Does Advertising Pay?

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay and he can't afford to advertise, sets up his judgment in opposition to that of all the best business men of the world. Says an experienced advertising authority: "With a few years' experience in conducting a small business on a few thousand dollars' capital, he assumes to know more than those whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesn't pay."

If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants the heaviest advertisers? If it does not pay why do the largest business firms in the world spend millions in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions to the newspaper and magazine publishers, and the manufacturers of advertising specialties or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a-dollar merchant who says money spent in advertising is thrown away or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous, says the American Stationer, and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man.

The Romance of the Reaper at State Fair

The Michigan State Fair of Detroit will this year contain an interesting and novel treat for farmers of Michigan in the form of a Moving Picture Exhibit portraying with five thousand feet of film and one hundred artistic views the Romance of the Reaper, which is a review of the ages of contest by the farmers of the world to wrest their sustenance from the soil, from the days of the reaping hook to the present.

The pictures present to the farmer the process of manufacture of the great labor saving devices for which he has facility use from the time the lumber is cut and the ore dug from the mines until the machines are at work in the field.

The views will depict the use of harvesting machines in various countries and the twine industry will be described together with other items of agricultural interest.

The International Harvester Co. is staging this production to show the great advance of modern methods over the old days and the vast amount of labor necessary for the accomplishment of the ultimate perfection of its output and the lifting of the burden of work from the shoulders of the farmer.

First Sanitary Money.

To the Old National Bank, of Spokane, Washington, belongs the distinction of circulating the first anti-septic, germ-proof, national bank notes. The United States treasury is still experimenting with devices intended to launder dirty bank notes into bright, crisp ones, but the Spokane bank has the first sanitary money on record.

Fifty thousand dollars in bills just put out by the bank were signed with an ink which consisted largely of carbolic acid. The result is the bills are saturated with an agency which means death to the most vigorous germ.

Digestion and Assimilation.

It is not the quantity of food taken but the amount digested and assimilated that gives strength and vitality to the system. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets invigorate the stomach and liver and enable them to perform their functions naturally. For sale by all dealers.

Need Only Tell the People.

There are many merchants who believe that money spent in advertising is like charity, because everybody in their territory knows them and the goods they sell. Yet we venture the assertion that a large percentage of the business the mail-order houses draw from rural communities is due to the fact that the purchaser does not know he can get the goods as advantageously from his home merchants. The country merchant can advertise with the same proportionate success in his local paper that the department store gains by advertising in the city papers by simply telling the people what he has in stock and what he is charging for it.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable a man for two or three weeks, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment freely as soon as the injury is received, and observing the directions with each bottle, a cure can be effected in from two to four days. For sale by all dealers.

WRIGHTS DESCRIBE FLYING

Famous Aviators Say You Would Not Know That You Were Moving by Sense of Feeling.

What is the sensation when one goes aloft in an aeroplane. Here is how the Wright brothers describe it in a recent number of the Columbian Magazine:

"It is peculiarly exhilarating, and at the beginning, for most persons, full of suppressed excitement. The machine rises swiftly, yet lightly from the monorail along which it is pushed at starting. For a minute the earth seems a blur beneath you, but as you ascend the landscape and terrestrial objects detach themselves more clearly. At an elevation of, say, 100 feet you would be unconscious of any movement whatever but for the wind that fans your cheeks and waists off your hair. If it is not held securely, the operator pulls a lever, the aeroplane tilts to one side and makes a sharp turn to right or left, but you are not jerked about in your seat, as you would be in an automobile, or even in a railroad car. Now you are facing about, toward the point of departure. The ground, far below, seems suddenly to be rushing along at a terrific speed, although the wind against your face has not perceptibly changed. You are now going with the wind.

"As you approach the earth the conductor stops his motor while the machine is still high in the air. It has been whirling with deafening sound, but in your excitement you did not notice it until it ceased. The aeroplane drives downward, obliquely, and alights after a glide of perhaps a hundred feet. Although it may descend at the speed of a mile a minute, there is such an absence of shock that it is impossible to know the precise moment when it touches the ground."

Maiden Garlands. At Minsterley, in Shropshire, England, in the quaint little seventeenth century church, are preserved seven "Maiden Garlands," said to be by far the largest and best-preserved collection in England. The tradition concerning them is, says a writer in "Country Life," that when a maiden whose betrothed had died was herself carried, still unwed, to the grave, one of these crowns of garlands was borne before her coffin by the village girls. The date of the earliest specimen in Minsterley church is 1726, and the latest 1794. When the funeral was over, the wreath was hung up in the church, over the place the maiden had been wont to occupy, to commemorate her constancy. The framework of the wreaths is adorned with frills of what was once white paper, and in the center is a representation of a pair of gloves, also in paper.

Monument to Montcalm. A monument in memory of Montcalm was unveiled recently at Vestre-Candiac, his old birthplace, near Nimes, in the department of the Gard, France, by the minister of education, M. Doumergue. This monument is the work of the sculptor Leopold Morice, and has been erected out of the proceeds of a subscription organized simultaneously in Canada and France. A replica of the monument will be erected at Quebec. A special Canadian deputation, including the Canadian commissioner general in France, M. Hector Fabre, Senator Dandurand, Mr. Charles Marcell, the speaker of the Canadian house of commons, and Mr. De Celles, the librarian of the Dominion parliament, were present on this occasion.

Objected to Open Work Blouses. Cure Villiger, the head of a Swiss village church, was so shocked by the younger women of his congregation appearing in church in white openwork blouses, owing to the very hot weather which prevailed, that he changed the subject of his sermon, and spoke on the vanities of the world and open-work blouses in particular. At the end of the sermon the cure state that, in future no women wearing open-work blouses would be allowed to enter the church, and that he had given orders to that effect. The men in the village support the cure, while the women are very indignant.

Self-Reliant. "That's a fine dictionary you have," said the city relation. "Yes," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "Mandy thought I ought to have the book in the house so's to help my spelling." "But your spelling is just as erratic and unusual as ever." "I know it. I'm one of these fellers that don't believe half they see in print."

Looked Like an Assault. An English dentist who went into the country the other day to extract a woman's tooth had to give it up because her children threw the poker at him and tore off his coat tails in preventing what they thought was a violent assault upon their mother.

Living Was Not So High Then. "Well," said the prodigal son, "I'm mighty glad you didn't all turn vegetarians while I was away." "How with he helped himself to some some of the veal."

TOWNSEND FOR SENATE, OSBORN FOR GOVERNOR

TOWNSEND'S MAJORITY IS OVER 23,000—CHASE OSBORN LEADS THROUGHOUT THE STATE.

THE WINNERS IN THE FIGHT FOR SENATE AND GOVERNOR RUN ABOUT EVENLY.

Osborn's Majority North of the Straits Is 18,000 to 20,000, and in the Lower Peninsula it is 5,000 to 8,000.

Charles E. Townsend is nominated for United States senator and Chase S. Osborn for governor. Congressman Gardner is defeated for renomination in the Third district by J. M. C. Smith of Charlotte. Congressman McMoran is in danger of defeat at the hands of Louis C. Cramton in the Seventh district. Congressman Loud, Fordney and Young are renominated. Gerritt J. Diekema was renominated over Geo. Ellis in the Fifth. Incomplete returns place Townsend's majority at 16,717. Osborn leads in the gubernatorial contest by 17,185 over Musselman and 20,754 over Kelley. As the returns still to come are from Osborn districts his plurality is sure to approximate and likely to exceed 25,000. The surprising feature of the fight for governor was the run of Amos Musselman of Grand Rapids. Mr. Musselman leading Kelley by more than 4,000. He has carried the Eleventh and Eleventh congressional districts and ran strong in the Ninth. The vote was light throughout the state. Complete and incomplete returns from 79 counties, showing that all but four of the counties in the state have sent some returns, give Townsend a lead of 23,000 in a total of about 93,000. He scored a tremendous victory in Kent county, which he carried by nearly 5,000.

CHARLES E. TOWNSEND.

The majority of Charles E. Townsend for United States senator was surprisingly large, even in the districts where his strength was known—he carried many counties which had been carried by Burrows were not carried by such majorities as greeted Townsend. Jackson county gave Townsend 2,412 and Burrows 206, that is, the Jackson candidate had 12 times the vote of his opponent. At the same time Kalamazoo returns give Burrows 1,256 and Townsend 489, showing that Burrows got only three times as many votes as Townsend in Burrows' county.

