Local Correspondence

LIVONIA CENTER.

Mrs. Hugh Peters was home from the city over Sunday.

Harry Peck of Canton visited his people Sunday and took his uncle home with him for a visit.

Mrs. Palmer Chilson has been a rheumatic victim for the past few weeks.

The bridge near Fred Lee's is ready for travel once more, so the mail man can come through that way again.

We deeply sympathize with Mr. Gildner's people in the loss of their daughter, Miss Bertha, who passed away last Friday and was laid to rest in Center cemetery Monday.

Mrs. John Stringer was in the city Tuesday on business.

Frank Peck and wife are entertaining the latter's brother from Portland for the last ten days.

Do you know that fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism, and require no internal treatment whatever? Apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely and see how quickly it gives relief. For sale by all dealers.

TONQUISH.

Remember the social at Geo. Proctor's Friday night. The fishing will be fine.

There will be services at the church at 2 o'clock, Sunday. Preaching by Rev. B. F. Farber.

Mrs. J. H. Fogarty and Mrs. Henry Rowe visited their sister, Mrs. A. Warner Saturday.

Rose, Floyd and Gladys Fulton visited their sister, Mrs. Cady Hix Sunday.

Mr. Young of Detroit, who is visiting his father near Newburg, called at several places in the neighborhood Monday. His work is cleaning and repairing organs.

The neighborhood was shocked to hear of the death of Lemuel Truesdell, Tuesday morning. He was an old resident of Canton. The funeral was Thursday.

NEWBURG.

Friends from away who attended the funeral of Mrs. Helen Smith were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barnes and Whitney I. of Lansing, Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Smith of Wixom, Mrs. Lydia McNabb, Miss Josie Sackett and brothers Ansel and Emmett and Orin Marsh of Detroit, Mrs. Day Dickerson of Farmington, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dunning of Redford, Mrs. Carrie Harvey Henry of Saginaw, besides numerous other friends who came to pay their last tribute of respect to one they loved and esteemed. Mrs. Smith, by her goodness of heart had greatly endeared herself to a large circle of friends. It was with deep regret they learned of her sudden demise. She had been a member of the Newburg L. A. S. for the past 23 years, being a charter member of that society. Though dead her good works still live. The family have the sympathy of all in their affliction.

Claud Farley was born in Livonia township April 14, 1869, and died at Harper hospital Jan. 10, 1912, after an illness of only about two weeks. He was the only remaining son of William and Sarah Farley, who, with their daughter Bessie and a large circle of schoolmates and friends, mourn his early demise. He was a member of the M. E. church and Sunday-school, where he was always found in his place. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at Newburg church and was attended by old and young. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Rev. Dr. Casser, assisted by Rev. Warren, conducted the services. The remains were laid to rest beside his brother Harry and baby sister, both of whom have passed to the heavenly home within the last two years. The family have the heartfelt sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. Jesse Jewell was the recipient of a postcard shower to the number of 60 last Wednesday, it being her birthday. As this lady is unable to leave her bed, it was greatly appreciated.

Miss Ruth Chadwick of the State Normal visited Mrs. W. R. LeVan recently. Mr. and Mrs. Day Dickerson of Farmington also took dinner Sunday evening with the LeVan's.

The Gleaners held installation of officers and served an oyster dinner. Names of officers will be given next week.

Constipation is the cause of many ailments and disorders that make life miserable. Take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, keep your bowels regular and you will avoid these diseases. For sale by all dealers.

STARK.

For Sale—Work team, wagon, harness and buggy. Mr. Aubrey, one-half mile south of Stark.

The party at Lou Krumm's was well attended last Friday night. They danced in the old house.

Mr. Aubrey is home this week. John Hizens is able to be around again.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Kingsley called at Roselawn last Friday.

The Stark ice house is being filled with a good grade of ice.

Some from here attended the funeral of Claud Farley at Newburg Sunday. Our sympathy is with the family.

Some of the young people surprised Mildred Maynard last Sunday in honor of her birthday.

George Griffin was called to Blissfield Tuesday by the serious illness of his mother.

The sick are all on the gain.

Aaron Gumore has rented his farm to Mr. Seiloff and intends soon to start for New York on a visit.

The party at Millbanks' was well attended.

Horace Pelkey spent Sunday at home and also took in the party at Millbanks.

Our friends in Florida have hit it right this winter and are missing all this zero weather. More of us wish we were down there with them.

Ed. Hoisington spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

Mrs. Hoisington, Hattie and little Verne helped Mrs. W. H. Coats celebrate her birthday on Wednesday.

They are cutting ice on Spring Lake farm and filling Newburg ice houses.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effective. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It allays the cough, relaxes the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Thousands have testified to its superior excellence. Sold by all dealers.

WEST PLYMOUTH.

Mrs. Ada Brown has been having a siege with the grippe.

The cold weather was so long continued that in many cases it penetrated through the cellar walls and many of the farmers lost quantities of potatoes and other vegetables. Several in the vicinity of Salem lost their entire crop, the potatoes being so badly frozen as to be reduced to a pulp.

This week's meeting of Plymouth Grange was postponed until next week Thursday afternoon, owing to the death of Lemuel Truesdell of Canton, one of the older members. The order conducted services at the home Thursday afternoon.

Miss Nina Becker spent the week's end with her sister, Mrs. Roy Jewell of Plymouth.

Harry Miller slipped on the ice the other day while carrying a milk can and hurt his hip quite badly.

W. C. T. U.

There were nine members present at the meeting last week and it became very evident that some had a great deal more courage than others to venture out such a cold day. The leaders themselves were not there, but were excused on account of the distance and weather. It was an interesting meeting, so report says.

The meeting next week Thursday, Jan'y 24th, will be in charge of Mrs. S. L. Bennett and Mrs. I. Gunzolly. The subject will be, "Women of the North vs. Women of the South," and Temperance in the South. There will be the Washington letters, which are always full of interest and instruction.

Two saloonkeepers came into a train where Gypsy Smith, the evangelist, was sitting waiting for the train to start. The two saloonmen monopolized all the conversation. Gypsy Smith was hidden behind his newspaper, but he heard them. By and by one of the men said: "Mr. Smith, we know you and we want to say to you that unless you evangelists and ministers stop knocking at the liquor business, we liquor men will have to go to the poorhouse." "All right," said Gypsy Smith, "when you go in all the rest of the inmates can come out."—Supt. Press.

Painful.

Rheumatism is very painful and exhausting, especially in the chronic stage. To get quick relief when these spells come on, Reene's Pain-Killing Magic Oil is the thing needed. It is a clean and pleasant but very penetrating remedy that cures the pain as soon as it reaches the seat of trouble. It is effective also in cramps in the bowels, dysentery, sick stomach, cholera morbus. Price 25 cts. Sold by Pinckney Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

Tomato Growers' Banquet Successful

The unique banquet given by the Plymouth Tomato Growers Ass'n at the Plymouth House on the evening of Jan. 14th was out of the ordinary in many respects.

