THE CHILDREN.

The point of view best taken is when parents begin to grow old. Not yet old, but with signs of age not far off. Then is the time the children are prized—if they be good children, says the New York Mail. There are few spots so dear as the house that is only a home to two, the man who built it and the woman who adorned it, they two and no more. The gray hairs tell them both that a more solitary day is coming on fast, and they think unspoken things of the happier home across the street filled with young sons and daughters. When the daughter is a companion to the mother, the son his father's chosen friend, then can be realized that there is nothing on this earth that pays such dividends of happiness as rearing a family of fine children. The touch of hands is electric, and vitality is the gift of youth and age. The voices of a beautiful woman your daughter, a manly man your son, are the sweetest music ever heard by mortal ears. They who cannot hear it will be the first to witness to this truth. It is well to tell these children what power they have. From middle life on till the end the greatest good of earth is good children.

The Imperial conference of London has approved the Declaration of London relating to the definition of contraband of war and the regulations which shall govern neutral commerce. The declaration was drawn up by delegates from Great Britain, France, Germany, the United States, Japan, Russia, Italy, Austria and Holland in 1909. It is the first international attempt to settle the question of contraband, which has hitherto been decided by each belligerent nation for itself, says the Buffalo Express. Certain articles are defined outright as contraband, subject to seizure at any time. Others are made conditionally contraband, while there is a long list of articles in which neutral nations may trade without molestation. An international prize court is provided which may adjust any disputes that arise with the seizure of neutral vessels. The agreement marks a distinct advance in civilization. It has been hotly opposed by some conservative British authorities, but its approval by the imperial conference indicates that Great Britain will ratify it, as all maritime nations should do.

BIG FRUIT YEAR FOR MICHIGAN

LARGE QUANTITIES OF PEACHES, PLUMS, APPLES AND PEARS TO BE OFFERED.

SPRAYING TREES HAS HELPED

Beets Are Being Sold at Forty Cents a Bushel—Potatoes Have Grown Well, but the Yield is Small.

Lansing.—Peaches, plums, apples and pears are to be offered in Michigan markets in large quantities before fall say Lansing grocers. Already the vanguard of the early yield of all these fruits has arrived in Lansing, except the pears, which are offered in the Grand Rapids market, however. Early Michigan peaches came to Lansing. The little white clingstones could be bought at wholesale for $2.50 a bushel, while one grocer sold at retail for 30 cents, a few baskets of small freestones. Those which attracted the most attention, however, were the big Arkansas peaches, actually as large as a man's fist, which could be bought for 40 cents a basket. Last year, these sold at 30 cents. But even if the early fruit is high, owners of peach orchards declare that the crop is big, and that by the middle of September great quantities will be on sale.

Sweet apples are also purchasable now, and red Astrakhans are large and of a delicious flavor. Not only has the spraying helped, but the state of Michigan, through the agricultural college, is causing many trees afflicted with the white scale to be cut down. One farmer living near this city says that he lost half of his orchard in this way last fall, that surrounding orchards might be protected. All plum trees are said to be loaded with the fruit which is now worth about $1.50 a bushel, wholesale. Grand Rapids wholesalers offer pears at $1.75 a bushel, and it is probable that Lansing grocers will soon invest. Beets are now bringing 40 cents a bushel and home grown tomatoes have within the last two or three days been offered at seven cents to Lansing grocers by truck gardeners. Cauliflowers are now being shipped in, and are retailed at from 15 to 25 cents, according to size. But the man of the house has discovered that potatoes are a luxury. The plants have grown well, but the yield is very small.

Prepare to Fight Increase in Tax. Unusual efforts are being made by certain counties this year to thwart any increase in their percentage of state taxes by the state board of equalization. About twenty agricultural counties have banded together to demand an increase in the equalized value of other counties, and to prevent any increase in their own equalization. There are indications that these counties are preparing to enter a coalition with Wayne, the big county of the state, for offensive and defensive purposes. The plan of counties has formulated a demand on the state tax commission for the valuation figures of the several counties of the state which the commission has prepared for the information of the state board of equalization.

Eleven of these counties sent representatives to a secret session in Lansing to discuss matters, form an organization and make plans to carry the equalization battle hard against certain other counties. G. B. Horton of the state tax commission was present at the conference. None of those present would admit that any coalition had been formed with Wayne county, but several admitted they believed Wayne pretty well up to the standard alongside other counties. It seems that Kent county is one balliwick selected for a cannonading, the point being made that it is assessed for $110,000,000 while Wayne has increased its equalization valuation the last five years by $112,000,000.

Michigan Patents. Michigan patents were issued as follows: Charles W. Carolin, Detroit, apparatus for cleaning castings and the like; Harold W. Eden, Detroit, razor blade holder; Charles Flint, Ironwood, car stake pocket; William W. Green, Niles, styling machine; Emil and W. Hactala, Bruce Crossing, trolling hook; Joseph Jeffrey, Grand Rapids, heel plate; George W. Jones, Detroit, ore concentrator; Edwin O. and W. A. Krentler, Detroit, automatically locking fast; Charles M. Lockard, Detroit, perfume dispensing apparatus; Franklin Lotter, Elkton, beet digger, also beet topper; George H. Nichols, Grand Rapids, lathe attachment; John W. Page, Adrian, wire fabric; Frederick W. Peck, Detroit, explosive engine; Jan Popiel and J. Urbanski, Detroit, horseshoe.

State Health Board Alarmed. Members of the state board of health are alarmed over the number of cases of infantile paralysis being reported indirectly throughout the state. During the past few days three cases have been reported in Grand Rapids. Reports up to July 1 received here show that twenty cases have resulted since January 1. Seventy-one cases were reported last year, of which forty-seven resulted fatally. A large number of the others were left with partial paralysis.

Harugari Elects Officers. William Noeneman of Marshall was re-elected president of the Deutsche order of Harugari of Michigan at the annual state convention at Kalamazoo. Charles Bauer of Detroit was elected secretary, and Charles Hauser of the same city was made treasurer. Oscar Ehrmann, Herman Kramer and John Lawrence are the executive board. The membership of the society in Michigan was shown by reports to be 4,742, an increase of 744 members in the last year.

Private Banks Change to State. Lansing.—Five private banks in the state were authorized by the state banking department to operate in the future as state banks. The present indications point to the fact that in the very near future there will be a large number of private banks which will be authorized to do business under the state banking law. It is said that at the present time there are at least a dozen applications on file in the banking commissioner's office from private banks which desire to become state banks under the state law.

There has been considerable discussion about the state house as to the reasons for these changes, but no one seems to be in possession of any information, or if they are they are not saying a word. At the present time there are 269 private banks doing business in the state as compared to 413 state and 102 national banks and five trust companies.

Detroit bankers explain this action as the beginning of a process which practically means the elimination of the private banks, in spite of the fact that there are many first-class private banks in the state.

The present banking law which limits the state bank to a minimum capital of $20,000, prevents small towns where there are less than 500 population from having state banks, because the business does not warrant a capitalization of $20,000, but if the state banking act was amended to permit of a $10,000 capitalization, it would lead to the formation of state banks in the smaller towns, do away with many private banks and bring most of the financial institutions under state supervision.

Drinking Cup Still at Detroit. Although the state board of health recently made public an order to abolish the public drinking cup, the common little disease promoter is still very much in evidence about Detroit. It is a case of a new broom which is not sweeping scrupulously clean.

Nearly every hotel in the city has a glass or porcelain cup under its ice water tank and in no cases have they been replaced with sanitary "bubblers." Most lunch counters provide enough glasses, so that each one need be used but once before being washed.

At the Michigan Central depot four cups still remain in the waiting rooms, while at the Union depot they have been supplanted by a vending machine, which sells an individual paper cup for one cent.

The cup is seldom seen now on cars of railroads operating in the state, but the roads have not yet solved the drinking problem to their satisfaction. The Pere Marquette and the Michigan Central are considering the proposition of installing penny vending machines; however, it is feared that the paper cups, after being used once, would be thrown about the cars and create very unsanitary conditions.

According to railroad officials sentiment of the traveling public is strongly in favor of the new order. The majority of travelers carry metal folding cups with them. Few complaints are heard by the conductors, for the anti-cup campaign has been in progress in many states for some time and people are becoming accustomed to providing themselves with drinking receptacles or else going thirsty.

"We will endeavor to arrange so that our agents can sell paper cups at all stations," said Leonard S. Tankbury, chief clerk of the D. U. R. "Like other railroads, we are providing water on all our interurban cars, but the passenger must furnish his own cup. There does not seem to be any sanitary fountain that is practical for railway service. We have the cup vending machine in many of our stations and that seems to be as near the solution of the problem as we can get for the present."

Corporation Tax Being Considered. According to information from Washington the commission of tax inquiry named by Governor Osborn to determine if the state's taxing system can be improved upon, is giving attention to the matter of establishing a corporation tax in this state as a means of providing funds for maintaining the state government. Former Lieut. Gov. P. H. Kelley of the commission and Prof. David Friday of the department of economics at the university are in Washington securing certain information to aid the commission in its investigation, and according to dispatches from there, they hit the capital at just the right time.

The department has been gathering statistics as to taxation of corporations in the states and already has published reports covering New England and Atlantic states and today announces its report on the eastern central states, Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Commissioner Herbert Knox Smith of the bureau of corporations, writing Secretary Nagel, thus sums up his findings as to Michigan: "Michigan and Wisconsin make elaborate physical valuation of steam and street railway property, which with earning capacity, forms the basis of state-administered ad valorem taxes."

