IS MOST HYBRID OF WORDS

Remacdamizing Comes From Latin, Gaelic, Hebrew, Greek and Finally English.

The most hybrid word in the English language, according to Prof. A. F. Chamberlain of Clark university, is "remacdamizing." Prof. Clarke points out that this word is derived from five languages—Latin, Gaelic, Hebrew, Greek and English. He resolves it into five factors as follows:

1. re, a Latin prefix, signifying a repetition or doing over again.

2. mac, a Gaelic word for son, in common use as a prefix for genealogical purposes.

3. Adam, the representative in many European languages of the Hebrew name of the first man, according to the Mosiac account of the creation as given in the book of Genesis.

4. iz (or ize), the modern English representative, through the French, Iser, of the Greek verbal terminal izeln.

5. ing, the English suffix of the participle present, verbal noun, etc.

The root of the word "macadam" illustrates in another way the vitality of our English speech and its ability to draw new words into its vocabulary whenever the need arises. The term "macadam" is really the family name of the man, John Macadam, who in 1819 devised the now common method of paving roads with small broken stones, etc.

Celtic and Semitic had already combined to produce Macadam, meaning "son of Adam," which the English language then took up and further molded to suit its genius. There are many such hybrids, but this is probably the worst.—Popular Science Monthly.

Songs of Day Before Yesterday.

We made up a catalogue recently of popular songs of the last two decades. Hardly was it set in type before those omitted began to swarm to memory. "Shoo Fly! Don't Bother Me" might have been added to the old timers. There were: "Put Me Off at Buffalo," "And Her Golden Hair Was Hanging Down Her Back," "On the Banks of the Wabash Far Away," "Rosie O'Grady," "Take Me Back, Back, Back to Baltimore," and "I'd Leave My Happy Home for You-oo-oo-oo," "Goodby, Dolly Gray," "She Was Happy Till She Met You," "Bella, "Sammy," and "Teasing" had their intense and fleeting existence. Too popular to be overlooked were: "Mr. Dooley," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Everybody Works but Father," "Waiting at the Church." Of the whole crop it seems as if all were transitory except "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."—Collier's Weekly.

Urges Farmers to Raise Fish.

"There are signs that the time is not far distant," said William E. Meehan, former state commissioner of fisheries and present state director of the public aquarium in Fairmount Park, "when farmers will consider fish culture as important a part of their calling as the raising of grain or potatoes or poultry. When that day arrives the fish industry of Pennsylvania will rank as high as any other industry."

"There are few farms in Pennsylvania without springs, a stream and swampy land of which no use is made and upon which the farmer pays taxes without any return. Most of the streams and the springs and the swamp land could be utilized for the rearing of fish. Under intelligent care an otherwise useless piece of wet land can be made to yield as much, acre for acre, as the most fertile land."—Philadelphia North American.

Stone Venus 20,000 Years Old.

Prof. Camille Jean read a paper at the last meeting of the French Academy of inscription describing the discovery in the Dordogne of the oldest known representation of the human form. The find was due to Dr. Lalanne, who has spent some time in excavating in the grottoes of Laussel. It consists of a piece of stone some 18 inches high, showing a bas relief of a woman, and is estimated to be at least 20,000 years old. The figure has been named the "Laussel Venus." Scientists believe the work is of the Aurignacian epoch between the ages of the mammoth and the reindeer, when the artist would have used sharpened flints as tools.

Thief Returns Gold Watch.

A gold watch was received at the Chicago postoffice in a box, with the following inscription: "Please deliver to the chief of police of the city of Chicago." The timepiece is believed to have been stolen, and the thief, remorse-stricken, dropped the package in a mail box without postage.

Crystals in Yellow Pigment of Egg.

Two German scientists have just isolated the yellow pigment from the yolk of the egg, the result being in the form of crystals. Investigations made into the chemical nature of this substance point to its being closely allied to the xanthophyll of withered leaves, which is formed from the chlorophyll. In this most important scientific study 6,000 hens' eggs were simultaneously treated, and these were yielded only 53 grains of pure pigment.

LUCK AND ABILITY

Ellis H. Roberts Was Credited With Having Both.

EX-TREASURER YET ACTIVE

Reminiscences of His Feud With Roscoe Conkling and His Final Victory—Plan to Establish American Hospital in Paris.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—In the different department buildings of the government there are hanging on the walls pictures of former officials whose work was done in the rooms which their portraits adorn. In the war department pictures of the former secretaries of war hang on the walls of the rooms used directly by the present secretary, Henry L. Stimson. They are fine old portraits, most of them, and they represent a line of men from the days of the foundation of the government until the present hour.

By general admission, the finest work of art in the collection is the portrait of Jefferson Davis, who was president of the Confederacy and who at one time held the cabinet position of secretary of war. In the treasury department there are portraits not only of former secretaries of the treasury, but also of former comptrollers of the currency and former treasurers of the United States and of other men in high official position.

Until a few years ago Ellis H. Roberts of Utica, N. Y., was treasurer of the United States. Mr. Roberts is still living and enjoying a virile old age. He was a keen politician and was known as one of the scholars in politics. He is approaching ninety years of age and yet he is still making addresses upon governmental subjects and upon subjects of historical interest. It used to be said of Mr. Roberts in Washington that he had a luck stone in his pocket and ability in his head all through his public career.

Feud Between Roberts and Conkling.

Roscoe Conkling, one of the famous senators of the United States, was from Utica, and Conkling and Roberts, although both Republicans, were very much at odds. For years and years Conkling tried to put Roberts down and out, but at the end, it is said, Roberts had as much to do with putting Conkling down and out as any other man in public life, unless President Garfield be excepted.

Early in life Roberts and Conkling, as the Washington story goes, were the best possible friends. Roberts was the editor of a newspaper now no longer in existence, but in its day one of the ablest journals in New York state. Conkling and Roberts fell out. The Conkling influence defeated Roberts for Congress. He was immediately appointed assistant treasurer of the United States at New York city. Almost as soon as this appointment was made Roscoe Conkling and Thomas C. Platt resigned from the senate of the United States because they resented another appointment made by President Garfield. They asked the legislature of New York to vindicate them by returning them to the senate. The influence of Roberts and his paper helped to kill Conkling politically for all time and to kill Platt for a season.

Later when Conkling had been out of the political arena for some time, Roberts, who had held a good office all the time, was made treasurer of the United States. Platt came back into political life and became for a time chief of the Republican party in New York state. Conkling and Platt are both dead, but Ellis H. Roberts is alive and vigorous and apparently it does not need his picture in the treasury department to recall to Washington men some of the stories of his life while he was in the midst of public affairs.

Sherman Can't Get Away.

The vice president of the United States, James S. Sherman, is perhaps in one way not the happiest man in this republic among its citizens. Although he is the second officer in the government, he finds that he is virtually chained to his seat except on those rare occasions when the imperative call of duty to his private concerns or his family makes him arrange things so that he can get away.

The senate of the United States has no president pro tem. Senator William P. Frye of Maine, who was the duly elected presiding officer to act in the absence of the vice president, died last summer, and ever since congress came together the senate has been trying without success to elect Mr. Frye's successor. The progressive Republicans want one senator named for the place and the conservative Republicans want another, while the Democrats stand by a third candidate. The result has been a deadlock which has prevented the election of any man to take Senator Frye's place. There is no immediate prospect that an election can be forced, for neither side to the controversy seems to be willing to yield.

His Vote Might Be Needed.

As a result of this trouble the vice president finds it difficult to get away from Washington. The Republican majority in the senate is small and such as it is, it is divided against itself and so the conservative Republicans object to having Mr. Sherman away when anything of importance is going to come to a vote for fear that his vote might be necessary to carry the day for them in case there were a tie, for the vice president of the United States has no voice in the government except when it is used to say yes or nay on some question on which the vote in the upper house is equal between the two sides.

Mr. Sherman did go away for a few days recently and a Democratic senator was appointed president pro tem, but the Republicans took good care that during the time of leave nothing should come to a vote which was of the least legislative importance. Mr. Sherman sits in the chair now almost with the "continuous regularity" with which Mr. Fairbanks sat in it. The former vice president was away from his duties in the senate on only two occasions during the four years of his incumbency.

Jokes of the Senators.

The senate of the United States is reported generally as the staidest kind of a body. It is seldom that any jokes are cracked on the floor of the upper house, but occasionally there is an approach to humor, or an attempt at humor on the part of some senator in a speech, and then there are likely to be smiles, but there is never anything approaching even the giggle which precedes laughter.

In the quiet of their committee rooms senators occasionally tell stories and a good many of them have to do with men whom they have known in public life but who are dead and gone. Other stories have to do with their experiences as senators in their dealings with their constituents, especially such dealings as are had through correspondence.

Senators and representatives both are a willing lot, but occasionally there is a limit. A senator from Michigan told some of his committee room comrades the other day that he had received a letter which he thought approached the extreme of assurance. This letter, he said, was from a clerk in one of the departments and it virtually ordered the senator—the order being based on the ground that the man who issued it hailed from the state of Michigan—to call upon the superintendent of the division in which the letter writer was a clerk, and tell him to have the clerk's desk moved so that he could spend the time when he was not at work in looking out of the window. The senator vouched for the truthfulness of this story.

