Nearly all fruits and vegetables are scarce and much higher than they were last year. Tomatoes, cauliflower and cucumber pickles are very high compared to last year's prices, and the celery crop is extremely short. Fruit is high and the quality poor. Peaches cost about double that of last year and pears are almost impossible to obtain. Pines are the only fruit that is anywhere near last year's crop.

A Humane Appeal.

A humane citizen of Richmond, Ind Mr. U. D. Williams, 107 West Main-st. says: "I appeal to all persons with weak lungs to take Dr. King's New Discovery, the only remedy that has helped me and fully comes up to the proprietor's recommendation." It saves more lives than all other throat and lung remedies put together. Used as a cough and cold cure the world over. Cures asthma, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, quinsy, hoarseness and pneumonia, stops hemorrhages of the lungs and builds them up. Guaranteed at The Wolverine Drug Co.'s and John L. Gale's. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

Commercial Opportunities Abroad.

More suggestions to American manufacturers and dealers that if they will get busy there is a chance to extend their trade abroad. They are to be found, where many similar hints have been given, in the consular reports. A sample is the statement by Consul Dunlap of Cologne, Germany, who has been to the farmers' fair at Dusseldorf and evidently kept his eyes open while there. Consul Dunlap took particular note of the agricultural machinery on exhibition and which was put to test at the fair. He noted that the only American machines on exhibition were of minor importance, and adds: "An American-made harvester with self-binding attachment sells here for about $200. There was an endless variety of plows, but no American-made ones were noticed. The plows look heavy, awkward and poorly made. If American manufacturers want German trade, they will have to make plows to conform to German ideas of size, shape and style." Here is much the same advice that has come from other consuls, all given with earnest desire to help American interests. American farming implements and machinery are justly famed for superiority in the qualities needed for effective and economical work, and when properly pushed they invariably find customers abroad. At the same time, remarks the Troy Times, due attention must be given to local tastes and preferences, a matter which is too much neglected by American manufacturers. Old-world manufacturers succeed in such markets very largely because they are careful to ascertain what is wanted and then to cater to the demand.

Divorce Statistics.

The census office is busy gathering divorce statistics, and when they are compiled and tabulated, and printed some very interesting conclusions can be figured out from them. We have always admired the type of mind which attempts to tabulate human emotions, there is such a fine audacity about an effort like that, such a splendid refusal to recognize the limitations of mathematics. And we admire that kind of statistics for their own sake; they are so accommodating, so willing, so good-natured; they let you work out of them any conclusion which you are minded to put into them; they exist for the convenience of the man who has a case to prove, and they are so liberal and catholic that they would just as soon help him prove one case as another. There are few other things on earth that have so lowly a disposition as a scientific of statistics, says Uncle Remus' Magazine. These particular statistics will probably enumerate the number of cases of infidelity, the number of cases of cruelty, and the instances where desertion, drunkenness, and so forth, led to divorce; and the optimists will take them and be optimistic, the pessimists will take them and be pessimistic; the advocates of laxer divorce laws will prove their case, and the advocates of stiffer divorce laws will prove theirs, and everybody will be happy.

An appeal is being made in England for funds to undertake the great task of excavating the ruins of Memphis, the work to be done under the auspices of the British school of archaeology. It is strange that the exploration of the ancient Egyptian capital has been deferred so long, and it is expected that England will now do for Memphis what the French government has done for Delphi and the Germans for Olympia. The sites of the four great temples are plainly marked, so that exploration can begin at once. This mass of ruins covers 100 acres, as much as the whole site of Karnak, and it is estimated that $15,000 will be needed annually for 15 years to accomplish the work. Important material is believed to lie within a few yards of the surface, so that results should be reached promptly.

Speaking about the navy jack tar's uniform, the New York Sun says: "Jack cannot wear his pancake cap when he is squinting through the telescopic sight of a six-inch rapid-fire gun." Those who have had experience on the warships know that when Jack is engaged in fighting, or even in target practice, he doesn't as a rule wear much of anything.

A Pennsylvania woman declares that during a recent trance she had a glimpse of heaven. If so she is the only Pennsylvania on record as having enjoyed such a privilege. Most of her fellow citizens, at least those who get into the papers, seem headed straight for the other place.

The works of the late Augustus St. Charles have increased in value since his death. We've noticed that it is hard to get hold of one of his most valuable papers, a head of a horse.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1907.

We Can Indorse This Sentiment.

Ann Arbor Times: Michigan is fortunate in having several good state officials, but if the state were canvassed as to who of all of them was most to be commended for efficient and vigorous service there is little question but that Attorney General John E. Bird would have a walk away in the count. Few state officers in many years have been more industrious in the discharge of duty, none more competent and none charged with the responsibility of looking after the all around important matters of the state have been less criticized. In fact we do not at this time recall any official act of Mr. Bird which has not met the public approval, barring, of course, those whom he has been compelled to prosecute for some infraction of the laws. All manner of efforts have been made to trip him and he has not always been in accord with the chief executive of the state, but his presentation of the facts and the law have invariably justified his position and the people have come to have a vast amount of respect for his ability, his vigorous methods and his unswerving fidelity. Attorney-General Bird is not a self-seeker, but he is worthy of confidence and higher honors and in due time if his good qualities deserve recognition he should be pushed along without the asking.

The coming constitutional convention for which three delegates will be elected from each of the thirty-two senatorial districts of the state next Tuesday has so far failed to arouse the people from an inexcusable apathy on the subject. The constitution with which the convention will have to do deeply concerns every citizen of the state and yet the great majority of them are manifesting interest neither in the election which will determine who will compose the convention nor in what the delegates may do when it convenes. Registration day occurs tomorrow.

Health in the Canal Zone.
The high wages paid make it mighty tempting to our young artisans to join the ranks of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained however by the fear of fever and malaria. It is the knowing ones—those who have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—who go there without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarial influences with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral on hand. Cures blood poisoning, inflammation, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Guaranteed by The Wolvortine Drug Co. and John L. Gale, 30.

Reunion of the 16th Mich. Veteran Vol. Infantry.

The 27th annual reunion of the gallant old 16th Michigan Infantry was held September 5th at Detroit, sixty of the old regiment responding to roll call. The business meeting was held in the Detroit Post room, corner Congress and Snellby streets, at ten o'clock a. m.

The 16th regiment, known as Stockton's Independent Regiment, was organized at Camp Backus, Detroit, by Colonel T. W. B. Stockton, of Flint, under direct authority of the Secretary of War, and took the field as such, the officers being for some time without commissions. But finally, to make their status legal, it was found necessary to have commissions from the state of Michigan, which they received and the numerical designation, 16th regiment infantry, was given them at the same time. This regiment left for the field in Virginia on the 16th day of September, 1861, with an aggregate of 761 officers and men on its rolls, and served in the 3d brigade, first division 5th army corps, during the balance of the war.

The 16th was the eighth in losses of all the regiments serving in the U. S. army during the civil war. It also has the distinction of having lost more men killed upon the field of battle than any of the Michigan regiments. The losses of the regiment were—killed in action 173; died of wounds 54; died in confederate prisons 8; died of disease 104; discharged for disability (wounds and disease) 211.

