NEWBURG.

Last Thursday, May 11, occurred the death from diphtheria of Everett Burgess, 16 months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Joy. He was buried the same day in Newburg cemetery. The family have the sympathy of the entire community.

Dr. Burgess was called to Mark Joy's Tuesday morning. He stated that Mrs. Joy had an attack of mumps. Leona is slightly improved at this writing. The nurse that was taken with diphtheria is out of danger. The old adage is verified in this case that misfortune never comes single.

School closed last Friday a week sooner than it otherwise would have done on account of the sickness in the neighborhood.

The Misses Vivien and Mabel Appleby accompanied by their brother Luellen of Redford, also Miss Margaret LeVan spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lewis.

Quite a delegation from here attended open night at Plymouth high school Friday last. To say it was greatly enjoyed by all would be putting it lightly. Plymouth may well feel proud of its fine school.

Mrs. Ida Stoneburner feels very grateful to the people for kindness shown her in her late bereavement.

A Successful Farmer

Gives as much attention to his stock as he does to his crops. All stock loses condition at times and it is the good manager that applies the remedy before there is any serious loss of time. The successful men in the New England States use Harvell's Condition Powder for stock and poultry. A package goes a long way because it is all medicine, not a food. It puts working animals in good spirits and flesh. Keeps poultry free from diseases and increases the yield of eggs. Price 25 cts. Sold by Pinckney's Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

The mothers' meeting last week Thursday was well attended and full of interest from beginning to end. The leaders were both present and had spared no pains to make the program complete. Miss Ursula Hartsough and Mrs. M. Hodge are the leaders for the meeting next Thursday, May 25. In response to the roll call each one will mention their favorite song. The influence of Popular Songs will be discussed and stories told of familiar songs. All know the musical ability of the leaders and that they can make such a meeting delightful. They desire a good attendance, as they intend to have choice temperance pieces, war songs, etc. Do not miss this meeting and remember it will begin promptly at 2:30 p. m. standard time.—Supt. Press.

WHAT WORRY DOES.

Dr. Snow, of London, the distinguished opponent of vivisection, says that worry is the most frequent cause of cancer. In times past this affliction, which is becoming increasingly prevalent, has been attributed to the excessive consumption of meat, to fish and even eggs. If worry predisposes humanity to such a scourge at this, in addition to all the other ills for which it is held responsible, it is plain that the earth has few evils so great or so general, says the New York Herald. Where contagion and heredity slay their thousands, worry kills its hundreds of thousands. Worry leads straight to insanity. It prepares the way for consumption and kidney trouble. It shatters the nervous system and thus is the forerunner of a hundred complaints which lower vitality, produce suffering and result in untimely death. Progress in sanitary science, in surgery and in medical practice, has lengthened the average span of life in spite of conditions which undeniably increase the sum of worry. In fact, worry is the price that many pay for the advantages which they now enjoy. If mankind could have had the full benefit of the wonderful discoveries of the past century or more, with none of the drawbacks of increasing worry, the average of life would be much greater than it is.

The statement of Professor Kenneth G. Smith that for the average man a trade is better than a profession is absolutely true, yet there is on the part of some very average people a disrespect for labor, and a loathing for honest grime. A numerously represented class of young men on leaving high school yearn for employment in which they can wear good clothes and not soil their hands. They would sooner by clerks than mechanics. If their relatives will supply them with the means of further schooling they will proceed to be doctors or lawyers, thought without any special calling in the direction of a profession. Often it happens that individuals who might have been of use in the world in a mechanical pursuit are failures through life because nambypambyism caused them to make a wrong start.

President David Starr Jordan of the Leland Stanford university has decided that no more baseball shall be played by the students at that institution. His decision came as the result of his attendance at a game, which he says was characterized by "systematic muckerism." That is a phrase which sounds as if it might stick.

Charles W. Elliot, former president of Harvard, learned to ride a bicycle at 65. Thomas Huxley performed the more difficult feat of learning Greek at the same age, but was not watched by the small boys in the neighborhood.

Boston finds that unless congregations can pay more to preachers, pulpits, if filled at all, will be occupied by "fourth-rate" men. Even "second rate" sounds rather distressing and not suggestive of active competition with the balmy Sunday.

A New York broker has been sued for $100,000 by the husband of an actress because her affections were alienated. This should make it possible for the lady to dispense with the services of her press agent.

It has been decided by a Chicago judge that a woman is not bound, morally, legally or otherwise, to shave her husband's neck. This should have a tendency to clarify the situation.

Four goats into which experimenters had injected 1,000,000,000 germs of various kinds have escaped and are astray in New York. This ought to bring about a lively movement in disinfectants.

According to a New York court decision the actor who falls into the orchestra pit, keeps eight balls in the air or clouts his partner with a newspaper of a Sunday evening is not taking part in a concert.

Tourists who are anxious to see the coronation procession will be able to do so for five dollars, says an exchange. We are still determined, however, to wait for the moving pictures.

A Cornell professor wants boys encouraged to study Greek to take their minds off moneymaking. But such theory is Greek to the modern business parent's mind.

A great scandal has been hushed in England because a woman has decided not to go into court and talk. But can a scandal be permanently hushed in that way?

FARMERS PLAN READY REVENGE

SAY THEY WILL CUT THE STATE FAIR IF DETROITERS ARGUE FOR RECIPROCITY.

MICHIGAN FARMERS MAKE STRONG FIGHT AGAINST THE MEASURE.

N. P. Hull, Master of Michigan Grange, Ex-Gov. Warner, Dr. Snyder and Others Spoke Against Reciprocity.

The Michigan state fair has been dragged into the Canadian reciprocity issue by the Wolverine farmers who are in Washington to fight the measure, and it is said that, should a delegation come from Detroit to fight for reciprocity, the farmers of the state will retaliate by avoiding the state fair in Detroit next September. President Snyder of the Michigan Agricultural college declares his doubt of any very strong pro-reciprocity argument from Detroiters. Detroit needs the farmers, the college president insists, but the farmer can get along without Detroit, as other cities in Michigan can supply the farmer's needs. Other members of the farmer delegation take the same view, and they talk of reprisals against the Michigan metropolis if it takes what the farmers believe is a "selfish stand for its own supposed gain against the interests of the rural districts."

A Buffalo delegation of 100 is in Washington urging reciprocity and the Michigan grangers are raising the cry that the Bisons came at the brewers' instigation.

"It's a move to get free barley from Canada," is the talk. "The brewers want to get cheaper material."

N. P. Hull, master of the Michigan Grange, declares he has no knowledge of such a move in Detroit, but the point is made that Canadian reciprocity will put cereals in the free list. With the liquor interests versus the "dry" drawn into the reciprocity fight the contest is admitted here to take on new angles.

On the other side of the argument Senator Stone sprung a sensation while the Michigan farmers were before the senate committee, by asking that a subpoena be issued compelling the appearance of the law firm of Allen & Graham of New York, and directing it to produce all the anti-reciprocity literature it has printed or written.

Mr. Hull declared the firm was employed by the grangers, and a stormy argument ensued. Stone remarked that if nothing was the matter there ought to be no objection to the lawyers coming and Hull said he not only had no objection, but would have the lawyers come without a subpoena.

Editor Waterbury of the Michigan Farmers said the farmer never has had the real benefit of protection because production exceeded demand, but the time is near when this condition will cease and the farmer can get higher prices unless reciprocity prevents.

M. J. Lawrence, publisher of the Michigan Farmer, ex-Gov. Warner, Dr. Snyder and C. E. Bassett also spoke against reciprocity.

Slayer and Victims Buried in One Grave.

The last wish of Casey Van Lieren, of Luther, who shot his wife, son and daughter and took his own life, that he be buried with the victims in one grave, was complied with. Van Lieren left an unfinished note before blowing his brains out asking pardon for the deed. The parents of Mrs. Van Lieren objected but finally relented. The funeral was the largest ever held in Luther.

Under the commission form of government, Port Huron will raise $194,416 by tax levy for the fiscal year, beginning May 1, which is approximately $5,000 less than was raised under the old charter last year. The annual appropriations as decided upon are about the same as last year.

The Michigan Laundrymen's association closed a two days' convention in Kalamazoo by electing the following officers: President, Martin Kelly, Detroit; first vice president, John H. Ryan, Kalamazoo; second vice president, C. H. Chidsey, Detroit; secretary, Harry Mason, Detroit; treasurer, Eugene Stewart, Battle Creek. The convention will be held in Flint in 1912.

After the most successful and enthusiastic meeting in the history of the organization, the convention of the Osceola Association of the Baptist church closed in Ludington, to meet in Bear Lake next May. Rev. A. C. Lemon, of Ludington, will preach the annual sermon at that time. Dr. E. O. Dickinson, of Big Rapids, was elected director to represent the Osceola association in the state convention at Adrian in October.

When the stranger said with a wink, he had vinegar for sale, many dry residents of Ionia placed orders at $2.75 per quart. When the goods came it was surely enough vinegar!

Referring to his recent charges against Judge Bird of the supreme court, Gov. Osborn said: "I hold nothing against Judge Bird, as not work out on a grudge because I do not know him, but a member of the court which lays down the law should obey it. I know not whether the law which compels judges of the supreme court to live in Lansing is constitutional, but until the law is found to be faulty he should reside there."

PRIMARY SCHOOL MONEY

Wayne, Kent, Marquette, Saginaw and St. Clair Counties Head List.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction L. L. Wright gives out the primary school money apportionment by counties, money being given to counties which have not had a surplus. The total amount to be distributed is $5,395,390. The number of school children in the state sharing in the apportionment is given at $770,770.

Wayne county leads in the amount received, with Houghton, Bay, Berrien, Kent, Marquette, Saginaw and St. Clair counties among those receiving the larger amounts. Oscoda, Luce, Roscommon, Crawford and Montmorency counties receive the smallest amounts. Roscommon county, being credited with but 651 school children, will receive only $4,537.

STANDARD OIL CO. ORDERED TO QUIT

GOVERNMENT'S BATTLE AGAINST CORPORATION ENDS WHEN OCTOPUS IS BRANDED CONSPIRACY.

SUPREME COURT GIVES SIX MONTHS' TIME FOR ACTION.

Chief Justice White Writes Decision in Which the Giant Corporation is Held to be a Monopoly Which Restrains Trade.

The supreme court of the United States Monday ordered the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. In connection with this decree it also handed down its interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law, long awaited by an anxious business world.

In this, the first of its big decisions in the anti-trust cases, the court holds that the Standard Oil Co. is a conspiracy in restraint of trade and a monopoly in contravention of the Sherman anti-trust law. Thus, after a fight of many years in which every obstacle known to the legal profession has been interposed, the federal government has succeeded in its effort to compel this giant corporation to cast off its holding company and again to separate itself into its 33 constituent parts.