The returns from the iron district show that Burrows' lead is small, while those from the copper district prove that Townsend's lead there is heavy. The first returns from Gogebic, in the iron district, show Townsend ahead, while he carries Houghton county by a vote of 2,327 to 1,225 for Burrows. Townsend carries Chippewa, the home county of Chase S. Osborn; Ingham, the home county of Patrick Kelley; Kent, the home county of Amos S. Musselman; Eaton, the home county of L. D. Dickinson; Muskegon, the home county of J. Q. Ross, and Berrien, the home county of Nelson Rice. This is the best illustration of the general and widespread character of the Townsend strength. His own district rallied to him heavily, and he seems to have carried a number of other districts.

The most surprising thing about the result is the manner in which Townsend ran. In practically every county he has a majority over Senator Burrows. In some counties, notably those of his own congressional district, it was expected he would run ahead, but it was not only those which gave him majorities. Nearly everywhere, on the returns received, the Jackson man shows well in the lead. Of course there were practically no returns in last night from Wayne county, but Wayne will have to go overwhelmingly to Burrows to overcome his rival's lead. In the upper peninsula, where it was claimed by the Burrows managers that the senior senator would poll from 75 to 90 per cent of the total vote cast, he ran far behind. Townsend carrying nearly county.

Osborn made good his campaign claims that he would sweep the upper peninsula, every county coming through with a big majority for the Soo man. Not less surprising than the result on the senatorship is the outcome in the third congressional district, where Washington Gardner, a stand-patter and Cannon man, is defeated by over 2,000 majority by J. M. C. Smith of Charlotte. In the fifth Diekema is renominated over Deacon Ellis, of Grand Rapids, and in the eighth Fordney had a comparatively easy time of it with Emory Townsend, beating him out by probably 2,000. In the seventh district Henry McMoran is probably renominated over Louis C. Cramton by a small majority.

CHASE S. OSBORN.

Chase S. Osborn's lead for the nomination for governor started with the first returns and he led from the first counties in. The Osborn vote predicted in the upper peninsula was forthcoming. The Soo man literally swamped his opponents north of the straits, beating Kelley, who ran second there, 7 and 8 to 1. Kelley's vote fell far short of his supporter's claim. The lieutenant governor has carried the Sixth congressional district and possibly the Fourth but that is all.

With Detroit and Wayne county not considered, Osborn has carried the Second and Third congressional districts, is almost a tie with Kelley in the Fourth, the Fifth is Musselman's and the Sixth and possibly Seventh Kelley's, although Osborn is right up in the Seventh and is a big winner in the Eighth and has also carried the Ninth and Tenth, with Musselman close behind in the Ninth and Kelley on his heels in the Tenth, while Musselman has the Eleventh. The Twelfth is Osborn's, of course, by an overwhelming majority. It appears likely that Osborn will have approximately 18,000 to 20,000 plurality north of the straits and from 6,000 to 8,000 in the lower peninsula.

Returns on lieutenant-governor are very incomplete, but they show L. D. Dickinson of Eaton and John Q. Ross of Muskegon running very close together, with Nelson C. Rice of Berrien considerably behind. On the legislative candidates there are practically no figures, but one item of interest comes from the upper peninsula, to the effect that J. S. Monroe of Ironwood, who has held his seat in the lower house for terms innumerable, has been defeated for renomination by A. D. Johnston of Bessemer.

More than 600 Confederate pensioners have been added to the Texas pension roll during the last three months, making a total of 12,000 veterans and their widows, who are receiving pensions. Another natural gas area became extinct in Indiana when after 22 years' use the mains bringing gas to Richmond, Ind., were cut off from further use. Householders must now use the hard fuel or pay $1 for artificial gas. Nick Thompson, a negro, accused of attacking a 17-year-old white girl at Jackson Crossing, near Amory, Miss., was taken to the scene of the crime by a mob and lynched. Fully 2,000 persons participated in the lynching. Congressman Jas. C. McLaughlin, just returned from Arcadia, Mich., after a visit there with Major Scripps and Senator William Alden Smith, believes that the rivers and harbors committee will report favorably on the proposed harbor improvement here next spring.

The Gesang Sektion of the Turnverein Germania of Los Angeles, Cal., was awarded the $10,000 gold cup given by Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany for the best singing in the Pacific saengerfest in San Francisco, which held its first festival for three days last week.

Mrs. Crippen Was Poisoned. At the opening of the trial in London of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, formerly of Detroit, Coldwater and Ann Arbor, Mich., who is charged with the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, the prosecution argued that large quantities of poison had been found in the woman's body and that there were evidences that she had been subjected to an operation.

Clara Leneve, the doctor's typist, who accompanied him in his flight to Canada after the disappearance of his wife, and who has been held on the same charge, also was brought to the bar Monday, but the Crown stated that it had been decided to confine the allegations against the girl to being an accessory after the fact.

This relieves Miss Leneve of any foreknowledge of the crime and is in line with the belief of her family and friends that she did not share Crippen's confidence up to the time that his wife dropped out of sight and was said by him to have died in California.

2,000 in Labor Day Riot. A riot, in which 2,000 men were involved and as a result of which 12 arrests were made, occurred in Portland, Ore., at the conclusion of the Labor day parade.

The teamsters' union is on strike and as the procession passed the office of a transfer company a few men tried to overturn a dray.

Police were rushed to the scene and fought the crowd for three blocks to land their prisoners in jail. Charges of inciting a riot were placed against the ringleaders. Less than half of those arrested were union members.

More than 50,000 acres of land were flooded and 200,000 persons are homeless and receiving relief.

An appraiser's report shows that the total estate of Grover Cleveland amounts to $39,065. Mr. Cleveland left $10,000 each to his four children in trust, the income to be paid to their mother until they are 21, when they will get the principal. If either of the daughters cease living with their mother before they are 21 they will receive the income on their share.

The residue of the estate went to Mrs. Cleveland. The children of Richard Hastings, a nephew, got $8,000, and Margaret Hastings, a niece, got $3,000.

The Rock Island railroad has agreed to a temporary extension of the 2 1/2 cent passenger rate in Arkansas. After a hearing before the Arkansas railroad commission a year ago the railroad agreed to such a rate pending a decision of the state courts in a Missouri Pacific injunction case.

The Industrial Loss to Employers and Employees Runs into the Millions.

Seventy thousand garment workers, who have been on strike for nine weeks, will return to work as a result of the settlement abolishing sweat shops, reached in New York.

The effects of the strike have been far-reaching. Ten thousand of the workers and those dependent on them—30,000 in all—were on the point of eviction and hundreds have already been forced onto the streets.

The industrial loss to employers and employees has run high into the millions. In loss of wages alone the total has been estimated at more than $10,000,000, while the loss to manufacturers, jobbers and retailers the country over has been computed at ten times that amount.

One essential of the settlement is the abolition of all contract work at home. Hereafter garments made in New York will be manufactured under sanitary conditions. There will be no more sweat shops.

Church Leaders at Halifax. A triune celebration of 10 days duration, which is being participated in by prominent prelates, priests and laymen throughout the Anglican world, was opened in Halifax, N. S.

The attendance includes two archbishops, hundreds of other clergy and many of the laity. In recognition of the bicentenary anniversary of the establishment of the Anglican church in Canada, the real occasion of the celebration, King George V., the temporal head of the Church of England, presented a magnificently bound copy of the Book of Common Prayer to the church in this country. The book was brought from England by Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, lord bishop of London. The first Anglican service in Canada was held at Annapolis Royal.

Globular Lightning. Yesterday the inhabitants of Lewis-ham were provided with a specimen of that curious phenomenon known as "globular lightning." It is what is commonly called the "fire ball," and as it persists for several seconds it is obviously of a totally different character from any other form of lightning. It is much less brilliant than ordinary lightning, and its brightness appears to be that of iron at the "red hot" stage.

It is not, as some accounts might lead one to infer, a solid missile, but it is always spherical and appears to fall from a thunder cloud by its own gravity, sometimes rebounding after striking the ground—London Globe.

When the Fish Exploded. Somebody discovered that fish are fond of gasoline, and this led to the idea of soaking worms in gasoline in order to make them more alluring when used for bait.

Mark the result. Two of those gasoline-tempted fish exploded in the frying-pan, and broke the kitchen window, and blew the cook's face full of mashed potato, and hurled the teakettle into the flour barrel, and painted the kitchen ceiling with stewed tomatoes.

Call it a lying world and let it go at that.