June 27th, 1862, the regiment fought in one of the most desperate battles of the civil war. It had at that time only about 500 men fit for duty, many being sick. The losses in this regiment were as follows: 4 officers and 46 men killed, 6 officers and 110 men wounded and 2 officers and 53 men missing. Total loss in this due battle 221. Colonel Stockton had his horse shot under him and was taken prisoner and sent to Richmond.

The business meeting at Detroit Post rooms was called to order at 10 a. m., by the President of the association—Judge H. H. Woodruff, of Roscommon. Sixty of the old boys answered to roll call, many being accompanied by their families. There were some present from Grand Rapids, Bay City, Vanderbilt and other parts of Michigan and one comrade from the state of Indiana. The following officers were elected: President, Jonathan Berry of Vanderbilt; vice president, H. H. Apple of Bay City; secretary treasurer, J. A. McKnight, Bay City. Next reunion will be held at Bay City.

In the afternoon Thomas S. McGraw of the firm of Baldwin & McGraw, Detroit, entertained the old vets and their families by giving them a free boat ride to Star Island and return; also a free supper at the Star Island House. Mr. McGraw was a member of Co. I, and was severely wounded at Malvern Hill, Virginia, July 1, 1862. He was discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability at Bellevue hospital, New York city, Sept. 1, 1862. Tom, as he is generally known by his army comrades, was a good soldier.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The enrollment at present is as follows: Kindergarten 23, 1st grade 47, 2nd grade 47, 3rd grade 33, 4th 29, 5th 24, 6th 27, 7th and 8th 70, high school 87.

The library and recitation rooms are being crowded to their utmost capacity to accommodate the classes this year. All will rejoice when the addition is completed and this crowded condition is relieved.

When our new addition is ready for occupancy, instead of the usual dedicatory exercises, we are planning a unique program, which we are sure will be interesting, attractive and pleasing to the public. Watch for further announcements.

Ami Rae and Lee Jewell came home from Chicago last week, where they had been for two months.

It Quiets the Cough

This is one reason why Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is so valuable in consumption. It stops the wear and tear of useless coughing. But it does more—it controls the inflammation, quiets the fever, soothes, and heals. Sold for 60 years.

MAGGIE WAS AN OPTIMIST.

She Would Persist in Looking on the Bright Side of Things.

Maggie's mind is so organized that recognizing trouble is, for her, next to impossible. Indeed, Mr. Carter maintains that if ever a cloud does contrive to catch Maggie's attention, it straightway turns itself inside out, the result being that it exists for Maggie as a "silver lining" only.

Maggie's sunny disposition was a distinctly grateful feature of the domestic atmosphere—following two sour-visaged, grumpy parlor maids. Indeed, it was this quality that repeatedly saved her from discharge, for neat, smiling, industrious little Maggie, alas, would break things!

When her ravages—for it amounted to that—included a rare and valuable vase, Mrs. Carter, felt that the time had come when, in desperate defense of the bric-a-brac, as well as for Maggie's future good, she must adopt severe measures.

"Maggie," she said, "this vase cost $40!"

"The saints forbid, ma'am," cried poor Maggie, quite overcome.

"Yes! But I shall count only half that amount against you. I dislike dreadfully to do this, Maggie, but I must teach you to be careful, so I'm going to keep back one dollar every week from your wages until the $20 are paid."

Tears—not wholly for the shattered ornament—flowed freely, for one dollar a week is a formidable drain on some incomes. Then Maggie was herself again.

"Anyhow," she said, half-archly, as her characteristic smile made its way out, "I do be thinkin', ma'am, that I'm sure of me nice job here wid you for some time ahead!"—Youth's Companion.

A Two-Headed Baby.

One day Mr. Doubleday had his twin babies downtown, tucked in their double-ended carriage, facing each other, with only their little round heads showing out of the blankets. A boy caught sight of the babies, and he cried in astonishment: "Oh, mamma, look quick! There is a baby with a head on both ends!"

Too Late.

The trust magnate was thoroughly aroused. "It is a pity," he snarled, "that when the reformers started this business the government did not get after Rhode Island for over capitalization."

Now you Can Buy Carpets, Rugs and Curtains by Mail with the Utmost Satisfaction.

We now have ready for free distribution the finest and most comprehensive illustrated CATALOGUE OF CARPETS, RUGS, LINOLEUMS and LACE CURTAINS ever issued by any retail house. It is intended, of course, for people living at such a distance from Detroit that they cannot conveniently come to the city to do their trading, or who might prefer ordering by mail. This Catalogue reproduces the goods in their actual colors, and the patterns have been carefully selected from the handsomest and most desirable productions for Fall trade. Heretofore the selling of Carpets and Rugs by mail has been rather unsatisfactory owing to the difficulty of giving customers a correct idea of what they would get for their money. With this Catalogue selections can be made just as easily as if the goods were right before your eyes. Every detail in design, shade and color is brought out in the illustrations, so there is no possibility of being disappointed when the purchase is received. Quality has been given prime consideration in making up this Mail Order Catalogue and in every instance the goods are of the most reliable grade and can be fully guaranteed for service. Rugs are shown in all sizes from 16x30 inches up to 10½x12 ft. The cheapest are 80c and the highest in price are $55.00. You are sure to find just what you want in the assortment and you will get better value for your money than any other store will give.

In the advertisement of the Fred M. Warner Cheese Co. the price paid for butter fat was given last week as 20 cents per pound. The price should have been 22 cents—a material difference. Farmers who are sending milk to town will notice that the prices paid by the Cheese company is always the highest and they are invited to make investigation of the facts.

Maj. B. D. Safford, 70 years old, 210 Cadillac avenue, Detroit, and well known in this village, was thrown to pavement on Jefferson avenue, Monday night, when the car from which he was alighting was started forward before he had both feet on the ground. His elbow was broken and hip badly sprained. He was picked up by the motorman and taken to his home.

Elaborate Corn Exposition Decorations.

At the National Corn Exposition, Chicago, October 5 to 19, the most elaborate decorative scheme ever seen in Chicago will be presented at the Coliseum building and annex, where the show will be held. This decorative work will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000, and corn will be the dominant (in fact, the almost exclusive) decorating material. In addition to a miniature corn farm, in the center of the building, one end will contain an ancient temple dedicated to the goddess of corn, where at certain times of the day the virgins of the sun will offer sacrifices of corn. At the opposite end will be a realistic farm scene, made up of an actual farm house, windmill, growing corn, etc. On either side will be shields of the different states, done in corn, each showing the amount of corn grown last year. A large and splendid picture of Minnehaha will adorn one wall. Immense festoons of corn ears will be suspended from the ceiling, and two gigantic pumpkins will demonstrate that corn and pumpkins grow together. The color scheme is exceedingly harmonious and everything in the building will conform to the general decorative idea.

Last Sunday Dr. Caster went to Chelsea and preached the funeral sermon of Mrs. Willis H. Benton, who was burned to death by an explosion of a gasoline stove. She was an estimable lady and her violent death was a shock to the entire community. On Monday Mr. Caster was called to Howell to attend the funeral of Mr. Israel Persons, brother to Judge Persons of Lansing. This was the fourth funeral the Dr. has conducted in that circle.

SERIAL STORY

The Princess Elopes

By HAROLD McGRATH

Author of "The Man on the Box," "Hearts and Masks," Etc.

