroad will begin the construction of another 400-foot freight house in Bay City.

Wm. B. De Gosta, the negro tailor accused of perjury in the Hartje divorce trial at Pittsburg, has been found guilty.

Health officer Henderson will investigate the charge of local chemist that formaldehyde is used in the milk sold in Port Huron.

Albert Munson, employed at the Gay & Kingston logging camp, Calumet, committed suicide by severing his jugular vein with a jackknife.

Mrs. Mary Hoig, a 75-year-old resident of Millburg, fell from a chair, and did not know for five days that her shoulder had been dislocated.

Best entertainment of the season will be the K. of P. big minstrel show, Jan. 23 and 24. Don't miss it. Mrs. Eva Tremaine of Detroit and her uncle Mr. Baker Canfield of Oakley, Mich., visited Mrs. John Matthews over Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Bay of South Lyon and Miss Mary Bay of Orchard Lake were guests of relatives and friends in Plymouth Sunday. A special meeting of the Plymouth Rock Lodge F. & A. M. will be held next Friday evening, 18th, for work in the 3rd degree.

Great reduction on furs at Rauch's. Louie Evans has been confined to the house for the past three or four weeks with inflammatory rheumatism, but is now improving slowly.

Raymond Brown is clerking for Schrader Bros. and Mr. Barnes of Riverdale has taken his place as lampman on the P. M. R. R.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you." Try it by attending the K. P. minstrel show Jan. 23 and 24. The recent mild and rainy weather has brought on a run of colds and grippe and the doctors are busy looking after the many cases.

The Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the M. E. will hold a bake sale on Saturday afternoon Jan. 12th, in Mr. Lombard's office.—Sec. Mrs. Austin of Kalamazoo, is conducting a class in needle work, this week and next at the home of Mrs. P. W. Voorhies. Some 25 ladies are improving the opportunity.

Great reduction on furs at Rauch's. The whist club held its first meeting of the season at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Robinson Wednesday evening. E. S. Cook was elected President and Mrs. E. L. Riggs secretary.

Every one predicts a crowded house both nights of the K. P. Minstrel show Jan. 23 and 24. There was an interesting meeting of Plymouth Chapter O. E. S., Tuesday evening. A number of visitors from Detroit and Northville were present and after working the degree a very fine banquet was enjoyed by the nearly a hundred members present.

The hardest thing to get correctly over the phone is names of persons, and friends who telephone items to this office should speak them slowly and plainly. If mistakes are made it is because names are misunderstood and to have them so misunderstood is as annoying to us as it is to the persons sending in the item.

Five ballots were taken Wednesday evening by the Republican caucus at Lansing for United States Senator, after which the caucus adjourned for one day. The fifth ballot stood Arthur Hill 22, McMillan 24, W. A. Smith 42, Townsend 27. Necessary to a choice 64. The prospects are looking well and the prospects are looking well and the prospects are looking well.

The second division of the ladies' aid society of the M. E. church will serve a 25-cent chicken dinner at the church Wednesday, Jan. 16th, from 11:30 to 1:30, which all are most cordially invited to attend. Menu: Roast Chicken, Mashed Potatoes, Dressing with brown gravy, Turnip Sauce, Cabbage Salad, Applesauce, Brown Bread, White Bread, Pickles, Cheese, Apple Pie, Mince Pie, Tea, Oatmeal.

For several years there has been a dispute of the ownership of a few feet of land between Mrs. Ella Perrin and the village. Recently the village had the land surveyed and enclosed it with a wire fence. Mrs. Perrin claimed an encroachment and the advice of an attorney had the fence torn down, plus forcing the village to make good its claim. A suit at law will be begun to establish the rightful ownership.

The weather last Thursday evening was responsible for the comparatively small audience that gathered at the opera house to hear the Cleveland Ladies' orchestra. The number was regarded as the "leader" of the present lecture course of the Woman's Literary Club and had the weather been propitious a crowded house would undoubtedly have been the result.

The orchestra as a whole is one of the best of the kind on the road and individual members thereof are regarded as among the highest class. Should the company appear here again they will be met with unbounded enthusiasm. Every number last Thursday evening received two and three encores by a most appreciative and enthusiastic audience.

The Wizard of Electricity—Rene B. Welbourn.
 Two fine entertainments have already been given on the lecture course of the Woman's Literary Society. Did you miss them? Too bad! too bad! Don't cry out your eyes now, but hasten to secure your ticket for the two remaining numbers of the course. Terms, 50 cents for both lectures, with 10 cents additional for each for reserved seats, if desired.

