Two children were born to them. Eugene, of Plymouth and William, who resides with his father on the farm. On Dec. 22nd, 1908, Mr. and Mrs. Rooke celebrated their golden wedding by entertaining the Aid Society. Since that time Mrs. Rooke's health has been gradually failing. She united with the M. E. church early in life and has always been a faithful member. She will be greatly missed in the neighborhood and by the aid society. The funeral was held at the church Wednesday at 2 p. m., Rev. A. Questioning of the Legislature's Work Begins Promptly After Adjournment—Other Matters of Interest.

Lansing.—Within 24 hours after the legislature adjourned one of the laws it enacted was under fire and C. P. Downey of the Hotel Downey is ready to test the act in the supreme court...

One of his inspectors called at the Downey house and requested the payment of the fee prescribed. Mr. Downey flatly refused, declaring the law was only intended to apply to manufacturers supplying ice cream at retail or wholesale...

The inspectors are also securing samples of ice cream for chemical tests as to whether they contain the necessary butter fats and as to the amount of gelatine and other ingredients.

State Has New Liquor Law.

After refusing point blank to consider the amendments attached to the Warner-Cramton general liquor traffic regulation bill in the senate, the house changed its mind and with 61 votes passed the measure in just the form it came from the senate.

The amendments by the senate eliminated all of the sections of the bill throwing regulations about druggists, and the definition of the word wholesaler as it is found in the federal statutes was brought into the bill instead of the rather circumscribed definition placed there by the house.

As he had promised, Representative Cramton made quite a determined fight against the elimination of the druggist clause and the new definition of what is a wholesale dealer. He said it might defeat, in a measure, the purposes of the bill. He was in favor of some regulation of druggists even in "wet" territory. But also, true to his promise, the representative from Lapeer did not carry his fight far enough to defeat the measure itself. When it became certain the house was not in favor of making another change in the bill, Cramton withdrew his objection and the bill passed. It has been characterized as one of the best regulative liquor laws ever enacted.

261 Bills Passed by Legislature.

The statistical record of the work of the legislature shows that 334 bills were introduced and 261 passed, as compared with 1,578 introduced in 1907 and 754 passed.

There were 340 introduced in the senate this session, and of those 63 passed the house; the latter body had a total of 544 bills introduced and 193 of them passed the senate.

Public Land Bill Passes.

A public land and reforestation bill was passed by the state legislature in its final hours. The bill provides for a commission of six members to take charge of all public lands in the state and to immediately increase the state forest reserves from 100,000 acres to 200,000 acres. Another important provision in the interest of the restoration of the timber of the state is a provision that hereafter a section of every 40-acre tract sold to homesteaders must be set aside by the purchaser for reforestation.

MICHIGAN'S HALL OF FAME

TWO MICHIGAN SOLONS.

Senator Wetmore.

Senator Weter.

Public Domain Law in Effect.

Both Land Commissioner Russell and Auditor General Fuller are making preparations to carry out the provisions of the public domain measure just passed, and are enthusiastic regarding the system it provides. Auditor General Fuller has inspectors out examining the state's title to lands which may be conveyed to the commission as soon as it is organized, and he expects to have ready 278,000 acres.

Much of the criticism of the present system of handling state tax lands will be overcome, they say, under the section which provides for the sale of these lands in the counties where they are located.

Land Commissioner Russell says there has been a great decrease in inquiries regarding state lands as a result of the frequent statement during the legislative session that the state's lands are valuable for reforestation purposes. Prospective settlers who might take up the lands have evidently gained the impression that Michigan is a poor state to start homesteading in, he declares, and he is anxious to have this impression corrected, asserting that this state can furnish as desirable homestead lands as any other, and offers great opportunities.

Masons Honor Colby.

Detroit county and state officials attended the funeral services for Representative Sheridan J. Colby, which took place in the Masonic temple, Detroit. Among them were Mayor Breitmeyer, Sheriff Gaston, Controller Doremus, Park Commissioner Hinchman, Assessor Plass, Alderman Heinemann, Representatives Stephenson, Curtis, Copley and others.

The services were in charge of Ashlar Lodge No. 91, F. & A. M., assisted by Rev. Walter E. Burnett, who said a few words in commendation of the life and character of Representative Colby.

The casket was escorted by Ashlar lodge to the train which was to take it to Shaftsbury, where interment took place. A joint committee of the senate and house attended the interment services.

Comes Back at Russell.

Representative John J. Whelan has sent an open letter to Warden James Russell of the Marquette prison, replying to the latter's attack on him a few days ago.

Whelan scores Russell for having given his (Whelan's) first letter out for publication, terming it a breach of faith. He reiterates what he said in that letter about having tried to be fair with Russell in the prison investigation and the report of the committee thereon, and intimates that he considers Russell's lack of appreciation of his efforts a case of casting pearls before swine.

Home Rule Bill Through House.

The house passed, intact, the municipal home rule bill. The bill as it stands is the old Hally bill with the exception of the provision for utility bonds to the interests of Detroit, and the senate ideas as to the right method of annexing territory. This provides that the entire ownership in which the territory to be annexed is situated shall vote on the proposition, and that a majority must be obtained in the city and in the township.

Centerville, Ia., May 25.—The town is filled with excited people who come to attend the trial of the negro, John Junken, the self-confessed slayer of beautiful Clara Rosen, an Ottumwa choir singer, on the night of February 1st. The trial began this afternoon.

DIFFERENCE IN THEIR VIEWS

Uncle Si Eggmann Discourses on Relative Sizes of Farms East and West.