Slightly Confused. All of us become confused and all of us mix our language sometimes, but the preparation of an old negro preacher's sermon was the greatest confusion of metaphors I ever heard.

Mr. Henpeck—I know, and I want you to sign it "Husband."

Globular Lightning. Yesterday the inhabitants of Lewis-ham were provided with a specimen of that curious phenomenon known as "globular lightning." It is what is commonly called the "fire ball," and as it persists for several seconds it is obviously of a totally different character from any other form of lightning. It is much less brilliant than ordinary lightning, and its brightness appears to be that of iron at the "red hot" stage.

It is not, as some accounts might lead one to infer, a solid missile, but it is always spherical and appears to fall from a thunder cloud by its own gravity, sometimes rebounding after striking the ground—London Globe.

When the Fish Exploded. Somebody discovered that fish are fond of gasoline, and this led to the idea of soaking worms in gasoline in order to make them more alluring when used for bait.

Mark the result. Two of those gasoline-tempted fish exploded in the frying-pan, and broke the kitchen window, and blew the cook's face full of mashed potato, and hurled the teakettle into the flour barrel, and painted the kitchen ceiling with stewed tomatoes.

Call it a lying world and let it go at that.

Slightly Confused. All of us become confused and all of us mix our language sometimes, but the preparation of an old negro preacher's sermon was the greatest confusion of metaphors I ever heard.

says a traveler. When the lengthy discourse was nearing its close and he had reached his "Twenty-third and lastly, brethren," he wound up by the following elaborate figure:

"Everywha, bredren, we see de almighty—all down de untrodden paths of time, we see de footprints of de Almighty hand."—Human Life.

Then It Happened. "What made you think he would propose to me?"

"Why, when I refused him he said he didn't care what became of him; but perhaps he wasn't serious."—Houston Post.

INVESTIGATION TO BE THROUGH

HEARING MAY BE PUT OFF UNTIL AFTER INQUEST.

OBTAIN NAMES OF WITNESSES

State Railroad Commission Hard at Work Securing Evidence in Durand Wreck—May Form Definite Plans for the Hearing.

Lansing.—Railroad Commissioner James Scully arrived at his office and took up the matter of investigating the Durand wreck. The attempt of Grand Trunk officials to prevent the commission ascertaining all the facts by refusing them admission to the hearing was but heightened the determination of state officers to probe the wreck to the bottom, and already they are in possession of information which indicates the railroad officers are not to be depended upon to assist in this plan.

The commission has been informed that witnesses may be secured who will swear that there were no tall lights on the sleeper when the ill-fated car pulled out of Durand the night of the wreck. It is said that witnesses will also swear that the fuse, torpedoes and tall lights were all left in the diner which was taken off the rear end of the train at Durand.

It is expected the commission will formulate definite plans for the hearing. Trainmaster Acker may be given an opportunity to explain why he treated the commissioners in such a shabby manner when they came to Battle Creek to attend the railroad investigation.

As fast as possible the commission is obtaining the names of all witnesses of the wreck, as well as of all trainmen who were on board either train. Investigations have been started which promise to lead to sensations before the inquiry is completed, and the commission members announce that it will receive a large share of their attention until every phase of the wreck has been investigated and the people of the state are satisfied that everything possible has been done to bring home the responsibility for the loss of lives.

Will Open This Month.

The twenty-fifth term of the Michigan College of Mines in Houghton will open on September 20. The year is divided into four terms as follows: Fall term, September 30 to December 22; winter term, January 10 to March 25; spring term, March 27 to June 10; summer term, June 13 to September 2. There is seen in attendance at the college every year an increase in the number of students enrolled. Last year the total enrollment was 263.

The college was established here by an act of the Michigan state legislature passed in 1885.

It is governed by a board of control, appointed by the governor, with the consent of the senate. This board now consists of M. M. Duncan of Ishpeming, L. L. Hubbard and W. D. Calverley of Houghton, James MacNaughton of Calumet, J. M. Longyear of Marquette and William Kelly of Vulcan. William Kelly is president of the board.

Prof. Frederick Walter McNair, who received a degree of bachelor of science at the University of Wisconsin and a degree of doctor of science from Lafayette college, for years has been president of the college and is still at its head. There are 38 members of the staff of instruction.

The college is the only state educational institution in this section of the state. It is in the heart of the greatest copper mining camp and offers to students unequalled practical demonstrations of the workings of mines, mining, milling and smelting.

A most thorough course in mining engineering is given and this is undoubtedly accountable for the fact that of the 522 graduates only 12 have left the field of mining engineering.

Game Protectors Meet.

Some of the leading game protectionists of the state and of the country will speak at a meeting of the Michigan Association for the Propagation of Fish and Game to be held at Owosso September 14. W. B. Mershon of Saginaw is president of the organization; Thornton Dixon of Monroe is vice-president; George M. Brown of Detroit, treasurer; F. K. George, Detroit, secretary.

In the forenoon there will be an informal session, at which T. Gilbert Pearson of Greensboro, N. C., secretary of the National Audubon societies, will deliver an address. A business session will be held in the afternoon and in the evening the visiting members will be entertained by the Owosso Sportmen's club.

M. N. G. Quartermaster Goes to Minn.

Capt. Robert E. Bell of Cheboygan, quartermaster of the Third regiment, has resigned because of removal to Minneapolis. He has already been appointed adjutant of the Third Minnesota regiment. Col. G. B. McCaughn, commanding the Third regiment, announced that he had appointed Lieut. Walter Stevens, for several years quartermaster of the Third battalion, to fill the vacancy caused by Captain Bell's resignation.

Blame Wreck to Brakeman.

From the evidence given at the inquest over the Grand Trunk wreck victims and from the deposition of Fireman Nelson the general belief of the state's officials and the citizens of Durand today is that the blame for the wreck will be placed by the inquest on Brakeman Graham, because of the fact that he did not go back the required 42.00 feet to flag the train which crashed into the Nebraska taking eight lives.

None of the state officials will make this statement, but the tenor of all the evidence was to that end, and the state authorities are inclined to look on the attempt of the Grand Trunk to place the blame on Engineer Spencer as an absurdity. The testimony showed that Brakeman Graham exploded the torpedo too late for Spencer to hear it in time to avert a collision.

"If Spencer is incompetent, if his moral habits were such as to render him incapable of performing his duties, the Grand Trunk should have fired him long ago," said one man who was at the inquest. "That doesn't let the railroad out on the score of employing incompetent men by a long way."

Spencer testified that he threw on the brakes as soon as he could when he heard the torpedo, but it was too late. Both he and his fireman were busy in the cab and did not see the lantern the brakeman carried. The controversy over the lights on the rear of the wrecked train will probably never be settled, but Engineer Spencer has accounted for the lantern found near the wreck by several witnesses by his statement that he carried it there searching for the torpedo, after the wreck, and left it there.

Don't Waste Any Time on Tickets.

Nothing appears to have been overlooked by the state fair management in preparing for the comfort of the crowds at the coming exhibition. Many thoughtful arrangements will be made with the sole purpose of affording the maximum of comfort for visitors and it is believed that this year's fair, with its added features and consequently larger crowds, will be especially well managed.

No tickets for the fair will be on sale this year and there won't be any tickets used, excepting those for use by exhibitors. The Bright coin-counting turnstiles, which have been used with great success at other large exhibitions, have been installed at the gates and this will do away with the crowding and forming in line at the gates. Nothing but a 50 cent piece is needed for admittance, and this way the rush of people can be cared for to much better advantage than heretofore.

There will be the finest appearing grounds in the country to greet the eyes of fair visitors this year. Considerable time and expense has been put on the grounds, the trees and shrubbery will be found in perfect condition and the roadways will all be well kept and sprinkled during the fair. No wagons or drays will be allowed on the grounds after 7 a. m. each day under penalty of a fine.

Pensions and Patents.

The following Michigan pensions were granted:

John Black, $15; Emerson Cortright, $15; Mary E. Diamond, $12; Ira L. Kingsley, $12; Abbey Johnson, $12; Michael G. Miller, $17; Mary L. Nelson, $12; Henry Rice, $24; Annie E. Schickel, $12; Eliza Spill, $12.