At seven o'clock the members of the association, their wives and invited guests marched into the dining-room and, as Miss Thomas played the piano, the banquet was served, which consisted of (among other dishes) tomatoes served in several different ways, and at each plate was placed a very pretty program and menu card, on the front cover of which was a gold embossed tomato vignette.

After the last course was served, Mr. G. C. Raviler, acting as toast-master, in fitting remarks introduced the several speakers who were on the program and who responded to the several toasts.

Mr. Edwin A. Starr, a prominent tomato grower of Royal Oak, acknowledging his inability as a cook, turned his subject "The Tomato as a Food Product," over to Mrs. Starr, she being a guest at the banquet, who told in a very interesting way of some 20 to 30 different ways that the tomato could be used as a food product.

Mr. Golon C. Lillie of Coopersville very ably responded to the toast "The Optimistic Farmer," and one should hear Mr. Lillie on this topic to fully appreciate the interest and feeling he inculcates.

The Editor of the Michigan Farmer, Mr. I. R. Waterbury of Detroit, in his genial way gave a toast to "The Farmer's Wife," and it was quite noticeable that the ladies were well pleased with the speaker's eulogies.

The assistant editor of the Michigan Farmer, Mr. B. Wermuth, gave a very forceful argument in favor of farmers organizing to secure better prices for their products and to broaden their knowledge along business and social lines. Mr. Wermuth's subject was "The Successful Organization."

Upon request, the association secured Mr. Wood to take a flash light picture of the banquet as they were seated at the tables.

Among the honorary guests was ex-Gov. Warner of Farmington.

After the speaking was completed the association members gave three cheers in honor of the invited guests. All present agreed that the first annual banquet of the tomato growers was truly successful.

Every voter must re-enroll his name and give his party preferences before he can vote at any of the primaries to be held this year. As may be seen by notice published elsewhere a meeting of enrollment board will be held in the council room on Saturday, Jan. 27th, at which personal application must be made for enrollment. Provision, however, is made in the law that those who cannot enroll that day may do so at the spring election or first Monday in April. No voter will be enrolled who refuses to give his party name or who has no party preference.

OBITUARY

Helen M. Frasier was born in Livonia township, Wayne County, Michigan, April 13, 1835; died at Lansing, Mich., January 10, 1912. She was united in marriage Dec. 29, 1855, to John L. Smith, who preceded her to that beautiful land which knoweth no suffering, ten years ago. Seven children were born to this union, four of whom, three sons, Whitney L., Harmon A., Forest W. Smith, and one daughter, Mrs. Nora A. Barnes, survive her. At an early age she united with the M. E. church at Newburg and has been a consistent, active, christian worker during her life, which, with the exception of eight years, was spent in the vicinity where she was born. Of her immediate family she is survived by three sisters, one brother and numerous other relatives who with a large circle of friends mourn her departure.

The remains were brought here from Lansing Friday afternoon last and the funeral took place at the Newburg church, a large number of old friends gathered there. Rev. E. E. Caster conducted the services.

When given as soon as the croupy cough appears Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will ward off an attack of croup and prevent all danger and cause of anxiety. Thousands of mothers use it successfully. Sold by all dealers.

CHURCH NEWS

EPISCOPAL.
There will be service in this church on Sunday at 2:15 standard time. All are welcome.

LUTHERAN.
Rev. O. Peters, Pastor
Services Jan'y 21st, evening 7 standard, English. Sunday-school at usual hour, 11 o'clock. Every one is welcome.

PRESBYTERIAN
Rev. B. F. Farber, Pastor.
The Presbyterian Guild will hold a social in the church parlors on Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Come to this social evening and have a good time. Services will be held in this church on Sunday, January 21st, as follows: Morning worship at 10 o'clock. The pastor will preach. Theme, "The Eccentricity of Religion." Sunday-school at 11:15 o'clock. Presbyterian Guild at 6 o'clock. Subject, "Worthless Ambitions." Leader, Miss Helen Woodworth. Evening service at 7 o'clock. A chorus choir has been formed for our evening services and they will render special numbers as well as lead in the congregational singing. At these evening services the pastor is taking up the study of Old Testament characters. Theme for this Sunday, "Noah—the Reformer."

Payer meeting on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. Subject, "Gentiles Seeking Christ." John 12:20-50.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

METHODIST
Rev. E. J. Warren, Pastor.
Next Sunday morning the pastor will give an address by invitation of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, on "The Conservation of the Moral Resources of the Nation." Sunday-school at 11:30 a. m.

The Junior League will meet at 3 p. m., and the Epworth League at 6 p. m. The regular evening service will be held at 7 o'clock. There will be a special song service followed by a sermon by the pastor. Subject, "Does it Pay?" This is the third of the series on "Profit and Loss."

The evening congregations are perhaps a little better than those in the morning. It is encouraging that we are able to maintain the interest in the Sunday night service. We have a few vacant seats each Sunday night, however, and we earnestly invite all who have no other church home to worship with us.

Do not forget the mid-week service on Thursday evening at 7:30.

The Epworth League Bible Study class will meet on Monday evening at 7:30. Let all who desire to enroll be present at this meeting. It appears to be the plan of the committee to limit the enrollment, so I suppose it will be "first come, first served."

The Hotel Plymouth buffet will serve dinner from 11:30 to 1 o'clock, and will consist of meat and potatoes, one kind of vegetable, bread and butter, tea or coffee and piece of pie, for 25c.

SCHOOL NOTES.
The seventh grade is doing some work in stenciling.

Leon Willett visited manual training Tuesday afternoon.

The grades have been making charcoal drawings this week.

Phyllis Weckerly visited the second grade Tuesday afternoon.

The H. S. has again joined the Michigan State Spelling League.

Examinations begin Monday afternoon and close Thursday afternoon.

The grades are planning on giving an operetta some time in the near future.

Miss Baumgart was absent from school three days last week on account of illness.

The Kindergarten children have purchased an aquarium and seven gold fish for their room.

We are very glad to hear that Perry Gittins is making a steady recovery from appendicitis.

High school visitors last week were Madeline Bennett, Nettie Dickerson and Claude Williams.

The total amount received from the play was $115.40 of which the high school's share is about $53.50 after paying all expenses.

Blotters have been distributed among the H. S. pupils, which have on one side maps of China and Tripoli where the recent war occurred.

Pupils who have not completed the semester's home reading work are exceeding the speed limit this week in reading the required books.