"Yes, sir, gentlemen; that's a little difference between farmin' out west 'n' back here in Old Varmount," said Uncle Si Eggmann to the cronies around the stove at the Crossroads store, on his return from a visit to his brother in Dakota. "Now, out there in the west they don't think they've really got a farm unless it totals about three or four thousand acres; 'n' if they air raisin' stock they speak of 5,000 head as bein' a 'leetle bunch o' cattle.' An' takes 'em 'bout half a day to hoe one row o' corn, the rows air so long, an' they harvest corn an' wheat enough on one farm to fill our town hall. Now, that's a 'leetle different from what it is here in New England, where we call 20 acres o' ground—a fourth of it graveyard—a couple o' dozen hens an' a rooster, six or eight keows, an' a rosberry patch, a farm! Yes, sir, gentlemen; that's a 'furrible difference between farmin' east an' farmin' west—a most 'furrible difference!'"—Puck.

THE HEIR'S HAIR-MOVING.

Mr. White—It's no use, my dear, I shall have to have my whiskers off; baby is pulling 'em out by the roots.

Mrs. White—How unfeeling of you. It's the only thing that keeps baby quiet. Now you threaten to take the dear's enjoyment away!

Opposed to Slang.

Donald had been to Sunday school, and on coming home was asked what he had learned. The lesson was the story of Joseph, and the small learner was evidently very full of his subject.

"Oh," he said, "it was about a boy, and his brothers took him and put him in a hole in the ground; and then they killed another boy, and took the first boy's coat and dipped it in the blood of this boy and—"

"Oh, no, Donald, not another boy!" his sister interrupted, horrified. But Donald stood his ground.

"It was, too," he insisted. Then he added: "The teacher said 'kid,' but I don't use words like that."—Woman's Home Companion.

Fighting Tuberculosis.

Three large fraternal orders are at present conducting sanatoria for their tuberculous members. The Royal League, the first order to take up this form of work in the United States, has a sanatorium at Black Mountain, North Carolina. The Modern Woodmen have recently opened a sanatorium at Colorado Springs, and the Knights of Pythias, one at the East Las Vegas, New Mexico. The Royal Arcanum and the Brotherhood of American Yeomen will consider propositions at their coming grand councils for the erection of similar institutions.

Our Wonderful Language.

"Out of sight in that gown, isn't she?" observed a gentleman in the balcony, pointing to Mrs. de Koltay, who occupied a front seat in one of the lower tier of boxes.

"Out of sight? Well, hardly. It strikes me it is the other way about," responded his companion dryly.

Which goes to show the elasticity of the American language, which says one thing and means another. It also shows—but, upon second thought, we must respectfully but firmly decline going into any further details.—Bohemian.

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pain in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. Emma Lutz, 838 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

THE LOVES of the LADY ARABELLA

By HOLLY ELLIOT SEAWELL

(Copyright, 1908, Robbs-Merrill Co.)
SYNOPSIS.

At 14 years of age Admiral Sir Peter Hawkshaw's nephew, Richard Glyn, fell deeply in love at first sight with Lady Arabella Stormont, who spurned his attentions. The lad, an orphan, was given a berth as midshipman on the Ajax by his uncle, Giles Vernon, nephew of Sir Thomas Vernon, became the boy's pal. They attended the theater where Hawkshaw's nephew saw Lady Arabella. Vernon met Philip Overton, next in line for Sir Thomas Vernon's estate. They started a duel which was interrupted. Vernon, Overton and Hawkshaw's nephew found themselves attracted by pretty Lady Arabella. In a battle defeated French again showed love for Glyn. Richard Glyn won $2,000 prize money. He was called by Lady Hawkshaw as he was about to "blow in" his earnings with Vernon. At Hawkshaw party Glyn discovered that Lady Arabella was a poor but persistent gambler. He talked much with her cousin Daphne. Lady Arabella again showed love for Glyn. He held Glyn and Overton prisoners, thus delaying the duel. In the Overton-Vernon duel, neither was hurt. Lady Arabella humiliated Richard by her pranks.

"Sir Peter," said Lady Hawkshaw, in the same awful voice, "I unexpectedly entered this room a few moments ago, and the sight that met my eyes was Arabella struggling in the arms of this young ruffian, Richard Glyn, who was kissing her with the greatest fury imaginable."

Sir Peter looked at me very hard, and after a moment said: "Have you nothing to say for yourself, young gentleman?"

"Sir," I replied, trying to assume a firm tone. "I will only say that Lady Arabella, meaning to treat me like her lap-dog, kissed me on the nose, as she does that beast of hers; and as an officer and a gentleman, I felt called upon to pay her back; and for every smack she gave me on my nose, I gave her two back in the mouth, to show her that an officer in his majesty's sea service is a man, and not a lap-dog."

"Do you hear, Sir Peter?" asked Lady Hawkshaw, with terrible earnestness. "He does not deny his guilt. What think you of his conduct?"

"Think, ma'am!" shouted Sir Peter. "I think if he had done anything else, it would have been clean against the articles of war, and I myself would have seen that he was kicked out of his majesty's service. I shall send for my solicitor to-morrow morning to put a codicil to my will, giving Richard Glyn £1,000 at my decease."

At this the gentlemen roared, and Lady Arabella, seizing the lap-dog, hid her face in his long hair, while even Daphne smiled and blushed. As for Lady Hawkshaw, for once she was disconcerted and walked out, glaring over her shoulder at Sir Peter.

There was much laughter. Sir Peter joining in; but after a while the gentlemen left, and Sir Peter went out, and Daphne, who I saw was disgusted with my conduct, walked haughtily away, in spite of Lady Arabella's playful protests that she was afraid to remain alone in the room with me.

One thing had puzzled me extremely, and that was her calmness, and even gaiety when she had no means of knowing how Overton had come off in the meeting, and I said to her: "How did you know, or do you know, whether Philip Overton and Giles Vernon are alive at this moment?"

"By your face, Dicky," she answered, trying to give me a filip on the nose, which I successfully resisted. "I was in agony until I saw your face. Then I gave one great breath of joy and relief, and my play with my lap-dog, which had been torture to me, became delight. But tell me the particulars."

"No, madam," said I; "I tell you nothing."

This angered her, and she said, after a moment: "I presume you will take an early opportunity of telling Sir Peter and Lady Hawkshaw that I saw Philip Overton alone in this house, at five o'clock yesterday morning?"