SYNOPSIS.
The American consul to Barscheit, a principality of Europe, tells how the reigning grand duke had tried to find a husband for his rebellious niece, the Princess Hildegarde. Finally, dejected that she must wed the Prince of Doppelkinn, an ugly old widower, and ruler of the principality of Doppelkinn. Though he had been in the country six months the American consul had never seen the princess, and when at last they met it was very much of a surprise to both.

The one picture of her which I was lucky enough to see had been taken when she was six, and meant nothing to me in the way of identification. For all I knew I might have passed her on the road. She became to me the Princess in the Invisible Cloak, passing me often and doubtless deriding my efforts to discern her. My curiosity became alarming. I couldn't sleep for the thought of her. Finally we met, but the meeting was a great surprise to us both. This meeting happened during the great hubbub of which I have just written; and at the same time I met another who had great weight in my future affairs.

The princess and I became rather well acquainted. I was not a gentleman, according to her code, but, in the historic words of the drug clerk, I was something just as good. She honored me with a frank, disinterested friendship, which still exists. I have yet among my fading souvenirs of diplomatic service half a dozen notes commanding me to get up at dawn and ride around the lakes, something like 16 miles. She was almost as reckless a rider as myself. She was truly a famous rider, and a woman who sits well on a horse can never be aught but graceful. She was, in fact, youthful and charming, with the most magnificent black eyes I ever beheld in a Teutonic head; witty, besides, and a songstress of no ordinary talent. If I had been in love with her—which I solemnly vow I was not—I should have called her beautiful and exhausted my store of complimentary adjectives.

The basic cause of all this turmoil, about which I am to spin my narrative, lay in her education. I hold that a German princess should never be educated save as a German. By this I mean to convey that her education should not go beyond German literature, German history, German veneration of laws, German manners and German passivity and docility. The Princess Hildegarde had been educated in England and France, which simplifies everything, or, I should say, to be exact, complicates everything.

She possessed a healthy contempt for that what-d'ye-call-it that hedges in a king. Having mingled with English-speaking people, she returned to her native land, her brain filled with the importance of feminine liberty of thought and action. Hence, she became the bramble that prodded the grand duke whichever way he turned. His days were filled with horrors, his nights with mares which did not have bon-stalls in his stables.

Never could he anticipate her in anything. On that day he placed guards around the palace she wrote verses or read modern fiction; the moment he relaxed his vigilance she was away on some heartrending escapade. Didn't she scandalize the nobility by dressing in a blouse and riding her famous black Mecklenburg cross-country? Hadn't she flirted outrageously with the French attaché and deliberately turned her back on the Russian minister, at the very moment, too, when negotiations were going on between Russia and Barscheit relative to a small piece of land in the Balkans? And, most terrible of all to relate, hadn't she ridden a shining bicycle up the Kongstrasse, in broad daylight, and in bifurcated skirts, besides? I shall never forget the indignation of the press at the time of this escapade, the stroke of apoplexy which threatened the duke, and the room with the barred window which the princess occupied one whole week.

They buried the offensive bicycle in the courtyard of the palace, ceremoniously, too, and the princess had witnessed this solemn auto de fe from her barred window. It is no strain upon the imagination to conjecture the picture of her face, her compressed lips, her burning eyes, as she saw her beautiful new wheel writhing and twisting on the blazing logs. But what the princess was a poor duke to do with a woman like this?

of American make, and the manufacturers wrote to me personally that they considered themselves grossly insulted over the action of the duke. Diplomatic notes were exchanged, and I finally prevailed upon the duke to state that he held the wheel harmless and that his anger had been directed solely against his niece. This letter was duly forwarded to the manufacturers, who, after the manner of their kind, carefully altered the phrasing and used it in their magazine advertisements. They were so far appeased that they offered me my selection from the private stock. Happily the duke never read anything but the Fliegende Blätter and Jugend, and thus war was averted.

Later an automobile agent visited the town—at the secret bidding of her highness—but he was so unceremoniously hustled over the frontier that his teeth must have rattled like a dancer's castanets. It was a great country for expeditiousness, as you will find, if you do me the honor to follow me to the end.

So the grand duke swore that his niece should wed Doppelkinn, and the princess vowed that she would not. The man who had charge of my horses said that one of the palace maids had recounted to him a dialogue which had taken place between the duke and his niece. As I was anxious to be off on the road I was compelled to listen to his gossip.

The Grand Duke—In two months' time you shall wed the Prince of Doppelkinn.

The Princess—What! that old renege? Never! I shall marry only where I love.

The Grand Duke—Only where you love! (Sneers.) One would think, to hear you talk, that you were capable of loving something.

The Princess—You have yet to learn. I warn you not to force me. I promise to do something scandalous. I will marry one of the people—a man.

"I Shall Marry Only Where I Love."

The Grand Duke—Bah! (Swears softly on his way to the stables.) But the princess had in her mind a plan which, had it gone through safely, would have added many gray hairs to the duke's scanty collection. It was a mighty ingenious plan, too, for a woman to figure out.

In his attitude toward the girl the duke stood alone. Behind his back his ministers wore out their shoes in waiting on the caprices of the girl, while the grand duchess, half-blind and half-deaf, openly worshiped her willful but wholly adorable niece, and abetted her in all her escapades. So far as the populace was concerned, she was the daughter of the favorite son, dead these 18 years, and that was enough for them. Whatever she did was right and proper. But the hard-headed duke had the power to say what should be what, and he willed it that the Princess Hildegarde should marry his old comrade in arms, the Prince of Doppelkinn.

CHAPTER II.

As I have already remarked, I used frequently to take long rides into the country, and sometimes I did not return till the following day. My clerk was always on duty, and the work never appeared to make him round-shouldered.

I had ridden horses for years, but to throw a leg over a good mount was to me one of the greatest pleasures in the world. I delighted in stopping at the old feudal inns, of studying the staid German peasant, of drinking from steins uncracked these hundred years, of inspecting ancient armor and gathering trifling romances attached thereto. And often I have had the courage to step at some quaint, crumbling Schloss, or castle, and ask for a night's lodging for myself and horse. Seldom, if ever, did I meet with a refusal.

of poetry in my system that had never been completely worked out, and I was always imagining that—at the very next Schloss or inn I was to hit upon some delectable adventure. I was only 28, and inordinately fond of my Dumas.

I rode in gray whiplcord breeches, tan boots, a blue serge coat, white stock, and never a hat or cap till the snow blew. I used to laugh when the peasants asked leave to lend me a cap or to run back and find the one I had presumably lost.

One night the delectable adventure for which I was always seeking came my way, and I was wholly unprepared for it.

I had taken the south highway: that which seeks the valley beyond the lake. The moonlight lay mistily upon everything; on the far-off lake, on the great upheavals of stone and glacier above me, on the long white road that stretched out before me, ribbon-wise. High up the snow on the mountains resembled huge opals set in amethyst. I was easily 25 miles from the city; that is to say, I had been in the saddle some six hours. Nobody but a king's messenger will ride a horse more than five miles an hour. I cast about for a place to spend the night. There was no tavern in sight, and the hovel I had passed during the last hour offered no shelter for my horse. Suddenly, around a bend in the road, I saw the haven I was seeking. It was a rambling, tottering old castle, standing in the center of a cluster of firs; and the tiles of the roofs and the ivy of the towers were shining silver with the heavy fall of dew.