A bulletin board is to be placed in the park on which will be placed the maximum and minimum temperature each day and also the amount of rainfall during rainy weather.

The Penalty of Sin.
To neglect your health is a sin against nature and frequently the penalty is severe, particularly when trouble starts in the liver and bowels. It is the straight road to Bright's disease. The best course is to take a dose of Dr. Herick's Sugar-coated Pills whenever you feel dull, bilious, constipated or uncomortable. It will clean you out, restore appetite and cheerfulness. Price 25c. Sold by Pinkney's Pharmacy and Beyer Pharmacy.

The Effective Laxative.

Tastes Like and is Eaten Like Candy

In our experience in the handling of drugs and medicines, we believe we have never had experience with any remedy that gave such general satisfaction to our customers as do Rexall Orderlies. This Remedy is not like any other laxative or cathartic. It contains all the good features of other laxatives, but none of their faults.

Our own faith in Rexall Orderlies is so strong that we offer them to you with our own positive personal guarantee, that if they do not thoroughly satisfy you, you only need tell us and we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for them. Therefore, in trying them upon our recommendation you take no risk whatever.

Rexall Orderlies taste like and are eaten like candy. They do not gripe, cause nausea, excessive looseness or any other annoyance. They act so easily that they may be taken at any time, day or night. They are particularly good for children, aged, or delicate persons. They are put up in convenient tablets in three sizes of packages. Prices, 10c, 25c, and 50c.

Remember, Rexall Remedies can be obtained in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. Beyer Pharmacy.

Bald Heads Not Wanted.

Baldness is too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age.

A bald-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 65% of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements no one should scoff, doubt our word or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one in Plymouth who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair or baldness to try our Rexall "48" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in Plymouth and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. Beyer Pharmacy.

Notice of Enrollment.

To the Electors of the Township of Plymouth, Michigan:

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Enrollment Board of the township of Plymouth will be held in the Council Room of the Village Hall, in the village of Plymouth, on SATURDAY, JANUARY 27th, 1912, for the purpose of enrolling all such persons who shall be possessed of the necessary qualifications of electors and who may apply for that purpose, and said Board of Enrollment will be in session on the day and at the place aforesaid from 7 o'clock in the forenoon until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose aforesaid.

Sections of the law read as follows: Sec. 4. No person shall be permitted to vote at any primary election held in this state unless he shall have been enrolled as a member of a political party.

The primary law as amended by the legislature of 1911 requires an entire new enrollment for the year 1912. This means that the electors must re-enroll in order to participate in the coming primary election, and no elector shall be deemed a qualified enrolled elector who has been enrolled prior to the date this act takes effect.

Part of Sec. 8, Act 279: The said enrollment board shall enroll all qualified electors who make PERSONAL application for and are entitled to enrollment as members of any political party. Whenever any qualified elector shall apply for enrollment but shall neglect or refuse to give the name of his party or if he has none, he shall not be enrolled.

Part of Sec. 4: The voters in the various political parties shall be afforded an opportunity to become enrolled voters of the particular political party with which they are affiliated on the first Monday of April preceding the August primary election and on the last Saturday in January of each year.

Dated January 15th, 1912.
EDWARD GAYDE,
Township Clerk.

CAVALIER OF THE DESERT

With a Good Horse and a Good Voice
Life Was Sweet to All of the Sons of Freedom.

All was a son of the sheik, and was a handsome young cavalier, although the desert sun had burned him almost as black as a negro. His costume was that of a regular Turkish soldier—a dirty blue coat with tarnished brass buttons, dirtier blue trousers just short enough to show a considerable amount of dirty brown ankle above the dirty yellow slippers. But, as a free son of the desert All refused to wear the fez of Turkish supremacy, and bound his flowing kaffiyeh with the horsehair ring of the Arabs. A long scimitar, inlaid with silver and gold, clattered bravely against the saddle-bags, and a rainbow-hued sash was stuck full of antique pistols and short, sharp knives.

There was nothing servile or shoddy, however, about Sheik All's bearing; no false regrets for the boulevards and 'buses of an effete civilization; but a supreme content with life as Allah had ordered it. All had two chief assets: a good horse and a good voice.

The former he rode at a breakneck pace, with his accoutrements rattling like the pans of a runaway peddler. Once in a while, however, All would graciously wait for the carriage and, after inquiring anxiously concerning our distinguished healths, would catter along with us for a few rods, singing to himself in a pathetic minor key.

They were no hackneyed music hall ditties that he sang, for every Arab is a poet and an improvisator. A moment of intense, frowning thought, and then All would raise his head and gurgle out a new distich of Arabic gutturals. He sang of the speed of his horse and of the barley in the khan at Jericho; he sang of the beautiful weather—it would have been about a hundred in the shade, if there had been any shade—he sang of the magnificent honorableness of the Englezee gentlemen; and especially he praised the immense oakrshesh which the generous travelers would surely bestow at the end of his journey.—Lewis Gaston Leary in Scribner's Magazine.

Humor in a Court's Documents.
Not more frequently than once in the span of a man's life does the court of claims at Washington contribute anything to add to the gaiety of nations, but there is something of the light of humor stowed away in one of the documents which accompany the court's findings in the matter of the claim of Edward Cruselle, heir-at-law of Thomas Cruselle, deceased, against Uncle Sam.

Mr. Cruselle made a claim for payment for certain supplies furnished to the United States by the testator "for use for the suppression of the 'rebellion,'" as the legal documents stated it. The goods which Mr. Cruselle owned and which were seized by the Union troops as a means of crushing their Confederate brethren were "sixty-seven boxes of fine chewing tobacco." The specific brands of ammunition were "Early Dew," "Choice Gem" and "Peach Leaf."

The members of the court rather dodged the tobacco issue. They simply found that Mr. Cruselle was loyal to the United States and that the "Early Dew," "Peach Leaf" and the rest were seized under General Sherman's famous "forage liberally on the country" order.

Wedding Presents.
Wedding presents have for years been a trial both to the donors who cannot think what to send and to the recipients who are compelled to accept what they do not like. A bright notion would be to have a collection at the church (in a bag, not a plate) for the benefit of the young couple, to which each friend might contribute the amount of money he would have spent on a perhaps unappreciated offering. This would save him the terrible worry of choosing something suitable, and the bride and bridegroom the hypocrisy of being grateful for articles they would rather have been without. Shopkeepers would no longer be called upon to supply wares which appear to cost more than they do, and affection and incomes would cease to be estimated by the value of the gifts they produce, since the latter would be anonymous.

Remarkable Escape.
He was talking very loudly and boastfully in the railway carriage and compelling everyone to hear him, whether they wanted to or not.