"I am quite sure, madam," replied I, stung by this, "of anything in my character or conduct which could induce you to think such a thing of me."

"You made me no promise not to tell," she said.

"Certainly not. But some things are considered universally binding among gentlemen, and one is to tell nothing to the disadvantage of a woman. I neither made, nor will make, a promise about that affair; but if it is ever known it will be you or Overton who tells it, not I."

And I walked out of the room. I speedily found, after that, my life in Berkeley Square uncomfortable. I felt constrained before Lady Arabella, and what seemed strange to me, little Daphne, who had hitherto treated me with greatest kindness, seemed to take a spite at me, and her glances and words were hard to bear. Neither Sir

Peter nor Lady Hawkshaw noted these things, but they were strong enough to impel me to ask Sir Peter to look out for a ship for me at the admiralty.

I saw Giles Vernon every day, and he continued to come, with unabated assurance, to Berkeley Square. We were not anxious that the fact of the duel should leak out, and Overton was especially desirous to keep it quiet. Of course, he came no more to Berkeley Square, and withdrew more and more from his former associates. He began to consort much with persons of the John Wesley persuasion, spending much of his time, when not on duty, at Oxford, where the Wesleys were numerous at the time. I noticed that Lady Arabella treated Giles, and me, also, with more civility than she had hitherto shown. I could not think it sincere, but attributed it to a natural desire to conciliate those who knew so much to her disadvantage. But that she made no effort to overcome her infatuation for Overton, I very soon had proof. Sir Thomas Vernon, soon after this, had the assurance to present himself in Berkeley Square, and rare sport it was. Lady Hawkshaw, Lady Arabella, Daphne, myself, and one or two other persons were in the Chinese drawing room when he was ushered in.

Lady Hawkshaw and Sir Thomas were old acquaintances, and had been at feud for more than 30 years, neither side asking or giving quarter. Sir Thomas had a shrewd wit of his own, and was more nearly a match for Lady Hawkshaw than any one I had yet seen. He opened the ball by remarking on Lady Hawkshaw's improved appearance, partly due, he thought, to her triumph in getting the K. C. B. for Sir Peter. This nettled Lady Hawkshaw extremely, and she retaliated by telling Sir Thomas that he looked younger than he did when she first knew him 30 years ago. As Sir Thomas hated any allusion to his age, this shot told.

"And allow me to congratulate you, Sir Thomas," added Lady Hawkshaw, "upon your very promising cousin."

"That's a pity," said Lady Hawkshaw.

Mr. Giles Vernon. Sir Peter has the highest opinion of him, and he has won the favor of the Hong-tong to an extraordinary degree.

"He may have won the favor of the Hong-tong," replied Sir Thomas, impatiently mimicking Lady Hawkshaw's French, "but he has not yet succeeded in winning my favor."

"That's a pity," said Lady Hawkshaw; "but it doesn't signify, I dare say. It will not keep you alive a day longer. And there is your other cousin—Capt. Overton of the Guards. He is what so few of our young men are, pious and God-fearing."

"And a sniveling, John Wesley Methodist besides," snarled Sir Thomas, much exasperated.

"Bless me, Sir Thomas," cried Lady Hawkshaw, "don't be so hard on these worthy people, the Methodists."

I own this surprised me, for if there was anything on earth upon which Lady Hawkshaw was uncompromising, it was church and state; and, excellent woman though she was, I believe she would have been rather glad to make one big bonfire of all the dissenters in England.

Sir Thomas was far from insensible to Lady Arabella's charms, and, after a further exchange of hostilities with Lady Hawkshaw, turned to Arabella. She smiled upon him, and seemed anxious to conciliate him; and in a little while I caught enough of their conversation to know that she was telling him of the meeting between Giles and Overton, and representing that it had been forced upon Overton by the insults of Giles Vernon. Sir Thomas' response to her tale was that he did not give a damn for either of them, and if both had bit the dust he should not have been sorry.

"Jeames," she said, "when that person calls again, the ladies are not at home. Do you understand?"

James understood perfectly, in spite of Lady Arabella's scowls.

It is not to be supposed that a young man of Giles Vernon's spirit had not been able to go through with his prize money and run pretty considerably in debt in five or six weeks in London, and one morning, some days after this, when I went to see Giles at his lodgings, I found the hall in possession. Giles, however, was as merry as a grig, because that very morning he had got an appointment to the Belvidere frigate.

It was not much after having served in the Ajax, but it meant leaving that uncertain and trying element, dry land, for another element, on which Giles was much more at home, to-wit, the blue sea. So he sent out for a pot of porter, and he and I, together with the butler, drank to the Belvidere; and I swore, then and there, that go with him I would. For, in the excess of my affection for Giles, I would have taken almost any service to be with him. The frigates, too, were more in the way of activity, as the enemy was wary of meeting our ships of the line, but the frigates could go hunting after him. So, when I returned to Berkeley Square that day I begged Sir Peter to get me a berth in the Belvidere. He was pleased with my spirit, and the very next day he went to the admiralty for me. The complement was full, but, luckily for me, one of the juniors got a billet more to his liking, and Sir Peter, being on the spot, got me the vacancy, and I was ordered to report at once at Plymouth.

It took me but a day or two to get my outfit and make ready to start. Lady Hawkshaw showed me great kindness then, and actually allowed me to have a considerable sum of my own money. Lady Arabella treated me with her usual indifference, and, on the day I was to go, bade me a careless adieu.

When the post-chaise was at the door and I went to the Chinese drawing room to tell Lady Hawkshaw and Sir Peter good-by, Daphne was there with them, and she looked as if she had been weeping. Sir Peter gave me a letter to my new captain, Vere, and some words of encouragement. Lady Hawkshaw delivered a homily to me on my duty, which I received out of respect for her real excellence of heart, and thanked her in a manner which made Sir Peter my friend for life. Daphne said not a word when I took her hand, but handing me a little parcel ran out of the room. I afterward found it to be a little housewife made by her own hands.

