

THE PLYMOUTH MAIL.

VOLUME XXIII., No. 43

PLYMOUTH, MICH., FRIDAY, JULY 14, 1911

WHOLE No. 1241

Local Correspondence

PIKE'S PEAK.

Ethel and Marie Seivert of Detroit are visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Markey.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Richards of Detroit visited the former's sister, Mrs. Maad Tait, last week.

Thomas Kerr of Lakeville and D. Dickerson of Farmington visited friends in this place last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Markey entertained their daughter of Detroit last Sunday.

Mrs. E. Holmes went to Detroit Wednesday to attend her mother's funeral.

E. Hix and family have been visiting their sister at Elm for a week, came home Tuesday.

Mrs. J. Shotka was here Monday calling on friends.

Mrs. Tom Bridge called on her mother, Mrs. J. Bridge, on Tuesday.

Sunday visitors at H. Klatt's were John Houk and family and Will. Witt and family.

Haying is nearly done and now we hear the hum of the threshing machines.

Right in your busiest season when you have the least time to spare you are most likely to take diarrhoea and lose several days' time, unless you have Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand and take a dose on the first appearance of the disease. For sale by all dealers.

WEST PLYMOUTH.

Miss Florence Lucas, of Cleveland, O., who has been visiting relatives in this vicinity for the past two weeks, returns to her home Friday.

Mrs. Heaney and Gladys of Northville visited at Wm. Heaney's Wednesday.

Mrs. Abbie Stryker, Mrs. Lydia Lucas and Florence Lucas visited Mrs. Emory Shook at Northville Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas of Dearborn visited at J. J. Lucas' Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Coy and little child of Detroit is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Gus. Gates.

Mr. and Mrs. Wyman Bartlett and son Kenneth visited at Daniel Murray's Sunday.

Considerable interest was manifested in the annual meeting of district No. 7 Monday evening. The following officers were elected: Albert Ebersole, moderator, and F. L. Becker director for a term of one year, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of James Heaney from the district.

Allen and Mary Brown of Superior visited their aunt, Mrs. C. F. Smith, Sunday.

James Purdy is building an addition to the north wing of his farm house. The Purdy home will present a fine appearance when the work is completed.

The Cooper's Officers Helping Hand Society will meet at the home of Mrs. James Heaney, Cady street, Northville, next Wednesday afternoon, July 19, at 2 p. m., for a social time. The members are requested to bring cake, and ice cream and cake will be served from 3 until 5 o'clock. Every one is cordially invited. The usual fee of 40c will be charged.

Every Farmer Must
Have something to keep his animals healthy. Those who use Harvell's Condition Powder have no trouble. It keeps working horses sound, purifies the blood, puts on flesh and makes the coat smooth and glossy. As a poultry powder there is no better. It wards off disease, brightens the plumage and increases the yield of eggs. Price 25 cts. Sold by Pinckney's Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

LIVONIA CENTER.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Ravenswood, near Detroit, visited at William Garchow's Sunday.

Haying is being cornered this week around here, several farmers being all done.

The hum of the thresher is heard again and several farmers have their grain in the bin.

Fred Lee's people entertained company last Sunday.

Ira Wilson's buildings all went up in smoke last Sunday, fired from a passing train.

At Monday night's school meeting Paul Helm won out on Joe McEachran as treasurer of the school board.

The dry weather still continues and everything is very much in need of rain.

For summer diarrhoea in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, and a speedy cure is certain. For sale by all dealers.

NEWBURG.

Born, July 4th, to Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Carson, a nine pound girl. This is truly a patriotic baby.

Mrs. W. R. LeVan was called to Ann Arbor last Thursday on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. Armstrong, who is better at this writing and has gone to Bay View for a few weeks.

The former friends of Mrs. Edwin Sackett were grieved to learn of her death, which occurred at her late home in Detroit. The family have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

Lemuel Truesdell of Plymouth was a visitor at W. R. LeVan's Sunday.

Our people are not much interested in school work, as there were only six present at the school meeting Monday night. Albert Stevens handed in his resignation as director, which was accepted. Chas. Durvea was elected director for the rest of the term. C. E. Ryder was re-elected treasurer.

Mrs. L. Langs spent Sunday in Detroit.

James LeVan has gone to Higgins' Lake to spend the rest of the summer.

Next Sabbath will be the last service that our pastor will be with us for some time, as he leaves on his vacation the following Monday. The Misses Youngs will sing a duet for the church service. Every one invited to the Sunday-school.

The Krumm family have the sympathy of every one in their trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Smith and baby girl are staying a while with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Smith.

It was stated last week that Lillie Broadbent and Harry Pankow were married last fall unbeknown to their friends. The facts are they were married this spring and both of their parents were aware of the marriage.

Tied in a Knot

Describes the way you feel when you are struggling with an attack of cholera morbus or cramp colic. Renne's Pain-Killing Magic Oil unties the knot and quickly gives relief. It does the same work when rubbed into the skin to relieve rheumatism, sprains, lame back or stiff neck. It's a wonderful remedy for internal or external use. Price 25 cts. Sold by Pinckney's Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

ELM.

Sparks from the engine of a passing freight train on the Pere Marquette Sunday morning set fire to the stubble on the farm of Ira Wilson, adjoining the track and in less time than it takes to tell it, had spread over the field to the straw stack next to the large new basement barn, which was consumed in a hurry. The wind blowing strong from the southwest it was no time before other outbuildings also took fire, thence to the house, and in an hour every building was wiped out. A log house which had stood on the farm for 60 years and was used for storing tools was also burned to the ground. If the wind had been in the northwest there would have been nothing to have saved the little town from being entirely wiped out. Mr. Wilson's loss is 350 bushels of wheat that he had just thrashed, about 10 tons of hay and a large number of farm implements, besides all his buildings, which is covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ruthenbar called on Mr. and Mrs. Will Wolf Sunday.

Elmer Klumpf, who had his hands severely burned during the fire here Sunday, has returned to his home in Northville.

Miss Lina Thiede, of Greenfield visited her parents Sunday.

Thrashing wheat is in full blast in this vicinity.

Mrs. Asa Shaw had her back severely wrenched in a runaway at Redford last week, but is some better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Garchow are entertaining an uncle from Delray.

Chas. Hirschlieb was in Detroit on business Tuesday.