"I've been all over Europe in my time. To France a score of times; Italy, Germany, Spain, everywhere. What I don't know about them isn't worth knowing. Why, I've been to Egypt, and I've been to Constantinople ten times at least. Funny thing, now, the way the dogs are scavengers there, and eat everything in the streets. Awfully dangerous to touch 'em. They eat up every scrap of rubbish."

A young lady in the corner said, thoughtfully, "I really wonder you got home alive."

And presently a blessed silence reigned in that carriage.

Against the Fat Man.
Somebody again points out that all prominent criminals are scrawny persons.

Poor fat men! Nobody sends them any jellies or flowers or tender sympathies.

WHEN HUBBY 'HELPED'

BEAUTIFUL MIXUP IN THE KITCHEN, OF COURSE.

And Wifey's Period of Rest Was Rudely Interrupted as She Went to the Rescue of Her Liege Lord.

"My dear Olivia," said Pumperton, firmly, as dinner ended. "I am going to wash the dishes tonight. You are to sit down in front of the dining room fire and rest. While we are without a maid it is only fair for me to assume my share of the work."

Mrs. Pumperton smiled. "Very well, John. But as the hot water is not coming very well, you'll find it better to set the dishpan, half full, on the stove to heat up. Put some soap powder in it. The package is on the shelf." And with a sigh of relief she went into the living room and sat down to rest.

Pumperton cleared off the table without any serious accidents, then set the dishpan over an open stove hole to heat up. He took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves and tied on a large gingham apron. Then it occurred to him that Olivia had told him to put in some soap powder, so he took a yellow paper box from the pantry shelf and poured in a generous supply. The water by now was almost boiling, but the soap powder obstinately refused to dissolve; so Pumperton took a kitchen spoon and began to stir in vigorously. Instead of becoming fine foamy soapsuds, the water began to thicken and thicken—and the more it thickened the harder Pumperton stirred.

At last Mrs. Pumperton, quietly rocking and reading before the cozy open fireplace, was startled by an agonized appeal from the kitchen. "Olivia!" came her husband's call. "I want you! Quick!" She jumped to her feet and hurried to the kitchen, to see her husband perspiring, but with determined action, stirring a dishpan full of white mixture, in which knives, forks and china came spasmodically to the surface as he stirred—all coated alike with something like strained flour paste.

She looked at the dishpan with a gasp. "What on earth is the matter?" she asked. "What are you doing there?"

"I don't know," came the discouraged response. "What's the matter with that soap powder of yours? Look what it's doing! How can any man—or woman, for that matter—be expected to wash dishes in that?"

She took one look at the white porridge, then snatched up the package standing open on the table. "John Pumperton," she said, calmly, "I told you to put a little soap powder in that water. Instead you poured in a good half package of cornstarch, and made padding out of it!"

Highest Point of Interest.
A man who was a passenger on an excursion steamer which returned a few days ago from Panama and Costa Rica, told a New York Tribune reporter that all the tourists were deeply interested in what they saw in Panama and along the line of the canal in the four days which they spent there. "The monster dredges, the great walls of concrete, the locks and other wonders of the canal construction," he said, "naturally came first in order for our attention; then the cheapness of the duck suits which we had to buy, the independence of the merchants who would not send them to you and the hospitality of the American club will be remembered, but the most wonderful thing we saw was the real Panama souvenir in the form of a deck of playing cards bearing Panama scenes, and the cards are made in Ohio."

Converts Battleship Into House.
Mr. Smelter Trust Stokes (the name is coagulated under stress of space) is building a house in Connecticut, and it is going to be real old-fashioned. Most of it was built from his battleship Wellington, which Mr. Stokes bought for $200,000. Now he has bought a Suffolk manor house of the Tudor period. Half of it is there already, the other half will be there in the spring. The combination should be striking when Mr. Smelter Stokes has completed his freak house. One of these days we may wake up to find Westminster Abbey missing. And to rediscover it as the dining room—with the Hippodrome close at hand as the drawing room—in the splendid home of another Mr. Trust Smelter—if that is his confounded name.—London Chronicle.

As a Precaution.
A good story is told of the old journalist Frederic Guest Tomlin. One day he found his office locked and the office boy missing.

When the boy appeared Tomlin reproved him for oversleeping, a charge which the boy tearfully refuted.

"It's this way, sir," he said. "My uncle was hung at the Old Bailey this morning, and although we weren't on speaking terms with him, I thought, as one of the family, I ought to be there."

"Quite right," said Tomlin; "never neglect your family duties; but when another of your relations is to be hanged, please to leave the office key under the mat."

Scaling the Peak.
Knicker—is that Boston girl frigid? Bocker—I should say so. When fellows call on her they tie themselves together with ropes.—Harper's Bazar.

Big news in the Central Grocery ad.

More than half the persons who are killed on the railways each year are trespassers who walk on the tracks. In ten years 50,708 such trespassers have been killed and 54,183 injured. Laws prescribing safety appliances for the protection of persons engaged in hazardous occupations are on the books in all the states. There are also laws forbidding trespassers upon railroad rights of way. People who walk upon railroad tracks simply tempt Providence. — Ex.

Boiler Works Proposition.

All business men and others interested in the advancement of Plymouth in an industrial way are requested to attend a meeting at the council room, in village hall, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 23rd, at 7:30 p. m., to hear the report of the committee sent to Cheboygan to investigate proposition of Cheboygan Boiler and Bridge Works and to discuss the advisability of making an effort to bring them to Plymouth. This prospect looks like a live one.—Sec'y Improvement Ass'n.

Economic Wintering of Breeding Sheep

By PROF. R. S. SHAW,
Dean of Agriculture, Michigan Agricultural College

Western Lambs Fed at Michigan Agricultural College—In Good Weather Sheep Like to Get Away From Their Pens, and Relish Their Rough Feed Better Out of Doors.

The economic wintering of the farm flock is dependent to some extent on their condition at the end of the grazing season and the time at which they have been bred to produce lambs in the spring. If breeding ewes came into the sheds at the beginning of winter thin and weak from scant pasturage or undue exposure or a combination of the two it will require larger quantities of more expensive feed to winter them than if they had been strong and in moderate flesh. When the ewes are bred to lamb before March 1 a long period must elapse before grass is ready during which an abundance of rich, succulent food must be provided if both ewe and lamb are to thrive.

One of the most common mistakes made is endeavoring to winter ewes with difficultly digested roughage alone, such as timothy hay, straw or cornstalks or some combination of these. Dry, unnutritious, fibrous material if fed alone continuously is likely to produce impaction, constipation and other digestive disorders resulting in serious loss. The feeds named, while dangerous if used alone, are really useful when supplied along with some succulent factor.