Patents have been granted as follows:

Samuel I. Andress, Mackinac Island, steering indicator; Andrew Bennett, Detroit, valve construction; Orr Darling, Jonesville, fence post; John F. and H. E. Dodge, Detroit, water jacket; Rush G. Glikerson, Detroit, toy; F. C. Hayes, Battle Creek, cigar banding and labeling machine; Andrew J. Ketselsen, Saginaw, refining wooden pavement; Orville M. Morse, Jackson, dust collector; Francis C. Osborn, Detroit, cash register; Alexis A. Pribil, Detroit, sheet manipulating mechanism; Edwin Roblin, Lansing, vehicle running gear; F. P. Wood, Detroit, boat machine.

Horse Show at Fair Grounds.

Every indication around state fair headquarters is that the coming fair will surpass any other exhibition in point of entries in the various departments.

Secretary J. E. Hannon is receiving on the average of 300 entries a day in the live stock department alone. This has been the case for the past several days, and, with the increased facilities afforded this year by the building of the seven new barns, the live stock to be seen will be the best shown anywhere in the west at any of the state fairs, says Mr. Hannon.

These barns are the best that modern builders could design. They provide comfortable and safe quarters for the valuable stock, and, further than that, there are bath rooms, toilet rooms, sleeping quarters and every convenience for the barnmen and stable boys. This means that there won't be a moment during the entire week of the fair when the valuable stock will be left unguarded.

"Fighting Fifth" Reunion.

The forty-first annual reunion of the "Fighting Fifth" Michigan regiment was held at Lapeer and was attended by 30 of the 150 members of the regiment who are still living.

The address of welcome which opened the reunion was given by ex-Senator W. C. Smith of Lapeer. Other speakers of the day were John Loughman of Detroit, A. K. Flet of Detroit, George W. Smith of Pontiac, Rev. Father P. W. Bennigan of Lapeer, chaplain of the Michigan National Guard, and Francis Elory of Detroit.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Bay City.—Two attempts were made to burn the Mershon-Bacon planing mill. A small blaze was discovered and put out by the night watchman. Soon afterward another fire, in a different location, was found, and gave the fire department a half-hour fight. The loss is estimated at $2,000.

Port Huron.—John Slavin, thirty-seven years old, was drowned in the St. Clair river. He was swimming at the mouth of Black river and was without a bathing suit, though this is forbidden. He swam half way across the river, turned around and started back, then disappeared. The body was recovered 20 minutes later.

Saginaw.—Martin Higgins, a farm hand, was working on a threshing machine near Freeland when he fell into the cogs. One leg was torn off near the knee. He is in a hospital here in a serious condition.

Ypsilanti.—A. A. Van Cleave, aged about seventy-four, member of a prominent family in this city, died at his home. His death was due to a paralytic stroke. He is survived by a widow and two daughters. The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

South Haven.—Judge George C. Teal, aged seventy years, for fourteen years judge of Eau Claire county, Wisconsin, died at his country home near here, following a stroke of paralysis.

Saginaw.—Newell W. Banks of Detroit, national checker champion, was here for the first state tournament held under the auspices of the Michigan Checker association.

Lansing.—Adolph Byra, an employe of a local hardware firm, received serious internal injuries and several scalp wounds when he fell from the top rung of a ladder while working on a farmer's barn.

Caro.—Marcus Carr, a laborer, forty years old, took carbolic acid and died 20 minutes later. Inability to get work and despondency over poor health are given as the causes.

Benton Harbor.—Hardy Zordel, a well-known farmer and fruit raiser, and his team of horses were killed when struck by a special train on the Big Four crossing, south of the city.

Port Huron.—Delegates to the annual convention of the Michigan Association of Fire Insurance Agents were entertained with a boat ride and a banquet.

Owosso.—Because, it is alleged, his wife refused to get up in the morning and prepare his breakfast, Roy Walker, twenty-four years old, living west of town, has commenced suit for divorce. His wife is three years his junior.

Ludington.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed W. F. Miksell's cannery factory here. The loss was $8,000 fully covered by insurance. The plant has just been rebuilt and was to begin operations in a few days.

Port Huron.—In an old-fashioned, but spacious homestead on the shore of St. Clair river, a short distance south of this city, lives Mrs. Sarah Manuel, eighty-eight years old. Mrs. Manuel was asked by a outscoutaboutmanuel was asked if she would tell of the days when she knew Florence Nightingale. "Near the home of my parents in Devonshire, England, resided a poor widow and two children," said "Auntie" Manuel. "This little family found it hard to make ends meet. The plight of the family was discovered by a wealthy man, who lived near our home, and one thing that he did to help was to start a school for the children to attend. This man was Squire Nightingale. He placed the widow in charge of the school."

Mount Clemens.—Taken suddenly ill with heart trouble while treating one of her patrons at the Park hotel, Mrs. Charles Kirstine, professional masseuse of several years' residence here, died soon after being taken to her home, 165 South Gratiot avenue, in a carriage. For a time Mrs. Kirstine was located in the hotel, but of late has conducted a massage parlor at her home, treating patients at the hotel by request. It was while on one of the calls that she was stricken. She was fifty-four years old and is survived by a son and a daughter.

Port Huron.—Ex-Judge J. G. Tucker of Mount Clemens has decided to run for congress from the Seventh district of Michigan after considerable pressure was brought to bear upon him by his Democratic friends. Judge Tucker was a Democratic delegate from this district to the national convention in St. Louis two years ago.

St. Joseph.—Following a quarrel with her lover, who came here from Chicago to marry her, Miss Hulda Banker attempted to throw herself into Lake Michigan, but was prevented from doing so by the captain of the life saving crew.

Sturgis.—Walter Holden of Charlotte, was seriously injured when he collided, while riding a bicycle, with an automobile driven by Adelbert Hadley of Mendon.

Traverse City.—After two of their number had robbed a farmhouse, stolen $15 from a store, been fined and ordered to leave the village, an armed band of gypsies returned to Buckley and were put on the outskirts of the place by residents armed with shot-guns. The band was driven from the vicinity. No shots were fired.

Jackson.—Word received here from Youngstown, O., says that Allen Phillips, a former resident of this city, is in jail, charged with the shooting of George Hill, an ex-policeman, in a quarrel over the former's wife. Hill may not recover.

SNAKE MAKES NEST IN YOUNG WOMAN'S "RAT"

GIRL IS BITTEN MANY TIMES
WITHOUT KNOWING THE CAUSE

Richmond, Va.—Bitten several times by a small moccasin snake which nested in her "rat" when she laid that creation beside her as she rested in a hammock in her front yard in the evening, Miss Mary Wood of the West end is reported to be in a serious condition, though she will recover from the venomous bites.

Disregarding all the rules of hospitality, the young snake, having ensconced itself comfortably in the warm recesses of the "rat," was not content with that much luxury of warmth and freedom from disturbance. It must needs follow its treacherous bent and "bite the hand that fed it," though in this case the old saying is not exactly suited to the situation, as it was the girl's chaste and marble brow into which his snakeship set its fangs.

The girl is a department store clerk, and on the day of the strange occurrence she went to work as usual behind the counter. Her head began to itch and pain her in a short time, and, taking another girl into her confidence, Miss Wood went to the dressing room, where the hair was taken down.

Several small red and swollen spots were discovered on her scalp, but little thought was given to them. Enduring the pain all day, the girl went home at closing-up time and told her mother of her discomfort.

The hair was again taken down and the scalp examined, and drops of blood with more incisions were discovered. The mother then asked for the "rat" upon which the young woman was accustomed to do up her tresses, and, taking it, began squeezing it in an absent-minded way. What was her horror to feel something wriggle inside the fuzzy thing. Hastily tearing it to pieces, the mother was surprised when a six-inch moccasin dropped to the floor and wriggled away, after striking at her without effect several times.

The girl fainted at sight of the reptile, and was carried to bed, where she is now under the care of a physician. She stated that the "rat" had not been examined after lying in the hammock in the evening, and it is the supposition that the reptile got into it then.

All day long, while the girl was waiting on the bargain seeker, the little reptile kept itself hidden in the half-enfolded "rat." And all day long as its fancy dictated or its hunger commanded, it sank its tiny fangs into the girl's head, causing her intense discomfort.

The snake was so young that its venomous quality had scarcely developed, is the theory for the girl not dying from the bites.

CALFLESS COW ADOPTS PIGS

Deceived Mother and Little Orphans Said to Be Very Devoted to Each Other.

Owensville, Ind.—Reese Gentry, a prominent farmer living near Mount Vernon, has a cow on his farm that adopted a litter of pigs after her twin calves were sold to a butcher. It happened that the piggies became motherless about the time the cow became calfless.

The grief-stricken cow wandered about the farm hunting something to cuddle when her eyes spied the squealing orphan pigs, and it was love at sight. The old cow does the mother act until it comes to grunting, and it must be admitted that she is shy on that art.

