On a Dark Night

It is very distressing to have some one in the family awake with an attack of Cholera Morbus, Cramps or Dysentery and it is worse when you have to travel a mile or two for medicine. A bottle of Chamberlain's Pain-Killing Magic Oil kept in the house saves a world of trouble. It quickly checks Diarrhoea, relieves cramps and eases pain. Effective also for rheumatism, lame back, sprains, cuts or wounds. Price 25c per bottle. Sold by Pinckney's Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

LIVONIA CENTER.

Two deaths occurred in our midst in the past few days, that of Mrs. Will Sump, who passed away on Saturday, and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Smith, who was only a bud of promise and passed away a few hours after he came to gladden their hearts. Interments were made on Monday.

Mrs. Will Cort was a Clarenceville caller on Monday.

Start Now to Kill the Fly.

So completely have the house flies been exterminated in England that screens are no longer used in windows and doors. This shows what can be done. A solution of formalin or formaldehyde in water is the best and cheapest exterminator. Put a teaspoon of formalin in half a teacupful of water and expose in a saucer in your room. Try it once and you will see. Burn pyrrhtrum powder in a room and sweep out the stupefied flies. Or put 20 drops of carbolic acid on a shovel. The vapor is deadly to the pest. Put a dram of bichromate of potash in half a glass of water and sweeten. Expose a little of the solution in a saucer. Sticky fly paper also will do the work.

OBITUARY

Alma Stavehouse was born March 20, 1886, in Russia. She came to this country in her childhood, accompanying her parents. Seventeen years ago she was married to Wm. Sump of Livonia. After an illness of several weeks she passed away last Saturday, leaving a husband, a daughter and a son and one sister to mourn her loss. The funeral was held from the Livonia Center church last Monday, services being conducted by Rev. E. King.

SOIL AND WHEAT SPECIAL PLANNED

FARMERS' "SCHOOL ON WHEELS" WILL BE INTRODUCED THIS SUMMER.

TO GO SOUTHWEST IN STATE

Superintendent Taft Announces That the Train Will Be Run Two Weeks Either the Last of July or First of August.

Lansing.—An innovation in farmers' institute trains, popularly known as "schools on wheels" will be introduced this summer when a soil and wheat special will be run through the western and southern part of the state.

The institute train will consist of three to four cars, in which numerous exhibits of special interest to the farmers of this section of the state will be displayed and a number of passenger coaches, in which agricultural experts will have practical lectures on various phases of scientific and improved methods of farming.

The route all told covers approximately 1,000 miles. The route all told covers approximately 1,000 miles.

Farmers Won't Boycott Detroit.

Nathan P. Hull of Dimondale, master of the state grange, in a letter to the State Fair society denies that he and the grange will use their influence to line up the farmers against the fair because of the attitude of a number of Detroit business men, in favor of reciprocity.

The story intimated that if Detroit sent a delegation to the capital to work in the interest of reciprocity the grange would urge the farmers to keep away from Detroit.

My attention has been called to statements that have recently appeared in a number of newspapers that the grange would use its influence to keep the farmers of Michigan from our state fair in an attempt to spite Detroit.

The various state hospitals and asylums reported deaths as follows: Traverse City, 17; Kalamazoo, 24; Pontiac, 13; Soldiers' home, 19; Lapeer, 2; Newberry, 4; Wayne county, 22.

Judge Lindsey Praises Michigan.

That Michigan is the most progressive state and Detroit the most progressive city in the Union was the statement of Judge Ben Lindsey, juvenile judge of Denver, who lectured on "The Misfortunes of Mickey" at the Simpson M. E. church.

The authorities in this state are dealing with the great juvenile problem in the most modern method and the only method to obtain right results.

"During my tours I have traveled from one state to another, but I am more highly enthused over Michigan than any other state in the Union. I suppose I should say that next to Colorado, Michigan is the best state, but when I say anything I say it candidly. Michigan always attracted me as being so far ahead in its juvenile system. The citizens of this great state have done much for the building up of good justice, good courts and good judges."

Memorial Day Proclamation.

Governor Osborn issued the customary declaration and Memorial day proclamation. The proclamation in part: "The custom of observing a day once a year for the purpose of especially paying tribute of memory to those who so bravely gave their lives that the nation might live and be a purer and better home for the oppressed of all lands, is one of the most commendable of our national life. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

April Death List Lower Than March.

There were 3,362 deaths reported for the month of April to the secretary of state. This is a decrease of 42 under the month of March. The number of births also reported showed a decrease of 440 under the previous month, there having been 4,754 births in April.

By ages, there were 505 deaths of infants under one year old, 210 deaths of children aged from one to four years, and 1,185 of persons sixty-five years old or over. The important causes of death were as follows: Tuberculosis of lungs, 220; other forms of tuberculosis, 44; typhoid fever, 44; diphtheria and croup, 35; scarlet fever, 25; measles, 31; whooping cough, 28; pneumonia and bronchial pneumonia, 324; enteritis, under two years of age, 50; meningitis, 99; cancer, 147; violence, 156.

As compared with the month preceding, an increase is noticed in the number of deaths from diphtheria and croup, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough. A decrease is recorded in the number of deaths from tuberculosis, typhoid fever, pneumonia, enteritis, meningitis, influenza, cancer and violence. In addition to the above, there were two deaths reported from tetanus, one from Albinism and the other from Plainfield.

The various state hospitals and asylums reported deaths as follows: Traverse City, 17; Kalamazoo, 24; Pontiac, 13; Soldiers' home, 19; Lapeer, 2; Newberry, 4; Wayne county, 22.

Aviation Meet Sure of Success.

H. L. Connell, president of the Aeronautical society of the University of Michigan, assured David L. Herman, chairman of the executive committee of the aviation meet which will be held in Detroit next month, that the club would attend the meet in a body on June 30. Commencement at Ann Arbor comes on June 29, and there will be hundreds of students and alumni to come to Detroit the following day. Invitations will also be sent the student bodies of Michigan Agricultural college, Ohio State university, Western Reserve university, Purdue, Notre Dame, Case School of Applied Science and others, to attend the meet.

Edward Thompson of Ypsilanti is heading a committee of business men of that city which is raising a purse of $6,000 for a flight from Detroit to Ypsilanti and return. Flights will be made to several other nearby points. It is expected that about $25,000 will be offered in prizes, and trials will be made for altitude, endurance and passenger-carrying records.

New Corporations.

The following companies have filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state:

Schwanbeck Brothers, Detroit, increase from $50,000 to $300,000, principal stockholder, George A. Schwanbeck Cadillac Hotel company of St. Clair, $15,000; Grabowsky Power Wagon company, Detroit, increase from $50,000 to $1,000,000, principal stockholders, Max Grabowsky and Walter S. Heaverich; C. K. Davis Manufacturing company, $25,000, principal stockholder, C. K. Davis; Detroit Life General agency, increase from $10,000 to $20,000, principal stockholder, F. B. Walker.

Richards Heads State Homeopaths.

Dr. R. Milton Richards of Detroit was elected president at the state homeopathic forty-second annual meeting at Ann Arbor. Other officers are: First vice-president, Dr. E. C. Kinman, Saginaw; second vice-president, Dr. A. Decker Holton; Mount Pleasant; secretary, Dr. C. G. Jenkins, Lansing; treasurer, Dr. D. S. Sinclair, Grand Rapids; necrologist, Dr. William Bailey, Detroit. The session will close with a clinic at the homeopathic hospital.

SEEK LORIMER QUIZ

DILLINGHAM INTRODUCES RESOLUTION FOR FULL INQUIRY INTO BRIBERY CHARGE.

BASED ON ILLINOIS REQUEST

La Follette in Address Reviews Case, Declares Delay of Accused Co-league in Defending Himself Brought Opprobrium on Senate.

Washington, May 23.—Senator Dillingham of Vermont, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, offered a resolution in the senate to investigate the Lorimer case through the medium of his committee. The resolution is intended as a substitute for Senator La Follette's resolution.

The resolution was offered by Mr. Dillingham in recognition of the resolution adopted by the state senate of Illinois calling upon the federal senate to take action.

After quoting the request of the Illinois upper house in full the Dillingham resolution provides for a full investigation by the committee on privileges and elections or a subcommittee, with special instructions to ascertain whether corrupt practices or methods were adopted by any person, firm or corporation with reference to the election.

La Follette Asks for Delay.

Senator Dillingham announced that he proposed to press his resolution as a substitute. Senator La Follette then said he would offer amendments to his own resolution. He then undertook a brief review of the Lorimer case which, he said, disclosed the following undisputed facts:

That Charles A. White confessed he was bribed to vote for Lorimer, receiving $1,900 therefor.

That grand juries investigated the confession and that during their work two other members of the legislature confessed receiving "Lorimer money," leaving no doubt as to their guilt.

That another member, since deceased, was proved present at distributions of "Lorimer money."

Defies Popular Government.

Senator La Follette first discussed representative government. He said the government was representative as long as senators obeyed the popular will and were elected without the interposition of any outside power. He asked senators to conceive a man holding such a trust sitting silently by with his title tainted. He said the delay by Senator Lorimer had brought great opprobrium on the senate itself. Senator La Follette attacked the senate system of courtesy as helping to veil and undermine representative government. He said the system excused and palliated violations of the high principles which senators brought from home. He said there was some purpose behind it, and that, moreover, he could not understand how Senator Lorimer could rest under the charges against him.

Others Threaten to Speak.

"Finally," said Senator La Follette, "things came to such a pass that others threatened to speak for Senator Lorimer in defense of the senate. Then on May 28, Senator Lorimer spoke the vindication of himself, Senator Holstlaw having confessed in Illinois that he had also been bribed to vote for Lorimer. The previous delay," said the senator, "burned the brand into the case."

The speaker said that at the outset of the Lorimer case he had brought to it so unbiased a mind as any other member, and that he considered himself a juror with the right to prosecute investigations wherever they might lead. Now, he said, he based his judgment on the evidence in the case.

MISS CAMPBELL WINS TITLE

United States Golf Champion Regains Former English Laurels by Defeating Violet Hazlet.

Portrush, Ireland, May 20.—Miss Dorothy Campbell, champion of the United States, regained the woman's golf championship of Great Britain by defeating Miss Violet Hazlet, the Irish champion, in the final by 3 up and 2 to play.