To accomplish this gigantic undertaking the court sets a period of six months. This is an extension of five months over the time allotted in the dissolution decree of the lower court. The decree of the circuit court was modified by the supreme court in only one other particular. The supreme court orders that the Standard Oil company and its subsidiaries shall not be excluded from interstate commerce pending the putting its house in order.

The decision of the court in regard to the general interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law was awaited with greater anxiety by the business world than the finding of fact in the Standard Oil case. The court holds that it is necessary to distinguish between "reasonable" and "unreasonable" restraint of trade as covered by the Sherman anti-trust law.

The effect of the decision, as viewed by distinguished lawyers, is to insert the word "unreasonable" into the general prohibition in the Sherman anti-trust law against combinations in restraint of trade. The supreme court has thus eliminated the uncertainty with which all business combinations regarded the Sherman anti-trust law, and in the future it will be up to the government to draw the line between good and bad trusts.

MEXICO'S PEACE TERMS.

Rebels Demand Three Cabinet Positions and 14 of 27 Governors.

The restoration of peace in Mexico depends on whether the government will grant the insurgents permission to name three members of the cabinet and the governors of 14 of the 27 states. This proposition, a slight modification of the original demand of the rebels which called for four portfolios in the cabinet, is the reply which will be made to Mexico's offer of one cabinet member and ten governorships.

The rebels feel they are giving the government a majority of five in the cabinet, whereas hitherto they have insisted on equal strength there, and practically power to deadlock it on important measures. Especially after the battle of Juarez the rebels think they are displaying the highest generosity for they now claim military possession of the states of Chihuahua and Sonora, as well as a firm hold on many of the others.

Judge Carbajal is believed to have offered the insurgents the portfolio of minister of public instruction, which they think of great importance to the country, but of no political importance.

The insurgents, immediately after peace is declared, will form a political party, which probably will be called the "progressive" party. As soon as peace is completely restored, and Gen. Diaz follows out his intention of resigning, which insurgent leaders believe will be in two or three months, the new party will devote itself to preparing for a national campaign. Undoubtedly Francisco I. Madero, Jr., will be the candidate for president, while it is considered likely that Dr. Vasquez will again run for vice president as he did in the last election.

Forest fires are raging in the northern part of Herkimer county, N. Y. and over 500 acres of forest have been destroyed in the towns of Russia and Ohio. Fire wardens say that not less rain comes at once the loss will be appalling.

In the Russian duma Premier Stolypin, in a loud speech, defended the government against an interpellation on the promulgation of the Polish Zemstvo bill by administrative order.

The United States naval training station on Lake Michigan at North Chicago, will open July 1. There will be 15 officers from the rank of rear-admiral down at the station, and all told, 100 inspectors and officers for the 1,660 to 2,000 men in each six months' quota.

Capt. Duncan H. Major, Eighteenth infantry, temporarily in command of Whipple barracks, Prescott, Ariz., and Capt. E. O. C. Ord, U. S. A., retired, will sue in the U. S. district court at Prescott the manager of a Prescott skating rink who denies their admission because they were in the uniform of U. S. army officers.

JUAREZ FALLS TO REBELS

Juarez is a Wreck After Assaults of Three Days and the Fires Started by Opposing Armies

The tri-colored flag of the Mexican insurgents floats over Juarez after two days and two nights of as fierce and destructive an attack as any city has been subjected to in recent years. Gen. Navarro, the federal commander, hoisted the white flag above the barracks where he determined to make his last stand.

With Juarez and all its vast stores of rifles, ammunition and machine guns in the hands of the Mexican revolutionists, the rebel leaders turned to the task of forming their government.

Gen. Madero has established his headquarters in the one-story municipal building across the street from the big church which was the scene of the fiercest fighting and there the insurgent chieftain conferred with the leaders and Senors Obregon and Braniff, who acted as go-between in the futile negotiations for peace, and Dr. Vasquez Gomez, confidential agent of the revolutionists at Washington, and their chief peace commissioner, who were at the Madero headquarters.

The first conference of Madero and his cabinet took up a plan for procedure for peace negotiations, looking toward their resumption.

Fireman Rescues Baby.

To catch up a 2-year-old baby girl playing in the center of the track, Bill Garvin of Owosso, fireman on Ann Arbor passenger train No. 7, scrambled to the pilot of his fast-moving engine, and effected a thrilling rescue.

It occurred before the very eyes of the tot's agonized mother, Mrs. John Lyon, wife of a minister residing two miles east of Carland. The youngster had escaped the watchful eye of the mother and wandered out of the yard out on the railroad, where it sat down between the rails to play.

THE MEN WHO LOSE.

Here's to the men who lose! What though their work be o'er so nobly planned...

When the colonel reached his office, he found a lady waiting for him in the anteroom.

"Good afternoon, Col. Warrenton," she said. "I was too impatient to wait for you to come to see me, knowing how busy you are, and I did want some news of Mr. Whidby."

"I understand, and he will be glad I saw you." The colonel stepped back, took a look into his office, and then softly closed the door.

"He went on, as he sat down near her, he has had enough to bear, without this unreasonable opposition of your father. He certainly needs all the friends he can get now."

"Miss Delmar's lips quivered, and she twisted her hands together in her lap as she spoke:

"Papa is even more severe than ever since he learned that I have been to see Mr. Whidby. I can't imagine how that could have got into the papers. Papa says I am watched, and that everything I do is noted."

"He is still confident that Whidby is the murderer?"

"Yes, and he thinks he knows a motive that no one else does."

"What can that be?"

"Just a week before Mr. Strong's death, papa had called on Mr. Whidby and forbidden him to pay his addresses to me. I am sorry to say papa is worldly-minded. He had heard the report of Mr. Strong's intended marriage, and thought, in that case, that Mr. Whidby would not—"

"Not be Strong's sole heir?"

"Would not be his heir at all. Papa thought Mr. Strong would change his will altogether. It is very heartless for him to think so, but he believes that Mr. Whidby committed the crime—through love for me—because his poverty was a barrier to our marriage."

"That is an ugly view of the matter, and it might have weight with a jury," replied the colonel. "Our only hopes lie in finding the real murderer. The note dropped at the mayor's house, the other night by the man who was seen about the grounds proves that he is in this city and at large."

"Papa says it is reported that some accomplice of Mr. Whidby's did that to mislead the police."

"Col. Warrenton nodded thoughtfully. Yes, and it would seem very plausible to them; but to us, who know the innocence of the one suspected, it proves other things, and we must profit by it. I could give this Detective Hendricks a point or two, but I'm afraid he would think me not disinterested in my friend's case."

Miss Delmar rose to go.

"I haven't a minute. I am afraid papa will miss me and be angry again. Tell Mr. Whidby that I am very hopeful—that I haven't a single doubt that it will all be cleared up soon. Tell him I would write every day, but I know that my last letter was intercepted. Tell him I shall see him as soon as possible, and—and—but you know what to say. Don't let him lose heart."

The colonel held her hand till they reached the door.

"Don't worry," he said, in parting. "I shall have some good news for you in a day or two. I am pretty sure."

CHAPTER VIII.

Capt. Welsh showed considerable excitement when he read the note of warning which the mayor placed in his hands.

Mr. Minard and Hendricks was looking over a bundle of New York papers which had been sent to him, and did not look up when the mayor entered the room.

Without a word, Capt. Welsh held the note before his eyes, and waited for him to speak. After reading it, Hendricks stroked his beard thoughtfully for a moment, and then said:

"I don't think you need have any fear up at your place, Mr. Roundtree, but under such circumstances women are usually uneasy, so I should advise you, Capt. Welsh, to have a couple of policemen in citizen clothes hang about the grounds for a few days."

This was done for a week, but, as nothing occurred to indicate the presence of danger, the men were ordered away. Everything went on smoothly all the day following Col. Warrenton's visit to Whidby. Mayor Roundtree, accompanied by Fred Walters, had gone downtown, leaving his wife and Mrs. Walters alone with the servants.

Mrs. Roundtree was in the sitting-room giving orders to the cook, and Mrs. Walters had strolled down the gravelled walk among the rose-bushes.

The cook had just left her, when Mrs.

Roundtree heard the report of a revolver outside. She sprang up and ran to a window. Not seeing her daughter on the veranda, she screamed, and almost fainted with fright.

"Don't be frightened, mamma," she cried, seeing her mother. "He did not touch me." In a moment Mrs. Roundtree was by her side, but so excited that she could not speak.

"Quite, I should think. It must have surprised you."

"It did, of course," answered Mrs. Walters, holding her roses to her nose. "I heard the report, and then felt something like a little, a very little, tug at my sleeve."

"You are sure about that?" asked Hendricks, in an indifferent tone. "You are sure that you heard the report before you felt the ball touch your sleeve?"

"Quite sure," said she; "but why—" "He was not inside the fence?" went on the detective, looking through the window again.

"No; outside the fence, at the corner of the lot."

"Ah, yes, I see," he replied, in a non-committal tone. "He must have been 100 yards from you. Permit me, please."

And, taking a silver-mounted lens from his pocket, he carefully examined the bullet-hole. For a moment no one spoke; then he said: "I wonder if we could find that little piece of lead. Would you mind coming with us and showing me exactly where you stood?"

"Not at all," Mrs. Walters rose with a gratified smile.

"Don't you think we are losing time," Hendricks asked Capt. Welsh, in an undertone. "I am afraid—" But Hendricks pinched the captain's arm warningly, and the remark was not finished.

They had reached the lawn, when Hendricks stopped Mrs. Walters and examined her sleeve again.

"Not satisfied yet?" she laughed. "I can see better here in the sunlight," he answered. "I have made a study of the effect of bullets, fired at different distances, on various stuffs."

"I have often thought your profession must be a fascinating one," Mrs. Walters remarked, as they started down the walk.

"It is getting to be rather uninteresting employment. It is so easy to catch up with people unskilled in our craft. If would-be criminals only knew that we understood half we do, they would not commit crime so often."

"I had not thought of that," said Mrs. Walters, curiously studying his features.

"But here is the spot. Now, don't let anyone come here but Mr. Hendricks," she added to the others; "you ought not to track it up till he sees my footprints. There they are, Mr. Hendricks; don't you see where my sharp heels went in? You can see that I was facing that way. The man stood over at the corner of the fence."

"I see," said Hendricks. "What did he look like? How was he dressed?"

"I am afraid I can't describe him accurately. He seemed of medium height, had on gray clothes, and wore a long dark beard."

"The smoke may have given you the impression that his clothes were gray," said Hendricks. "May I take your place a moment?"

