VALUABLE MAN TO EMPLOYERS

Philadelphia Worker Clinched His Job by Investing a Most Ingenious Excuse.

Several mornings ago a young West Philadelphia man entered the office in which he was employed as a clerk with lagging steps and a look on his face that convinced his austere employer that the young man was burning the candle at both ends.

"But, sir, I never drink, nor smoke, neither do I gamble or indulge in any other sort of dissipation," declared the young man wearily.

"It is useless to try and deceive me," said the employer severely. "I can see that you had no sleep last night, you look as though you had been drawn through a knot-hole."

The reply nearly knocked the employer from his chair. "Did you ever sleep in your cellar? Well, I did last night. I attended a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. and, arriving home late, found my wife in bed. As customary, I went downstairs and fixed the fire, closing the cellar door behind me to avoid drafts. When I came upstairs again I pushed the knob and when it stuck I gave it a heavy jerk. It came off in my hand. I tried every way I could to open that door. I pushed it. I rattled it, but without result. I was in the ridiculous position of being locked in my own cellar. Desperately I pounded on the door, but my wife is a sound sleeper and she had her bedroom door closed and locked. After an hour spent in making the most unearthly noises I gave it up. I tried to find a warm place to sleep, but sleep was out of the question, and I spent the night walking the cellar floor. My wife released me half an hour before I came into the office, and I guess that accounts for my condition and appearance."

The employer swung around in his chair. "Young man, that may not be true, but a man who can get away with a story like that is too valuable a man to lose. Take the day off; your salary is increased $5 a week."

Prophet in His Own Country. Hanover has its prophet. His name is Voigt, and he dwells in the little town of Einbeck. Voigt is obsessed with the idea that the world is to come to an end in the immediate future, on a date which he has set. He has even fixed the hour at 10 p. m.

The local police are stubborn in heart and mock the prophet's prediction, which he published in a little book. Moreover, they have arrested him on a charge of being a disturber of the peace—for many people have become alarmed—and he has been fined 10 marks. "Ten marks" was raised upon the prophet by his admirers from all parts of the country—From the London Globe.

Bamboo Logs for Buoy. The lighthouse inspector for California is planning an innovation for buoys on the rough bars of the coast. He is preparing to use immense bamboo logs instead of pine piles as buoys on the Eureka bar and will install them at other places where he has found difficulty in maintaining pine buoys. He says that bamboo, being much lighter than pine, can be anchored with rope and will not require so much attention. He has ordered 25 bamboo logs 10 feet long and about 20 inches in circumference for this purpose.

Met Seeking Each Other's Grave. Each believing that the other was dead Mrs. Lulu Day of Oakland, Cal., and Claude Fitzgerald, an auditor for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad, met suddenly at the Union depot yesterday morning. The two are brother and sister, but had been separated for more than 20 years. Mrs. Day came to this city to seek the location of her brother's grave here. Fitzgerald was on his way to Emporia, Kan., where he had supposed the body of his sister was buried. The brother and sister were explained when they were small children. They were adopted in separate families and afterward lost trace of each other.—Kansas City Journal.

Aristocratic Potatoes. Potatoes are pretty high, but nothing like in Auctermachty, where some fine ones sold for $5 apiece. But the flesh of these fine ones when cooked is almost as white as Hungarian flour. And then these potatoes are not to be eaten, but are saved for seed, single ones being picked out from hundreds of thousands.—New York Press.

Of Course. "Why do you scorn that young man?" "Because he talks only of love in a cottage." "Well, what's the matter with that? He has the right idea. What you say on the house you can put into the automobile."

AS TOLD BY SURVIVORS

This is a late photograph of the Carpathia, the vessel that picked up thirteen lifeboats, carrying 705 refugees from the ill-fated Titanic.

DEFINITE FACTS ESTABLISHED BY SURVIVORS OF THE TITANIC.

One thousand-six hundred and thirty-five revised number of dead. The attempt to break all speed records was responsible for the disaster, the attempt to change the course of the ship to avoid the iceberg which sank her falling because of the speed at which she was traveling. There was perfect discipline among officers and seamen, none of them entering the boats, save when necessary to man them. Some of the boats were managed by the women who were put into them.

Most of the 200 members of the crew who escaped were either firemen or stewards, who had leaped from the sinking vessel and were picked up by the boats. Five out of six of the persons picked up from the water were such.

Second Officer Lightholder, in charge of the filling of the boats, testifies that few women were in the first boats put off because many refused to enter them. He himself did not recognize the seriousness of the situation until two boats had been lowered and these first two were not filled to capacity. After the first two boats as many were put into a boat as possible.

Women began to appear in numbers on deck when the sixth boat was being loaded and men who had entered it got out to let the women take their places.

Apparently conflicting stories of occurrences on the Titanic after she struck are due to her great size.

First class passengers, quartered near the middle of the boat, were from 200 to 300 feet from the steerage passengers, the night dark, and they knew nothing of the panic that prevailed at either end of the ship. Stories of panic nearly all come from steerage and second class survivors.

Capt. Smith was running sixty miles, off his course because of the danger from icebergs.

Louis A. Fignola, a survivor, says that after women and children had been taken care of the crew fought with men of all classes for possession of the last lifeboats.

The sea was calm and the heavens ablaze with stars when the catastrophe occurred.

The Titanic blew up when water which entered the rents made in her by collision with the iceberg flooded the engine-room.

Following the explosions the Titanic broke in two almost amidships and the forward portion sank first.

The captain and officers stood heroically by their ship. The only thing approaching panic occurred in the steerage. Men fought with women to get the boats.

Four men were shot when they refused to leave boats. Col. John Jacob Astor helped his bride into a lifeboat, said, "Good-bye, dearie," lit a cigarette and then helped other women into boats. He died of exhaustion on a raft later, it is said.

Woman says no lifeboats were launched until an hour after collision. Room for 40 more in first one sent out. Others far from being filled.

Capt. Smith stood alone battling overwhelming waves to the last, finally being washed overboard.

Chief Wireless Operator Phillips stuck to key till water rose about him, then swam to raft, where he died.

Maj. Archibald Butt, President Taft's aide, died like hero, maintaining order, gun in hand, and helping women into lifeboats.