WILL BE 433 CONGRESSMEN

SENATE AGREES TO BILL PROVIDING A LARGER HOUSE.

NEW MEMBERS TO BE CHOSEN AT LARGE IN 1912.

The Measure Will Take Effect On and After March 3, 1913—Michigan Gets One New Member.

After accepting an amendment by Senator Burton of Ohio providing that added representatives shall be nominated at large in the same manner as the governor until their states shall have been reconstituted, the senate passed by viva voce vote the reapportionment bill increasing the house of representatives from 391 to 433, and giving Michigan 13 instead of 12 representatives.

The bill now goes to conference. Michigan congressmen declare the house will accept the senate amendment. Unlike the tariff bills, for which vetoes wait, the reapportionment bill will be signed and become law.

All of Michigan's representatives, says Rep. Doremus, have indicated more or less desire that restricting be put off until after the 1912 election, preferring to have the thirteenth member chosen at large rather than to have their own bailiwicks carried up.

Prospective candidates for the Republican nomination at large are said to include: Edwin Denby, Patrick H. Kelley, W. Frank Knox, Harry Smith and Gerrit Dlekema.

The senate adopted the union amendment to the bill by a vote of 29 to 28, after defeating an amendment by Senator Root to leave the house membership at 391, by a vote of 46 to 23.

The reapportionment bill is so drawn that no state will lose in representation, but in some cases there will be a decided increase. New York heads the list with an increase of six members; Pennsylvania gets four; California and Oklahoma three each; Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Texas and Washington, two each; and Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah and West Virginia, one each.

SENATOR FRYE DEAD.

Maine's Senior Senator Is Dead After Forty Years' Public Service.

The state of Maine lost its senior United States senator and an almost life-long faithful servant when William Pierce Frye died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Helen White, in Lewiston, Me. At his bedside were Mrs. White and his other daughter, Mrs. Alice Briggs, who also resides in Lewiston. Although he had been ill for a long time, death came suddenly.

Forced by the condition of his health to resign his position as president pro tempore of the senate at the beginning of the present special session of congress, although he retained his membership in the senate, Senator Frye soon afterward made his last journey to the city which always had been his home. For several weeks his condition was not considered necessarily dangerous. Up to last week he rested in comparative comfort, spending much of his time in reading or in having some member of the family read to him.

Three World Powers Sign Peace Plan

Three of the world's greatest nations, with the United States as the central figure and moving spirit, join hands in opening the way to the coveted goal of modern statesmen—universal peace. America and Great Britain and America and France have signed general arbitration treaties for the peaceful settlement of all disputes that may be locked in the mystery of the future, even though they concern the national honor or vital interests of the signatories, subjects invariably excepted in existing arbitration treaties.

To Jean Jules Jusserand came the signal honor of signing an arbitration treaty between the United States and France six hours ahead of the signing of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain. This distinction is possibly of more personal satisfaction than that gained from having been the first foreign diplomat to come forward with a tentative acceptance of President Taft's informal proposal to all nations for just such a treaty as has been concluded. Mr. Jusserand has been the French ambassador to the United States since 1902 and while Roosevelt was president was a member of the famous "tennis cabinet."

Two-cent rate in Michigan on all northwestern lines operated Aug. 1. There is no change yet on the "Boo" road.

Mrs. Albert Hall, 35, is dead in Utica of hookworm disease. This is the first death from this cause ever reported in central New York. Mrs. Hall contracted the disease in Manila, where she was a school teacher prior to her marriage.

The fortifying of the Panama canal will begin this week at the Pacific entrance of the waterway. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, who returned from Panama, announces. The war department will endeavor to complete the fortifications simultaneously with the opening of the canal.

JOHN W. GATES DEAD.

John W. Gates, the American financier, died in Paris in the arms of his wife and his son, Charles G. Gates.

The end was peaceful, and it seemed as though he was falling asleep. The usual restoratives failed in the last crisis.

Others present at the bedside besides the members of the family were Doctors Gros and Reeves.

STATE NEWS

Grand Rapids.—Margaret Wright, alias Goldie Fuller, who came here a short time ago from Kalamazoo, died in a local hospital after swallowing three ounces of laudanum with suicidal intent. She was walking, with an escort, Charles Rafeley, and when on Bridge street bridge gulped down the fatal potion. Rafeley is being held by the police. Miss Wright expressed fear to her landlady that she would be flitted by a young man whom she was soon to wed.

Lansing.—While the majority of express rates in this state are reduced under the new rate schedule, yet it develops that certain shippers who have been enjoying a special rate for fruit and certain other articles, will discover that their rate has been raised. For many years express companies have granted rates, termed general special, under which certain commodities listed as perishable, have enjoyed this reduction, but the new tariff now on file with the state railroad commission shows that these special rates have been eliminated, and this class of shippers enjoying the lower rates must now pay the general merchandise rates the same as general shippers.

Bay City.—Twenty-seven property owners on Jefferson street, over which the Pere Marquette railway runs for several blocks before reaching its station in this city, brought suit through George E. Wedtboft, assignee of their claims, against the Pere Marquette for $40,000 damages. The property owners allege that the Pere Marquette trains go so fast along the street that they have made it impossible to keep plaster on the ceilings in their homes because of the vibration and that chimneys have to be rebuilt almost continuously, while the smoke, cinders and soot make living almost unbearable along the street.

Kalamazoo.—George Moore, claiming to be a government detective, was robbed here by a pretty girl whose name he has not been able to give the government he is doing detective work for. He claims that he was robbed of more than $80, the girl picking his pockets while he stood on a corner waiting for a street car.

Chelsea.—The recent agitation here over the raise in telephone rates continues and it is reported that the Bell people have taken out several phones. The parties who are engaged in organizing a mutual company are signing up subscribers by the score. An indication of the feeling of the people can be gathered from the fact that a petition is being circulated and, freely signed in the farming community south of here to the effect that the signers will not patronize merchants who retain the Bell phones.

Ann Arbor.—Fifteen-year-old Viola Beck Alford told the story of her stepfather's crime against her to the officers of the juvenile court, with the result that Daniel Alford, who was arrested for assault and battery on a charge preferred by his wife, was again arrested on a statutory charge. He was at once brought up for hearing, waived examination and was bound over to the October term of circuit court and bail fixed at $5,000.

Monroe.—Albert A. Milligan, the Toledo shoemaker held here on a bigamy charge, was given his freedom by Magistrate Berthelote. Since Milligan was locked up in the local jail it was learned that the alleged first wife was married and had never secured a divorce at the time of her marriage to him.

Stanton.—Arthur Moore of Day township brought some goods of M. W. Stevenson in this city, giving in payment therefor a note for $22.50, signed by Paul Steinberg. It was found that the signature was a forgery. Moore was arrested, the goods recovered and Moore bound over to the circuit court on a charge of forgery. He is out on parole from Ionia, where he was sent on a similar charge.

Lansing.—Albert, the eight-year-old son of Rev. Orin J. Price, pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, was drowned in Whitmore lake, near Ann Arbor. Albert was the eldest of three sons and one daughter. He was taken to Whitmore lake with his brothers and sister by their parents about the middle of July, Doctor Price intending to enjoy a six weeks' rest there. The body was brought to Lansing.

Sault Ste. Marie.—Sixteen launches went up in smoke when Kebby & Shields' boathouse was destroyed by fire. The loss will reach $3,500, covered by insurance. An explosion of gasoline while the fire was at its height sunk and saved two launches. The fire lasted but ten minutes.

Pentwater.—On board the private yacht Olivia, off the Pentwater light in Lake Michigan, a wedding of international interest was solemnized, the principals of the unique ceremony being Miss Ada May Nichols of Chillicothe, O., and Dr. Harvey R. Foote of Dublin, Ireland. The yacht was trimmed with flags of all nations; Old Glory and the green emblem of Ireland being most prominent, while the masts and upper works were entwined with white bunting and nearly hidden in masses of ferns and other greens.

A SIMPLE BUSINESS METHOD IN DAIRYING

By W. B. LIVERANCE, Instructor in Dairying, Michigan Agricultural College

Babcock Milk Testing Outfit.

Dairying is supposedly carried on for the purpose of securing a profit. The fundamental element acting as the incentive for any business is the returns for the money invested. Too many farmers do not look on their occupation as a business. They consider it only as a means to earn a livelihood and many are too content with this state of affairs.

Any phase of agriculture is a business and should be considered so by the man entering into it. The man occupied in the sale of wares considers very carefully, if he be a successful merchant, each factor which will influence his profits or his losses. He sees that every article sold nets him a profit. If some particular line is losing him money or fails to make as high a rate of profit as he feels he should have, he disposes of that line.

The farmer owning dairy cows should and must, if he is successful, conduct his business in a way similar to the merchant. He should see that each individual makes him a very profitable return for the money invested. Too many Michigan farmers are actually losing money in the animals not producing enough milk to pay for the feed given them. Is this good business?

The dairy farmer should know exactly the returns in dollars and cents of each cow in his herd. He should know the production of milk and fat from each animal. It requires no great expenditure and the equipment is not at all complex. The above illustrations show in detail everything that is necessary. One must have a set of spring balances and a milk sheet to record the milk produced at the morning's and night's milking throughout the month. A Babcock testing outfit is also necessary in order that the milk from each cow may be tested for butterfat. Then knowing the milk production and the richness, the amount of fat for the month and ultimately for the year can be computed. Then by an estimation of the feed given the cow, her net profit or loss can be easily determined.

