MADRID'S NOTE IS FRIVOLITY

People of Spanish Capital Noted for Devotion to Gossip and Spending Money.

The note of Madrid is frivolity. It is a spendthrift town. Nowhere do so many people of modest means keep carriages, or at least hire them. The automobile has supplanted a new outlet to an old passion.

Nowhere do so many people who cannot afford to have a motor driver, or to buy regular supplies of petrol (which is both dear and bad in Spain) keep an automobile.

Therefore they turn out now and again for a short run at high speed to their own glorification and the danger of the public.

As for that public, it lives in the streets and in a perpetual state of bristling talk.

What London or Paris news comes through to Madrid, except telegrams, is mostly gossip. Important matters appear to interest the Madrilenos little.

What did interest him was when a young person appeared on horseback in Hyde Park in a directoire costume.

Madrid women dress well, even very well, and the charm of the Spanish woman is never denied.

Modern Madrid is sometimes supposed to be modeled on modern Paris, but the writer's view is that there is nothing Parisian about Madrid, except the skin.

Paris works desperately hard, is fitfully interested in serious things and producers, thinkers and men of intellectual and scientific eminence.

Madrid certainly does not work hard, does not appear to be much interested in anything but frivolity, and few of her greatest men, even statesmen, are much more than names.

Making Shoes in Four Minutes.

How long would it take you to make a pair of boots, do you think? You probably had better not begin it, especially if you need them soon.

Even a cobbler in the old days, working with his assistant, would spend a day and a half making a pair of boots. And the cost would be about four dollars.

But now, of course, shoes are made by machinery, and it is astonishing to learn how quickly they are made. It takes just four minutes to make a pair of boots!

And the labor cost is about 35 cents. Of course, no one makes the whole boot nowadays. There are a hundred different men making different parts of it.

Each one does the same thing over and over again, and each man learns to do his particular work especially well and quickly.

And you should see the buttons sewed on! A boy takes the part of the shoes where the buttons are to go and fits it into a machine, throws in a handful of buttons quite carelessly, turns the machine, and in no time out comes the piece of leather with all the buttons exactly in the right place.

No wonder some factories turn out 10,000 pairs of shoes in a day!

An Amazing Achievement.

A triumph for British engineering in the great Nile dam which has just been opened by Sir John Aird, who, from small beginnings, has built up one of the largest and most successful contracting concerns in the world.

For about six years Sir John has had 34,000 men working for him on the banks of the Nile, and the huge reservoir which he has built—holding 80,000,000,000 gallons of water, weighing nearly 400,000,000 tons—stands as one of the engineering marvels of the age.

Sir John became a millionaire solely by hard work. His grandfather was a working man who was killed during the building of the Regent's canal, while his father held a subordinate position in a London gas company.

Some wisecracks have scented out what they think may be weak spots in the new public domain commission act. They question whether the state has the power to reserve mineral rights in state lands, as the law provides, when selling them to homesteaders or others.

It is pointed out that the state obtains control of the lands through its system of collecting taxes, and the counties and townships wherein the lands are located are interested in them to the extent that they receive back a share of the proceeds from the sale, either for the taxes or later at appraised value by the land commissioner.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

Notes and Gossip Gathered in Lansing.

GEOLOGIST LANE RESIGNS

State Official May Be Succeeded by A. H. Meach of Houghton—Rumor is Confirmed at Capital.

Lansing.—Upon receipt of a telegram State Geologist Alfred C. Lane confirmed a rumor that he would hand in his resignation to the state board of geological survey, to take effect September 1. The message was from Tufts college, Summerville, Mass., a suburb of Boston, announcing that the regents of that institution had decided to offer Dr. Lane a position at the head of the department of geology and mineralogy.

For a short time at least the proposition had been under consideration by both sides, and it is understood Dr. Lane had given the Tufts college authorities to understand that he would accept the position if it were tendered him. He at once dispatched a reply acknowledging the offer and closing it definitely by accepting.

A. H. Meach of Houghton, chief assistant in the state geological department, is mentioned as a candidate to succeed Geologist Lane.

Dr. Lane has been at the head of the state geological survey for ten years, and previously was connected with the work in a semi-official capacity while a member of the faculty of the College of Mines. Among men of science he is recognized as an authority on geological matters and is the author of many books and magazine articles.

Leona Depot to Its Rival Town.

An interesting bit of information from the eastern end of the upper peninsula runs to the effect that the railroad depot has been moved from Corrine to Gould City. This act is one of the closing chapters in the history of a once thriving community. Corrine and Gould City are on the Soo line in Schoolcraft county. They are 1 1/2 miles apart. There had always been much rivalry between the two towns, and the fact that the railroad had selected Corrine as a stopping point and had refused to provide Gould City with a station, did much to keep the former town in the ascendancy.

Corrine had a sawmill and a battery of kilns at which large quantities of charcoal were manufactured for use at the Manistiquet blast furnace, and it boasted of a considerable number of mercantile establishments as well. The manufacture of lumber finally was suspended and the charcoal kilns were abandoned, since which time Corrine has been on the wane.

Meanwhile Gould City has been growing in importance. It has become the business center of the district, in fact, and for a long time past the citizens have been insistent that the Soo line give it recognition as such. There is much elation, now that the town has at last been provided with a railroad station, and it is the feeling among the people that the latest development will materially enhance the prosperity of the community. The acquisition of the depot is regarded as marking an epoch in the history of the town.