A heavy wind and hail storm passed just north of us last Friday doing considerable damage.

Herman Ash of Detroit called on Mr. and Mrs. Will Cort Saturday.

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars or steamships. For sale by all dealers.

JUST TRY IT!

THAT'S ALL WE ASK.

Take home with you a gallon of

"FLY AWAY,"

Spray your cows at night and morning, it will take only a minute or two, and if the flies don't go away, and STAY AWAY, don't pay for it. Isn't that fair? Your milk product will improve 100% in quantity as well as quality. JUST TRY IT. 75c. per gallon and a discount of 10% for cash. Don't forget that.

Michigan's Annual Mourning

Detroit News: Almost the entire top of the lower peninsula is again at the mercy of an enemy that seldom shows mercy. The jackpine forests that have sprung up on the cut-over lands are aflame, and before the fire, which runs at express train speed through their dry and pitch extent, lives and property are swept away. How many human beings have perished in the fire now raging cannot be estimated with certainty at this time. The property loss runs past the million mark in the first day of the conflagration. What the indirect loss to property is and will be cannot even be imagined, for one of these fires sets back the development of the whole section, at present in the transition stage from lumbering to agriculture, for many years.

These forest fires are getting to be an almost annual occurrence in the northern part of this peninsula. Every dry spring and hot summer brings its attendant horror. The jackpines thrive on the sandy plains and when scorched in the hot June and July sun become as inflammable as tinder. A fire is very easily started in them, and once it gets headway under a breeze there is little possibility of stopping it. A Metz or an Au Sable-Oscoda tragedy is almost invariably the result.

It does seem as if something could be done by state action to prevent the recurrence of these calamities. There is a statute, approved June 28, 1907, which in wording appears all that is desirable as a measure for protection against fire; but for some reason or other it is practically ineffective. This law delegates the supervisory work, which must precede regulations looking toward prevention of fire, to the state game, fish and forest warden. His deputies are to be aided by the township supervisors. The weakness lies probably in the fact that too many things are grouped in his office. Those northern counties are extensive, and township supervisors generally have enough to do with roads, schools and other local improvements. An investigation should be made to determine just wherein the plan fails, and how the weakness can be supplanted with efficiency.

Right now, however, it must be the concern of the people of Michigan to see that the refugees, the maimed and the helpless are given the best possible care and aided to their feet again. As soon as any call for relief is sent out, the generous response which the people of this state have always been ready to make under such circumstances ought to be, and undoubtedly will be, forthcoming.

Farm Products and Reciprocity

Canada in 1910 exported $140,000,000 of farm products, including animals and animal foods. This was her whole surplus. She doesn't raise anything to throw away, or waste, and she raises all she can. The whole force of the threat of competition with our farmers is comprised in this amount. Eighty per cent. went to the United Kingdom, the rest of it to other countries with a negligible quantity appropriated to the United States. If it could be imagined that immediately upon securing reciprocity with this country she would refuse to send another dollar's worth of it to Great Britain and ship it all to the United States, which is all that could even be imagined it would simply result in diverting an equal portion of our own products from home consumption to the British market, and we should gain the customers whom the Canadians had abandoned. If we didn't need it ourselves we should ship it to England and get a profit on it. If we did not sell it to the English at a profit, it would be only because we needed it ourselves. In that case we should eat it, and that would do no great harm.

In short, with respect to food, the whole world is one great stomach, and food that is not sent one place is sent another. Its price can neither be increased nor diminished by domestic tariffs so long as there is a surplus to export, for the price of every pound to the domestic consumer is always fixed by the world price. The price at Chicago or Detroit is always the Liverpool price less the cost of carrying it there. Every fluctuation of the Liverpool board is followed by an equivalent change here. This must always be the case until we have so multiplied the domestic stomachs as to eat up all we can raise and ask for more. Then we shall take the place of England as the point to which the world's surplus of food shall be shipped and then we shall dictate the price as Liverpool does now, and then, if we desire, for the benefit of our farmers, to make the American consumer pay more for his food than he ought to, there will be some sense in clapping on a tariff, however cruel it might be. —Detroit Free Press.

PRESBYTERIAN.
Rev. B. F. Farber, Pastor.
Services will be held in the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday, July 16th, as follows: Morning worship at 10 o'clock. The pastor will preach. Sunday-school at 11:15.

The union service in the evening will be held in Central Park at 6:30. If the weather should be unfavorable to an outdoor service will be held in this church. Rev. King preaches the sermon.

Prayer meeting on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. We extend a most cordial invitation to all to attend these services.

Oiling Streets.

Mrs. Kate Allen has had, at her own expense, the street opposite her home and for a distance on each side thereof, sprinkled with oil, for the purpose of laying the dust. The work needs to be gone over again to make it thoroughly effective, but it has given the people an understanding of the effect oil has as a dust eliminator. It has also demonstrated that the smell is not as bad as had been supposed, at least what there is of it is preferable to the clouds of dust, and it's a healthy smell, too.

As the people on the street see what it is doing for that particular locality, a petition was circulated Monday and secured the name of nearly every property owner on Penniman avenue from Main street to the village limits, and also upper Church street, who are willing to pay their pro rata share of having the street sprinkled with oil, and have a good job made of it. Much has been said for and against oiling streets, but if the purpose is carried out, it will demonstrate whether it is worth the money expended.

Water Supply Short.

At a special council meeting Monday evening the matter of village water supply was seriously discussed with the result that orders were issued that street and lawn sprinkling be limited to one hour morning and evening, instead of three hours each, as heretofore. Signals will be given from the electric light plant—one blast the time for beginning, two to stop. The pressure on the mains at evening time for the past week or more has been almost nothing and should a fire have occurred at that time of day there would have been no water supply to put it out. In the morning the pressure is almost normal, but as much water is being used during the day, the supply becomes limited by night.

Some of the people who came to attend the Commercial hotel opening Wednesday "burned up the brick" on Main street in endeavoring to make speed between "aces." And because the marshal and his assistants failed to take cognizance of the reckless driving, there are citizens who do not feel right about it. Serve 'em all alike, seems to be the only fair way. Then again, any citizen may make complaint for speed infractions before any justice.

Fatal Trolley Line Accident

Josephine Pisarek was killed by an electric car early Monday morning and her brother John seriously injured, but will recover.