She stepped back, smiling at the others, who stood on the walk, and he changed places with her. He stuck his umbrella in one of her tracks and left it there. "Only to mark the spot," he said, indifferently. "Now let's all go over to the fence, and see if the rascal left any footprints there."

They all walked to the corner of the fence, and looked over towards the trees near by. "I think—" Mrs. Walters caught the sudden, sharp glance of Hendricks, and pointed. "I started to say that it looks as if there were footprints over there," she said, pointing to a spot where the yellow clay showed in the short grass; "but I may be mistaken."

Hendricks moved into her place, lowered his height to hers, and gazed at the spot for a moment, then he looked at her sharply. "Your eyes are better than mine, Mrs. Walters. I can't make out anything."

"You have the keenest eyesight in America," said Capt. Welsh, with a smile. "We have all heard about your experience with the Brooklyn blood-specks—"

"Now I think I see what Mrs. Walters means," Hendricks broke in, with a slight frown. "It is easy to see what we know exists. He put his hands on the rail of the fence, and, with the grace and ease of an acrobat, sprang over the sharp-pointed palings. The others passed through a gate near by, and came round to him as he was on his hands and knees, examining two deeply marked tracks in the yellow clay.

"Wore a number ten," he said. "Had any rain out here in the last two days?" He was looking up at Fred Walters.

"I think not—none for a week."

replied, with a smile. Then his smile vanished, and he bent his piercing gray eyes upon her so steadily that her own wavered a little, and she dropped her hand to arrange her skirt. "You were on the lawn?" he said, glancing out at a window, as if to relieve her embarrassment.

Mrs. Walters instantly recovered her self-possession and looked him coldly in the eyes.

"Yes, on the right of the walk, among the rose bushes. I was gathering roses. The bullet passed through my sleeve. See! it was near enough, wasn't it?"

"Quite, I should think. It must have surprised you."

"It did, of course," answered Mrs. Walters, holding her roses to her nose. "I heard the report, and then felt something like a little, a very little, tug at my sleeve."

"You are sure about that?" asked Hendricks, in an indifferent tone. "You are sure that you heard the report before you felt the ball touch your sleeve?"

"Quite sure," said she; "but why—" "He was not inside the fence?" went on the detective, looking through the window again.

"No; outside the fence, at the corner of the lot."

"Ah, yes, I see," he replied, in a non-committal tone. "He must have been 100 yards from you. Permit me, please."

And, taking a silver-mounted lens from his pocket, he carefully examined the bullet-hole. For a moment no one spoke; then he said: "I wonder if we could find that little piece of lead. Would you mind coming with us and showing me exactly where you stood?"

"Not at all," Mrs. Walters rose with a gratified smile.

"Don't you think we are losing time," Hendricks asked Capt. Welsh, in an undertone. "I am afraid—" But Hendricks pinched the captain's arm warningly, and the remark was not finished.

They had reached the lawn, when Hendricks stopped Mrs. Walters and examined her sleeve again.

"Not satisfied yet?" she laughed. "I can see better here in the sunlight," he answered. "I have made a study of the effect of bullets, fired at different distances, on various stuffs."

"I have often thought your profession must be a fascinating one," Mrs. Walters remarked, as they started down the walk.

"It is getting to be rather uninteresting employment. It is so easy to catch up with people unskilled in our craft. If would-be criminals only knew that we understood half we do, they would not commit crime so often."

"I had not thought of that," said Mrs. Walters, curiously studying his features.

"But here is the spot. Now, don't let anyone come here but Mr. Hendricks," she added to the others; "you ought not to track it up till he sees my footprints. There they are, Mr. Hendricks; don't you see where my sharp heels went in? You can see that I was facing that way. The man stood over at the corner of the fence."

"I see," said Hendricks. "What did he look like? How was he dressed?"

"I am afraid I can't describe him accurately. He seemed of medium height, had on gray clothes, and wore a long dark beard."

"The smoke may have given you the impression that his clothes were gray," said Hendricks. "May I take your place a moment?"

She stepped back, smiling at the others, who stood on the walk, and he changed places with her. He stuck his umbrella in one of her tracks and left it there. "Only to mark the spot," he said, indifferently. "Now let's all go over to the fence, and see if the rascal left any footprints there."

They all walked to the corner of the fence, and looked over towards the trees near by. "I think—" Mrs. Walters caught the sudden, sharp glance of Hendricks, and pointed. "I started to say that it looks as if there were footprints over there," she said, pointing to a spot where the yellow clay showed in the short grass; "but I may be mistaken."

Hendricks moved into her place, lowered his height to hers, and gazed at the spot for a moment, then he looked at her sharply. "Your eyes are better than mine, Mrs. Walters. I can't make out anything."

"You have the keenest eyesight in America," said Capt. Welsh, with a smile. "We have all heard about your experience with the Brooklyn blood-specks—"

"Now I think I see what Mrs. Walters means," Hendricks broke in, with a slight frown. "It is easy to see what we know exists. He put his hands on the rail of the fence, and, with the grace and ease of an acrobat, sprang over the sharp-pointed palings. The others passed through a gate near by, and came round to him as he was on his hands and knees, examining two deeply marked tracks in the yellow clay.

"Wore a number ten," he said. "Had any rain out here in the last two days?" He was looking up at Fred Walters.

"I think not—none for a week."

pled Walters, looking inquiringly round the group.

Hendricks said nothing, but, motioning them to stand out of the way, he stooped behind the footmarks and, with half-closed eyes, steadily sighted at the umbrella he had stuck in the earth, slowly moving from side to side and up and down.

"That's all we can do here," he said, finally. "I shall run over in the yard and see if I can see anything of the bullet." Again he vaulted over the fence, walked hurriedly across the grass, passed his umbrella, and began to examine the plastered wall of the conservatory beyond. He did not turn his head or make any remark as the others approached.

"Did you expect to find it there?" asked Mrs. Walters, with a smile.

"Hardly," he replied. "I only wanted to confirm my belief that it was not there."

"Ah!" she said, and her eyes fell before his sharp glance.

"If you are through, we will go in out of the sun," said the mayor, a trace of impatience in his tone. "You may use my telephone if you want to communicate with your men."

"I want to nose around a little out here," said Hendricks, lightly. "Where does your gardener keep his tools?"

Mr. Roundtree called Robert, the gardener, who stood on the veranda with the other servants, and he came to him.

"Where do you keep your tools?" asked Hendricks—"your hoes, rakes, knives and such things?"

"In the little room in the conservatory, sir," Robert replied.

"Oh, in here," Hendricks entered the conservatory and tried the door of the little room near the entrance.

"It is locked, sir," said Robert, producing a bunch of keys.

"It was not last night," said Hendricks, as he thrust the key into the lock.

"No, sir, I forgot it last night." And Robert looked at the detective superstitiously.

"No harm done," replied Hendricks. He opened the door and glanced at a heap of gardening implements on the floor.

"You ought to hang up your watering-pot," he remarked to the servant. "It will rust the bottom to set it down damp."

"I usually do, sir," the man stammered. "I thought I did the last time."

PROMOTED FOR BATHING, A Young French Soldier's Piece of Good Fortune.

An incident related by the late Marshal Canrobert, a French general, of his own experiences in the Crimean war, sheds a curious light on the French character; it shows how much the French like a picturesque incident—and also, perhaps, how heroic an episode might appear to them which was at least not far from the ordinary to a northern people.

In the Crimea, during the winter, Gen. Canrobert was in the habit of going out among the men of his command, incognito, to see what they were about, and to learn their wants and encourage the soldiers if they needed encouragement.

One morning, on one of these tours, he came upon a young conscript who had stripped himself to the waist, and was bathing his body with handfuls of snow.

"That's an odd sort of soap you are using," exclaimed the general.

"Oh, it's good enough," said the soldier. "You see I'm young, and, more than that, I'm a Lorrainer, from Nancy, and a fellow provincial of Gen. Druot, who shaved himself with snow on the march from Moscow, you know, with the mercury 30 degrees below freezing. The old fellows in my company, you see, bother me and make fun of me because I haven't any beard, and, since I can't shave out of doors, like Druot, I have to do this to show those old fellows that I'm no more afraid of cold than I am of the enemy!"

"Well," said Canrobert, "what if I should give you another way of getting even with those old fellows?"

"Why, I shouldn't mind," answered the young soldier.

"I'll make you a corporal," said the general.

The soldier laughed. "I guess that won't go," said he. "You'd find my colonel wouldn't have it."

"I'm higher than your colonel; I am Gen. Canrobert."

The soldier was in transports—especially as the same day he was made a corporal in the presence of the regiment.

The story is authentic, and it is a good illustration of the ways which served to make Canrobert the most popular general in the French army; but it is unsatisfactory in the respect that it does not tell whether the young corporal went on to make a sergeant, or— in the hope of being made a sergeant— a Youth's Companion.

EXPLORING THE AIR

Six Nations Interested in Series of Investigations.

Mass of Information Concerning Conditions in High Altitudes Is Being Obtained—Weather Balloons Used for Tests.

Omaha.—Six nations are interested in a series of investigations now being carried on in Omaha by the United States government and collaborated in by the governments of England, Germany, France, Italy and Belgium. These investigations have for their object the thorough exploration of the atmosphere at a height of more than ten miles above the earth's surface, and so successfully are they being carried out that a mass of information concerning conditions existing as high as eighteen miles up in the air has been secured. Similar explorations are being conducted in the countries named above and when these are completed all information gathered by each country is to be exchanged with all other countries engaged in the investigations.

The research is being prosecuted with the assistance of "weather balloons," which are sent aloft bearing in attached baskets a number of delicate contrivances for measuring whatever conditions are met on the trip from earth through the clouds and back again to earth. The experiments continue for two weeks, a weather balloon being sent up each afternoon during that period by each of the six governments. When the information thus gained is properly arranged the meteorological bureaus in each of the countries taking part will receive tabulated copies.

The little balloons, which are six feet in diameter, are so arranged that they will explode somewhere far above the ten-mile level, the explosive force being the hydrogen with which the bag is filled.

One of these balloons recently reached a height of 18 miles before bursting and at that altitude the temperature was only 35 degrees below zero, although at a point between nine and ten miles high the records showed that a temperature of 94 degrees below zero had been gone through. On this particular date the temperature at Omaha, the starting point of the balloon, was 47 degrees above zero.

Another balloon registered an air current traveling at a rate of more than 100 miles an hour.

The instruments used are so delicate that one of them—that for measuring the humidity—depends for its record upon the distance that a human hair will lengthen on passing through a stratum of air which contains slightly more moisture than did the stratum immediately below it.

The records are made upon a soot-covered cylinder by a stylus point, operated by a level, which in turn is controlled by the instruments. This cylinder is slowly turned by a clock-work arrangement, and when the box is returned to the weather station a glance at the sooty covering will give the atmospheric pressure, the humidity, and the wind velocity at any height traversed by the balloon.