Flaws in Public Domain Act.

Some wisecracks have scented out what they think may be weak spots in the new public domain commission act. They question whether the state has the power to reserve mineral rights in state lands, as the law provides, when selling them to homesteaders or others. It is pointed out that the state obtains control of the lands through its system of collecting taxes, and the counties and townships wherein the lands are located are interested in them to the extent that they receive back a share of the proceeds from the sale, either for the taxes or later at appraised value by the land commissioner.

They ask if the state is not simply serving as a trustee to handle the lands as a means of collecting the taxes assessed against them, not acquiring such title to the lands as will allow it to deal in them as would an individual under a warranty deed. If the mineral rights were reserved and proved valuable, where would the counties and townships obtain their pro rata share of the profits?

It is also asked how the state can set aside quantities of these lands for reforestation purposes when by so doing it would preclude the counties and townships obtaining their portion of the back taxes which would be collected if the state sold the lands.

Last of Michigan Forest to Fall.

The one remaining forest in this section of Michigan is to fall prey to the woodman's ax. The Simpson Howland woods, covering 123 acres on the shores of Sherman lake, have been sold by Mrs. Alice V. Spire to John Watkins, sawmill man, who will cut the forest into lumber. Watkins had to buy 223 acres, paying over $100,000. The land had been in possession of the late Simpson Howland for 51 years. Eight hundred white oak trees are included in the purchase, which is an unusual one for these days.

French People Turn to Beer. Beer-drinking is greatly on the increase in France. In 1840 the hop crop was only 4,000,000 hectolitres; today it is nearly 12,000,000 a year.

Senator Fowler, Bay City.

Mark Norris New Warden.

The Michigan Grand Commandery engaged in a spirited battle of ballots in Detroit in selecting the eminent grand warden. There were several candidates, but the plum finally fell to Mark Norris of Grand Rapids. All other officers moved up without a contest. The complete list of new officers is as follows:

Right eminent grand commander, Howard T. Taylor, Adrian; very eminent deputy grand commander, Charles G. Graham, Ithaca; eminent grand generalissimo, William H. Kessler, Detroit; eminent grand captain general, George T. Campbell, Owosso; eminent grand senior warden, Charles E. Hancock, Ann Arbor; eminent grand junior warden, Gordon R. Campbell, Calumet; eminent grand prelate, Charles A. Lippincott, Flint; eminent grand treasurer, Charles H. Pomeroy, Saginaw; eminent grand recorder, Henry L. Anthony, Sturgis; eminent grand standard bearer, George H. Harvey, Port Huron; eminent grand sword bearer, Fred A. Aldrich, Flint; eminent grand warden, Mark Norris, Grand Rapids.

The convention voted a charter to a new commandery at Owosso. It is to be known as Owosso Commandery No. 49. It has a membership of over 100. The last man elected was John Fry of Detroit, an eminent grand captain of the guard.

Liquor Law Emaculated.

There's a chance to test in the courts whether the general liquor law passed by the recent legislature was emaculated by the omission of a vital punishment clause for infraction. As the law is worked, apparently saloons may be kept open after hours, on Sundays, election days and holidays; with no worse penalty in store for the violators than to be declared guilty of a breach of the peace.

In the old liquor law was the effective clause: "Any person found in the act of violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a breach of the peace and punished accordingly, and the arrest therefor may be without process, and this punishment shall be taken to be in excess of all other manner of punishment in this act provided for a violation of the provisions of this section."

In drafting the new act the clause "and this punishment shall be taken to be in excess," etc., was left out. The supreme court has held that there is no punishment prescribed by law for an undefined breach of the peace, and that a breach of the peace must embrace some dangerous or violent action to come within the definition.

Harbor Beach Next Year.

At the session of the Michigan Women's Press association at Port Huron officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Miss Grace Greenwood Browne, Harbor Beach; first vice-president, Miss Jennie Buell, Ann Arbor; second vice-president, Miss Clara Bates, Traverse City; recording secretary, Mrs. Sarah J. La Tour, Detroit; treasurer, Dr. Emma E. Bower, Port Huron; historian, Mrs. Alice E. Bartlett, Detroit; directors, Mrs. Pruella J. Sherman, Detroit; Mrs. Margaret H. Alden, Detroit; Mrs. Belle M. Perry, Charlotte; Miss Magie Walz, Calumet.

Mrs. Browne was elected delegate to the State Federation of Women's clubs, which meets in Hillsdale in October, Mrs. Frances E. Burns of St. Louis alternate.

The convention received invitations from Saginaw, Ann Arbor and Harbor Beach to meet in these cities for the 1910 meeting, which will be held during the week of July 15, but Harbor Beach, the home of the president, was chosen.

Lid Hits Saloons Hard.

Since the lid has been clamped on at various towns in upper Michigan complaint is made by saloonkeepers in some of the communities concerned that they no longer find the liquor traffic remunerative. A large portion of their business was transacted after one o'clock at night and on Sundays. At Sault Ste. Marie there are 700 saloons to serve a population of 12,000 people, or one saloon to every 170 men, women and children. At Escanaba, with some 900 saloons and 13,900 people, one saloon serves 140

VICTORY FOR GOULD

MILLIONAIRE NOT GUILTY OF CRUELTY AND NON-SUPPORT.