SENATOR NELSON HITS AT PRESIDENT TAFT

MINNESOTAN SAYS THE PRESIDENT IS EYING THE CONSTITUTION—ASKS AMENDMENT TO RECIPROcity.

Washington, May 23.—Senator Nelson of Minnesota attacked President Taft before the senate finance committee for seeking to prevent the senate from amending the Canadian reciprocity bill. He declared that the Constitution made the senate part of the treaty making power of the country and offered several amendments to the measure. Senator Nelson's amendments would reduce about one-half the existing tariff rates on most farm products. To put farm products on the free list, he declared, was legislating directly against the farmer.

"President Taft is eying the Constitution of the United States," he asserted, "when he tries to force the senate to accept this agreement as it was presented. He is trifling with the senate of the United States."

Senator Nelson urged the committee to consider carefully his proposed amendments. He said the senate had amended previous treaties and that there was no valid reason why it should not amend the Canadian agreement.

TWO HELD FOR BOMB PLOT

B. H. Connors and James Hendricks Are Arrested at Los Angeles Charged With Conspiracy.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 23.—Two men are prisoners in the private chambers of District Attorney John D. Fredericks here and both of them are being accused of entering into a conspiracy to dynamite the million-dollar Hall of Records building here on the 8th of last September.

One of them is B. H. Connors, a former structural iron worker of this city, and the other is James Hendricks, who has been prominently identified with the local strike situation here.

After the two men had been closely questioned by Detective Browne, it was announced by District Attorney Fredericks that additional arrests would follow. It is understood that seven men have been implicated in the alleged plot to dynamite the building, and it is charged that a woman will also be taken into custody.

WHOLE FAMILY WIPED OUT

Dennis Dodson, Wife and Two Daughters Killed When Their Buggy Was Hit by Trolley Car.

Newark, O., May 22.—Dennis Dodson, thirty-five, his wife, Helen, twenty-eight, their daughter, Edith, five, were killed outright, their daughter, Helen, seven, was fatally injured, dying on hour later, the horse was killed, the buggy demolished at Vorhees Lane, seven miles west of this city, when the horse was frightened and jumped in front of a rapid running interurban car west-bound to Buckeye Lake, loaded with passengers.

FREE CONVICT FOR BRAVERY

Iowa Governor Pardons a Prisoner for Risking His Own Life to Prevent Explosion in Reformatory.

Des Moines, Ia., May 22.—The heroism of Joseph Howard, a convict doing time at Anamosa for forgery, has secured for him a pardon at the hands of Governor Carroll. When the boiler in the Anamosa reformatory got beyond control and an explosion was threatened Howard rushed through clouds of escaping steam to the machinery and shut off the steam. He was released from prison.

Matrimonial Mixup in Which Linda Seemed to Come Out a Poor Second.

While I was being shaved the shop door opened gently and in walked a colored boy of fifteen, who looked around in an embarrassed way for a moment and then said to the barber: "Jim, you was engaged to my sister Linda."

"You mean I is engaged to her," was the pompous reply.

"But Linda has sent word."

"Oh, she has? Does she dun want the marriage hurried up?"

"No, sah; she dun wants you to know dat she married Bill Lee 'bout two hours ago."

"What? What's dat? Your sister dun married to dat nigger. Werry well, sah. Den you return to dat sister and gib her my compliments and tell her dat I was dun married mo' dan fo' weeks ago and dat she hadn't fun fooled me worf shucks! Dat's all, juh, and please close de doah as you go out."—From Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

CURED ITCHING AND BURNING

"I was taken with the itch in April, 1904, and used most everything. I had a friend pay me a visit from Cumberland, and she advised me to use Cuticura Remedies which I did. The cure was certainly quick, and I use them to this day. I had it terribly under my knees. I only used one box of pills, but two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and I use the Cuticura Soap all the time. I hope this will benefit others, as it has me, after Dr. — and others could do nothing for me." (Signed) Miss Lu Johnson, 1523 Ninth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., April 3, 1910.

In a later letter Miss Johnson adds: "The trouble began with an eruption under my knees, and extended upwards toward my waist, until I was not able to sit down. It kept a constant itching and burning all the time, night and day. I went to my doctor, but he could do me no good after I do not know how many medicines he gave me, and then told me I would be compelled to go to a skin specialist, which I positively refused to do. I cried all the time. Finally I made up my mind to try Cuticura Remedies, and tried Cuticura Pills, Ointment and Soap, and was entirely cured of the itching three days after I started using them. The healing took about eight days. I consider Cuticura Remedies marvelous, and would recommend them everywhere."—Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, for free book on skin afflictions.

To Pray for the Rich.

Two women prominent in St. Louis have started a movement to induce 200,000 of their sex in the south to pray every day for the rich. They explain they hope by organizing systematically groups of women who will pray often and well for the more affluent, wealthy persons will be led to contribute to a fund for the evangelization of the world. Belle H. Bennett, president of the woman's missionary council of the Methodist Episcopal church south, and Mrs. R. W. McDonnell are the originators of the plan.

THE IRONY OF FATE.

He had fought, in many a battle and escaped without a wound; He had met stampeded cattle and had bravely held his ground; He had hunted in Montana and been snow-bound on the plain; And he'd sojourned in Havana when the plague was raising Cain.

He had crossed the stormy ocean many times without mishap; He'd recovered from a poison fixed up by a jealous Jap; He had been a reckless rover from the moment of his birth; And had traveled almost over every portion of the earth.

He encountered every danger that you've ever read about; He had been a Texas ranger and a reckless army scout; But the moral, if there's any, in this humble little tale, Is that he died from stepping on an ancient rusty nail.

The detective picked up the watering-pot and emptied about a quart of water on the ground. "You ought to have given that to your thirsty plants," he said.

"It is the first time I have left water in it, sir," apologized Robert. "I suppose I was absent-minded yesterday."

"So you have not used it to-day?"

"No, sir."

"Well, that's all," said Hendricks, turning to the mayor. "It is a very perplexing case indeed."

"Shall I telephone my men?" asked Capt. Welsh. "Don't you think we ought to take some steps to catch the fellow?"

"Not yet," replied Hendricks; and, walking by Welsh, he nudged him sharply with his elbow. "But we can go into the house out of the sun."

As they started to the house Hendricks dropped back with Fred Walters and his wife, but she went forward and joined her mother. When they were in the hall Hendricks said: "Where is your study, Mr. Roundtree? This room on the right?"

"Yes," replied the mayor.

"Well, let's go in there a moment. Ah!" he exclaimed, in a tone of satisfaction, as they entered the room, "you have a typewriter. It is just what I want; I must write a letter at once to my assistant in New York, to tell him that I am detained here. But I can't use this make of machine. Who uses it, Mr. Roundtree? Ah, I see Mrs. Walters does."

They all looked at Hendricks in wonder.

"Pray, how did you guess that?" asked Mrs. Walters, a cold smile on her face.

"One of the tricks of my calling," was the reply. "It's easy. I noticed that the nails of your two index fingers are worn down roughly, so I know that you not only write on the machine, but you do it slowly, for you employ only those two fingers. Experienced writers use all the fingers of the hand."

"It is simple enough since you have explained it," replied Mrs. Walters. "And you are exactly right."

"Will you oblige me by writing a short note at my dictation?" Hendricks asked, pushing a chair towards the machine. "I would scratch it down with a pencil, but all the letters I send to my office are carefully filed, and they look better typewritten."

"I have a machine and a stenographer at the office," interposed Capt. Welsh; "my man will do it for you in a hurry. Surely we have no time to lose; the mayor and the ladies will feel insecure if we do not make a move pretty soon."

"I think myself, Mr. Hendricks—the mayor began, but the detective interrupted him:

"Oh, it will only take a moment. I have an addressed envelope ready in my pocket, and I can drop it in a letter-box and go down. Take a seat, Mrs. Walters."

Lillian obeyed, with a curious upward look into his face and a touch of hesitation as she put a sheet of paper between the rollers.

"Dear Hasbrooke," Hendricks began—"Your letter received. Am engaged on important case here. Can't come this week. Will wire you later. Lady's affair must wait. Hendricks."

When Mrs. Walters had drawn the sheet from the machine and given it to the detective he turned to the mayor.

"What did you do with your old typewriter?" he asked, as he folded the letter and put it into an envelope and took a stamp from his watchcase.

"Why, I—I think it is in the lumber-room," the mayor stammered. "But how did you know I had one?"

Hendricks smiled as he touched the stamp with his tongue and placed it carefully on the corner of the envelope. "Another easy thing. Judging from its appearance this machine cannot have been in use more than a month; and Mrs. Walters writes too well to have learned within that time. I did not think it likely that she had practiced out of the house. She looks like a stay-at-home little body."

"How very simple!" the mayor exclaimed. "If only your keen sight will help us solve this mystery, we shall be all grateful."

Mrs. Roundtree seemed displeased with the delay.

"Aren't you going to do something towards protecting our house, captain?" she asked, turning to Welsh.

"Some one has attempted the life of my child. I shall go mad if something is not done at once."

Capt. Welsh looked embarrassed. "The case is really in Mr. Hendricks' hands," he said awkwardly. "It is so hard to get his services, owing to his wide reputation and the demands on his time, that he is usually granted unlimited authority and— He stopped for lack of words.

"There is no reason why you may not place a guard round the house night and day, captain," said Hendricks, frowning slightly at Welsh's compliment. "If it allays the fears of the ladies it will serve a good purpose."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Roundtree, coldly.

"Where is your telephone, mayor?" asked Welsh.

"In the library across the hall. Show it to him, Lillian," said the mayor.

When Mrs. Roundtree heard the telephone bell ring she went into the library to hear Welsh give his orders, and Fred Walters followed her, leaving the mayor and Hendricks together.

"While they are in there, I should be glad to get a look at the grounds from a back window upstairs, if you will show me up," said the detective.

"Certainly, with pleasure," the mayor replied. "This way." And he led Hendricks up the rear steps to the floor above. "There is a window in this servant's room," he went on, pushing a door open, "but it looks out on the side rather than the back. The old lumber room is in the rear; but you'll get all over dust if you go there."

"No matter; it won't hurt me."