I went down to the chaise, puzzled at her conduct, but, looking up for the last time to the windows, I saw her peering from behind a curtain. I raised the parcel to my lips, and, as she saw it, a smile broke over her face. My last glimpse of her was like an April day—she was all smiles and tears—and it was destined to remain in my memory.

Giles Vernon was waiting for me at the corner of the street. We were to make the journey to Plymouth together.

"Well," he cried, when we found ourselves rolling along to meet the coach, "I have had my cake and eaten it."

"How I envy you!" I said, bitterly. "I have not had my cake. Every shilling of my prize money is in bank, except about £200."

"Poor chap!" answered Giles, feelingly. "How much more of life have I seen in London than you! I have seen everything, including that queen of hearts, Lady Arabella Stormont. She has treated me cruelly, the jade! But I will bring her to my hand at last, that I swear to you."

I longed that he might know of that episode with Overton in Sir Peter Hawkshaw's cubby-hole at five o'clock in the morning.

For Your Health.

Conquer your moods; don't let your moods conquer you. People who give way to moods never amount to much because they are never masters of themselves. They never know in the morning whether they are going to do a good day's work or not, whether they are going to be a cheering or a depressing influence on the people around them. If they feel like being good-tempered, they will be; if they feel like "snapping" at everybody, they will snap.

People who suffer from "moods" should be careful about their habits. They should be regular about meals, sleep, exercise and work. The condition of the health has much to do with moods, and there is nothing that contributes so much to health as absolute regularity.

His Position.

Dean Ramsay once told of a young Englishman who had taken a Scottish shooting, and thought himself quite nationalized. Next year he met a genuine Scot of the old school at a German watering-place, and proceeded to pose as one himself, talking of Scotland and haggis and sheep's head and whisky, boasting of Bannockburn, professing devotion to Queen Mary, and extolling Scott and Burns over all English writers. On taking leave of his friend he said: "Well, sir, next time we meet, I hope you will receive me as a real countryman." "Weel," said the other, "I'm jest thinkin', my lad, ye're nae Scot, but I'll tell ye what ye are—ye're jest an imprived Englishman."

A Little Girl's Feat.

Little Miss Evelyn Albee of Ains Center may deservedly be called a heroine. A few days ago, while playing near an open well, she accidentally stepped in. The well was 18 feet deep, with six feet of water. Her playmates heard the splash, but was too frightened to call for assistance. Miss Evelyn, who is not six years old yet, was equal to the occasion and clambered to the top unaided and unharmed. "How did she do it?" is the general question asked, but no one but the lady herself knows, and she wishes to forget it. That she wasn't hurt in some way was truly remarkable.—Keweenaw Journal.

A Cup of Tea.

All cookery books, and many others, contain precise directions about tea making. It is the simplest thing in the world, and yet there is not one person in ten who succeeds in making a really good cup of tea.—Food and Cookery.

Port Huron.—Charles Rolls, aged 64 years, who was convicted last week of selling liquor to Indians, was sentenced by Judge Tappan to serve 45 days in the Detroit workhouse, without the alternative of a fine. Before imposing sentence Judge Tappan mentioned the many occasions on which the man has been arrested on charges of violating the law and the court stated that it was an outrage that the council of this city should grant such a man a license to sell liquor.

Port Huron.—While Capt. Freeman Durrance was sailing the lakes several weeks ago he learned that his wife had been arrested in New Castle, Pa., and brought to this city on suspicion of being implicated in the theft of some silverware. It was intimated that a charge of bigamy might be made against her. Capt. Durrance hurried to Port Huron, made an investigation and instituted divorce proceedings.

Dowagiac.—Mrs. Norman Jarvis, a pioneer Cass county woman, died, aged 85. Mrs. Jarvis had lived continually in Cass county for 82 years and on the old homestead since 1852. She is survived by ten children. The Jarvis family is one of the largest and best known in the county.

ELDERLY PEOPLE HELPED FREE

The last years of life are the sweetest, and yet the most difficult to prolong. It is then that the greatest care is exercised in maintaining bodily health. But the chief care should always be with regard to the food you eat and whether you are digesting it properly. You should not allow yourself to become constipated.

No doubt you have tried salts and cathartic pills, purgative tablets, etc., and have come to the conclusion that they are violent in action and do but temporary good. Listen, then, to the voice of experience with regard to a wonderful and mild laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is not new, only we are trying to find new friends for it.

A. A. Wells, of Johnston City, Ill., suffered from stomach trouble for six years and found his cure in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. He writes name hundreds of others. Some heard of it first through neighbors or friends; others through the doctor's offer to send any sufferer from a stomach, liver or bowel complaint a free sample bottle for trial, without charge. If you will send your name and address he will send you a trial bottle direct to your home. If it proves itself as he claims then continue the treatment by buying a 5-cent or 25-cent bottle of your druggist, as all of them sell it. Old people, like children, should look for purity, and it is well to mention that the purity of this remedy is vouched for with the U. S. government. Also, through a free bottle is sent to prove its merits, results are always guaranteed from the regular buying of Druggists, who will refund your money if it does not satisfy you. Send at least for the free test bottle to-day.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. Write to Dr. W. E. Caldwell, 301 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

RECRIMINATIONS.

She—You have now more than a dozen shirts, and when we were married you had only one solitary one!

He—Yes, but that one didn't need mending!

"All Bets Off!"

The wife of a retail merchant, whose name is withheld for obvious reasons, was irritated by the non-arrival of certain articles she had ordered from the butcher. She called up the butcher shop, and the flip youth who drives the delivery wagon answered the phone.

"Did you attend to that order for Mrs. X?" she asked, indignantly.

"You bet your silk Sox I did," came the reply.

"What's that?" she gasped.

"You can go and bet all your finger (pronounced as spelled) I attended to everything."

"Do you know to whom you are talking?"

"Surest thing you know; I'm talking to Kitty." (The maid.)

"You are talking to Mrs. X," she declared, sternly.

"Oh, well then," in apologetic tones, "all bets are off."