Ensilage, roots and legumes such as clover, pea vine hay, bean straw

Keep Your Oil Can Handy

A good farmer takes care to avoid friction in farm machinery. He listens for the tell-tale squeak and at once applies a good lubricating oil to the spot. He does it to save the unnecessary wear on the engine, reaper or mower as the case may be. A thoughtful housewife does the same thing for her sewing machine, sweeper or washing machine. If a door hinge or the handle of the clothes wringer or any mechanical device binds or squeaks, it should be oiled at once and thus save a wasteful expenditure of strength and nervous force. Do not use too much oil or apply it indiscriminately; use just enough and in the right place. It is much better not to wait until there is an audible disorder, but rather prevent any possible friction by getting ahead with the oil can.

This principle might be applied to the various relations of life in which friction is likely to occur. Be ready with your oil can. By this we mean a heart filled with the common "milk of human kindness," which upon the least occasion will pour forth in looks, words and acts. This is nowhere found to be more genuine than in the hearts of our farmer folk, but is there not a tendency to keep it "gorked up?" At this season of the year, even cast-iron countenances are wont to crack with a sympathetic smile, and rusted-in stoppers are drawn to allow a few drops of feeling an exit. Why wait for the Christmas-tide to apply our "friction-oil," or why seal it up when the season has passed? The farmer family in their daily routine of life need the give and take of the cheerful smile and helpful word. The formal "good morning" salutation of the day starts machinery running smoothly, and "good night" falls like a benediction on the tired heart after the day's work is ended. Some men would as soon think of saying "good morning" and "thank you" to their favorite cow before and after extracting her generous supply of milk as to use the same terms in his family. His cow receives a gentle pat on the shoulder, his family nothing. He has not learned the value of a judicious use of expressed appreciation; nor has it occurred to him that the failure to give expression to his feeling of good will today lessens the desire and the ability to voice it tomorrow, and in time the feeling itself is reduced to a minimum. It has been said that a "man is known by the position he holds," but it is more true that he is known by the way he holds his position, be it an humble or an exalted one. There are people filling very small niches in life who are so uniformly cheerful and courteous that they not only avoid friction in their own small part

LAW'S INJUSTICE MADE PLAIN

Farmer's Grievance Was That Story Once Accepted Should Not Remain Good.

A story is being told at the expense of an old English farmer who was recently called upon to explain why he had failed to take out a license for a favorite fox terrier dog. "E's nob but a puppy," the defendant remarked. In response to a question as to the animal's age, "Yes, yes! So you say. But how old is he?" "Oh, weel, I couldn't tell to a bit," was the reply. "I never was much good at remembering dates, but 'e's nobbut a puppy." On the other hand, it was maintained that the animal in question was a very, very old-fashioned puppy, and the magistrate inflicted the usual fine. Shortly afterward the farmer was met by a friend who wanted to know how he had fared at the police court. "Nobbut middlin'" was the reply. "Did they fine you?" "Yes," responded the victim; "an' ang me if I can understand it! Last year an' the year afore that I told the same tale about the same dog, an' it wos allus good enough afore! Who's been tamperin' w' the law, sin' last year?"

Eager to See.

"I have a poem here entitled 'Alone with Nature,'" said the tall young man with the long hair and the frayed trousers. "It is a personal impression."

"Is it?" replied the editor of the Chicago Record-Herald, as he hastily glanced at the opening lines. "Have you ever been alone with nature?"

"I have, and, oh, it is glorious—glorious!"

"Here's a dime. Get on a trolley car and ride as far as you can. Go back to nature and spend another hour or two alone with her. You say you plucked the hazel blossoms by the stream. If you are able to find any place where you can do that let me know. I want to watch you while you do it."

Saw No Difference.

"People who seek books from the fiction section make some funny breaks," says a librarian of the Library of Congress. "I have made note of a member of these, but none of them amused me more than the request of a sour-looking splinter."

"She sternly demanded of me a copy of 'The Recollections of a Liar.' I told her that I didn't know it, but that I could give her 'The Recollections of a Married Man.'"

"That will do," said she acidly.

"Well," admitted the preacher, "it ain't set down dat way. I throwed in de possum to hit de intelligence of my congregation."

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as with-out fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

A WOMAN SCORNED

By LESLIE DAVIS

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Really, now, you must be serious and help me with this affair. I'm positively worn out with it all." Martha Gardner's voice carried a wistful note, although she laughed as she spoke. "It's been going on all summer and I'm at my wits' end."

"Then begin at the beginning, Martha," suggested her cousin, Reba King. "We've had only scraps of information so far to work on."

"Very well, but I warn you that it's a tragedy. I met him in June at the Smiths' dinner party. He sat beside me and we got along beautifully together. I liked him from the first and I thought he seemed to be rather well impressed himself."

"Omit the modest depreciations, Martha," interrupted Reba's twin sister, May. "You might as well say to begin with that he was hard hit; they all are. I never saw such a girl for conquests."

"Nonsense! Well, he asked to call, and came, and then affairs went with a rush. He took me to plays and out for lovely rides in his little car, and brought books and we had such nice comfortable evenings reading them. For a miracle, Aunt Ada liked him. I think she really missed him when he stopped coming."

"He stopped coming? Why?"

"I don't know why. Didn't I tell you it was a tragedy?"

"You mean to say that he just stopped without any reason or explanation or anything?"

"Exactly. The last time I spoke to him was at Mrs. Bullard's party. We had several dances together, then I saw him talking to Jerome Holden in the hall, and after that he left. I detest Jerome, but he has persisted in hanging around for the last year in spite of dreadful snubbings. Sometimes I've thought he might have said something to make trouble—anyhow, the doctor hasn't been near me for ten weeks. Reba King, stop giggling! I won't stand it!"

"On They Sped."

"Oh, it's too funny!" Reba laughed. "To think of Martha Gardner in the role of a woman scorned. After the dance you've always led and the damaged hearts lying in your wake, I call it just jettisoning!"

"It's mean to laugh," objected May, soberly. "Did you say that he was a doctor, Martha? Is he a good man, and all that?"

"Dr. Paul Jeffries is as good as gold!" Martha's head went up with a proud little air. "Everybody speaks well of him. And he has worked hard and has quite a practice. Oh, there he is, passing now! Look! Look!"

All three rushed to the window and peeped from behind the curtain at the automobile dashing past.

"It's a dear little car," whispered Reba.

"He has a nice face," commented May. "I'd do something, Martha. I wouldn't let it go on this way."

"Yes, but what?"

"A few centuries ago," declared Reba, "you would have sent him a bottle of poisoned wine, taken a dose yourself and ended the affair in that neat way. What a pity that common sense has taken such a hold of modern life! It drives out romance completely."

"The common sense thing to do," suggested May, "is to write a note and ask him what the matter is."