The strand of hair used in the instrument for determining the humidity is chemically dried before it is placed in position. Thereafter, upon passing through a moist stratum, the hair absorbs a portion of the moisture, the hair lengthens and the stylus point records the change on the cylinder. If the next stratum is dry some of the moisture in the hair is evaporated, the hair becomes shorter, and the cylinder makes the record accordingly.

The air pressure is determined, or recorded by the aid of a small cylinder, from which most of the air has been drawn. A small plunger, to which is attached a stylus point, makes the necessary scratches on the soot-covered cylinder.

Drapery on Poster Women.

New York.—There was joy in Jamaica, especially among the members of the citizens' committee, over the receipt of a letter from a bill posting company which has to do with the "immoral posters" which have decorated the fences for some time.

The letter was sent by F. L. Hann of Brooklyn and was to the effect that a great reform will be worked in the matter of the displaying of burlesque house posters. Mr. Hann informs the committee that hereafter when a burlesque poster shows a woman in tight, "something will be placed over these tights hiding from view any of the woman's bare limbs."

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

A trial package of Munyon's Paw Paw Pills will be sent free to anyone on request. Address Professor Munyon, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. If you are in need of medical advice, do not fail to write Professor Munyon. Your communication will be treated in strict confidence, and your case will be diagnosed as carefully as though you had a personal interview.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour, they do not grip, they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion, constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are 26 feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the stomach, setting up serious forms of indigestion, and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic.

Regular size bottle, containing 45 pills, 25 cents. Munyon's Laboratory, 53d & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia.

Michigan's New Fire Marshal Law

One of the most important and valuable laws passed by the recent session of the Michigan legislature was that creating a fire marshal department, which was regarded as of such importance that it was made to take immediate effect. The department should greatly reduce the fire waste of the state, and thus should pave the way for a reduction of fire insurance rates, which are based upon the loss ratio. In addition to this advantage, it should protect the lives and property of the citizens by reducing the conflagration hazard, securing the removal of fire traps and other dangerous conditions, and requiring fire drills in the schools, etc. These changes are secured without any cost to the public, since the expense of the department is defrayed from insurance taxes already levied upon the companies, over and above the amount needed for the support of the insurance department.

The law will not be published in due official course for several months, but since it is already in effect and is of such great public importance, a summary of its provisions will be of interest. It makes the commissioner of insurance state fire marshal, the marshal to appoint an assistant who shall be in special charge of the work.

The chief of the fire department in every city or village maintaining a department, and the president of each incorporated village or town in which no department exists, must report within two days, not including Sunday, to the state fire marshal, every fire which destroys or damages property. All insurance companies doing business are also required to report to the fire marshal all losses reported to them. The fire marshal has the right to conduct investigations under oath, and to cause the arrest of persons regarded as guilty of starting fires, and he, with his deputies and assistants, has the power in any county to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses in such inquiries, and to enter upon and examine any premises in which fires have occurred.

In addition to these provisions, making possible the investigation of crooked fires, which in other states have greatly reduced the number of such fires, the law has important features intended to prevent fires. The officials of the department and chiefs of fire departments, the mayors of cities or villages, and the clerks of townships are given the right, at all reasonable hours, to enter buildings and premises within their jurisdiction, for the purpose of examination. Whenever they find any buildings especially liable to fire, for want of proper repair, age, or any cause, and so situated as to endanger other buildings or property, they can require the condition to be remedied. The fire marshal is also authorized to make regulations for the storage, sale and transportation of highly inflammable materials and explosives. Failure to comply with the orders of the authorities subjects the offender to a penalty of not less than $10 or more than $50 for each day's neglect, but in municipalities having building inspection and fire limit ordinances the law does not effect such local regulations, the jurisdiction of the fire marshal in such cases being concurrent with that of the municipal authorities.

The department must require teachers of public and private schools and educational institutions to have one fire drill each month and to keep all doors and exits unlocked during school hours. Such laws in other states have been most successful in reducing the number of fires and protecting the lives and property of citizens. The fire waste in the United States last year was $234,470,000, and present indications are that this amount will be greatly exceeded in 1911. Most of these fires are preventable, and are due to carelessness or criminality, and the Michigan fire marshal law will make possible a reduction of the state's proportion of this fire waste.

Some of our Plymouth farmers who are complaining of hard work may obtain a pointer from the following Evansville, Ind., dispatch: Although 63 years old, Mrs. Martha Spradley, living in Warrick county, has broken ground for her corn crop. She will plant a large acreage of corn this summer and will do her work without assistance. She and her daughter live on their farm and they have never employed a hired hand but have always done their own work. Mrs. Spradley is as active as many women 30 years old and has never been sick a day.

'Open Night' was a greater success than ever judging from the number present. A complete account will appear next week.

Hark! Hark! 'Tis the bugle's blast that resounds thru the halls! we are becoming quite military up here. We even have a new patriotic song.

Answers on an 8th grade examination paper: "The duty of the Register of Deeds is to keep the record of the 'deeds,' so other people cannot 'bust' them up."

One day last week the electric clock became ambitious and rang every bell in the building for almost ten minutes. It took all the electrical skill of the High School to stop it, as Mr. Irbell was away with the keys.

One of the most noticeable features of "Open Night" was the "Brick-Wall Denters," served by the Domestic Science girls. (So we heard a H. S. boy commenting. Something wrong with his taste, girls?)

Teacher (explaining to class a way to remember the capitol of Alabama): "Think of Montgomery, Ward and Co., that firm in Chicago that advertises so much. The capitol is Montgomery." (Next day) "What is the capitol of Alabama?" Bright Boy: "Sears and Roebuck."

Notice of Letting of Drain Contract

Notice is hereby given that I, James Grant, county drain commissioner of the county of Wayne, State of Michigan, will, on the 22nd day of May, A. D. 1911, at the Bakewell residence in the township of Plymouth, in said county of Wayne, at nine o'clock in the forenoon of that day, proceed to receive bids for the construction of a certain drain known and designated as the Bakewell Tile Drain, to be located and established in the township of Plymouth, in said county of Wayne, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning on the property of H. W. L. Hillmer, northeast quarter of section 25, and continuing east through lands of H. W. L. Hillmer, George C. Barvier, William Bakewell, Mary Hager, William Minehart, and stopping at the P. M. R. ditch, all of said drain being in section 25, T. 18. S. E. 3. The said job will be let by sections. The section at the outlet of said drain will be let first, and the remaining sections in their order up stream, in accordance with the diagram now on file with the other papers pertaining to said drain, in the office of the County Drain Commissioner of said county of Wayne, to which reference may be had by all parties interested, and bids will be made and received accordingly. Contracts will be made with the lowest responsible bidder giving adequate security for the performance of the work, in a sum then and there to be fixed by me, reserving to myself the right to reject any and all bids. Notice is further hereby given that at the time and place of said letting, or at such other time and place thereafter to which I, the county drain commissioner aforesaid, may adjourn the same, the assessments for benefits to the lands comprised within the "Bakewell Tile Drain Special Assessment District," and apportionment thereon, will be announced by me, and will be subject to review for one day, from nine o'clock in the forenoon until five o'clock in the afternoon.

The following is a description of the several tracts or parcels of land constituting the Special Assessment District of said drain, viz: Beginning at the ditch on the south side of section 25, T. 18. S. E. 3, in the northeast 1/4 of section 25, T. 18. S. E. 3, 3400 feet east of the Whitbeck road, thence across the right of way of the P. M. R. E. south 88 deg 18 min w 71 ft to the north line of lands owned by W. H. Minehardt, thence across the lands of said W. H. Minehardt's 84 deg 18 min w 82 ft; thence continuing across the lands of said W. H. Minehardt's 23 deg 48 min w 600 ft; thence a 54 deg 02 min w 237 ft to the east line of lands owned by Henry Hager that as shown on section 25, T. 18. S. E. 3; thence a 54 deg 02 min w 311 ft to the east line of lands owned by Wm. Bakewell; thence across the lands of Wm. Bakewell a 54 deg 02 min w 16 ft; thence continuing across the lands of Wm. Bakewell a 54 deg 02 min w 16 ft; thence across the lands of George Barvier a 78 deg 02 min w 407 ft; thence a 22 deg 30 min w 536 ft; thence a 54 deg w 15 ft to the east line of lands owned by Louis Hillmer; thence across the lands of said Louis Hillmer a 34 deg w 49 ft.

Now therefore, all unknown or non-resident persons, owners of and persons interested in the above described lands and you H. W. L. Hillmer, George C. Barvier, Wm. Bakewell, M. Hager, George Henry Wm. Kruman, Isaac Wilcox, C. F. Hilde, N. Passago, Henry Fisher and Wm. Minehardt are hereby notified that at the time and place aforesaid, or at such other time and place thereafter to which said hearing may be adjourned, I shall proceed to receive bids for the construction of said drain in the manner hereinbefore stated, and also that at such time of letting, from nine o'clock in the forenoon to five o'clock in the afternoon, the assessments for benefits to the lands comprised within the "Bakewell Tile Drain Special Assessment District" will be subject to review, and you, and each of you, owners of and persons interested in the aforesaid lands, are cited to appear at the time and place of said letting as aforesaid, and be heard with respect to such special assessments and your interests therein, and to show cause, if you so desire, why said assessments should not be levied. Dated this 22nd day of May, A. D. 1911. JAMES GRANT, County Drain Commissioner of the County of Wayne.

MEASURES FOR CONTROLLING HARMFUL GRAPE-ROOT WORM

Special Investigation Made by Bureau of Entomology at Washington—Spraying With Arsenical Poison Is Recommended.

During the last 10 or 15 years the grape-root worm has attracted much attention on account of ravages in vineyards in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York. American varieties of grapes had been rather free from insect attacks on the roots up to that time, but the grape-root worm is now recognized as the most serious of the insects that feed on our grapes. A special investigation by the bureau of entomology at Washington has been made the subject of a report, bulletin No. 89, from which the following extracts are made:

After discussing the vineyard conditions, remedial measures tested and various field experiments to control the pest, the report recommends spraying the vines with an arsenical poison when the beetles feed on the foliage. They feed much more freely immediately after emergence from the ground than later on, hence the advisability of spraying promptly. A sharp lookout should, therefore, be kept from the middle of June forward. If pupae are found in the soil the beetles may be expected to emerge within a week or ten days. The formula recommended consists of arsenate of lead three pounds to 50 gallons Bordeaux, the 5-5 formula.

When pupae are discovered the soil beneath the trellis should be removed by the horse hoe and carefully and thoroughly stirred with the hand hoe.

Larva (Enlarged).