Competent critics declare Rene B. Welbourn to be one of the greatest popular science experimentalists before the public. Just think of seeing him experiment while he explains the mysteries of "wireless telegraphy." His subject, "In the Year 2000," with the experiments, gives his audience a glimpse of what will be done with electricity by and by and converts dreams into realities. His recall dates in the various cities where he has lectured is the most convincing testimony. Detroit five times, and yet we did not hear him. But now we may see and hear him for a trifling sum. Don't forget the date—Monday evening, Jan. 28.—E.

SCHOOL NOTES.
 The new books have arrived for the library. Letha Brown of Stark has entered our 9th grade. The Grammar Review are busily engaged in diagraming. Clarence Selleck is the latest addition to the Seventh Grade.

Watch our columns for further notice concerning the "cantata" The German II. has just started the German Composition by Bernhardt. We are looking forward to the coming examinations with very little joy. One of the Sophomore boys has a necktie which the girls seem to admire.

High School visitors: Don Packard, Eva Merrill, Robert Jolliffe, Edgar Jolliffe. Two little(?) Junior girls delight in making the last period as interesting as possible. Chemistry teacher—"How can you make soft water hard?" Bright Senior—"Freeze it."

Guy Barchus returned to school Tuesday after spending the holidays in Ann Arbor. The Chemistry class has begun their review for the exams, which come the last of the month. The Physiography class has been studying the interesting subject of Animal Geography.

The expression class are getting less timid as they get more accustomed to their work. There are three speakers each day. Between 11:30 and 12:30 you can see high school students hurrying back and forth to school. Don't be alarmed—only an hour's nooning, that is all.

The girls have had their plans somewhat changed during the week. They now march out in the hall to the merry strains of the piano, get their wraps, come in again, put them on and then march home. The pupils of the sixth grade debated Wednesday on the question, "Is country or city life the most beneficial for children?" Those representing the country—Madeline Bennett, Veida Bogert, Imogene Smith and Helen VanDebar, the city Henry Baker, Alton Richwine, Helen Passage and Edna Fisher. The country side won the day.

Cure of Lung Trouble.
 "It is now eleven years since I had a narrow escape from consumption," writes C. Q. Floyd, a leading business man of Kershaw, S. C. "I had run down in weight to 135 pounds, and coughing was constant both by day and night. Finally I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and continued this for about six months, when my cough and lung trouble were entirely gone and I was restored to my normal weight, 170 pounds." Thousands of persons are healed every year. Guaranteed at The Wolverine Drug Co. and John L. Gale's, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

CHURCH NEWS.

Communion service will be held at First Church of Christ, Scientist Sunday morning, 10 a. m. Subject, "Sacrament." Sunday school for children, H. A. M. Wednesday evening testimonial service 7 P. M. Every one is welcome.

Services at the Universalist church 10:30. Subject for the sermon next Sunday, "One View of Divine Perfection." The Y. P. C. U. service at 7 p. m. Subject, "Our Idea of Heaven? Where is it? What is it?" The Union will hold a ten cent "candy pull" social in the church vestry on Friday evening, Jan. 18. All come and have a good time.

Service in Baptist church next Sunday as follows: Men's meeting 10 a. m. Morning sermon 10:30. Theme, "The Man Who Can." Sunday school 11:45. B. Y. P. U. 6:30. Leader, Miss Hattie Hartsoogh. Topic, "How God's Image is preserved in us, or lost." Union service in the evening, the closing service of the week of prayer. Mid-week service Wednesday night at 7:30. A welcome to all services.

Presbyterian notice for the week—Sunday, 10:30, morning worship. The pastor will speak on "Felix's Folly." The report of the past year's finances will be circulated and recommendation will be made for the coming year by a representative of the board of trustees, 11:15, Sunday-school. 6:00, Union Young People's meeting. This will be a service of prayer for the service to follow under the leadership of Rev. Howard Goldie. Let us make this a fit culmination for the week of prayer.

At the annual meeting Monday evening Asa Joy was elected treasurer for the ensuing year; Mr. B. B. Bennett elder for a term of three years and the board of trustees reduced from seven to five, Messrs. Harry Shattuck and Chauncey Rauch being elected for a term of three years.

Methodist Church notes.—Sunday services 10:00 a. m. Sermon, "The Eternal Gospel." 11:30, Sabbath school. The attendance last Sunday reached high water mark, exceeding that before the holidays.

One week from Sunday Rev. J. E. Jackson, D. D., associate editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate, will occupy the pulpit in the morning and the pastor will preach in the Preston church, Detroit.

A larger interest is being taken in the missionary cause. Ladies of the congregation should give their attention to the home and foreign mission societies, both of which are doing excellent work.

Great reduction on furs at Rauch's. Trolley parties will attend the K. P. minstrel show from Northville, Wayne and Detroit Jan. 23rd.