Four dead bodies taken from raft by Carpathia boat buried at sea Monday afternoon while hundreds of rescued weep.

Mrs. Dickinson Bishop of Dowagiac was first woman to be put in lifeboat. Band, knee deep in rising water, plays as confusion reigns and "Nearer, My God, to Thee" is last sound saved ones hear from stricken vessel.

"Row, Boys, Row," sang a little crowd in one lifeboat, above the anguished shrieks of the drowning.

Sixteen lifeboats form procession with boat bearing green lantern as leader and which moved the following boats out of range of the suction of sinking vessel.

Those in lifeboats suffered for hours exposure before Carpathia arrived. Sea was so thick with bodies of drowned and drowning that progress of lifeboats was impeded.

The rescued were in all conditions of dress and undress, and the women on the Carpathia vied with one another in supplying missing garments to those who had little.

There were 36 "first cabin" women who perished, probably refusing to accept lifeboats. There were also 26 "second cabin" women to drown, making a total of 62 cabin women to go down. Besides these dozens upon dozens of steerage women also perished.

There were five children of the second cabin that were lost, one youth of the first cabin, and many, many children of the steerage.

Saved ones on Carpathia make formal written statement blaming lack of lifeboats for big loss of life.

Carpathia had all details prepared for reception of Titanic survivors.

Mrs. Isidor Straus refused to leave husband's side and they died together.

Many survivors in critical condition and hurried to New York hospitals. One man saved self by clinging to cake of ice.

George D. Widener, son of director of White Star line, threw kisses to his wife in lifeboat as he sank on Titanic.

On the four days' cruise back to New York many who had realized that their experiences would be awaited by an anxious world, put their stories to paper while their nerves were still at tension from the excitement of the disaster they had escaped.

Some, saved from sea, died on Carpathia and were buried at sea. Shock of collision was hardly felt and no one was frightened till officers revealed its seriousness.

John B. Thayer, Jr., fell overboard and swam for long time before picked up by lifeboat.

One passenger knew wireless code and heard message from boat only 35 miles away which knew of Titanic's danger but would not respond.

Four men were so little frightened by shock that they refused to discontinue bridge game.

Titanic was warned by wireless and atmospheric condition of dangerous ice floe, says Col. Archibald Gracie, but, trying for record time, ship continued at top speed.

Charles M. Hays, president of Grand Trunk railroad, and one of the victims, predicted a few hours before disaster that before long a great catastrophe would mark the efforts of the rival steamship companies to outdo one another in luxury, size and speed. A few hours later he was a victim of that rivalry.

Alexander Carlisle, designer of the Titanic, fainted at a memorial service in St. Paul church, London.

WITHOUT PROTEST MEN LEAVE WIVES.

Kiss Loved Ones Good Bye and Com-mend Them to God.

Mrs. Asa Clark, an English woman, whose husband went down in the big ship, thought so little of the first crash against the great berg that she did not even rise from her berth for half an hour afterward.

"The shock was so slight that it did not disturb me," said Mrs. Clark, "and my husband, who was just preparing to retire, told me to go back to sleep again. Then a stewardess came along and woke me. Everybody on deck," she said, without any alarm in her voice. There was no confusion in filling the small boats. My husband put me in, kissed me good-bye and commended me to God. Even then we did not believe that the situation was serious. After I got in to the boat two men tried to step in. An officer said the boat was only for women, and they stepped back without protest.

"I was in my nightgown. The cold reached my brain and everybody in the boat was so benumbed that we could not realize what a terrible thing had happened. When somebody said, 'It's gone,' we sat there without showing any emotion."

300 DEAD; 50,000 HOMELESS

Breaking of Levees Along Lower Mississippi Cause Death and Ruin.

Probably 300 persons are dead from the breaking of levees along the lower Mississippi river and the number will be doubled before the end of the month, unless the unexpected occurs. These are not actual figures but are based on an average given by men in Vicksburg, Jackson and Greenville, Miss.; Tallulah, Lake Providence and Baton Rouge, La., and at other strategic points in the great valley.

The known death list stood at 41, but there are many sections that have not been explored, and where no attempt at rescue has been made. The consensus of opinion among the big planters of the inundated delta section is that the drowned to date there number between 200 and 400.

At one place 15 negroes were drowned. This was near Benoit, Miss., when the levee broke at Beulah.

In Mississippi and North Louisiana, at least 50,000 are homeless. Seven negroes were drowned in Lobdell. Reports of a break near Greenville, Miss., created a small panic in that vicinity and despite repeated denials, the situation was known to be so grave that many residents of the section made all preparations to flee at a moment's notice.

Cleveland, O., has set a price of one cent upon the head of every ten dead flies delivered at the city hall and the children are reaping a harvest.

Articles of incorporation were filed in Denver, Col., by the American Baptist Tuberculosis association which plans to establish free sanitariums in various parts of the United States.

500 DEATHS FROM FLOODS IN SOUTH

THREE HUNDRED TOWNS INUN-DATED; WATERS ARE STILL SPREADING.

HEAVIEST LOSS OF LIFE IS AMONG NEGROES.

Many Refused to Leave Homes in Delta District and Were Caught When Levees Broke.

Five hundred persons are now estimated to have been drowned and 300 towns and hamlets have been inundated and partly destroyed by the floods now sweeping the Mississippi valley. These estimates are made from reports received at the offices of the United States army engineers in Memphis, Tenn., who are in charge of the levees along the banks of the Mississippi river.

The heaviest loss of life occurred in the Mississippi delta district. Here hundreds of persons refused to leave their homes when warned of the impending danger of floods. Many of them could not escape when the levees gave way and the water, 10 to 15 feet deep, swept over the delta country. A large per cent of those drowned were negroes. The loss of life throughout the Mississippi and Louisiana flood districts has been heavy. Many whites are among those who perished.

J. Bruce Ismay Blames Capt. Smith. In a statement given out in New York J. Bruce Ismay replies to various published statements regarding the Titanic disaster, particularly those in which his name has prominently figured.

He denies that he had anything to do with the navigation of the vessel, and declares that he did not consult with the captain regarding her conduct at sea, and made no suggestion as to the course or other handling of the ship. He exercised no privileges that did not belong to any other first cabin passenger, he declares, did not sit at the captain's table and did not dine with him at the time when the collision occurred. He had no idea of returning to Europe quickly to avoid appearing at the senatorial investigation, he adds, and only knew that the investigation was pending when informed of it at the pier on the Carpathia's arrival.