Platt's Modesty Shocked.

The other day a member of the upper house told a story of Senator Foraker of Ohio and ex-Senator Platt of Connecticut who died some years ago. Mr. Platt was known as the most modest man who ever had a seat in congress. He was modest to the shrinking point. The story ran like this: "When Senator Foraker was making his speech against the proposal to admit Arizona and New Mexico as one state he quoted from arguments made by Senator Platt, who years ago on the floor of the senate declared that Dakota was too large to be admitted as one commonwealth and that it should be split in twain. The Ohio senator started in thus: 'The senator senator from Connecticut, Mr. Platt—'

"At this instant the main door of the senate chamber opened and Senator Platt appeared and started slowly down the center aisle. He had not heard his name as it fell from the lips of Senator Foraker. Senator Foraker continued: 'One of the most virile-minded, one of the ablest senators who ever held membership in this body—'

"Senator Platt had advanced ten feet. Every eye was upon him. Senator Foraker continued: 'A man known to the country for his distinguished services—a man known for the fine quality of his mind—'

"Senator Platt was now within ten feet of the front row of senatorial desks. The eyes were still upon him, and in them and below them was silent laughter.

"Senator Foraker went on: 'A man whose opinion upon questions of moment carries weight always and conviction nearly always. I go not astray when I seek the words of the eminent senator senator from Connecticut—'

"Senator Platt had been listening without suspicion. His name heard, he fairly folded his towering form, fell into a seat and there sat shivering from the shock to his Connecticut modesty.

Morgan Had Fun With Gallinger.

Another story was told of Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire who is still in the senate and Senator Morgan of Alabama who died not long ago at an advanced age. The bill to admit Oklahoma as a state was under discussion and Senator Gallinger had introduced an amendment providing that no intoxicating liquor should be sold in the new state for twenty-one years. Then the Alabama senator rose in his seat and solemnly proposed to Mr. Gallinger's amendment—an amendment to the effect that no one should sell or give intoxicating drinks to the inhabitants of the new state, "except wines which were made in the United States."

Senator Gallinger, who is the head and front of every reform movement which reaches the senate, looked with absolute horror at his friend from Alabama. The New Hampshire senator had in front of him in imagination a picture of the five civilized tribes laying in a season's supply of California port and Missouri champagne. He hastened to tell the senate that Indians could get drunk on the American product as rapidly and as completely as they could on the product of the vineyards of France, and that there were as many warpath possibilities in a bottle of one as in a bottle of the other. The amendment to the amendment was voted down, and there was just a suspicion of a movement of the body of the Alabama senator to suggest that he was laughing.

SHIP BRINGS 190 OF TITANIC DEAD

THE MACKAY-BENNETT DID NOT PICK UP ALL THE BODIES IT SAW.

BODIES WERE LAID IN PILES ON DEATH SHIP.

Astor's Corpse Was Found Upright Frozen in Life Belt, With $2,500 in His Pockets—Strauss Body Found.

One hundred and ninety bodies and among them those of Col. John Jacob Astor and Isidor Strauss, were brought to Halifax, on the cable ship Mackay-Bennett, which had been searching an area of more than 30 square miles in the vicinity where the great White Star line Titanic sank after striking an iceberg.

Church bells tolled and flags fluttered at half-mast as the funeral ship docked.

Geo. B. Widener's body, although previously reported as recovered, was not among those on the ship, and her commander explained that a body at first thought to have been that of Mr. Widener was buried as that of his valet. All told, 306 dead were found and 116 were consigned again to the sea. Not one name of prominent persons missing was added to the list of recovered dead by the Mackay-Bennett's arrival. Sailors worked four hours unloading her and the dead were taken to an improvised morgue in a curling rink, where relatives will have opportunity to claim them.

The total number of bodies found was 306. Of these 116, most of them members of the Titanic's crew and unidentified, were consigned to the sea, and the remaining 190 brought to Halifax. Only 10 bodies of women were found afloat.

Relics of the great Titanic dotted the sea over an area of 30 miles square, the captain said. Doors, windows, and chairs by the score were found floating, but to none of them were bodies lashed. In several instances there were bodies numbering 50 or more, but none were lashed together.

Cent Grant Laid to Rest.

The funeral of Major-General Frederick Dent Grant took place in New York. From the Battery to the West Forty-second street ferry the streets through which the funeral procession passed were lined with people who paused, hat in hand, while the caisson on which the casket rested, followed by the general's horse, "Pet," caparisoned in black, went by. The interment was in Cadets' cemetery, West Point, in a spot which the general himself had chosen, from where one could see the military academy and the whole sweep of the Hudson. President Taft, Senator Roge, Major-General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, Vice-President Sherman and Mrs. Sherman, Henry W. Taft, Mayor Gaynor, and other men in public life attended the services.

Believe Railroad Strike is Averted.

Belief that the threatened strike of 25,000 locomotive engineers employed by railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers has been averted through the mediation efforts of Judge Martin A. Knapp of the court of commerce and Charles P. Neill, United States commissioner of labor, was expressed by participants in the conferences in New York last week with the government representatives. The question of arbitration has now been agreed to by both sides, it is said, but with some modification from the original proposal made to the mediators by the railway managers.

Dr. Pearson's Philanthropy, is Dead.

Dr. Daniel Kimball Pearson, 92 years old, who in recent years gave more than $5,000,000 to small colleges, chiefly in the middle west, died in a sanitarium at Hinsdale, a suburb of Chicago, comparatively a poor man. Pneumonia, with complications, due to old age, was the cause. For several days he had been sinking, a patient in an institution where he maintained himself on an income of $5,000 a year paid him by a college to which he had contributed $250,000 on the condition that he would be given 2 per cent of that amount for the remainder of his life.

Rebels Lose 240 Men in Hot Battle.

El Paso, April 30.—With 220 dead and more than this number wounded, many of whom were unable even to crawl from the field of battle, a band of 2,000 rebels under command of Manuel Guerrero has been completely routed by the garrison of Lepic, Mexico aided by the police of the local commandery.

Elder A. G. Daniels, of the Seventh Day Adventists, of Battle Creek, says the denomination sold $2,000,000 worth of literature last year.

Fifty thousand dollars' worth of newspaper advertising space is to be purchased next fall by the American Home Missions Council in order to present current social and religious problems fully and frankly to the people of the United States.

RESULTS IN MASSACHUSETTS

Errors Split Delegation of 36—Taft and Roosevelt Each Get 18.

Complete returns from Massachusetts' presidential primaries giving the vote from 1,077 out of 1,080 precincts in the state show:

La Follette (preference), 1,756; Roosevelt (preference), 71,203; Taft (preference), 74,808. Taft majority, 3,605.

For delegate-at-large: Baxter (heading Roosevelt group), 74,121; Crane (heading Taft group), 65,876; Roosevelt majority, 8,245.

Practically complete returns from 14 congressional districts show that the complete Massachusetts delegation to Chicago will stand 18 for Roosevelt and 18 for Taft.

The Democratic voters of the state expressed a preference for Speaker Champ Clark, although a majority of the delegates to Baltimore will go pledged to Gov. Foss of Massachusetts as "favorite son."

President Taft's yacht Mayflower, the dispatch boat Dolphin, and the naval transport Prairie will hold their annual target practice off Tangier Sound in the Lower Chesapeake Bay, May 6.

WAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Tasha Lama of Mongolia Buys an Auto

SAN FRANCISCO.—The Tasha Lama, emperor of Mongolia and next to the head of the Buddhist church, has never taken a bath in his life, but he rides about the streets of Urga, on the far side of the Gobi desert, in the finest limousine that money can buy. Ethan L. Le Munyon of the China-American Trading company at Tientsin, who delivered the limousine at Urga, has arrived here on the Nippon Maru.

The car was taken by rail to the edge of the Gobi desert. It made too big a package to stow aboard a camel cart, so Le Munyon filled up the gasoline tank and made the limousine do its own work for the rest of the trip. This involved a journey of 680 miles across the Gobi desert. As the contract required the car's delivery in good condition, and as the roads were rough, Le Munyon had to proceed with caution. He made the journey in ten days, which was three weeks faster than the speediest camel train had ever made it, so the natives say. Although the lama owns two palaces—one for summer and the other for winter—he lives in a tent in the yard of his winter palace. From the cradle to the grave a Mongolian of the Buddhist faith never takes a bath. He believes that if he did he would be turned into a fish. Le Munyon was received by the lama in his tent. He describes the political head of Mongolia as the dirtiest human being he ever saw, and this in a land whose people are notorious as the most unwhashed in all the world.

"It was a great trip," said Le Munyon yesterday. "I do not want to deliver any more packages in Mongolia. The natives are friendly and their hospitality is something the victim never forgets.

"Each one carries a shallow wooden dish inside the bosom of his shirt. If he takes a fancy to you, and he usually does, he digs out this dish, licks it out with his tongue, fills it with tea and invites you to drink. If you object to the licking process, as some foreigners do, he will clean it out with the sleeve of his coat. They make tea by boiling tea leaves and mutton fat together, and as the mutton is usually rancid, the combination is calculated to make a lasting impression on the occidental palate."