"I won't do that if I never find out! I've a little pride left, I hope."

"Then persuade Aunt Ada to have a neuralgic attack and send for him professionally."

"He knows she would never have any one but old Dr. Benjamin."

"Give the cook a deadly dose and vow she made you call him."

"He might not get here, and I'm not used to deadly doses; she's too good a cook to sacrifice."

"If we were going to be in town a while, instead of just passing through and lunching with you, I'd plan a campaign of some sort," mused Reba. "Oh, dear, it's time to start now. If we are going to make that 3:30 train."

"Of course, this is in the strictest confidence," warned Martha, as they parted at the station. "I wouldn't breathe a word to any one else for worlds, but you girls are more like sisters than cousins, and I just had to tell you."

"Of course, agreed Reba, sympathetically. "And if I think of anything I'll write at once. In the meantime, whatever you do, Martha, be practical and daring, humorous if possible. That's the modern method of doing things, and I must say it seems to be effectual!" The twins waved a last adieu and the train bore them swiftly off.

Martha turned away, her mind full of the conversation of the afternoon. Instead of going directly home, she turned rather aimlessly into a side street. She wanted to think it all out again, though there was not a single part of her dilemma that she had not gone over many times before. She hated to own, even to herself, how much she cared, but she did care very much. She admitted it with a little catch of the heart.

And she was sure that he did, too. That was the queer part of it all. The man loved her, she knew he did. There were a thousand little ways of telling. And they had been so happy together, so congenial from the beginning. A sudden moisture blurred her eyes.

Martha winked quickly to clear her vision, turned a corner, and halted abruptly with surprise at what she saw. Dr. Jeffries' little empty runabout stood before her at the curb. Evidently the doctor was making a call inside the house.

With the sight a swift idea leaped into Martha's head.

"Practical, darling, humorous. I'll do it!" She looked carefully around to see if she were observed. It was a quiet, unfashionable neighborhood, no one happened to be passing. Martha walked up to the car and seated herself beside the driver's seat.

For five minutes she waited, her heart nearly stifling her with its excited jumping, then the door opened and Dr. Jeffries ran lightly down the steps.

At the sight of her he stopped stock still, and his face went white. Then he gathered himself.

"I'm sorry to have kept you waiting," he addressed her, with a smile. "Oh, I haven't minded waiting in the least," she returned politely.

He went around in front and cranked the car, then took his place beside her and they were away.

Calmly Dr. Jeffries drove the little car across the town, past the small houses of the outskirts, and struck out for the country. His face was tranquil, but Martha, stealing a glance from the corner of her eye, noticed that the hand which moved the levers trembled. She herself could not have spoken had her life depended on it.

On they sped, over the country road, now running beside a scampering brook, now leaving it while they passed through patches of woodland, cool and sweet. The way was familiar to them both, it had been a favorite route for the drives of the early summer.

Finally, at one of the wooded places, Dr. Jeffries' energy seemed to relax. The car slowed down, and for the first time its driver turned and looked into the face of the girl beside him.

"Are you really here?" he asked, slowly. "Or is it all a dream?"

Martha laughed softly. "It's a dream," she answered, with a saucy gleam in her eye.

"Then I hope I may never wake up!" ejaculated the doctor, fervently.

"It is a pleasant dream," agreed Martha, amiably.

"It's heavenly!" Then, after a pause, "Now tell me what part of the dream is the hint that Jerome Holden gave me that you and he were practically engaged?"

"Oh, he didn't really, did he? The coward! Oh, I could almost—"

"Then," persisted the doctor, eagerly, "that hideous nightmare has no place in—our dream?"

"No place at all," steadily.

Dr. Jeffries brought the car to a sudden stop, turned it around, and began to hasten back to town with all the motor's power.

"Why, what are you going to do?" asked Martha, in surprise.

"I'm going to take you home, where I hope to be invited into the house. I've some things to say before I wake up. Besides, can a man drive a car and do—anything else?" demanded Dr. Paul Jeffries.

Making Hades Easy.

Strange wishes are sometimes expressed by those at the point of death to ease their last moments, but few probably have been more strange than that of the son of Erin of whom the Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins told a short time ago in an afternoon speech: "Pat O'Shaunessy had been told by the doctor that he could live but a few hours," said Dr. Tomkins, "and his wife and assembled relatives and friends asked him whether there was one last wish he would like to have gratified before he died?" "There is," said Pat. "I'd like to hear the village band play once again. Accordingly the village band gathered before Pat's house and discoursed airs for several hours. When at last it had played, 'Say An Revolt, but Not Goodby,' and had taken its own departure, Mrs. O'Shaunessy, kneeling at her husband's bedside, asked 'Can ye die airy, Pat?' 'Yes,' replied Pat. 'I can die airy now. Hades has nothing worse than that.'"—Baltimore Sun.

Pay as You Enter.

A young man wearing flashy clothes walked into the Planters' Hotel, and with a flourish of the pen registered as "Tom M. Smart, Smartville, Tenn." He asked to be assigned to a $5 room. "I pay as I go," he said rather pompously. "I regret, Mr. Smart," retorted Chief Clerk Bunnycastle, "that it is a rule of this house that guests without baggage must pay as they come."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

WIDOWS BY WIRE

By CLAUDINE SESSON

Two separate telephone companies, each striving for the business, entered the village of Milford at the same time. The inhabitants welcomed the agents, but at the same time saw the opportunity to get cheap communication with the outside world. The agent of one company reduced rates a fourth, but no one would sign a contract. The second agent went one-fourth better, but still no signers. There were twenty-two families that wanted telephones, and half a dozen farmers would follow suit, but all were waiting for Judge Wragg.

Judge Wragg was justice of the peace, and the big man of Milford. What he said went. In this instance, he advised the people to wait until he gave the word. The judge was sixty years old, but hale and hearty. He was a widower, and was always talking of getting married, and folks said that the reason he didn't marry was because he considered it too hard work to ride around the country and do the preliminary courting.

The telephone agents soon made up their minds that they must do something special for the judge to get another subscriber. One of them finally offered him low rates, and then no rates at all, but the big man of the town thought the matter over for half a day and then replied:

"No, I guess not. Come to think of it, postal cards cost only a penny apiece, and if I want to hold communication with any one I can do it through the postoffice. A little slower, maybe, but more satisfactory. In speaking through the telephone one is liable to make mistakes, but in writing it's different. No, I guess I don't care for a telephone. I hear they are always getting out of repair anyhow."

"But we'll keep 'em in repair at our own expense," urged the agent.

Judge Wragg, Justice of the Peace.

"Why, man, suppose you want to call a doctor in a hurry?"

"Never needed one in a hurry. Always had lots of time."