The two named and Mrs. John Ramas and her son John, aged twelve, were on their way to the M. F. Rowe berry farm to pick berries, from their home near King's Corners. It was about six o'clock a. m. The horse, driven by the boy John, was a young one, and at the approach of the car near the old Springer farm, about two miles east, took fright and bolted square across the track in front of the car. Had all remained in the vehicle, there would have been no accident, but Miss Pisarek and her brother John jumped and fell directly in front of the car and were thrown under the wheels. They were carried some thirty feet before the car was stopped. When picked up from underneath, the young woman was found to have had her right leg cut off above the knee and also had her skull fractured, besides other injuries. The boy, about fifteen years old, was found lying astride the rail and had the car gone a foot further it would have cut him in two. However, he miraculously escaped with his life, but was cut and bruised from head to foot, his back being one raw mass, from being dragged along on the ground by the car. No bones were broken.

Dr. Patterson was sent for immediately by telephone and the two injured people were carried to the home of C. M. Jones, living on the Springer farm. Miss Pisarek did not regain consciousness and died about noon. The boy was later taken to his home, where he is doing nicely.

The horse, with the rig containing Mrs. Ramas and her son tore through a rail fence beside the track, throwing out the two occupants, but doing them no injury. Neither horse nor vehicle was damaged.

Miss Pisarek lived with her parents. She was about 20 years old, was married and leaves a small child, but is said not to have been living with her husband.

Henry Sage, Isaac Gunzolly and others on the car stated the motorman did all he could to bring his car to a stop when he saw an accident was unavoidable, and that the passengers were almost thrown from their seats by the sudden application of the brakes. The motorman was quite unnerved by the accident.

STARK.

Mr. Jackman is very sick with rheumatism.

Little Harry Krumm had a relapse last week Tuesday and though everything was done for him that could be done, it was of no avail. Friday night he was taken back to Ann Arbor for a second operation, but was too weak to stand the shock and passed on to the beyond in a few hours after it took place. The funeral was held Monday at Newburg with interment at Riverside. The family has the sympathy of the neighborhood.

Ione Russell, after spending the week at W. H. Coats', left for her home in Eaton Rapids.

Mrs. W. H. Coats is entertaining company from Shelby, Oceana county.

Bert Krumm has a very sick baby, with little hopes of recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis McKinney of Detroit are spending their vacation in these parts.

We see that John Bennett has named his farm Fairview. That is right. Every one get busy and name your farms and don't let us be so far behind the times.

The last report from Mrs. G. A. Cooper was that she was doing nicely.

Mr. Gould's mother of Detroit is visiting him.

Jira Wilson of Elm sustained a large loss by fire Sunday morning. A passing train set fire to some wheat stubble in a field. It ran with great speed toward a straw stack near a barn and in spite of strenuous efforts on the part of Mr. Wilson and others, the stack caught fire and in a short time not a building of any kind was left on the place. Mr. Wilson places his total loss at $7,500, with only $2700 insurance in the Farmers' Mutual. Four years ago Mr. Wilson had a large barn destroyed by fire.

Harry John Krumm, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Krumm, living on the Plymouth road, died at Ann Arbor last Saturday afternoon after an operation. He had been sick and previously operated on and seemed to be recovering. He succumbed to his illness after a hard struggle. He was born Dec. 10th, 1903. His funeral was held at Newburg church Monday afternoon in the presence of a large number of friends. Interment at Riverside Cemetery. Rev. E. King conducted the service.

Here is how you can make that much

Five Passenger Touring Car, fully equipped, $780.

1st. Have you any idea of buying an Automobile? If not, you can't make this money? If you are going to own a car, you can. And you can do that by buying a FORD car. This is strong talk, but it is so, and FORD talks.

To prove this, all we ask is that you ride in any and all makes of cars, from $1000 to $1500, figure the tire expense, the general up-keep in cost, which is the most essential thing to figure in an automobile, then come to us and ask to have the FORD demonstrated to you over the same roads and under same conditions.

THE RESULT: We will show you a car at one-half the cost which will duplicate and surpass the feats of any of the higher priced cars, with less tire expense and lower up-keep in cost generally.

If all this is true, and we stand ready to prove it, then why pay $500 to $700 more for an automobile? Is money any object to you? If it is, we are ready to save you a small fortune.

We will be pleased to demonstrate the car to you at any time.

A Busy Place.
"Where is that spot you call the 'lovers' lane?" diffidently asks the young man while the young lady waits on the hotel piazza.
"Right down yonder," replies the clerk. "Just keep going until you see the porter from the barber shop. Lovers' lane is so crowded now that we have him stationed there to give the guests checks, so that each may have his turn."—Judge's Library.

Burglar Befriended Him.
A burglar was arrested for robbing a house up the state some time since, and the next morning the victim rushed wildly into the magistrate's office. As soon as he could get his breath to working again he told the official that he had come to see about the prisoner.
"Glad you came down," was the affable response of the magistrate. "I suppose you want to appear against him."
"Well, I guess not!" exclaimed the victim with a glad smile. "I want to kiss him on the brow and give him $10. Among other things that he stole from the house was a package of love letters that I wrote of my wife before we were married."

Perhaps Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Bread May Be Against You for a Time.

A change to the right kind of food can lift one from a sick bed. A lady in Weldon, Ill., says:
"Last spring I became bed-fast with severe stomach troubles accompanied by sick headache. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, although I tried about every kind.
"I had become completely discouraged, and given up all hope, and thought I was doomed to starve to death, until one day my husband, trying to find something I could retain, brought home some Grape-Nuts.
"To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength at once. My flesh (which had been flabby), grew firmer, my health improved in every way and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained 20 pounds in weight.
"I liked Grape-Nuts so well that for four months I ate no other food, and always felt as well satisfied after eating as if I had sat down to a fine banquet.
"I had no return of the miserable sick stomach nor of the headaches, that I used to have when I ate other food. I am now a well woman, doing all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living.
"Grape-Nuts food has been a God-send to my family; it surely saved my life; and my two little boys have thriven on it wonderfully." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

FOREST FIRES SWEEP NORTHERN MICHIGAN

OSCODA AND AU SABLE WIPED OUT; LOSS $2,000,000. MANY IOSCO FATALITIES.

ENTIRE UPPER SECTION OF THE LOWER PENINSULA MENACED.