When they had opened the door of the lumber-room and were making their way through dusty piles of old furniture, carpets, rugs, pictures and broken statuary, Hendricks smiled and pointed to a typewriter on a table near the window. "See how well I guessed," he said, crossing the room and bending over the machine. "I am interested in typewriters. I had a chance to buy stock in one before they became the rage, and if I had done so I would now be too rich to have to be nosing round in other people's affairs like this. This machine was made about '85; purple and copying," he added, rubbing his finger on the ribbon and transferring the stain to his cuff. "I like the black better." Then he went to a window and carelessly looked out. "Ah!" he said; "you see how thick the woods are behind the place where we found his tracks? He could have got away very easily. Would your daughter be able to defend herself, Mr. Roundtree, in case of sudden attack?" Hendricks asked, as they came back toward the stairs. "Can she use a revolver?"

"Quite well, indeed," the mayor answered; "her husband taught her. But I don't like her to carry one. It makes her mother uneasy."

As they reached the lower floor the others were coming from the library. Welsh went out to call a cab and Hendricks joined him. The moment the cab stopped at the door, the captain got in, but Hendricks held back. "I have left my umbrella out there," he said apologetically. "Wait a moment."

Hendricks went down the walk, and was soon hidden from view by the boxwood bushes. Five minutes passed. Welsh was impatiently wondering what had become of him, when he emerged from the shrubbery, lighting a cigar. Without a word of explanation for his delay, he got into the cab beside Welsh, and told the driver to go ahead.

"Well," said Mrs. Roundtree, as the cab drove away, "that man must be overrated, certainly. If I had not heard that he was a brilliant member of his profession, I should have said he was the most stupid man alive. I felt so irritated by his dawdling actions that I was tempted to turn my back on him. The idea of his wanting to see the gardening tools, lecturing Robert about not hanging up a watering-pot, and using our house to write his correspondence in—and at such an awful time, too!"

"I think he was unable to find a ghost of a clue," remarked Fred Walters. "He was trying to hide his disappointment by indifference. He has no doubt accomplished great things in Europe and elsewhere in this country, but anyone can see that he has met his Waterloo here."

"What did he go upstairs for?" Mrs. Walters spoke to her father in a tone that was too low for the others to hear. He had sat down at his desk several feet from where his wife and son-in-law were standing.

"To get a look at the grounds from the back windows," the mayor replied. "From the servants' room?" she asked.

"No, the lumber-room." And the mayor drew a sheet of paper toward him and began to write. He did not notice that she stared at him strangely for a moment after he had answered, and that she sat down in a rocking-chair with her back to the light, and took no part in the conversation going on between Walters and her mother.

CHAPTER IX.

Hendricks sat smoking beside Welsh all the way down town. He seemed so deeply thoughtful that Welsh was afraid to disturb him. Presently, however, Hendricks signed, looked into the captain's expectant face, and said: "My New York case is puzzling me. I can't make head or tail of it. It is certainly a most complicated matter. You may have read of the Sixth avenue jeweler who was found dead—"

"My God, Mr. Hendricks! pardon me," broke in Welsh, with a flash of the eyes, "but this is really going too far. Surely you don't realize my position. I have taken it on myself to employ you with the city's money, and—surely this is no time to be talking of other cases."

Hendricks stared in surprise, blushed, and threw away his cigar. The cab was slowing up at Welsh's office. Hendricks said nothing until they were inside and he had closed the door; then he coolly lit another cigar and went on:

"You must pardon me, really, captain, but I have always worked with men who understood my awkward ways. They usually let me alone; and I forgot that you don't know my methods. I am a great economist of time when I am in thinking trim, and, as I had already arrived at the only conclusion possible in your case, at least at this stage, I was working on the other matter I mentioned."

"Conclusion? What conclusion?" cried Welsh.

"Why, I thought you were following me step by step, up at the mayor's; though now I do recall that you made one or two proposals that rather seemed to indicate a lack of proper caution."

"Why, I saw absolutely nothing," replied Welsh. "To be frank, I thought you were helplessly stumped, and were simply trying to kill time and make a favorable impression on the ladies."

"I was trying to be agreeable, Welsh. I confess it. That's my style. It makes an unpleasant job pleasanter to all concerned. If you ever have to handcuff a woman, tell her she has pretty wrists, and she won't mind it half so much."

"I am at sea," said Welsh, "and completely overboard."

Hendricks leaned back, threw his feet on a desk and chewed the end of his cigar. "I did not expect to find what I discovered up there," he said, musingly, "but when I once got started the whole chain of circumstances began to unroll, and was so easy to follow that I felt as if I were playing with a toy. I could have kicked myself for having to appear to take it all so seriously. I was tempted to make a joke of it. When I was half through, I wanted to throw down my hand and say: 'Look here, I hold so and so, and I'll bet my reputation you haven't a thing!'"

"I'm still in deep water," said Welsh. "I saw the bullet hole, her tracks, the fellow's tracks, and that was all. The nervousness of the ladies and the mayor's anxiety absorbed me."

"I did not go there to sympathize with anyone," answered the detective. "I was looking for facts. But follow me now, and draw your own conclusions as we go. Well, what was the first incongruous thing that happened after we arrived? Why, if you remember, Mrs. Walters said she was sure she heard the report before she felt the ball pass through her sleeve. The distance was about 100 yards, and if the difference were noticeable at all it would have been, scientifically, you know, exactly the reverse."

"But surely," protested Welsh, "you'd hardly expect an excited woman to be correct about such a minor detail as that."

"Mrs. Walters was not excited," Hendricks answered. "You must have noticed that. If she had been, I should not have made a point there. However, that was only a little thing to start from, but it was sufficient, as I found out later. The next thing I did was to examine the hole in her sleeve. What did I do that for? To find out if it were made by a bullet. It was rather too dark in the house to see well, but out in the sunlight I got another look. I saw that it really was a bullet hole. I noticed a few black specks on the cloth, but, without being openly impertinent, I could not decide whether they had been caused by powder or soot, for the gown was gray."

"At that distance? Who ever heard of—"

"Hold on! not so fast! Ah, I see you are not following me; but you'll catch on in a moment, so let's continue. She next showed us her tracks. Did you notice how deep and distinct they were? It was the first thing that struck me. Her mother is twice as heavy as she is, and stood in the same sort of soil, but her feet made hardly any impressions. Don't forget that I marked the spot where Mrs. Walters stood with my umbrella; after that, you know, we went over to the fence. There is a minor point here in Mrs. Walters being the first to see the footprints beyond the fence, but we will pass that, and come to the footprints themselves. Did you notice nothing remarkable about them, captain? No? Well, in all my experience I never saw such conical footprints. I was tempted to laugh outright, but it would have spoiled everything, so I smothered my amusement."

"I saw nothing remarkable about them," said Capt. Welsh, impatiently.

"They were made, captain, by men's slippers, a number ten, with very thin soles. The heels had been well pressed down into the soft clay, and so were the middle parts of the soles, but the thin edges all round had turned up so easily that only a faint impression of the bottom was left."

"What did you deduce from that?" asked Welsh, still perplexed.

"That they were worn by feet not half large enough for them, though they had doubtless been drawn on over a pair of boots. I saw by the shape of the track that the right one had come off once as the wearer drew it from the mud."

"Ah! curious!" exclaimed the captain; "but I don't yet see what you are driving at, though I think you suspect—but how could you? Why—"

"But that is not all," the detective went on, smiling. "You remember, perhaps, that I asked if it had rained out there recently. Well, I was trying to account, since there has not been any rain lately, for that naturally dry spot of clay being soft enough to have received such distinct footprints. On close examination, I detected the faint semicircular mark of a vessel in the edge of the grass, and, at exactly the right distance from it, a spot where a little water had trickled down from the spout on the clay."

"Ah, the watering-pot!" cried Welsh. "Wonderful! wonderful! Now I know what all that rigmarole to the gardener meant."

"Yes, and I found a little water in it, too, and learned that it had last night been left on the floor when Robert declared that he usually hung it up, and on the bottom of it the stupid rainmaker had left a trace of the very clay in which we found the footprints. But I am too fast; for you remember as I stood at the big tracks, I sighted along over the fence at my umbrella on the lawn."

"I remember," said Welsh, with a laugh. "And I own I thought you were making a blooming ass of yourself, and simply pretending to make investigations when you knew you were wholly at sea. But what were you doing it for?"

"When I got my bearings in that way, I calculated that the handle of my umbrella was just about where her sleeve must have been when she was bending over. As I sighted along at it, I saw that if a bullet were fired from where I stood and passed through her sleeve it must—as it would naturally go in a straight line—strike a certain portion of the wall of the conservatory beyond her. I found, on examining the wall, that it had not."

"So you knew no shot had been fired?" ejaculated the captain.

"No, not that," returned Hendricks, "for there were the specks on the gown, you know. I was, you see, convinced that the specks were made by a revolver at short range, and a woman of nerve made them, captain, for the ball passed very near the arm."

"I begin to see what you suspect," said Welsh, "but I am so much astonished that I am unable to grasp it all. Surely she could not be—"

"Wait till I have finished," the detective interrupted. "Don't jump to conclusions. I don't think you were watching my work in the mayor's study, for you seemed on pins and needles to get away."

"You don't mean that you did not really want to write that note?"

"No; for I wanted her to do it," said the detective, with a smile, taking from his pocket the threatening letter addressed to the mayor, and the note Lillian Walters had written at his dictation.

EXACTING DISCIPLINE.

The Cruel Severity of an Unmerciful Father.

Philip Gilbert Hamerton was, during his childhood, the victim of a severe and cruel discipline. His father was a man of ungovernable temper and irregular life, who had no sympathy with childish foibles, and whose only idea of educating a boy was to "make a man of him."

His method of teaching a lad to ride was to accompany him on a vicious black horse, and when little Philip erred in any of the observances of good riders, to punish him with his heavy hunting whip. The whip had a steel hammer at the end of a long handle; and if at any time the owner fancied that the child was turning out his toes, he would not say anything, but with cruel dexterity he would bring the foot, sharp enough to make him writhe with pain.

Yet this Spartan severity had its valuable side. The elder Hamerton understood the importance of concentration, and if he saw the boy occupied with several books, would say:

"Take one of those books and read it steadily. Don't potter and play with half a dozen."