The village council has purchased the 80 acre tract of land on which is located the source of the village water supply in Northville township, the price to be paid being $3800. The land was bid in at a sale by Jacob Bogert for the village. Half of the land will be again sold by the village to a prospective buyer and there is said to be some $900 worth of timber and wood on the place. There is no question but what the action of the council is a wise one, there being now no danger of the water supply ever being interfered with by any one.

Should the present spring become unable to deliver the needed supply, the premises just purchased will furnish any amount of water, there being practically a lake of water within a few feet of the surface.

K. of P. Minstrel show Jan. 23 and 24. Woman's Literary Club.

The seventh regular meeting of the Woman's Literary Club was held Jan. 4th, 1907, with the President in the chair. There were twenty active and nine associate members present. Sport called responded to with holiday spoils in China. The program was in charge of the seventh division with Mrs. Fraser as leader. A paper on religions and superstitions of China was read by Mrs. Ableson. Mrs. Ronald read an interesting article on what Christianity has done for women. A paper on the falling off in Protestant ministry was read by Mrs. Fraser. Jan. 18th being open day the club will be entertained at Mr. Hugh Ronald's.—Sec'y.

SERIAL STORY

MARCH OF THE WHITE GUARD

SIR GILBERT PARKER

Jasper Hume looked steadily into the eyes of the man who had wronged him. "Remember, Varre, you begin the world again. I am going now. By the memory of old days, good-by, and he held out his hand. Varre Lepage took it and rose tremblingly to his feet, and said, "You are a good man, Jasper Hume. Good-by!"

The Sub-factor turned at the door. "If it will please you, tell your wife that I saved you. Some one will tell her, perhaps I would rather—at least it would be more natural, if you did it." He passed out into the heat of sunshine that streamed into the room and fell across the figure of Varre Lepage, who sat and said dreamily, "And begin the world again."

Before Jasper Hume mounted, almost immediately after, to join the White Guard now ready for the journey back, Jacques sprang upon him and pushed his nose against his master's heart. And once again, and for the last time that we shall hear it, Jasper Hume said, "It's all right, Jacques."

And then they started for the north again. As they were doing so a shadow fell across the sunlight that streamed upon Varre Lepage. He looked up. There was a startled cry of joy, an answering exclamation of love, and Rose Lepage was locked in her husband's arms.

A few moments after and the sweet-faced woman said: "Who was the man who rode away to the north as I came up, Varre? He reminded me of some one, but I can't think who it is."

"That was the leader of the White Guard, the man who saved me, my wife." He paused a moment and then solemnly said, "That man was Jasper Hume!"

The wife rose to her feet with a spring. "He saved you! He saved you! Jasper Hume!—oh, Varre!"

"He saved me, Rose!" Her eyes were wet. "And he would not stay, and let me thank him! Poor fellow, poor Jasper—Hume! Has he then been up here these ten years?"

His face was flushed and pain was struggling with the joy she felt in seeing her husband again.

"Yes, he has been up here all that time."

"He has not succeeded in life, Varre!" and her thoughts went back to the days when, blind and ill, Jasper Hume went away for health's sake, and she remembered how sorry then she felt for him, and how grieved she was that when he came back strong and well, he did not come near her or her husband, and offered so congratulations. She had not deliberately wronged him. She did not know he wished her to be his wife. She knew he cared for her, but so did Varre Lepage. A promise had been given to another when Jasper Hume went away; and after that she grew to love the successful, kind-mannered genius who became her husband. Even in this happiness of hers, sitting once again at her husband's feet, she thought with a tender and glowing kindness of the man who had cared for her eleven years ago; and who had not now saved her husband.

The curtain rises for the last act of that drama of life which is connected with the brief history of the White Guard.

A great gathering is dispersing from a hall in Piccadilly. It has been drawn together to do honor to a man who has achieved a triumph in engineering science. As he steps from the platform to go he is greeted by a fusillade of cheers. He bows calmly and kindly. He is a man of vigorous yet reserved aspect; he has a rare individuality. He receives with a quiet cordiality the personal congratulations of his friends. He remains for some time in conversation with a royal Duke, who takes his arm and with him passes into the street. The Duke is a member of this great man's club, and offers him a seat in his brougham. Amid the cheers of the people they drive away together. Inside the club there are fresh congratulations, and it is proposed to arrange an impromptu dinner, at which the Duke will preside. But with modesty and honest thanks the great man declines. He pleads an engagement. He had pledged this engagement the day before to a well-known society. After his health is proposed he makes his adieux, and leaving the club, walks away toward a West-end square. In one of its streets he pauses and enters a building called "Providence Chambers." His servant hands him a cablegram. He passes to his library, and standing before the fire, opens it. It reads: "My wife and I send congratulations to the great man."