Bay City, Saginaw, Detroit and Other Cities Rush Provisions and Temporary Aid to People of the Stricken Towns.

Cities of Oscoda and Au Sable, lying across from each other at the mouth of the Au Sable river, completely wiped out by fire. Not a building left standing, and many lives may have been lost, so rapidly did the flames sweep through the towns.
City of Alpena swept by fire which causes half a million dollars loss, with danger not yet over.
Both these fires started by forest and brush fires in the vicinity, being swept by high winds into lumber or slab piles, whence flames spread with tremendous rapidity and fierceness.
All over the northern half of the state forests and fields are so dry from the recent long hot spell that fires are springing up everywhere.
High winds are prevalent, and are fanning these fires into conflagrations that are likely to cause the loss of thousands upon thousands of dollars, and may result in great loss of life, as was the case in the forest fires in Presque Isle county in September, 1908.
Fires have cut off all wire communication on the Detroit & Mackinac railroad north of Oscoda.
All along the line of the Michigan Central in the northern part of the lower peninsula towns are threatened by the forest fires which surround them. Bridges have been burned, as well as many freight cars on sidings.

SUMMARY OF THE FIRE SITUATION IN MICHIGAN.

With three people known dead, scores missing who may have perished, two towns wiped off the map and nearly a dozen others reported either destroyed or greatly damaged, Michigan is facing the worst forest fire situation the state has ever seen.
Northwest winds, said to be the worst possible for a situation of this kind, are blowing down over the burned and burning districts of the northern portion of the lower peninsula, spreading fires in almost every direction.
There is no rain in sight. Weather men say that a long and hot spell is all the state can expect for several days.
Without rain there is certain to be a much larger loss of property than at present and the figures, were reports in from all districts now, would undoubtedly reach well toward $3,000,000.
In nearly every portion of the area affected, families, and men from lumber camps are reported missing or cut off from the outside world. Trains are held by walls of flame and ruined bridges.
Mayor Cowley, of the devastated city of Oscoda, has wired asking that state troops be dispatched to assist in patrolling the fire zone and bringing order out of the chaos which now exists.
Gov. Osborn stands ready to order out every man of the Michigan national guard if the situation warrants the move.

WHERE THE FIRES ARE RAGING.

The entire northeastern section of the state, a great part of which was burned over three years ago, is again fire-swept with losses which already aggregate millions.
People are fleeing from all the towns along the Michigan Central and Detroit & Mackinac railways.
Bay City is the center of the relief work and trains have been dispatched to the stricken districts with food for 3,000 people.
At Au Sable and Oscoda, at the mouth of the Au Sable river; both towns practically wiped out by the flames.
Body of Samuel Rosenthal, tailor, with two other bodies burned beyond identification, found in ruins at Au Sable.
Alpena—damage to property $500,000; fire inside of city result from bathing boys smoking on bank of swimming pool.
Traverse City—loss to city property of $25,000, while fire rages in country outside.
Boyer City—lumber camps in danger.
Trowbridge in Cheboygan—surrounded by flames and in danger of extinction.
Petoskey—summer cottages along the Inland Route destroyed by fire from the surrounding forests.
Cadillac—fire raging in the forests around the town.
At Richmond, on the Michigan Central, two bridges and 40 cars have been burned and the town is in danger.
In Beaver township in Crawford county several farm houses have been burned.
Requests for militia shelter tents and blankets are pouring into Lansing from the devastated districts.
At Haakwood, in Cheboygan county, on the M. C., two logging trains have been cut off by the fire and it is believed that their crews have perished. A bridge was burned.
An operator at Tower wired that the town was burning and that he was forced to desert his key. About 20 houses at Tower were burned before the operator left.
The condition at Millersburg is not as bad as at first reported. A mill and 31 houses were burned.
Col. W. G. Rogers has ordered tanks dispatched to Oscoda and Capt. Beckwith and the military company at Bay City will take charge. If more troops are needed they will be sent.
The threatening fire in an immense sawdust pile at Cheboygan was reported under control.
At Alger the forests are burning and several freight cars were burned up, but the town is not now in danger.
Forty freight cars on the Pigeon branch of the Michigan Central were burned.
Wheat fields and lumber camps near Grayling burn. One man dead.

MICHIGAN CROP REPORT.

Hessian Fly Cuts Down Wheat Crop Two Bushels Per Acre.

The monthly crop report issued from the secretary of state's office has the following to say relative to farm crops and fruits:

Wheat—The reported excellent condition of wheat for April and May indicated for the state a yield of at least 20 bushels per acre, but the ravages of the Hessian fly in the southwestern portion of the state caused a number of correspondents to estimate the yield at from 3 to 10 bushels. Probably their estimate may prove too low after threshing, and this department still hopes for a return of 20 bushels per acre. The average estimated yield in the state is 18. In the southern and northern counties 17, in the central counties 20, and in the upper peninsula 22 bushels per acre.
Rye—The average estimated yield of rye in the state, central and northern counties 23, in the southern counties 24, and in the upper peninsula 22 bushels per acre.
Corn—The condition of corn in the state is 92 in the southern counties 93, in the central counties 90, in the northern counties 89, and in the upper peninsula 97. One year ago the condition of corn in the state was 79.
Buckwheat—The acres of buckwheat sown or to be sown, compared with an average for the past five years in the state, is 81, in the southern and northern counties 82, in the central counties 75, and in the upper peninsula 99.
Beans—The acreage of beans planted or to be planted, as compared with an average for the past five years in the state is 100, in the southern counties 92, in the central counties and upper peninsula 103, and in the northern counties 112. The condition of beans, compared with an average in the state is 91, in the southern counties and upper peninsula 94, in the central counties 93 and in the northern counties 85.
Potatoes—The condition of potatoes in the state is 91, in the southern counties 92, in the central and northern counties 88 and in the upper peninsula 96.
Sugar beets—The condition of sugar beets in the state and central counties is 92 in the southern counties 91, in the northern counties 90 and in the upper peninsula 97.
Clover—The condition of clover sown this year, as compared with an average in the state is 87, in the southern counties 81, in the central counties 81, in the northern counties 90 and in the upper peninsula 101. The acreage of clover that will be harvested, compared with an average for the past five years, in the state is 83, in the southern counties 77, in the central counties 83, in the northern counties 89 and in the upper peninsula 94.
Timothy—The average of timothy that will be harvested, compared with an average for the past five years, in the state is 89, in the southern counties 87, in the central counties 93, in the northern counties 91 and in the upper peninsula 85.
Peas—The acreage of peas sown or to be sown, as compared with an average for the past five years in the state is 84, in the southern counties 87, in the central counties 77, in the northern counties 79 and in the upper peninsula 10.
Fruit—Reports from correspondents show a slight decline in the percentage of apples, peaches, pears and plums from figures given last month.