Three Meals at Once.

"Now, Mary," said her mistress, "you must come to the door of the drawing room and say: 'Breakfast is ready, and supper is ready, but dinner is served.'"

The newly corralled domestic inwardly digested the concise instructions, and that evening convulsed the guests who were awaiting the announcement of dinner by stepping between the portieres, dropping a courtesy and repeating: "Breakfast is ready, and supper is ready, but dinner is ser-ved!"

THINK HARD

It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of a lady in Fond Du Lac, Wis.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down once or twice to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose, and many other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of my stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use. 'There's a Reason.'"

"I like the delicious flavor of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in plain, easy-to-read, plain English. It tells you how to get the most out of your food and how to keep your system in good health.

What! Michigan in the Earthquake Belt?

Detroit Free Press. Is the central plain section of the United States in any peril from the earthquakes that have wrought disasters in other parts of the world during recent years? The question of course is inevitably suggested, after reading the accounts of the tremor reported yesterday from five states, including the western part of Michigan.

There seems to be little to fear in this region, if the records of history are reliable. The frightful damage from earth movements in other parts of the world has been caused almost always in districts that have a long record of such disturbances. They are only repeating what has been written of them before. And middle North America has been singularly free from such disasters in the past.

While the danger points of the earth are well known to seismologists, however, and the most frequent earthquakes are found in Italy, Japan, the Pacific coast and certain other places, the Mississippi valley has by no means been free from such shocks. Indeed, one of the widest and evidently severest tremors ever known happened in this valley.

In 1811 and 1812, the country along the Mississippi valley was visited by a series of earthquakes, whose effects are still to be seen. The shocks were felt throughout the entire eastern portion of the United States and as far west as exploration had attracted mankind. Prof. Hobbs, of the University of Michigan, says in his book on earthquakes that between December 1, 1811, and March 16, 1812, no less than 1,874 shocks were recorded in the vicinity of New Madrid, Mo., which was near the center of the affected district. Of these, no less than eight were of the first order of intensity. Fissures hundreds of feet long were formed, some of them 20 or 30 feet wide. Water and sand were spouted to a height of 40 feet. Sulphurous vapors were emitted and notable changes in the level of large tracts of country resulted. Large lakes disappeared and others were formed. Some of the latter are still to be seen, and among them is Reelfoot lake in Tennessee, the scene of the night riders' attack on two prominent citizens within recent months.

This earthquake of a century ago is, however, almost the only one of importance in the middle west during recent history. In Michigan, only two reports of such disturbances have been scientifically verified, those of 1884 and 1890, neither of which caused serious damage. Such a record gives a feeling of stability to dwellers in this part of the world when it is contrasted with almost daily shocks elsewhere. No part of the world is entirely free from these still mysterious occurrences, but, at least, the foundations of Michigan seem to be comparatively solid.

The problem of making both ends meet in the administration of government affairs seems to have been taken up in earnest by the executive branch. Heretofore it seems not to have concerned these officials overmuch and the duty of making the annual expenditure approximate the annual income has been left entirely to the house of representatives. Secretary McVeagh's remark recently, while on a visit in New York City, that the United States would soon have a budget system in force similar to that of most European countries, and President Taft's recent orders for re-statement, wherever possible, in the various executive departments, indicate that the administration is working out plans for the solution of the mighty financial problem along business-like lines.

There never was a preacher or a president, poet or politician, who could please everybody. There never was a sailor or a tailor, soldier or sailor who could suit all. Show us a doctor, a lawyer, a merchant or an editor who pleases the whole multitude. The Lord Himself and all the angels in Heaven have never half succeeded in comforting the human race declares the Oxford (Ia.) Leader. There is nothing on earth or anywhere else that meets the approval of all mankind. There should certainly be no hell when people are continually damning one another on earth. Besides a good many people keep a little hell at home.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Dsn't forget the field meet at Chelsea, June 5th.

Visitors: Miss Huffman of Arkansas, Harold Rice, Irma Eckles, Nina Shuart.

Mr. Isbell has been at Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor a couple of days this week. Probably "scouting" for teachers.

Now you weary, wornout, wronged weaklings, cheer up. There are just eight more days of reciting left. Examinations start June 9th.

Teacher: "Timmie, locate the stomach."

Timmie (who had been locating cities in his geography class): "Its just south of the lungs in a hole in the diagram."

The question which is annually "thrown" at the Seniors, "What are you going to do when you finish school?" is now being asked. One boy replied, "I'm goin' to sew buttonholes on the moon." His ideal is high enough, isn't it?

Mr. Isbell received a letter from Pres. Angell of the U. of M. the other day, saying that our school would remain on the University list for two more years. This means that graduates of our high school will not have to take an examination entering the University.

University Attendance 5,223.

From the Calendar of the University of Michigan for 1908-09, which has just been published, it appears that the total number of students enrolled is 5,223, including the students of the Summer session of 1908, and exclusive of all names counted twice. This is an increase of over 200 over last year. Exclusive of the Summer Session, the number of students is 4,720 and this represents the actual number of students whose work centers during the college year upon the quarter square miles of land known as the Campus of the University of Michigan.

As is natural, the Department of Literature, Science and the Arts leads with the largest number of students, 1,901 enrolled, of which 1,639 are undergraduates. The Department of Engineering is in the next in point of students with 1,372, and the Departments of Law and Medicine follow with 781 and 480 respectively. The Dental College has 192 students; the School of Pharmacy 107; and the Homoeopathic Medical College 83. The Summer Session for 1908 had an attendance of 1,065, but of this number only 503 had not been enrolled in some department during the regular year.

HOW ARTIFICIAL ICE IS MADE.

New Process Tried and Found Feasible in Germany in Adapted to Any Locality.

A new process of ice-making was tried in Germany last winter with such success that it has been suggested for those sections of the United States where, on account of lack of lakes or rivers, the price of ice is high. Consul General Guenther of Frankfort describes the process as follows:

"A large wooden framework two stories, each ten feet high, is put up. Each story has a cover of 18 parallel beams. Through the center a pipe is placed to prevent freezing runs up to the upper cover. This pipe is connected with the water supply.