Jasper Hume stands for a moment looking at the fire, and then says simply, "I wish my poor old Jacques were here." He then sits down and writes this letter:—

"My Dear Friends:—Your cablegram has made me glad. The day is over. My last idea was more successful than I even dared to hope; and the world has been kind. I went down to see your boy, Jasper, at Clifton last week. It was the 13th, his birthday, you know, ten years old, and a clever, strong-minded little fellow. He is quite contented. As he is my god-child I again claimed the right of putting a thousand dollars to his credit in the bank—I have to speak of dollars to you people living in Canada—which I have done on his every birthday. When he is twenty-one he will have twenty-one thousand dollars—quite enough for a start in life. We get along well together, and I think he will develop a fine faculty for science. In the summer, as I said, I will bring him over to you. There is nothing more to say to-night except that I am as always,

"He Saved You! He Saved You! Jasper Hume!—Oh, Varre!"

"Your faithful friend,
"JASPAR HUME."

A moment after the letter was finished the servant entered and announced "Mr. Late Caracallen." With a smile and hearty greeting the great man and this member of the White Guard meet. It was to entertain his old Arctic comrade that Jasper Hume had declined to be entertained by society or club. A little while after, seated at the table, the ex-Sub-factor said: "You found your brother well, Caracallen?"

The jaws moved slowly as of old. "Ay, that, and a grand minister, Captain."

"He wanted you to stay in Scotland, I suppose."

"Ay, that, but there's no place for me like Fort Providence."

"Try this phosgen." And you see Sub-factor now, Caracallen?"

"There's two of us Sub-factors—Jeff Hyde and myself. Mr. Field is old and can't do much work, and looks in heavy now."

"Yes; I hear from the Factor now and then. And Gaspe Toussaint?"

"He went away three years ago, but he said he'd come back. He never did though. Jeff Hyde believes he will. He says to me a hundred times,

"Caracallen, he made the sign of the cross that he'd come back from Saint Gabriel's; and that's next to the Book with a Papist. If he's alive he'll come."

"Perhaps he will," Caracallen. And Cloud-in-the-Sky?"

"He's still there, and comes in and smokes with Jeff Hyde and me, as he used to do with you, sir; but he doesn't obey our orders as he did those of the Captain of the White Guard. He said to me when I left, 'You see Strong-back, tell him Cloud-in-the-Sky good Indian—he never forgets. How!'"

Jasper Hume raised his glass with smiling and thoughtful eyes: "To Cloud-in-the-Sky and all who never forget!" he said.

THE END.

HOURS FOR SLEEP AND DREAMS.

General Method of Living Declared to Be Wrong.

There certainly is good reason to suspect that our entire general method of living, so far as differentiation of waking and sleeping hours is concerned, is wrong, but it does not seem as yet to have occurred to the learned men to make the simple experiments requisite to the acquirement of exact knowledge, says the North American Review. Any one, of course, can do it to his own satisfaction, but the individual result of an unscientific test would be far from conclusive. An effort by any of our own societies to determine whether there may not be in this simple revolution of hours a panacea for American nerves, would seem to be in order. We would not, of course, anticipate any immediate effect, whatever the result of such experimentation, because human nature is obstinate and long

HER GLOVES

"Sometimes," said the pretty young woman with a sigh, "it is dreadfully hard to remember that one is a perfect lady! There are occasions when it would be such a relief to be just ordinarily vulgar and able to say what you think. Not that one ever gains anything by expressing one's opinion except relief to an overcharged soul. The last time my soul was overcharged was when I bought these long black kid gloves."

"They are mighty pretty gloves," said the young man who was listening, reaching for one of them in an absent-minded way.

"No black dressed kid-glove is pretty," returned the girl calmly, as she skillfully removed the glove—with her hand inside—from his grasp. "Gloves used to be merely one item in a girl's expense account, but nowadays you buy your season's supply of gloves and then if you have any money left over you purchase dresses and hats and inexpensive things like that. This short-sleeved rage may be sending the glove manufacturers' wives to Europe and buying diamonds for their daughters, but it is a tragedy to the rest of us."

"I like you in short sleeves," said the young man. "Your arm—"

"It isn't the sleeves I'm objecting to," the young woman interrupted. "It's the gloves to meet the sleeves."

"I was in a hurry when I ordered these," she continued, "so I told the clerk that my size was No. 6 1/2 and to send them. When they came I began to have doubts. One hates to pay $3.50 for gloves and not have them fit. So I carried them back and asked to have them tried on. They proved altogether too small. The haughty person waiting on me looked me over with cold contempt at having exposed my vanity in trying to wear gloves not big enough for me. It made no difference that I had worn 6 1/2 gloves all my life, for I could tell by her sniff that she felt that she had unmasked me. She tried on a larger size and the top button would not button."

"I shall have to give you your money back," she said languidly. "I have nothing—ah—large enough for you."