The estimated production of cows are very deceiving. A cow may have produced very heavily for a part of the year. She may have produced a large quantity of very poor milk or a smaller quantity of rich milk. These and many more factors tend to deceive the owners. The only accurate and sure method is to keep a record as described, then if animals are found to be making good returns they should be kept and bred to pure-bred dairy sires and the resulting female progeny should be kept when mature as milk cows. The unprofitable or low profit paying animals should be sold as soon as they could be placed upon the market. This means good business-dairying and in the course of a very few years will result in the production of a very profitable herd.

VISITING CAPT. COBB

CALLERS HAD A GOOD TIME WHEN HE WAS THAWED OUT.

Only Genuine American Resident of Casablanca on the Moroccan Coast Is a Connecticut Skipper Who Lost His Ship.

If an American anywhere along the Moroccan coast announces his intention of visiting Casablanca, somebody will say, declares Mr. Forbes in "The Land of the White Helmet," "Be sure to see Captain Cobb," and Mr. Forbes saw him.

A diminutive follower of the prophet led us to one of Casablanca's institutions, a sawmill and a flour-mill combined. Here lives the one genuine American resident of the town, a Connecticut sea captain who lost his ship off Gibraltar some 30 years ago and who has never gone home. The unfinished structure of Brooklyn bridge is his most distinct recollection of New York city as he last saw it.

Stepping inside the doorway we saw a lean Yankee with white, whisker-broom chin whiskers hammering away on a broken cog wheel. With him was another retired sea dog, Captain Taylor of the Royal Mail.

The Connecticut skipper poised his hammer for a moment while we explained that we were two of his fellow countrymen. We expected when he heard the news he would throw his hammer at the Englishman, seize us in his arms and do a war dance. Instead he spat deliberately and resumed his anvil chorus.

"Take 'em into the sittin' room, Taylor; I'll be along directly," was all he said. Lewis and I looked at each other in a dazed sort of way; then, in silence and without enthusiasm, we followed the Englishman.

He led us into a large room; it was plain New England from ceiling to floor. I began to feel at home. The old captain sauntered in. Miffed by his air of indifference, we began to reach for our hats, after a few commonplace remarks that stuck in our throats. To our surprise, Captain Cobb would not listen to any talk of farewell; we were going to stay for dinner. He expressed a vigorous opinion regarding Americans who would think of leaving his house without eating with him.

Little by little the old man thawed out. He entertained us with reminiscences of the home land, with incidents that he witnessed during the bombardment of Casablanca, and with stories of the sea. Hours passed before we again reached for our hats, and he reached for his also. He insisted upon closing his mill and escorting us all about the town.

Standing together on the beach, we invited the old captain to come home and see the suburbs and the 40-story buildings and the old New England hills. He shook his head and pointed to the old mill.

"I reckon I'll weather it out here," he answered.—Youth's Companion.

Not Going That Way.

"Miss Adkins, there is something I desire very much to ask you."

"O, Mr. Williston—I mean Fred—I'm sure I should be delighted to hear—I'm sure I mean, what is there that you can possibly wish to ask me?"

"Would you be willing to go on a long journey with me?"

"A very, very long journey, Fred?"

"Yes, a very, very long journey."

"Yes, I will go with you—of course. I—I suppose it is the journey that a man and a woman take together only once in a lifetime?"

"Well, as a rule, I suppose it wouldn't be taken more than once. You see, my mother and I are thinking of taking a trip to Japan, and she thought it would be nice if I could find someone who would be willing to go as a sort of traveling companion and maid to her in return for having her expenses paid."

"O! Well, you just tell your homely mother that when I wish to hire out I'll look for some other kind of a job."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Jumping Cocoons.

Many visitors to the southwestern states and Mexico have amused themselves by watching the queer motions of "jumping beans," the seed vessels of a plant, each of which contains the pupa of an insect whose spasmodic movements cause the bean to hop and roll about.

More remarkable are the "jumping cocoons" found in South Africa. The cocoon is formed by the mother insect, and is very hard. The pupa, when ready to emerge, must cut its way out. The front of its head has a sharp, chisel like edge, and by driving this against the inside of the shell it gradually makes a hole. The violent motions of the pupa within cause the cocoon to leap so that one has been seen to spring out of a small glass tumbler.—The Sunday Magazine.

The Place for Butterflies.

"You can't bring that chorus girl into my house."

"Dad, she's the sweetest butterfly on earth."

"All right, let her flutter about in the yard."

"I should think with all your money you would have a nice yacht."

"I would, only I can't think of any outlandish name for a yacht that has not already been used."

TALES OF GOTHAM AND OTHER CITIES

Dies While Posing for Picture Films

GREATEST THRILLER ON EARTH DEPICTING AN ACTUAL TRAGEDY

NEW YORK.—A moving picture machine set up to make a film of the rescue of a young woman from the waters of a lake in Staten island the other day recorded instead the drowning of the actor-rescuer and the saving of the actress by herself. The actor drowned was Albert Brighton.

The play which ended in the tragedy took place at Brady's pond, Grassmere. The pond has an area of about six acres. Mary Murray, an actress, rowed out twenty-five feet or so from the shore. The young woman, in a fluffy white dress and alone in the boat, was to pick water lilies, and, in reaching too far for one of the flowers, was to upset the boat and be rescued.

The picture machine was started, and Miss Murray picked several of the flowers. Then, at a signal from the operator, she leaned far over the gunwale and stretched her hand toward another of the lilies. As she put her weight on the side of the boat it tipped and went over, throwing her into the water.

It was part of the play that the girl should scream for help and throw up her hands to attract the attention of Brighton, who was strolling along the shore of the pond in immaculate summer flannel. When the girl screamed Brighton threw off his straw hat and his coat and dived into the water.

The young woman in the water continued her acting of the helpless drowning girl. The actor splashed toward her, apparently half swimming and half wading. Then he began to shout for help as if appealing to those on shore to come to his assistance in rescuing the girl.

As he shouted he disappeared and then reappeared and shouted again. The others of the company made no move, thinking that he had taken a notion to impart an additional appearance of reality to the act. So for a few seconds the film ran on, but the rescuer sank and did not reappear. Then Miss Murray swam ashore herself and Brighton's body was afterwards found.

Army Convicts Building Model Prison

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAN.—Work on what is intended to be the largest and finest military prison in the world—an institution which the war department plans to make a model for all future penal establishments—has been begun here, to replace the prison built in 1877. The cost of the new prison is estimated at only $642,000, but the completed structure will be the equal of $3,000,000 buildings erected by contract. This saving of more than $2,000,000 will be represented by the work done by convicts, the material manufactured in the prison, and the parts of the old prison utilized in the new. The entire work, it is expected, will be completed by January 1, 1914. By the end of next year, however, a large part of the new prison will be occupied.

When the new prison is completed it will have accommodations for 2,182 convicts, and each will have a large cell to himself, fitted with every modern convenience. The cell houses are to be built on the radial plan, each tier of cells radiating from a central rotunda, from which the watch officer can, by merely turning his head, see the entire frontage.

Military prisoners differ greatly from convicts in civil penitentiaries in that most of them are under sentence for what in civil life would merit merely discharge from their employment. Most of the prisoners are under sentence for desertion or disobedience of orders, and many of them voluntarily surrender for punishment. As a rule they average higher in the scale of manhood and intelligence than civil convicts, and, accordingly, will receive better treatment.

In the old prison there are now nearly 800 men, and many of them live two in a cell. In the new prison it is doubtful whether all of the cells ever will be occupied, unless the army should be increased greatly.

The men now convicts are erecting the new buildings, burning the lime, making cement blocks, cutting and sawing timber, fitting the plumbing, erecting the steel, in fact, doing practically every part of the work under civilian foremen. Practically all material entering into the construction of the new prison buildings is being made by convicts.

Sun Victim Spends Summers in Cave

KANSAS CITY, Kan.—Aloft in an underground cave, studying the Bible and occasionally painting a little in oil, H. H. James of this city, sixty-five years old, passes the hot summer months, afraid to come out into the sunlight. He knows that the blistering rays of the sun will cause his death if he is exposed to them.

James suffered a sunstroke while at work in a wheat field near Ottawa, Kan., 27 years ago. The prostration was so severe that for weeks it was thought he could not recover. He finally recovered, but doctors told him that exposure to the hot sun would aggravate his case and probably kill him. James resolved to keep out of the sun, and for 26 summers he has escaped the sweltering heat that other persons in Kansas have undergone.

James had saved a little money. He came to Kansas City, Kan., about fifteen years ago and one of the first improvements he made at his home place was a summer cave. The cave resembles a cyclone cellar. It is a large excavation in the yard at the rear of his home. Grass has grown over the cave for many years and one must look closely to discover it. The entrance to the cave is a door like that on an outside cellar and steps lead to the interior of the cave at one end. The temperature in the cave never gets above 60 or 65 and day after day, when everyone around him is suffering with the heat, James reposes on a cot, reads his Bible, to which he devotes most of the time, or paints pictures.

Mrs. James and children live in the house. Mrs. James prepares the meals and the children carry them to their father, and on hot afternoons the entire family gathers in the cave to escape the heat, and neighbors also drop in often.