HIS WIFE'S SUIT MAY FAIL

Court Declares That Abandonment is Only Issue on Which Separation Case Will Be Decided—Weeps as Liquor Story is Told.

New York, June 15.—Abandonment will be the sole issue upon which the suit for separation brought by Katherine Clemmons Gould against her husband, Howard Gould, will be decided.

This ruling was made in the supreme court by Justice Dowling, after counsel for Mrs. Gould had rested the case for the plaintiff. This sweeps away several phases of the case—namely cruelty and non-support, and is a partial victory for Howard Gould.

Concerning charge of abandonment, the court held that this too might not stand unless the plaintiff was able to show that Howard Gould's stipulations for reconciliation with his wife were unreasonable. This phase of the case was argued to-day.

George Gould on Stand.

Developments in the case were perhaps the most interesting in the trial. George Gould, a brother of the defendant, testified, and Mrs. Gould was excused from the stand after three days of searching examination.

After the case for the plaintiff was rested, Delancey Nicoll, for the husband, made the usual motion to dismiss the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to make out a case. "There have been no evidences of cruelty," he argued. "One of the allegations is that the plaintiff was surrounded by spies. Nothing has been adduced to prove it. Then there is the Hawley incident. Nothing in that bears out the charge of cruelty."

During the foregoing argument Mrs. Gould became faint, left the courtroom and did not return. Then her counsel, Clarence Shearn, began argument against the motion of the defense to dismiss. "It is cruelty," he affirmed, "for a husband, without justification, to accuse his wife of being a bad character or to entertain against her, without cause, reflections against her honor."

George Gould followed his brother on the witness stand. He said he considered his property outside of the Jay Gould estate worth $8,000,000 or $10,000,000. This was independent of the income left by his father.

Howard Gould followed his brother on the witness stand. He said he considered his property outside of the Jay Gould estate worth $8,000,000 or $10,000,000. This was independent of the income left by his father.

Shaw, Dearborn, Treas.; Wallace Grace Redford, Sec'y of the County Association, and Carriers Osborn Durning, Canton; Roy Clark and Fred Finn, Northville; Jay Newman and Cullen Watkins, Redford; Ed. Dix, Greenfield; Elmer Truesdell, Denton; Ed. Slothers, New Boston; Nate Brokaw, Salem; S. D. Emerson, Inkster; S. O. Reeves, and John Vanderboort, Carleton; F. M. Smith, I. N. Dickerson, A. Ayris and Chas. Willis Highland Park and last but not least our host R. T. Walker.

We were also favored with Postmaster Ladd of Plymouth and Mr. Otto Hatzembuhler of the Detroit post office.

The weather was fine and arrangements had accordingly been made to hold the meeting under the trees on the lawn. Away to one side were seen tables invitingly spread that betokened refreshments after the meeting was over.

The meeting was called to order by President Phipps, and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary.

Mr. Walker in a short address welcomed the boys to his home and urged the advisability of all carriers becoming members of the association.

Mr. Hatzembuhler favored us with a brief address on the benefits of organization. Charles Phipps and Fred Finn were then elected delegates to the state convention at Big Rapids, July 27 and 28.

The business meeting over they repaired to the tables, where ice cream and cake were served, after which, in token of appreciation, the carriers tendered a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Walker and friends for their generous hospitality and adjourned subject to call.

Summer at Bay View.

The rise of the summer city of Bay View in Northern Michigan has long attracted much attention. It is a town of hundreds of summer homes and hotels in the groves by the shore of Lake Michigan; the seat of an Assembly and Summer University of great reputation and draws people from all parts of the land. It combines the advantages of Ocean Grove and Chautauque, and is one of the most beautiful spots in the world. A measure of its popularity is the one hundred and sixteen through and local passenger trains which arrive daily from the south, besides all the lake steamers. It is noted for its great variety. There, recreations are organized and promoted, and a $12,000 swimming pool and bowling alley are now building. Much is done for the children, and this year a summer school of Domestic Arts and Science, in charge of women of the highest reputation; also a Bible Conference conducted by Dr. W. F. Sheridan, of Kansas City, in which participate conspicuous church leaders, governors and judges, are among the new features. All the summer announcements are out and 40 beautifully illustrated pages in the Bay View Magazine for May. If you write J. M. Hall, Boston Boulevard, Detroit, Mich., he will send you a copy.

Army Callisthenics.

One of the most interesting displays at the big Military Tournament, which will be held by regular army soldiers at Toledo July 4th to 10th, will be the callisthenic drill called Butts Manual. This will be given by battalions of 250 men, to the music of a regimental band, and the characteristic feature of the drill is the use of the military rifle in place of the ordinarily used wand in concerted gymnasium work. Butts' Manual is so called because it is the invention of a U. S. officer of that name, who has worked out a system which exercises every muscle of the body, and plays a large part in the "setting-up" work which gives the American army man the soldierly bearing for which he is justly famed. Nearly three full infantry regiments will be at the Toledo Tournament, and sometime, during each day, the musical drill just described will be given. Performances will be held each week afternoon and evening, from July 4th to 10th, the remainder of the program consisting of drills simulating actual battle conditions by artillery, cavalry, infantry, engineers, hospital and signal corps. Cheap excursion rates will be made for each day.