"Ridiculous!" cried the young man, making another attempt to examine the glove with the hand inside.

"Yes, wasn't it?" agreed the young woman. "I knew I was not syphilike, but I had never before considered myself as belonging to the Broddingnagian class. So I went to another store. I asked for two sizes larger, and while they were pretty loose I didn't mind that for winter wear. I felt quite soothed because this clerk fitted me without acting in the least as though she was performing any herculean feat."

"Well, the first time I wore my new gloves the thumb seam pulled out in spite of their being very loose. Indignantly I marched back. I was going to spread the gloves out before the man at the complaint desk, remark that I had worn them just once and then wait to see remorse and guilt overspread his face. When he had sufficiently groveled I was going to permit him tremblingly to give me an order for a new pair so as to save the reputation of the store."

"There were a few hitches in my scheme. In the first place, the stage settings were not right. Instead of a clear space and an attentive man I found a crowd of 20 or 30 women fighting to get at a grim-looking individual inclosed in a little cage. They all clutched long gloves, mostly black, and they all talked at once. On a sort of tidal wave I found myself swept up to him. I was gasping for breath and just waved the gloves feebly at him. I forgot my speech, though I did murmur something about new gloves."

"It seemed to electrify him. He shot a baleful glare at me and growled out in a sort of ascending roar: 'New gloves! Certainly not! Where would our profits be if I gave all these women new gloves? Certainly we don't guarantee long gloves, madam. I never we do guarantee short ones, but never the long ones. Sorry. Just your bad luck to get a pair that tore out, but we'll mend 'em.'

"They mended them and they tore worse and then they set in a little piece and I waited two weeks for them to do it and now they're just patched gloves. And they skimp on the kid so they won't go up over my arm right and it's just horrid anyhow, and I think somebody ought to do something about it!"

"I will," said the young man promptly. "I'll promise to buy you brand-new gloves whenever you want them if you'll only say you'll marry—"

"Pooh!" said the girl, and she dimpled and turned pink. "If I couldn't manage a proposal all by itself without making it up with a stray chance like a glove story—"

"It takes a mighty intelligent person to know a chance when he sees it," said the young man.

This time he kept hold of the glove with the hand in it.

It's better for a girl to have a fortune than a fitted husband, because if she has the can get the other with it if she insists on it.—N. Y. Press.

BLOATED WITH DROPSY.

The Heart Was Badly Affected When the Patient Began Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maxwell, of 115 West Fourth street, Olympia, Wash., says: "For over three years I suffered with a dropsical condition without being aware that it was due to kidney trouble. The early stages were principally back-ache and bearing-down pain, but I went along without worrying much until dropsy set in. My feet and ankles swelled up, my hands puffed and became so tense I could hardly close them. I had great difficulty in breathing, and my heart would flutter with the least exertion. I could not walk far without stopping again and again to rest. Since using four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills the bloating has gone down and the feelings of distress have disappeared."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Comment That Stung.

The marquis of Lansdown, leader of unionist peers in the British parliament, speaks rarely but always with effect. He revels in grave sarcasm. On one occasion Lord Crewe, the liberal leader, made a speech on a subject which he desired to leave a matter for open voting among his followers. Lord Lansdowne congratulated his friend on his eloquent speech. "I have followed it," he said, "with earnest attention not only on account of the importance of the subject but also on account of the noble lord's judicial attitude. I admired his earnestness and eloquence, but what impressed me most was his impartiality." A pause. "Yes, until the last minute I did not know on which side of the fence his lordship was coming down."

Tallest American Soldier.

The distinction of being the tallest man in the United States army belongs to Ernest D. Peck, a first lieutenant in the engineer corps. He is six feet four and a half inches in height. Lieutenant Peck is a native of Wisconsin and was graduated from the Oshkosh high school. Lieutenant Peck is now on duty at Yellowstone Park, Wyoming, and has supervised the building of a military road known as Peck's Pike. He is called Pike's Peak by his comrades in the service.

Safe, Sure and Speedy.

No external remedy ever yet devised has so fully and unquestionably met these three prime conditions as Alcock's Plasters. They are safe because they contain no deleterious drugs and are manufactured upon scientific principles of medicine. They are sure because nothing goes into them except ingredients which are exactly adapted to the purposes for which a plaster is required. They are speedy in their action because their medicinal qualities go right to their work of relieving pain and restoring the natural and healthy performance of the functions of muscles, nerves and skin.

Alcock's Plasters are the original and genuine porous plasters and like most meritorious articles have been extensively imitated, therefore always make sure and get the genuine.

Some men can't even do their duty without making a fuss about it.

ANIMALS THAT SHED TEARS.

Travelers' Observations Have Proved That Weeping is Common.