"When I appeared before the senate committee I supposed the purpose of the inquiry was to ascertain the cause of the sinking of the Titanic, with a view to determining whether additional legislation was required to prevent the recurrence of so horrible a disaster.

"I welcomed such an inquiry and appeared voluntarily, without a subpoena and answered all questions put to me by the members of the committee to the best of my ability, with complete frankness and without reserve. I did not suppose the question of my personal conduct was the subject of the inquiry, although I was ready to tell everything I did on the night of the collision."

What Senator Smith Says.

"The investigation of the Titanic disaster as far as it has gone, reveals the most tragic story it has ever been my fortune to listen to. And the most dramatic period in it occurred when the surviving wireless operator of the Titanic came down to the description of the last seven minutes on the ship before she sank."

Sea Will Claim All Victims. "The bodies of the victims of the Titanic are at the bottom of the deep, never to leave it," declared Prof. Robert W. Wood, of the chair of experimental physics of Johns Hopkins university. "It is altogether improbable that any of the corpses will ever return to the surface, as is the case with bodies drowned in shallow water. At the depth of two miles the pressure of the water is something like 6,000 pounds to the square inch, which is far too great to be overcome by buoyancy ordinarily given drowned bodies by the gases generated in time. That the bodies sank to the bottom of the sea there is no question," he continued.

"The Titanic's victims who were not carried down with the boat followed until the very bottom of the sea was reached."

Olympic's Men Strike. Three hundred of the crewmen and greasers belonging to the crew of the Olympic struck five minutes before the White Star liner was due to sail from Southampton for New York. The men departed the ship in a body. They gave as their reason for striking that the collapsible lifeboats installed on the vessel were unseaworthy.

The Olympic is the sister ship of the Titanic and owned by the same company.

A royal English oak tree has been set out in Central park, New York, as the official successor of the one planted by the late King Edward VII, when he visited the United States in 1860. The king's tree died in 1903 after a 20 years' attempt by the park authorities to nurse it out of perilsent ill health.

Northwestern University statistics show that women students stand higher in their grades than men. Non-fraternity students also rank higher than those belonging to fraternities. The women rank highest in all of the four college grades.

STATE NEWS

Holland.—John Kats, a Zeeland farmer, who was recently arrested on the charge of selling diseased meat to Mrs. Ruth Mulder of this city, has been bound over to the circuit court for trial. He is out on bail of $500. When Kats disposed of the meat he is said to have given an assumed name and it was several weeks before his identity was discovered.

Charlotte.—Evan Kelly, a Roxand farmer, twenty-one years old, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid at his home north of this city. Kelly had been married but a few months. His wife recently left him and this is given as the reason for his act. He left a note giving full directions as to his burial clothes, funeral, etc.

Traverse City.—The examination of Mr. and Mrs. William Witte was concluded in justice court and they were bound over to the June term of the circuit court, with bond fixed at $1,000 each. The pair are charged with causing the death of their six-year-old daughter, Marie, by abuse and neglect.

Mackinaw City.—A government steamer, thought to be the light-house tender Hyacinth, is blowing distress signals about five miles west of this point. The steamer is surrounded by some ice and the car ferry Chief Wawatam has gone to her assistance.

Lansing.—Cecil and Josephine Richardson, sisters, twenty-one and twenty-six years old, whose home was in Traverse City, were drowned in Grand river when the canoe in which they were riding with Frank W. Eldman was capsized in the swift current. Eldman was rescued after he had made an attempt to save his companions.

Petoskey.—While the boiler room of the Bear River Paper and Bag company was burning workmen continued making paper. By good work the fire companies prevented the blaze from spreading to the mill proper and the only loss was about $200.

Bay City.—Frank James, the Indian whose arm was cut off when he was struck by a Michigan Central train, while he was intoxicated, died from his injuries in Mercy hospital. The police are investigating as to who sold him the whisky.

Cadillac.—The supervisors bought J. A. Magnuson's farm, three miles north of this city, for the county poor farm. Recently the buildings burned on the old county farm and it was deemed best not to rebuild on the old site.

Houghton.—The Calumet and Hecla Mining company announced an increase of ten per cent. in wages for its employes and those of ten subsidiary companies.

Jackson.—As the result of injuries received Daniel F. Tewksberry, aged twenty-three, a switchman at Jackson Junction yards, died in the City hospital. Tewksberry was terribly injured when a switch engine and a string of box cars backed down upon him, all of the cars passing over his body.

Kalamazoo.—Thirteen-year-old Marie Davis was hit by an automobile and dangerously injured. The girl had started to cross the street when an automobile suddenly turned the corner. Seeing the machine, the girl stopped near the curb, but the car was turned directly into her. She was hurled to the pavement with terrific force. Stopping his car, the unknown driver looked back and saw the girl lying unconscious next to the curbing. After looking to see if anyone saw him, the driver drove away at terrific speed. His name has not been learned.

Grand Rapids.—Dr. Rowland F. Webb and his office assistant, Miss Lois Lillie, narrowly escaped death when the automobile in which they were riding was run down by a Perry Marquette "Flyer." The doctor and Miss Lillie were thrown from the machine and about twenty feet to one side of the track. Other than a few bruises, Doctor Webb escaped injury, but Miss Lillie suffered a fracture of the right leg.

Battle Creek.—Mrs. John Staley, formerly of Battle Creek, who escaped from the insane asylum at Kalamazoo, was located about seven miles west of town. Mrs. Staley disappeared from the hospital during a rainstorm and nothing was heard of her by officials or relatives until a farmer telephoned to the authorities that a demented woman was at his house.

Kalamazoo.—Stern Van Surkangast, a sixteen-year-old Galesburg boy, was brought to Borgess hospital here suffering from a fearful gash that had been cut in his side when kicked by a horse. The boy was in an unconscious condition and there is little hope expressed for his recovery. The boy was walking behind the horse when it was being taken from a barn. The animal suddenly turned and kicked the lad in the left side. He was cutting a big hole in his side the kick is believed to have caused internal injuries.