On cool nights James leaves the cave and walks about the neighborhood or visits his own home, but the approach of sunrise is the signal for him to hasten to the retreat. During the winter James works as a laborer.

Servant in One Family for Fifty Years

CHICAGO.—Fifty years in the employ of one woman, whom she has served with rare intelligence, eagerness and devoted loyalty, is the wonderful record established by Miss Barbara Ritter, who has worked the half century for Mrs. Samuel Faulkner, 4746 Madison avenue.

While thousands of women in Chicago have changed servants at the rate of ten a year, Mrs. Faulkner not only has retained the invaluable assistance of her helper, but has won her staunch fealty for herself and her family. Miss Ritter, known as "Barbie" to the hundreds of friends of the Faulkner family and as famous among them for her personality as for her ginger cookies, has been Mrs. Faulkner's first lieutenant in the raising of the Faulkner family of eight children.

Miss Ritter entered Mrs. Faulkner's service fifty years ago as a nurse-maid for the one little Faulkner of that time. She was tireless, she liked work, she looked for work and she accomplished work faster than two other ordinary maids could have done it. And all the time she was happy in its accomplishment.

For several years the Faulkners have been trying to retire "Barbie" from active work. But she retains the same energy that has always dominated her work and she refuses to be retired. The Faulkners are going to celebrate "Barbie's" fiftieth anniversary of her coming to them, although she herself declares she cannot see why the event should be celebrated, since it was so natural that she should stay.

But some hundreds of society women and prominent professional and business men in Chicago, whose childhood recollections are indissolubly connected with memories of the Faulkners "Barbie," will aid the family in giving tribute to Miss Ritter's affection and loyalty.

"Do you really and truly think I am beautiful?" she asked.

"You are simply divine," he replied.

"But there are other girls whom you think more beautiful than I."

"No, I don't think there is a more beautiful girl in the world than you."

"There are other girls you think are just as beautiful, though."

"You are more beautiful than any other girl I ever saw."

"I suppose there are plenty of girls whom you consider almost as beautiful as I am."

"I think you are far more beautiful than any other girl that ever breathed."

"Well, why didn't you say that in the first place?"

"That was what I meant, if I didn't exactly say so."

"O, well, go on. My goodness! Must I suggest everything nice that you say to me?"

"What more can I say?"

"Heavens! I'm not going to sit here giving you lessons. I thought the way you started out that you had made love before."

All Around Bad Man

In a sworn statement Henry Miller of Ypsilanti declares that Mrs. Oscar Lawrence, whose husband is in Jackson prison for larceny by conversion, told him that her husband, Oscar Lawrence, and Grant Kline divided $180 of money that they got from a man who was found dead in the mill race near the Ypsilanti paper mill several years ago.

The officers at the time thought Oscar Lawrence killed Corey, as he had been seen with him and Corey had been seen with a large roll of money.

Miller is the man who recently told the officers where some money was concealed that Oscar Lawrence had stolen and which the officers found secreted in a cement block at the home of his father in Ypsilanti. Lawrence, who is quite well known in this vicinity, appears to be an all around bad man.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury

"We find that Lewis Hamilton came to his death through a head-on collision of two Detroit, Jackson & Chicago trains at about 4:50 o'clock p. m., July 30, 1911, through an error on the part of the eastbound train crew operating train 48, car 7774, of the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago railway, and by not having an adequate system in providing a semaphore or double track on the blind curve at the point known as the Duffield residence, located on the Chicago road about 20 rods east of the Duffield crossing."

An order was at once issued for the arrest of the crew of the Northville car, conductor Dresselhouse and Motorman Woodin, on the charge of "manslaughter as a result of gross carelessness."

At the inquest last Monday, Motorman Woodin testified that he left the switch before he should have done so, but said that he trusted largely to Conductor Dresselhouse, who told him to go ahead. Dresselhouse frankly said that he gave the order, believing that the local had proceeded the two sections of the limited, both of which he had seen go by.

Two Popular Weddings

At even six o'clock Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James McKeever of East Ann Arbor street, occurred the wedding of their youngest daughter, Lyla, to Stanley Chambers. The bride was prettily attired in white organdie and was unattended. A company of friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. E. King. After the wedding supper the bride and groom left for a ten days' trip to Niagara Falls and Rochester, N. Y.

On Wednesday evening the marriage of Miss Myrtle Place of Canton to Elmer Chilson of Detroit took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Place. The bride was attended by the Misses Flora Place and Gladys Bosworth of Redford, while Grant Carpenter and Clyde Bentley acted as groomsmen. Little Bernice Proctor acted as ring bearer. The bride was dressed in cream silk and carried a sheaf of roses. The bridal company stood under a canopy of ferns with a background of evergreens. A large company of friends and relatives was present and the bride received many useful and beautiful gifts.

The trio of persons arraigned in Justice Campbell's court last week Monday on the charge of robbery preferred by Charles Winbers, had their examination in the same court yesterday morning, a representative of the prosecuting attorney's office being present. It was shown that Steve Bolik was not implicated in the affair and he was discharged, as was also the woman in the case. The charge of robbery against Fred Kopp was withdrawn and one of larceny from the person was substituted to which Kopp pleaded guilty and he was given a sentence of 90 days in the house of correction.

Sold Liquor Without License

While officer Springer was at the Eight-mile house in Greenfield to make the arrest of the above persons, he learned that the owner of the house, Anthony Bieliski, was selling liquor without a license. A warrant was issued for his arrest by Justice Campbell and Bieliski was arrested and brought into court last Friday. He demanded an examination, which was set for yesterday morning. After a hearing he was bound over to the circuit court for trial.

Some Doings of the Council

Regular meeting of council last Monday evening—all present.

Petition for the establishment of a line of incandescent lights in the school park was presented and granted. Ten lights were ordered placed there.

Permission was given the fire department for use of Main street, from the hot-corner to Penniman avenue, from the hours of 1 to 2, Aug. 17th, for the water battle.

Eddy Post, G. A. R., was given the free use of the council room to hold its monthly meetings, Saturday afternoons. A cement crosswalk was ordered built from the corner of Adams street across to the Presbyterian church.

The street commissioner was ordered to gravel South Main street, from the culvert near Henry Leadbeater's. Also Church street from Adams to Harvey. Riggs & Sherman of Toledo submitted an estimate for surveying new pipe line to the springs, making blue prints of the whole water works system, and for repairs to reservoir at the price of $275.00.

Another estimate was received from a Detroit contractor to build four miles of a new water pipe line, using 12 inch iron pipe for $50,000, or 10 inch pipe $39,000, these figures not to include an unusual depth trench or for quicksand.

Wm. Gage was refunded $10.00 tax on account of soldiers' exemption law. The marshal was instructed to have some necessary repairs made on the municipal building.

The time for the collection of taxes was extended to Sept. 1st.

Bills totaling $2,236.69 were ordered paid.

A bill of something over $400 by O'Conner & Co. of Detroit for work done at the electric light plant, which had been held up for several months on account of excessive charges, was referred back to the committee on claims, with instructions to allow it at a reasonable reduction.

Young Girl Tells Terrible Story

Ann Arbor, Mich., August 3. In the county jail a man is under arrest charged simply with assault and battery against his wife, but tomorrow morning he will be charged with having had criminal relations with his 15-year-old step-daughter, and according to her affidavit given to the prosecuting attorney tonight, the further charge of being a white slave trafficker could be made.

The man is Daniel Alford, his home is in Salem, where he is known as a bad man because of his habit of flourishing a revolver on the slightest pretense. He is 40 years old.

Yesterday he whipped his wife unmercifully. The couple have been married six years and this beating was the culmination of a long series of such. She could endure her life no longer and came to the city to have a warrant sworn out. During the examination through which Prosecuting Attorney Burke put her before ordering the warrant he became suspicious that she was in terror because of some existing relation between her husband and her daughter, Viola Beck, a child by a former husband, who is but 15 years old. The prosecuting attorney and Sheriff Stark went out to arrest the man on the assault charge and also to investigate.

At first the girl denied that any improper relations had existed between herself and her father, but later she broke down and admitted that those relations started a year ago and had continued ever since.

This she swore to, and also to the further statement that last Thursday she had held intimate relations with a prominent young man of Salem and that the following morning her father had received from him the sum of $75. The only feeling she evinced against the unnatural brute she calls father was that when she told that she had begged him to give her money enough out of that for a pair of tan shoes and he had refused.—Free Press.

Last Thursday night, Wm. Baker, a young man employed by Will Sutherland, while handling a revolver, belonging to Claude Neif, also staying at the Sutherland home, accidentally pulled the trigger and shot Neif in the leg just above the knee. Dr. Patterson was immediately called and he thought best to send the young man to the hospital at Ann Arbor which was done.

Some of the old members of Eddy Post, G. A. R., met last Saturday afternoon and effected a re-organization, with T. V. Quisenberry as commander, A. D. Stevens as adjutant and Wm. Smitherman as quartermaster. Meetings will be held the last Saturday afternoons of the month in the council room. There are about 15 members.

A Newly Married Couple is usually very happy, but the reverse is the case with people who have rheumatism, lame back, sore muscles, cramps in the bowels, dysentery, sick stomach. These latter can have their misery relieved by using Rempe's Pain-Killing Magic Oil. It is a most efficient remedy for both internal and external pain. Insist on having the genuine. Price 25 cts. per bottle. Sold by Pinckney Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

The condition of ex-Postmaster Hall, who was taken to a Toledo hospital several weeks ago, is reported very much improved and he will return home in a few days.