Justice Frank A. Hooker, of the supreme court of Michigan, fell dead of heart disease at Auburn, N. Y., after he abandoned an automobile trip because of illness.

He arrived in an automobile with Judge H. A. Mandell and Judge George S. Hoamer, of Detroit. Suffering a pain over the heart he decided to go home to Lansing by train. While entering the New York Central station he suddenly toppled over, and when picked up by friends, was dead.

The announcement of the death of Justice Hooker was a great shock to Lansing, both in state capitol circles and among the townspeople generally. Judge Hooker had been so long a member of the supreme court that he was a familiar figure in the city, and was as well known as he was widely liked.
He had been in poor health ever since the death of his wife about two years ago and it was in the hope of bettering his health that he started on the automobile trip which ended with his death.

Justice Hooker ascended the supreme bench in 1892, when he was elected to fill the unexpired term of Allen B. Morse, who had resigned. He was thus the oldest member of the court in point of years of service. He was re-elected the following year for a full term, and has been on the bench ever since, being returned each time his term expired. His present term would have expired December 31, 1912. He was considered one of the strongest judges on the bench, especially in constitutional law cases and damage suits, and his opinions were always written with painstaking care.

A special election was held in Caro to vote on question of bonding the town for $17,500 for the purpose of completing the sewer system now being constructed. The vote was 341 to 18 in favor of the project.

The Michigan Barrel Company of Grand Rapids has been dissolved by an order of Circuit Court Commissioner Eardley. The Michigan Trust Company is named as receiver. The stockholders petitioned for the dissolution.

The fifth electric car of the Ann Arbor Railway Co. is expected at Frankfort July 15. This car will run between Frankfort and Cadillac and will complete the Electric motor service of the line between Frankfort and Toledo.

Hanging with one hand to the roof of the court house at Big Rapids, from which he had slipped while painting, George Kelley managed to signal his fellow workmen, who rescued him. The roof was 40 feet from the ground.

Two cars were thrown into a ditch at Alma by an engine backing into them. One of the cars contained wet coals, and it is believed that the night watchman had a busy time to keep thirty Almatians away from the car during the night.

J. F. Simons, the Dewitt druggist, who disappeared from home a few days ago, was found in an unbalanced mental state in a cellar. He had been unable to find his way out of the cellar, and had remained there 36 hours without food or drink.

William Jennings Bryan spoke to an audience of between 2,000 and 3,000 people at Coldwater at the last day of the chautauqua. His subject was "The Prince of Peace." The orator was affected by the heat, and had to bathe his head in ice water continually.

Herbert Montague, chairman of the Masonic finance committee, and past grand master of the lodge, has arrived in Alma, to look after the repairs on the new Masonic home, which was the $150,000 gift of A. A. Wright. It is expected to have the building ready for occupancy by Sept. 1.

A complete revision of the course of study for the Saginaw west schools has been arranged to meet the requirements necessary to enter the Arthur Hill trade school. Forestry will be included, in addition to the trades that will be taught, and the pupils will be prepared to enter the new marine school. When through, the pupils will be qualified to enter the merchant marine. A physical examination is also required.

July 14 the furniture strikers of Grand Rapids plan to have one of the biggest parades in the history of the trade unions, on the streets of Grand Rapids. The parade will be held at night, so that traffic will not be interfered with. Over 10,000 strikers will participate.

The charter commission of Petoskey has practically completed its work. It provides for a council of four aldermen and a mayor, all having equal power in voting. It was at first decided to have three aldermen and a mayor, the mayor to have no

Justice Hooker Had Not Been Well for Two Years, But His Unexpected Death Was a Great Shock at Lansing.

Invites People to Use Department.

State Insurance Commissioner Palmer, realizing that few people in the state are taking advantage of the information bureau of the state insurance department, desires to make it known to the public that the department is the forum of the people and that all questions involving insurance policies, whether life, casualty or fire, will receive attention when referred to the department.

Mr. Palmer asserts that a great many poor people have in the past paid at least half of their insurance money to some lawyer who did no more than answer a few questions regarding the policy, or made an effort to hasten the collection from the insurance company.

Mr. Palmer is of the opinion that the people of the state can save many thousands of dollars each year in attorney fees if they will use the department more as a medium of information and makes public the following communication which is addressed to the people of the entire state:

"We desire to call to the attention of the insuring public of Michigan our conception of the functions of the insurance department in its relation with them. In our opinion the insurance department is the forum of the people, and we cordially invite the people of our state to freely communicate with this department in all matters pertaining to insurance, and particularly where there are differences between the companies and the insured, to consult this department before resorting to legal procedure, as many times large portions of amounts due beneficiaries are frittered away in needless legal expense when the whole matter might be adjusted by coming to the insurance department for advice. The department cannot settle your differences, but it can and will gladly advise you as to the law governing in insurance questions submitted to it for consideration."

State to Have Land and Apple Show.

Michigan is to have its own land and apple show this fall. It will be held in the Coliseum, Grand Rapids, the second week in November under the joint auspices of the Western Michigan Development Bureau and the Grand Rapids Evening Press, which have together assumed the responsibility of placing before the world the products and resources of the state.

It is proposed to make this show the finest exhibition of Michigan apples ever gathered together. To this end the Western Michigan Development Bureau has decided not to exhibit at the Chicago land show this year, but to combine its energies with the Evening Press.

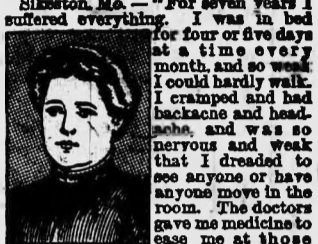

Besides the display of apples and other fruits there will be packing demonstrations, lectures on scientific fruit growing methods, and exhibits by manufacturers and others.