Lady Chloe sniffed her kind, whinied, and broke into a trot. She knew sooner than I that there was life before the turn. We rode up to the gate, and I dismounted and stretched myself. I tried the gate. The lock hung loose, like a paralytic hand. Evidently those inside had nothing to fear from those outside. I grasped an iron bar and pushed in the gate. Chloe following knowingly at my heels. I could feel the crumbling rust on my gloves. Chloe whinnied again, and there came an answering whinny from somewhere in the rear of the castle. Somebody must be inside, I reasoned.

There were lights in the left wing, but this part of the castle was surrounded by an empty moat, damp and weedy. This was not to be entered save by a ladder. There was a great central door, however, which had a modern appearance. The approach was a broad gravelled walk. I tied Lady Chloe to a tree, knotted the bridle-reins above her neck to prevent her from putting her restless feet into them, and proceeded toward the door.

Of all the nights this was the one on which my usually lively imagination reposed. I was hungry and tired, and I dare say my little mare was. I wasn't looking for an adventure; I didn't want any adventure; I wanted nothing in the world but a meal and a bed. But for the chill of the night air—the breath of the mountain is cold at night—I should have been perfectly willing to sleep in the open. Down drawbridge, up portcullis!

I boldly climbed the steps and groped around for the knocker. It was broken and useless, like the lock on the gate! And nexas a bell could I find. I swore softly and became impatient. People in Barscheit did not usually live in this slovenly fashion. What sort of place was this?

Suddenly I grew erect, every fiber in my body tense and expectant. A voice, lifted in song! A great penetrating yet dilly mellow voice; a soprano; heavenly, not to say ghostly, coming as it did from the heart of this gloomy ruin of stone and iron. The jewel sang from Faust again! How the voice rose, fell, soared again with intoxicating waves of sound! What pre-meditated sweetness! I stood there, a solitary listener, as far as I knew, bewildered, my consciousness near and fast. I forgot my hunger.

JUST A GENTLE HINT.

One Remedy Appearance Indicated Nobleman Had Never Tried.

The earl of Surrey, afterward eleventh duke of Norfolk, who was a notorious gourmand and hard drinker and a leading member of the Beef-steak club, was so far from cleanly in his person that his servants used to avail themselves of his fits of drunkenness—which were pretty frequent, by the way—for the purpose of washing him. On these occasions they stripped him as they would a corpse and performed the needful ablutions. He was equally notorious for his horror of clean linen. One day, on his complaining to Dudley North at his club that he had become a perfect martyr to rheumatism and tried every possible remedy without success, the latter wittily replied: "Pray, my lord, did you ever try a clean shirt?"

BRUTALITY OF MEDICAL ETHICS.

A Great Surgeon Barred from Membership in Medical Association.

(From the National Druggist for June, 1907.)

Dr. Augustus Charles Bernays, who died a few days ago in St. Louis, was, probably, the foremost surgeon in the United States. His fame was co-extensive with the civilized world. He was not only an operator of the highest order, but a tireless and exhaustive worker in the field of original surgery. He performed the first successful Caesarian section in 1839 in St. Louis, and also the first successful coelotomy for gunshot wound of the abdomen and the first gallstone operation in Missouri. A record held by Dr. Bernays has never been equaled: Out of eighty-one successive cases of appendicitis which necessitated operations, seventy-one in succession were with perfectly satisfactory results, the seventy-second patient falling of recovery, but the subsequent nine cases were successfully treated.

And yet, with such a record, matchless as was his skill, varied and extensive as was his learning, wonderful as were his accomplishments, he was not considered, by the American Medical Association, as worthy of membership in that organization.

No charges were ever brought against him which, in the remotest degree, reflected on his qualifications as a surgeon; his moral character was never the subject of attack; he was never accused of having done anything unbecoming a man or a gentleman. "The head and front of his offending had this extent—no more!" He dared to think! He refused to mold his opinions and to govern his actions by the arbitrary rules which those whom he knew to be his inferiors had set up for his guidance! In other words, he could not regard the Code of Ethics of the American Medical Association as being inspired, or having any binding authority on him where his judgment told him it was wrong. And so, twenty years ago or more, on account of some trivial infraction of this sacred "Code," a movement was started to expel him from the local association, which was only defeated by his hastily sending in his resignation. As membership in the A. M. A. is dependent upon membership in the local and State societies, his name was dropped by the national organization.

And so, though he had saved thousands of lives; though other physicians had profited by his art; this brilliant surgeon; this great and able man, has, during all these years, been an outcast—a medical "scab;" not recognized as "ethical," or worthy of fellowship by that body of physicians banded together in the American Medical Association!

And this is the association which, under pretense of working for the public good, is, in reality, only seeking to control Congress and the State Legislatures in the interest of their own selfish schemes; which is trying to create a Cabinet position and to place one of its members in that position; which is endeavoring by law to exclude from the use of the mails, all manufacturers of medicines who do not comply with the absurd requirements that they choose to set up; which, in short, is trying to put upon the statute books of State and nation laws that will, in effect, establish a kind of medical priesthood, to which only their own members will be eligible with power and control over the health and lives of the people!

God help the druggists, the drug manufacturers, physicians not members of their guild, and the people generally, if this association ever succeeds in its undertaking. If it does, it will, after the fashion of the labor unions, dictate a "closed shop," and say to doctors who prefer to be independent, "You must join our union or, failing to do so, compel them to get out of the business." It will say what medicines shall be taken, and how they shall be made. It will hedge the people about with a lot of petty regulations under pretense of protecting the public health. In fine, a medical bureaucracy will be established to tyrannize over the people.

Let no man call this a false alarm. If there are those who are inclined to do so, let them read the journal of the A. M. A. Let them scan the proceedings of the association, held always behind closed doors, and carefully edited, as they are, before they are published in its official organ. If they will do this they will see that we are not trying to create a bugaboo to frighten their timid souls.

WASTE AND WANT.

Easy for Farmer to Lose Much Feed by Poor Feed Box.

Recently I was at the home of a friend who, although a hard-working, and in many respects a good farmer, does not seem to be getting rich very fast. We were at the barn, and I went in the stables. He has those old-fashioned V-shaped mangers, open at the top, and the horses had pulled their hay out, scattered it all over the stalls and tramped it into the manure. At the present excessively high prices for feed of all kinds it would not take them long at the rate they were going to waste a good many dollars, says a writer in Farm and Home. If I were losing hay like that I don't believe I could sleep nights.

It suggested the folly of feeding roughness of any kind so that stock can pull it down and waste it. The open manger is an abomination. The old-time rack is no better. With either the stock are free to waste as much as they feel like, and there are some horses and cattle which seem to take a joy in pulling or throwing out their feed. The best feeding contrivance for hay that I have ever seen was made as shown in the illustrations. There is never any waste here. The greatest objection I had to it was that in feeding corn the stalks would pile up and have to be carried out.

The other thing suggested was the folly of a man's working hard and saving and scrimping generally while he allows a few extravagances and carelessness to rob him of a large part of the fruits of his labors. Three or four hours' work and a few feet of lumber would have fixed those mangers so the horses could not waste their hay, and the whole cost of the job would have been paid back in two or three weeks. Most of us have some cherished folly like this which we cling to, and which, perhaps, we are so used to that we are unconscious of it. If a man works faithfully he should get ahead in the world, not very rapidly, perhaps, but perceptibly. If he does not, it may be the fault of circumstances, but more often it is his own.