What he hated most was a lie or the shadow of a lie, and so bitter was this aversion that Philip was sometimes punished unjustly. He was expected to practice with dumb-bells 15 minutes every morning. This exercise was taken in the garden, but before beginning he always looked at the clock in the sitting-room. One day the father met him and asked:

"Have you done your 15 minutes?"

"Yes, papa."

"That is not true," said his aunt, from the next room; "he has only practiced for ten minutes; look at the clock."

The hand stood at ten minutes past 11; and though the boy protested that he had begun at ten minutes before the hour, the "additional lie" put his father in a fury, and he was ordered to practice continually for two hours. And though the child was ready to drop with fatigue long before the 120 minutes were over, not one of them was remitted.—Youth's Companion.

PEACE AT LAST IN SIGHT IN MEXICO

THE REAL TEST OF GEN. MADERO'S STRENGTH COMES IN ATTEMPT TO STOP FIGHTING.

ONLY A FEW TROOPS KEPT PENDING FULFILLMENT OF TERMS.

Rebels in Southern California Have to Be Subdued by Former Comrades in Arms.

The real test of the strength of Francisco I. Madero, Jr., in the Mexican revolution is at hand. Whether he will be able to stop the fighting in the republic, now that he has brought about the signing of a peace agreement, is the grave question agitating his followers.

The rebel chieftain's father said: "It will take a long time to get the peace news abroad. When we send telegrams to insurrecto bands telling them to fight, they think the messages are false orders sent by the Diaz government to trick them. Therefore they pay no attention to such messages and go on fighting as before."

"Not only that, but the whole republic is overrun with insurrectos. Rebellion has swept over the country like a flame and my son does not really know how great his army is." The report, however, that General Figueroa, the rebel leader in Lower California, will refuse to accept the peace terms as signed is denied by Madero. He asserts that Figueroa will co-operate with the provisional government in every way and that his forces will disband as soon as the rebellion is ended and Diaz has left the presidency.

Country Like Normal. Officially declared peace with more of the atmosphere of normal conditions, reigns in northern Mexico for the first time in six months. Messages are being flashed over all of the country announcing that a peace agreement signed Sunday night definitely ended hostilities.

Undisguised joy beamed in the face of Judge Carbojal, the federal peace envoy, as he prepared to depart from Juarez for Mexico City, his mission being accomplished after nearly four weeks of parleys. Francisco I. Madero, Jr., triumphant leader of the revolt, sat in his house in the outskirts of the town, content and happy, receiving scores of congratulatory telegrams on the success of the movement he initiated. He will now await the resignation of President Diaz, starting for Mexico City within a week, when it is expected to become an established fact.

Plot to Kill Gen. Madero. Plans for the departure from Juarez to Mexico City of Provisional President Francisco I. Madero, Jr., received a setback when a member of the El Paso revolutionary junta received a telegram from the capital stating that persistent rumors were in circulation there of a plot to assassinate Madero upon his arrival.

Beyond this bare statement the message gave no details, but the matter was considered so serious by the insurrecto leaders as to result in postponing the trip of Madero until the reports are disproved or affairs in the capital are in a more settled condition.

Every officer on the staff of the provisional president had donated six months salary as a fund for the widows and children of insurrecto soldiers killed during the revolution.

High Railway Fare to Stand. Railways operating in Central Passenger association territory—including the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan—are permitted, by an order issued by the interstate commerce commission, to exact higher passenger fares for interstate than for intra-state business where state legislatures or state commissions have established a two-cent a mile rate until May 1, 1912, by which time the railroads are to show why they need such a distinction. The commission was opposed to the request of the railroads, but decided to grant them time to prepare data in defense of it.

Open Night at School.

The object in having the schools open to patrons one evening each year when its equipment and work can be displayed, is to give the patrons of our school an opportunity to see what the school has to work with, what it accomplishes with its equipment, and as nearly as possible, how it does this. Educational progress has been very rapid in these recent years of progression and rapid change in all lines, and unless one can find the time to visit the school, it is easy to lose touch with it so that it may become difficult to realize what the modern school really is. It is most desirable that any town should know its school thoroughly, not only that it should appreciate it, but that it should criticize it intelligently; the ideal way to know a school is to see it at work, but that being impossible with the majority, the next best thing is some such arrangement as our "Open Night." Judging from the number who attended (estimated by some as nearly 500) and by the comments we have heard since, the object has been attained in a measure, which repays the effort made. Many people have said that they had no idea of the scope and kind of work done by the school, and everywhere was heard the exclamation: "It all makes me want to go to school once more!"

The exhibit this year contained several new features of which the Domestic Science Department was perhaps the most interesting to the crowd for two reasons: The work and equipment were interesting in themselves; and coffee and cookies were served to all comers by the 12 girls in white caps and aprons chosen to represent the department, who not only served but made these articles during the evening. To serve so large a crowd and to "bake and brew" successfully under such circumstances was a severe test of the practical nature of the work and the girls and their teacher, Miss Weeks, are to be congratulated upon this first public appearance of the department. Another new feature this year was the strong emphasis put upon the protection of our birds. The good work that Miss Smith has been doing so many years has spread to other departments; in one room, the 7th grade, was a shelf of bird houses made by the boys of that room, and marked by such clever punning signs as "Dew Drop Inn," "A Happy Family," "Room for Two," etc. Upon the board in the room appeared a chart showing the economic value of the robin, based upon the National Agricultural Dept.'s study of its food; here, too, was drawn the white aigrette with the title: "The white badge of cruelty." There were a number of bird houses displayed in the Manual Training Department, too. In several rooms pictures of all our common birds in colors made the frieze, and bulletins of the Audubon society were on display. Perhaps the most powerful appeal for bird protection was found in an object lesson on millinery; a table of ladies' hats, the first bearing a bird carried the sign, "A bird in a bush is worth ten on a hat;" another trimmed with plumage said, "This cost blood—for sale cheap," while the last and most beautiful, because unadorned with plumage, bore the sign: "Buy a hat and be beautiful." In the physiology class room a new feature attracted much interest—the models of open air houses for the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis. In the Latin II. class room there were two bridges built to illustrate Caesar's bridge, one built by the girls of the class and one built by the boys, after the description they had to translate from Caesar's "Commentaries," and in the Ancient History class room a few models made by the pupils to illustrate Roman life were to be seen. The study of Elementary Agriculture has been introduced this year, and in the chemical laboratory were found some illustrations of the work done. There were object lessons on the correct and incorrect trimming of trees, on seed testing, seed germination and on soil cultivation—the latter showing the effects of poor, good and too deep cultivation.

Not all the exhibit was new however for much of the work of the school must be gone over every year—much that is of greatest value to the pupils—and so there were in the various rooms literally miles of written work, from the first attempts at writing in pencil in the first grade and first ink work in the fourth to the essays and geometry papers in the High School class room. Everywhere the boards, too, showed

About Base Ball.

The ball game last Saturday between the Daisy and Carleton clubs resulted in the victory of the home team over the visitors by a score of 18 to 11. Harry German pitched three innings for the visitors, when our boys succeeded him out of the box and another pitcher was substituted. Fred Reed pitched for the Daisy for four innings and was then replaced by Orville Tousey who held the visitors to three hits in five innings. The home boys placed a fine article of ball and showed there was some class to them. The Carletons next day defeated the Good Lucks of Detroit by an 8 to 5 score, and the Good Lucks are some players too.

A game of ball is scheduled for Saturday afternoon by the Daisy with White's Athletics of Detroit. This is an old club under a new name and they will put up a good game. Tousey and Williams will be the battery for Plymouth. It takes money to run a ball game and the people of the village are asked to turn out and support the club that is trying to keep Plymouth on the base ball map. The admission is only 10c and 15c and at this price there ought to be a large crowd. Time 3:00 p. m.

On Decoration Day, May 30, a game has been arranged with the Milford club, to start at 3:00 p. m. The Milfords have always been an attraction for Plymouth and no doubt they will draw a large crowd for this day.

At a meeting of Plymouth Entertainment Course committee held last Monday evening, the following attractions were selected for next season's course: Tyrolean Alpine Singers, Wilber Starr Male Quartette, Capt. Richard Hobson, great naval lecturer, Robt. Tarken Miles, lecturer, and Ross Crane, modeler in clay.

The Plymouth Business Men's ball club went to Wixom Wednesday and defeated the Wixom Business Men by a score of 10 to 6. Rathburn and Todd occupied the "crucial" points for Plymouth. Plymouthites were well pleased with the game and the treatment they received by the Wixomites. They made the trip in automobiles and were accompanied by ten or fifteen "fans."

Cement Walk to Cemetery.

The village council began last week the building of a cement walk to the cemetery and the work is now well under way. There are about 700 feet outside of the corporation to be laid and this the township board will take care of. There is much filling in to be done, but the Shattuck brothers have donated 500 loads of dirt, which will help out considerably. This walk was one of the needed improvements of the village and though it has taken some time to bring the matter to a successful close, we believe no person either in village or township will object to the expense incurred. We understand the cemetery board will continue the walk from the gate entrance to the cemetery

Semi-Centennial of State G. A. R. at Ypsilanti

Considering the very few years before everything relative to the Grand Army of the Republic will have passed into history and with a deep sense of appreciation at heart for the numerous deeds of valor accredited the veterans who will assemble in Ypsilanti for the big state semi-centennial encampment June 21, 22, and 23, liberal appropriations have been allowed by the city council to be used by the various committees for their entertainment.

Preparations are being made for 10,000 guests during encampment week and a continuous program will be effected for entertainment every hour during the session. The big parade will take place on the morning of June 22 and for all soldiers who cannot walk and for the women of the W. R. C. and the Ladies of G. A. R. there will be floats and automobiles. There seem to be few soldiers, however, who feel that they are unable to assume the old time spirit of '61 and several letters have been received from officers asserting that the "old boys" who will return with them demand a place in the line—no carriages for them.

The parade will be planned on a basis of 3,000 men on foot aside from the men and women in carriages. A band of 50 bag pipers in full Highland costume will feature the parade and the G. A. R. band of fife and drum will be in the lead, to demonstrate as only veterans can demonstrate, the spirit of '76. A flying flag formed by 200 school children will form a pretty section of the line.

Show No Partiality.