Cat's Conduct is Up to City for Trial

NEW YORK.—Is Minnie, the feline favorite of the inmates of the Inasmuch Home for Aged Women, a roof-ripping, gravel-scratching, hole-tearing, diabolical example of what a cat should not be, or is Minnie a soft-purring, affectionate, fire-loving and milk-seeking animal, worthy of all the devotion that the women of the home and neighbors in the block can give her?

This is the vital case which is being tried in the court of public opinion in the home, in every drawing-room, in the back yards and out the windows of Garfield place.

Minnie is charged in the indictment brought by William A. Robbins in a complaint to the health department, with having feloniously and with malice aforethought, ripped, torn, scratched and otherwise made holes in a certain tin roof, situated just over the library of said complainant. The charges, separately and collectively, Minnie indignantly denies through her friend, Mrs. Susan Lane, founder of the home. The indictment describes the roof as being an extension roof, covered with gravel. Minnie is accused of having scratched the gravel off and having torn the tin.

The defense is not insanity. Minnie offers in evidence to refute the charge, four sets of perfectly blunt claws.

The prosecution offers to prove by numerous witnesses that Minnie and another cat, "to the deponent unknown"—a sort of Mary Doe cat—can be thoroughly identified as the leader in the band of feline vandals.

The neighborhood is divided. The board of health has been drawn in and has instructed Minnie, Mrs. Lane, acting as interpreter, that she must remain within the confines of her own home. If she does not, the civil court will take the case from the Court of Public Opinion of the Garfield place district.

Minnie, upon being asked her opinion of her ancestors and the case in general, remarked "Melow!" She then turned her back on the interviewer, which is supposed to be an expression of disgust with the entire proceeding.

Fat Juror Excused; Can't Keep Awake

CHICAGO.—Only thin men and "bums" are meant for jury service. So reasons John W. White, strenuous butcher and emulator of the obesity propensities of the late "Baby" Billas.

White struggled along for nearly a week trying to be a perfectly good juror in the Municipal court, but he failed dismally, because he couldn't keep awake.

Bailiffs stood at his side and nudged him in the ribs. 'Twas like trying to tickle a rhinoceros. Then they kicked his shins, pulled his ears and, grasping firmly, shook him by the shoulders.

White would grin sleepily and try to beat his record of the first day, when he stayed awake for ten minutes. But somehow he always slipped a cog. Each time an ardent lawyer waxed eloquent the legal train of thought was wrecked by a peaceful sign or snore. "Z-z-z, b-r-r-r-r, whew-ew-ew-ew!" The lawyer usually became indignant, and then the kicking process had to be done all over.

Matters reached a climax the other day when White appealed to the one whom he blames for all his troubles—the man who impeded him as a juror—Municipal Judge Walker.

"Jury service gives me sleeping sickness," he said.

Then he mentioned his weight—310 pounds—and the fact that he is a butcher and has spent most of his time for several months in the ice box of his brother's meat market at 26 South Fifth avenue. He said he just couldn't stand the warm courtroom any longer.

"You see, only thin men and bums are meant for jury service," said White. "A man who spends most of his days in an ice box, or a heavy weight who worked strenuously can't stand this program of doing nothing. This warm air just makes a fellow sleepy."

He was excused from further service.

Eats 360 Bananas in Month to Win Bet

CINCINNATI.—"I'll win," said the man who was eating 360 bananas on a $10 bet. "I'll win easily."

And John Breen sat down to his fourteenth dozen of bananas on an undertaking to eat thirty dozen in thirty days.

"I have not lost my appetite—eat three square meals a day—and the bananas are just a little dessert."

The wager was made several days ago at a wake, when some friends were joking Breen about his appetite. He had remarked that once he had eaten three dozen bananas in thirty-five minutes.

Breen completed his feat the night of April 11, when he topped off his last dozen with five dozen boiled eggs and two dozen raw oysters.

Every night Breen would show up at a restaurant and, after taking a couple of glasses of milk, start on the bananas. Fifteen minutes is the longest time he took to finish a dozen. The bananas range in size from seven to nine inches, and were selected.

"I am just a hearty eater; I work hard all day and like to eat," he said. He weighs 190 pounds and is six feet two inches in height. "Somehow I never did get enough green peas. I ate a gallon can of them one day, and then stopped because I was afraid more would hurt me. I can eat a peck of potatoes with a little butter smeared over them; and quail—I could eat four of them every day forever."

Breen came to Cincinnati six years ago from Flemingburg, Ky. He is a Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton freight handler.

"John never seems to get enough to eat," sighs Mrs. O'Meara, his aunt. "At supper he eats half a dozen potatoes, goodly portions of stewed tomatoes, several large pieces of meat, a few cups of coffee and half a loaf of bread or a similar quantity of foods and then he announces: 'I'll just go down to the corner and eat them by ones.'"

Historic Blackguards

By ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Guy Fawkes: And the "Gunpowder Plot"

A BIG, bearded man, known as "Johnston," aroused some idle curiosity by bidding in at auction the lease of a vault or coal cellar underneath the House of Lords in London. Johnson explained that he was the servant of Master Thomas Piercy, who lived next door to Parliament House, and that he wanted the vault as a storage place for fuel.

James I. was king of England. He had succeeded Queen Elizabeth in 1603. He was a scoundrel in a weak, stilted way. He persecuted the Catholics, broke his solemn state promises, lied out of difficulties and in other ways made for himself a host of enemies. Parliament, for the most part, backed the king's wishes. Hence Parliament shared his unpopularity.

A band of daring, if unscrupulous, men resolved to rid England of King James, the royal family and Parliament as well by the very simple means of destroying the whole lot at one blow. Their plan was to fill the cellars of the House of Lords with gunpowder. Then, on the day when the king and his family should come to open Parliament, to set a match to the powder and blow up every one in the building.

Robert Catesby, Thomas Piercy and eighteen others were in the conspiracy. They chose as the actual assassin a brave, heartless soldier of fortune whose real name is said to have been Guido Fox, but who is known to history as "Guy Fawkes." No one knows whether Fawkes was to receive money for his deed or whether he consented to do it through hatred for King James.

In the early autumn of 1604 the conspirators began to cut a hole through the nine-foot wall between Piercy's house and the Parliament cellars. Then, hearing the cellars were for rent, Fawkes hired them. After that the work went on easily and safely enough. Thirty-six barrels of gunpowder were rolled into the cellars and were covered with masses of wood. A train of powder was laid. Everything was ready.

Parliament was to meet on November 5, 1604. The king and most of the royal family were to be there. At a signal Fawkes was to light the powder train and was then to escape by ship to Flanders. The other conspirators were to kill or capture any members of the royal family who did not chance to be at Parliament's opening.

No one betrayed this plot, which might have changed the history of the world. Yet it was discovered. The discovery came about in an odd way.

One of the conspirators—which one was never known—was a friend of Lord Montague, a noted English statesman. He sent Montague an anonymous letter, begging him to keep away from the opening of Parliament. Montague, not sure whether or not the warning was a joke, showed it to the secretary of state. The secretary laughed at it as a hoax, but was induced to show it to the king. James (who was so cowardly that the sight of a sword used to make him ill) fell into a frenzy of fear. On the night of Nov. 4 he ordered Parliament house searched. As the searchers neared the cellars they met Guy Fawkes coming out. He was seized before he could dart back and the place was ransacked.

The sight of so large a pile of wood roused suspicion. The wood was cleared away and the gunpowder barrels were discovered. Fawkes, raving with helpless fury, strove in vain to set fire to the gunpowder and to die with his enemies. He was overpowered and dragged before the king. There he made surly, contemptuous answers to all questions and refused to betray his accomplices. But torture at last made him speak. The conspirators were seized and most of them were executed—Fawkes last of all. An old chronicle gives the following account of his farewell to the world:

"This very tall and desperate fellow . . . made no long speech, but (after a sort), seeming sorry for his offense, asked a kind of forgiveness of the king and the state for his bloody intent."

All Europe shuddered over England's narrow escape. The fifth of November was ordained by King James "to be observed forever as a day of thanksgiving." For centuries thereafter Nov. 5 was celebrated throughout England much as we celebrate July 4. Amid bonfires and noise Guy Fawkes was burned in effigy.

So, for more than three hundred years after his death, Guy Fawkes has had the honor of an annual "Day"—a privilege denied to most heroes and accorded perhaps to no other blackguard.

Capt. Kidd—"Sheep or Wolf"

ASK the average person to name some famous pirate. The chances are two to one that he will say, "Captain Kidd." As a matter of fact, Kidd was a very third rate sort of pirate, not to be compared in villainy, exploits and wealth to dozens of captains who are today forgotten. A doggerel song ("My Name Was Captain Kidd, as I Sailed") and the foolish belief that he buried vast treasures somewhere near New York are the two things that have made Kidd immortal.

In the latter part of the seventeenth century the American coasts swarmed with pirates who spoiled sea commerce and blocked travel. King William III. of England sent Lord Bellomont to New York as governor, with orders to stamp out piracy. Bellomont liked the idea of combining duty with profit. So, with Robert Livingston and other rich, shrewd New Yorkers, he formed a company to make money out of crushing the pirates. A powerful warship was to be fitted out and sent against the freebooters. They and their plunder were to be seized, and the profits of the enterprise divided between the company and the king.