Travelers through the Syrian desert have seen horses weep from thirst, a mule has been seen to cry from the pain of an injured foot and camel, it is said, sheds tears in streams, says a writer in Harper's Weekly. A cow sold by its mistress who had weaned young soko ape used to cry from vexation if Livingston didn't nurse it in his arms when it asked him to. Wounded apes have died crying, and apes have wept over their young slain by hunters. A chimpanzee trained to carry water jugs broke one and fell a-crying, which proved sorrow, though it wouldn't mend the jug. Babes, discovering their young drowned, have been moved to tears. A giraffe which a huntsman's rifle had injured, began to cry when approached. Sea lions often weep over the loss of their young. Gordon Cummings observed tears trickling down the face of a young elephant. And even an orang-outang when deprived of its mango was so vexed that it took to weeping. There is little doubt, therefore, that animals do cry from grief or weep from pain or annoyance.

Mark Twain's Neat Answer.

Eugene Ware, of Topeka, recently wrote to Mark Twain: "I picked up your last volume. I read it clear through from cover to cover; it was like a bob-tailed bush. I could not lay it down." From No. 31 Fifth Avenue, New York city, Mr. Clemens answered back as follows: "Dear Mr. Ware: I am an old brass-bound, copper-pivoted, fire-assayed Presbyterian, with 71 years' experience in unworldliness, and I don't understand your metaphor, but I know it was intended as a compliment and I make it cordially welcome."

THE YELLOW PERIL

BY JOHN FORBES

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

An oppressive gloom pervaded the atmosphere of the Capital club, and in the Red room a slow departing twilight, penetrating with difficulty heavy black masses of tobacco smoke, was the only illumination. No one had cared to press the electric button. Occasionally one of a dozen or more glowing cigar ends seemed to awaken from a reverie to beam brightly for a moment—then relapse again like the eye of a drowsy tiger. There was no sound in the room and scarcely a perceptible movement, save now and then a finger flicked the ashes away of a hand removed a weed from close-shut lips.

For several minutes thus—then the deep-voiced cabinet secretary, with dignified deliberation, resumed, "And, gentlemen, when all is said and done, the entire situation may be briefly summarized. As the general has explained, they have encroached upon our northern boundary until a barrier of armed men extends from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Our southern boundary is a glittering line of bayonets from Gulf to Gulf. If we drive back a regiment we retreat to our lines before a brigade."

"A corps, Mr. Secretary, an entire army corps," interposed the general. "And," continued the secretary, "their fleets protect their commerce in every harbor of the world. For every torpedo boat we possess they have a cruiser, and for every destroyer or over whose decks our flag floats a battleship flaunts their colors to the breeze. They have naval stations within 50 hours of our most sequestered sea ports. They have invested our Great Lakes. Our insular possessions we have ceded to them, with honor, indeed, but I cannot say, gentlemen, without coercion—subtle, perhaps, but still coercion."

Lo Toon, their prime minister, is exceedingly frank. "It is not," he says, "a matter of conquest, but a struggle for existence. My people must have breath—they are suffocating. We have our fisheries at the very south pole, and every foot of the bleak Siberian steppes yields its quota of rice or millet—nay, even though it needs be rooted with glass to keep the earth from strangling in its frozen clutch the sprouting seeds. There is no area in all the western hemisphere, from ice-bound valleys of northmost bays and rivers to lofty snow-capped Cordillera in the south, save what is occupied by these United States of yours, but responds to the industry of my people. And you have room, room, room. You are uncompassionate. You must see the inevitable. This, gentlemen, is the situation. We are encompassed. Our navy is helpless, our army but barely holds at bay the hordes upon our borders. Our lines of fortifications are problems which cannot long remain unsolved. The time when statesmanship availed us has long, long since gone by."

"Gentlemen," and the secretary's voice was scarcely audible, "I fear, I greatly fear we are undone."

There was silence again and the cigar ends glowed more ominously in the deepening gloom. An onyx clock on the mantel over a closed fireplace ticked aggressively and the match with which the secretary relighted his cigar sputtered noisily.

"Mr. Secretary!" The professor's passionless voice sounded afar off, but every eye, startled and now lighted, turned toward him. The secretary responded: "Professor!"

"Since it appears, Mr. Secretary," he calmly continued, "that this disaster which has been impending for so long is about to fall upon and crush us. Since it is evident from what you say that the defense of our beloved country has passed beyond the power of its natural agencies. Since diplomacy and force of arms are alike hopeless, may I not submit the proposition that the defense of our nation has entered the realm of science and as a humble disciple of truth volunteer my services in its behalf. It must still be war—most horrible, most hellish war—and God alone knows how I hate it and shrink from it; but I make the sacrifice gladly."

"I had forbore hoping, professor, and I must still forbear." The secretary, breathed deeply.