Editor Mail:—Marshall Springer seems to have his hands full these days in trying to regulate the automobile speed law. It is such a temptation to our automobilists whenever they strike pavement to (as they say) let her go. But let us play fair and have no discrimination, for we candidly believe that out of the perhaps forty or fifty machines in this town that there is not one of them that at times does not exceed the speed limit and it does not seem fair to single out one and oblige him to pay a fine and let others (that have even been reported) off scot free. Treatment of the Drowned.

Three hundred lives are lost in Michigan every year from drowning. This is the official statement of the state department of health and as an aid in saving some of the lives that might otherwise be lost the department has issued a pamphlet "Treatment of the Drowned, Suffocated, or Electrically Shocked." This pamphlet is illustrated and gives full directions as to what to do while the physician is being secured. Copies may be secured free by addressing the secretary of the State Department of Health, Lansing, Mich.

If, by studying how to carry out the directions in this leaflet, you can be a life saver at some critical moment, the short time spent in its careful reading would be well repaid.

Send for and master the directions so that you will be able to do everything possible in case of accident.

Wayne Review:—The well drilled on the D. U. R. property at this place has been tested with a power pump and has not shown up as well as was expected. A capacity of 5760 gallons a day was all that was developed, but this will be more than sufficient for the company's needs. It will be remembered that the first estimate was 50 gallons a minute—it is showing four gallons a minute. The water is not of good quality, being "milky" and it does not clear up.

BOYHOOD OF GREAT UNION CAPTAIN

By CALVIN DILL WILSON.

HE cabin in which Ulysses Grant was born April 27, 1822, at Point Pleasant, O., was a one-story building of two very small rooms. It was a weather-boarded structure with two front windows. One room was used for cooking, eating and living in the daytime; the whole family slept in the second room. The Ohio river, on which in those days rafts, steamers and flat-boats plied, flowed not far from the front door. The father, Jesse Grant, was at that time foreman of the tannery of the village. He had lost his money and was now saving more money for a new start. The Grants, originally settlers in Massachusetts, had emigrated to Pennsylvania, and in 1739 to Ohio. Ulysses' mother's father, John Simpson, also went from Pennsylvania to Ohio about 1819. In the autumn of 1823 the Grants removed to Georgetown, the county seat of Brown. This remained Ulysses' home until at the age of seventeen he went to West Point.

The year after the birth of Ulysses Jesse set up a tannery of his own in Georgetown, which was situated in a wilderness of oaks that provided abundance of tanbark. Jesse Grant was strong in body and mind, nearly six feet high, with large head and strong face. He was essentially a New Englander, was fond of arguing, and was much criticised in the community because of his dogmatic nature and his northern prejudices. The village consisted of 20 houses, placed about the court house square. On all sides around the village were forests, except where clearings had been made for the fields; these were still filled with stumps. The manners of the people were rude. The houses were small, with low ceilings, bare walls and little furniture. They were modified woodsmen's cabins, with outside chimneys and a lean-to kitchen behind. The citizens were plain people, but they despised foolish pride, and they ridiculed the name Jesse had given his son and changed it into "Useless." The boy had been named "Hiram Ulysses," the first name was dropped and S. was afterward adopted by Grant as the initial of his mother's name, Simpson.

The father was always extremely fond of his boy and excited the ridicule of his neighbors by speeches of his greatness. The Ohio schools were then very indifferent; they were supported by subscription, and a single teacher would have thirty or forty scholars, from little ones learning the A, B, C's up to girls and boys of eighteen studying reading, writing and arithmetic. From the age of five or six until seventeen, Ulysses attended the subscription school of Georgetown, except during the winter of 1836-7, when he attended school in Marysville, Ky., and the winter of 1838-9, when he studied at a private school at Ripley, Ohio. He was not studious; both winters were spent going over the same old arithmetic, of which he knew every word before.

His father was, from the boy's earliest recollection, in comfortable circumstances for that time and region. His great desire was for the education of his children; so Ulysses never missed a quarter from school. He had to work, however, as everyone labored in that region then; his father not only carried on the manufacture of leather and worked at the farm himself, but also owned and farmed some land. Ulysses hated the tanning business, but was fond of farming and of all employments in which horses were used. When Ulysses was eight years old he began hauling from the farm all the wood used in the house and shop; he could not load it on the wagons, but he could drive and the choppers would load, and someone at the house would unload. In the woods he was willing to help strip the bark from the trees and to set fire to stumps and brush piles, but the tannery was repulsive to him; he would not scrape nor even handle them.

In ten years Jesse Grant had become one of the prosperous citizens of the town; he had built a brick house and owned a carriage. When Ulysses was ten years old he used to drive a team all alone to Cincinnati, 40 miles away, and bring home a load of passengers. His mother was a sweet, lovely woman, beloved by everybody, and she agreed in her husband's efforts to educate Ulysses and saw that he was always well dressed and ready for school. Ulysses, either on account of his superiority or because of his quietness, was always an object of ridicule among his mates; yet he commanded respect. He kept among the better class of boys, never swore or used vulgar words, or used tobacco in his youth, or drank, and he was the soul of honor.

BIRTH-PLACE OF GEN. GRANT

ULYSSES J. GRANT

At ten years of age he astonished everybody by his ability to manage horses. He liked farming; he saved his money; and he was always willing to haul and plow. When he was not busy otherwise he would haul passengers to Ripley, to Marysville or to Cincinnati. When he was thirteen he drove two lawyers to Toledo; when his father was asked if he was not afraid to trust his boy on such a long trip, he replied that he could take care of himself. From eleven years of age until he was seventeen, he did all the work done with horses, breaking up the land, furrowing, plowing corn and potatoes, bringing in the crops when harvested, hauling all the wood, besides tending two or three horses, a cow or two, sawing wood for stoves, while still attending school. He was never scolded or punished by his parents. No objection was made to rational amusements, such as fishing, going to the creek a mile away to swim in summer, taking a horse to visit his grandparents 15 miles off, or taking a horse and sleigh when there was snow on the ground. Ulysses got his share of punishment at school, however; the teacher, John D. White, used to compel the boys to bring in switches in bundles from a beech wood near the school house, and often a bunch would be used in a day. Ulysses was a good swimmer, could play ball well, and could ride standing on one foot on the back of a galloping horse. The girls liked him; he had a team and sleigh to take them riding. He was short, strong and sturdy. His parents belonged to the Methodist church and Ulysses was trained to respect the Sabbath, and his mother's religious spirit made a deep impression upon him.

When he was sixteen his father wished him to help in the tannery. He told his father he disliked it, but he would work for him till he was twenty-one but not a day more. His father replied that if he did not mean to stick to it he need not go into the tannery now, and he asked what he would like. The boy said he would be a farmer or a river trader or get an education. So his father arranged for him to go to Ripley O., to an academy there. That winter he spent the Christmas holidays at home, and during his vacation his father received a

Ibsen Puzzle to Himself

Some Day a Critic Will Tell What I Mean in My Plays, Great Dramatist Said.

As every other great author, Ibsen was perpetually asked to explain what he meant by his plays. Just as perpetually he pretended not to know. "Somebody," he once said, "will one day come and tell me what I do mean. The critic is always ready to see a double meaning in everything in 'A Doll's House,' for example, there is the scene in which Nora enters, followed by a porter carrying a Christmas tree. Nora takes her purse and gives the porter a shilling instead of the usual sixpence. A Swedish critic, if you please, found a symbolic meaning in the act. Nora, he thought, was a Socialist, who desired to equalize wealth, and Ibsen was a Socialist propagandist."

"You never notice anything," Ibsen once said to a friend. "For instance, you don't remember at this moment the color of the wallpaper in your own bedroom. But when I enter a strange room I notice the very smallest details. Nothing escapes me. Yes, I see everything."

Once when Ibsen was engaged in writing a play he by chance dropped a scrap of paper on which were the words, "the doctor says." Mrs. Ibsen determined to have a joke, and one day casually remarked: "Who is that doctor in your new play? I suppose he'll say some interesting things." Ibsen at first was silent with astonishment. Then he broke out into a fit of rage, full of reproaches for her spying. While at Bergen, Ibsen fell a little in love with a pretty girl, who used to bring the young poet flowers from the wood. One day, while walking with her, the pair were suddenly met by the young lady's father, who had no respect for an impetuous poet. Ibsen, like Goethe, was no hero, and inconspicuously fled, leaving the girl to explain as best she might. It was to her that the poem "Flowers of the Wood" was written.

As a young man Ibsen was by no means certain of his vocation. Until he was 32 he believed himself to be born for painting. In fact, a fairly large exhibition might be got together of the canvases painted by Ibsen in the days of his early manhood, and scattered now throughout the farm-houses and country villas of Norway. He remained all his life profoundly interested in art, and his judgments of ancient and renaissance art in Italy are always original. Of Raphael he said: "Raphael's art has never warmed me. His beings belong to the Garden of Eden before the fall."

Their Style. "The highwaymen who held up a train containing a paymaster and took his money bag, were right up with the procession." "Certainly it was something of a parade."

MINISTER OF WAR KILLED

Premier Also Dangerously Hurt While Watching Aeroplane Start.

Henri Maurice Bertheaux, minister of war, was almost instantly killed; Premier Antoine Emmanuel Ernest Monis, minister of the interior, was very badly hurt, two others were hurt and many notables of France had narrow escapes. In Paris Sunday when a monoplane plunged into the midst of a party of distinguished spectators at the start of the Paris-Madrid race.

The two less seriously injured were Antoine Monis, son of the premier, and Henri Deutsch de la Meurthe, aged patron of aeronautics, motoring and other sports.

Two hundred thousand persons were gathered on the field at Issy and saw the accident. The monoplane was in charge of M. Train, who has been making a name for himself recently in aeronautics. With him as passenger was M. Boulner. Although the machine was wrecked completely, neither were hurt much.

The accident was caused by M. Train endeavoring to avoid a detachment of cavalry that was galloping across the field to restrain spectators who were breaking through the cordons. About 50 persons of note in the premier's party had been admitted into the field to better see the aeroplanes off. They were hidden by the cavalry and M. Train did not see them until too late. He was descending to remedy an engine defect and, though he tried desperately to avoid the scattering party, he landed in its midst.

President Taft will be invited to visit Port Huron in September when he comes to Michigan.

