STARK.

The Sherman family reunion was held at Bell Isle last Friday with about 35 present, the oldest of whom was Palmer Sherman of Farmington, who is 86 years old, and the youngest was Elizabeth Holcomb, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Holcomb, aged 1 1/2 years. The day was fine and every one had a good time.

John Mining is seen going over north of late. That is right, your head is level.

We are sorry to note the sad death of William Oliver, who was killed at Oak Tuesday afternoon. Our sympathy is with the family.

The little cottage just above Rough and Ready corners has been sold to George Fisher's son-in-law.

Mr. and Mrs. John Turner of Farmington have been spending the week with Geo. Kuhn's people at Stark.

Mrs. T. V. Shaw of Elm, Mrs. Marion Wight of Kansas and Miss Louva Millard visited at Chas. Millard's and Harmon Kingsley's this week.

Harmon Kingsley has been moving his barn, which adds greatly to the looks of his place, which in time will be a very pretty one.

The neighbors had a bee for Dan McKinney Wednesday to get in his hay. He is some better at this writing.

For summer diarrhoea in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, and a speedy cure is certain. For sale by all dealers.

LIVONIA CENTER.

The heat the past week has been something terrible and the shower Monday gave great relief to all.

Farmers are very busy at present with cultivating, haying, cutting wheat and rye. Help is out of sight or reach and men are as scarce as they were in war times.

The social at Chas. Wolf's drew out a large crowd Saturday evening and it was an ideal night for ice cream and judging from the amount sold everybody got their fill.

J. C. Chilson keeps on improving.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Leach were up to their old farm Sunday.

Will Pankow spent Sunday with his people here.

Sydney Sutton of Plymouth visited at Charley Wolf's Sunday.

Happiest Girl in Lincoln.

A Lincoln, Neb., girl writes, "I had been ailing for some time with chronic constipation and stomach trouble. I began taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and in three days I was able to be up and got better right along. I am the proudest girl in Lincoln to find such a good medicine." For sale by all dealers.

TONQUISH.

Rev. B. F. Farber will preach at Tonquish Sunday evening, July 21, at 7:30.

The Sunday-school will have an ice cream social at E. Harshberger's, known as the Pettingill place, Friday evening, July 27. Every one is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. John Proctor and D. W. Martin and family spent Sunday in Plymouth.

B. S. Harris died in Harper hospital, Detroit Monday evening. He was well known in this neighborhood.

Miss Maude Grace has been engaged to teach in district No. 3, Nankin, for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hough of Kansas City, Mo., visited at A. Warner's Wednesday.

PIKE'S PEAK.

Alma and Mildred Baehr visited friends in Detroit the fore part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Renaler of Owosso visited Mrs. Renaler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Innes, Sunday.

Miss Clara Markey of Detroit, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Markey, Sunday.

Wm. Oliver was instantly killed Tuesday. He was working on the good roads and was getting a load of gravel when a passenger train hit him.

A Big Head

Is of two kinds. The kind that comes from sick headache, torpid liver and biliousness, however, is curable. Does your head feel heavy at times with spots of blind staggers and ringing noises in the ears? These are symptoms of a diseased liver and a clogged state of the bowels. The remedy is Dr. Herriek's Sugar-Coated Pills. They are mild, easy to take and clean you out beautifully. Try them. Price 25 cts. Sold by Jones, the Druggist, and Boyer's Pharmacy.

CANTON.

Plans are being made for the "home coming" to be held at Cherry Hill Aug. 23rd.

Luella Truesdell is spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. F. G. Lewis.

Mrs. L. R. Wiles was in Wayne Monday.

Mrs. Ella and Mrs. Jennie Huston left Thursday for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Huston at Birmingham.

The severe electrical and wind storm last week did considerable damage in this vicinity. Oscar Stevens lost two calves and Floyd Lewis two cows.

Ada and Earl Griffin have been spending a few days in Blissfield.

Louie J. Dicks has returned to St. Louis, Mo., after spending two weeks with his parents and relatives in this vicinity. Mr. Dicks is a senior in the dental department of the St. Louis University.

The Cherry Hill base ball team will give a box social Friday evening, July 19th, at the home of Bert Gill.

Burt, Cobb and two sons of VanWert, Ohio, are spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Cole.

NEWBURG.

A large and attentive audience greeted Dr. Caster last Sabbath, showing their appreciation of his lecture on the holy land. He will continue his talks for three more Sundays. Every one ought to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing this talented man tell of his travels. Service at a quarter to ten sun time. Sunday-school immediately after.