Next, Bellomont and Livingston looked about for the right sort of man to captain their warship. Livingston suggested a "right worthy and honest mariner," "William Kidd by name. Kidd was the son of a Scotch clergyman who is said to have suffered martyrdom. The "right worthy and honest mariner" had for more than thirty years followed the sea, fighting against England's French foes, thrashing pirates and in many ways proving of use to the colonies. At that time (1696) he had retired and was living quietly in New York.

Kidd was made a shareholder in Bellomont's company, took command of the thirty-gun galley Adventure and set forth on his pirate-chasing task. He bore with him a commission from the king, made out to "our well beloved and trusty William Kidd." After an unimportant capture or two, he vanished. For a time nothing was heard, directly, from him. Then came ugly rumors that shaped themselves into facts.

It seemed that the "well beloved and trusty William Kidd" was doing things that tended to make him neither trusted nor beloved. In short, he and his crew, who had been sent to destroy piracy, had themselves become pirates and were holding up and robbing merchant ships. This news aroused tremendous excitement. Public feeling ran dangerously high. Many people even hinted that Bellomont, Livingston and the rest had secretly formed a piratical company and were only waiting to gather the spoils. Bellomont, thoroughly scared, reported the bad tidings to the king, who perceived them with horror—real or assumed—and who, in 1698, ordered every British port to be on the lookout for Kidd's capture.

Meanwhile the "well-beloved" Kidd, cruising the Spanish Main, heard of the plan to arrest him. Leaving his large ship near Hayti, he hastened northward in a sloop laden with $70,000 worth of treasure and with a crew of forty. He touched at Oyster Bay, L. I., sent for a New York lawyer and opened negotiations with Bellomont. It is supposed Bellomont sent word that the captain had nothing to fear, for Kidd landed and went on July 1, 1699, to Boston to talk matters over. There Bellomont arrested him and packed him off to England to stand trial. Then the company sent to the pirate sloop and seized the treasure. As Kidd had started out to do such great things the public grew to believe that $70,000 could not represent all his plunder and that he must have buried part of the treasure. There is no reason for thinking so. Yet the rumor has lived for over 200 years.

Kidd, meantime, was placed on trial in England. He denied that he had ever consented to be a pirate and said his crew had bullied him into it. He could not be convicted of piracy, even by a court which for some mysterious reason rushed his trial through with suspicious haste and lack of justice. But he was found guilty of having killed a mutinous sailor named William Moon by hitting him over the head with a bucket. For this crime Kidd was condemned to death. He was hanged on May 24, 1701, with nine of his crew, at Execution Dock, London.

To this day it cannot be definitely known whether Captain Kidd was a harmless old man, threatened into unwilling piracy by a mutinous crew, or whether he was the blackguard accomplice of a band of financiers who used him for their own ends and then disowned him. The haste and injustice of his trial led some to think his speedy execution was needed to hush a pirate scandal that would have involved some of the highest names in England and in the colonies.

To His Cello

'Cello! 'Cello!
Ah, I love thy murmur mellow
When the bow is slowly sweeping
O'er the strings, where songs are sleeping

That but wait the call to waken—
As a blossom-bough unshaken
Holds its treasures, holds them quiet
Till the breeze comes to rattle
All the wealth of petals tingling—
Thus, my 'cello, with thy singing.

'Cello! 'Cello!
Thine the laugh of Punchinello;
Thine the poignant, somber sobbing
Of a heart in sorrow throbbing.
Here and there beneath my fingers
I can feel each tone that lingers—
Thrilling chords that surge with pleasure,
Darker strains in minor measure,
Heaving, swaying, sweet and hollow
As the echoes that follow.

'Cello! 'Cello!
Here my arm has worn thee yellow;
Here my fingers in excesses
Of the warmth of my caresses
Left their prints, when strings vibrating
Told my loving and my hating.
'Cello! Whence thy soul undying,
Font of laughter and of sighing?
Whence the soul that brings to seeming
All the gold of all my dreaming?

Flowers in the Home.

Nothing makes a dining-room so cheerful as plenty of flowers and plants. Yet how few of us ever think of utilizing the ceiling space for this purpose. For ceiling gardens some quick growing vine is best. The hardy watermelon serves nicely. Care should be taken to plant the seeds upside down, otherwise the vine is apt to grow upward through the floor of the room above, and if that is a bedroom it will be disconcerting to arise some morning and step on a watermelon vine. Once the vine appears through the ceiling it can readily be trained. Vines, like animals, should be trained by kindness. Be sure that the melons are only permitted to grow on the side walls. It always causes unpleasant feelings in the bosom of the honored guest if a large watermelon falls from the ceiling into his soup or upon his head, as the case may be.

Coax a few morning glory vines in along the waterpipes and through a hole which you may bore in the floor of the hall. Then start the vines up the railing of the stairway. The effect is unique.

If your daughter has young men admirers who like to sit in the parlor with her by a dim light, you can devise a neat and effective parlor decoration by potting about a dozen bare plants here and there about the divan. Pardon us for mentioning it, but maybe you would like to grow a cantaloupe in there, too. Well, never mind then. Consider it unsaid if you feel that way about it.

An Economical Idea.

Mr. Gooph—Yes, we are going to housekeeping.
Mr. Gooph—But I thought you liked to board.
Mr. Gooph—We do. But Mrs. Gooph has such a poor appetite there is no money in living that way.

No Fatalities.

Mrs. Gooph—I told my husband I should simply die if he did not get me a new Easter bonnet.
Mrs. Wooph—And did he get it?
Mrs. Gooph—Well, you haven't seen any funerals leaving our house, have you?

His Winter Mood.

Mr. Subbubs—I wish you would list my villa at Baklots-by-the-bay for sale.
Real Estate Agent—Certainly, sir.
Mr. Subbubs—And if you do not find a purchaser by next October see if you can't give the place away to some one.

On the Gas Man.

Bobbs—There goes a fellow who makes extravagant statements.
Bobbs—He looks respectable. Who is he?
Bobbs—I don't know his name. He writes our gas bills.

Married, on Saturday of last week, by Rev. Dr. Ooster, at his residence on Holbrook Avenue, Mr. Egbert A. Paddock and Miss Anna Wegener, both of Livonia. The young people are well and popularly known in this vicinity and their many friends extend most cordial congratulations. They will reside in Plymouth.

James McClumpha died at his home Monday night, after an illness of only a few days. When his wife went to his bedside Monday morning she discovered that he had passed away. He was 55 years of age and had resided in and about Plymouth all his life. He leaves, beside his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Camilla Carpenter of Grass Lake and another daughter living at Los Angeles, Cal. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon from the home of William McClumpha, Rev. B. F. Farber conducting services.

There were two fire alarms last Saturday afternoon. The first was caused by a fire discovered on the roof of Lewis' mill, believed to have caught from a spark from a passing locomotive. It was extinguished with nominal damage. The second alarm was caused by the burning of a couple of sheds in the rear of Arthur Burden's house. It is not known how the fire started. The fire department responded promptly and in a few moments had the fire under control, which had also threatened the house. The boys did quick work.

They will also tell us something of Henry W. Blair. Let us encourage them by our attendance, even if it may be housecleaning time.

OBITUARY

One of the oldest residents of Michigan has just passed away at the age of 87. Mrs. Mary Catherine Henry, mother of Will Henry of Plymouth died at the home of her son on Monday, April 29th.

She was born in Germany June 22, 1825, and came to Detroit in 1835, when she was 10 years old. She married at Shulz Corners, near Plymouth, and has lived in this district since her arrival in this country—77 years. Eight children survive her—four sons and four daughters—Mrs. Annie Hammond and Mrs. Mary Paul, both of Detroit; Mrs. Amelia Bradal of Sandusky and Mrs. Barbara Hosack of Chicago; Will Henry of Plymouth, Frederick and Adam Henry, Detroit and George Henry of Sandusky. Two of her children are dead—John and Catherine.

The funeral service was held at the home of Will Henry on Wednesday afternoon, May 1st, by Rev. B. F. Farber, and the body was interred in Riverside cemetery.

We regret to record the passing away of a beautiful life, that of Mrs. Anna Magdalene Delker, who died at her residence on Sunday morning, April 29th.

Mrs. Delker was respected and much beloved by all who were fortunate enough to know her. Although an invalid at the last, she was always resigned and happy, never a murmur or complaint was heard to pass her lips, and when the end came as it did on Sunday morning last, it was just the passing away into one long sleep.

Mrs. Delker, who was over eighty-two years of age, was born in Germany in 1829, and came to this country sixty years ago. Some four or five years ago, she met with an accident which left her an invalid, especially so during the past two years. She leaves four sons and one daughter.

The funeral was held on Tuesday morning, April 30th, the Rev. E. E. Caster conducting the service, after which the body was taken by train to Blissfield, there to be laid by the side of her husband and others in the family vault. And so has passed upward the Soul of a trusting, faithful Christian.