The stage had been nicely festooned with the class colors, cream and blue, while on each side of the arch appeared the letters forming the class motto, Be not simply good, be good for something.

The program was opened with a song by Frank Showers of Ypsilanti, followed by invocation by Rev. E. King, again followed by another song by Mr. Showers. Supt. Isbell then introduced the speaker of the evening, Hon. H. R. Pattingill of Lansing. By request the gentleman took for his subject, "Nancy Hanks of the 19th Century." Mr. Pattingill's well known ability to entertain an audience was again abundantly demonstrated, his address abounding with wit and humor, while at the same time "good horse sense" was developed in the advice and admonitions given to the class as well as all others in the audience. His comparisons of old time methods and appliances with those of the present day were humorously illustrated, the speaker then pointing out what education and work had accomplished and what the future might yet bring forth.

Following the address came another song by Mr. Showers, when the class was presented with their graduating diplomas. The class song, composed by Spencer Heoney was rendered with benediction was said by Rev. C. T. Jack.

The musical numbers were accompanied by Bortha Beale.

Red-headed Girls and Autos.

"Automobiles and red-headed girls both flourish abundantly in this invigorating climate," says the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. "Giving us one more point of superiority over Charleston." But will not our contemporary admit that the Rochester red-headed girl flourishes a little too abundantly? We think that she should be five feet four or five and weigh not over 110, but our impression is that the Rochester beauty flourishes to the weight of about 180 and sometimes 160. The ideal is a thinness, willowy and slim and not an abundant flourish. —Charleston News and Courier.

Tri-Sunday-School Field Meet

Lovers of field sports will have an opportunity to witness what promises to be a very interesting program of field events at the Athletic Park next Wednesday, June 23. It will be the second tri-Sunday-school meet of the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian schools.

There will be three classes of events—For boys weighing under 80 pounds, for boys between 80 and 110 pounds in weight, and for boys weighing 110 pounds and above. No contestant shall be over 21 years of age and all must have been in good standing in their respective Sunday-school May 2. The program includes 22 events and will be divided, several of the events being pulled off in the morning, beginning at 9 o'clock.

The most spectacular portion of the meet, including dashes, long runs and relay races, etc., will be held in the afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. Persons attending this meet will not only see some good, clean sport, but they will help a good cause, for the surplus receipts will be used in the purchase of a trophy, probably a banner, which will be contended for by the schools, the winner for three years in succession getting it to keep permanently.

A reception to the contestants and their friends and all members of the three Sunday-schools will be held in the Presbyterian church Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, at which time the ribbons will be presented to the winners.

Baccalaureate by Rev. Ronald.

The opera house was filled with people Sunday evening to hear the baccalaureate address of Rev. H. Ronald to the graduating class of '09.

The subject of the address was "The Simple Road that Leads to the End of the World." The speaker began by congratulating the class on their past record. But he reminded them that the word commencement looks forward not backward, and therefore it was more fitting that he should offer them counsel for the future, which he proceeded to do. Life is full of mystery. Even science deals in riddles and incomprehensibles. We do not know, we cannot know even ourselves. But this is no argument against education. The difference between a fool and a wise man is not in knowledge so much as in self appreciation. The wise man knows his limitations; the fool doesn't. The true aim of education is to make us wise to our ignorance. But notwithstanding the mystery that hangs about life there is no good reason why any one should fail. If he does fail, the reason for his failure lies in himself. There may be a black midnight over us but there is a star somewhere in our sky. It is not ours to know, it is ours to go. "Go thy way Daniel!"

In conclusion the speaker reinforced the impression by stating his thought in another way. The problem of reaching the true goal reduces itself to two problems, life and the world. The problem is solved when a man takes the true attitude to life and the world. Life is too hallowed, too precious to be wasted. The world ought not to be taken by the throat and held up for a living. Nor ought a man to bargain away his brain for gold. Life is too precious for anything but to be poured out in unselfish service for the world, and the world is worthy your best, for it is God's world. Common fidelity to the truth, common loyalty to the light, this is the simple road that leads to the end of the world.

FEEDING AMERICAN BLUEJACKETS

By WALDON FAWCETT

FOR various reasons, not the least of which are the influence for content and the encouragement of enlistment, it has long been the ambition of the authorities to have the enlisted men of the American navy take rank as the "best paid and best fed" sailors in the world. The former has been merely a matter of inducing congress to make liberal expenditure, but the latter has involved no end of thought and work. Gradually, however, the matter of supplying the best possible food in the most appetizing form to large numbers of bluejackets afloat and ashore has been reduced to a fine science. To be sure, the public does hear now and then more or less strenuous complaints from naval tars on the score of the fare provided aboard ship, but these protests are nowhere near as frequent as they once were, or as they are in the navies of other nations. Moreover, such "growls" when investigated are usually found to emanate from chronic "soreheads." In the comparatively limited number of cases where the complaints are justified the trouble is likely to be traced to poor cooking, rather than poor food—for, unfortunately, in the navy, as in other walks of life, there is a great difference in cooks.

In an effort to insure and maintain the quality of the eatables, all food purchased for use on a man-of-war must be carefully inspected by the commissary officer. Then, too, a strict watch is kept that Jack does not indulge in any delicacies that are not good for him, because of climatic or other conditions. To that end the ship's medical officer prescribes as to the character of the food that the bluejackets should eat at the different seasons of the year and with reference to the climate in which the vessel is stationed at the time in question.