The professor had arisen and passed silently from the room and the cigar ends glowed brightly in the direction of the half open door.

checked and agreed with our information, so the men were sent here with all dispatch, for they would explain nothing save to your highness." The courtier bowed deeply.

"Bring them in. I would look upon them." The prime minister seemed appeased. Once more the courtier bowed deeply, then left the room.

Soon, surrounded by several soldiers, but unbound and walking, the two men were brought in. The glitter in Lo Toon's eyes was more needle-like than before.

"Why," he asked them, and paused, smiling the while, then, repeated, "Why did you bring us these plans?" The two men drooped their heads.

"Why?" he again repeated, and then, in higher key and standing close before them, "Answer me or—"

The older man, pale-faced and bare of brow, with arm tied in a sling, looked up and, sighing deeply, murmured but little louder than a whisper, "Because we loved our country."

Lo Toon turned to reseat himself, then hesitated. "Take them away," he said, and to a closer attendant, "Some tea, some tea, slave; quickly! quickly." Suddenly he fell into his throne, thence to the floor, grasping the while his forehead and his eyes.

And so the plague commenced. Right and left men died, and the women and the children. Along the water courses they were piled high, like slain sheep in wild endeavor to assuage their thirst. Some fell at once upon their very tracks without a moan, and some lived on and on, on, muttering, laughing, shrieking, cursing, until at length death came. Those still alive fled north to the Siberian steppes and spread the pestilence there, or south to India and the fisheries at the nether pole, and spread the pestilence there, or eastward over oceans and spread the pestilence there. The sky at noon was darkened by the flight of vultures—the land was given to the wolf and jackal. Every dim outpost, every wild retreat was searched by this fierce death blight and writed by its awful might. Then, when every human fragment had disappeared, the wolves and vultures and jackals went and ate each other, till scarce were there enough to waken with their howls the trembling ebon night.

It was again twilight, and in the Red room of the Capital club, the professor, pale-faced and bare of brow, sat reading intently a book before him. The secretary entered.

"Tell me, professor," he commenced, and the professor looked gravely up, keeping his place in the book with his index finger, "tell me how you did it."

"Why," he calmly replied, "I merely carried in my mouth a capsule containing a sort of microbe culture which we had been developing here at the Jonesian institute, and blew them in the face of the prime minister. They attack vigorously rice-eating races, you know. Others are practically immune. That was all."

The secretary watched the professor, as he pored more closely over his tome in the dimming light, then slowly turned away, muttering as he did so, "Ye Gods!"

BOLD WORK OF PIRATES.

Chinese Sea Robbers Captured Three Launches Off Busy Post.

This tale from Hongkong shows the ingenuity and courage of modern Chinese pirates: "Ten men who appeared to be harmless laborers, boarded the British steam launch Fianam just below Washow. They had been on board only a little time when they suddenly produced revolvers, searched and bound the passengers and crew, and took charge of the vessel. Their captain took the rudder and deliberately collided, while going at high speed, with a larger Chinese launch, the Chanfook. The robbers were hung to the deck by the force of the collision, but instantly sprang up and leaped on board the Chanfook.

AN IMPORTANT CASE

Patient Cured of Ataxia Gives the Entire Credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. S. C. Wellock, of 114 Cleveland Avenue, Everett, Mass., the wife of an employe in the government works at Chelsea, says:

"I had been troubled with nervousness for ten years and the disease kept growing on me. Then I learned that I was suffering from locomotor ataxia. I had terrible tremblings in my right leg which would get rigid and when this happened in the street I had to stand still until it passed away to keep from falling. My right arm felt as if a thousand needles were pricking it. The sheet touching my knee in bed would nearly cause me to scream out with pain, and both knees were so weak I could hardly stand."

"I had to use a cane and be helped about by my son. Then the pain began to settle in the calves of my legs and the muscles became numb and quivered constantly. The cords under my knees seemed to be drawn up tight and the terrible shooting pains in my legs would nearly drive me insane. My toes became numb and at times would prickle as if needles were being thrust into them. My eyes became dull and black spots floated before them. My heart was very weak."

"My attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I bought several boxes right away and soon felt relief. I was so pleased that I kept on taking them until they cured me entirely, and I have had no symptoms of the trouble for over a year."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. A booklet, entitled, "Nervous Disorders," sent free on request.

MANY SOURCES OF SALT.

That from Natural Springs is Generally Most Nearly Pure.

The purity of salt depends upon the source from which it is obtained and the sanitary conditions under which it is prepared for the market. The supply of common salt, the most indispensable of all the seasoning substances both as a relishing condiment and a well-nigh universal food preservative, is exhausted, yet even so there is salt and salt, says the Pictorial Review.