Regular meeting K. O. T. M. M. Monday evening, Aug. 14. D. G. C. Wm. J. Schmitzer of Detroit will be present to give instructions about the Camp work.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Felt and Gladys, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Murray, Merle Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Lou Reed spent Sunday at Island Lake.

The Plymouth House has changed ownership, Grant Harriman of Detroit being the new proprietor. Mr. Weckerle has conducted the hotel with success for the past year and a half or more, but has other plans in view.

The Secor Tigers of Detroit will oppose the Daisy team in a ball game at Athletic Park next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Tousey will pitch for the locals and that means a good game. Admission 10 and 15 cents. All go.

The GREAT MINE RESCUE TOURNAMENT

UNCLE SAM is going to stand sponsor this autumn for one of the most novel and most interesting competitive contests ever conducted. So far as known no other government in the world has ever conducted such a tournament and it is bound to attract attention far and wide. Moreover this unique event is all the more interesting and all the more commendable from the fact that its purpose is not merely the exploiting of athletic prowess after the fashion of the average "field day." On the contrary its aim and object is the saving of human life and the relief of suffering. It is because of its high purpose, combined with the fact that it is under government auspices, that President Taft, the secretary of the Interior, and other high officials and prominent men will be present.

This innovation which promises to win a permanent place on our calendar of public events has a rather long name. It is designated officially as a National First-Aid-to-the-Injured Field Meet, and it is to concern itself primarily with "first aid" work and relief work as conducted in coal mines where, as every reader knows, there is most urgent need for such humanitarian measures owing to the frightful disasters which occur all too frequently in our coal mines, due to explosions, fires, and cave-ins of rock and earth. The field meet will be held at a place known as Arsenal Park near Pittsburgh, Pa. This site has been chosen because it will be convenient of access for the miners and mine rescue workers who will compete in the contests, and because, furthermore, the United States government has at this place an experimental station with all the facilities and equipment at hand for giving exhibitions and conducting contests in mine rescue work under approximately the same conditions that would prevail after an actual mine disaster.

This inaugural tournament is to be conducted by the U. S. Bureau of Mines, the newest branch of our national government and an institution which congress recently established under the interior department, especially for the purpose of studying and finding remedies for the mine disasters which have been giving the United States a bad name all over the world for these many years past. However, the Bureau of Mines is going to have influential help in the conduct of its first national Field Meet. For one thing the American Red Cross is going to co-operate.

Now the Red Cross has been called on very frequently of late years to lend a hand after some great mine disaster, and it is today instrumental in supporting and educating many children whose fathers were killed in the disasters of the past few years. Thus the Red Cross officials have had brought home to them the need of doing everything possible to save lives in mines and to reduce the number and seriousness of mine accidents. And anyway the Red Cross has become deeply interested of late years in first-aid-to-the-injured work of all kinds, so much so that it is now distributing "first aid cabinets" all over the country and has on the road all the while a special car with instructors who travel from town to town enrolling workmen as volunteer Red Cross workers and instructing them in "first aid" work. So that, in view of all this, it is but natural that the Red Cross should want to have a hand in the first field meet to stimulate interest in the cause. And finally the coal operators, who have much at stake, have through their general organization volunteered to help make the tournament a success.

It is expected that from 20,000 to 30,000 miners will attend the Field Day near Pittsburgh on September 16. A number of them will come merely as spectators or because they have been urged to come and profit by the "object lessons" that will be enacted before their eyes, but a very large proportion will be entered as contestants in the various events. It would surprise the average reader, no doubt, to learn how many men are eligible to enter in such contests, considering that organized rescue work on its present scale was taken up in the mines of this country only a few years ago.

Some of the most skillful first aid workers devote their entire time to this occupation. These are the employes stationed on one or another of the U. S. Government's Mine Rescue Cars. The Mine Rescue cars, it need scarcely be explained, are Pullman cars which Uncle Sam purchased a year or two ago, turned over to the newly-created Bureau of Mines, and had transformed into combination school rooms and hospitals on wheels. Each car has a crew of several experts who eat and sleep aboard, like firemen ever ready to respond to an alarm. They and their car have dual functions. When a mine disaster occurs, the cars in that district are hurried to the scene and the men on board take the lead in the rescue work. At other times when no such emergencies demand their attention the cars traverse regular routes, visiting one mining town after another just as a traveling circus might do and carrying for two or three days at each camp, while the experts by means of demonstrations and "night school" lectures in the car, give instructions to the community as to how to prevent accidents and how to carry on rescue and relief work if a disaster does occur.

The result of this plan of Uncle Sam for having these "missionaries" of the First Aid crusade constantly traveling up and down the mining regions showing the once-ignorant miners what to do in an emergency and how to do it, has been that a considerable proportion of the underground workers are coming to have some knowledge of what to do to relieve the suffering of one another in time of accident when doctors and nurses are not at hand. Better still, a feature of the government plan and the Red Cross plan to organize at each mine a volunteer corps of "first aid" workers. These volunteers agree to devote enough time to the work to gain more than a superficial knowledge such as is acquired by the rank and file of the miners. Uncle Sam's experts devote any necessary amount of time to instructing these volunteers and the Red Cross and the mine operators have shown a disposition to provide them with all the necessary equipment, expensive though it be.

The result of this development of a humanitarian militia in the coal mines has been that we now find at many a mine a volunteer corps of "first aid" workers who are thoroughly qualified for their work and who can do just as much for their eptombed fellow-workmen or for miners overcome by poisonous gases as could the experts on any of the government mine rescue cars and who are on hand to act immediately without waiting for the arrival of a government car. It is these volunteers who are expected to give zest to the competitions in rescue work at the big gathering in Western Pennsylvania. "Teams" made up of volunteer workers at various mines have been in training for months for the event, working to be able to do each stunt in the shortest possible space of time,—for in these contests as in book and ladder races and hose laying contests, a second or two may mark the difference between victory and defeat.

The "first aid" tournament is going to have some very realistic features. For one thing there will be provided a "make believe" coal mine, open at one side to the view of the spectators, and in this will occur on signal an explosion just like that which occurs in a real mine except that there will be no actual loss of life. However, men will be apparently injured by the shock and overcome by the fumes and will fall in supposedly perilous positions from which they will be rescued by "first aid" men working in double quick time just as they would do under the stress of a genuine disaster. These rescue workers will be called upon to improvise stretchers from their jackets and mine drills; to hurriedly bring to the scene mine hospital cars; and do the other things they would do in time of serious trouble. Of course, all their operations will have to be carried on by means of what illumination can be gained from the new pattern of electric safety lamps for it is out of the question to carry into a mine filled with explosive gases any ordinary lantern or lamp with an exposed flame of any kind.

Easily one of the most interesting phases of the contests will be the competitions involving the use of the oxygen helmets so called. A helmet of this kind, which may cost as much as $200, may be described as an air-tight, armor-like covering for the head and shoulders which enables a rescue worker to penetrate into mines filled with noxious fumes just as a driver's suit enables its wearer to live and work under water. The air-tight helmet not only excludes the deadly gases of the mine but it supplies its wearer with necessary flow of life-giving oxygen, drawn as needed from metal cylinders of compressed oxygen worn on the back, like a knapsack. The competitions at Pittsburgh will include tests as to how long a man can work effectively in such a suit of armor and tests as to the ability of the respective wearers of the helmets to detach empty oxygen cylinders from their backs and replace them with fresh cylinders. This is highly important because in mine rescue work it may happen that there is no second rescue worker at hand to assist in changing cylinders and unless a "first aid" man can do this for himself he must leave his work and hurry back to the mouth of the mine for fresh air.

Another form of apparatus, and it is a new one, which will be demonstrated is the Pulmoter. The Pulmoter is a German invention, and for all that it would almost fit into an ordinary suit case, it is so delicate and remarkable in its mechanism that it costs $800. The Pulmoter is, in effect, an automatic breathing machine. It will compel an unconscious man to breathe whether he wants to or not and it mechanically draws poisonous gases out of the lungs with one operation and forces in the life-giving oxygen with the other. That it is capable of well high performing miracles may be appreciated when it is explained that with this agent for mechanical resuscitation the experts of the U. S. Government have brought back to life, miners who had remained unconscious in mines for 26 hours and who had been abandoned as dead.

The Danger of the Inferior

We are often told that one reason why we should not go down to the inferior things is that they can never satisfy us. But the danger is that they may satisfy us. A boy at school may come to like evil talk and unworthy stories. When he left home such things were unnatural and distasteful to him, but he let himself down to them little by little until anything else is unbecoming to him. The inferior things have come to satisfy him. A popular lecturer told recently of having heard one woman say to another as they came away from an Ibsen play, "I do not like Ibsen. He takes the hope out of life." If she spoke sincerely, it was only because she had brought herself to such an unnatural philosophy. She did not begin life with so unwholesome and untrue a view. In the days that were real and worthy it was hope which made life beautiful. If now she preferred hopelessness it was because her preferences had degenerated, and that had begun to satisfy her which formerly would have been the very depth of darkness to her.