The efficiency of this method may be increased by throwing up a ridge of earth beneath the trellis during the last cultivation preceding summer to encourage the worms to form their pupal cells above the roots of the vine, and thus admit destruction by cultivation without serious injury to the vine roots. No experiments with oil, carbon disulphide, fertilizers, salt, etc., have been found effective in controlling the pest while in the ground, and no spray has been of use in destroying the eggs because these are protected by the bark.

The third season generally exhibits serious, permanent infestation because the vines have by that time grown somewhat rough, and there are crevices in which the females may lay. When the vines in a producing vineyard have been badly injured they may frequently be renovated by cutting back to the ground, so the limited vitality may be devoted to making vegetable growth. A heavy application of fertilizer may be made, the vines thoroughly sprayed when the beetles appear, and thorough cultivation maintained throughout the season.

Where a vineyard is destroyed for any reason the land should be devoted to some other crop than grapes for at least one year prior to setting grapes on the land again. In other words, new vineyards should be set on new land and newly planted vines should be kept as thrifty as possible between planting and the bearing of the first crop fruit. During this time each summer the vineyardist should keep a sharp lookout for beetles. When these are numerous they skeletonize the leaves, and this greatly retards the growth of the plant.

NUT-BEARING TREES BEST

Worthy of Attention of All Farmers and in Many Cases They Will be Found Profitable to Grower.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Nut trees are worthy the attention of all farmers and in many cases they will be found profitable to the grower and easy to get started.

Black walnut, chestnut, hickory and butter-nut trees are propagated by gathering the nuts in the fall before they have become dry and planting in April in nicely prepared ground as deep as the diameter of the nut, either where they are to grow or in a row in the garden—in the latter case they should be taken up the first winter and buried beyond the power of the frost.

If one half of the top roots are pruned before setting the young trees the lateral roots will put forth a more vigorous growth and the trees are more sure to make a good, healthy growth.

It is to be hoped that these kind of trees will receive more attention in the future than they have in the past as there are few farms that do not have fence rows or waste lands that could be made useful by planting to some variety of nut-bearing trees.

Burbank Cantaloupe.

Hal B. Fullerton of the Long Island experimental farm says the much-lauded Burbank cantaloupe creation turned out to be a fuzzy, slim, elongated curiosity, rather pointed at the blossom end, flat and insipid in flavor, somewhat like a cross between a raw citron and a squash.

Old Pear Trees.

There are pear trees now in the vicinity of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, supposed to have been growing at the time of the Revolution, and which are in good healthy condition; and numerous ones which, evidently, have passed 75 years.

Backache Means Dying Kidneys

How You May Cure Yourself Quickly and Thoroughly.

Every man and woman should know that backache is usually a well-defined symptom of advancing kidney disease which may end finally unless treated in time; that rheumatism and bladder trouble are caused from nothing more nor less than kidneys that do not filter the poison from the blood.

Once they are made to work properly, these diseases should quickly disappear. This is done by the new treatment, Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills. We urge everyone who has pain in the small of the back, profuse or scanty urination, pains in the bladder, cloudy or foul urine, not to fail to get a package today of Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills, and drop all other kidney treatments. Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills are now sold at all drug stores—25 and 50 cents, or direct from Derby Medicine Co., Eaton Rapids, Mich. If you would like to try them first, ask your druggist for a free sample package. Then buy a package; you will not regret it.

Some Antique Mugs.

The college collector of antiques stopped off at Bacon Ridge. "Good day, sir," he said, addressing the postmaster. "I am collecting old-fashioned articles and would like to know if I could find anything like that in his hamlet. Say antique mugs, for instance." Uncle Jason stroked his chin whiskers.

"Antique mugs! By heh, I know the very place where there be two of them now."

"You do? Here's a good cigar. Now where can I find these antique mugs?"

"Why, down on Main street, in Hiram Spruceby's shop. Grandad Wheatley and Pap Simmons are in there getting shaved, and by heh, when it comes to antique mugs, I reckon there's be the oldest in the country, stranger."

Age of Oysters.

Oysters grow only during the summer and especially during the long, warm summers at that, and are scarcely big enough for the mouth before the third year. It is easy after looking over a bunch of shells to tell how old an oyster is. A summer hump and the winter sink come across the shell every year, but after the seventh or tenth year full growth comes; then, by looking at the sinks between the humps it is hard to tell anything more about Miss Oyster's age. Oysters live to be 20 years old.

Fine Scheme.

Wife—Please match this piece of silk for me before you come home. Husband—At the counter where the sweet little blonde works? The one with the soulful eyes, and— Wife—No. You're too tired to shop for me when your day's work is done, dear. On second thought, I won't bother you.

Made It Necessary.

"Horace Greeley invented the typewriter." "Where did you get that idea?" "Well, that isn't exactly what I mean, but his handwriting was probably more responsible for it than any other one thing."

Too Much Like Work.

"The boss's son is kicking." "Why?" "Says he's overworked. All he used to do was tear the pages off the office calendars once a month. Now he has to wind the eight-day clock, too."

If you want a thing well done, do it yourself.—Wellington.

SETTING A HIGH STANDARD

Child's Idea of Goodness Set Forth in Perfect Faith, Without Irreverence.

All things are relative, and to the child, gazing at life and its wonders with eyes as yet undimmed by sophistication or sorrow, nothing is impossible, nothing unspeakable, nothing too sacred to be discussed or too difficult to be attempted. Not irreverence nor impertinence, but innocence prompts such speeches as that recorded of the child of a popular journalist by his devoted paternal grandmother.

"Grandma," said the little boy, delightfully addressing her, "do you know what's going to happen? Papa says that if we're real, real good, he'll take us to the circus?"

"That's nice," smiled the young-hearted adult between whom and the eager youngster no hint of age separation mars perfect comradeship. "How good do we have to be?"

The embryo man, after a moment of silent consideration: "Oh, as good as God, I guess!"

Socially Launched.

In his native town Jimmy had always been most popular with young and old, but when he was sent away to boarding school, he was for a time too homesick to make friends. His first letter was little more than a wail.

"I'm way behind the other boys in everything," he wrote, dolefully. "Tisn't only studies, but it's gymnasium and banjos and everything. I don't believe they'll ever have much use for me."

But the second letter, written after a week in the new school, was quite different in tone.

"I'm all right," he wrote to his mother. "The boys say they'll teach me all they know, for they're proud to have me here. I can stretch my mouth half an inch wider than any other boy in school, and my feet are the longest by a full inch. So you needn't worry about me any more."—Youth's Companion.

Had His Troubles.

"Michael Dolan, an' is it yourself?" "Yes; sure it is."

"Well, ye know that blitherin' spalpeen, Widdy Castigan's second husband?"

"That I do."

"He bet me a bob to a pint of whisky I couldn't swally an egg without breakin' the shell uv it."

"An' ye did it?"

"I did."

"Then phwat's allin' ye?"

"It's doon there," laying his hand on the lower part of his waist coat, "if I jump about I'll break it, and cut me stomach wid the shell, an' if I kape quiet it'll hatch and I'll have a Shanghai rooster scratchin' me inside."

Well Mated.

Thus the inquisitive boarder: "What has become of the old-fashioned woman who used to call a wedding reception an infare?"

Response by the white-haired boarder: "I think she married the old-fashioned man who used to crack his knuckles regularly twice a day."

Ambiguous.

Obliging Shopman (to lady who has purchased a pound of butter)—Shall I send it for you, madam?

Lady—No, thank you. It won't be too heavy for me.

Obliging Shopman—Oh, no, madam, I'll make it as light as I possibly can.—Punch.

The Riddle.

The Sphinx propounded a puzzle. "Why does it always rain the day you move?" she asked. Herewith the ancients gave it up.

A woman's idea of a brave man is one who isn't afraid to go into a dark closet in which there may be a mouse.

LOST FAITH IN WHITE MAN

Eskimo Tested Efficacy of Telephone Scheme, and Realized He Had Been Deceived.

An interesting story is told regarding the efforts of an Eskimo to construct a telephone line. The Eskimo came into possession of a piece of wire of considerable length and never having seen wire before he asked Professor McMillan of the Peary north pole expedition what it was and what it was for. He was told that the white man strung it on poles stuck in the ground and a voice talking to an instrument at one end could be heard at the other end. After some search the next morning the Eskimo was found to be engaged in telephone construction work of his own. He stuck some sticks in the ground and hung his wire on them. He held one end of the wire to his mouth and talked to it at the top of his voice. Then he ran as fast as he could to the other end and held the wire to his ear with the expectation of hearing his own words repeated.

When he failed to hear any sounds the expression on his face revealed his opinion of his white friend.

To the Childish Mind. Dorothy Ullman of E. Eighty-fourth street, is a very literal young person. To her mother's definition of the All-Seeing Eye she returned a question as to the size of the eye.

"Can God see everything?" she continued.

"Yes, dear, he can see everything, at all times."

That afternoon Dorothy escorted her mother down town. Before an optician's display she stopped. Then, "Mother," she asked, pointing to the big blinking eye in the window "Is God's eye as big as this?"—Cleveland Leader.

Very Much Attached. Swenson—Why do you always hear a ship referred to as "she"?" Benson—I guess it is because she sometimes becomes very much attached to a buoy.

When a girl yawns it's up to the young man to get in the home stretch.

EXPERIENCE.

Teacher—Tommy, what is a coquette?

Tommy—It's a thing you make out of what's left of the stewed chicken.

A Question of Change. A story is going the rounds of a couple of young people who attended church recently. When the collection was being taken up the young man commenced fishing in his pocket for a dime. His face expressed his embarrassment as he hoarsely whispered: "I guess I haven't a cent. I changed my pants." The young lady, who had been examining the unknown regions of woman's dress for her purse, turned a pink color, and said: "I'm in the same fix."

Difficult to Answer. Explaining the happenings of the sixth day of the creation, Miss Frances Hartz read to her Sabbath school class: "And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground."

"Well," spoke up one kid, "that's nothin' new. Did he put him in the sun to dry, the way we do our mud pies?"

Miss Hartz discreetly slurred the answer and proceeded with her lesson.—Cleveland Leader.

The expectation of being pleased which prevails so much in young persons is one great source of their enjoyments.—Bowdler.

EXCELLENT HOUSE FOR SWINE

The hog house shown in the illustration is planned after the type used by Prof. Dietrich at the Illinois University farm. It is so constructed as to admit the greatest possible amount of sunlight directly into the pens and upon the floors during the season when it is most desired that it should reach these places and also so that it may be kept cool and comfortable during the summer heat. For the latter purpose shades may be drawn over the open upper windows and the concrete floors sprinkled with cool water during the greatest heat of the day. The roof should project far enough at the eaves so that the lower windows are shaded by it when the sun is high on summer days. By keeping the doors open an air current may be kept passing in at the lower part of the house and going out at the top through the shaded windows which should be open from the top. The use of net wire partitions between the pens and along the alleys aids materially in perfecting this current which would be more or less obstructed by solid board or plank structures.