"At the top the water escapes over a rotating disk so that it is distributed evenly in the form of drizzling rain over the beams of the cover of both stories. The water drops continually from the beams and is changed into icicles by the cold winter temperature. These icicles grow until they reach from the top beams to the beams below, and finally to the ground floor.

"At a sufficiently low temperature 700 cubic feet of ice can be produced in a single night from such a framework. The icicle assumes and keeps the form of thick, separate columns, which can be broken without difficulty."

TOLSTOI AND THE NEW LIFE.

Writer and Humanitarian Describes How He Sought for and Found Happiness.

At the time when I had lost all interest in my personal, individual life but had not yet acquired a religious interest (an inspiration to the general good of humanity), I was horrified by my position. But I found peace the moment I had found a religious sentiment impelling me to think of the good of humanity. In this thought at the same time, I found full satisfaction of my desire for personal happiness. The same thing is going on now, although my former passionate desire to make mankind happier has weakened. I am overcome sometimes by a certain terror as if I stood before an immense abyss. But the aspiration to, and the preparation for, a new life replace the former conditions which were born out of; and in them there is happiness both for the individual and for all humanity. Preparing for the new life, I attain at the same time my former aim, the good of humanity, more surely than when this was my only aim. Aspiring to attain God, aspiring to a purity of divine being in myself and in my new life, I find more assuredly both happiness for humanity and for myself.

—Tolstoy, in Collier's Weekly.

Nyanza's "Altogether" Men.

The people inhabiting the settlements around Victoria Nyanza will be probably for a year or so still a source of amusement to the excursionists whom the Uganda railway will bring from the east coast of Africa to the Victoria Nyanza; for they will see before them coal black, handsomely formed negroes and negroes without a shred of clothing, though with many adornments in the way of hippopotamus teeth, bead necklaces, earrings and leglets of brass. They are very picturesque as they strut about the streets in their innocent nudity, decked with barbaric ornaments.

The men wear not one earring, but 15! Holes are pierced all round the outer edge of the ear, and in these are inserted brass fillets, like melon seeds in shape, to which are attached coarse blue beads of large size and dull appearance. As the figures thus exhibited are usually models for a sculptor, this nudity is blameless, and not to be discouraged; moreover, it characterizes the most moral people in the Uganda protectorate.—National Geographic Magazine.

The Kinder View.

An American was strolling about Paris with a French friend. They entered a shop, made some small purchase, and while waiting for the change, the American said in a low voice:

"Will you just look at the diamonds that pretty little salesgirl is wearing? They must be worth $2,000."

"They are not real," the Frenchman said, with a shrug.

"But they are—I know real stones when I see them—that is my business!" the American declared.

Again the Frenchman shrugged.

"But, my friend, be charitable," he protested, gently. "Figure to yourself and consider that the diamonds are imitation. For if the stones are good the little maid isn't."—Harper's Weekly.

Licensed Bachelors.

There is the further objection to the taxation of bachelors for purposes of revenue only that many of them would come to regard themselves as licensed by the state, and might even go so far as to ask for protection against despoiling widows, etc., considering their condition; in fact, as a sort of property or easement which they had a right to enjoy as against the rest of the world. This, of course, it would be impossible to provide for.

Flower Dances for Children.

French mothers have been showing unswerving ingenuity this winter in dressing their darlings for the popular flower dances which are now the fashion for juvenile society and carry all before them. Generally a number of blooms are selected, and these are called bouquet parties. The charm of these parties is that the little people are well suited to represent flowers. Parisian society has gone daft over some of the designs and also the beauty of some of the children. Their dresses are formal, of course. Trails of blooms are draped together from the waists, the ends floating on the airy skirts, or loose petals, are scattered all over the material. But this gives little idea of the chic and the detail of the dress or of the human flower that carries it off. Nothing has so hit the French taste as these flower dances, and many of the elder spectators have grown quite sentimental about them.

One of the most symptoms of spring fever is the feeling that you are being overworked. It is a general ailment. Toledo Blade.

The members of the band who want to give Saturday night concerts in the park feel rather discouraged at the prospect, as they believe more money ought to be contributed for the expense by the merchants on the street. ## Memorial Day Observance.

A proper observance of memorial day will not be forgotten by the people of Plymouth this year. The exercises will be held in the opera house on Monday afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, and will be in charge of Prof. Isbell. The old soldiers and their friends and the citizens generally are most earnestly invited to be present. There will be songs by the glee club, recitations and songs by school children and an address by Prof. F. A. Barbour of the University of Michigan. Prof. Barbour is one of the finest public speakers in Ann Arbor and his address will be well worth hearing. Do not let us forget the old soldiers, but let us all turn out and do reverence not only to the dead but to the living. They are worthy heroes and an hour or two given over to their special notice will not be lost by any one. Close the stores from two to four o'clock and go to the opera house.

Will Be a Crackerjack.

The fourth of July celebration in Plymouth is an assured fact. Sufficient money has been subscribed to make it a success, and the committee will next week begin the necessary preliminary work for entertaining the crowds that will be sure to come. There will be plenty of sports from early morn till late at night to amuse the people and keep them going. In the meantime "boost" the enterprise along and get your friends and neighbors to come to Plymouth on Saturday, July 3d.

He was healed by Christian Science in 1885, became interested in the religion of Christian Science in 1897, and studied at the Mass. Metaphysical College in Boston, Mass., in 1900. He was a member of the Board of Lectureship in 1904. As a business man he has been Vice Pres't and Secretary of the Stony Creek Coal and Coke Co., of Pennsylvania.

Illustrated Lecture by Dr. Warthin.

We heartily approve the effort to have Dr. A. S. Warthin lecture on tuberculosis and trust all who possibly can will hear him next Saturday evening.

OBITUARY.