John N. Davis, Stevens Point, Wis., has been appointed superintendent of Menominee schools at $2,500. The board of supervisors of Huron county have fixed the valuation of the county at $5,098,249, which is $25,870 higher than last year's equalization.

Several arrests have been made in Kalamazoo and machinery confiscated by state officials. SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."
—Mrs. DEBA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration. After all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

At the Junction

Julian Grove, burdened with a heavy suitcase and an humble pride, descended the steps of the yellow day-coach that formed half of the only train on the Lindon Valley road. He sat himself on an unused baggage truck to wait until the south-bound train should come along.

Julian preferred the winter sunlight and the crisp air to the lifeless heat of the big stove and the reek of many bodies. He was going humbly to confess his faults, and he wanted to keep clear headed that they might remain fresh in his mind.

He felt that he needed to be watchful, for in his heart he believed the faults to be few. There was grave danger that he might forget again that he was the offender, and take the same attitude of injured dignity that had caused Lottie Maynard to go hurrying back to the city with the declaration that when he came to his senses she might be ready to talk to him again.

There was an accent on the "might" that left the matter in doubt, and Julian felt that it behooved him to keep vividly in mind what Lottie declared to be his offenses.

Mentally Julian recited the catechism of his offenses, punctuating his self-examination with appropriate remarks concerning a train that was two hours late. He was still occupied with this task when a distant whistle sounded, and the waiting passengers hurried from the station to the platform. There was some grumbling when it was seen that this was only a slow train from the south instead of the desired south-bound, but they lined up along the platform to watch the arrival of the few passengers who were making a change. Then they hurried back to the warmth of the waiting room.

Only one girl remained behind to walk briskly up and down the platform. With a glad cry of surprise Julian hurried toward her.

"What are you doing here, Lottie?" he asked, as he took her hand in his. "Where are you going?" she countered.

"I was running down to town to see you," he explained. "And to think of finding you here, on your way to Lindon."

"I was not going to Lindon," declared the girl. "I was going on, but somehow I stepped off the train through habit, and the train went on without me."

"I was hoping that you were coming back to me," he said tenderly, but Lottie tossed her head.

"I told you that when you were ready to admit that you were at fault, that you might write, and that then perhaps I would come. You don't suppose that I would change my mind, do you?"

"No such luck," he admitted dismally. "That was why I was coming to you."

"To apologize?" she demanded, and Julian nodded his head.

A gleam of triumph flashed into Lottie's eyes, but she was not to be won so easily. She had very pronounced ideas on the proper way of handling the man she purposed to marry, and now that he was penitent, she was in no hurry to make the sweet surrender that Julian sought.

"I suppose you are saying that just because you want to make up," she declared judicially. "I don't know that it should count."

"You said that when I would admit that I was in the wrong you would be my friend again," reminded Julian.

"But what's the use of admitting that you are wrong, when you don't mean it?" argued Lottie. "You'll say the same things again the first time that you want to be nasty."

"Don't you believe it," advised Julian with convincing emphasis. "If you would only know how utterly miserable I have been since you went back to town! That was why I decided to come, instead of writing."

"And almost missed me," supplied Lottie. "I think, Julian, that I'll make my visit, and in the meantime, think about coming to Lindon on the way back."

Julian's face darkened. "I wish you'd make up now," he pleaded. "The fact that we met each other here at the Junction proves that it was meant by fate that we should be friends again."

For a moment the girl hesitated. She had meant to keep Julian on the anxious seat for a few weeks, but now that he was coming, penitent and conquered, she felt that perhaps it would be well to surrender before he should again change his mind. The patent leather tip of her shoe dug into the snow.

"It does seem a little like the working of fate," she admitted. "Here I go out of town to visit in Peltonville and you are on your way to town to see me. You are waiting at the Junction for a train that is late and I am left behind by my train."

"Then accept the omen and say that you will make up," he urged. "We can go back to town and pick out the ring and then we'll come back to Lindon and tell the folks."

For another tense moment Lottie hesitated, then she nodded and Julian gave a shout of joy.

"There's the whistle of our train," he cried. "I'll hurry in and get you a ticket back to town."

"I'm glad that you didn't know that I was on my way to give in," said Lottie half aloud. "It will be hard enough, anyway, to manage him without letting him know that."

Storms and the Storm Door

Storms brought up with an abruptness that caused him to stumble against the glass plate before him. Then he shook the door, pushed it, pulled it and pushed again, but to no avail. It was characteristic of Storms that he did not swear at it.

It was one of those revolving storm doors and in some way one of the leaves had become wedged. He rapped on the glass to attract the attention of the porter standing by the entrance, and that served to draw a crowd which stared curiously at him through the glass sides, much as they would regard some interesting exhibit.

The porter bustled about importantly, now shaking the door, now peering through the glass. At last he gave an exclamation of triumph. The door revolved within the two segments of a circle and in the compartment across from Storms someone had dropped a soft clear case. This had wedged the doors tight and it was impossible to move the door.

The porter shouted these facts through the glass. Storms groaned. Jessie Ostrom was leaving for a three months' visit. If he got to the train, there might be a chance to say what had been trembling on his lips that last half year. If there was much delay, she would be gone before he could reach the station. He held up a $5 bill against the glass, but the porter shook his head.

"But these doors fold up," called Storms. "I've seen it done. They fold flat."

"I'd have to squeeze you in," explained the porter. "That's the only way they fold. If you were between the other leaves—"

Storms gritted his teeth at that "if."

A newsboy outside, moved to action by the sight of the bill, sought to push the obstacle free with a bit of stick. The stick broke off and the door was doubly wedged. He started to try it again but a policeman interfered.

"Smash the glass," called Storms. "I'll pay for it."

"Won't do any good," was the disheartening reply. "We've sent to the makers for a man. He'll be along in a minute." Storms looked longingly at the glass but he could see that the chances of breaking the thick plate without being severely cut were not good, and he looked for the porter.

"Tell the man to take an automobile and hurry," he called. "I must get out of here. I'm suffocating."

The porter nodded intelligently. The door was padded top, side and bottom with heavy rubber strips to keep out draughts. Storms was in what was practically an air tight chamber and he had already exhausted the vitality of the air. The porter reached down and ripped off the rubber from the bottom of the door and motpined Storms to do the same with his side.