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church, and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town, and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him. He learns that Prince Poniatowsky is a suitor and escort to Letty. Lord Galorey and a friend named Ruggles determine to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. Young Blair goes to see Lily; he can talk of nothing but Letty and the anger the Duchess determines to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. Young Blair goes to see Lily; he can talk of nothing but Letty and the anger the Duchess determines to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

"You say she's gone?" he questioned.

"I say," said the boy, "that you've been meddling in my affairs with the woman I love. I don't know what you have said to her, but it's only your age that keeps me from striking you. Don't you know," he cried, "that you are spoiling my life? Don't you know that?" A torrent of feeling coming to his lips, his eyes suffused, the tears rolled down his face. He walked away into his own room, remained there a few moments, and when he came out again he carried in his hand his valise, which he put down with a bang on the table. More calmly, but still in great anger, he said to his father's friend:

"Now, can you tell me what you've done or not?"

"Dan," said Ruggles with difficulty, "if you will sit down a moment we can—"

The boy laughed in his face. "Sit down!" he cried. "Why, I think you must have lost your reason. I have chartered a motor car out there and the damned thing has burst a tire and they are fixing it up for me. It will be ready in about two minutes and then I am going to follow wherever she has gone. She crossed to Paris, but I can get there before she can even with this damned accident. But, before I go, I want you to tell me what you said."

"Why," said Ruggles quietly, "I told her you were poor, and she turned you down."

His words were faint.

"God!" said the boy under his breath. "That's the way you think about truth. Lie to a woman to save my precious soul! But I expect," he said; "you think she is so immoral and so bad that she will hurt me. Well," he said, "with great emphasis, she has never done anything in her life that comes up to what you've done. Never! And nothing has ever hurt me so."

His lips trembled. "I have lost my respect for you, for my father's friend, and as far as she is concerned, I don't care what she marries me for. She has got to marry me, and if she doesn't," he had no idea, in his passion, what he was saying or how—"why, I think I'll kill you first and then blow my own brains out!" And with these mad words he grabbed up his valise and bolted from the room, and Ruggles could hear his running feet tearing down the corridor.

CHAPTER XXVI.

White and Coral.

Spring in Paris, which comes in a fashion so divine that even the most calloused and indifferent are impressed by its beauty, awakened no answering response in the heart of the young man who, from his hotel window, looked out on the desecrated gardens of the Tuilleries—on the distant spires of churches whose names he did not know—on the square block of old palaces. He had missed the boat across the channel taken by Letty Lane, and the delay had made him lose what little trace of her he had. In the early hours of the morning he had hung himself in at the St. James, taking the indifferent room they could give him in the crowded season, and excited as he was he slept and did not waken until noon. Blair thought it would be a matter of a few hours only to find the whereabouts of the celebrated actress, but it was not such an easy job. He had not guessed that she might be traveling incognito, and at none of the hotels could he hear news of her, nor did he pass her in the crowded, noisy, rustling, crying streets, though he searched motors for her with eager eyes, and haunted restaurants and cafes, and went everywhere that he thought she might be likely to be.

At the end of the third day, unsuccessful and in despair, having hardly slept and scarcely eaten, the unhappy young lover found himself taking a slight luncheon in the little restaurant known as the Perouse down on the Quais. His head on his hand, for the present moment the joy of life gone from him, he looked out through the windows at the Seine, at the bridge and the lines of flowering trees. He was the only occupant of the upper room where, of late, he had ordered his luncheon.

The tide of life rolled slowly in this quieter part of the city, and as Blair sat there under the window there passed a piper playing a shrill, sweet tune. It was so different from any of the loud metropolitan clamors, with which his ears were full, that he got up, walked to the window and leaned out. It was a pastoral that met his eyes. A man piping, followed by little pattering goats; the primitive, unlooked-for picture caught his tired attention, and, just then, opposite the Quais, two women passed—flower sellers, their baskets bright with crocuses and grofies. The bright picture touched him and something of the spring-like beauty that the day wore and that dwelt in the May light, soothed him as nothing had for many hours.

He paid his bill, took courage, picked up his hat and gloves and stick and walked out briskly, crossing the bridge to the Rue de Rivoli, determined that night should not fall until he found the woman he sought. Nor did it, though the afternoon wore on and Dan, pursuing his old trails, wan-

ter. He's a lunatic and ought to be shut up."

"It may have been a lie, all right," she said with forced indifference; "I've had time to think it over. You are too young. You don't know what you want." She stopped his protestations: "Well, then, I am too old and I don't want to be tied down."

When he pressed her to tell him whether or not she had ceased to care for him, she shook her head slowly, marking on the ground fine tracery with the end of her coral parasol. He had been obliged to take her back to the red motor, but before they were in earshot of her servants, he said:

"Now, you know just what you have done to me, you and Ruggles between you. For my father's sake and the thing I believed in I've kept pretty straight as things go." He nodded at her with boyish egotism, throwing all the blame on her. "I want you to understand that from now, right now, I'm going to the dogs just as fast as I can get there, and it won't be a very gratifying result to anybody that ever cared."

She saw the determination on his fine young face, worn by his sleepless nights, already matured and changed, and she believed him.

"Paris," he nodded toward the gate of the woods which opened upon Paris, "is the place to begin in—right here. A man," he went on, and his lips trembled, "can only feel like this once in his life. You know all the talk there is about young love and first love. Well, that's what I've got for you, and I'm going to turn it now—right now—into what older people warn men from, and do their best to prevent. I have seen enough of Paris," he went on, "these days I have been looking for you, to know where to go and what to do, and I am setting off for it now."

She touched his arm.

"No," she murmured. "No, boy, you are not going to do any such thing!"

This much from her was enough for him. He caught her hand and cried: "Then you marry me. What do we care for anybody else in the world?"

"Why," said Ruggles quietly, "I told her you were poor, and she turned you down."

dered from worldly meeting place to worldly meeting place. Finally, toward six o'clock, he saw the lengthening shadows steal into the woods of the Bois de Boulogne, and in one of the smaller alleys, where the green-trunked trees of the forests were full of purple shadows and yellow sun discs, flickering down, he picked up a small iron chair and sat himself down, with a long sigh, to rest.