APPLES AS HOG FOOD.

Windfalls Can Be Profitably Harvested by the Pigs.

I have had considerable experience in feeding windfalls from the apple orchard to hogs, writes a farmer in Farm and Home. I allow my hogs to run in the orchard until the apples begin to drop heavily, if this ever occurs. Then when I begin to pick up waste fruit for cider, drying, or apple butter, I feed to the hogs the parings and all the fruit that I cannot use. The fattening qualities of apples seem to be quite high, for my animals thrive and do well.

In addition to consuming waste fruit and a great many injurious insects, the hogs root over the ground and keep it well stirred. This is very beneficial to trees and is about the only method of cultivation I practice. When waste apples are not equally available the hogs are in good condition for finishing on corn, oats, peas or buckwheat meal. Because of their thrifty condition induced by this succulent feed, they put on fat very rapidly, and are ready for butchering at almost any time.

BLEATS AND SQUEALS.

A fat hog is not always healthy. A supply of roots is necessary to success with sheep.

The motto of the shepherd should be dip, dip, dip.

Swine at all ages approach more nearly to a cash product than any other stock on the farm.

Take a small bucket of tar and smear the sheep's noses occasionally. This will discourage the gaddy.

Now set turkeys now. Part of the crop can be fed on the ground, and will be a great help when the grass is frost-bitten.

Watch the flock carefully and see that no wounds get flyblown. If any such wounds are found, apply kerosene or turpentine. See that every maggot is destroyed, and then apply tar.

Have some way of marking your sheep. Many neighbors have been made enemies for life by their sheep getting mixed in the pasture.—Farm Journal.

FEEDING RACKS.

A Convenient and Cheap Arrangement for Handling Large Flocks.

As feeders will soon begin stirring around the country in search of feeding racks a few hints concerning the feeding racks may be found helpful at this time. Racks can be built any length up to 20 feet that will answer for either hay, fodder, or grain feeding. The floor of the rack should be 18x20 inches wide with side boards for the floor from 2 1/2 to 4 inches high. For yearlings or older sheep the bottom of the rack should be about 12 inches from the ground and 3 feet is about the right height for the rack. For slats, old barrel staves serve the purpose very well and if placed about 7 inches apart the sides of the rack can be built perpendicular so that the sheep can eat with their heads inside the rack between the slats.

In filling the racks it is well to remember that if the hay is put in loosely, the sheep will soon have it all out under their feet, and if too much hay is put in at one time they will eat only a portion of it as they soon become disgusted with any kind of roughage that they have breathed on for a while. The finer parts of the hay, such as clover heads and leaves will not be found by the sheep if they are given more than they will eat up clean at one time. Good strong racks can be made of inch plank.

The rack should be cleaned thoroughly once every day. If ear corn is fed the cobs should always be thrown out before each meal and under no conditions should chickens be allowed to roost on the racks over the troughs. If the sheep refuse to eat from any one section of the rack or trough the reason should be found out at once and the racks cleaned and even scrubbed if necessary. Sheep feeders who use corn instead of screenings claim that very good results can be had by feeding them twice a day with plenty of good corn-fodder and alfalfa hay. In the northern districts, however, when sheep are brought into the feed yards, screenings and clover hay form practically the whole diet.

We understand that a great many farmers are expecting to make a start feeding sheep this year and those who have not had any previous experience in this line would do well to have the racks and troughs in shape before the active feeding season opens.

VAT FOR SCALDING HOGS.

Convenience at Hog-Killing Time Which Can Be Made at Home.

A very good vat for heating water or scalding hogs can be made in the following manner: Take two 2x12 planks and cut them so they are six feet on one edge and five feet two inches on the other edge. These form the sides of the vat. For the ends take two pieces 2x12, each plank three feet long. About three inches from each end of the two sides cut a groove across two inches wide and three-quarters inches deep for the end of the sides to fit. Holes should be bored at top and bottom for half inch bolts across the ends to hold the sides in position.

The bottom of the vat is made of sheet iron nailed to the bottom and on to the vat. The vat should be long enough to come around both ends and fasten at top and, also, should be wide enough to come up the sides for two or three inches. Three iron, 1 1/2 inches thick and one inch wide are passed under the tank and used to support the bottom. They are shown at A. A. These should come up at least four inches at the side.

A trench eight feet long, 20 inches wide, 15 inches deep, should be dug and the vat placed over it. The trench should be dug so that the wind has a straight draught under the vat. Fill the vat two-thirds full of water. The scraping bench should be set against the side of the vat.

Light chains each about eight feet long are used to lower and raise the hog into the water. These chains should be fastened at the edge of the scraping bench and should be placed about two feet six inches apart. By placing these chains above the vat, says Prairie Farmer, the hog can be lowered into the water and when scalded can be readily removed.

Pasturing Hogs on Rape.

Now is the time to turn on to the rape and pea mixture which you sowed last month. Don't overdo it by keeping them on it all the time, but alternate two or three days at a time on good pasture and then on rape and clover. Separate the ewes and lambs into different flocks even though the rearing has been completed.

Watch the Flock.

Watch the flock closely during late summer. This is the time when diseases and insect pests gain a foothold. Don't let the flock remain in that back pasture without inspection more than 24 hours of the time. A cow dog may destroy your choicest ewes if you are careless.

ALL HAIL PE-RU-NA

A Case of
STOMACH CATARRH.

Miss Mary O'Brien, 206 Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Peruna cured me in five weeks of catarrh of the stomach, after suffering for four years and doctoring without effect. In common with other grateful ones who have been benefited by your discovery, I say, All hail to Peruna."

Mr. H. J. Henneman, Oakland, Neb., writes: "I waited before writing to you about my sickness, catarrh of the stomach, which I had over a year ago. "There were people who told me it would not stay cured, but I am sure that I am cured, for I do not feel any more ill effects, have a good appetite and am getting fat. So I am, and will say to all, I am cured for good. "I thank you for your kindness. 'Peruna' will be our house medicine hereafter."

Catarrh of the stomach is also known in common parlance as dyspepsia, gastritis and indigestion. No medicine will be of any permanent benefit except it removes the catarrhal condition.

Gained Strength and Flesh.
Miss Julia Butler, R. R. 4, Appleton, Wis., writes she had catarrh of the stomach, causing loss of sleep and appetite, with frequent severe pains after eating. She took Peruna, her appetite returned, she gained strength, flesh and perfect health.

SPOT CASH

FOR SOLDIERS' HOMESTEAD RIGHTS
All soldiers who served ninety days or more in the federal army or navy between 1861-1865, and who made homestead entries for less than 160 acres on or before June 21, 1864, may now claim an additional right to the same, and that it can be sold to me for spot cash, no matter whether patent issued or not. If soldier is dead, his heirs are entitled. The right descends as follows: First, to the widow; and second to the legal heirs, or next of kin. Talk to our soldiers, their widows, children, or next of kin about this class of additional rights. Get busy right now and get some of your relatives who made homestead entries in early days. It's easy money. For further information address Com. W. E. Moses, 21 California Building, Denver, Colo.

SERVING THE FOWL

TWO DELICIOUS WAYS OF PREPARING CHICKEN.