By way of evidencing the wholesome character of the food provided for the men who go down to the sea in Uncle Sam's ships there may be given a sample menu. The bill of fare is changed daily, but a representative day's meal program is found in the following: For breakfast, baked pork and beans, bread, butter, coffee. For dinner, roast veal or roast beef and gravy, stewed tomatoes, mashed potatoes, bread, butter and coffee. For supper, bologna sausage, cheese, potato salad, bread, butter and tea. Pie, fresh fruit and other delicacies are often included in the supper bill, and a 48-quart power ice cream freezer is, during the summer months, one of the most frequently used features of the equipment of the galley or kitchen of the average battleship. In this connection it may be added, that the presence on shipboard of a mechanically operated ice cream freezer but calls attention to the fact that the average floating fortress flying the Stars and Stripes is equipped with almost every ordinary appliance known to the art of twentieth century cookery. There are potato peeling machines, potato mashing apparatus, meat grinders, an electrical dough mixer, dish washers and other innovations.

To make her well Uncle Sam's bluejackets fare with reference to the crating of the latter man, it is only necessary to compare an average day's meals with the items of food provided by the British government for the fighting man aboard his majesty's battleships. For breakfast, your British tar has one pint of cocoa, and dry biscuit. At dinner he has salt pork and pea soup, but no vegetables. Late in the afternoon, in lieu of supper, he has "tea" which his meal consists of one pint of tea and more dry biscuit. Think of that for a final meal of the day as compared with a Yankee naval menu that includes not only bread, butter and tea, but also fresh meat pie, fried potatoes, etc.—to say nothing of the 200 quarts of ice cream that are consumed on a first-class American battleship on many a warm evening. No wonder the American men-war men are enabled to cause the foreign tars to open their eyes with astonishment whenever they entertain them aboard one of the republic's sea warriors.

The young men who enlist in the United States navy do not have to wait until they actually go aboard cruising warships to enjoy the plain, substantial, nourishing food that Uncle Sam prescribes. The "land lubber" enrolling in the navy is not put aboard ship at the outset, but spends some six months or more in a preparatory course of instruction at a training station on shore, but in these institutions as on the warships every effort is made to provide nourishing food in sufficient variety to tempt all sorts of healthy appetites. All the cooking and baking for the navy's tars is done by enlisted men of the service—bluejackets who receive somewhat better pay than most of their fellows because of proficiency in this work.

Ship's cooks receive $25, $30, $40 and $55 per month (in addition, of course, to board, lodging and all expenses), according to their skill and experience. Bakers receive $35 and $45 per month. At the head of the cookery department of each ship are a chief commissary steward and commissary steward who receive pay of $70 and $60 respectively. As a testimonial to the skill of the naval cooks, it may be remarked that from this same class of men are recruited the cooks and stewards of the "messman branch" who buy, serve and cook the food of the officers aboard ship. There are Chinamen and negroes among the cookery staffs of our warships, but a large proportion of the men who prepare and serve the food are up-to-date, intelligent, young Americans.

Marvelous advances have been made on our warships in the matter of quick service of meals. It is now a watchword on board ship that warm dishes shall be served hot, and cold ones cold, with no suspicion of stale food. The men in charge must bend every energy to see to it that meals are served to the minute and are placed on the tables piping hot. All preparations are made at the tables before the messmen set out to transfer the food from the galley to the tables, and the serving is so systematized that the most important dishes of the meal leave the heaters first. On the average American battleship not more than four minutes is required to serve the cooked portion of a meal for more than 700 bluejackets, and on the battleship Missouri, a record of two minutes for serving a meal has been attained over and over again. To do this, either mess strikers must serve the tea and coffee at the same time that the messmen are serving the solid food, or else the drinkables must be served in advance, but this latter can readily be done if necessary, for experience has proven that tea and coffee served at boiling heat will retain their heat for some little time.

The general mess on a warship, comprising practically all of the enlisted men of the navy and marine corps is divided into messes of about 20 men each, and a messman is detailed for each mess, to receive the food from the cooks at the galley, and serve it at the mess table. Tipping is not only unnecessary, but it is forbidden. When men are landed from a warship in large numbers, either for going into camp or for an expedition, a commissary corps, including cooks, bakers and messmen is sent with them, to see to it that they have good food and plenty of it.

There is a popular misconception regarding the manner in which Uncle Sam provides table board for the occupants of his floating fortresses. In addition to the pay provided for enlisted men, the government undertakes to subsidize them, and this is done at whatever expense may be necessary. The fixed value of commutation for one ration is, by law, 30 cents, but the commutation of rations is a privilege, not a right, and there is error in the idea that has become prevalent in some quarters that each enlisted man is entitled to receive just 30 cents' worth of food each day or 30 cents in money.

agreement so that all nations shall display a uniform marine storm signal. In effecting an international agreement it is believed that it will be a great factor in saving life and property on sea and land and at the same time be highly important in weather predictions.

These subjects were dealt with by two committees, one on maritime weather signals and the other on weather marine telegraphy.