The pigs do the calf stunt by standing on their hind legs and bracing themselves against their foster mother while taking their liquid nourishment.

Paralyzed by a Tiny Pin.
Tamaqua, Pa.—William Bechtel, a prominent hotelkeeper of Nesquehoning, had his entire left side paralyzed in a peculiar manner. Lying on a couch he was playing with his little daughter, when the point of a pin worn by the child penetrated his breast near the heart, striking one of the nerves leading to the brain.

INDEPENDENCE ON THE FARM

SPLENDID RESULTS FOLLOW
FARMING IN THE CANADIAN WEST.

Americans in Canada Not Asked to Forget That They Were Born Americans.

Farm produce today is remunerative, and this helps to make farm life agreeable. Those who are studying the economics of the day tell us that the strength of the nation lies in the cultivation of the soil. Farming is no longer a hand-to-mouth existence. It means independence, often affluence, but certainly independence.

Calling at a farmhouse, near one of the numerous thriving towns of Alberta, in Western Canada, the writer was given a definition of "Independence" that was accepted as quite original. The broad acres of the farmer's land had a crop—and a splendid one, too, by the way—ripening for the reapers' work. The evenness of the crop, covering field after field, attracted attention, as did also the neatness of the surroundings, the well-built substantial story-and-a-half log house, and the well-rounded sides of the cattle. His broken English—he was a French Canadian—was easily understandable and pleasant to listen to. He had come there from Montreal a year ago, had paid $20 an acre for the 320-acre farm, with the little improvement it had. He had never farmed before, yet his crop was excellent, giving evidence as to the quality of the soil, and the good judgment that had been used in its preparation. And brains count in farming as well as "brawn." Asked how he liked it there, he straightened his broad shoulders, and with hand outstretched towards the waving fields of grain, this young French Canadian, model of symmetrical build, replied:

"Be gosh, yes, we like him—the farmin'—well, don't we, Joannette?" as he smilingly turned to the young wife standing near. She had accompanied him from Montreal to his far-west home, to assist him by her wifely help and companionship, in making a new home in this new land. "Yes, we come here when you ago, and we never farm before. Near Montreal, me father, he kep de gris' mill, an' de cardin' mill, an' he gosh! he run de cheese factor' too. He work, an' me work, an' us work tarn har, be gosh! 'T's work for de farmer; well den, sometin' go not always wat you call de' right, an' de farmer he say de mean 'ing, be gosh! and tell us go to—well, anyway he tarm mad. Now," and then he waved his hand again towards the fields, "I 'ave no bodder, no cardin' mill, no gris' mill, no cheese factor'. I an now de farmer man an' when mo want to, me can say to de oder fellow: you go—! Well, we like him—the farmin'." And that was a good definition of independence.

Throughout a trip of several hundred miles in the agricultural district of Western Canada, the writer found the farmers in excellent spirits, an optimistic feeling being prevalent everywhere. It will be interesting to the thousands on the American side of the line to know that their relatives and friends are doing well there, that they have made their home in a country that stands up so splendidly under what has been trying conditions in most of the northwestern part of the farming districts of the continent. With the exception of some portions of Southern Alberta, and also a portion of Manitoba and Southern Saskatchewan the grain crops could be described as fair, good and excellent. The same drought that affected North and South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Wisconsin and other of the northern central states extended over into a portion of Canada just mentioned. But in these portions the crops for the past four or five years were splendid and the yields good.

RANG THE BELL, ALL RIGHT

Estimates of Yield of Wheat in Western Canada for 1910 More Than One Hundred Million Bushels.

The great province of Saskatchewan has suffered less from drought in proportion to her area under cultivation than either of the other provinces. On the other hand, instead of the drought being confined very largely to the south of the main line of the C. P. R. it is to be found in patches right through the center of northern Saskatchewan also. In spite of this, however, Saskatchewan has a splendid crop. A careful checking of the averages of yield, with the acreages in the different districts, gives an average yield of 15½ bushels to the acre.

In Southern Alberta one-fifth of the winter wheat will not be cut, or has been re-sown to feed. There are individual crops which will run as high as 45 bushels on acres of 500 and 1,000 acres, but there are others which will drop as low as 15. A safe average for winter wheat will be 19 bushels. The sample is exceptionally fine, excepting in a few cases where it has been wrickled by extreme heat.

The northern section of Alberta has been naturally anxious to impress the world with the fact that it has not suffered from drought, and this is quite true. Wheat crops run from 20 to 30 bushels to an acre, but in a report such as this it is really only possible to deal with the province as a whole and while the estimate may seem very low to the people of Alberta, it is fair to the province throughout.

When the very light rainfall and other eccentricities of the past season are taken into account, it seems nothing short of a miracle that the Canadian West should have produced 103 million bushels of wheat, which is less than 18 million bushels short of the crop of 1909. It is for the West generally a paying crop and perhaps the best advertisement the country has ever had, as it shows that no matter how dry the year, with thorough tillage, good seed and proper methods of conserving the moisture, a crop can always be produced.

As some evidence of the feeling of the farmers, are submitted letters written by farmers but a few days ago, and they offer the best proof that can be given.

Maldstone, Sask., Aug. 4, '10.

I came to Maldstone from Menominee, Wis., four years ago, with my parents and two brothers. We all located homesteads at that time and now have our patents. The soil is a rich black loam as good as I have ever seen. We have had good crops each year and in 1909 they were exceedingly good. Wheat yielding from 22 to 40 bushels per acre and oats from 40 to 80. We are well pleased with the country and do not care to return to our native state. I certainly believe that Saskatchewan is just the place for a hustler to get a start and make himself a home. Wages here for farm labor range from $35 to $45 per month.

Lee Dow.

Tosfield, Alberta, July 10, 1910.

I am a native of Texas, the largest and one of the very best states of the Union. I have been here three years and have not one desire to return to the States to live. There is no place I know of that offers such splendid inducements for capital, brain and brawn. I would like to say to all who are not satisfied where you are, make a trip to Western Canada; if you do not like it you will feel well repaid for your trip. Take this from one who's on the ground. We enjoy splendid government, laws, school, railway facilities, health, and last, but not least, an ideal climate, and this from a Texan.

O. L. Pugh.

James Norman of Porter, Wisconsin, after visiting Dauphin, Manitoba, says: "I have been in Wisconsin 25 years, coming out from Norway. Never have I seen better land and the crops in East Dauphin are better than I have ever seen, especially the oats. There is more straw and it has heavier heads than ours in Wisconsin."

"This is just the kind of land we are looking for. We are all used to mixed farming and the land we have seen is finely adapted to that sort of work. Cattle, hogs, horses and grain will be my products, and for the live stock, prospects could not be better. I have never seen such cattle as are raised here on the wild prairie grasses and the vetch that stands three or four feet high in the groves and on the open prairie."

Sir Wilfred Laurier Talks to Americans.

Sir Wilfred Laurier, Premier of Canada, is now making a tour of Western Canada and in the course of his tour he has visited many of the districts in which Americans have settled. He expresses himself as highly pleased with them. At Craig, Saskatchewan, the American settlers joined with the others in an address of welcome. In replying Sir Wilfred said in part:

"I understand that many of you have come from the great Republic to the south of us—a land which is akin to us by blood and tradition. I hope that in coming from a free country you realize that you come also to another free country, and that although you came from a republic you have come to what is a crowned democracy. The King, our sovereign, has perhaps not so many powers as the President of the United States, but whether we are on the one side of the line or the other, we are all brothers by blood, by kinship, by ties of relationship. In coming here as you have come and becoming naturalized citizens of this country no one desires you to forget the land of your ancestors. It would be a poor man who would not always have in his heart a fond affection for the land which he came from. The two greatest countries today are certainly the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the Republic of the United States. Let them be united together and the peace of the world will be forever assured."

"I hope that in coming here as you have, you have found liberty, justice and equality of rights. In this country, as in your own, you know nothing of separation of creed and race, for you are all Canadians here. And if I may express a wish it is that you would become as good Canadians as you have been good Americans and that you may yet remain good Americans. We do not want you to forget what you have been; but we want you to look more to the future than to the past. Let me, before we part, tender you the sincere expression of my warmest gratitude for your reception."

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1910.

Business by the Council.