Formerly, salt was obtained by evaporating ocean water, a process that left many impurities in the residuum, to say nothing of its exposure to all kinds of dirt in its shipment from seaports. The Turk's island or rock salt, which is still largely used in pork packing and in the manufacture of ice creams, comes to the United States in holds of vessels continually subjected to dirt and foul odors. Upon its arrival it is again handled, then packed in coarse burlap bags, permitting dust to sift into the salt. In this condition it reaches the consumer.

Latterly, however, the product of salt springs has largely taken the lead in this country not only for table salt but for meat packing. The annual production from this source in the United States reaches more than 40,000,000 bushels, the state of New York in the vicinity of Syracuse furnishing a large proportion of this important supply.

NEVER TIRES

If the Food That Restored Her to Health.

"My food was killing me and I didn't know the cause," writes a Colorado young lady. "For two years I was thin and sickly, suffering from indigestion and inflammatory rheumatism. I had tried different kinds of diet, plain living, and many of the remedies recommended, but got no better."

"Finally, about five weeks ago, a friend suggested that I try Grape-Nuts, and I began at once, eating it with a little cream or milk. A change for the better began at once. To-day I am well and am gaining weight and strength all the time. I've gained 10 lbs. in the last few weeks and do not suffer any more from indigestion and the rheumatism is all gone."

"I know it is the Grape-Nuts alone that I owe my restored health. I still eat the food twice a day and never tire of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The flavor of Grape-Nuts is peculiar to itself. It is neutral, not too sweet and has an agreeable, healthful quality that never grows tiresome.

One of the sources of rheumatism is from overloading the system with acid material, the result of imperfect digestion and assimilation of food. As soon as improper food is abandoned and Grape-Nuts taken regularly, digestion is made strong, the good food so their work of building up good red blood cells and of carrying away the excess of disease-making material from the system.

OLD CAPT. CACK'S QUESTION.

Somewhat Pointed, But It Denoted Quick Intelligence.

Pierce Jay, the commissioner of banks of Massachusetts, at the American Bankers' association's convention in St. Louis, advocated a better accounting system.

"But above all," said Mr. Jay, in a discussion of his idea, "we want intelligence, if embezzlement is to be thoroughly put down. Systems are good, but intelligence is better, and in cashiers and tellers and bookkeepers and note clerks we want the same keen, quick intelligence that characterized old Capt. Hiram Cack, of Gloucester."

"Cack lay very ill. One day he got down-hearted, feeling that his case was hopeless."

"I fear, doctor," he said, "there isn't much hope for me."

"Oh, yes, there is," the doctor answered. "Three years ago I was in your condition precisely, and look at me now."

"Cack, intelligent and alert, said quickly: "What doctor did you have?"

ALMOST A SOLID SORE.

Skin Disease from Birth—Fortune Spent on Her Without Benefit—Cured Her with Cuticura.

"I have a cousin in Rockingham Co. who once had a skin disease from her birth until she was six years of age. Her father had spent a fortune on her to get her cured and none of the treatments did her any good. Old Dr. Q— suggested that he try the Cuticura Remedies which he did. When he commenced to use it the child was almost a solid scab. He had used it about two months and the child was well. I was there when they commenced to use your Cuticura Remedies. I stayed that week and then returned home and stayed two weeks and then went back and stayed with them two weeks longer, and when I went home I could hardly believe she was the same child. Her skin was as soft as a baby's without a scar on it. I have not seen her in seventeen years, but I have heard from her and the last time I heard from her she was well. Mrs. W. P. Ingle, Burlington, N. C., June 16, 1905."

HE WANTED LIVE NEWS.

Correspondent Had No Time to Waste with Vice President.

Vice President Fairbanks stopped a newspaper man the other day, and good-naturedly asked explanation of an incident which happened years ago. On that occasion Mr. Fairbanks and the correspondent were chatting pleasantly, when suddenly the latter moved away to meet Senator Chandler of Maine. The vice president said: "I have always had great curiosity to know why you deserted me that day."

The newspaper man hesitated for a moment, and then replied: "To tell you the truth, Mr. Vice President, you are a mighty dry source of news. You may have a nose for news, but I doubt if, at any rate, you never give up any. Now, when a newspaper man is gleaning for big news he hasn't got time to stop and exchange small talk with a man, even if he be a senator, who would not know the price of news if he saw it." Mr. Fairbanks smiled. "I thank you for your frankness," he said. "I am I shall have to cultivate a nose for news."

What is Pe-ru-na?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is it Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Perena as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Perena a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic? Our reply is that Perena is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membrane affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system. Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital force.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trio of medical agents is formed in Perena which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLINSORIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FLORENSIS and GEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Perena is beyond criticism. The use of Perena, confirms this opinion. Numerous testimonials from every quarter of the civilized world amply evidence that this judgment is not over-enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.