While he sat there watching the end of the alley as it gave out into the broader road, a beautiful red motor rolled up to the conjunction of the two ways and Letty Lane, in a summer frock, got out alone. She had a flowing white veil around her head and a flowing white scarf around her shoulders. As the day on the Thames, she was all in white—like a dove. But this time her costume was made vivid and picturesque by the coral parasol she carried, a pair of coral-colored kid shoes, around her neck and falling on their long chain, she wore his coral beads. He saw that he observed her face before she did him. All this Dan saw before he dashed into the road, came up to her with something like a cry on his lips, bareheaded, for his hat and his stick and his gloves were by his chair in the woods.

Letty Lane's hands went to her heart and her face took on a deadly pallor. She did not seem glad to see him. Out of his passionate description of the hours that he had been through, of how he had looked for her, of what he thought and wanted and felt, the actress made what she could, listening to him as they both stood there under the shadows of the green trees. Scanning her face for some sign that she loved him, for it was all he cared for, Dan saw no such indication there. He finished with:

"You know what Ruggles told you was a lie. Of course, I've got money enough to give you everything you "Go back and get your hat and stick and gloves," she commanded, keeping down the tears.

"No, no, you come with me, Letty; I'm not going to let you run to your motor and escape me again."

"Go; I'll wait here," she promised. "I give you my word."

As he snatched up the inanimate objects from the leaf-strewn ground where he had thrown them in despair, he thought how things can change in a quarter of an hour.

Jubilant to have overcome the fate which had tried to keep her hidden from him in Paris, he could hardly believe his eyes that she was before them again, and, as the motor rolled into the Avenue des Acacias, he asked her the question uppermost in his mind:

"Are you alone in Paris, Letty?"

"Don't you count?"

"No—no—honestly, you know what I mean."

"You haven't any right to ask me that."

"I have—I have. You gave me a right. You're engaged to me, aren't you? Goah, you haven't forgotten, have you?"

"Don't make me conspicuous in the Bois, Dan," she said; "I only let you come with me because you were so terribly desperate, so ridiculous."

White Heron in New Jersey.

Local naturalists and bird lovers are interested in a number of white herons which are making their headquarters at Avis' Pond, Woodstown, N. J., about a mile from town. The birds were first noticed about a week ago. These are the birds from which silver feathers are obtained. Extinction of the species is feared because the silver feathers can be obtained only when the bird is raising its young; and its death at the hands of the hunter also means starvation of the young heron.

Greater Farm Efficiency

Concrete a Profit Maker

By PROF. C. A. COCK, Wisconsin College of Agriculture

The watchword of the present seems to be conservation. This apparently may be applied to all lines of work. Not only is this true in the commercial world, but it will hold true in rural pursuits. The farmer is exerting every effort in obtaining more efficiency from his activities and to do this he is gathering about him every kind of modern machine or convenience that is obtainable.

Concrete on the farm is becoming an important factor and with the advent of this new medium of construction, feeding floors, troughs, racks, fence posts, silos, farm buildings and many useful necessities are being added to the farm equipment. Many of these useful things may be constructed by the farmer himself or his regular help. All that is necessary is a working knowledge of concrete, and its reinforcements. In the construction of large buildings a knowledge of the reinforcement of beams and girders is required and such construction should be submitted to an architect or a bridge engineer who is acquainted with these problems.

Materials used in the construction of concrete work are usually proportioned 1-2-4 or 1-2½-5, 1-2-6, 1-4-8, depending upon their character. That is, 1 part cement, 2½ parts sand and 5 parts crushed stone or gravel are used in the 1-2½-5. The mixture selected will depend upon the nature of the work in which it is used.

Table No. I shows the materials necessary for one cubic yard of concrete.

In order to determine the amount of cement necessary for any amount of concrete, estimate the number of cubic yards and multiply that number by the figure in the table opposite, "Bbls. cement per cubic yard of concrete," and under "mixture to be used." The amount of sand and of stone is determined in the same way.

Batch mixing, as indicated by the name, is an intermittent process and is the one most used in silo construction. Under certain conditions the continuous mixing process may be employed. Continuous mixing is done by machinery, the materials being fed into the machine without interruption during the mixing process, which may continue for four or five hours. Batch mixing may be done by machinery if it seems more desirable. Simple mechanical mixers have been very successfully constructed from an ordinary kerosene barrel.

Water should be added until a sloppy mixture is obtained. This will permit the material to be readily poured. The concrete should be prepared upon a water-tight mixing platform, usually about 10x12 feet. In placing the materials upon this platform, some method should be used to get the proper proportions; that is, if a 1-2-4 mixture is used, some simple measure for the materials should be employed whereby this may be easily determined. Weighing is accurate, but somewhat ment is first wet, without being placed.

Weighing is accurate, but somewhat

In placing concrete, the most important thing to be observed is the manner of handling. The materials must not be separated when poured into the forms. Pouring from a considerable height should not be practiced, as the heavier parts will be separated from the lighter and forced to the bottom of the mass. Good concrete is only obtained when the stones and gravel remain in contact with the mortar.

It is not hard to make the forms for concrete tanks. In fact most any one can invent a form of his own. The amount of stock to be watered at the tank must be taken into consideration when the size is planned. If a rectangular tank is to be used, the proper dimensions can be determined by consulting Table II.

It often happens that around a stock tank there is a mud hole. This can be easily avoided by making a cement platform around the tank extending out six feet on all sides.

In making the forms for the tank, the outside measurements of the inside forms should be one inch greater in both directions than the outside dimensions of the tank. This is necessary to avoid the possibility of any part of the tank being supported by the floor proper. The outer edge of the floor should be one inch lower than the edge surrounding the space to be occupied by the tank. This provides drainage for water that is spilled to be occupied by the tank.

The bill of materials shown above is for a tank ten feet long and six feet wide. The price of such a tank can be easily computed by a local dealer slow. Using a wheelbarrow of known capacity, or counting the shovelfuls is the most common practice and is considered a fairly accurate method. The bottomless box shown in the figure is the best means for this determination.

The sand and gravel should be clean. The following test may be used to determine if the sand is clean: Fill a glass jar far one-quarter full of the sand and add clean water until the jar is three-quarters full. Shake well, and

GREATEST LESSON OF LIFE

The One Thing Above All That a Woman Should Be Quick to Learn and Remember.