SERIAL STORY

THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN

By MARIE VAN VORST
Illustrations by M. G. KEITNER

(Copyright, 1914, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blair town, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The young man is an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town, and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him. He learns that Prince Pontotowsky is a tutor and escort to Letty. Lord Galorey and a friend named Ruggles determine to protect the westerner from Lily and other fortune hunters. Young Blair goes to see Lily; he can talk of nothing but Letty and this angers the Duchess. The westerner finds Letty ill from hard work, but she recovers and Ruggles and Dan invite her to supper. She asks Dan to build a home for disappointed theatrical people. Dan visits Lily, for the time forgetting Letty, and later announces his engagement to the duchess. Letty refuses to sing for an entertainment given by Lily. Galorey tells Dan that all Lily cares for is his money, and it is disclosed that he and the duchess have been mutually in love for years. Letty sings at an aristocratic function. Dan escorting her home. Dan confronts Galorey and Lily together. Later he informs Letty that his engagement with Lily is broken, asks the singer to marry him, and they become engaged. Ruggles thinks the westerner should not marry a public singer, and endeavors to induce Letty to give him up. She runs away, fearing she is not good enough for Dan, and Ruggles makes the latter believe she has abandoned his love. Finally Dan finds Letty in Paris.

"Are you alone?" he persisted. "I have got to know."
"Higgins is with me."
"Oh, God," he cried wildly, "how can you joke with me? Don't you understand you're breaking my heart?"
But she did not dare to be kind to him, knowing it would unnerve her for the part she had promised to play.
He sat gripping his hands tightly together, his lips white. "When I leave you now," he said brokenly, "I am going to find that devil of a Hungarian and do him up. Then I am going to tackle Ruggles."
"Why, what's poor Mr. Ruggles got to do with it?"
Dan cried scornfully: "For God's sake, don't keep this up! You know the rot he told you? I made him confess. He has had this mania all along about money being a handicap; he was bent on trying this game with some girl to see how it worked." He continued more passionately. "I don't care a rap what you marry me for, Letty, or what you have done or been. I think you're perfect and I'll make you the happiest woman in the world."
She said: "Hush, hush. Listen, dear; listen, little boy. I am awfully sorry, but it won't do. I never thought it would. You'll get over it all right, though you don't, you can't believe me now. I can't be poor, you know; I really couldn't be poor."
He interrupted roughly: "Who says you'll be? What are you talking about? Why, I'll cover you with jewels, sweetheart, if I have to rip the earth open to get them out."
She understood that Dan believed Ruggles' story to have been a rock-and-bull one.
"You talk as though you could buy me, Dan. Wait, listen." She put him back from her. "Now, if you won't be quiet, I'm going to stop my car."
He repeated: "Tell me, are you alone in Paris? Tell me. For three days I have wandered and searched for you everywhere; I have hardly eaten a thing. I don't believe I have slept a wink." And he told her of his weary search.
She listened to him, part of the time her white-gloved hand giving itself up to the boy; part of the time both hands folded together and away from him, her arms crossed on her breast, her small shoes of coral kid tapping the floor of the car. Thus they rolled leisurely along the road by the Bois.
"Are you alone in Paris, Letty?"
And she said: "Oh, what a bore you are! You're the most obstinate creature. Well, I am alone, but that has nothing to do with you."
A glorious light broke over his face; his relief was tremendous.
"Oh, thank God!" he breathed.
"Pontotowsky"—and she said his name with difficulty—"is coming tonight from Carlsbad."
The boy threw back his bright head and laughed wildly.
"Curse him! The very name makes me want to commit a crime! He will go over my body to you. You hear me, Letty. I mean what I say."
People had already remarked them as they passed. The actress was too well known to pass unobserved, but she was indifferent to their curiosity as to the existence of anyone but this excited boy.

Blair, who had not opened a paper since he came to Paris, did not know that Letty Lane's flight from London had created a scandal in the theatrical world, that her manager was suing her, and that to be seen with her driving in the Bois was a conspicuous thing indeed. She thought of it, however.
"I am going to tell the man to drive you to the gate on the other side of the park where it's quieter, we won't be stared at, and I want you to leave me and let me go to the Meurice alone. You must, Dan, you must let me go to the hotel alone."
He laughed again in the same strained fashion and forced her hand to remain in his.
"Look here. You don't suppose I am going to let you go like this, now that I have seen you again. You don't suppose I am going to give you up to that infamous scoundrel? You have got to marry me."
Bringing all her strength of character to bear, she exclaimed: "I expect you think you are the only person who has asked me to marry him, Dan. I am going to marry Prince Pontotowsky. He is perfectly crazy about me."
Until that moment she had not made him think that she was indifferent to him, and the idea that such a thing was possible, was too much for his overstrained heart to bear. Dan cried her name in a voice whose appeal was like a hurt creature's, and as the hurt creature in its suffering sometimes springs upon its torturer, he flung his arms around her as she sat in the motor, held her and kissed her, then set her free, and as the motor flew along, tore open the door to spring out or to throw himself out, but clinging to him she prevented his mad act. She stopped the car along the edge of the quiet, wooded allee. Blair saw that he had terrified her. She covered her beating heart with her hands and gasped at him that he was "crazy, crazy," and perhaps a little late his dignity and self-possession returned.
"I am mad," he acknowledged more calmly, "and I am sorry that I frightened you. But you drive me mad."
Without further word he got out and left her agitated, leaning toward him, and Blair, less pale and thoroughly the man, lifted his hat to her and, with unusual grace, bowed good-night and good-by. Then, rumbling as he had come, he walked off down through the allee, his gray figure in his gray clothes disappearing through the vista of meeting trees.
For a moment she stared after him, her eyes fastened on the tall, slender, beautiful young man. Blair's fire and ardor, his fresh youthfulness, his protection and his chivalry, his ardent devotion, touched her profoundly. Tears fell, and one splashed on her white glove. Was he really going to ruin his life? The old ballad, "The Earl of Moray," ran through her head:
"And long may his lady look from the castle wall."
Dan had neither title nor, according to Ruggles, had he any money, and she could marry the prince; but Dan, as he walked so fast away, miserably snapping at his heels as he went, stamping through the woods, seemed glorious to Letty Lane and the only one she wanted in the world. What if anything should happen to him really? What if he should really start out to do the town according to the fashion of his Anglo-Saxon brothers, but more desperately still? She took a card from the case in the corner of the car, scribbled a few words, told the man to drive around the curve and meet the outlet of the path by which Dan had gone. When she saw him within reaching distance she sent the chauffeur across the woods to give Mr. Blair her scribbled word and consoled herself with the belief that Dan wouldn't go to the dogs or throw himself in the river until he had seen her again.

CHAPTER XXVII.

At Maxim's.
At the Meurice, Miss Lane gave strict orders to admit only Mr. Blair to her apartments. She described him. No sooner had she drunk her cup of tea, which Higgins gave her, than she began to expect Dan.

He didn't come.
Her dinner, without much appetite, she ate alone in her salon; saw a doctor and made him prescribe something for the cough that racked her chest; looked out to the warm, bright gardens of the Tuilleries fading into the pallid loveliness of sunset, indifferent to everything in the world—except Dan Blair. She believed she would soon be indifferent to him, too; then everything would be done with. Now she wondered had he really gone—had he done what he threatened? Why didn't he come? At twelve o'clock that night, as she lay among the cushions of her sofa, dozing, the door of her parlor was pushed in. She sprang up with a cry of delight; but when Pontotowsky came up to her she exclaimed: "Oh, you!" And the languor and boredom with which she said his name made the prince laugh shortly.
"Yes, I. Who did you think it was?" Cynically and rather cruelly he looked down at Letty Lane and admired the picture she made; small, exquisite, her blond head against the dark velvet of the lounge, her gray eyes intensified by the fatigue under them.
"Just got in from Carlsbad; came directly here. How-de-do? You look, you know—" he scrutinized her through his single eye-glass—"most frightfully seedy."
"Oh, I'm all right." She left the sofa, for she wanted to prevent his nearer approach. "Have you had any supper? I'll call Higgins."
"No, no, sit down, please, will you? I want to know why you sent to Carlsbad for me? Have you come to your senses?"
He was as mad about the beautiful creature as a man of his temperament could be. Exhausted by excess and bored with life, she charmed and amused him, and in order to have her with him always, to be master of her caprices, he was willing to make any sacrifice.
"Have you sent off that imbecile boy?" And at her look he stopped and shrugged. "You need a rest, my child" he murmured practically, "you're neurasthenic and very ill. I've wired to have the yacht at Cherbourg—it'll reach there by noon tomorrow."