The village council met in regular session Tuesday evening. After passing upon a number of bills the other business was taken up. As advertised, property holders along the line of a proposed sewer on Oak street, from a point fifty feet south of the P. M. railroad tracks, and running thence north to the river were given a hearing as to any objections. There were none and the sewer was ordered constructed, the cost be approximated at $400. Twelve inch tile is to be used, the railroad company placing an iron main under their tracks at their own expense. The property owners pay about $250 of the expense, the village the balance. The sewer will drain the "pond" in the vicinity of the depot, which has been the cause of much trouble for many years.

The P. M. railroad company was instructed to build new walks and driveways across their tracks at the Main street, Ann Arbor street and Oak street crossings within 15 days.

It was also resolved to gravel Oak street, north from Main, as far as funds and gravel will permit. The gravel-pit is about exhausted and the council will use only what is left.

A. D. Benham of Milford made a proposition to the council to place street signs at every street corner in the village and numbers for every lot for the sum of $50. The village accepted the proposition with alacrity and Mr. Benham will go to work at once. The price seems to be extremely cheap, but the work will be under the supervision of a committee who will see it's done right. Mr. Benham expects to add to his receipts by selling to those that want them, house numbers of a better grade material than that ordinarily, though the latter is said to be of good quality.

The matter of building a sidewalk to the cemetery was taken up and it is proposed to build this year only to the corporation line and grade from that point to the river bridge. Mr. Beals will furnish the dirt free and the village will build the grade. It is understood that grade work will also be done by property owners from the bridge to the cemetery entrance. We believe the council is acting wisely in the matter of building this walk, and that it meets with the approval of a large majority of the taxpayers. Definite action will be taken at a meeting of the council next Monday evening.

Primary Election Results.

There were 206 votes polled at the primaries last Tuesday out of a total of 340 enrolled, a fairly good showing. There were 189 Republicans, 11 Democrats, 5 Prohibitionists and 1 Socialist. About a dozen appeared to vote who had not enrolled and the board refused to give them tickets. They could not do otherwise than the law provided.

The greatest interest of course was in the gubernatorial and senatorial candidates, active work being done in behalf of at least one of the candidates for the former office. The result showed about what had been anticipated on the head of the ticket, some of the voters neglecting to mark any of the names on the county ticket.

For U. S. Senator on the Republican ticket Burrows received 60, Townsend 108.

For Governor Kelley received 69, Osborn 93, Musselman 19.

Congressman—Smith 90, Wedemeyer 88.

State Senator—Snell 127, O'Neil 39.

Probate Judge—Hulbert 115, Carlisle 42.

Two New Congressmen.

Whether Michigan shall gain in her representation in congress because of her 16 per cent increase in population which may be fixed. At present, with a population of 2,420,932, the state has twelve members, which gives a large fraction of almost a hundred thousand over the number necessary to carry that number of congressmen. If the basis should remain as at present the fraction and the gain in population combined would entitle it to a membership of 14.

With an increase of the base to 2,500,000, which is the most probable figure, the state would fall 50,000 short of the full number necessary to bring the representation up to 13; but with a major fraction amounting to more than 170,000 there could be little doubt that an increase of one would be allowed.

To Increase Capital Stock.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Plymouth Improvement Association was held last Friday evening to consider a proposition made by Henry Upholt of the Yates-Upholt Brass Co., recently burned out. Mr. Upholt wants to increase the capital stock of the company and asks the people of Plymouth to subscribe for from $10,000 to $15,000 worth of stock. He thinks the company has arrived on a good business basis and the possibilities for a much larger output are hindered only by limited capital.

The directors voted to assist Mr. Upholt in the matter of securing stock and a committee of three, consisting of Louis Hilmer, Asa Joy and David Allen was appointed for this purpose to act with the chairman of the board, P. W. Voorhies.

Since the above was put in type we are informed that Mr. Upholt has received flattering inducements to locate in Saginaw and Detroit, which he must decide at once. The soliciting committee will therefore get at work this morning and undertake to secure the amount of stock needed by Saturday night. If the people of Plymouth want to retain this factory here they must act at once. No one need wait to be called upon personally, but come forward voluntarily. It is promised with additional capital, 25 men will be placed at work as soon as building room can be provided.

Voice of the People Heard

Editor Mail:—

The policy pursued by your estimable paper during this campaign merits the thanks and approbation of every citizen who loves good government. The result of the primaries in our state demonstrates the wisdom of its authors and the fact that the people can be trusted. The issues were clearly drawn. Kelley and Osborn were not under consideration. They merely represented the principle of Warnerism and a disgraceful administration upon one side and a determination to defeat the machine and clean out the moss and barnacles.

By the nomination of Mr. Townsend the people have spoken in a very certain and convincing manner relative to senatorial dilatory tactics upon the two great vital questions—the tariff and trusts. They wish to see Michigan represented by a man of action, one who looks forward to progression and the enactment of those wise and beneficial laws which are not class legislation but for the mutual benefit of both capital and labor, for they are inseparable, and any undue favors shown either must injure the other. No surprise is given to thinking, reading, righteous men by this decisive vote, because, while it is true that the people are more alive to the true situation, there would have been similar results on the senatorial question six years ago.

The assertion of our tax commissioner that money carried Plymouth for Osborn would be quite amusing, were it not the wail of a forlorn hope.

Mr. Townsend is entitled to more than average commendation, when we reflect that the Customs-Internal Revenue-P. O. Dept.-U. S. Courts and State employes were all against him, each poor trembling minor ready to jump when his superior pulled the string.

Nearly all editorial writers under control of capitalists, like the owners of the Detroit Journal, were frantically grinding out copy in which they did not believe, until at last poor old May, the talented Journal cartoonist in a despairing, dying effort drew the "yellow dog" picture which gained Townsend hundreds of votes.

Let us forget the acrid events of the primaries, accept with good grace the will of the majority and unite in placing these nominees in various positions of trust with the hope that the great Republican party, by its wise and conservative action, may demonstrate to the people that justice and equality are not meaningless terms.

P. B. WHITEBECK.

Frank Kingsbury was arrested by Marshal VanDeCar last Friday night and lodged in the cooler until next morning, when he was arraigned before Justice Valentine charged with being drunk. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5.00 or sixty days. He hadn't the money, but was given until Monday to make the raise, which he did. Kingsbury has an unfortunate habit of "getting full" at frequent intervals when he makes a nuisance of himself and it is hoped the lesson given him will prove of benefit.

Farmers' Attention!

Osborn and Townsend Choice

The returns from the primary election held in the State Tuesday show that Osborn was nominated by a plurality of some 33,000, Kelley and Musselman running about even, which is very much of a surprise. Townsend defeats Burrows for U. S. Senator by about 40,000, another surprise to most people. Wedemeyer defeats Henry C. Smith in the district by about 2000, while State Senator Snell is again nominated by some 50 or more. The most astonishing thing, however, is the defeat of Mayor Breitmeyer of Detroit, Proctor Owen being nominated by a small majority. Owen's place on the ticket was considered much in the light of a joke, but it seems to have turned out badly, as there does not seem to be the remotest possibility of his election to the office. All present incumbents for incumbents for county offices were re-nominated.

An Oakland lady wants to know what is a hobble skirt: A hobble skirt is one made so narrow at the hem that it looks as if the wearer had picked up her husband's pajamas by mistake and dressed in only one leg of the garment. The skirt is so narrow that the wearer has to have her gait born again to adjust herself to it and if she tries to hurry, she falls down and the man who sees her fall is spared a flying drapery. We hear a great deal of the Coming Woman but if she is wearing a hobble skirt she will be a hundred years later in getting here.—Ex.

SERIAL STORY

The Courage of Captain Plum

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

Illustrations by Magnus C. Kettner

(Copyright 1928 by Doubleday, Inc.)

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Nathaniel Plum of the sloop Typoon, lands secretly on Beaver Island, Lake Michigan, stronghold of the Mormons. Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and counselor of the Mormons, who has been spying on him, suddenly confronts him and tells him he is expected. Plum insists he has not the right man. Price ignores his protestations and bargains for the ammunition on board the sloop. He binds Plum by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. He agrees to show Plum the Mormon town, St. James. Plum sees the frightened face of a young woman in the darkness near Price's cabin. She disappears, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to Beaver Island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously by men whom he suspected of being Mormons. Burke, his mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to burn it within a certain time. Price takes Plum secretly in the darkness to the king's house, and through a window he sees Strang and his seven wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, who Price says is the seventh wife. Price's actions lead Plum to believe that he is jealous of Strang. Plum calls at the king's office.