Emilee E. Howlett was born Aug. 24th, 1873. On April 11th, 1900, she was married to Hiram A. Roe, of Plymouth, where she resided till about a year previous to her death, which occurred Sunday morning, May 23rd. A large circle of friends gathered to pay their last tribute, after which her remains were laid away in Riverside cemetery.

Mrs. Roe united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in her early girlhood. She led a quiet, but beautiful Christian life. She loved her home and was best appreciated by those who knew her best. Her life possessed a delightful reserve and modesty, so well appreciated in womanhood.

The following near relatives are left: Mrs. Howlett, the mother; Mrs. Chas. Shattuck and Mrs. Bert Gunsolly, sisters; William and Fred, brothers, and Hiram Roe, husband.—B.

When We Honor the Heroes of Two Wars

MEMORIAL day, as it was christened by its sponsors, the Grand Army, Decoration day, as the people at large persist in calling it, although chosen by the survivors of the war for the union as a season in which to honor the memory of our country's defenders, comes to us from the southland. It was the women of the south who instituted the custom of placing flowers upon the graves of not only their own defenders—none the less heroes because they died for a mistaken idea and a lost cause—but also upon the mounds that marked the resting places of union soldiers. Realizing the beauty and significance of this conception, the northern people did not long delay in following the example set by the south. In the month of May, 1868, Gen. John A. Logan, then commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued an order for the observance by that organization of May 30 as Memorial day—a day to be set apart to the memory of the soldiers and sailors who fell in the war of the rebellion. This particular day was chosen because it was the date of the discharge of the last soldier of the civil war. It is now a legal holiday in all the states except ten.

Until ten years ago it was difficult for those born since the civil war to realize the full significance that attaches to the day that we observe so generally. It is true they can gather from history all the events of that great struggle in which brother fought against brother and son against father, but they can form no adequate conception of the consternation that pervaded the north when the capital itself was threatened. They cannot grasp the import of the victory of Antietam; of the second Bull Run; of the battle of Fair Oaks; of the Wilderness; and the decisive one of the war—of Gettysburg, in which 150,000 men were engaged; and scores of other battles in which the blood of heroes stained the soil of the south in that titanic struggle between the states when more than once the fate of the nation trembled in the balance.

Although so many years have passed since the war of the rebellion the American people are not oblivious of the debt which they owe to the men who fought, suffered and died that the nation might live. The recurrence of Memorial day, with its beautiful and pathetic ceremonies, conjures up visions of those dark days of the past when our soldiers in the south were receiving their baptism of blood and fire and their friends at home were waiting in dread expectancy for "news from the front." And when it is recalled that there were four long years of this warfare those who have appeared upon the stage of life since then may be able to form an idea of the magnitude of what is conceded to be the greatest war in history.

While Memorial day has been scrupulously observed in the north for the last 40 years, within the last ten years it has been invested with a new and solemn significance. It will be a reminder that since the close of the rebellion the country has again been shaken with the throes of war—a conflict in which some of its best blood was sprinkled upon the altar of patriotism. As the veterans of '61 assemble to pay homage to their dead comrades, and the muffled drum and wailing fife sound a requiem over the heroes who met death on southern battlefields and in southern prisons, there will be mourning also for the patriots of '98—the young men who, with courage and valor equal to that of their sires, fell by Spanish shot and shell that an oppressed people might be free. When the chaplets are twined and the garlands are woven for those who have listened to the last tattoo they will also be laid upon another generation of American soldiers.

As the rites of the day are being observed in city, town and hamlet, the solemnity of the occasion will be brightened by the knowledge that the country is thoroughly reunited. No sectional feeling nor bitter memories will now or evermore arise to mar the harmony of the occasion. The enmity that was felt by a great portion of the south against its conquerors has been entirely dissipated. And yet it was not the conquering guns of the northern hosts that swept away sectionalism and removed the animosities engendered by that fratricidal strife, but rather the cannon that thundered from the fleets of Spain and the volleys that rattled through Spanish Mauers that welded together in one harmonious nation the north and south. When the call to arms resounded through the land in 1898 the states south of the Potomac, void with the north and the west in responding to the summons to maintain the honor of the flag against a foreign foe, and the first victim of that war was a son of North Carolina. The south, with the rest of the country, can claim the victor's laurel even while her tears bedew the cypress that marks her bereavement.

Memorial day will never lose its significance and interest. The ranks of the Grand Army are becoming depleted with each succeeding year. There will soon be but a corporal's guard of the members left, for they are being "mustered out" at a rapid rate through age, disability and death. But the graves of those who died fighting for the flag will not be neglected. Memorial day will continue to be a day of remembrance. The Sons of Veterans will keep alive the patriotic flame when their sires are no longer able to march to the post-mortem and the cemetery. Then, too, the Spanish war veterans will see to it that the memories of their fallen comrades are kept green.

Draw People Closer Together.
The youngest drummer boy who took part in the great war is now past middle life. The youngest soldiers who bore arms in it are entering upon old age. If the celebrations of to-day lack the military spirit of former years, the mellowing memories of the past which it brings up only draw the American people closer together.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

William Jennings Bryan
buys a farm in the Gulf Coast Country

He has purchased 160 acres of irrigated land near Mission, Hidalgo Co., Texas. Forty have been cleared and planted to orange, lemon, grape fruit, fig, olive, pecan, almond trees, etc., and if they "do as well as he expects" he will build a home and spend a portion of his winters there. Mr. Bryan has long contemplated improving a place in the South, and it is not surprising that his selection should be made in the heart of the Gulf Coast Country, whose climate is almost ideal and whose soil is so wonderfully productive.

William Volz, from ten acres in the same neighborhood, shipped 5,000 crates of Bermuda Onions from 10 acres at an average price—after all expenses paid—of $1.00 per crate; $500 an acre. Think of it!

On a small tract of land in the Gulf Coast Country you should be able to make a good living and lay away a snug sum each year.

Investigate this proposition while the land is within your reach. Next year it will cost more.

Very low rate excursions twice each month.