She was standing listlessly by the table. A mass of letters sent by special messenger from London after her, telegrams and cards lay there in a pile. Looking down at the lot, she murmured: "All right, I don't care."
He concealed his triumph, but before the look had faded from his face she saw it and exclaimed sharply:
"Don't be crazy about it, you know. You'll have to pay high for me; you know what I mean."
He answered gallantly: "My dear child, I've told you that you would be the most charming princess in Hungary."
Once more she accepted indifferently: "All right, all right, I don't care tuppence—not tuppence"—and she snapped her fingers; "but I like to see you pay, Frederigo. Take me to Maxim's."
He demurred, saying she was far too ill, but she turned from him to call Higgins, determined to go if she had to go alone, and said to him violently: "Don't think I'll make your life easy for you, Frederigo. I'll make it wretched; as wretched—" and she held out her fragile arms, and the sleeves fell back, leaving them bare—"as wretched as I am myself."
But she was lovely, and he said harshly: "Get yourself dressed. I'll go change and meet you at the lift."
Ancient Roman Long Branch.
The sea coast of Laurentum may have been in favor with the fashionable and the wealthy for a brief space of time under Augustus and his immediate successors, but was given up quite soon to parvenues and merchants and retired officers, and the same set of noisy people who haunt at the present day the popular watering places of the world. To make the analogy more striking, an inscription has been found at La Capocotta singling the praises of a wealthy Jew, and revealing the fact that a synagogue had been built at Ostia for the use of the Semite "villagers" on the neighborhood coast.

NEWS OF MICHIGAN

Ann Arbor.—Two coaches of a south-bound Ann Arbor train left the rails near this city and tore up the roadbed for several hundred feet. No persons were injured. The locomotive and baggage car did not leave the rails. Spreading rails caused the wreck. Passengers were transferred to a train sent up from Toledo.

Port Huron.—After a deliberation of just three hours and 40 minutes, George Esson, twenty-year-old Petrolia, Ont., youth, was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury here for the death of Thomas H. Major, whose body was found on the stairway of the First Baptist church in this city on the night of February 28 last. The courtroom was crowded at the time of the rendering of the verdict, both friends of the prisoner and others out of curiosity having waited for hours to be on hand.

Jackson.—Three months' imprisonment in the county jail was the sentence imposed by Judge Parkinson on Mrs. Hannah Rolan, convicted several weeks ago of a charge of cruelty to her little stepdaughter, Rosalie, deceased. Not in many years has public sentiment been so aroused as it was in the case against Mrs. Rolan. During the trial of the case the courtroom was packed with spectators and feeling ran high against the woman.

Kalamazoo.—Fifty striking corset workers not only picketed the plant of the Kalamazoo Corset Company in just the way that the court had specified that they should not do it, but one of the superintendents was followed into a hotel by 25 or 30 girls, who hooted and hissed him after he had entered the dining room. Considerable commotion was caused when the girls were forced to leave the hotel.

Howard City.—The Methodist church at Morley was totally consumed by fire shortly after a fire had been started in the basement. A defective flue caused the loss. The building was a frame one in very good state of preservation and was erected about thirty-five years ago. The seats and carpets were saved. The village has little fire protection and the building went like tinder inside of half hour, and many who expected to go to the house for worship only gathered to console with one another over the ashes of the structure. Rev. F. J. Feather had but recently raised $250 by popular subscription for redecorating the church, but luckily the work had not yet commenced. This was the only Protestant church in the village. Rev. Mr. Feather, who is a hustler and popular, will very likely immediately begin a campaign to replace the church with a new one. The loss was about $2,500; insured for $1,200.

Port Austin.—A bad fire fanned by a strong southwest wind burned L. R. Wallace's house and barn, causing a loss of nearly $6,000; insurance $2,000. Burning shingles were carried several blocks and the Campbell building, used as a lumber warehouse, with contents, was destroyed, also George Mayes' house and furniture. The loss on the Campbell building and contents is $2,500, covered by insurance. The loss of the Mayes house and furniture is $700, partly insured. The village has no fire protection and but for the work of a volunteer brigade several more houses would have been destroyed.

Grand Rapids.—His body erect against a post, with a revolver in one hand and a partly consumed bottle of aconite in the other, Charles House, aged fifty-six, a prominent farmer of Sparta township, was found dead in his barn. He had swallowed the poison, making death doubly sure. He had brooded over family matters. He held an auction and sold out. A widow and two children survive.

Escanaba.—Raymond Moger, convicted of burglary at the present term of the circuit court and remanded for sentence, made his escape from the county jail by sawing two steel bars and removing the same. Arthur Lindquist, charged with murder, and occupying the same cell, could not effect his escape, being unable to get through the opening. Moger is still at large and no tangible clue as to his whereabouts has been found.

Benton Harbor.—Bert Lavelle, lover of Beattie Mills, who drank carbolic acid, dying a few hours later, was released from custody by order of the prosecutor. Lavelle's dismissal followed a thorough searching of the facts surrounding the girl's suicide. They could find nothing on which to base a criminal charge against Lavelle. Lavelle hails from the west and will return there.

Cadillac.—Alfred and Irene Bryant, colored, convicted of larceny, were sentenced for two and a half to five years at Jackson and Detroit respectively. Ed. Platz was sent to Jackson for the same period. Charles Wilkins went to Ionia for two to five years. The latter two confessed to burglary.

Grand Rapids.—A state concatenation of the Hoo-Hooos was held here. A class of 15 was initiated. Speakers were here from all over Michigan. The event closed with a banquet.

Getting Americanized.

It does not take long for America's future citizens to adopt American styles. He had just landed at the Battery, and was toiling up Broadway with his big canvas-covered trunk upon his back. A bright orange tie set off his crisp black locks, and a long, heavy ulster flapped at his heels. But, crowning glory of all—perched on his head, and toyed with by the biting winds that swept in from the sea, was a brand-new American straw hat—a fitting crown for a citizen in a country where every man is a king.

Was Sure He Knew It.
The physiology class in a country school was studying about the backbone.
Teacher—What are the pieces of cartilage for between the vertebrae? A little boy raised his hand.
"Well, Eddie, you may tell us," the teacher said.
"To take the jars off the jumps," answered the triumphant Eddie.—Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.
"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more."
(Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

They Draw Interest.
"A kiss," he said after just having had one, "is the most precious thing, and yet women give them away."
"You are mistaken," she said. "We never give them away, we merely invest them."—Fun.

ROUGE REX FINE SHOES

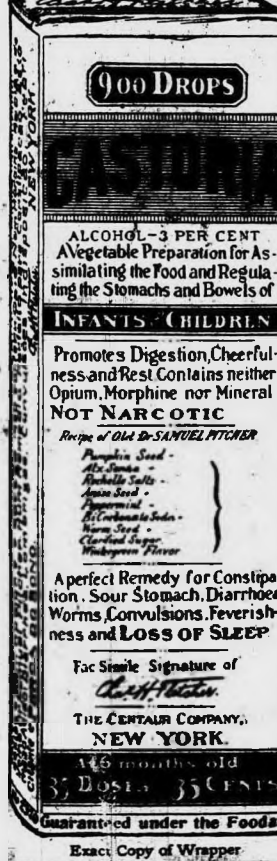

There is a great difference in fine shoes. A shoe may be cut over the latest pattern, be made over the newest last, have a swell appearance, and at the same time be a decidedly unsatisfactory shoe, for the reason that it is made entirely for show. When you buy fine shoes, why not buy shoes that are just as good as they look, that will not lose their shape and attractiveness after the first few wearings, but will be fine shoes just as long as they are shoes? Ask for Rouge Rex Shoes, and you will get your money's worth, and you are certainly entitled to that. Made from Wolverine Leather well put together. Write for the name of the nearest dealer.

PAPER BAG COOKING

WONDER-WORKING SYSTEM PERFECTED BY M. SOYER, WORLD'S GREATEST LIVING CHEF

COOKING CHILDREN'S GOODIES.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.
Lives there a child with appetite so dead that his mouth never waters when the word "goodies" is mentioned? Goodies of all sorts are the especial gastronomic delight of all children, and let me add that goodies of all sorts can be made more digestible and more delicious by being cooked in paper bags.

It was an acute social observer who wrote: "Housekeepers instinctively add grease and sweetening when cooking for company." The same rule ought to prevail in cooking for children. Food cannot be too rich for young, thriving creatures, provided it is properly proportioned. Perfect pound cake is a meal in itself, gingerbread as perfect, but little less satisfying, while as for tea cakes of the right sort, crisp, sugary, melting, an active healthy child may eat all it chooses of them, and be better for the eating.

Make all these not merely good, but attractive to the eye. Make also sponge cake, raisin cake and many manners of fancy tarts. Make them individual—in that will lie the supreme charm.

Begin by cutting a big bag lengthwise into strips two inches wide. Grease each strip half an inch from one edge, and cut blunt notches into the crease, three-quarters of an inch apart. From another bag, split open, cut rounds or ovals, four to five inches across. Fasten the notched strips to these with small clips, letting the notches stand outside and clipping the ends where they come together. Thus you have a flat-bottomed individual mould, to be filled, after buttering, with anything you like. Filled, the moulds are slid inside a large lightly greased bag, the bag set on a trivet, and after sealing, baked in the oven.

Let the cakes cool in the moulds, then tear away the paper and frost them or decorate them with candy or nuts.