In planning a house of the foregoing type the dimensions should first be determined especially with regard to its width as the height of the windows must be adjusted accordingly to have the maximum amount of sunlight fall upon the floors of the pens at the proper time. The latitude of the locality should also be taken into consideration in determining the height at which the windows must be placed to get the desired results after the width of the building has been determined.

Evergreen Windbreak.

A windbreak of evergreens is valuable in many ways, and has no drawback if not set so close to the house as to shut off breezes in summer, or to shed leaves upon the lawn and kill out the grass. At the proper distance it is both attractive and useful. It keeps off the cold winds from the house so that we scarcely realize how much wind is blowing beyond the hedge. When set near the barn it is a valuable shelter for stock. The cows when turned out, quickly seek the protection of the evergreens.

Wisteria Leaves.

The tender leaves of the Wisteria are largely used in China for food. The bark is used for making clothes, ropes and sandals.

Gas From Tree.

The cottonwood tree is rich with gas and experiments are being conducted with the view of extracting it and burning it from a holder.

Can't Get Away From It

Is it possible to nourish, strengthen and Rebuild the Brain by Food?

Every man who thinks uses up part of the brain each day. Why don't it all disappear and leave an empty skull in say a month of brain work? Because the man rebuilds each day.

If he builds a little less than he destroys, brain fog and nervous prostration result sure. If he builds back a little more each day, the brain grows stronger and more capable. That also is sure. Where does man get the material to rebuild his brain? Is it from air, sky or the ice of the Arctic sea? When you come to think about it, the rebuilding material must be in the food and drink.

That also is sure.

Are the brain rebuilding materials found in all food? In a good variety but not in suitable proportion in all.

To illustrate: we know bones are made largely of lime and magnesia taken from food; therefore to make healthy bone structure we must have food containing these things. We would hardly feed only sugar and fat to make healthy bone structure in a growing child.

Likewise if we would feed in a skillful manner to insure getting what the brain requires for strength and rebuilding, we must first know what the brain is composed of and then select some article or articles (there are more than one) that contain these elements.

Analysis of brain by an unquestionable authority, Geoghegan, shows of Mineral Salts, Phosphoric Acid and Potash combined (Phosphate of Potash) 2.91 per cent of the total, 5.33 of all mineral Salts.

This is over one-half!

Beaunis, another authority, shows "Phosphoric Acid combined" and Potash 73.44 per cent from a total of 101.07.

Considerable more than one-half of Phosphate of Potash.

Analysis of Grape-Nuts shows: Potassium and Phosphorus (which join and make Phosphate of Potash) is considerable more than one-half of all the mineral salts in the food.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey, an authority on the constituent elements of the body, says: "The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, Potassium Phosphate (Phosphate of Potash). This salt unites with albumen and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve fluid or the gray matter of the brain. Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve fluid, but Potassium Phosphate is the chief factor and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life."

Further on he says: "The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

The natural conclusion is that if Phosphate of Potash is the needed mineral element in brain and you use food which does not contain it, you have brain fog because its daily loss is not supplied.

On the contrary, if you eat food known to be rich in this element, you place before the life forces that which nature demands for brain-building.

Mind does not work well on a brain that is broken down by lack of nourishment.

A peaceful and evenly poised mind is necessary to good digestion.

Worry, anxiety, fear, hate, etc., etc., directly interfere with or stop the flow of Ptyalin, the digestive juice of the mouth, and also interfere with the flow of the digestive juices of stomach and pancreas.

Therefore, the mental state of the individual has much to do (more than suspected) with digestion.

Brain is made of Phosphate of Potash and the Principal Mineral Salt, added to albumen and water.

Grape-Nuts contain that element as more than one-half of all its mineral salts.

A healthy brain is important, if one would "do things" in this world.

A man who sneers at "Mind" sneers at the best and least understood part of himself. That part which some folks believe links us to the Infinite.

Mind asks for a healthy brain upon which to act, and Nature has defined a way to make a healthy brain and renew it day by day as it is used up from work of the previous day.

Nature's way to rebuild is by the use of food which supplies the things required. Brain rebuilding material is certainly found in

Grape-Nuts

TALES OF GOTHAM AND OTHER CITIES

ARMY OF 250,000 TOILS AT NIGHT

NEW YORK.—With an army, conservatively estimated at a quarter of a million of workers who are employed partly or wholly at night, New York city is fast becoming as busy industrially and economically between the hours of 7:00 p. m. and 7:00 a. m. as are other cities during the hours that from time immemorial have been dedicated to labor.

The glitter, the glimmer and the glamor of the "Gay White Way" and its environs must, from their very noise and brilliancy, attract attention to the exclusion of all other considerations, after the sun goes down and the myriad imitation suns come up.

But that quarter million of workers is there—not so accessible, not so easily stumbled upon, and far less noisy. It is hard to complete an accurate list of all those occupations which are carried on at night. But here is a list which gives an idea of the enormous number of people who earn their bread in a manner that our staid forefathers would have considered "outlandish."

Milkmen, postoffice employees, policemen, firemen, railway employees, employees on the surface, elevated and subway lines, night watchmen, waiters and cashiers in the all-night "haah houses;" then comes that other class of waiters and attendants in the fashionable restaurants, who only begin to bustle about at night; newspaper men, printers, telegraph operators, bar tenders, hotel clerks, bell boys and the "raft" of other hotel employees; hackmen, chauffeurs, all-night dentists, physicians, surgeons, barbers, cigar store clerks, drug store employees, telephone girls, newsboys, newspaper dealers, actors and actresses, crews of the ferry boats, certain sorts of structural workers, tunnel workers, musicians, nurses; there is a small army of men and women who enter the big department stores after they have closed for the night, and work the night long cleaning and fixing them up ship-shape for the next day's trade.

waiter can get as much as $10 a day, but other times it runs nearer $5. But it isn't so much getting the tips as saving them that counts.

Rehm did not disclose the amount of his savings, but he admitted he had three summer cottages in Michigan, another cottage in Edgewater besides the one in which he lives, and some city bonds.

"I am forty-six years old now," he said, "and when I reach fifty I expect to be in a position to retire. I put my money in bonds because they pay better interest than a savings account. We can live on about $1,000 a year because we own our own home.

"I figure it will take about $1,500 for the European trip, but I won't estimate it too closely; and I will enjoy it whatever it costs.

GIVEN RIGHT TO SPANK HIS WIFE

ST. LOUIS.—On Fourth of July, at harvest home dinners, when a new railroad is completed, or a canal is dug, or a new mayor inaugurated, florid-faced men get up and talk eloquently of the nation's great progress.

"We are living in an age of marvelous deeds," they exclaim, and we are, for in St. Louis a jury found that a man had the right to spank his wife.

Rebecca Yowell, the mother of six children, sued Jacob Yowell for a divorce, charging that he spanked her. He confessed to the crime, but claimed as a mitigating circumstance that she talked from ten one night till two the next morning, and he couldn't sleep.

Mr. Yowell did not tell the court what she talked about and the court didn't ask. Had there been a woman judge and jury at the trial Mrs. Yowell's reasons for talking four hours at a stretch would have been made known. But this is sure: Those four hours were not devoted to singing Mr. Yowell's praise.

Time flies rapidly when one is hearing compliments; in no other circumstance does time fly so fast, and had Mrs. Yowell been praising her husband there would have been no spanking.

She talked four hours. That wasn't long if she had chosen the right subject. But she talked of the six children, the house, the hard work, the growing needs of a growing family, and in that particular she did wrong.

For the more she talked, the angrier he grew. Had she spent those four hours in a lullaby of his praise he would have dropped off to a sweet sleep and handed her his pocketbook next morning.

Every man who complains that his wife talks too much makes the admission that her soliloquy isn't a song of praise.

WILL ENFORCE DRASTIC GAMING LAW

MONTCLAIR, N. J.—The open season for bridge whist and poker ended here when a committee of prominent clergymen called upon Recorder Henry L. Yoat and requested that the provisions of the air-tight state gambling law of 1936 be put in force at once.

Lawyers say the New Jersey gambling law is one of the most sweeping ever put on a statute book. Its three sections include every form of dallying with chance. Poker players, suchre players or shakers of dice for drinks may be sent to prison.

"What's this I hear about putting an end to bridge?" a lawyer asked the police chief. "My wife has arranged for a bridge whist party to night, but I'll call it off if there's any danger of a raid."

The chief's proxy hurriedly consulted a copy of the gambling law and then advised that the bridge party be called off.

Bridge has taken a strong hold on Montclair, with high play as a result. A young Montclair woman, prominent socially, was invited recently to an afternoon tea. Bridge was proposed, almost as a matter of course. No money was staked, counters being used. The girl plunged. When play was ended the girl was informed calmly by her hostess, "I find by the counters that you owe me $40."

"Why! I didn't know we were playing for money," gasped the amazed and then deeply mortified girl. But the hostess persisted in her claim, and the girl handed over a brooch as security. At home she confided in her father, a New York lawyer. He called up the winner on the phone.

"Kindly return my daughter's brooch within 24 hours," he said. The brooch was sent back within an hour, without bill or comment.

FIND STATUE OF HERCULES

Piece of Sculpture Twenty-Two Centuries Old Is Recovered in London.

London.—Buried in a jungle of merchandise in a city warehouse for over fifteen years the famous marble statue, the "Guarnacci Hercules," reputed by competent experts to be twenty-two centuries old, has once more been resurrected and transferred to Earl's Court, where it will constitute one of the numerous interesting attractions of the ancient art exhibition to be held there this summer. Attributed to Lysippus of Sicyone, or one of his pupils, this ancient marble has had a remarkable history. It is supposed to have come into being in the fourth century B. C. With the fall of the Eternal City, it lay buried for centuries until during the pontificate of Clement XI, 1700-1721, it was resurrected between the slopes of the Aventine and Palatine hills. Sometime in the early seventies it was purchased by an Italian art dealer in London and exhibited by him at his showroom in Regent street. The damage which Hercules sustained through the fall of Rome was as nothing to that which it suffered during its return trip from Paris to London after the close of the exhibition of 1878, where it was shown. At the docks Hercules's right leg was found amputated and the massive right hand separated from its wrist. The cunning of the Grecian chisel is seen in every detail.

SANITARY CUPS END PERIL

Home-Made Cup by Which Pupils Can Drink Without Touching Germs.

Chicago.—Children in a dozen schools have been taught how to construct a paper drinking cup which is in every way serviceable and which does away with danger of contagion through use of a common drinking utensil.