When Pressed It Makes as Fine a Dish as Could Be Desired—Steamed with Rice and Mushrooms.

Pressed Chicken.—Cover a young fowl, cut in joints, with boiling water, and let simmer until tender, together with a few slices of carrot, half an onion, and a stalk of celery. Remove the skin and bones, and return them with the broth to the fire, and let simmer until reduced to about one cup; strain and set aside. When the flesh is nearly cold, cut into tiny cubes or chop fine, remove the fat from the broth, reheat, and stir the chicken into it, adding salt and pepper and other seasoning as desired. Decorate a mold with slices of hard-boiled eggs; in this pack the hot chicken, cover with a buttered paper bearing a weight, and let stand until cold and set. Serve, sliced thin, with salad.

Steamed Fowl with Rice and Mushrooms.—Truss a fowl for boiling, rub with the cut side of a lemon and lay on slices of salt pork or bacon and steam with an onion and two or three stalks of celery until tender—three hours or longer. Have ready a mound of boiled rice, seasoned with butter and salt, and dispense the fowl upon this. Arrange mushrooms cooked in the usual manner about the rice. Serve with the strained chicken liquor, thickened with flour and enriched with two egg yolks, beaten with a half cupful of cream.

Jellied Chicken.—Boil a chicken and let it get cold in the liquor. Skim the liquor from every particle of fat. Remove all the skin and bones from the chicken and cut the meat into pieces of uniform size. Soak a half-cup of gelatin in a half-cup of cold water. Mix with the chicken a dozen steamed olives cut up small and two dozen canned mushrooms, also cut small. Bring the chicken liquor to a boil, add the soaked gelatin and when this is dissolved take from the fire and set aside to cool. When it begins to "jelly," pour a little of it into a mold with cold water, put in a layer of the chicken mixture and when this begins to stiffen add more of the jelly and more of the chicken, continuing in this way until the mold is full. Set in the ice chest for 24 hours. When ready to serve wipe off the outside of the mold with a cloth wrung out in hot water and turn the chicken out upon a chilled platter.

Cleaning Rings.
Rings set with precious stones should always be inspected from time to time to ascertain if the gems are at all loose, especially in the case of claw settings. It is also a good plan to wash them periodically in warm soapsuds, to which a few drops of sal volatile have been added, an exception being made, however, in the case of turquoises, which should not be dampened. In every case the claw settings should be cleaned by means of a strip of blotting paper rolled into the form of a shading "stump" and worked into the interstices so as to clear them of any accumulation of dirt.

The First-Aid Valise.
The latest production of those purveyors who are always inventing something useful for the motorist is called the first-aid valise. It is a small but very useful pendium of remedies for bruises, cuts and other ills that may, alas! befall the traveler on an automobile.

Sunshine Cake.
Three-quarters cups of butter and two cups sugar creamed, yolks of ten eggs, two and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup milk, one teaspoon of lemon or orange. Bake in steady oven 50 minutes and frost with yellow frosting, made of the yolk of one egg, one tablespoon water and one teaspoon lemon or orange flavoring. Add confectioner's sugar till thick enough to spread.

Bedroom Set in Applique.
Bedroom sets in shadow-work applique are charming, and may be used over white or colored linings, and the effect of these filmy embroideries over highly polished woods must be seen to be appreciated. In laundering this class of work it must be pulled and smoothed into place before it becomes dry. A cloth should be placed between it and the iron, and the pressing continued until the article is thoroughly dry.

A pretty fancy is the use of shallow boxes in the framing of small prints. Photographic views, carefully colored with Japanese paints, are set in boxes one to one and a half inches deep. Some of the prettiest of these are set in a gray wood, the tint of weather exposed shingles. The colorings of the photographs is not difficult to earn. The amateur photographer will find this a suggestion for utilizing summer vacation "takes" for the recreation of a special room or for charming and inexpensive Xmas gifts.

To Remove Scorch.
Any article which has become scorched in ironing, if placed directly in the sun, will be restored to its natural color. No trace of the scorch will remain.

WORN TO A SKELETON.

A Wonderful Restoration Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles N. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was failing fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions."

My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Tom Ochiltree's Moon.
After Tom Ochiltree, that able congressman and laugh generator for the afflicted rich, settled in New York as the amuser of the John W. Mackay family, he effervesced in a thousand different directions, and was as good in some ways as Sam Ward. One night he escorted John Mackay's friend, the Count de Biscout, down to the Battery to show the sight of New York. The moon was grand, and the count went into raptures as "her maiden reflection rippled over the pearly waters." He cried: "Eet iss grand! Eet iss grand! Dair iss no such moon in all Italy!" "Count," said Ochiltree solemnly, as he befit the occasion, "you just ought to see the moon in Texas!"

Saw Chance to Economize.
After weeks of waiting and longing for the sport, rods, reels, gaff, creel—everything was in readiness for a week's trout fishing.

The young wife, smiling joyously, hurried into the room, extending towards her husband some sticky, speckled papers. "For goodness' sake," he exclaimed, "what on earth are you doing with those old fly papers?" "I saved them for you last summer, dear," she answered. "You know you said you always had to buy flies when you went fishing."

A Pardonable Fault.
Dr. Edward Everett Hale, discussing a rather funny attack that had been made on certain recent statements, smiled and said: "But who or what is blameless? It is like the case of the Scottish hen. An old Scottish woman wished to sell a hen to a neighbor. "But tell me," the neighbor said, "is she a'hegither, a guid bird? Has she got nae fauts, nae fauts at all?" "Aweel, Margot," the other old woman admitted, "she has got one fault. She will lay on the Lord's day."

A Foine Bird.
An Irishman who wasn't much of a hunter went out to hunt one day, and the first thing he saw to shoot at was a blue jay sitting saucily on the top of a fence. He blazed away at the bird and then walked over to pick it up. What he happened to find there was a dead frog, which he raised carefully at arm's length, looking at it with a puzzled air. Finally he remarked: "Well, begobbs, but ye was a devil of a foine looking burd befur Ol blew ther fithers off o'yers!"—Judge's Library.

Status Finally Completed.
When Alfred Stevens designed the noble monument to the duke of Wellington in St. Paul's cathedral, London, he intended that his work should be crowned by an equestrian statue. But Stevens died before his design was carried out. Now, 32 years after his death, the equestrian statue has been completed and before long will be placed in position.

FAMILY FOOD.
Crisp, Toothsome and Requires No Cooking.

A little boy down in N. C. asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts food had helped their family.

She says Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention on a visit to Charlotte, where she visited the Mayor of that city who was using the food by the advice of his physician. She says:

"They derive so much good from it that they never pass a day without using it. While I was there I used the Food regularly. I gained about 15 pounds and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in our family regularly."

"My little 18 months old baby shortly after being weaned was very ill with dyspepsia and teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk."

"Well, it worked like a charm and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She is now getting well and round and fat as fast as possible on Grape-Nuts."

"Sometime ago several of the family were stricken with LaGrippe at the same time, and during the worst stages we could not relish anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else nauseated us. "We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family." "There's a blessing," said "The Road to Wellville," in praise.

IN THE SUPERLATIVE DEGREE.

Little Son's Explanation. Seemed to Cover the Case.