"But you surely want to call up people over at Highdale now and then."

"No, can't say as I do. Don't know but three or four men over there, and they don't amount to shucks."

Three days passed, and the agent who had made the last and best offer was in despair. He could have offered the judge graft, but he feared to do it. It had been tried by other men and brought them a bad turning-down.

"In the name of heaven, man, what is it you want?" he finally asked, as he determined on a last effort.

"Nothing 'tall, neighbor," he calmly replied.

"But I've offered to give you a telephone out-and-out for two years."

"Yes, but there's such a thing as legal contracts."

"What do you mean?"

"I never take another man's word, even on the weather. Black and white's the thing. When you've got an agreement on paper folks is bound to stand by it."

"But I'm ready to make a legal agreement, and the company will back me. Write out whatever seems good to you."

"Well, that's talking to the point," replied the judge, and the agent was asked to call the next day.

The man was only too glad to do so. He found an agreement that not only gave the judge the constant use of a telephone for two years, with all repairs to be made with promptness and without expense to him, but it was stated that he had the first call on the wire, and that he was not to be cut in on. Day or night the wire was to be at his command.

It was a cast-iron contract, but such was the rivalry between the companies that it was duly signed. It was figured that the judge would use the thing as a plaything for awhile and then drop it, as nearly all other people do. There was a wide veranda in front of his house, and he fixed up a chair and a table and made things so he could rock back and forth and talk into the receiver at the same time. No railroad president had a more comfortable ingenue.

The telephone company soon had twenty-two subscribers, and was in communication with all the country. Then it was that Judge Wragg was heard from. Up to this time he had simply tested his voice. Now he en-ounced himself in his General Jackson highway necking chair, lifted the receiver, and after consulting the list of widows around the country he had compiled, he got central and called up one living twenty miles away. He didn't do it without some effort, however. Central answered him that the wire was busy, and he answered central with:

"You chase that party right off the wire, young lady! I come first, and you'll get into trouble if you interfere. Plain, straight legal contract that when I want the wire I climb over all."

He got the wire and he got the widow. He told the widow who he was, and that he had some thoughts of marrying. She replied that she hadn't, and called him an old fool besides.

"Can't expect to hit 'em first time trying," he said to himself as he reached for his list and called up a second widow.

"But there are three parties waiting to phone," protested central. "You never mind the three parties, but attend to me!" he fired back at her. "I told you only a few minutes ago that I had a legal contract giving me first use of the wire. Call up 44-J. She's a widow and may want to get married. I have no objections to your listening to the conversation."

It was brief and spicy. The judge said he had heard through a tin-peddler that she might be induced to enter the matrimonial state again, and in reply she exclaimed:

"I don't know whether you are a young fool or an old one, but I do know that if I had my hands in your hair I'd make you bald-headed afore I let go!"

"Now, widow—now, widow!" chided the judge, "seems to me to be a plain, straight question—do you want to marry or not?"

"No! No! No!"

"Oh, all right. No harm done. I thought maybe you did. You are only number two out of a list of over thirty, and I'm not a bit discouraged."

Central was then called up to ring for number three.

"I don't understand this thing at all," replied the girl in charge. "Here are half a dozen people wanting to use the wire, and you seem to think it goes to you alone."

And if you don't think so after reading my contract I'll eat my hat! That's what I got a contract for—so that I could seem to own the wire. Just 'tend right to your knitting, sissy, or you'll be looking for another job!"

Central telephoned to headquarters for instructions, and the contract was looked up. She was told that the judge had legal rights which must be respected, and from nine o'clock in the morning until seven at night, he was calling up widows. Next day the company engaged a lawyer to make a bluff, but it was promptly called. Then the judge was offered $500 to cancel the contract, but he shook his head and began calling up old maids.

The bribe was raised to a thousand dollars, but without avail. The company stood to lose every subscriber in town, and it was a finemanager who finally solved the problem.

"Easy as grease," he said. "Find a widow who is willing to marry him and he'll have no more use for the telephone."

The man was right, and the judge still lives, and is happy with his second wife.

Poison Pajamas.

And now it would appear that the nocturnal bifurcated garment which like its (or their) daylight brother, trousers, must appear in the plural—in other words pajamas—are in serious disfavor in France, and the color line is to be drawn against some of the most radiant members of the pajama fraternity. It seems that a young Parisian financier, a man of wealth and fashion, had for several weeks been suffering from a painful malady of the eyes and was threatened with blindness. The most learned oculists were consulted, but none could divine the cause of the mysterious malady. One day he made the discovery that following the occasions when he wore a certain pair of brilliantly red pajamas he was particularly affected. He took this pair of pajamas to the Pasteur institute. The doctors at the institute extracted the color from the garment and inoculated therewith a number of guinea pigs, every one of which became blind. The young financier has brought suit against the "chemist" who had guaranteed the material.

Interviewed.

One day a well-known politician was enjoying a chat with a friend at a London hotel, when a strange young man came up and said:

"Can I see you for a moment, Mr. Dash?"

"Certainly," answered Mr. Dash, rising.

The young man led him across the room, and seemed to have something important to say to him. Arrived in a corner, the stranger whispered in the politician's ear:

"I am on the staff of an evening paper, and I should like you to tell me what you think of the situation in the east."

Mr. Dash looked a little puzzled at first, then he said:

"Follow me?"

And leading the way he walked through the reading room, down some steps into the drawing room, through a long passage into the dining room, and drawing his visitor into the corner, behind the last rack, he whispered:

"I really don't know anything about it."—The Bita.

LIKES THE OLD SONGS

MIDDLE-AGED MAN ALLOWS HIMSELF TO WONDER.

Will the Ditties of the Present Day Arouse Such Pleasant Recollections as Do Those of the Long-Distant Days?

"Do you know what I wonder some times?" said the middle-aged man. "I wonder if any of the songs of the present day will live in the minds of the young people who sing them now to arouse pleasant recollections in them 50 years from now."

"Do you see what I mean? I know, I guess, 40 songs—20 anyway—that we used to sing when I was a youth that we all thought were lovely. Some of these had come down to us from older times and they are still living, and I suppose will keep on living. But there were other songs, written in that day, that appeal to us older people now as strongly as they did then, and perhaps more so, though in a somewhat different way now because they bring back fond recollections."

"I have no greater pleasure than hearing my children play and sing those old songs that were sung when I was young, and I wonder—I do wonder—if any of these songs written say around in the last ten years, will survive, to be sung by my children 50 years hence, with an interest like mine now in the songs of my youth."