The cup is constructed from a sheet of paper about eight inches square. A unique method of folding provides a cup that may be collapsed or extended at will.

The simple directions are as follows: Secure a sheet of paper about eight or ten inches square. Fold it in the middle from corner A to corner B (Fig. 1 and 2). Next take the upper-most free corners, J and K, and fold down on each side to about one-third of the distance between top and bottom (Fig. 3). Next take the free corner A and bring it almost to D, and fold the paper at C E (Fig. 4). Then take up the free corner K and insert it into the exposed fold between A and C. Now take the free corner B and bring it to C on the other side of the paper, tucking the free corner J into the exposed fold, D B, on that side (Fig. 5). Open the center, press in the bottom to give the structure rigidity, and fill with water.

It can be used six or seven times at least, and some pupils have employed the same cup for a week.

Any sort of tablet paper may be used, but it has been found that an oiled paper or a foolscap with gase lasts the longest.

KIDNEY CHILLS AND BACKACHE

If, when you get wet or take cold, it "settles on the kidneys" and there is a shivery, chilly sensation in the back, it shows kidney weakness which is often the beginning of serious disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used persistently until the backache and other symptoms disappear.

C. D. Kessler, 408 E. 5th St., Mendota, Ill., says: "Kidney trouble came on me about 20 years ago and became so bad I was unable to work for weeks. I was thin, worn out and nervous; the doctors admitted they could not help me and my friends expected me to die. As a last hope I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and shortly after passed a gravel stone. Later on several more stones passed and from then on I improved until cured."

Husband Who Had "Married Money" Acknowledged the Truth to His Friends's Query.

Apropos of a beautiful young wife, worth $40,000,000, who had just divorced her penniless husband in order to marry again, Henry E. Dixey, the comedian, said at a dinner in New York:

"The young man who marries for money has none too easy a time of it. His rich wife is likely to tire of him and throw him out in a few years, or else she is likely to limit his allowance to 25 or 50 cents a day.

"I married money," a man once said to me.

"Wasn't there a woman attached to it?" I asked.

"Yes, you bet there was," he exploded. "So much attached to it that she never parted with a penny."

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON BABY

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, thick, and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. The doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She would scratch, as it itched, and she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. One day I saw in the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of sores.

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference. In color it was redder. I continued with them. My baby was in a terrible condition. I used the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) four times a day, and in two weeks she was quite well. The Cuticura Remedies healed her skin perfectly, and her skin is now pretty and fine through using them. I also use the Cuticura Soap today, and will continue to, for it makes a lovely skin. Every mother should use the Cuticura Remedies. They are good for all sores, and the Cuticura Soap is also good for shampooing the hair, for I have tried it. I tell all my friends how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my baby of eczema and rash." (Signed) Mrs. Drew, 210 W. 18th St., New York city, Aug. 26, 1910.

"Are what?" said Binks.

"Kicking the Bucket."

When we speak facetiously of some one for whom we have no reverence as having "kicked the bucket," we employ a phrase that would seem to be a piece of latter-day slang, but as a matter of fact, it dates back to old England, when, about the year 1725, one Bolsover hung himself to a beam while standing on the bottom of a bucket, and then kicked the bucket away. Although at first used only in cases of suicide, it has been applied in the course of years to any death, without distinction.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATOR, 61 N. Ex-Convict James Grant

"Master Grant was sick," announced Paul, the Swiss man-of-all-work at No. 19, one winter morning to the breakfast table.

James Grant—in the opinion of No. 19—was a curmudgeon. He seldom spoke; certainly he never invaded the drawing room. In fact, he seemed to shun his fellow mortals.

And now he was ill! Madame was worried that he should be so inconsiderate as to fall sick in her house. She went up to see him. He desired grumpily to be left alone. She thought he ought to go to a hospital. Dr. Callett was called. He said emphatically the old man should not be moved. He was too ill.

The young doctor and his old patient experienced a strange attraction for each other. They had discovered that both were colonial born—Sidney'siders. At the close of three weeks of personal and professional association James Grant had on this certain afternoon told the story of his life to Dr. Callett, who had returned home a victim to the most conflicting emotions.

Over 20 years before Grant and his wife were living together with their eight-year-old son on the Paramatta. His business failed, and sending his family to Melbourne he went prospecting for gold. He and his mate quarreled, and when the latter tried to kill him he, Grant, was the quicker, and killed his mate. It was self defense, but there were no witnesses. Solitude and remorse so worked upon him that he gave himself up and was given 20 years penal servitude under the name of Grant.

"I've been free for more than a year," he said. "The money I had banked amounted to a considerable sum. I do not want. I've tried hard to find my wife and son, but without avail. My real name is James Grant Herron."

The old man laid back on the pillows and Dr. Callett Herron slipped from the room to his office. He was about to be married. Would she consent to wed the son of a convict? She must be told all about it. He sought her out, and pacing up and down with averted face told her all. But it made no difference to her. She was true blue. Insisted he should acknowledge his father. Would not marry him if he didn't. Providence had brought the doctor and his father together and this should not be nullified. Together they went to No. 19, where the old man's dearest wish that he might see and know his son was gratified.

"Ah! liddle," the old man faltered out at last, "I can understand your hesitation to call a worthless old fellow father. That sweetheart of yours has a heart of gold. Fetch her up, boy—I'd like to see her, if she will come."

His son obeyed him, and presently the girl entered the room. Crouching to the bed, without hesitation, she took one of the invalid's hands in her own; then, impulsively she bent and kissed him on the forehead. The grim old eyes softened. "God bless you, my dear," he murmured. "In the prison chapel on Sunday we used to sing 'Now Let Thy Servant Depart in Peace.' I begin to understand what that means."

He watched them smilingly when, after a while, they left the room together; then the invalid lay back with a deep sigh. Yes, he had seen his boy again! And the solution! It was in his own hands—what was it his boy, the doctor, had told him? He must keep warm, avoid chills—keep very warm.

Slowly and painfully at midnight the sick old man struggled from his bed and tottered to the little window. Opening it wide with difficulty, he bared his breast and leaned shivering across the sill, inhaling the chill December night air with short, choking gasps.

Next morning Paul, the man-of-all-work, coming to attend the fire, found James Grant stretched unconscious by his bedside and the room cold and bleak. Dr. Callett was summoned in haste.

Just before he died the old man had a flicker of consciousness. Finding his boy bending over him, he smiled contentedly.

So Dr. Callett Herron and his wife had the secret to themselves. And they never disclosed it to the doctor's stepfather (also himself Dr. Callett) and his sister Vi.

In Plaster Cast Five Years. After being incased in a plaster cast from shoulders to feet for five years, Annie Horan, twelve years old, is now one of the happiest pupils in public school No. 27.

When the little girl entered the hospital of the Society for the Relief of Crippled Children, more than five years ago, she was paralyzed and practically dead from her waist down. While there she was the special care of Dr. Virgil P. Gibney, the surgeon in chief, to whom she owes it that, although she must use crutches, she has control of the muscles and the tendons that five years ago were inert and useless.

The Explicit Declaration.

"Did you manage to get a positive statement from that eminent statesman?"

"I did," replied the interviewer.

"What was it?"

"A positive statement that he would not make any statement whatsoever."

Their Gift

"I suppose," Ardella said at last, "we must send her something!"

"Yes," said her sister in a similar tone. "I suppose so!"

Ardella still held the big creamy square which informed them in the most expensive of shaded old English lettering that Susanne Gish White had become the bride of Raymond Arthur Linscome. Susanne's father was their cousin and although they had not seen him for many years they kept track of him through the newspapers. John Gish White was a man who did things and the people he did usually objected violently in public print. Cousin Ardella and Cousin Annie were shocked at and yet secretly proud of their famous relative. Susanne herself they had not seen since she was a doll-like wonder of ten, because since then she had been in finishing schools or in Europe.

"Well," said Ardella, "what'll we send?"

There was a wrinkle of worry on her brow. She wore her gray hair banded down from a central parting and was addicted to black dresses, with a bit of white tating at the neck.

"Well, what do you think?" queried her sister, who looked just like Ardella but had fewer ideas.

"It can't be anything expensive, of course," Ardella said, with a little sigh. "Still, the cost doesn't so much matter, and I've no doubt John has seen to it that Susie has everything she really needs to start housekeeping. You might send her something ornamental. I remember when John was married and they started housekeeping the place looked so bare because they were too poor to buy bric-a-brac and pictures. Bric-a-brac is something you don't have to have and so are always glad to get."

"Rendall's has some new stuff in," offered Annie with a burst of brightness. "I saw them unwrapping some real pretty vases and lamps as I went by to the postoffice. I expect they cost a lot."

"She's Cousin John's girl!" rebuked Ardella a trifle sternly. "It'd look queer if his own relatives didn't step forward and do the right thing! I shall take the chicken money!"

Annie gasped. The chicken money, which was carefully saved during the year, always went to buy their spring bonnets, and the china pig in which it was kept was very heavy and ready to be opened. And they needed few bonnets if anybody in town did.

"Oh, we'll get them somehow!" Ardella promised recklessly as she saw her sister's face. "Besides, who notices what we have on our heads? We're more than 16."

"The ribbon's been turned twice on mine," her sister said. "Then she added hastily: 'But of course you're right! It doesn't make any difference, and Susie might feel hurt if we forgot her!'"

They went downtown to Rendall's store the next day to pick out the presents and had all the sensations of being wildly extravagant as they found themselves surrounded by the glories of his new stock just in for the spring trade. The shelves were brilliant and glittering.

Finally, after eliminating the banquet lamp that was $15 and the cut glass punch bowl that the agent had promised Rendall he could return if he didn't sell it, as he vowed he never could in that town, there was left a chop plate and a vase. Putting them on a table, they sat down and looked them over.

"I like the plate," said Ardella, "because the roses on it are so bright and warm looking! Any kind of meat'd taste good off it! 'But the vase—'"

"The vase is powerful pretty," agreed Annie, "with all them trees and hills and the river on it and the cows on the bank. I expect she has lots of places she could put that vase!"

But finally they sent the chop plate. Rendall promised to peck it for them. It glittered with its gilt edge and red roses and every time they remembered it they felt justified in the extravagant sum they had spent for it. There was only 60 cents left in the china pig.

The box was awaiting the bridal couple on their return from the south together with other belated packages piled up on the carved library table in the $300 month apartment. Susanne had carte blanche in furnishing it. She and her husband pounced on the parcels with great glee and the color rose in her cheeks as a solid silver tray, a valuable painting and a Persian rug were revealed. Raymond Arthur Linscome, as he looked at her, reflected again that his wife was the prettiest girl he had ever seen.