The woman who makes good must be blessed with strength and health, and an ambition to learn and take advantage of every opportunity that comes her way. She must work with all her heart and play with all her heart; above all things avoiding indifference.

Hers is the temperament that recognizes that encouragement is all nice and pretty, but if one is going to do the thing that counts one doesn't need it; that refuses to be dismayed by repeated failures and that has a certain faith that what has been done by many may be done by another; that nobody goes through life without disappointments, heartaches and the breaking of pet illusions; that there is nothing more common than trouble, but that it is the wise ones of earth that keep it in the background. That's the great lesson of life.—Exchange.

Injured in Runaway.

While a team driven by Mr. Dietrich of Farmington was passing the Markham factory Tuesday noon, the whistle frightened them and they ran away. At VanDeCar's corner Mr. Dietrich and Arthur Ray, a young son of Frank Ray, who was riding with him, were thrown from the wagon, loaded with household goods, and both were injured. Young Ray sustained a fractured arm, broken in two places, and a slight fracture of the skull, so reported. Dietrich had two ribs broken. Dr. Patterson attended the injured. Ray was taken to Detroit Wednesday to have his arm examined by X-Ray.

A Couple of Weddings.

Miss Anna Micol and John Stroll were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's brother, Alex. Micol, by Rev. B. F. Farber, a small company of relatives being present. The bride was attended by her niece, Miss Pearl Micol and Will Micol, a nephew was best man. After a fine wedding supper the couple took an evening train for Detroit. The groom is a switchman in the P. M. yards and they will reside in the old Micol home on Ann Arbor street. The wedding day was also the 53rd anniversary of the wedding of the bride's parents.

On Wednesday afternoon occurred the wedding of Miss Angie Murray and Arthur Blank of Plymouth, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murray in Salem township, Rev. Lee officiating. There were present some thirty-five guests, and the bride received many beautiful and useful presents. A bounteous wedding collation was served. Miss Goldie Tait was bridesmaid and Karl Bolgus best man. Little Fern Murray, sister of the bride, was ring bearer. The bride was gowned in white silk. The couple will reside on the old Sherwood farm, recently purchased by the groom's father. Their many friends extend congratulations and wish them a long and happy life.

Township Unit School System

The first steps toward the organization of the lower peninsula into township school districts were taken in the recent April election by a number of townships throughout the state acting favorably upon the proposition which is being so strongly urged by educators. Quite a number of special elections have been called in various parts of the state to decide the question in May, while elsewhere petitions are being circulated in order to bring the issue to a vote.

The township unit system does not mean the consolidation of schools but simply means the dissolving of various school districts into one township district, with a board of education elected at large in charge of the school affairs of the entire township. The country schoolhouses are not abandoned under this system but it makes the establishment of a high school possible, insures uniformity of school advantages and reduces the cost. The efficiency of the system has been clearly demonstrated in the northern peninsula where it has proven most efficient.

The changes in the law make it necessary to secure only one-fourth of the school electors of the township board call an election and both men and women, who are qualified school electors, may sign the petition and vote upon the proposition:

Officer Springer was notified Wednesday morning of a hobo breaking into a car used by the Italians section hands. He was arrested and gave his name as Joseph Nkrutlate of Pittsburgh, Penn. When searched he had a suit of clothes, pocket-book and several other articles which he had stolen from the car. He was taken before Justice Campbell and a complaint was sworn to by Joe Pilla, whose car he had robbed. He was sentenced to 60 days in the workhouse or $25 fine and $10 costs. He didn't have the price, so took the former.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Field trips are being made in the science classes these days.

Miss Fisher of Wayne is substitute teacher in the seventh grade during the absence of Miss Nichols.

The second division of P. H. S. Literary Society gave their second program last Friday. They certainly came up to previous standards with up-to-date current events and recitations.

On next Saturday, April 27, the Olympians and Alpines will hold their contest and the district meet will be held on the same day. We are sure that everyone will get their money's worth if they attend these two meets next Saturday.

The Athletic Association has purchased a splendid cup which will be presented to the school or grade winning the District Interscholastic meet three years in succession. The association has also purchased a dozen new track suits, an eight pound shot and a fine new ten dollar vaulting pole is expected soon.

The following items were found in the Moderator Topics. It will pay everyone to make note of them.

"House flies are not merely a nuisance, but positive enemies to life and health. Now is the time to clean out their building places. Flies are disease carriers; they live and breed on all kinds of filth and infect the food and drink by germ laden feet. Each female can lay 150 eggs.

The Grosse Isle Bridge.

Forbes Robertson, chairman of the board of county auditors, is greatly pleased with the outcome of the Grosse Isle bridge matter. "From the time of the granting of the franchise," said Mr. Robertson, "I was dissatisfied with the toll arrangement, and some people thought I was opposed to the bridge, which was by no means the case. What I wanted was a practical adjustment of the rate of fare so that the masses could get the benefit of the bridge. A ten dollar commutation ticket, no matter how big the reduction, if it had only a thirty day limit, was a prohibitive proposition, but it was written in the contract and the case seemed hopeless.

"However, when the bridge company sought to re-open the matter to make certain changes in the construction, I thought: I saw daylight and at once secured an opinion from the Prosecutor to the effect that the action of the company re-opened the whole matter, and I took up the question of limit on the $10 tickets. The company agreed to extend the limit to three months. This was a big gain and was the entering wedge for the final concession of 50% reduction on $10 commutation tickets good until used. It is really fair to both sides, the company has the money, the purchaser has a ticket good until used. Every farmer, merchant or team user, even foot passengers, are benefitted and that was what I was after. The wealthy can pay, regardless of the rate, but to the business man and to the poor man every cent counts. I regard the new bridge as a popular benefit and with this concession in the fares, I predict great progress in the development of the island, in which the new bridge will play a prominent part, for we have succeeded in making it everybody's bridge. I am absolutely certain the concession now made will result in larger revenue to the company through the great increase in patronage that will follow. I hope to see a fine public park on Grosse Isle, its proximity to Wyandotte, its magnificent exposure, the rapid growth of Detroit in that direction, all indicate that like Belle Isle, such an investment would prove of great wisdom."

"Our baby cries for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. T. B. Kendrick, Rascasa, Ga. "It is the best cough remedy on the market for coughs, colds and croup." For sale by all dealers.