Here is Mammy's Pound Cake—and better never went in anybody's mouth. Take ten eggs, a pound of flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls of cream tartar and one of soda, a pound of sifted sugar, three-quarters of a pound of best butter, a wineglass of brandy or sherry, a tablespoonful lemon extract. Cream the butter very light with half the sugar, add the other half to the yolks of the eggs after beating them foamy light, and then beat again. Put in the butter and sugar, mix well, add the liquor next, then half the flour, putting in a cupful at a time. Fold in next part of the egg whites, which should be beaten so stiff that they will stick to the inverted dish. Add the rest of the flour, then the last of the egg-white. Stir in the lemon extract last of all. Pour into thickly buttered bags or very thin tin moulds thickly buttered. Seal the loaded bags and set on a trivet in the oven. Put moulds inside greased bags, seal and put on the grid shelf. Have the oven hot enough to turn white paper yellow in five minutes. If the paper scorches it is too hot—cool it by setting a very shallow pan of cold water upon the floor just before putting in the cake. Take out the pan after a few minutes, of course, first turning down the gas flame, or pushing in the dampers to reduce heat. Cook at moderate heat until done through. It will take an hour to an hour and a half, according to the thickness of the cakes. Midway the baking they should be shifted—those from the grid shelf set low on the broiler, those from the broiler put high, so that they will cook evenly. Make holes in the bag tops and test the cakes before taking them up by thrusting in a clean straw or thin knife blade. If the thing thrust in comes out with no stickiness clinging to it, the cake is done. Bag cooking prevents crusting over, and therefore facilitates rising. It also saves from burning and avoids the risk of jarring by too much opening of the oven door. Baking powder can be used in place of soda and cream of tartar, but to my thinking the old way is the best.

Raisin cake is made almost the same as pound cake, but takes a little longer and slower baking.

Every household almost has its own favorite gingerbread and tea-cake. Make them in your own way, but remember to make them festive. You can do this easily by cutting them out in all manner of fancy shapes besides those already suggested, from frosting them in many colors—white, pink, green, yellow and brown, and sprinkling them before the frosting hardens, with tiny colored candies, or chopped nuts, or candied peel, or citron very finely shredded.

Pound cake and raisin cake baked in paper bags can be cut in cubes, rounds, fingers, or any shape desired, frosted all over, and be more than ornamental. A centerpiece for a child's party can be built in the shape of a log cabin, using alternately long strips frosted white and other strips of chocolate brown. Or it may be white and pink, or all white, with a roof of frosting snow and candy-icicles hanging along the eaves. Vegetable coloring, which is cheap and perfectly wholesome, can be bought from any first class grocer.

NOUBISHING BEEF DISHES.

I wonder how many careful housemothers know stuffed roast beef? To make it get two flank steaks of generous size, sew them together with clean strong cotton and stuff bag thus formed in any way you like. Tie up the steaks. Butter them well over the outside. Slip into a well buttered paper bag plenty large enough to hold them, add a tablespoonful of water, cook in a hot oven three minutes, then turn off the heat more than half and cook for forty minutes more. Very heavy steaks may take longer, and light ones a shorter time. Sliced onions laid around the steak will flavor the meat and the gravy. This dish can be left standing in the bag quite a while after cooking. Heating it up makes it as good as ever.

Take four pounds of round beef—the best cut. Rub over liberally with butter or clarified drippings, but do not salt, and put into a bag, which has been thickly buttered, along with half a can of tomatoes or three large fresh ones, peeled and chopped, one minced onion, one small red pepper, three cloves and six grains of allspice. Score the beef lightly on top so as to press the spices into it. Cover it with the tomatoes, onion, etc., and lay on them a lump of butter or dripping rolled in sifted flour. Add a tablespoonful of vinegar and water mixed. Seal bag tight, and cook very slowly for three hours. A gas jet turned half down gives about the right heat. Take from the bag, pour out the gravy—in a saucepan if you want it thickened with browned flour; otherwise, in the boat. The meat will be very tender and delicious.

Yorkshire pudding does not absolutely demand cooking underneath a roast. To go with this round roast, you can make it thus. Beat two eggs separately very light, then add to them alternately a cup of sweet milk and two cups of flour, sifted with half a teaspoonful salt, and a teaspoonful baking powder. Mix smoothly, pour into a very well greased bag, seal, allowing room for rising, lay flat on a wire mat and cook for twenty-five minutes in a fairly hot oven.

Meat roll is a good end for cold lean roast beef. Mince or grind it fine, season with salt, pepper, tiny bits of butter, a little lemon juice and a pinch of powdered herbs. Roll out puff paste to less than a quarter inch thickness. Make it in long strips. Spread the meat thinly upon them, roll up, pinch the ends together tight, put in a buttered bag with a little stock or water or left over gravy, also a small lump of butter, seal and cook till the pastry is brown—the time depending somewhat on the size and number of the rolls.

A Paper Bag Dinner

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Duckling with Turnips: Thoroughly butter a paper bag, place the duckling inside, cut a few slices of carrot and turnip into fancy shapes, cut up a few blanched spring onions, and add a bouquet garni. Pour in three tablespoonfuls of tomato sauce and a wineglassful of Madeira. Season with salt and pepper according to taste. Cook for forty-five to fifty-five minutes, according to the size of the bird.

Chicken à la Meise: Take a fowl trussed as for boiling, and rub it well over with a split onion. Place it in a well-greased bag and add to it a gill of good stock. Add also a sprig of parsley, a bay leaf, a sprig of sweet herbs, and, if obtainable, two or three spring onions, all tied together. Take four ounces of well-cooked rice and add it to the fowl. Place the bag on the broiler, simmer very slowly in a moderate oven until the fowl is cooked, then dish up the fowl on a hot dish, remove the herbs and empty the rice into a fresh bag. Add to it a tablespoonful of stock, a gill of cream, a little ground lemon peel, a dust of nutmeg, and pepper and salt to taste. Mix thoroughly, add the well-beaten yolk of an egg, make hot again on the broiler and serve at once. Turkey and Suet of veal are both excellent cooked after this recipe.

Lima Beans: Take a quart of Lima beans, add two ounces of butter, four ounces of diced ham, a little sugar and salt, a teaspoonful of flour and sweet herbs to taste. Put in a greased bag with half a pint of water and cook for sixty minutes in a moderate oven.

Spinach: Pick over and thoroughly wash two pounds of spinach, leave the vegetable as wet as you can, and put it in a bag. Add a pinch of sugar and a little salt. Seal the bag and cook for thirty-five minutes. Then stand the broiler bearing the bag over a large plate, and prick the bottom of the bag in such a way as to allow all the water to run out.

Fruit Salad: Take four peeled and thinly sliced bananas, half a pound of well washed and dried Hamburg grapes, ditto strawberries, an apple, and two large oranges. Pinch each grape slightly. Hull the strawberries, peel and slice the apple and oranges very thinly. Mix all well together in a deep bowl. Pour over a small bottle of raspberry syrup and a tablespoonful of brandy. Mix well. Leave on ice till needed. (Copyright, 1911, by the Sturges & Walton Company.)

It Was To Be

Rosette laughed softly. "It's of no use, Aunt Louise. I'm going on the next boat. Jim has hoisted the flag and it will be here in ten minutes."

"Do be careful about missing the train," cautioned Mrs. Oxley. "I shall worry if you are out late; remember your fallings."

The young woman pouted. "I never can go anywhere without a peck of advice, just as though I was an infant. You haven't said what you wanted, Aunt Louise."

"What's the use," retorted Mrs. Pierce; "it's no more nor less than a can of that potted chicken at Lovell's. What do you say to that, young lady?" "Hm-hm!" murmured Rosette faintly. "I'll think about it, auntie. Good-bye."

As the boat splashed around the point Rosette looked dismally at the little red station planted upon the bare, sandy knoll like a danger signal. "It will be perfectly horrid in the city—hot and stupid—but Aunt Louise must be taught a lesson. I won't have her making any matches for me. Cassius Lanford, indeed!"

It lacked an hour of luncheon time when Rosette sank exhausted on the nearest seat in madam's cool parlors. "How will I ever get through this afternoon?" she inwardly groaned. "I've a great mind to take the next train back, but then I'd be sure to see that—that creature! And if I should stop at any of the resorts the folks would find it out. No, I'll stay until the 5:10 if I—melt."

Rosette looked out of the window listlessly. Across the way two huge gray lions sunned themselves on either side of a wide-pillared portico. "There," Rosette started with renewed energy. "I'll go over to the gallery right after lunch and look at those etchings Miss Carew was speaking of yesterday."

A tall, fine built young fellow was bending interestedly over a collection. "He must be an artist," thought Rosette covertly eyeing the strong, intellectual face.

Suddenly, the stranger looked at his watch and hurried away. Rosette's interest began to wane; she wandered through the rooms absent-mindedly. When a clock struck 5 she started in astonishment; the afternoon had slipped away without her realizing it.

A dull, rayless sky hung gloomily above the waters of the lake as a single passenger alighted at the little red station.

Rosette peered beneath the awning. "Capt. Duggald!"

"Ay, ay," responded a bluff, deep-voiced voice from the depths of the shadows, and the owner of the Water Sprite appeared—a thick-set personage with grizzled hair and beard and the rolling gait of a sailor.

"Will you take me across, captain?" Rosette put the question anxiously.