This is the peril of the soul's freedom. The very capacity to rise involves the capacity to descend. Just as we can go forward from any attainment, discontented with it, to higher things which alone can satisfy us, so we can go backward and downward into tastes, experiences, and character which would once have been utterly repugnant to us, but which have the dreadful power of becoming the soul's desired aim, so that we are satisfied. The soul can shrivel as well as expand. And we must beware of those who tell us that we can go down to anything we wish without fear, that we can throw off the inferior things whenever we wish and return to our native place. We cannot. The soul adapts itself to its environment, and we may become so satisfied on the low planes that we shall never wake to discontent. Then our birthright will be gone, and we shall not care to have it back again. The danger of all sin and surrender is that they may stupefy the taste and satisfy it.

HUMAN HANDICAPS.

We do not require the same attainments from all. Some are well taught, some are ill taught, some are not taught at all. Some have naturally good dispositions. Not one has had power to fulfill the law completely. Therefore it is no crime in him if he fails. We reckon as faults those only which arise from idleness, willfulness, selfishness and deliberate preference of evil to good. Each is judged according to what he has received.—James Anthony Froude.

CUSTOMS FRAUD IN PORT OF NEW YORK

CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY AND A METROPOLITAN BANKER INVOLVED IN SCANDAL.

WOMAN HAS AMAZING CAREER

Diamond Smuggling Case Shows How Helen Dwell Jenkins "Trimmed" a Millionaire for $500,000—Uncle Sam After Several Rich Men.

New York.—The developments in the vast smuggling plot which was disclosed when Collector Loeb, through Detective Richard Parr, acted in the cases of Nathan Allen and John R. Collins, the millionaires charged with falling to declare $300,000 worth of jewels belonging to Mrs. Helen Dwell Jenkins, indicate that the half has not been told.

A couple of years ago there was a robbery in a New York hotel and following it a young woman, Mrs. J. W. Jenkins, reported to the police that $300,000 worth of jewelry had been stolen. A little later she said that the valuables had been recovered through a private detective agency. The customs authorities, who endeavor to keep posted concerning every large diamond collection in the country had never heard of the Jenkins collection and suspicious that some of the valuables might have been imported without having paid duty to Uncle Sam, started an investigation. The result is that information incriminating Nathan Allen, a wealthy leather manufacturer of Kenosha, Wis., and John R. Collins, a millionaire coal man of Nashville, Tenn., has been placed in the hands of United States District Attorney Henry S. Wise and will be brought to the attention of the next federal grand jury. Allen was intimate with Mrs. Jenkins and while in Europe with her and accompanied by Collins bought her many thousand dollars' worth of valuables which paid no duty. It was while investigating this case that Richard Parr unearthed the other conspiracy and the jewel-smuggling affair that was first known as the Jenkins case, then as the Jenkins-Allen case, and as the Jenkins-Allen-Collins case, is now said to have been really inspired by a New York banker, who had perfected an "underground" route for smuggling in jewels and other valuables.

The more that is known of the activities of Helen Dwell Jenkins, the fascinating East side girl for whom two financiers of wide reputation ran the risk of jail by smuggling into the country, it is alleged, $300,000 worth of gems, the more remarkable does the woman appear. That she was able to twine men of affairs, and even officers of the law, around her slender fingers, and obtain for the asking vast sums, which she spent with a lavish hand, is becoming more and more apparent.

That Helen Dwell has been able through some strange gift, to play upon the hearts of men as a musician plays a harp, is not only proved by her own statements but by the police and private detectives with whom she has come in contact. Once under her spell they gave with a freedom that suggested hypnotic influence, and not once until the game was played a bit too far with Nathan Allen, the multi-millionaire leather merchant of Kenosha, Wis., did one of the "angels" rebel. Mrs. Jenkins admits Allen spent $500,000 on her inside of 18 months.

Mrs. Jenkins' maiden name was Helen Field and at the age of fourteen she married a man named Dwell and for some time they lived happily in Detroit. Then her husband went to New Orleans and she obtained a divorce. It was Collins of Memphis, Tenn., who is mixed up in her case who gave her the name of Mrs. Jenkins. He was a friend of her family and about the time she had obtained her divorce was reading a book telling of the adventures of the Widow Jenkins. It is a facetious way he began calling her Mrs. Jenkins and it was under that name that she was introduced to Allen, who himself assumed the name Jenkins. He installed her in a palatial residence in Chicago and in 1905 made an European tour with her. Collins was with them most of the time and it was while they were in London that the New Yorker imparted the information how the customs service at New York might be evaded.

PIMPLES COVERED HIS BACK

"My troubles began along in the summer in the hottest weather and took the form of small eruptions and itching and a kind of smarting pain. It took me mostly all over my back and kept getting worse until finally my back was covered with a mass of pimples which would burn and itch at night so that I could hardly stand it. This condition kept getting worse and worse until my back was a solid mass of big sores which would break open and run. My underclothing would be a clot of blood.

"I tried various remedies and salves for nearly three years and I was not getting any benefit. It seemed I was in eternal misery and could not sleep on my back or lean on a chair. I was finally given a set of the Cuticura Remedies and inside of two weeks I could see and feel a great relief. I kept on using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and also the Resolvent, and in about three or four months' time my back was nearly cured and I felt like a new being. Now I am in good health and no sign of any skin diseases and I am fully satisfied that Cuticura Remedies are the best ever made for skin diseases. I would not be without them." (Signed) W. A. Armstrong, Corbin, Kan., May 26, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 27 K, Boston.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies have done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctors said I had tumors, and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Your Liver Pills have no equal as a cathartic. Any one wishing proof of what your medicines have done for me can get it from any druggist or by writing to me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 106 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Another Operation Avoided.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

FAIR IS MIRROR OF STATES RESOURCE'S

IT IS A GREAT MOVING PICTURE OF A GREAT STATE, ITS PEOPLE AND ITS MANY INTERESTS.

IT IS EVERYBODY'S FAIR.

Everybody Ought To See It—Every Effort Is Being Put Forward To Make The Michigan State Fair Greatest In Country.

What is the Michigan State Fair and Exposition going to be in 1911? This is a question that is now being asked and will be asked much more frequently during the next few weeks. The real and conclusive answer will be made at the fair grounds the days following September 18th. Before that time it is only possible to judge of what the 1911 fair will be by a consideration of the methods employed by those who are making it and by comparison.

President Newton and the officers and board of directors of the Michigan State Agricultural Society, and Manager Hannon, have gone into the matter of making the greatest fair and exposition of the Society's history in a very thorough, business-like and systematic manner. To the close observer, these gentlemen have already made marked progress and from all obtainable indications it seems sure that they will "make good."

There are several objects which the managers have unitedly determined upon and which they will work unre-mittingly to attain. These objects are:

To make the Michigan State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions in the state.

To make it a place where all classes and condition of people can come and learn from observation what brains and time and money and perseverance have achieved in every line of industry.

To make it a mirror of the State's resources, and thus Detroit and Michigan's greatest advertising asset.

To make it not only the greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where everyone can go and be entertained royally, but entertained without resort to amusements that are not uplifting and moral.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its location and its dates in September, the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest to the greatest number of people in the great state is represents.

"The greatest of all fairs, in the fairest of all states," is the claim made by President Newton and his aides for 1911. Plans for the coming nine days' fair, September 18th to 27th, have been drawn to a gigantic scale and some idea of its magnitude may be gained from the statement that $85,000 is offered in premiums and purses.

The fair grounds, with enormous buildings erected or under process of design, all of substantial and harmonious structure, estimate the generous figure of nearly a million dollars. It is doubtful if an exposition project was ever initiated under more favorable circumstances than is the State Fair this year.

FRUIT AND FARM EXHIBIT AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR.

The above views were taken in Horticultural Hall at the last Michigan State Fair and give some idea of the splendid displays in this department from every section of the state. At the state fair this year, September 18th and Upper Peninsula Development Bureaus having engaged a large section of the building, where they will make their exhibits. The development bureaus and these displays will be well worth seeing. The "Back to the Farm" movement is attracting a great deal of attention just now and the exhibits from the farm and orchard have a telling and lasting effect on prospective buyers. The state fair this year is going to be a wonderful show in every department.

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

By Captain Leslie T. Peacocke.

"You fellows may think I'm joking, but you'll find that once my mind's made up, it's made up for good. No more of this sort of game for me. I'm going to live THE SIMPLE LIFE," and Sidney Chapin slammed his finished highball glass with emphasis on the round table and rose with a glare of amusing defiance at his three companions.

"Yes, you will," laughed Squatty Dawson sarcastically. "I can see you doing it. Early to bed, and only one drink between meals. That'll be fine, won't it?"

"And walking about the wet grass with bare feet, so's to get up his circulation and his appetite for a vegetarian diet," broke in the young stockbroker, Archie Harris, over the rim of his whisky sour. "The simple life's all right, Sid, for fellows that's past 50, and for the regular long-hairs, but it won't suit you. Let's have one more drink, boys, and then Chris can give us a spin round in his machine before dinner."

"Yes, a ride over to Baldwin's Ranch will do us all good," agreed Chris Mortimer, son of old man Mortimer, the Spring street banker, and considered the warmest spot in the Jonathan Club, in whose smoking room they were now assembled—with the exception, perhaps, of the gay Sidney Chapin, who was thus astonishing his sudden determination to amend his mode of living.

"That'll be fine," said Squatty Dawson. "One more drink now, and another when we get to the Oakwood, and then we can toss who's to pay for dinner at Levy's," and, snapping his fingers, he attracted the attention of a waiter.