The first committee was composed of Dr. W. N. Shaw, director of the British meteorological office; Prof. A. Angot, director of the Central French meteorological service; Rev. L. Froc, director of the Zi Ka Wei observatory at Shanghai, China; Rear Admiral Hinz, director of the Deutsche Seewarte at Hamburg, Germany; Prof. H. Mohr, director Norwegian Meteorological Institute; Prof. Willis L. Moore and K. Nakamura, director of the meteorological service of Japan. In addition to Messrs. Angot, Hinz and Moore, the other committee was composed of Lieut. Gen. Rykatcheff, director of the Central Physical observatory of St. Petersburg, Russia.

"One of the principal problems taken up by the conference," said Prof. Moore, "was the question of international agreement as to the taking of wireless marine weather reports. The scheme was to obtain the adoption by all of the leading nations of a uniform method of taking and transmitting wireless meteorological observations so that each observation, no matter by what nation taken, will be comparable with the observations taken by any other nation. There is now no uniform system of receiving and transmitting marine wireless weather reports and exactly the same things are not observed.

"Observations received by a ship would be transmitted to other ships, so that by relaying from one vessel to another observations from the entire ocean would then within a few minutes reach the land and the central meteorological offices in the United States, France, England and Germany and other interested nations would be able to complete these observations each in its proper geographic position, and thus to determine the location of storms and forecast their future direction. Such forecasts could be distributed to the vessels in the same manner in which the observations on which the forecasts were based were collected."

THE ABERRATION OF ANGELINA

BY MARY BOURCHIER SANFORD

(Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Her friends said that Angelina was a deep thinker, and excused her absent-mindedness in consideration of her genius.

When she came from a suburban town to visit a friend in New York, who lived in the top flat of a large apartment-house, she went alone to the roof to meditate, and descended through the scuttle of the house adjoining. All the houses in the row were under the same management and were of similar plan. As the door of the private hall was ajar Angelina walked into the parlor, settled herself comfortably in an easy-chair, and took up a magazine.

She did not observe the entrance of a young man until he said with some hesitation: "Miss Haughton, I hope you will excuse my mother. She has been unavoidably detained."

Angelina's momentary bewilderment gave place to alarm, for it occurred to her that this was the neighbor who had been afflicted with typhoid fever, whose mind was temporarily unbalanced, and who had a habit of wandering into other people's houses. She recalled uneasily that she had not heeded Mrs. Wood's caution to close the hall door, and that she was alone in the flat. She had heard that the invalid was extremely irascible, and, endeavoring to humor him, she said, falteringly: "Don't mention it. I should be sorry to have your mother hurry home on my account."

She could not think of any other safe remark, and there was a long pause before the stranger asked abruptly: "Where's Fred now?"

Fred! Perhaps he referred to her cousin, Fred Stearns, who had spent some weeks with the Woods two or three years ago. "He's gone to Colorado," she answered. "I often hear from him and his wife. Their little girl is my namesake."

"Little girl! Fred married! It can't be possible!"

He was growing excited, and would not brook contradiction, so she hastened to say: "No, I mean yes, I was—" mistaken. He— isn't married. That is—I mean—the Fred you mean—isn't."

Tried in Vain to Rouse Her.

He looked greatly perplexed, but replied in a peculiarly soft and gentle tone: "I thought you understood that I referred to my old chum, Fred Wells. He has been a very poor correspondent, but one must excuse him under the circumstances."

"How stupid of me!" said Angelina. "I might have known you meant him. We haven't heard anything of him lately either. But, as you say, he is quite excusable under the circumstances."

Then, to her great alarm, the young man drew closer to her and looked steadily into her eyes.

He was trying to hypnotize her. She had heard that he had delusions on the subject of hypnotism, believing himself possessed of extraordinary powers.

Her head swam. The color rushed to her face, then receded, leaving her ghastly. She breathed with difficulty. Once she arose, with the hope of escaping, but sank back into her chair when she saw that the door was closed, and that the stranger had perceived her intention.

"Miss Haughton," he said, in that strangely modulated tone, "you have been under unusual strain lately, and it has affected your nervous system. Allow me to give you something that will quiet it."

"No, no, no," she protested. "I have a rooted objection to drugs."

"But this is very mild," he said, taking a vial from his pocket and extracting two tablets. "It is perfectly harmless, and will benefit you immediately."

Her refusal would enrage him. Her acceptance might mean death by poison. Clearly, her only safety was in flight.

As the lunatic was between her and the door, she rushed to the open window, thinking she might get out on the fire-escape. She had partly succeeded when she felt strong arms about her, dragging her back. She tried to scream for help, but her voice, as in a nightmare, refused utterance; her limbs gave way beneath her. She could not resist when he placed her in a chair and put the tablets in her mouth. "Swallow them," he commanded sternly, and she felt herself compelled to obey.

"That's a good girl," he said in the tone sometimes used by elders to a child who has been refractory. "Now lie down on the lounge for a while, and you'll feel a great deal better presently."

"Very well," she answered drowsily, and permitted him to lead her to a sofa. A lethargy was stealing over her. She believed she was sinking into the death-coma, but the thought gave her no uneasiness. She had ceased to be troubled or afraid.

It was the turn of her captor to be seriously alarmed. He had expected the drug to stoothe her, not to send her into a stupor. Her face grew pinched, there was an ominous blueness about her lips. When he had tried in vain to rouse her, he rushed to the telephone and called up Dr. Ensign, who replied, after a hurried conference, that he would be on hand in a few minutes. Then, for safety's sake, the young physician, Edward Mather, summoned another medical man.