Was there a tremble of fear in her voice? Even as he looked Nathaniel saw the flush deepen in her cheeks and her eyes light with nervous eagerness.

"I am sent by Obadiah Price," he hazarded.

A flash of relief shot into the woman's face.

"The king is at his office," she repeated. "His office is near the temple."

Nathaniel retired with another bow.

"By thunder, Strang, old boy, you've certainly got an eye for beauty!" he laughed as he hurried through the grove.

"And Obadiah Price must be somebody, after all!"

The Mormon temple was the largest structure in St. James, a huge square building of hewn logs, and Nathaniel did not need to make inquiry to find it. On one side was a two-story building with an outside stairway leading to the upper floor, and a painted sign announced that on this second floor was situated the office of James Jesse Strang, priest, king and prophet of the Mormons. It was still very early and the general merchandise store below was not open. Congratulating himself on this fact, and with the fingers of his right hand reaching instinctively for his pistol butt, Captain Plum mounted the stair. When half way up he heard voices. As he reached the landing at the top he caught the quick glimpse of a skirt. Another step and he was in the open door. He was not soon enough to see the person who had just disappeared through an opposite door, but he knew that it was a woman. Directly in front of him as if she had been expecting his arrival was a young girl, and no sooner had he put a foot over the threshold than she hurried toward him, the most acute anxiety and fear written in her face.

"You are Captain Plum?" she asked breathlessly.

Nathaniel stopped in astonishment.

"Yes, I'm—"

"Then you must hurry—hurry!" cried the girl excitedly. "You have not a moment to lose! Go back to your ship before it is too late! She says they will kill you!"

"Who says so?" thundered Captain Plum. He sprang to the girl's side and caught her by the arm. "Who says that I will be killed? Tell me—who gave you this warning for me?"

"I—I—tell you so!" stammered the young girl. "I—I—heard the king—they will kill you!" Her lips trembled. Nathaniel saw that her eyes were already red from crying. "You will go?" she pleaded.

Nathaniel had taken her hand and now he held it tightly in his own. His head was thrown back, his eyes were upon the door across the room. When he looked again into the girl's face there was flashing joyous defiance in his eyes, and in his voice there was confession of the truth that had suddenly come to overwhelm whatever law of self-preservation he might have held unto himself.

"No, my dear, I am not going back to my ship," he spoke softly. "Not unless she who is in that room comes out and bids me go herself!"

CHAPTER IV.

The Whipping.

Scarce had the words fallen from his lips when there sounded a slow, heavy step on the stair outside. The young girl snatched her hand free and caught Nathaniel by the wrist.

"It is the king!" she whispered excitedly. "It is the king! Quick—you still have time! You must go—you must go!"

She strove to pull him across the room.

"There—through that door!" she urged.

The slowly ascending steps were half way up the stairs. Nathaniel hesitated. He knew that a moment before there had passed through that door one who carried with her the odor of lilac and his heart leaped to its own conclusion who that person was. He had heard the rustle of the girl's skirt. He had seen the last inch of the door close as Strang's wife pulled it after her. And now he was implored to follow! He sprang forward as the heavy steps neared the landing. His hand was upon the latch—when he paused. Then he turned and bent his head close down to the girl.

"No, I won't do it, my dear," he whispered. "Just now it might make trouble for—her."

He lifted his eyes and saw a man looking at him from the doorway. He needed no further proof to assure him that this was Strang, the king of the Mormons, for the Beaver island prophet was painted well in that region which knew the grip and terror of his power. He was a massive man, with the slow slumbering strength of a bear. He was not much under fifty; but his thick beard, reddish and crinkling, his shaggy hair, and the full-fledged ruddiness of his face, with its foundation of heavy jaw, gave him a more youthful appearance. There was in his eyes, set deep and so light that they shone like pale blue glass, the staring assurance that is frequently born of power. In his hand he carried a huge metal-knobbed stick.

In an instant Nathaniel had recovered himself. He advanced a step, bowing coolly.

"I am Captain Plum, of the sloop Typoon," he said. "I called at your home a short time ago and was directed to your office. As a stranger on the island I did not know that you had an office or I would have come here first."

"Ah!"

The king drew his right foot back half a pace and bowed so low that Nathaniel saw only the crown of his hat. When he raised his head the aggressive stare had gone out of his eyes and a welcoming smile lighted up his face as he advanced with extended hand.

"I am glad to see you, Captain Plum."

His voice was deep and rich, filled with that wonderful vibratory power which seems to strike and attune the hidden chords of one's soul. The man's appearance had not prepossessed Nathaniel, but at the sound of his voice he recognized that which had made him the prophet of men. As the warm hand of the king clasped his own Captain Plum knew that he was in the presence of a master of human destinies, a man whose ponderous red-visaged body was simply the crude instrument through which spoke the marvelous spirit that had enslaved thousands to him, that had enthralled a state legislature and that had hypnotized a federal jury into giving him back his freedom when evidence smothered him in crime. He felt himself sinking in the presence of this man, and struggled fiercely to regain himself. He withdrew his hand and straightened himself like a soldier.

"I have come to you with a grievance, Mr. Strang," he began. "A grievance which I feel sure you will do your best to right. Perhaps you are aware that some little time ago—about two weeks back—your people boarded my ship in force and robbed me of several thousand dollars' worth of merchandise."

Strang had drawn a step back.

"Aware of it?" he exclaimed in a voice that shook the room. "Aware of it!" The red of his face turned purple and he clenched his free hand in sudden passion. "Aware of it!" He repeated the words, this time so gently that Nathaniel could scarcely hear them, and tapped his heavy stick upon the floor.

"No, Captain Plum, I was not aware of it. If I had been—" He shrugged his thick shoulders. The movement, and a sudden gleam of his teeth through his beard, were expressive enough for Nathaniel to understand.

Then the king smiled.

"Are you sure—are you quite sure, Captain Plum, that it was my people who attacked your ship? If so, of course you must have some proof?"

"We were very near to Beaver Island and many miles from the mainland," said Nathaniel. "It could only have been your people."

"Ah!"

Strang led the way to a table at the farther end of the room and motioned Nathaniel to a seat opposite him.

"No, Captain Plum, I Was Not Aware of It."

"We are a much persecuted people, Captain Plum, very much persecuted indeed." His wonderful voice trembled with a subdued pathos. "We have answered for many sins that have never been ours, Captain Plum, and among them are robbery, piracy and even murder. The people along the coasts are deadly enemies to us—who would be their friends; they commit crimes in our name and we do not retaliate. It was not any people who waylaid your vessel. They were fishermen, probably, who came from the Michigan shore and awaited their opportunity of Beaver Island. But I shall investigate this; believe me, I shall investigate this fully, Captain Plum!"

Nathaniel felt something like a great choking fist shoot up into his throat. It was not a sensation of fear but of humiliation—the humiliation of defeat, the knowledge of his own weakness in the hands of this man who had so quickly and so surly blocked his claim. His quick brain saw the futility of argument. He possessed no absolute proof and he had thought that he needed none. Strang saw the flash of doubt in his face, the hesitancy in his answer; he divined the working of the other's brain and in his soft voice, purring with friendship, he followed up his triumph.

"I sympathize with you," he spoke gently, "and my sympathy and word shall help you. We do not welcome strangers among us, for strangers have usually proved themselves our enemies and have done us wrong. But to you I give the freedom of our kingdom. Search where you will, at what hours you will, and when you have found a single proof that your stolen property is among my people—when you have seen a face that you recognize as one of the robbers, return to me and I shall make restitution and punish the evildoers."

So intently he spoke, so filled with reason and truth were his words, that Nathaniel thrust out his hand in token of acceptance of the king's terms. And as Strang gripped that hand Captain Plum saw the young girl's face over the prophet's shoulder—a face, white as death in its terror, that told him all he had heard was a lie.

"And when you have done with my people," continued the king, "you will go among that other race, along the mainland, where men have grown old, the restraints of society to give loose reign to lust and avarice; where the Indian is brutified that his wife may be intoxicated by compulsion and prostituted by violence before his eyes; where the forest cabins and the streets of towns are filled with half-breeds; where there stalk wretches with withered and tearless eyes, who are in no wise troubled by recollection of robbery, rape and murder. And there you will find whom you are looking for!"