The town of Del Rapids, S. D. was wiped out by a tornado. Del Rapids has a population of 1,500. No lives were lost.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Hudson.—Ora Jenkins, ten years old, lost his life while bathing in Dean creek. Not being able to swim and getting into deep water, he sank before the eyes of his chum, about the same age, named Schull. The latter ran for aid and the Jenkins boy's body was soon recovered, but efforts to resuscitate him were futile.

Grant.—Alexander Osborn, a young farmer living six miles east of here, attempted suicide by swallowing carbolic acid and by shooting himself three times with a thirty-two caliber revolver. None of the bullets reached a vital spot and a heavy meal just previous to the suicide attempt counteracted the effects of the poison, Osborn having eaten freely of bread and milk. He will probably recover.

St. Joseph.—A gigantic peach feast, one that will even surpass the wonderful feast which former Representative Sam Kelley put on several years ago for the benefit of Governor Warner and members of the legislature, is planned if President Taft comes to St. Joseph in the fall when he pays Michigan a visit. Already a committee is at work on tentative plans.

Holland.—The board of education has begun condemnation proceedings to secure a site for the new $60,000 high school building. The board selected a site, centrally located, owned by E. Vanderveen, a pioneer of 1847, but the owner asked an exorbitant price and the trustees decided that the only way to secure the property was by appraisal through the courts.

New Richmond.—Twenty farmers in this vicinity here armed themselves and are watching nightly for a gang of marauders who have been tearing down fences, burning buildings, cutting off the tails of horses and doing other acts of similar character. The sheriff has been appealed to in an effort to locate the guilty ones.

Ann Arbor.—Goodloe Harold Rogers, who is a senior lit and a freshman law student, and whose home is in Pontiac, was taken to the detention hospital suffering with small-pox. This case is the hardest so far that has appeared here, and the most typical one.

Battle Creek.—Fred Bieress was found in an unconscious condition beside the tracks of the D. T. & M. He had been struck on the head with some blunt instrument. Recovering his senses, Bieress declared that he was struck down and robbed of his money by men unknown to him.

Muskegon.—Eugene Phelps, until recently stage director of the Highby stock company, committed suicide at St. Louis, Mo., by shooting himself. He had become discouraged over his inability to procure work since leaving the local company.

Grand Rapids.—Fire starting in the basement of the Valley City Biscuit company resulted in the destruction of the plant, valued at $20,000, with $10,000 worth of store buildings, and other property adjoining worth $15,000.

Saginaw.—Robert Gamble, nineteen years old, found guilty of highway robbery, was sentenced to four to eight years. Gamble still protested his innocence when the sentence was pronounced.

Eaton Rapids.—A. G. Foote, a prominent resident here in a fit of despondency over ill health, attempted suicide by cutting his throat, but the doctors saved him. He is seventy-two years old.

Cadillac.—Oscar Swanson, aged forty, the leading business man of Tustin, died in Mercy hospital following an operation for appendicitis. He leaves a ten-year-old daughter.

Hillsdale.—While hanging out clothes, Mrs. Allen Agnew, sixty-five years old, was seized with apoplexy and died without regaining consciousness.

Scotts.—Fire which broke out practically destroyed the business section of this village, causing losses aggregating about $75,000. The village has no fire protection, and an engine was sent from Battle Creek. Nine business buildings, the post office, three residences and a lumber yard were destroyed.

St. Johns.—Nathan Malone has been returned to the county jail here after a few hours of liberty. He made his escape in the night, through a hole in the wall in the gable end of the jail, where a weak spot had permitted two previous escapes. Malone stole a ride to Ovid on a Grand Trunk freight train. There he struck into the country, and after traveling some miles, caught a ride into Elsie on a milk wagon. He was just about to board a freight train when a vigilant officer recognized him from a description furnished by the sheriff and Malone was soon on his way back to St. Johns.

Ann Arbor.—Michael Manibetsch, who lives in Salem township, was probably fatally injured when his team ran away in this city, pitching him out upon his head. The accident was caused by the wagon pole dropping and scaring the team. The horses tore furiously down the street and crashed into a telephone pole.

Linden.—Mrs. R. B. Shirriff, prominent in local society, and her infant child, died.

Cadillac.—Rev. H. J. Kaysor of Mount Pleasant will undertake to organize an Episcopal society in this city.

The Kidney Cure Without a Failure

Politician and Preacher. A politician in a western state, long suspected of crookedness and noted for his shifty ways, was finally indicted and tried. The jury was out a long time, but eventually acquitted him. After the verdict was in and the politician was leaving the courtroom, a minister who had been in part responsible for the indictment and trial, approached the politician and said: "Well, my friend, you have escaped; but you had a close shave. I trust this will be a warning to you to lead a better life and deal more fairly with your fellow men."

"That may be," the politician replied. "That may be; but I ain't pledged to any one."—Saturday Evening Post.

"Ever since boyhood I have been especially fond of meats and I am convinced I ate too rapidly, and failed to masticate my food properly."

"The result was that I found myself, a few years ago, afflicted with ailments of the stomach, and kidneys, which interfered seriously with my business."

"At last I took the advice of friends and began to eat Grape-Nuts instead of the heavy meats, etc., that had constituted my former diet."

"I found that I was at once benefited by the change, that I was soon relieved from the heartburn and indigestion that used to follow my meals, that the pains in my back from my kidney affection had ceased."

"My nerves, which used to be unsteady, and my brain, which was slow and lethargic from a heavy diet of meats and greasy foods, had, not in a moment, but gradually, and none the less surely, been restored to normal efficiency."

"Now every nerve is steady and my brain and thinking faculties are quicker and more acute than for years past. After my old style breakfasts I used to suffer during the forenoon from a feeling of weakness which hindered me seriously in my work, but since I began to use Grape-Nuts food I can work till dinner time with all ease and comfort." ELEVEN YEARS OF HEALTH.

Kidney Trouble Never Returned.

Mrs. Everett Griffith, 2845 E. Indiana Ave., Evansville, Ind., says: "I was certainly in bad shape from kidney disease and it is really a wonder that I am alive today. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and were abnormally thick; I had bad spells with my head and at times could hardly stand. My left knee became so badly swollen that I began to treat myself for dropsy and my back was so sore and lame I could not raise my arms above my head. I was finally induced to take Doan's Kidney Pills and in six weeks I was well. My cure was made in 1899 and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since."

What Mamma Said. When the new minister, a handsome and unmarried man, made his first pastoral call at the Fosticks, he took little Anna up in his arms and tried to kiss her. But the child refused to be kissed; she struggled loose and ran off into the next room, where her mother was putting a few finishing touches to her adornment before going into the drawing room to greet the clergyman.

"Mamma," the little girl whispered, "the man in the drawing room wanted me to kiss him."

"Well," replied mamma, "why didn't you let him? I would if I were you."

Thereupon Anna ran back into the drawing room, and the minister asked:

"Well, little lady, won't you kiss me now?"

"No, I won't," replied Anna promptly, "but mamma says she will."—Exchange.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Crow Heads Puzzle the Officials

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Here is a pretty kettle of fish. The offices of the county clerk in Indiana are being filled to overflowing with the heads of dead crows, and the result is not pleasing to the sense of smell, to say the least. Came about this way: At the last session of the legislature the farmers of the state succeeded in having a law enacted which placed a bounty of ten cents upon the head of every crow. The farmers argued that the crows destroyed much of their crops by eating the seeds after they were scattered on the ground and were a nuisance in general. Everybody thought it would be a good scheme to abolish the pest by killing off a large number of the prolific crows. And so it came to pass that the law was enacted and most everybody thought the question was solved at once and for all time.

But it wasn't. The county clerks are the sufferers and complainants now. The farmer boys spend their "off rainy days" hunting crows. They are bringing them to the county seats by hundreds. The heads are strung like so many beads or pearls, and often the strings measure four or five feet in length. In communities where the crows are plentiful—and that seems to be all over Indiana—the gunners can bag enough crows in a day to realize a good compensation for their work.

Here is where the rub comes in. The county clerk who receives and pays for the crow heads must keep them until his books, stock and other materials are audited by the county commissioners, which is once a year. Now what is the county clerk doing to do with the hundreds and hundreds of crow heads brought to his office? Surely he cannot put them away in the safe with other valuables. Neither can he throw them away, for in that event he would have to stand the bounty money from his own pocket. The result is that his office smells to high heaven, and even the sale of marriage licenses has suffered a slump.

And that is the reason why county clerks of Indiana have signed a round robin and forwarded it to Governor Marshall, praying him to offer a solution, or at least appoint a commission for that end.

Chinese Queues for Milady's Wig

CHICAGO.—Prices of coiffures are due for a slump and "milady of the boulevards" may soon be promenading down Michigan avenue bedecked in the very latest of late imported puffs which but recently formed the most conspicuous part of the hair adornment of the Celestials of South Clark street.

It may seem strange that the most fashionable of Chicago's smart set will be able to purchase real "imported" puffs, curls, braids, switches and rats which were once the queues of Chicago chop suey waiters and Chinese laundrymen, but the fact remains indisputable, for according to the edict recently passed in China 90 per cent of all the Celestials in the United States have divorced themselves from one of the most typically distinguishing features of the race—the queue.

Following a similar move in the Chinatown of New York, San Francisco and other cities, the Chinese of Chicago the other day kept the barbers busy with the shears and by night there were few left along South Clark street who could boast of the "pig-tails" which were their pride of other days. Hip Lung, mayor of Chicago's Chinatown, and the leaders of the famous Moy family, Moy Tong Gee and Moy Tong Hoy, all bowed with good grace before the power of the scissors.

The hair is being shipped by the Chinese to London where large English hair dealers will convert it into coiffures of the latest fashions and of various shades, and then ship "imported" puffs back to American soil.

The money which the Chinese in this country will receive for the hair is to be sent back to China.

Some time ago an edict was passed to the effect that all citizens or former citizens of China might cut off their queues or retain them as they saw fit. It was formerly one of the strictest laws of the country that every citizen must wear a queue, and those without them were not allowed to return to the empire on pain of severe punishment.

Wife Rifles Pockets! Then Beat Her

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Judge C. M. Lee of the superior court, in the course of a separation suit brought by Elizabeth T. England against her husband, John E. England, stated that a man is justified in chastising his spouse if she rifles his pockets.