The thin stream of cold air was delicious, and Storms settled himself to wait, though over and over came the thought that by now Jessie's train was out of the station and pulling across the meadows. Perhaps she was wondering why he had not been there—hurt, perhaps, at his indifference. To explain would only render him ridiculous.

Then there was a commotion in the press. A man in overalls pushed his way through the crowd. For a moment he worked with a screwdriver, then swung the imprisoning leaf back.

Storms stepped out and as he thrust a bill into the workman's hand he glanced at the clock. Already it was 10 minutes past train time. There was no hope now. He might as well go to the office.

He was still surrounded by a curious crowd and he turned to make his way down the street when a newsboy tugged at his coat.

"Say, boss," he piped. "Th' dame took it to give you this."

He held up a grimy card and Storms took it. "Come over to the Clapham for some lunch," it ran. "You will need it after your imprisonment."

He did not need to turn the card over to learn the name, though why Jessie should be lunching there when she was supposed to be on her way was a mystery.

Still attended by his escort, he crossed the street to the restaurant. The crowd dropped off at the door and he entered alone. His quick eye caught sight of Jessie and Mrs. Ostrom over in a corner, and he made his way to them.

"I thought you had gone," he cried as he greeted them.

"I found at the last moment that there was no through sleeper. On the other line I can go through without change. I am leaving tonight instead of when we say our predicament. We had intended to go to the hotel for lunch, but when we saw the crowd we changed our minds and came over here. How did it happen?"

Briefly he sketched the chain of incidents. He told a story well, and now that the element of tragedy had been removed, he skillfully elaborated the humorous points.

"What were your feelings?" asked the girl, as her mother went over to the telephone booth.

"Only regret that I could not get to the station," he returned promptly. "There was something I very much wanted to say to you and I thought I had lost my last chance. I think you know what the question was. What is your answer?"

"I think Fate has answered 'yes,'" she smiled softly. "Yes would have pleased me at the station—so Fate impressed you."

Materials required for the coat: Two yards 48 inches wide, four yards silk-ette for lining 24 inches wide, three-fourths yard silk 22 inches wide for facing.

ROCCO ROSES FIND FAVOR

Those tiny rocco silk roses that have been the passion of the Parisienne for the past two years have found the way to American feminine hearts as well, and have played a large part as a decorative motif on hats, blouses, girdles and neckwear during the past season. They are so piquant in coloring and so adaptable to dainty design that plain satin and gold evening shoes and slippers are decorated with them, either in little clusters or dainty wreaths, instead of the long-used buckle or bow.

Silk stockings also flaunt them gayly, and little sprays of these dainty roses in dull tints add a note of elegance and suggest a foreign touch that is very "fetching." Of course, the handbag of velvet that has been so important an accessory to the street costume has also been enlivened by this means of embellishment, done in black moire or satin ribbon, with a mere dash of gold to blend in with the long gold cords that are so fashionable.

The longer the cords attached to these bags and the handsomer the tassels, the more desirable they are, although when a bag swings at so great a length it is found to be impracticable, so that many women carry silver or gold mesh bags besides, which hold a tiny handkerchief and the necessary small coins.

Unfrayed Scallops. Some housekeepers object to the buttonholed scallop on embroidery, because it frays in washing. This can be overcome in several ways. The surest is to buttonhole a second time over the purled edge, when the scallop has been worked and cut out.

Another method is to run the outline of the scallop with machine stitching before buttonholing. Or in cutting leave a narrow margin and turn back under the scallop and hem to the material.

If these are too much trouble, at least wash the linen before cutting out. The material shrinks and is much less likely to fray. Where the entire piece is not washed, the embroidered edge can be dipped in lukewarm water for a few minutes, then ironed dry and later cut out close to the purled edge.

The Peasant Coiffure.

The peasant coiffure, which is gaining votaries, is a very picturesque and common adaptation of the original design. After parting the tresses in the center, above the brow, the long locks at the sides are plaited and rolled round over the ears in a spiral mound. Those at the back are curled, and it is noticeable that they are piled higher upon the crown of the head than a month or more ago. Little children are wearing their hair in just the same way, but there are no curls at the back; all the locks are crispy plaited and twisted in spirals above the ears.

Silk Petticoats.

Some of the new silk petticoats are most gorgeous in color and trimming. One of brilliant scarlet was made of satin. The under source was of pompadour silk in red and black with a touch of blue, while over this was an other source of red silk net finished in stripes and bound with black weds.

Being a Wallflower

"Were you ever a wallflower?" asked Mrs. Perkins of her neighbor, Mrs. Bottine. "But of course you never were," she added, generously. "I suppose it strikes you as funny. It isn't."

"I used to laugh myself about the poor forlorn things sitting in corners watching others dance," she continued. "I laugh no more. I, like you, thought that I should never be a wallflower, but being a wallflower is like lightning—one never knows where it will strike nor whom."

"Never mind when it happened. Perhaps my husband was to blame for not looking out for me. Still, I suppose the poor man thought the other men would swarm about me after he left me at the end of the first dance. The party being informal, there were no programs, so he had no chance to fill one out for me."

"Well, I sat confidently waiting to be asked for the second dance. Alas! I found I had arrived at the bargaining age, where one man makes a bargain with another like this: 'If you will dance the next dance with my wife I will dance with yours.' My husband had not known of my doleful lack of fascination for other men."

"Patiently and vainly I waited for a partner. Finally I saw a man I knew coming across the hall toward me. I half rose, smiling my most fascinating smile. He passed me unheeding, and asked another woman three seats away."

"Surely with the third number I would be asked to dance—hope dies hard! But the third and the fourth were like the second, and there I still sat. Dancing halls are heated for dancers, not for wallflowers, so I began to feel chilly."

"While the fourth dance was in progress I still sat, every minute getting stiffer and stiffer from the cold, while I saw the other people dancing gayly by."

"One woman kindly asked: 'Aren't you dancing this evening?' To which I answered, 'Yes!'"

"But, oh joy! The fifth dance struck up, and lo, a partner!"

"I did not mind if he was old and fat—and oh, how very fat he was! I did not mind if he could not dance. He, at least, would bring me on the floor with the others. I was so overjoyed at being chosen that I could hardly answer him. It was all I could do to refrain from clutching him wildly, so that he could not get away!"