Strang had risen to his feet. His eyes blazed with the fire of smothered hatred and passion and his great voice rolled through his beard tremulous with excitement, but still deep and rich, like the booming of some melodious instrument. He flung aside his hat as he paced back and forth; his shaggy hair fell upon his shoulders; huge veins stood out upon his forehead—and Nathaniel sat mute as he watched this lion of a man whose great throat quivered with the power that might have stirred a nation—that might have made him president instead of king. He waited for the thunder of that throat and his nerves keyed themselves to meet its bursting passion. But when Strang spoke again it was in a voice as soft and as gentle as a woman's.

"Those are the men who have vilified us, Captain Plum; who have covered us with crimes that we have never committed; who have driven our people into groups that they may be free from deprecation; who watch like vultures to despoil our women; wild witless men, Captain Plum, who have left families and character behind them and who have sought the wilderness to escape the penalties of law and order. It is they who would destroy us. Go among my own people first, Captain Plum, and find your lost property if you can; and if you can not discover it where in seven years not one child has been born out of wedlock, seek among the Lamanites—and my sheriffs shall follow where you place the crime!"

He had stretched out his arms like one whose plea was of life and death; his face shone with earnestness; his low words throbbed as if his heart were borne upon them for the inspection of its truth and honor. He was Strang the tragedian, the orator, the conqueror of a legislature, a governor, a dozen juries—and of human souls. And as he stood silent for a moment in this attitude Nathaniel rose to his feet, subservient, and believing as others had believed in the fitness of this man. But as his eyes traveled a dozen paces beyond, he saw the young girl gesturing to him in that same terror, and holding up for him to see a slip of paper upon which she had written. And when she had caught his eyes she crumpled the paper into a shapeless ball and tossed it just over the landing to the ground below the stair.

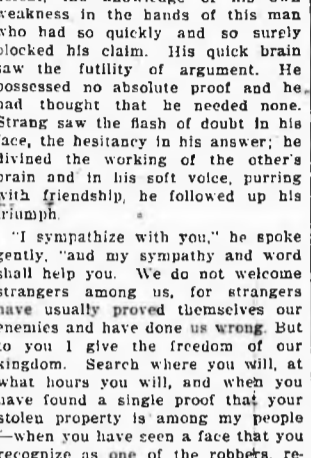

"I thank you for the privileges of the island which you have offered me," said Nathaniel, putting on his hat, "and I shall certainly take advantage of your kindness for a few hours, as I was very much to witness one of your ceremonies which I understand is to take place today. Then, if I have discovered nothing, I shall return to my ship."

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

How a Chronic Invalid Regained Perfect Health.

Mrs. Ray Truesner, 30 West Third St., New Albany, Ind., says: "Kidney disease had rendered me a chronic invalid. I lay in bed unable to move hand or foot. My right limb was swollen to twice normal size. I looked the picture of death and my case puzzled the doctors. The kidney secretions were highly colored and scalded terribly. Marked improvement followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was a well woman. My friends and relatives marvel at my recovery." Remember the name—Doan's. Talking to the Child.

"Mrs. X— talks to little Madge just as Mr. X— talks to their dog," said a little girl of a neighboring family. And it was indeed true. Mrs. X— is a very well-meaning woman and would be greatly surprised if she should hear the foregoing statement. She has simply unconsciously acquired a harsh tone of voice in dealing with her children. This is altogether unnecessary and is not, as many mothers seem to think, a mark of good discipline. The mother whose manner is quiet but firm is generally a much more successful disciplinarian than the harsh-voiced mother who issues her commands in a dictatorial manner. Kindness never spoils children. It is flabby indecision, sometimes mistaken for kindness, which spoils them.

Even the Children.

Ex-Governor Pennypacker, condemning in his witty way the American divorce evil, told, at a Philadelphia luncheon, an appropriate story.

"Even our children," he said, "are becoming infected. A Kensington school teacher, examining a little girl in grammar, said:

"What is the future of 'I love'?"

"A divorce," the child answered promptly."

Where Size Counts.

Edna thoughtfully considered a cow that was calmly grazing in a meadow across the way. "Mamma, how old is that cow?" she finally inquired. "She is four years old," answered Edna's mother. Edna considered the answer and from time to time appeared to be comparing herself with the cow.

"Well," she was putting comment on the question, "I'm five and that cow is big enough to be fifty."

"NO FRILLS"

Just Sensible Food Cured Him.

Sometimes a good, healthy commercial traveler suffers from poorly selected food and is lucky if he learns that Grape-Nuts food will put him right.

A Cincinnati traveler says: "About a year ago my stomach got in a bad way. I had a headache most of the time and suffered misery. For several months I ran down until I lost about 10 pounds in weight and finally had to give up a good position and go home. Any food that I might use seemed to nauseate me.

"My wife, hardly knowing what to do, one day brought home a package of Grape-Nuts food and coaxed me to try it. I told her it was no use but finally to humor her I tried a little, and they just struck my taste. It was the first food I had eaten in nearly a year that did not cause any suffering.

"Well, to make a long story short, I began to improve and stuck to Grape-Nuts. I went up from 135 pounds in December to 194 pounds the following October.

"My brain is clear, blood all right and appetite too much for any man's pocketbook. In fact, I am thoroughly made over, and owe it all to Grape-Nuts. I talk so much about what Grape-Nuts will do that some of the men on the road have nicknamed me 'Grape-Nuts,' but I stand today a healthy, rosy-cheeked man—a pretty good example of what the right kind of food will do.

"You can publish this if you want to. It is a true statement without any frills."

A Shipping Error.

The young Duchess of Westminster, wife of the richest peer in England, recently gave birth to her third child, a daughter. Thus there is no heir to the immense Grosvenor fortune; Earl Grosvenor, the duchess' second child, having died at the age of four.

Apreros of all this, a rather cruel story is being told in Newport about Lady Ursula Grosvenor, the eight-year-old daughter of the young duchess.

A friend, the story goes, called at Eaton Hall, and as she sat in the drawing-room, little Lady Ursula entered.

"Oh, good afternoon," she said gravely. "Mamma can't see any one today. She's upstairs with the new baby. They sent her, you know, a girl when she'd ordered a boy, and she's so upset that she's quite ill."

Not long ago Lord Kinnard, who is always actively interested in religious work, paid a surprise visit to a mission school in the east end of London and told a class of boys the story of Samson. Introducing his narrative, his lordship added:

"He was strong, became weak, and then regained his strength, enabling him to destroy his enemies. Now, boys, if I had an enemy, what would you advise me to do?"

A little boy, after meditating on the secret of that great giant's strength, shot up his hand and exclaimed: "Get a bottle of hair restorer."

Guinevere pondered a moment and then, looking up, demanded:

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Dr. J. C. Cheney's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Recollar History of "Blacksmith" Tokens That Are Interesting to Numismatists—Began With Necessity for Small Change.

A good deal has been heard of late years among coin collectors about the so-called "Blacksmith" tokens of Canada. The unsatisfactory condition of the currency in Canada up to comparatively recent times explains the reason for the issue of such coins.

For many years the supply of legal copper coins had been altogether inadequate, so that often anything in the shape of a copper passed current. At the beginning of the nineteenth century the only legal copper circulating medium was an insufficient and diminishing supply of worn out British half pence sent over from England.

A little later this was supplemented by a deluge of imported private tokens. Their overabundance, according to a writer in the Numismatist, soon caused them to be discredited and stringent means were adopted to prevent further importation of such coin into Canada or its manufacture there.

But as the necessity for an adequate supply of small change became more pressing, various ways for evading the blockade were evolved. One of these was by making or importing tokens which bore a date previous to the date of the edict excluding private coins. Another way, which was at one time very prevalent in England, was to evade the counterfeiting laws by suppressing the legends and substituting instead some capricious or meaningless legend, as "Claudius Romanus," "Georgius Ti Rox," "George Rules," "Glorius Ier Via," etc. These spurious coins presented the same general appearance to the ignorant populace as the legal coinage.

A third means, and this is characteristic of the Canadian Blacksmiths, was by counterfeiting the worn British half pence, the only legal copper coins in circulation, on which the date, legend and all but an indistinct outline of the design had been effaced. Although they thus produced a rude coinage these early Canadian coins showed considerable skill in so making fresh coins bear the appearance of an old worn out but still legal currency that they were able to circulate vast quantities of their spurious imitations. It is worth noting that the designs on these Blacksmiths often face in the opposite direction to their prototypes.

As an explanation of their name the story is told that a blacksmith of disolute habits lived in Montreal and when he wished to have a good time struck two or three dollars of these coppers and thereby supplied himself with sufficient change to gratify his wishes. The name was adopted by numismatists and applied to the whole series.