Little son, aged seven, whose training has been of the most painstaking and conscientious, rather took away his mother's breath in describing the dog's game of ball. He ended with: "And, mother, Topsy caught the ball in her mouth, and then just ran like—"

"Like what?" cried the startled mother.

"No, I don't believe I do. Just how is that, dear?" she asked faintly.

"Well, I don't know jus' what it means, myself," he confessed, "but it's a whole lot faster than 'lickety-split!'"

CASE OF ECZEMA IN SOUTH.

Suffered Three Years—Hands and Eye Most Affected—Now Well and Grateful to Cuticura.

"My wife was taken badly with eczema for three years, and she employed a doctor with no effect at all until she employed Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One of her hands and her left eye were badly affected, and when she would stop using Cuticura Soap and Ointment the eczema came back, but very slightly, but it did her a sight of good. Then we used the entire set of Cuticura Remedies and my wife is entirely recovered. She thanks Cuticura very much and will recommend it highly in our locality and in every nook and corner of our parish. I. M. Robert, Hydropolis, La., Jan. 5 and Sept. 1, 1906."

A Hopeless Case.

"Yes," said the business man, "I have given up trying to collect that little bill from Bilkins. You see, he is a big, muscular fellow, and he used to throw my collectors out."

"Then why didn't you employ a woman collector?" inquired a writer in Spare Moments. "He couldn't do that to a woman."

"That's what I thought, so I got one and sent her round, but she never came back."

"Why not?"

"He married her."

DISCOVERY OF DRESDEN CHINA.

Valuable Secret Entirely the Result of an Accident.

Dresden china was discovered through accident. John Frederick Botcher was a chemist's assistant in Berlin about 1790.

Botcher, having fallen under suspicion of being an alchemist, was obliged to leave Berlin and take refuge in Saxony.

A wealthy iron founder was riding on horseback near Aue, in Saxony, when he noticed that his horse lifted its feet with difficulty.

The secret of the translucent china was solved, and the king ordered a china factory to be built.

The woman has yet to be discovered who would not own diamonds unless they came to her by inheritance.

PICRIC ACID FOR BURNS.

Scientist Claims It Will at Once Banish All Pain.

Put your finger in the fire and it need not burn. Chance led to the discovery of a remedy which instantly will cause burns to cease from being painful.

Dr. Thierry, a physician in the Paris Charity hospital, was in the habit of using picric acid as an antiseptic.

A short time afterward while sealing a letter some of the burning was stuck to his finger.

The only inconvenience was that the acid colored the skin yellow. But this is rapidly remedied by washing with boric acid.

As They Each Saw It.

Two women met on the street corner on a cold day, when the wind was playing havoc with skirts and tresses.

"Aren't you awfully cold?" queried the first, looking at her friend's bare neck.

"Not at all," responded the other with a glance at the feet of the first.

"His Educational Limit."

A lawyer in Washington was telling some colleagues of neat retorts he had heard in court.

"I can teach you law, Mr. Perkins, but I cannot teach you manners."

THE SOUL OF THE COLONEL

"I come up heah," said the Kentucky colonel, as he took a seat in one of the throne chairs in Peacock alley by the side of the woman.

"You know the Gennul? Don't you? Well, it was the wife of the gennul. I suppose you don't know nuthin' about it, but the gennul, he's got jes' about the fines' wife in New York."

"Day befo' yesterday mawnin' Edie and me was woke bright and early by a communicashun from the gennul's wife."

"Huhhy!" says Edie. "Huhhy! I reckon the Gennul's got one o' them delemu spells o' hisn."

"An' I didn't. I put on my cloes as fas' as I could git 'em on, and it wan't no time befo' I was up an' out and at the gennul's house a ringin' of the do' bell."

"Well, de maid she come by an' by and ushad me into the pahlah and aifah a leetle while here come the gennul's wife a walkin' in smilin' an' a shakin' of me by the han'."

"Kunnel," she says, "kunnel, you hev bin on my min' a long time. A long time, kunnel."

"I was polite as usual, polite as could be."

"I am so'y madam, said I in return, 'if I have discomposed youh min' enny by bein', to say, on it."

"I have hudd tell, madam," says I, in return, "ve'y polite, 'cause the gennul an' me have bin on so many sprees togetah I wouldn't hant his wife's feelin's, not fo' nuthin' in the world."

"That's jes' it," she says; "that's jes' it. It's what I, wus thinkin'. An' kunnel, too—it mus' 'a bin. That wus why he put it in my min' to sen' fo' you the sp' thing this mawnin' and ask you some questions about youh immohtal soul."

"An' if she didn't set theah a solid houbt by the tall clock in the cohnah a-talkin' to me about my immohtal soul, and me a dyin' fo' a little drop of uthin' to quench my thust on a little breakfast, or ennythin' in othah words that might suffice to break the monotony, I ain't a Kentucky kunnel a settin' heah by youh side on this heah divan."

HIS FINAL FLING

By W. C. HOWEY

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Hyland Flynge was an Adonis and a dipsomaniac. He drank everything—drank all the time.

Not that Hyland Flynge did not know his weakness and seek to avoid it. His friends tried to reform him and Hyland tried to reform himself.

There was but one thing that Hyland Flynge loved as he did his liquor. That was his beauty.

And Hyland Flynge was proud. And Hyland Flynge was vain.

One morning as the young gentleman sat sipping his eye-opener while his valet was dressing him for the day, Mr. Flynge casually glanced at his mirror.

He dropped his glass. Horrors! A blue vein showed in his faultlessly shaped Grecian nose!

Next day there were two blue veins. Mr. Flynge repeated the act of the previous morning.

When he sought his glass, that beautifully chiseled Grecian nose resembled a Bavarian summer sausage.

Hyland Flynge sobered up. One day Hyland sobered up. When he sought his glass, that beautifully chiseled Grecian nose resembled a Bavarian summer sausage.

Hyland Flynge fainted. He was revived with water. Reason told Hyland that, according to the law of cause and effect, it was red liquor that led to the red nose.

"Amputate or you die," said one, Ficksun, M. D.

"But I cannot live without a nose," said the mutilated Adonis.

An attendant hesitatingly suggested that it would mean a great saving in linen and laundry, but Hyland squelched him with a snort that inflated his proboscis like a toy balloon.

"I will give you a new nose," said Dr. Ficksun. "Science does all things. I will graft a new nose, beautiful as ever on the face, if—if you'll give a finger for it."

Flynge thankfully remarked that he'd gotten "two fingers" so often that the loss of one wouldn't count. So the operation took place.

Hyland Flynge rode securely on the water wagon until one day when an accommodating stranger scaped the seat. Hyland fell off the wagon with a thump.

When he awakened, late the next day, he saw lots of things he didn't know were in the room before. He emptied a pitcher of ice water and then dragged himself to his mirror.

"The nose was there. It wasn't red a bit. Its shape was perfect. But between the eyebrows, where the grafting had begun, Hyland Flynge beheld a beautiful finger nail sprouting as from the hand of a mandarin!

AFTER THE HAPPY EVENT

It was the day after the wedding and everyone was in a bad humor. Paterfamilias coming downstairs to breakfast had slipped on the grains of rice on the stairs and wrenched his back.

Margaret came in looking like a thundercloud. "When people are starving to death in China it does seem a shame that more than a million pounds of rice should be lying all over this house," she said.