The Englands have been married about five years, and recently there has been trouble in the household. Mrs. England wanted separate support from her husband when she came into court. She told on the witness stand that they had three children and had been living happily enough until a short time ago.

One night, she related, Mr. England arrived at his home on Warren street about 3 a. m., and proceeded to curl up on the floor. Mrs. England admitted that she thought he was asleep and started to go through his pockets.

in search of a watch and ring which she claimed belong to her. But Mr. England woke up and gave her a slap in the face.

She tried to go through his pockets again and testified that he gave her a kick in the back. Under cross-examination Mrs. England told that she had struck her husband with a shoe.

After listening to considerable of this testimony, Judge Lee stated in his opinion this couple ought to be brought together and become reconciled. He brought out the fact that the woman only wanted separate support and probably would become reconciled to her husband some time, and thought the present a good time.

Judge Lee conferred with Lawyer Thomas F. Cooney, who represented Mrs. England, and Lawyer Arthur Cushing, representing Mr. England, and they agreed to do what they could to effect a reconciliation.

"But you must tell your client," admonished Judge Lee, with a smile, in addressing Lawyer Cooney, "that she must not go through her husband's pockets again. A man is justified in slapping his wife if she goes through his pockets."

Aero Landing and Lake on Roof

NEW YORK.—New York within a year is to have one of the most remarkable buildings on earth. It is designed to replace Madison Square Garden, and not the least of its features will be a landing stage for flying machines. A $2,000,000 structure is to be reared on the site of the old Brewster carriage factory on the west side of Broadway between Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth streets. It will be used mainly for exhibition purposes and various trades in the sporting line.

The Broadway project is backed by interests identified with the Schlitz Brewing company of Milwaukee, represented in New York by John Ohms, restaurateur, and Oscar Schmidt. The building will be erected by the Atlas Development company, which in January of last year took a long lease on the Brewster site from the Sutphin estate.

The new building is to be adapted particularly to the needs of the automobile, motor boat and aviation industries and their allied trades. With this end in view, certain unusual structural features have been planned, such as a starting and landing track on the roof for flying machines, a lake 60 by 125 feet, also on the roof, for the display of motor boats, and an enormous freight and passenger elevator, 25 by 52, capable of carrying an aeroplane, a 50-foot motor boat or about 400 persons at one trip.

The basement, which will have a very high ceiling, will contain a restaurant seating 6,000 or 7,000 persons and run on the plan of the famous rathskellers of Berlin and Munich. The roof will be used as an open air garden in the summer. The lake is to be utilized as a skating rink in the winter.

REPATRIATED.

HE HAD $400.00 IN CASH IN 1903; NOW WORTH $8,000.00.

My parents were originally Canadians from Essex County, Ontario. I was born in Monroe County, Michigan, from which place I moved to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, where I farmed for 22 years. I sold my farm there in the summer of 1903 and in September of that year came to Canada with my wife and eight children. I had about $400 in cash, team of horses, a cow, a few sheep and some chickens. I took up a quarter section of land near Jack Fish Lake, Meota P. O., and later on purchased for $2,000.00 an adjoining quarter section. I have now 48 head of cattle, a number of horses, good buildings and consider my holding is worth at least $8,000.00. My children have raised from $300 to $500 worth of garden truck each year since we have been here. I have never had a poor crop and have never had one frosted. My wheat has averaged from 25 to 30 bushels per acre with one or two years considerably more. My oats have always yielded well up to 50 bushels per acre and once or twice as high as 85. My cattle have never been stabled in winter, and do not need it. I consider that this country offers better opportunities for settlers than anywhere I have ever been. I am sure that almost any person can come here and buy land at say $15.00 per acre and pay for it in one crop. My experience is that if a man farms his land in the right way he is not likely to have his crop frosted.

Most of the settlers in my district are Americans and Canadians and I know lots of them who came here with little or no capital who are now doing well, but I do not know of any who have left through disappointment, or becoming discouraged, have returned to their former homes.

How He Did It.

At the dinner Saturday of the Military Order of Foreign Wars, Capt. Carlisle L. Burridge told of a man who, returning to his domicile at cockcrow, underwent an inspection by his wife, who desired to know how he came to have a large bump on his forehead.

"That? Oh, that's where I bit myself," explained he of the night key. "Bit yourself?" the lady repeated after him. "How could you bite yourself away up there?"

"Why, I stood on a chair," he said.—Cleveland Leader.

Everyone will thank you for an introduction to the most delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching beverage that anyone could drink. It is cooling—relieves fatigue and just hits the dry spot. At soda-fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

As to its wholesomeness—write to the COCA-COLA CO., Atlanta, Ga., for a copy of their booklet, "The Truth About COCA-COLA"—compiled by authorities.

Who She Was.

"Well," laughed Squiggles, "some men never know when they are snubbed! That lady you just spoke to was about as distant as they make 'em in her greeting."

"Well, why shouldn't she be?" retorted Jabbers. "She's a distant relative of mine."

"By marriage?"

"No—by divorce. She got rid of me at Sioux Falls back in 1898."—Harpers Weekly.

Shouldn't He? A very good natured broker, who is very much larger than his wife, and who likes his little joke at someone else's expense, was sitting in the theater. A man behind him, not knowing who he was, leaned forward and whispered, "Will you please ask your wife to remove her hat?"

"You'd better do it yourself. I'm afraid."

Whereupon the man behind became angry, arose, protested and left the theater.

IF YOU HAVE A SICKLY YOUNGSTER TRY THIS FREE

The family with young children that is without sickness in the house now and then is rare, and so it is important that the head of the house should know what to do in the little emergencies that arise. A child with a serious ailment needs a doctor, it is true, but in the majority of instances, as any doctor knows, the child suffers from some intestinal trouble, usually constipation.

There is no sense in giving it a pill or a remedy containing an opiate, nor is flushing of the bowels to be always recommended. Rather give it a small dose of Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, by cleansing out the bowels and strengthening the

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Erdlicka, R. F. D. No. 7, Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:

"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. Elizabeth's Warning

Outside the landscape was sodden and dreary. A chill rain beat against the pane and now and then sharp gusts of wind shook the naked limbs of the trees and sent flying the few withered leaves that still clung to the branches.

It seemed to Elizabeth, sitting at the window, that the day was typical of her own life, for the rain of discontent beat in upon her soul and the gusty winds of adversity shook her faith in mankind and sent scurrying through the void the dead leaves of her withered ideals.

Tomorrow she would go back home—home to the dingy little farmhouse where she had toiled and slaved through all her young life; back to the drudgery of baking, sewing, and the thousand and one tasks of domestic life, yet in her hand she held a letter which offered her an avenue of escape and assured her a cessation of the drudgery that had borne in upon her soul ever since she could remember.

Until recently she had been content, for she knew no other lot. Then had come an invitation from her sister to visit at the latter's home through the summer. Margaret, her elder sister, had married for money through the kindly offices of a summer boarder who had taken an interest in the clever girl. Her husband, Mr. Tobin, was compelled to remain in town this summer that he might be under the care of a famous specialist and, deprived of her accustomed visit "back home," Margaret had asked that Elizabeth might come to her.

For four months Elizabeth had moved through a dream life in the expensively-furnished home of the Tobins.

There were always guests in the evening, for Richard Tobin entertained lavishly, though he was forbidden the rich foods that he loved to set before those who enjoyed his hospitality. Dicky Belding had called it "eating Tobin's dinner for him."

And now she was to leave it all, to go back to the dull routine of the farm until, in the spring, Guy Rawlings should claim her as his wife. Marriage to Guy would mean only work in a new home; perhaps even more work, for his farm was small and a heavy mortgage had been left upon it by his father.

Cyrus Hartzell, too, had written her an offer of marriage, and the letter lay in her lap as she looked out of the window across the park. Hartzell was an intimate friend of Tobin's; a dry, withered, money-making machine, whose first wife had died—so it was said—because of the privations she had endured in Hartzell's early days of money-making, when every penny was put back into the business to be turned over and over again, multiplying itself until at last Hartzell was at once a widower and a millionaire.

And now he honored Elizabeth by offering her his hand and fortune. He wanted someone to preside over his home as gracefully as Margaret played the hostess for his friend. It was a business communication rather than a love letter, but Elizabeth preferred it so. She could not have endured it had he spoken of love. As it was, she rose, at length, and crossed the room to the tiny writing desk. There was no real engagement with Guy, and in a few short words she expressed her appreciation of the honor Hartzell had done her and accepted his offer.

She still sat at her desk, the letter sealed and stamped, lying before her when Margaret entered. Something in the tenseness of her attitude alarmed the younger girl and she sprang to her sister's side.

"What is it, Meg?" she cried, as she threw her arms about her. "What has happened?"

Margaret bent and kissed the girl's white lips. "Richard is dead, thank God," she said simply. "He was seized with an attack and died before we could get the doctor."

Elizabeth recoiled at the harshness of the tones and softly murmured "Thank God!" Margaret turned to her passionately.

"Yes, thank God," she cried. "Bless you don't know what I have gone through with. No one will ever know what I have suffered unless they, too, have sold their lives for comfort and wealth. For six years I have been tied to a man I did not love, who did not love me, denied even one word of love. Now I have my reward. I am rich and a widow, but—God help me—I no longer have a heart. It is dead within me, killed by my loveless life."

Gently Elizabeth led the hysterical woman to a sofa and while the Dusehold, upset by the occurrence, hurried about to see that needful things were done, Elizabeth sat with her sister, vainly trying to comfort the stunned woman.

At last with an effort Margaret roused herself. "I must go and see that flowers are ordered. I must keep up appearances to the bitter end," she said dully. "Bless you will wait until—until afterward, won't you?"

"I shall not go until you no longer need me," promised the girl, as she put her arm protectingly about Margaret. Slowly they moved toward the door, but on the threshold Elizabeth paused and ran toward the desk. In the tiny grate a cheerful fire burned to offset the disagreeable dampness of the weather, and on the glowing coals she laid the letter to Hartzell.

"Oh, is not this the happiness to which I have longed for?—the happiness to which I have longed for?"

HAJDY TABLE FOR INVALID

is of Simple Construction and Amateur Carpenter Can Undertake It Without Misgivings.