"Couldn't think of it, ma'am—jest one passenger. I'm lookin' for a ticklish night, but ye can't tell. Ef it was ol' Huron, now, I'd know just what to depend on; ef the signs was fer foul, 'y' fowl it 'ud be, but this 'ere's the most spiteful, capreeshus tealupful!"

"But I must get over some way!" Rosette started as though she had serious intentions of wading the distance.

"Ef it ain't that Oxley girl! 'W'y I didn't know ye! An' your ma's worryin' most likely. Well, now, sez'n it's you mebbe I might make it."

A grinding shock sent Rosette from her seat to the bottom of the boat with a heavy jar. There were muttered exclamations from Capt. Duggald, as suddenly arrested in its course, the boat with one brief fluttering like a disabled bird, gave a sidewise lurch and settled helplessly upon some obstruction underneath—the evident cause of the catastrophe.

"Halloo! Halloo!" called a strong voice when within speaking distance. "What's the trouble?"

"Git her 'round 'other side," bawled the captain. "We're stuck on this confounded ol' stump."

Nearly drenched, Rosette was assisted into the rescuing boat and in a maze found herself facing her athlete, of the afternoon.

"I had just reached the hotel when I heard your signal!" he explained.

"W'y, if it ain't Mr. Lanford," exclaimed the old man with enthusiasm. "We'd probably bin playing with the fishes 'bout this time ef ye hadn't steered us just as ye did. Look there!" A flapping awning and a smokestack was all that was left of the once vigorous Water Sprite.

Rosette pushed back the muslin draperies of her window and bolstered her curly head upon a round, white arm. Through a breach in the darkness above a stream of light trailed across the lake and turned to silver the tossing whitecaps in its path. For one instant its rays fell upon a launch which shot across the shining track and then was lost in the darkness beyond.

"It was to be," murmured Rosette with conviction, as she watched a vagrant moonbeam that rested for one brief moment upon the snowy pillow, and recalled Cassius Lanford's look as he bade her good-night. "Dear Aunt Louise—the sound of steps below brought a sudden recollection—she shall have that potted chicken tomorrow if I have to go after it myself."

LIKE THE WOLF AND LAMB

Inoffensive Creatures Most Unjustly Charged With Sudden Attack of Bloodthirstiness.

A man who was caught in the act of skinning a neighbor's sheep, covered his embarrassment by declaring that no sheep could bite him and live. The logic of this is equaled by that of the Yankee soldier who once had a narrow escape from an enraged gander. The men of a certain Maine regiment, which was in the enemy's country in 1862, considered the order "no foraging" an additional and uncalled-for hardship. One afternoon about dusk, a soldier was seen "beating a rapid retreat from the rear of a farmhouse near by, closely pursued by a gander with wings outspread, whose feet seemed scarcely to touch the ground, and from whose beak issued a succession of angry screams. The fugitive was not reassured by the cries of the gander's owner. "Hold on, man, hold on! He won't hurt you!" "Call off your gander! Call him off!" shouted the fleeing soldier. "Neither man nor gander stopped until inside the campfires, when the soldier's friends relieved him of his fierce pursuer with the aid of the butt of a musket. "Did that gander think he could chase me like that and live!" the soldier exclaimed, as he surveyed the outstretched bird; but he said nothing of the pated hog, who codine attacked, which might have thrown light on the unfortunate gander's strange actions.

How Old Was He?

In a country school the boys of a certain grade were devoted to their teacher, a young lady of many charms. One little fellow of rather uncertain age was constantly proving his devotion by little acts of kindness, which did not escape the notice of the teacher. Coming up to him one day she put an arm about his shoulders and said: "I believe I will kiss you for being so good to me, but how old are you?"

"Oh, that's all right," he said, "I am old enough to enjoy it."—Mack's National Monthly.

The Ruling Passion.

Little Willie was an embryo electrician. Anything relating to his favorite study possessed absorbing interest for him. One day his mother appeared in a new gray gown, the jacket of which was trimmed in flat black buttons showing an outer circle of the light dress material. Willie studied the gown critically for a moment, then the light of strong approval dawned in his eyes.

"Oh, mamma," he cried, "what a pretty new dress! It's all trimmed in push buttons."—Judge.

Before Publication.

"Patsy, bring me a paper when you come to work in the morning," a woman who lived at the edge of a village told her man of all work when he went home at night. "Now, don't forget it," she added.

"No, ma'am," said Patsy. "I won't. I might forget it if I left it until morning, so I'll get it tonight."

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alternative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Dore, of New Brooklyn, N. Y. to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "I had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds."

REO THE FIFTH,

The car which is so near to finality in Automobile designing that it is called
MY FAREWELL CAR by R. E. OLDS, Designer,

Is here shown and described in detail. The PRICE we give you, the result of your decision we leave to YOU.

DETAILS OF REO THE FIFTH.

The various body models of REO THE FIFTH are built on a single chassis. So the following details apply to all alike. Please compare these details with those of other cars, regardless of the price. Judge for yourself if any machine, at any price, makes any part better than WE do. We claim that we give you here—and at $1055—the best construction that any price can buy.

MOTOR—The engine in the Reo is our chiefest advantage. The cylinders and pistons are made of iron of the very choicest grain. Cylinders are cast in pairs, as per the latest practice. Thus lightness is combined with perfect circulation. The cylinders have 4-in. bore and 4½-in. stroke. Connecting rods are easily adjusted through hand-holes in the crank-case. The main adjustments are made on the outside, without opening or dismantling the motor. The valves are large and their mechanism exceedingly quiet.

TRANSMISSION—In Reo the transmission is of selective type, three speeds forward and reverse. Our gears are tested in a crushing machine capable of fifty tons pressure. The usual test is a hammer test, unscientific and inexact. In this crushing machine we learn exactly what a gear will stand and nothing is more important to the life of a car than unbreakable, unwearable gears.

Reo the Fifth Five Passenger Touring Car
PRICE $1,055

Mohair Top with full Side Curtains, Mohair Slip Cover, Windshield, Ventilator, Speedometer and Gas Tank.

DRIVE SHAFT—This shaft is of nickel steel, hardened and heat treated. Timken Roller bearings are used on both ends. This is the very highest class of construction. The drive shaft is connected with the clutch by a universal joint—a true universal of the pin and block type, which takes care of any misalignment. This joint is packed in lubricant fed to it from the transmission case.

THE CLUTCH—In Reo the Fifth the clutch is multiple disc, with alternate plates of bronze and steel.

REAR AXLE—The diameter of the rear axle has been enlarged and the axle shafts are built of nickel steel. The axle is of semi-floating type. Timken rollers are used on all bearings except the two bearings next to the wheels, where Hyatt High Duty roller bearings are used. There is no higher form of construction known than is found in these rear axles.

FRONT AXLE—I-beam drop forged, with four Timken roller bearings, two in each hub.

BRAKES—The brakes in this car have been newly designed after years of experience with all sorts of shortcomings. They are of the Double-Acting Wrapping type. Either set of brakes is applied by a very slight pressure on one of the foot pedals. The brakes are easily adjusted and they maintain their adjustment over long mileage and severe use. Both sets of brakes are operated by foot levers. There are no side levers on this new car. A slight pressure on one foot lever throws out the clutch. You can lock the pedal there for coasting. A little more pressure on the same pedal puts on the service brake. A pedal at the right operates the emergency brake. Either or both brakes can be operated without taking the hand from the wheel and both can be locked in position.

Reo the Fifth Four Passenger Demi-Tonneau Roadster
Tonneau is Detachable
PRICE $1,055

CARBURETOR—The carburetor has dash adjustment; it is doubly heated by hot air and hot water. It has been specially adapted to the present grades of gasoline.

IGNITION—Double ignition, dry battery and magneto.

RIMS—Reo the Fifth being an up-to-date car, is fitted with demountable or quick detachable rims. The wheels are 34 inches. The tires are 34x3½ inches. In comparing with other cars note this generous tire equipment. This light weight car is very easy on tires. A smaller equipment would serve, and it does serve, on many rival cars. With this light weight car one's tire bills are very low.

SPRINGS—The front springs are semi-elliptic and the rear springs three-quarter elliptic.

STEERING—The steering gear is simple and strong. Any lost motion by wear can be taken up by one adjustment.

THE FINISH, etc.—The body design will speak for itself. It is one of the finest types of straight-line fore-door bodies found on any car this year. The body finish is black. The wheels are gray. Seventeen coats are employed in the body finish. The car is upholstered in genuine leather, not imitation. The upholstering of the seats is very deep and comfortable, making a very luxurious car. The cushions are all hair filled. The gas lamps and side lamps are enameled in black, with nickel trimming. High-priced cars boast of their stunning design, their luxurious upholstering and their beautiful finish. These boasts are true and should be true. But here is a car which sells for $1055 and which offers in finish, design, upholstering and trimmings the best that any car can offer.

Driving a Reo Light Delivery Truck

Is easier than driving a horse. It requires less experience. Supply it with gasoline and oil and drive it—it will go! The motor is not built for speed. It is built for hard work and lots of it.

The Reo Light Delivery Truck is made to carry 1500 pounds. It can carry more. It has done so many times. But as to this feature ask me for testimonials from others not interested in the selling of motor trucks, but who have run them.