"I am inclined to doubt it. Lots of the songs of the present time are foolish, aren't they? And with words poor or worse than poor. And still when I sit down with a book of my old songs and go over it in cold blood, reading instead of singing, I have to smile over some of them, for some of them were pretty thin and meager stuff when you came to read them. Still youth likes high flown romantic things and it doesn't apply the acid test. We don't do that till we are older, and among the songs written in the present day there may be some that will survive, foolish though they may seem to be to people of maturer years."

"And how do I know but that the old folks in my younger days thought the songs we sang then were foolish? Maybe they did; but we loved them then and as older people we love them now; they make youth spring up in us again. And it may be, it may be, that some of these present day songs that we older people now think of no account will still live, either by some charm of their own or by the charm of all things associated with youth, to be sung 50 years from now by our children then grown old, just as we now sing over the songs of our youth, and with just the same joy. It may be. But I think they will then be singing too some of the songs that pleased us, the songs that go down through generation after generation."

The Lady's Leisure.

The truth about the leisure of the lady is this: It was never, in women of our race, a leisure of the hands; it was, pre-eminently, a leisure of the mind. Aside from her first and most obvious function, the lady was sheltered, petted and adored that she might have a mind at leisure from itself, and therefore at the service of others. According to her temperament, whether a Martha or a Mary, she performed this service in a more active or more passive fashion. She was the Listener: she inspired, pacified, comforted. She bound up the wounds life made, poured in the oil and wine. Her heart was the home of homeless causes; she cherished ideals as well as individuals. It is a priceless service, and cannot be overpaid. Her loving performance of it was the glory of the type whose loss we are deploring.

To be worth her salt in our national life, the lady must be either Martha or Mary.—There is no other honest life for her.—Cornelia A. P. Corcoran, in Atlantic.

The Good Shopper.

Some women are naturally good shoppers; they have the instinct for making a good bargain, and the determination to get for their money the thing they know they want. Other women are naturally nervous and timid, but they should endeavor to shake this off and to gain confidence. When a shopman says, "Madam, I assure you this is just the very thing you want, everybody's using it," do not forget that every shopman's business is to sell whatever he has in stock, not necessarily to sell just what you want. If you have made up your mind to use a particular custard, or a particular brand of cocoa, or to buy a dress of a particular style and shade, have it, or you will suffer disappointment, and be annoyed with yourself afterwards. Always remember that the A. B. C. of good shopping is to stick out for what you have made up your mind to buy.

Hard Suggestion.

"I have all the respect in the world for science," said the patient man, but—

"Well, go ahead and finish your kick."

"I can't keep from thinking that what this country needs is fewer ornithologists and more good policemen."

A Lower Bid.

"By Gorry," said Pat, as he read the morning paper. "Here's Larry Doolan called for half a million."

"The graspin' ornithologist!" cried Mike. "Sure an' old' do ut fer tin!"—Garper's Weekly.

LEARN OF OSPREYS' HABITS

Ornithologists Gather Knowledge From Visits of Birds to Islands Near New York.

A great colony of ospreys, or fish hawks, built their nests at one time upon the property of various owners of land on an island near New York, a circumstance that enabled ornithologists to gather some interesting data with respect to the breeding habits of this bird.

One osprey's nest was built upon a pile of old fence rails, only seven or eight feet from the ground. It had been added to annually until its bulk of sticks, sods, decayed wood, seaweed and the like amounted to something like three cartloads. Two other nests were built in cedar trees. These, too, had been occupied every year for many seasons, and had been increased by the addition of fresh material, until they filled the whole upper parts of the trees.

In the wooded parts of the island the nests were very numerous. The larger trees in the interior of the woods were all occupied, and on the edge of the wood every tree, large or small, had at least one nest, and some of them two or three. On the sandy plain beyond the woods a hundred or more nests were built on the ground, and on the north shore, where the beach was strewn with boulders, almost every one of the larger rocks had a nest on it.

When one investigator approached some of the nests, the older birds flew silently away and did not return until all was quiet. In other cases the hawks were noisy, and even showed fight, darting down at the visitor's head and striking out with their talons.

These birds, however, would return to their eggs when the caller remained quiet, though he might be only fifty feet away.

One nest was seen to contain an old broken ax, a bootjack and a straw hat. Of the variety of materials wrought into the different structures the following is a brief list: Barrel staves, barrel heads and hoops, the filler of a boat, a small rudder and parts of tin preservers, brooms, an old plane, a feather duster, a blacking brush, part of a hay rake, a rubber boot, several pairs of shoes, a pair of trousers, a long fishing line with hooks and smokers wound on a board, bottles, tin cans, a door mat and a rag doll.

In the interstices of many of the larger structures smaller birds had built their nests, well protected from the weather. The grackles were especially given to doing this, and were very bold in collecting fragments from the fishhawk's tables.—Harper's Weekly.

Walking for Heart Ailment.

The chief statistician of the health department of New York says overcoasting, lack of exercise and the constant use of automobiles have increased the deaths from heart disease 150 per cent. in the past 40 years. Between the ages of 35 and 45 the increase has been only 61 per cent., but between 55 and 65 the increase has been 240 per cent.

The doctor says the automobile is, in part, to blame for this, because it keeps men from walking. He thinks walking is the best preventive of heart trouble.

"The legs and arms were made use," he says, and especially after meal. The habit of most men who do not work to lie down after eating, or take a big chair and lounge. Resting makes them lazy. The stomach and the heart are closely related, and a full stomach strikes directly at the heart, especially if the person is running along the three-score line somewhere.

So the lesson is, walk; walk courageously; walk a great deal, and do a little deep breathing, while you are at it, and then, if heart trouble comes, you can't help it; you have done your best to treat the heart kindly.—Ohio State Journal.

Pure Air in London Tubes.

The objection to underground travel in London—that the air is impure and often stifling—will soon be overcome if the plans and promises of the Central Railway company are carried out. These plans include a system of ventilation capable of pumping daily 30,000,000 cubic feet of purified air into the tubes and tunnels of the company. One plant is already in operation. An official of the company states that it will pump 400,000 cubic feet of pure air per hour into the station, or at the rate of 800 cubic feet per person.

The air is drawn from outside through a filter screen, which removes dust and dirt and impure gases. A part of the air is then highly ozonized by being passed over highly electrified plates, the proportion of ozone in the whole being one part in 10,000,000. The air is driven by fans to the level of the bottom of the station, and two-thirds of it is distributed over the platforms by ducts, with outlets at a height of seven feet above the platform. The remainder is driven into the tunnel.

As He Saw It.

Senator John Sharp Williams tells of an aged preacher in Mississippi who was asked what he thought of his two sons, both preachers, too.

"Well, sir," replied the old man, "George has a better show in his show window than John; but John has got a larger stock in his warehouse."

Exceptions.

"The pass system has been generally abolished, hasn't it?"

"Not so generally. The company I've invested in has not abolished it about their dividends."