Then she turned to the assembled multitude. "My feet hurt," she cried. "I stood up seven hours running yesterday and my feet are nearly killing me, and I cannot find anywhere the only shoes I ever loved. They are so soft and easy that I never knew I had them on, and instead of being able to wear those to-day when I am so tired here I had to put on a new pair of stiff ties to come down to breakfast in."

"Has any one seen my slippers? I looked in every room in this house for them, and they are not to be found. I suppose one of the maids in a spasm of cleanliness tucked them on a remote shelf in some dark closet and I will never see them any more."

"What did they look like?" asked her elder brother, languidly. "They had once been beautiful. They had coquettish red heels and jaunty gold buckles, and once upon a time I paid nine dollars for those foolish things. Have you seen them, Bob?"

"Where?" "Tied to Miranda's trunk by means of a long piece of white ribbon. Fact is, I tied them myself, and they were as decorative as possible. What's the use of raving, Madge, they are gone now!"

But Robert had his troubles a little later, when he took his handkerchief out of his raincoat pocket in a crowded car and flitted a lot of rice into the face of a young woman sitting on the seat near which he was standing, and in whose eyes he had imagined he saw a little look of interest directed at him.

Later in the day the feminine members of the family gathered in the late lamented Miranda's room to divide among them the possessions of that young woman, which she had, in the pride of her trousseau, contemptuously intimated that they might have.

They had quarreled over a blue kimono and a large tan sunshade, and were just beginning to row over a very delicate petticoat, which only needed a little mending here and there to make it desirable, when materfamilias came into the room with a perturbed look on her face.

"Whoever took those teaspoons must have taken my umbrella, also," she said. "My best umbrella, the stiff one with the worked metal handle. It was the prettiest one I ever saw. Your aunt gave it to me and she told me herself that it cost $25 in Paris. I had it put away most carefully in my closet, but it isn't there now. And think—it had never even had the cover off it!"

"I suppose we had better tell her," said Madge to the other girls.

"Yes, no use putting it off any longer," they replied in chorus.

"Very well, then, mother, Miranda took your umbrella with her. She said hers wasn't nearly handsome enough for her going-away gown, and so she took yours and asked us to tell you after she had gone. She said we were to say 'thank you' for her, and to add that you had always been such an indulgent mother that she knew you would not mind."

"Wouldn't I, indeed! Well, I shall write to her to-day to send it back by express at once. She took your bracelet, Madge—I suppose I might as well break it to you now—and some of the baby pins of the other girls."

"Robber!" remarked the fond sisters of the bride in one breath. "There is another disagreeable thing I have to say to you, my daughters, that I might as well say now and get it over," went on materfamilias. "The expense of Miranda's wedding has been so great that your father has decided that he will not be able to send us to Narragansett this summer as usual, but that instead we will have to go to the Eastern Shore. I know you are going to be disappointed, but remember Miranda was the oldest, and it was proper she should be given a smart wedding. Next summer we will take up our usual life but this year you must make some sacrifices for the sake of your dear sister."

"Dear, indeed!" murmured Madge, and there were lamentations from far and near. "Taking it altogether, a wedding in the family is not the unalloyed blessing the unwitting might think. There have been cyclones with less trouble attached."

Why Not? Professor's Little Boy—Please, Mrs. Sedgwick, may I see your mocking bird? Mrs. Sedgwick—Why, Tommie, dear, I have no mocking bird. Where did you get that idea? Professor's Little Boy (looking disappointed)—I heard papa tell mamma that you have a famous Whistler.—Harper's Weekly.

THINKS WHILE HE WORKS.

One Man Who Saves Money for the Firm.

There once was a man who did not do things. He was running a certain section of a certain large firm's business, and people began to talk of him.

"What's the matter with that fellow?" said they. "Do you notice how he does nothing? All he does all day is—nothing, or, not much, at all events. How does he manage to hang on?"

The other fellow made reply to the effect that "He goes not hang on. He's anchored here. If he wasn't, he'd be let out. But he'll never get any further up. Watch him."

And everybody watched. One day this certain firm happened to have a certain something on its hands that stirred everybody up. It was a big contract, and there was something wrong with the wording, so the firm had to win a big lawsuit or lose a lot of money.

And all the people in the firm, everybody who did things, began to run around and say: "What are we going to do? What are we going to do?"

And the man who did not do things sat at his desk and smoked. Finally everybody had turned in their suggestions and the firm was going to begin to fight the case, for none of the suggestions suggested anything else. And then the man who did not do things spoke.

"Suppose I go over and see the other firm and try to frame up a compromise," said he. "We'll both lose money if it goes into the courts. They'll lose; we'll lose. Suppose we see if we can't make them see it in the same light?"

The head of the firm threw up his hands and collapsed. "Good heavens," he gasped, "why didn't somebody think of that before?"

And the man who did things made reply: "We've been too busy planning the fight to have time to think about it."

And the head turned to the one man and said: "How in the name of all that is profitable did you happen to have such an inspiration?"

And the man laughed. "That's no inspiration," he said; "that's common sense. I simply have sat back here—not doing things—thinking. And I know we can square it up."

And they did. Moral: Don't do things—all the time. Think a little.

Atmospheric Changes.

Prof. Milne, the great British seismologist, has demonstrated that at least part of the weather and changes in the atmosphere's temperature seems to come from below instead of directly from the sun. He has been in the habit of leaving an ingenious photographic arrangement in quarries at night. The photographic paper, when examined later, was found to be marked from time to time by dark bands, black spots and what are called singings. Some of these markings occurred at the time of earthquakes, but by no means all. Scientists say that most minerals become luminous at frequent intervals. The cliffs of Doyer have been seen suddenly to gleam and billtops become visible in the darkness. The conclusion is that the disturbing forces which go on even at the very center of the earth are converted before they reach the surface into heat and light and make all manner of difference in climate and weather.

Another Kind of Infant.

She had been looking around the drug and toilet goods department of one of the big shops for some time when a clerk approached her.

"Haven't you anything harder than these?" she asked, holding up a rubber teething ring.

"None," responded the clerk, "those are the hardest that come." "Oh, dear," said the woman; "he has chewed up three of those already."

"Chewed them up?" exclaimed the clerk. "I don't see how a baby—" "Oh, it isn't a baby," she explained. "I want it for my little dog."

Errors of Lawmakers.

Some absurd clauses have found their way into certain acts of the British parliament. One statute enacted punishment of 14 years transportation for a certain offense, "and upon conviction one-half thereof should go to the king, and the other half to the informer." Then there is an act of parliament for the rebuilding of Chelmsford prison which stipulated in one clause that the prisoners should be confined in the old prison until the new one was built and in another—an amending—clause, that the new prison should be constructed out of the material of the old one.

Money in Small Inventions.

The man who invented the common and necessary shoe lace realized $2,500,000 from that alone. The man who obtained the first patent on the umbrella realized $2,000,000, and different umbrella patents of other people have brought $10,000,000 altogether. The inventor of the metal heelplate made $1,500,000 annually as royalty on his simple invention.

Preparing for the Future.

"So you want more wages?" said the warden of the penitentiary. "That's what I do," answered the cook. "This talk of punishing trust magnates is getting me more nervous every day. If I've got to learn to cook terrapin and lobster a la Newburg, I want more pay. And what's more, I want to be called a chef."