Sidney Chapin set his hat determinedly on his head. "Not for mine!" he asserted firmly. "I'm through! There's nothing like rude health, and last night's racket at the Bristol has given me a head that'll take two weeks of the Simple Life to get over. It's either that or the Cooley Cure. I tried the Cure once, and I prefer the Simple Life. You fellows would do better if you'd follow my example and quit right now."

QUIET THOUGHTS.

It is through association with others that the human will makes its most wonderful advance in freedom.

Every invention is an instrument through which the human will reaches out toward the mastery of nature. The emancipation of the individual is always accomplished by a deepening of the content (meaning) of personal life.

Religion, which was once an institution of the state, is becoming more and more the faith and ideal of the individual soul.

"Oh, rats!" retorted Chris Mortimer. "What's the use of trying to kid yourself. Why, you're only 25 and just beginning to enjoy life. I've never seen you draw what I call a sober breath, and I've known you for five years. After you've had a couple of highballs at the Oakwood, you won't be talking such foolishness."

"I know what it is!" interposed Archie Harris. "Sid has struck a new affinity, and wants to keep her all to himself—some grass-widow most likely who's going to try and reform him. Lots of 'em are great on that, you know."

"Well, she'll have her hands full with Sid," laughed Squatty Dawson. "She's never seen him making love to four different affinites all at once, as we did at Ocean Park last summer. What's she like, Sid?"

Chapin muttered an impatient "Pshaw!" and snapped his gold cigarette-case to his pocket. "You fellows never take anything seriously. You just wait, and see what a different man I'll be in a few weeks."

"Well, I hope you will," sneered Archie Harris. "There's lots of room for improvement. Where are you going to tackle this wonderful reformation? In a monastery?"

"Not quite, but I'm going to live a good, Simple Life all the same. I've fixed myself up a nice little place at Catalina that I rented last week. It's about two miles from Avalon, and it's one of the sweetest little cottages you ever saw."

"Catalina!" cried Squatty Dawson. "That's a queer sort of place to choose in winter. What are you going to do there? Fish?"

"Yes, fish some, I guess, and take long walks. The hills there are fine and the air's full of ozone. I'm off now to take a Hamman bath, and then I've got some things to express down to San Pedro."

"And when do you leave?" queried Chris Mortimer, changing his bantering tone, as did the others, on seeing that Sidney was in earnest.

"Tomorrow morning, by the 9 o'clock boat. I'll be over in Catalina about 11. If you fellows care to come down some day next week, I'll treat you to a fine day's fishing, and as good a dinner as you'll get here at the club. I've got a fine cook (a Chinaman), and all the drinks you want. You'll have to put up at Avalon for the night, though; the cottage won't run to beds for the lot."

"Sure, that'll be all right," said Archie Harris. "We can find accommodations at the Metropole. What day shall we make it, Sid?"

"Let's see," replied Sidney, calculating. "This is Tuesday. How about next Monday? I'll be all settled by then."

"Suit me all right," returned the stockbroker heartily. "How about you fellows? We have nothing on for Monday, have we?"

They found the cottage luxuriously and tastefully furnished, and followed their host from room to room with feelings somewhat akin to envy.

A hundred and forty pound tuna and a score of yellow-tail rewarded their efforts, which, with the addition of some delectable rock bass, made up a tidy haul, and the waning sun warning them to desist, they bore the "catch" in triumph to the cottage, and begged the Chinaman to add some of the smaller and most succulent specimens to the bill of fare.

The Oriental's cooking left nothing to be desired, and the bottles extracted from the ice chest sparked a fitting accompaniment to the jingling of the heartily-plied silverware and the flow of ready wit.

It was near midnight when they rose and hiccupped the body and chorus of a time honored song in deference to their host, assuring him again and again that he was "a jolly good fellow," and continuing the assurance with unsteady gait and uplifted voices as he assisted them to the road and into the machine that was to bear them to the Metropole.

Chapin gave a sigh of relief as he re-entered the cottage, mixed himself a modest "night-cap," placed the glass back on the table, and, sweeping the debris of plates and innumerable glasses with suddenly averted eyes, gave an astonished gasp, and called loudly for the Chinaman.

"Me no savvy," said Sing Kee, protestingly. "Me no touch any silver at all. All there last time I come into room. You fends take 'em away to make a joke, maybe. Fends make joke all the time!"

"I guess so," agreed his master, instantly grasping the situation. "It's that silly fool Squatty Dawson trying to be funny. He must have swiped all the silver off the table when he ran back to get his cigar case. All right, Sing, you can go to bed. They'll be sure to send it back in the morning when they see what a silly joke it was. I hope they won't lose any of the spoons or forks, though, because they're all solid silver. The damned fools! I hate practical jokes."

His hopes were not fully realized, apparently, for three days later the trio at the Jonathan Club received a caustic letter, setting forth the valuable nature of the silverware, which they were given to understand had been precious to the family of Chapin for several generations.

Three days later another and more urgent letter was received, with threats of bodily hurt, and yet three days later a third epistle was delivered into their hands in which legal action of sinister nature was more than broadly hinted at: in answer to which our friend at Catalina Island received the following:

"Dear Sid:—The tone of your last letter has hurt us very much. The first two we thought were written as a joke, as we were certain you had discovered the knives, forks and spoons which Squatty merely slipped between the sheets of your own bed. We cannot understand why you have not found them! We enjoyed our day with you most thoroughly, and we do not blame you for having temporarily adopted the Simple Life.

Your sincere friends,
CHRISTOPHER MORTIMER,
ARCHIBALD HARRIS,
EUGENE DAWSON.

P. S.—You ought to warn your ancient housekeeper against the danger of too hurriedly crossing the streets of Avalon. Automobiles are apt to skid, and good housekeepers are scarce. She will no doubt appreciate the warning!"

The very same day the following telegram was handed to Mortimer at the Jonathan Club:

"You silly fools—I'm married, and on my honeymoon, and you didn't know it. Better go and see a dentist and find out what's delaying your wisdom teeth. Anybody but a donkey knows that matrimony means the Simple Life."

Sufficient Evidence.
Having vouched for the honesty of the woman who wished a situation as scrub-woman the good-natured man was subjected to a severe examination by the superintendent of the building.

"There are degrees of honesty," said the superintendent. "How honest is she?"

The good-natured man reflected. "Well," said he, "I'll tell you. She is so honest that if you throw anything that looks to be worth a copper into the waste basket you have to tag it 'Destroy this,' or she will fish it out and put it back on your desk night after night, no matter how badly you want to get rid of it. I don't know that I can say anything more."

"No more is necessary," said the superintendent, and he proceeded to hire the woman.

An Undefinable Definition.
A few days after school opened in the spring a teacher in a Brooklyn school was testing the members of one of her old classes on what they had remembered of the definition she had taught them during the preceding term. Finally she asked the bright boy of the class this question: "Now, Robert, tell me what a hypocrite is?"

"A hypocrite," replied Robert without hesitation, "is a kid w'at comes to school wit' a smile on his mug."

STRONGER THAN MEAT
A Judge's Opinion of Grape-Nuts.

A gentleman who has acquired a judicial turn of mind from experience on the bench out in the Sunflower State writes a carefully considered opinion as to the value of Grape-Nuts as food. He says: "For the past 5 years Grape-Nuts has been a prominent feature in our bill of fare. "The crisp food with the delicious, nutty flavor has become an indispensable necessity in my family's everyday life. "It has proved to be most healthful and beneficial, and has enabled us to practically abolish pastry and pies from our table, for the children prefer Grape-Nuts, and do not crave rich and unwholesome food. "Grape-Nuts keeps us all in perfect physical condition—as a preventive of disease it is beyond value. I have been particularly impressed by the beneficial effects of Grape-Nuts when used by ladies who are troubled with face blemishes, skin eruptions, etc. It clears up the complexion wonderfully. "As to its nutritive qualities, my experience is that one small dish of Grape-Nuts is superior to a pound of meat for breakfast, which is an important consideration for anyone. It satisfies the appetite and strengthens the power of resisting fatigue, while its use involves none of the disagreeable consequences that sometimes follow a meat breakfast." SO SADIE CAME BACK

STORY OF THE FAMILY HORSE, ONCE DISCARDED.

Battered, Lame and Starving the Old Pet Was Recovered From the Peddler for the Pitying Children.

"It's Sadie!" shrieked the children. "Oh, papa, it's Sadie!" Attached to a heavy wagon, scarred and battered, and with high bones projecting about the hips, a yellowish horse, blind in one eye, a swelling on one pastern, and a pronounced limp in a forefoot, wearily plodded along the street, and on the rusty wagon a man in a dirty sweater yelled something that might have been the word "coal," since the wagon was loaded with fuel.

"Oh, papa, it's Sadie!" The man took one look and saw that it was so. Sadie, once the pet of the children and sold because of growing infirmities and increasing age, had seemingly not improved.

"Oh, papa!" There was that in the three young voices that made the father think swiftly. He remembered how the children had wept when Sadie had gone and how he had hardened his heart because the old horse was so utterly worthless and such an eyesore.

"Don't she look bad?" the little boy asked in an awed tone. The two little girls broke into muffled sobs. The father could stand no more. He signaled to the driver, who pulled up the old mare at the curb.

"Coal?" he asked, sneeringly, taking stock of the man before him. "What value do you place on that horse?" the father asked briefly. The driver stared at him and winked openly.