If you would like to know more of the big profit growers are making in the Gulf Coast Country, write me today for some very interesting literature and a set of colored post cards. Free on request.

The Breaker Boy

Scott Nearing, former secretary of the Pennsylvania child labor committee, contributes to the Charities and the Commons press bureau this remarkable transcript of the experience of a child who has grown up in the hard labor of the coal mines. It is a wonder that he should know so much as he does. This is the record of Mr. Nearing:

"What's that? What was I up to yes'day? I ain't sure I can remember it all, but I'll try.

"My days is mostly all alike when the mine is workin'. Ma and me lives in that there little log shanty with little Bill and Sissy. They goes to school, but none of that for me. Never learnt a thing in school, I didn't. There weren't no chance. When I went to school, it was in one door and out the other.

"Yep, I'm 15 now—been workin' in the breaker since I was ten. Days is, mostly the same to me. Yes'day mornin' I was dreamin' away two-forty about our mine. We was playin' the Hogtowners and they was one ahead. I goes up to the bat and soaks her for a homer, and jest as I was gettin' around to third, and the fellers was a hollerin' to beat time, I comes to and ma was a-singin':

Rise, Johnnie, rise,
Don't you hear the bells a-ringin'?
Johnnie, are you wakin'
It is time to be alive
Early in the mornin',
Continually keeps callin'
Johnnie, are you wakin'
It is half past five.

"She sings that every mornin' to get me up. Pretty good of ma, to wake a feller that way, ain't it? It's a sight better'n bein' hauled out by the hair like some of the kids is.

"So I gets up and puts on my clothes. That's the part I don't like fer a cent. After you once gets dirty, it don't make no difference, but it's pretty tough to get out of a decent bed and into them black mine clothes. Anyhow, I gets on my clothes, fills my lamp and goes down to breakfast.

"It was a dandy, yes'day. Ma had fried eggs and taters. Ma's a swell cook and she puts the real thing into yer pail. I uses the pail as belonged to pa. When the cage fell and killed him, the pail he had wasn't broke at all, so somebody brung it home to ma and when I started in I used that pail. Looks pretty rough, don't it? It's pretty much of a tin can, but it was pa's and besides new pails cost 50 cents, and that's half a day's work for me.

"So yes'day I gets me to the breaker by seven and I gets over on the hill and has a ketch with the little kids before goin' to work. When we onct get to work, there ain't much chance for baseball—it's just work all day.

"Why do I have a lamp? Well, you see, I've got the bad corners. It's awful dark and the dust is bad. Us older boys mostly gets them bad places. Sometimes in sunny days I kin see to pick the slate in there, but mostly it is so dark that I uses my lamp all the time.

"No, the work ain't hard, only sometimes yer back gets sore. You don't do nothin' but bend over and pick, and fer a greenhorn it ain't no cinch. I've been there goin' on six years now, and I never minds it. In winter it's bad on account of the cold on your hands, but mostly it ain't so worse.

"Yes'day we quit at four. Didn't have no more cars, they said, so we all skins home, takes a wash of our faces and hands, and makes for the baseball. No, we don't wash all over every day when there's steady work. Onct in a couple of days does us a plenty.

"There was a good game up there yes'day. The Reds was playin' the Yankees, so us little fellers never had a show till most six, but we had a good one then. Played till near eight, and then we lost the ball.

"Then we takes a sneak down by the saloon, but there wasn't nothin' doin' there, so we cuts it out and goes home.

"Ma was sittin' on the stoop waitin' fer me. She don't like me to stay out nights. She's allus glad when she sees me in bed of a night. Says she knows where I am then.

"There ain't nothing else to tell you. Oh, yes, there was a Hunkie got killed on the track to-day—but that ain't nothin'. There's ma a-callin' now, I suppose she wants me to go to the store—so long."

Man the Superior Animal.
Like most oriental races, the Japanese regard women as the inferior sex, and the Japanese woman cheerfully indorses the doctrine. "I once," said a globe trotter, "sat down to dinner at a hotel in Vancouver, where there was a Japanese waitress. With me at the table were two Canadian women; but, to my surprise, the waitress not only gave me priority in serving the meal, but was very particular in seeing that I had the largest portion of everything. I was rather puzzled until I remembered that in Japanese eyes I was, as a man, regarded as far more important than a woman and treated accordingly."

German Airship Stations.
With four military airship stations already built on the western frontier, the German war office has decided to erect similar stations on its eastern borders. The first of the eastern stations will be erected at Lyck, close to the Russian frontier. The new aerial station will be provided with a huge shed capable of accommodating two airships of the Zeppelin type.

Women's Food Expensive.
The question whether men eat less than women do or whether they buy more economically is suggested to a writer in Health Culture, by a comparison of the grocery bills run up by men students and bachelor girls who have clubbed together for the purpose of cutting down expenses.

In every case in which tables for comparison are given the men's menu for the week costs less than that of the women. Both seem to have reduced the food allowance to the lowest possible terms, but in footing up the amount spent the women have run into certain extravagances avoided by the men.

"Maybe," says the puzzled inquirer, "women really don't know how to shop, after all, but the more likely supposition is that no matter how strict the regimen the feminine nature requires certain luxuries that mere men can get along without."

Angels on Horseback.
There are many ways of cooking

Oysters. "Angels on Horseback" are well known, but I should hope are very well liked. It is a barbarous conjunction, that of bacon with oysters, a tremendous compliment to the bacon, it is true, but an insult to the fish.

Nor can I praise the steak and oysters so dear to many. But as an ingredient in a beefsteak pie nothing but praise can be spoken of the bit valve. There are oysters in that most delicious of pies, the one that cooks for 24 hours and keeps a man up all night to see that it does not leave off boiling. Need I say that I refer to the world famous pudding at the Cheshire Cheese?—The Gentlewoman.

Coming High.
"Smith is all the time talking about the desirability of having elevating experiences. Well, he got one the other night."

"What was it?"
"Coming home late he was held up on the street."