W. G. Knapp has two children down the chicken pox.

Rev. W. W. DesAutels read a paper before the Detroit Baptist Ministers last Monday morning, upon the subject, "Christianity in Salt Lake City."

Lame shoulder is nearly always due to rheumatism of the muscles and quickly yields to the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. For sale by all dealers.

Several Plymouth people attended the Shaw-Cousins wedding which took place in Detroit Wednesday evening. The groom, John Shaw, is a grandson of John Shaw of this place.

H. B. Jolliffe has had the whole side of his store decorated with a large sign advertising "Honest Scrap" chewing tobacco. Did not know Brother Jolliffe was so enthusiastic over "Honest Scrap."

Plymouth people are not so badly off after all. They have $844,686.16 on deposit in the Plymouth United Savings bank, according to the report published elsewhere. They could live quite a while on that.

Rev. Warren received a telephone Wednesday morning stating his step-father, Rev. B. F. Doolittle at Otisville, had dropped dead while attending to some duties in barn. Mr. Warren left for that place Wednesday afternoon and remains for the funeral which takes place today.

Rev. Lee McCollester has resigned the pastorate of his church in Detroit and will go to Boston to assume a professorship of Tufts College. Rev. McCollester is known to many Plymouth people, having officiated here as pastor some years ago and they express regret in his departure for the East.

The field meet tomorrow at Athletic Park, participated in by District Interscholastic and "Alpine and Olympian" high school boys, promises to be a very interesting athletic event, and people who admire seeing the boys in the sports arranged should not fail to be present. Admission only 10 and 15 cents for both morning and afternoon.

FINE NATIVE ARMY

Philippine Forces Would Give Japan Hard Fight.

THEY'RE BRAVE AND LOYAL

Excellent Record Made by the Constabulary and Scouts of the Islands—Held in High Esteem by American Officers.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Recently there has been a flurry in the country over the intimation made on the floor of the United States senate that Japan was looking for a naval base on the coast of Mexico with the intention of knocking the Monroe doctrine into bits. It is said that if we ever have war with Japan the islanders will at once seize the Philippines, and it generally is believed that they will have no trouble in getting a foothold there and in hauling down the American flag.

It may be that the Japanese could get into the Philippines without very much trouble, but it is certain that they would have a fight and a hard one before they could control all the islands. There are about 12,000 American troops in the Philippines and as usual the Americans probably would give a good account of themselves. If an invasion of the islands should come the enemy also would meet with a resistance not altogether due to the force of American arms.

The Filipino constabulary and the Philippine scouts, armed organizations, one serving under the civil government and the other under the military authority of the islands, have done field service of which the soldiers of any army might be proud, and have shown a loyalty which means that no flag except that of the United States can command their courage and their devotion.

Ten Thousand Fighting Filipinos.

The officers who have served in the Philippines say that the constabulary, half police, half soldier, has in its ranks men who will give account of themselves on any field against any foe, and that what is said of the constabulary is true of the scouts, whose work is entirely military and who are attached to the army for the particular service which their names suggest.

Philippine constabulary and scouts together form a force of nearly 10,000 men and officers. The officers in the main are Americans, but some of the juniors bearing commissions in the constabulary are Filipinos trained for the work. In time these juniors will fill the places of higher rank and greater responsibility.

Brig. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs, who has known the Philippine constabulary and scouts in town, camp and field, says they are a force upon which dependence can be placed to the very last. An officer of general rank who has seen both the constabulary and the scouts in action against the worst kind of an enemy, a hidden enemy, told me recently that he would ask for no better command than an army of 100,000 soldiers of such courage with which to meet an enemy of equal numbers, and he said that he would not care much if the color of the skin of the enemy was the white of the Caucasian.

The record of the Philippine constabulary for the first six years of its existence was as follows:

Fire arms captured	5,341
Stolen animals recovered	5,773
Number of patrols and expeditions	40,886
Number of encounters with outlaws	1,515
Outlaws killed, wounded or captured	12,861
Convictions secured	10,395
Number of constabulary killed and wounded	43

Very Few Desertions.

It is little wonder that the American officer who turned in this report said: "These figures bear eloquent witness to the usefulness to which the constabulary has been put," and then added: "In the year 1907 there were but twenty desertions, which out of a force of 5,000 men, may be taken as negligible."

Until recently the constabulary, a name suggestive of police duty only, was armed with the old Springfield single-barrel rifle without bayonet. The field duty of the constabulary has been constant since the organization was formed. As the figures given go to show, the engagements with outlaw bands have been more than 1,500 in number.

The enlisted men, being without bayonets, have been rushed by the enemy time after time after they had fired once, but they have stood their ground with clubbed muskets against seemingly overwhelming numbers of the foe armed with spears and bolos. No member of the constabulary has shown the white feather.

One fight which the constabulary had with a large force of Pulajanes in Samar became a hand-to-hand combat, with the enemy outnumbering the constabulary five to one. The casualties among the constabulary were 86 per cent. of the force engaged, yet the remnant, with their wounded American officers, Captain Jones and Lieutenant Bowers, as leaders, finally routed their savage assailants. It was this fight which presented the strongest argument to the government for arming the constabulary with Krag-Jorgensen rifles and bayonets.

Must Spend Huge Sums.
Congress is trying to be economical, but it is pretty nearly certain that Uncle Sam may consider himself lucky if he gets on with a drain on his purse of only one billion dollars as the result of appropriation legislation at this session.

In the face of present conditions of cost of government, a "billion dollar congress" sounds like the sceme of economy. The expression was used at one time to frighten the country into an attempt to persuade senators and representatives to retrench. It is not probable that the people would be satisfied today with a congress that stopped its expenditures at the billion mark. The country needs many things, and it can't get all or nearly all for the amount named. The billion dollar was succeeded by the two billion dollar congress, and now the people are on the way to meeting with a three billion dollar congress.

Congress is not to blame for the huge sums that must be spent for the support of the government industries. Of course there is some waste at times. Some of the public buildings authorized serve no particular purpose except that of making pleasant the ways of the congressmen of the favored districts. It is likely also that some of the river and harbor surveys and the subsequent improvements are not worth the money expended upon them. In the main, however, money voted by congress goes to pay for things without which the country cannot get along.

Always Want the "Pork Barrel."