"She's worth a hundred dollars to me," he said. "My wife's that attached to her." The father turned away, the children followed silently in view of the look on his face. He had sold Sadie for $15, and had been glad to get it. The driver, alarmed, called after him.

"Say, mister!" he shouted, "maybe we can trade. What'll you give me for her?" The father turned.

"I owned that horse once," he said in a tone that made the driver gasp, he had looked so mild. "I sold her for $15, and she was worth ten. I'll give you $25 for her, spot cash. Take it or leave it."

"Lemme drive my wagon to the yard?" the man asked, shrewdly.

"Pull it yourself," said the father sharply, noting a raw spot on the old mare's neck.

"That goes," said the driver, clambering down. "Lemme see your money." Then he signed a receipt the father scribbled on a leaf of his notebook, threw the patched harness into the wagon, and disappeared, dragging it after him.

"Oh, papa! Oh, papa!" said the children.

And bearing, the father figured that this alone was worth the difference of $10.—Dallas News.

Seven Follies of Science.

The history of science has seven problems that men in all ages more or less have tried to solve, but which have finally been given up by all. Today they are called follies. The usual list comprises the following: First, squaring the circle; second, duplication of the cube; third, trisection of an angle; fourth, perpetual motion; fifth, transmutation of metals; sixth, fixation of mercury; seventh, elixir of life. Some lists put the philosopher's stone for the last three and then add astrology and magic to make the seventh. To the unlearned it would seem possible to draw a square which shall be exactly equal in area to a given circle, which is the first problem in the list, but we are told by the highest authorities that it is impossible. Since the discovery of radium it is claimed that the change of one metal into another has been accomplished, but it is yet too early to dogmatize about the matter.

The Texas Armadillo.

During the last three years Drs. Forman and Patterson of the school of zoology at the University of Texas have been much interested in working out certain points concerning the biology of the armadillo, probably the most unique animal in Texas. This little creature represents a migrating species which has in large numbers crossed the frontier of Texas from Mexico and now inhabits the greater portion of the southern half of the state.

The point of special interest in the biology of the armadillo lies in its peculiar method of development. Drs. Newman and Patterson have found out that the Texas armadillo normally gives birth to four young and that the individuals of any given litter are invariably of the same sex; that is, they are either all males or all females, never mixed.

In the Business World.

Mrs. Growells—Have you any more sugar like I got here last week?

Grocer—Plenty of it, ma'am. How much do you want?

Mrs. Growells—I merely want to know when it is all gone, then perhaps I may order some.

Anxious Heira.

"Is there anything wrong with your right foot, Uncle Toby?"

"Not that I know of, Robert. Why do you ask?"

"Pa said he didn't believe you ever would kick the bucket."

SUGGESTIONS AS TO LINGERIE

Dainty Finishes to Garments May Easily and Without Much Cost Be So Provided.

It is surprising what dainty trimmings and aids to the home seamstress can be bought at such low prices in the stores.

Not perishable edgings, but, for instance, hand-made ruffling of fine nainsook for trimming pretty underwear. Or medallions embroidered with a monogram.

Much time may be saved by buying these decorations ready for applying. The ruffling is edged with a sharp scallop formed from several smaller scallops. It comes about three inches wide, ready for shirring. Each scallop contains a tiny spray of embroidered flowers. The medallions, too, are extremely dainty. They are oval in shape, are embroidered with an initial more or less elaborated and are outlined with a baby veining.

In applying these medallions to the various garments it is necessary to know the correct positions. On corset covers this is just below the bust on the left side. The drawers are marked just above the knee. The nightdress may show the initial on the sleeve should the trimming interfere with the display of the motif at the bust.

In the case of the slashed bell nightdress sleeves a little spray of embroidery could decorate three corners, the medallion being applied in the fourth.

WHITE VOILE DE SOIE.

Tunic of silk broderie anglaise, and vest of black and white striped taffetas. The large chip hat has a bow of raven's-wing blue velvet.

THE STYLES IN OVERSKIRTS

Tendency to Draping is Noted, Particularly When Garment is of Diaphanous Material.

The overskirt is a notable feature of all the importations. Some of the tunics hang perfectly straight and are finished off at the bottom with fringes, bands of embroidery or other trimming. A tendency to draping, however, is noted, particularly when the overskirt is of some diaphanous material, and the drapings are usually caught together with ornaments, lace motifs, over bunches of flowers.

Several of the houses show a wrapped in skirt, which gives the effect of a material being wound around the figure several times and caught together. In these skirts the selvaige of the material is frequently seen, showing that no attempt has been made to cut the fabric. Double and even triple skirts are displayed. Sometimes the same material is used for the entire skirt, giving somewhat the effect of a three flounce skirt. In other instances three different materials are employed—a violet crepe meteor having an overskirt of gold lace coming below the knees and a shorter one of blue chiffon.

NEAT EFFECTS IN NEGLIGEE

Timely Suggestions for Wedding Gifts Easily Made by Those Skilled in Needlework.

A negligee that will make a wedding gift is a loose kimono, reaching below the waist and held to the figure by ribbons drawn through eyelets at side seams.

Persian lawn or Paris muslin is serviceable, the edge finished with a German Valenciennes an inch wide.

A rayed disk design is drawn as a border around the neck and down each side of the fronts; it may outline the entire negligee. These are worked alternately in warm pink and deep baby blue, the straight rays running from a center of five French knots in black or sometimes from an outline the color of the rays with the black knots inside.

A finish is given by adding to the outside edge a quarter-inch blue ribbon sewed on with machine stitch in black and on the under side a pink ribbon that extends beyond the blue. Satin ribbon is effective, but washes badly.

Narrow Dutch Collars Now.

Rather narrower are the new Dutch collars and very dainty in style as well. Real lace as well as the best imitations, also hand-embroidered batists in both ecru and white, is used in making these becoming accessories.

Small, simply made bows are worn with these collars and these are made either of a material matching the gown, or of silk of a contrasting shade.

RACK HANGS ON WALL

CONVENIENT TO KITCHEN OR WORK ROOM.

Provides Place Where Necessary Tools May Be Found When Needed—Is Simple, and Easily Made If Directions Are Followed.

A few simple tools are very necessary in every household, and it is equally necessary to assign some place to them, in which they will always be ready to hand whenever they are required. A good plan of doing this is to make a rack for them to be hung upon the wall in, perhaps, the kitchen or a work-room. We give, therefore, a sketch of a simple and easily-made rack for this purpose. The size of the rack must be determined by the number of tools it is destined to contain, and it should be made of wood about an inch in thickness. It is oblong in shape, and the corners are rounded and the edges bevelled.

The rack illustrated is capable of holding five tools, and for the reception of these tools, five rings are screwed in along the center of the board. The small sketch at the top (A), shows the kind of ring that should be procured for the purpose and which may be obtained at any ironmonger's at a very small cost.

Two further rings are screwed into the upper edge of the rack, by which it may be suspended from nails in the wall. When completed, it may either be painted or stained and the whole cost of making it will not amount to more than threepence or fourpence.

A useful rack for pipes can be made in exactly the same manner, and with brass rings it will look by no means unornamental.

NEW NOTE IN HANDKERCHIEFS

Men's Fashion Demands That It Should Carry Out Tone of the Costume.

If the accessories to a toilet are not in harmony there is a jarring note that mars the perfect ensemble. This season fashion has decreed that lady's dainty handkerchief should carry out the tone that predominates in hat, gown and silk stockings. Sometimes the color finds its way in narrow stripes that cover the whole surface of the handkerchief, or, again, it only forms the border. Or, again, the color motif is carried out in a tiny seal or monogram in the initial corner. However, they are all made of very sheer material and the filmy, linen, hand-spun, with tiny lines of drawn-work, are among the most beautiful and newest handkerchiefs shown. Hand-embroidery, of all descriptions, still holds its own, though the plain linen, daintily hemstitched with a tiny monogram worked in one corner, is still very popular, and is always in good taste.

But every woman displays an individuality in selecting her handkerchiefs, as she does with every part of her toilet, and these feminine bits of hand-made linens have a touch of personality that is very apparent to lovers of beautiful lingerie.

LOW-CUT WAIST ESSENTIAL

Costume for Theater Must Have This Distinction—Both Comfortable and Suitable.

The low-cut waist is far more universally popular since the wearing of evening dress at the theater has become fashionable. Today, although there is no necessity for a really décolleté gown, the waist that is open at the throat is correct in style and incidentally is far more comfortable and suitable than the one made of heavy material and with high boned collar.

Theater dress is quite important nowadays, and is practically the same as the simple dinner dress. The difference between it and the ball gown is evident to any one initiated into the mysteries of dress. It may be every whit as costly as the ball gown, but it must look less expensive and it must be cut so low and have, as a rule, longer sleeves.

This year there are many materials that would seem to have been woven especially for this use. Among them are the fascinating voile de soie, drap de soie, marquisette, and always the old favorite chiffon and liberty satin. The satin-finished crepe de Chine and lace, also, must not be forgotten—Harper's Bazar.

The Sailor Collar.

Despite the length of time it has been with on dresses, suits and wraps. It is shown not only in the square shape, but in the round and pointed effects, the latter being particularly noticeable. This collar extends sometimes only to the shoulder line, but in other cases it forms long revers, sometimes crossed over in surprise fashion and fastened at the side.