The three were working over the patient, having agreed that the dose was a moderate one, and that its unusual effect was due to a peculiar nervous condition, when the bell rang and Mather, believing the druggist's boy had arrived, went to the door. In his agitation he had removed his coat and run his fingers through his hair. There was a certain wildness in his eyes, and the young woman who stood in the hall gazed at him in astonishment.

"Excuse me," he stammered. "She—she's very ill, and—"

"Who is ill, your mother?"

"No, Miss Haughton—Juliet."

"Oh! oh!" exclaimed the visitor. "I never thought to see your mother's son in such a condition. Go—hide yourself—quickly—she is coming up the stairs."

"What's the trouble?" asked the portly Mrs. Mather, puffing for breath.

"Mother," he whispered in an aside which the visitor heard, "don't—don't go into the parlor. Miss Haughton is there, and—she's not herself at all."

"Edward Mather!" exclaimed the old lady, "have you lost your senses? Or—have you been— Oh, I never thought to see son of mine!"

"No, I've not been drinking. I'm as sober as either of you—very sober indeed. I mean what I say; Miss Haughton is suffering from—from temporary—aberration."

"Temporary aberration!" cried the indignant girl. But her tone suddenly changed. "Dear Mrs. Mather," she said sympathetically, "I see how it is. He has overstudied, and—"

"Edward, my son, my dear son!" said the old woman, her voice breaking. "What—what has come to you? This—is this Juliet Haughton?"

"Then there is another of her in the parlor," answered Mather. "Come and see for yourself."

They were met at the door by Dr. Bayne. "Her people will be here in a few minutes, Mather. I telephoned her father. She's conscious but much excited; thinks you are mad and tried to poison her. You'd better leave her to us."

A violent ringing and clatter in the street drew Mrs. Mather to the window. "Great Scott!" cried her son, "there's an ambulance and a police patrol! Is it possible that Bridget—"

"Yes, it was me," answered Bridget, joining the group. "I'll have to excuse me, seeing I got that frustrated wild crazy woman dying of poison into the house, and I ran up everything in sight. Maybe I pulled the fire alarm, too, and the ladies will be along presently."

A great crowd had collected, through which a white-haired man, accompanied by three women, elbowed his way. In a very short time the elderly gentleman and his companions, closely followed by policemen and ambulance doctors, had mounted the stairs and arrived at the Mather apartment.

"Where's the patient?" asked a young doctor.

"The prisoner," said a policeman. "Was it attempted suicide?"

"Stand back, gentlemen," commanded Dr. Ensign, "you will agitate her. This way, madam," to Mrs. Haughton,—"but calm yourself, for she is in a very nervous state."

"That's no daughter of mine!" exclaimed Mrs. Haughton. "I never saw the woman in my life before."

"Neither did I, mother," said Miss Juliet, who had stood in the background, awaiting developments.

"I think I must have got into the wrong house," piped a feeble voice from the sofa, where Angelina lay, pale and exhausted from the heroic measures that had been employed for her resuscitation. "The— the young man addressed me as Miss Haughton, and I thought he was out of his mind, and humored him."

"I only got home last night; I know my mother expected Miss Haughton, and I had not seen her since I was a boy," explained Edward Mather.

"It's all a dreadful mistake!" cried Angelina. "I—I thought this was Mrs. Wood's, and sat down to read. Let me go to her. I—I am absent-minded, but I do assure you, I am entirely sane."

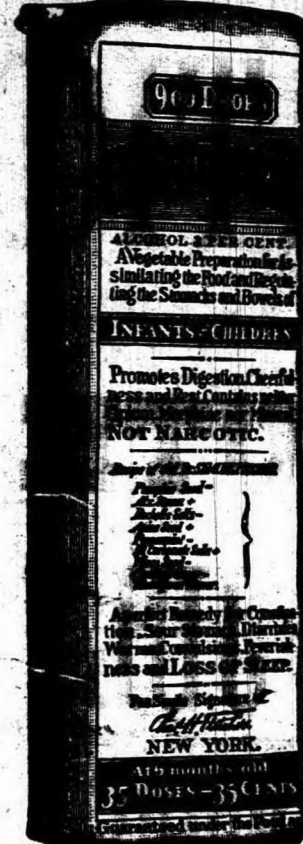

"I will take you at once to your friend," said Dr. Ensign, for Angelina looked anxious at Mather, who was about to offer his assistance.

"May I—ask Miss Haughton one question?" requested Angelina.

"Certainly," answered Juliet Haughton, briskly.

"Who is—Fred?"

"Fred? Fred Wells?" replied Juliet, blushing. "He is—the man I am going to marry."

SEEMED APPROPRIATE TO HER

Wife of Sick Man Thought She Had Reason for Appealing to Locomotive Works.

One day last winter a feeble Irish woman called upon us for aid. The case sounded urgent, so I went with her at once. Everything was just as she had stated. Her husband was very ill, she was too old and feeble to work, their children were dead, there was no fire and their only food was bread which their neighbors, almost as poor as they, had given them. I asked her why she had not come to us before and she replied that she had appealed to the church and to several individuals without success.

"Thin," she went on, "O' wit to 't' big place 'round the strate." The only "big place" near was a plant for the manufacture of steam engines, and I wondered.