The army must be supported, and then there is the Panama canal, to say nothing of expenditures for maintenance of governmental institutions, which are with us year in and year out and cannot be classed as extraordinary. There is no reason to doubt that because of the probable absence of a public buildings bill this year the pressure for one next year will be strong. The representatives always are urgent for an appropriation for public buildings, voted in the form of a bill which to the reverent and irreverent alike is known as the "pork barrel." The ordinary public buildings bill carries about $30,000,000.

Every new member who comes to Washington in March is determined to vote against extravagance. His constituents have drilled into him the necessity of stopping some of the "awful waste that goes on yearly in Washington," but he soon learns that the legitimate expenses of a government are heavy and that what the constituents considered extravagance was merely money put into big ships, higher pay for officers and men of the army and navy, the canal and other things without which the government could not progress. When the members become accustomed to dealing with huge figures it is not so hard to get their minds fixed on the "little additional" it will require to erect structures in various parts of the Union.

Public Mourning Dropped.

Visitors to Washington who happen to get here at a time when some officer of high rank in the government has died express surprise that the department building in which he was employed or the war or the naval office which he may have served in the field are not draped in mourning. It is no longer the custom in Washington to drape the department buildings in black when a chief official or some former official dies. The only sign of mourning in the capital at the time when the Maine heroes were buried and at the time, say, when Admiral Robley D. Evans died, was the half-masted flags.

"For years it was the custom to drape the buildings in black when any man of present or past government service died. When the death of former Secretary of War Redfield Proctor was announced, no order was issued for the display of mourning emblems on the war department. This was the first time in the history of the country that black was not displayed on such an occasion. If there was no exterior symbol of sorrow there was sorrow in the interior, for the enlisted men of the army, and the officers, too, for that matter, held Proctor's memory grateful, for he did much for the service.

It was under the Proctor regime that the canteen was established in the army, but as is well known, the canteen no longer exists, the opposition of the temperance organizations of the country having been successful in inducing congress to take beer off the "daily bill of fare" of the service. Proctor himself at heart may not have been in favor of the canteen, but he thought it was better than the old sutler's store system, and he succeeded in removing the latter from the service.

Conditions Proctor Changed.

When Redfield Proctor went into Harrison's cabinet there were what was known as sutler's stores at the recruiting rendezvous of the country. Personal knowledge enables me to write of the conditions on Davis Island, New York harbor, at the time. The recruit who came to Davis Island practically was compelled to buy certain parts of his equipment at the sutler's. It did not make any difference whether or not some soldier, leaving for his post, was willing to turn over some of his supplies to the recruit—the recruit had to buy, or it was intimated to him plainly that he must buy, cleaning material, button sticks and half a dozen other things of the man who sold them as a side line to the selling of beer.

The result was that the recruits many a time spent money for things they did not need and the sutler waxed wealthy. The sutler sold beer, and there was no restriction placed on the amount that he was allowed to sell to each man. On pay days the sutler's store at Davis Island was a sight. In that day there were few restrictions placed on enlistments, and so long as a man was physically qualified for the service he was taken in with a few questions.

Found Imitation Difficult.

Bert, a freshman, closed a letter to his cousin Joe, five years old, by saying: "Now, I must quit and write five pages on Esther."

The next day his father found Joe armed with tablet and pencil, trying to hold down his young brother Robert, and said to him: "Joe, what are you doing?"

"I'm trying to write five pages on Rob, but he won't be still," replied the little fellow.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor—all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies?' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. "The editor of the Weekly Plain Dealer is a charitable sort of fellow," commented honest Farmer Hornbeak, in the midst of his perusal of the village newspaper, wherein he had encountered an example of the linotype's peculiar perversity. "In his article on the death of Lafe Babsack, who, be-twixt me and you, hadn't much to recommend him except that he wasn't quite as bad sometimes as he was others, he says that 'the deceased was generally regarded as hijjdyt89mfwrde-tahrmfwhrtadty!'"

Bad Teeth Go With Good Brains.

An English scientist has pointed out that there are signs of a steady degeneracy in two sets of organs vital to the well being of the human race, and the fall is most marked among the western nations. The evidence is that, coincident with the mental advance of man, there has been a diminution in the provision of teeth. In the ape, the negro, and the white man, brain and teeth are inversely proportional to efficiency. Increase of cunning has reduced the work of the teeth, and the demand of the brain for blood has starved the former; disorders of digestion show that the balance is unsatisfactory.

He Hoped So, Too.

Nellie McCoy tells the story of an advance agent of a barn-storming show that nearly closed every Saturday night, but rested over Sunday and started in bright and fresh Monday morning.

His mother was a Quaker, and when he wrote that he was the business manager in advance of the show, she wrote him:

"My Dear Son—I am very sorry that thou art in the show business, but I am glad that thou art ahead of the show! I trust that thou wilt always stay ahead of it."

A Correction.

"We are drifting toward a paternal form of government," said the economist.

"Pardon me if I correct you," responded the suffragette, gently; "to be accurate, you should say a maternal form of government."

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the belagged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly recurring pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Dickover.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. R. F. Dickover, of Utes, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no one wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

NEVADA has "Come Back" Strong

The State that gave us the "Mother Lode" some fifty years ago is going to be one of the garden spots of America. The hundreds of millions of dollars they took from inside the earth in that Mother Lode will look like a penny-bank when they spread the irrigation waters on Nevada's sagebrush plains. Get in on the ground floor, and get in now. Don't wait; don't hesitate.

will take you there. A Low Round-Trip Homeseekers' Excursion Fare will be in effect on the first and third Tuesdays of each month during 1912.

Land that has been leagging at 25 cents an acre will, under irrigation, be worth thousands of dollars to you in a few short years.

There is no argument; there's no question about it! Idaho, and Utah, and Colorado, and a dozen other states have done it—and Nevada will. You have asked for your opportunity? Here it is. You wanted your chance? You've got it. This is the start—the beginning. It is the very ball's-eye of opportunity in a state that is comparatively new. It's the chance of little capital and shrewd brains. One dollar now will do the work of a thousand later on.

The lands listed below are owned by the Southern Pacific Company. They offer them to Homeseekers at from $2 to $6 per acre, on ten years' time; one-tenth cash, 6 per cent interest on deferred payments.