"What on earth is that?" Susanne cried, as he pried open the last box and drew forth the gilt chop dish, with its bright red roses. She reached for it, her clutch failed and the dish dropping to the hardwood floor, crashed into bits.

"Well," said the bride, as she surveyed the wreck, "to tell the truth, I'm glad of it, because it was the most impossible thing I ever hope to see. Wasn't that a card?"

Miss Ardella and Miss Annie Gish, the bridegroom read from the penciled pasteboard he had picked up.

"Who are they?"

"My goodness!" said Susanne, finding her hair as she looked in the mirror. "I wonder how they happened to send anything. Oh, they're some relatives of father's up in the country! Did you say you had telephoned for theater seats for tonight?"

EASY WORK FOR GIRLS

GENTLE ART OF DRESSMAKING SHOULD BE ACQUIRED.

Helps Maidens to Add to Wardrobe When Economy is a Necessity—Materials Never Cheaper, More Varied or Tempting.

Many a young girl frets because she has not as many frocks of the dressy sort as she needs, but it seems to occur to few of these maidens that acquiring the gentle art of dressmaking would help them toward the goal of their desire. Girls say openly that they do not like to sew, but never was there greater foolishness, for smart dressing is the order of the day and, if there is not enough money to get all the things needed in any other manner, the cult of needle and thread is in a way obligatory. In every shop there are marvelous aids to home dressmaking, the body forms that can be bought in any size, cheap paper models in the latest styles, hooks and eyes already sewed to a tape for putting on, in many places, waist and skirt linings already shaped. Then look at the materials—was ever loveliness, the sort of simple daintiness a young girl needs, cheaper, more varied, more tempting?

For the fixy frocks a girl wants for semi-gala wear, hot summer afternoons perhaps when with a party of youthful companions on some frolic or other, I would advise the young buyer, or the mother who does the purchasing, to consider the cotton voles.

For still dressier frocks there are chiffons from thirty-five cents up, these suggesting veillings for old evening gowns not good enough to make over without other material, while on every counter there are remnants of black and white or colored silk which are just the thing for the skirt bands still used, and for the slight bit of decking employed on the bodice.

Our illustration offers ideas for materials ranging from the simplest to the smartest day textures and with the addition of some trimming for the skirt the style could even be used for evening. The model is in two pieces, again the inevitable kimono waist and a little plain skirt with the front breadth plaited over with twelve small silk covered buttons, put on in clusters of three. A pretty Cluny lace is used for the yoke and undersleeves and a bit of silk girdles the waist.

Now as to a fixy material for this frock, yet one that would do for day use, the cotton voles are just the thing, a little striped silk would be delightful veiling and marquisette are proper.

But, say, a black and white voile is used. If so be sure and put a piping of cherry silk around the yoke and cuffs and get a thinner and cheaper lace than Cluny—any all-over lace net would do. With a voile in any color the cherry touch is feasible, and the glint of bright red seems to be needed for the dark blue things especially.

Made according to the rear view of the design, all the cotton- and linen materials offered for tailored effects are correct textures.

As can be seen, all of these frocks have short sleeves, all are collarless, all show flat trimmings, which points are in favor of home dressmaking, for high stocks and long sleeves are much harder to fit and the more a trimming is complicated the more one frets and fumes. So, all things said and done, it is quite reasonable to expect a girl to make any one of these frocks after a few lessons in cutting and sewing, and make it quickly at that. In fact, I know a maid of seventeen who turned out the design shown in two days and a neat job she made of it too.

So go on with the sewing lesson—remember that a girl must have a lot of frocks nowadays.

CHURCHES JOIN IN CONVENTION

Problems of Church Unity May Be Solved by Young People.

WILL DISREGARD DIFFERENCES

Greatest Young People's Convention Ever Held in Michigan Will Open Thursday, June 22—Hundreds of Young People From Every Part of State Planning to Attend.

FEATURES OF UNITY.
The Episcopalian cathedral will be one of the convention churches. Dean Marquis of the cathedral will speak twice. Prominent Methodists and Baptists are on the program. The hearty co-operation among all denominations in Detroit fosters spirit of unity.

Never in the history of Young People's conventions in Michigan has there been one quite so unique as the one to be held in Detroit, June 22-25. Besides the many other striking features the one that commands our attention immediately in this day of "Church Unity" discussion is the extremely interdenominational basis of the convention. The Detroit convention committee is made up of men and women representing most prominent denominations in young people's work. One of the convention churches is the Episcopalian St. Paul's cathedral. The speakers chosen are among the most prominent men of the same communions. All of the plans are made with the definite purpose that young people will attend the convention irrespective of denomination, but with the one determination to do the most good and get the most good possible.

And why should it not be so? Why should we older people try to reproduce in our children sectarian differences which, though they were vital to us and our forefathers, have become meaningless today? Why not encourage our young people to be Christians first and then to be Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists or what not afterwards? The great tasks that challenge the Christian church today demand a spirit of unity hitherto unknown. We who are so far removed from the frontier of Christian conflict are doing well to follow in the footsteps of those who out there are so bravely upholding the standard of the Christ. But we are following with very uncertain tread, not realizing that one of the chief secrets of their power is the fact of their unity in the face of a common foe. If the Christian church could only learn the secret of the power of the forces of evil and then act upon that knowledge, there would be a wonderful unifying of forces, and forgetting of differences and best of all—a triumphant victory for the right.

This idea of unity must come, if it comes at all, through its incarnation in the life of the younger generation. As long as the churches insist on perpetuating their petty differences through their Westminster league, Luther leagues, Epworth leagues or Baptist Young Peoples Unions, just so long will the cause of real Christianity be retarded in the world. The day is coming, and it is not far distant when there will be one great young people's society with one name, a branch of which will be in every church in the world. In this way the great ideal of Jesus Christ for His church, "that they may be one," will be approximated not only by the missionaries in the thick of the battle, but also by the younger generation of the world over.

It is with such an ideal in view that the Detroit convention committee is making plans for the coming convention. Every added one who attends will help on toward the glorious realization. Every member of a Christian Young People's society is welcome at the convention and is entitled to free entertainment if he presents delegate's credentials which have been properly signed. These credentials may be procured from Miss Mary R. Phinney, 107 Collingwood Ave., Detroit.

ENDEAVOR.
"What hast thou for thy scattered seed,
O sower of the plain?
Where are the many gathered sheaves
Thy hope should bring again?"
"The only record of my life
Lies in the buried grain."
"O conqueror of a thousand fields,
In dented armor dight,
What growths of purple amaranth
Shall crown thy brow of might?"
"Only the blossoms of my life Flung widely in the fight."
"What is the harvest of Thy saints,
O God, who dost abide?
Where grow the garlands of Thy chiefs
In blood and sorrow dyed?
What have Thy servants for their pains?"
"This only to be tried."
—Julia Ward Howe.

Old Canton Resident is Dead

John P. Wiest of Canton township, died last Thursday after an illness dating back a year and two months. He was born in Ulster county, N. Y., May 16, 1835, and came to Michigan with his parents in June, 1836. In 1840 the family located on the farm where Mr. Wiest had since resided, being one of the oldest settlers of the township. He was married to Mary J. Shackleton Feb. 18, 1872, and to them were born three children, two daughters and one son, who survive with the widow and one sister.

Mr. Wiest became a member of Plymouth Lodge, F. & A. M., Jan. 22, 1889, and was one of the oldest members of the Lodge. His funeral occurred under the auspices of the Lodge last Sunday afternoon from his late home, Rev. B. F. Farber conducting religious services.

Illegal Slot Machines

Certain classes of slot machines which have been constructed to avoid the provisions of the law prohibiting gambling devices are placed under the ban by the attorney-general. It is stated in the opinion that these machines which give value received, that is, five cents' worth for every nickel dropped in the slot, and occasionally give two or three times value received, come within the definition of a gambling device under the law. He also proscribes the gum machines which not only furnish a stick of gum for every cent deposited, but when a certain number appears authorizes the player to draw a cigar or two. The selling of chances on prize packages of various kinds, it is stated, is clearly within the prohibition of the lottery law.

New Mortgage Tax Law

Attorney-General Kuhn has rendered an opinion relative to the new mortgage tax law in which he points out the method by which the owners of mortgages in force at the time the act goes into effect on August 2, 1911, may bring those securities under its provision. He states that mortgages on file at that time may be presented to county treasurers in the counties in which the property covered is located and the tax of one-half of one per cent paid and then those mortgages will be considered the same as new mortgages filed after January 1, 1911, on which a filing tax of 50 cents per $100 is required. It is pointed out that the new law does not exempt mortgages now in force from the tax of this year, and those in which the filing fee provided for in the new act, is not paid, as set forth, will continue under the ad valorem system of taxation.

FOR BALD HEADS.

A Treatment that Costs Nothing if it Fails.

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy, and it should indisputably demonstrate that when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead, the follicles closed and grown over and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, and we have the right to assume that what it has done for thousands of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Wash the Blood

Aching and enfeebled muscles should remind you of slowness of tissue repair. Eruptions of the skin and catarrh of the mucous membranes show diminished nerve power in the tissues.

In health or disease there is need of an internal bath. This is best obtained by drinking a glass of pure water with one or two teaspoonfuls of SAN-JAK thirty to sixty minutes before breakfast, washing the blood. This passes quickly from the stomach and stimulates the bowels to increased peristalsis, overcoming constipation and its attendant ills. It is quickly absorbed and entering the blood stream bathes the cells of the liver and heart, then passes to the brain and washes out the cobwebs and awakens to new life every cell in the body.

SAN-JAK dilutes theropy secretions and dissolves all abnormal crystalline substances that may be in the blood and urine. SAN-JAK greatly promotes elimination, creates downward peristalsis, stimulates a flow of digestive juices. It dissolves the sticky mucous in the mouth and throat, allowing the membranes to be bathed in their natural secretions. San-Jak is the great medium of exchange in the body by enabling the kidneys to absorb and eliminate alkaline sulphates which are the products of intestinal decomposition and in renal weakness or the real cause of Bright's disease.

Man does not wear out like a piece of machinery by constant disintegration for he is self renewing. When he loses his ability to self renewal or fails in process of making young blood, the nerve tissue is not sufficiently nourished and his strength and health fail.

SAN-JAK is the only medicine which will enable you to keep a perfect balance between the elimination and renewal of the body. Decay of the body at any time of life is unnatural. Permanent waste of the system can be avoided by the use of SAN-JAK.

Rheumatism, catarrh and bladder trouble, the source of trouble to humanity, is due to a too high or low specific gravity which may be regulated to normal by taking SAN-JAK.

Swelling under the eyes, grayish white or waxy color of the skin denote granular disease of the kidneys. The cure is San-Jak.

John L. Gale,

Plymouth, who is reliable and will return the price of one bottle if San-Jak fails to do good.