"But what made you go to the locomotive works?" I asked.

"Well, ma'am, shure an' ain't me s'ld man got locomotive taxes?"—New York Telegram.

GOT TO THE CAUSE

And Then All Symptoms of K'ney Trouble Vanished.

C. J. Hammonds, 517 S. Hill St., Fort Scott, Kansas, says: "I was operated on for stone in the kidney but not cured and some time after was feeling so bad that I knew there must be another stone that would have to be cut out. I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and the kidney action improved right away. Large quantities of sediment and stony particles passed from me, and finally the stone itself, part dissolved, but still as big as a pea. With it disappeared all symptoms of dizziness, rheumatism and headaches. I have gained about 50 pounds since and feel well and hearty."

"I was not told the whole truth"—William Jennings Bryan

In a speech made in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas in December last, Hon. William Jennings Bryan said—

"The trip through your fertile valley has been a succession of surprises to me and the only fault I can find is that I was not told the whole truth. The development surpasses the reports which I had heard. I am pleased with the soil and the climate, and besides having natural advantages you have the advantage of irrigation.

"You are creating wealth and what you make you are entitled to. You are earning legitimate fortunes."

Yes and liberal fortunes too, for money is made quickly and easily in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas. Profits of from $300 to $1000 an acre are the rule, not the exception.

Why don't you do the same—you don't need much capital. You can buy the few acres you need on easy terms and the first crop, if properly cared for, should more than pay for the land.

O. Riggs, Mercedes, Texas, bought ten acres last fall. Including clearing, plowing, etc., it cost $2040. He has shipped enough beans from the land to pay for it in less than six months and can raise another crop before the year is out.

Public Domain Commission

An act to create a public domain commission, which Gov. Warner signed, is an act which promises to do much toward caring for state lands and bettering them, and as provided under the act the commission will be under men well suited to look after the work. The act provides that the commission shall consist of the auditor general, the commissioner of the state land office, the secretary of state and three members to be appointed by the governor—one from the board of regents of the University of Michigan; one from the members of the state board of agriculture and one member from the board of control of the College of Mines at Houghton, all to be nominated by said board. The terms of office of the commission shall be continuous with their respective offices.

The first meeting is to be held as soon as practical after the law goes into effect in the office of the commissioner of the state land office in Lansing, where they are to organize by selecting a chairman and secretary and also arrange for a time and place or places for holding regular and special meetings.

This commission is given power to appoint a supervisor of trespass. It will be the duty of this person to have general supervision of all trespass agents and to keep all records pertaining to any cases of trespass, cost, disposition of all cases, etc.

The words "public domain" are defined to include all lands now owned by the state subject to entry and all lands that shall hereafter be deeded to the state by the auditor general under the existing laws.

This commission has power and jurisdiction over, management, control and disposition of public lands, forest reserves and forest interests, of all the interests of the state in connection with stream protection, and all power which was vested in the Michigan forestry commission is transferred to the public domain commission.

The state game, fish and forestry warden is subject to the supervision and direction of this commission so far as warden's duties pertain to fires and public lands. The commission is also given power to have the commissioner of the state land office, auditor general and state game, fish and forestry warden to perform such other duties which are not inconsistent with existing laws, as the commission shall from time to time require.

As soon as possible after organization the commission is required to cause an investigation to be made for the purpose of determining what state lands are so circumstanced as to be deeded by the auditor general to the state, and to be so deeded without unnecessary delay.

As soon as the state secures absolute title the lands are then under the control of the commission, after which the commission is required to appraise and sell such lands as can be used for agricultural purposes, and it may cause such lands as are unfit for agricultural purposes to be used for forestry reserve purposes and at no time shall the amount set aside be less than 200,000 acres, including present state forest reserves.

The commission also has power to provide that all homestead applications shall contain a provision which will make it a part of the contract with the state that a certain number of acres of each 40 acres homesteaded shall be set aside for an individual forest reserve. The commission may also require the commissioner of the state land office to work in conjunction with the boards of supervisors of the several counties of the state for the purpose of disposing of state lands suitable for agricultural purposes to settlers, either by homestead entry or otherwise.

The state is to own all mineral, coal, oil and gas rights when any sales are made by and under the commission, and the power is given the commission to make contracts with private individuals or with corporations for taking ore, coal, gas or oil from such lands upon a royalty basis. The commission is also given power to provide that all deeds issued for lands along water courses or streams shall contain a clause reserving the rights of ingress and egress over and across said lands.

W. C. T. U.

Our meeting last week was well attended and most excellent reports of the recent State convention held at Battle Creek was given by the delegates. It was a very enthusiastic meeting, as for the first time in its history of thirty-five years it was held in a dry town.

The leaders for the meeting next week Thursday, June 24, are Mrs. Van Vleet and Mrs. Mabel Penney. It will be Flower mission day and the Loyal Temperance Legion will have a part on the program.

All lines of business in Jackson have increased since local prohibition went into effect. Former saloon rooms are nearly all occupied by legitimate business enterprises. The Salvation Army has rented one. Most markets are doing more business. Back debts are being paid by old toppers. The sheriff has had to sell a large part of his supply of potatoes, as he has only one-third the usual number of prisoners to feed. This will be the condition in every town if we get State wide prohibition in 1911, as is hoped for.—Supt. Press.