Any article, no matter how roughly it may be put together, that tends to the comfort of an invalid is well worth a thought, and in our sketch we show a table for placing over the arms of a chair, fitted with a desk on which a book may be placed in such a position that it may be read by the invalid without the exertion of holding it, and on the table there is also plenty of space for a cup of tea and other things.

It would be useless to suggest dimensions, as a very tall person would require a higher table than someone of shorter stature, and therefore, in a measure, the table must be made for the invalid it is intended for; but it is as well to remember in making it, that the length of the legs should err on the wrong side, as it is an easy matter to cut them down and shorten them, but they cannot well be made longer.

The sketch very clearly shows the shape of the table, and it is of such simple construction that the amateur carpenter can undertake it without misgivings, and when complete, for appearance sake, it may be painted or stained.

The legs should be made of wood about one and a half inch square, and the top of the table should be wood of about three-quarters of an inch in thickness. The desk can be made of somewhat thinner wood and merely consists of one slanting piece supported at the back by two triangular pieces. An elastic band is fastened across the front of the desk, under which the book may be slipped and held in its place open.

The lower sketch shows a front view of the table, and the upper illustrates it in position over the arms of the chair, and shows the back of the desk and explains the simple way in which it is constructed.

WOOL GARMENTS IN FAVOR

Sweaters, Coats and Caps Will Be in Demand for Summer Outing Purposes.

The Shetland wool sweaters, coats and caps which met with favor this past winter for outing purposes will be in demand for summer.

The summer woollen garments are of lighter weight than those for cold weather, and include knitted coats, caps, loose knickerbockers, and the quaint "hug-me-tight" of a bygone generation, used now to slip under a spring coat on a cool day or for slight warmth when the sweater is too heavy.

With a white serge skirt a white knit coat lined with a color is good looking and comfortable. This season it is noticeable that the knitted coats match the skirt.

A serviceable color is a wood brown knitted coat and serge skirt, worn with a pongee blouse in natural tone, embroidered in browns. Sometimes for extra warmth there is a white jersey blouse worn under the knit coat, or this can be in a gay color to contrast with the outer garments.

The chief objection to this use of wool for summer is moths, but if the garments are kept well brushed and not allowed to hang in the dark and are occasionally wiped off with gasoline, the danger is small.

Agrettes and Quills.

Neapolitan is much favored for the plainer hats on which no flowers are used. A walking hat that is particularly smart is of white Neapolitan with a turned-up brim of black velvet. The only trimming is a swirl of the straw at the side, from which rise four of the new slender agrettes, which are absolutely without stiffness and resemble the antennae of a butterfly. On another white walking hat the trimming is a pair of stiff black quills which stand up perfectly straight and have in front of them a pair of the narrowest clipped white quills.

Fruited Fiches.

Elbow frills and fruited fichus are becoming more and more the vogue, and bring back forcibly the colonial belles with their quaintly draped gowns, finished at the bosom with snowy white kerchiefs.

Point d'esprit lace, with a narrow embroidered edge, makes a lovely fichu and, while ruffles are taboo on the frock itself, two or even three narrow ruffles attached to the edge of a draped fichu frames the shoulders charmingly.

GOV. OSBORN AT C. E. CONVENTION

Good Citizenship Will Hold Important Place.

EX-GOV. HANLEY IS COMING

Everything in Readiness For Christian Endeavor Convention at Detroit—Many Prominent Men Will Attend. Convention This Year Will Embrace All Young People's Organizations.

The young people of Michigan will be given an opportunity of hearing some of the country's best and most widely-known public men at the Twenty-second Annual Convention of the Michigan Christian Endeavor Union, to be held in Detroit, June 22-25th.

The convention will this year embrace all the Christian Young People's organizations in the leading Protestant denominations of the state, and for this reason it is necessary that the speakers be the most representative men that can be secured in the country. The committee believes that this has been accomplished.

The convention will be formally opened on Thursday evening, June 22, at the First Congregational church, by Hon. Chase S. Osborn, governor of Michigan, who will address the meeting on the subject of "Good Citizenship." Governor Osborn needs no special introduction to any person in Michigan, neither is any comment necessary on his views of good citizenship. Since he has been in office he has had numerous opportunities of proving just where he stands in these matters. In view of this fact, the committee which had this matter in charge acted wisely in choosing Governor Osborn to open a convention of Christian Young People. While he has held his office for only a short time he is widely known for his ability in performing the duties which confront him. Not only is he well known in this state, but throughout the country his name is becoming a familiar one.

On Saturday evening, June 25th, a large popular meeting will be held in the largest auditorium obtainable for the purpose, at which Hon. J. Frank Hanly, ex-governor of Indiana, will speak. His subject will be another phase of "Christian Citizenship." Like Governor Osborn, ex-Governor Hanly needs no introduction to Michigan people. As a proof of his popularity Detroit people, at his last visit there, filled the large armory to its capacity at a Sunday afternoon meeting, and there are promises of a record-breaking crowd at the convention meeting. Seats will be reserved for all registered out-of-town delegates, so that those who have not yet had an opportunity of hearing him will be sure to hear him at this meeting. Governor Osborn and ex-Governor Hanly are both very popular as platform speakers, and many will attend the convention to have the opportunity of hearing these two prominent public men.

The Christian Endeavor Unions throughout the country have from time to time taken active interest in matters pertaining to good citizenship, and a Christian Endeavor convention of the magnitude of the Detroit convention would seem incomplete without the above speakers, or someone of equal merit.

All registered, qualified delegates will be entitled to a free automobile ride, a free boat ride and free entertainment (lodging and breakfast) upon presentation of the necessary delegate's credentials. These credentials can be secured by addressing: Miss Mary F. Phinney, 107 Collingwood Ave., Detroit. Delegates must present these credentials, properly signed by the president and secretary of the delegate's society, upon arrival in Detroit.

ENDEAVOR.
Endeavor is a word of power; Endeavor kills the lazy heart; Endeavor then forever; Endeavor is a princely word; Endeavor forms its own reward; Endeavor, then, Endeavor!

OPEN NIGHT AT SCHOOL.

the work of the pupils and illustrated work done, from the produce map of North America in the fourth to the diagrams of dynamo, trolley cars and steam engines in the Physics room. In every room, too, there was to be seen the equipment provided for teaching; all this and the general equipment of the building was mentioned in the report last year, so it will be unnecessary to repeat. But in each room there were some features that attracted unusual attention, such as the gift arrangement in the kindergarten, the chicken farm in the first, the free arm movement work in the second, the bird and flower study in the third, the relief maps in the fourth, fifth grade, painted maps of Europe, sixth grade designs and block printing, seventh grade maps and screen designs, eighth grade, maps showing campaigns of the civil war. The Manual Training room received the lion's share of attention again and its exhibit showed not only the skill and training aimed at in the course, but showed the extremely practical nature of its application; for instance, chairs were being repaired for the school, map frames were under construction for the history department, and a fine weather house for meteorological instruments for the science work was shown. The chemistry department too was popular, except that it and the engine rooms, being in the far corner of the basement, were not found by everyone. It might be said here that though guides were furnished as before, yet perhaps because people had learned the way about last year they seemed to prefer to find their own way and they seemed to thoroughly enjoy the process. But where ever their devious path led them it never failed to end at the high school study-hall, where the evening's entertainment had its climax. There the Eng. II class gave practical illustration of their work in the study of Scott's Ivanhoe. Ruth Histon gave a resume of the story she had written and then three scenes from the story were given by members of the class just as they had been dramatized by the class. No expense, except for a little cheese cloth and colored paper had been incurred, and the pupils managed with the material at hand to give realistic views of the life 700 years ago in three different settings. The first scene was in Ivanhoe's tent after the tournament and showed the Knight still clad in his armor and the squire of the Knights whom he had defeated. In the second scene the tent was replaced by draperies and oriental furnishings of a room in Isaac of York's home. In the third scene the stage was hung with black and by the weird, red light of the coals in the grate on which Isaac was to be tortured the dungeon of Torquilstone with its chains, bones of former prisoners and other horrors were half revealed. The acting was good—the way the principles of suspense and climax were worked out being particularly good. Both the Sophomore English class and their teacher, Miss Freeland, deserve praise for making so much of so little, and especially for presenting something that was pleasing to the audience, and at the same time typical of school work and of high educational value to those taking part. Wash the Blood

Aching and enfeebled muscles should remind you of slowness of tissue repair. Eruptions of the skin and catarrh of the mucous membranes show diminished nerve power in the tissues.

In health or disease there is need of an internal bath. This is best obtained by drinking a glass of pure water with one or two teaspoonfuls of SAN-JAK thirty to sixty minutes before breakfast, washing the blood. This passes quickly from the stomach and stimulates the bowels to increased peristalsis, overcoming constipation and its attendant ills. It is quickly absorbed and entering the blood stream bathes the cells of the liver and heart, then passes to the brain and washes out the cobwebs and awakens to new life every cell in the body.

SAN-JAK dilutes theropy secretions and dissolves all abnormal crystalline substances that may be in the blood and urine. SAN-JAK greatly promotes elimination, creates downward peristalsis, stimulates a flow of digestive juices. It dissolves the sticky mucus in the mouth and throat, allowing the membranes to be bathed in their natural secretions. San-Jak is the great medium of exchange in the body by enabling the kidneys to absorb and eliminate alkaline sulphates which are the products of intestinal decomposition and in renal weakness or the real cause of Bright's disease.

Man does not wear out like a piece of machinery by constant disintegration for he is self renewing. When he loses his ability to self renewal or fails in process of making young blood, the nerve tissue is not sufficiently nourished and his strength and health fail.

SAN-JAK is the only medicine which will enable you to keep a perfect balance between the elimination and renewal of the body. Decay of the body at any time of life is unnatural. Permanent waste of the system can be avoided by the use of SAN-JAK.

Rheumatism, catarrh and bladder trouble, the source of trouble to humanity, is due to a too high or low specific gravity which may be regulated to normal by taking SAN-JAK.

Swelling under the eyes, grayish white or waxy color of the skin denote granular disease of the kidneys. The cure is San-Jak.

Sold by

John L. Gale,

Plymouth, who is reliable and will return the price of one bottle if San-Jak fails to do good.