"I wish I could describe that mad waltz. Novelists have pictured waltzing as floating around the hall with heart and feet attuned to the pulsing, throbbing music. Our waltz wasn't like that. My partner began turning round and round, like a dervish, until my head spun like a top. Now he would step on my toes and then he would mady bump me first into one couple and then into another. But the finest girl has its alloy. One must take the bitter with the sweet. I was, at least, getting warmed up."

"As for my partner, what was my suffering compared with his? His face was purple, his collar was limp and his breath was coming in quick, husky jerks. At last I became alarmed. What if he should have a fit?"

"Hadn't we better walk for a while?" I asked him.

"No," he answered. "No; I'm dancing for exercise. In summer I ride a wheel and in winter I dance to keep down my fat!"

"Oh, why are hope and faith so strong? Why didn't I then go to the dressing room, instead of being led to a seat again, to sit and watch and sit and watch the dancers? But I repeat that hope dies hard."

"Each time a man came my way I smiled, whether I knew the creature or not. It was no use. The revelry went on, and through it all I sat and sat and sat."

"Little by little I moved nearer to the radiator until I found a seat beside it. Oh, how good the heat felt to my stiff neck and my rheumatic knee! It was past my bedtime now and I began to feel sleepy."

"At last the warmth, the music, the laughter and the throb of the dancers' feet all mingled, and I saw nothing, heard nothing!"

"My goodness! Had I been asleep? Had anyone seen me? Oh, my stiff neck, how it hurt!"

"Suddenly I saw my husband coming across the hall. Should I tell him how I had passed the evening?"

"No! No! I would not own up!"

"Smiling, I rose to my feet as he came near. He said: 'I have danced every dance this evening. I am dead tired, and I know you are. Don't you want to go home?'"

"Smiling still, I answered: 'Yes, home sounds very good to me, for I, too, am very tired.'"

"I tried not to limp as I crossed the floor, but my knee gave me ugly twinges."

"Why are you leaving so early?" our friends asked.

"Still heroically I smiled, even as I lied: 'We have danced so hard that we are tired out.'"

Optimism?

Tommy—Our Sunday school is to have a picnic next Saturday.

Dick—Good!

Tommy—Why do you say that? Are you going?

Dick—Nope. But that means there'll be a double header at the ball park next day!

GOING ALOFT IS PLEASANT

One of the Least of the Things With Which the Sailor Has to Contend.

"Most of the people who have asked me about my experience before the mast," said a man who has served as an ordinary seaman on a deep sea vessel, "have said right away, 'But wasn't it dreadful to go aloft.' Now as a matter of fact going aloft was one of the least of the things I had to contend with."

"When I went aboard that old square-rigger for the first time I thought going aloft would be the worst of all. I thought I'd get dizzy sure. I always had on heights."

"The first time I was a bit dizzy and hardly reached the foretop. The second time I got out on the mizzen topgallant yard, sent there to make up gaskets. It wasn't bad when I got there. I was a little shaky going up, but once out on the yard I had something to do and I soon found myself going with interest but quite without alarm over the ocean and down at the deck."

"Having something to do makes a great difference. And then, the fact that you always, or nearly always, have hold of something has a lot to do with it too. The sailors' rule, one observed as carefully by the veteran as by the apprentice, is 'One hand for yourself and one for the company,' and the unwritten but not unspoken corollary is that in certain moments it's both hands for yourself and farewell the company."

"Even now on heights I am bothered unless I have a hold or balance. I marvel just as much as anyone at the steel worker who walks a girder a hundred feet in the air. But riding a girder isn't anything."

"You speedily get so aboard ship that you balance on your belly against the yard and think nothing of the swaying boat rope on which you stand. I never minded going aloft barefoot in the tropics, but coming down—well you feel as if your feet would be cut in two."

"And by the way, in the tropics up aloft is the best place in the world to be. You get the breeze and you're in the shade half the time and you're off the blistering hot deck and the mate can only cuss you afar off. Oh, there are times when you're glad to go aloft!"

The First Astor.

John Jacob Astor was born in the little village of Waldorf, in Germany, in 1763, just as France, at the close of the Seven Years' war, was ceding Canada to England; he sailed to our side of the Atlantic in 1782, when George III, in the treaty of Paris, was acknowledging our independence and when the merchants of Montreal were establishing the Northwest company. He became a fur dealer, gradually gained control of the trade south of Lakes Hyron and Superior, except that which was in the hands of the Mackinaw company, and won a reputation as a daring and resourceful operator which made his name known in Montreal, St. Louis, London and Canton. He had a dozen vessels afloat, representing a capital of $1,000,000, carrying furs to England and China in 1800; and at the time that the purchase of Louisiana in 1803 pushed our boundary to the Rocky mountains he was the wealthiest and most successful merchant in the United States.—North American Review.

Wonderful Financiers.

Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth financier, was talking about W. J. Roman and other New York office boys who, working for brokers, speculated on the tips they picked up and accumulated fortunes of $30,000, $40,000 and $50,000.

"The twentieth-century office boy is a wonderful creation," said Mr. McWade admiringly. "He is so clever, so daring, and, above all, so honest."

"A few years ago I had an office boy named Jasper. One day I sent Jasper out to buy me a post card. I have never seen him since."

"But, sir, you don't call that honest!" cried the reporter.

"Yes—listen," said Mr. McWade.

"Last month I received a post card containing these words:

"Dear sir: Here is your post card. I started speculating with the penny you gave me to buy it; and am now worth $47,000. Thank you!"

Do Not Like the Numbers.

"We cannot now achieve the simplicity of the American city with its blocks, avenues and numbered side streets."

No, thank heaven! Who wants to but the Westminster Gazette, from whom we did not expect such Philistine regret? The L.C.C. may be right. We may have too many streets of the same name; but better be lured to a King street at every turning; better a hundred High streets and John streets and Ann streets than one East Twenty-eighth street. Better gray to the wrong King street than find your way to No. 1000 West Five Hundredth street.—Saturday Review.

Terrible.

"It must be a terrible mental strain for a woman to read a continued story."

"Why so?"

"There is no way for her to find out in advance how it ends."

Judged by His Own Experiences.

Mrs. Wise—Kate never buys anything for herself that she doesn't get something for her husband, too.

Mr. Wise—The bill, I suppose.