The Sunday-school and L. A. S. have accepted the invitation to attend the picnic at Ferrisville July 31st.

All members of the W. R. C. are requested to be present at the meeting Saturday afternoon to hear the report of the delegate to the convention at Port Huron.

The Gleaners will hold their picnic Aug. 2. Further notice next week.

Miss Ethel Neeland of Ann Arbor visited friends in the neighborhood last week Thursday.

Mrs. Chas. Barnes of Lansing spent the week end with her aunt, Mrs. C. Pickett. Also took dinner at the LeVan home Saturday last.

Mrs. R. Barnes spent Monday in Detroit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Grow. She reports their little son as no better.

Mrs. Frank Beals and daughter, Bertha of Plymouth were the guests of Mrs. Chas. Ryder Friday last.

Miss Ruth Ross of Salem spent two days this week with her grandma, Mrs. E. Barnes.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ryder entertained Mr. and Mrs. James LeVan and Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Merrylees at dinner Sunday last.

Rev. Arthur Peebles of Rutland, Mass., made his aunt, Mrs. J. LeVan, a visit last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Ryder and daughter Gladys of Plymouth and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Woodring of Grand Rapids called at the Ryder homestead Sunday afternoon.

A Ulster county farmer made a savings bank of the summer kitchen stove during the winter and every spare one dollar or five dollar bill William got he stuffed into a tin box which he kept in the oven. When the hot weather finally came his wife concluded to start up the fire in this stove, with no suspicion of what might be in the oven. When she called her husband to breakfast and he discovered the hot stove he clawed the hot box out of the oven to find that his money was burned to a crisp.—Ed-

The Story of the Ox

Some of the most fascinating chapters in the book of science deal with the story of the way the various animals which inhabit the earth, each after its own kind, have come about through long ages of tentative development during a thousand generations. When the fossil remains of other beasts than those we know were first studied at the beginning of the last century, there were many searchings of heart among the pious of that day, and instead of looking upon them as the most wonderful entries in nature's ledger, some good people regarded them as the malicious inventions of the devil, intended to lead astray the over-curious.

In his book, "The Ox and Its Kinred" (Methuen), Mr. Lydekker tells us the story of our domestic cattle as it is revealed by the examination of the various species, living wild and in captivity, and by the fossil remains of their predecessors. Although there are a very large number of species belonging to the sub-order Artiodactyla (the Greek word artios, meaning equal, and dactylos, toe), which comprises the ox and the other ruminants (i. e., animals that have the power of regurgitating and remasticating their food), their history is not so well displayed by their fossil remains as that of the Perissodactyla, or odd-toed, hoofed animals, which have only the horse and some half-dozen other representatives.

Both families consist, of course, of hoofed animals; but the ox group differs widely from the horse and its relations through the special development of the stomach required by ruminants, instead of the simple and almost imperceptible divisions into cardiac and pyloric portions common to man and most other animals. The stomach of the ox has five chambers, two of which constitute the rumen, or paunch; in this the grass is first stored after it is cut by the incisors acting against the pad which takes their place in fashion of their modern brethren, save, perhaps, Mr. Arnesby Brown and some few others who achieve their greatest triumphs with these subjects. Though Mr. Arnesby Brown, be it noted, seems to prefer the latter portions of his models for portraiture.

From the point of view of the geologist the ox tribe are a modern group, and only date back to the early part of the Tertiary epoch. They are related to the antelope, and may own kinship with the gnus of Africa; but their direct ancestors are still unknown. The earliest representatives of the group are very similar to buffaloes, which constitute, in some respects, the most primitive of the living forms, and are those whose horns come nearest in shape to those of gnus.

The group is of old-world origin, and the bison were the only section which reached America. They traveled by way of Behring Strait, and at one time reached as far south as Texas and California, but never penetrated into South America. Seven species of American bison have been identified.

The extinct wild cattle of Europe and Western Asia are called aurochs (Bos taurus primigenius); they were represented in Algeria and Tunis by a local race (B. t. mauritanicus). A nearly-allied species is the great extinct ox (B. namadicus) of the superficial, or Pleistocene, gravels of the valley of the Narbada in Central India.

In Northern India, in the well-known Tertiary deposits of the Siwalik Hills and other low ranges at the foot of the Himalaya, remains of several kinds of cattle are met with, and as these Siwalik strata are at least early Pliocene, their fossil cattle are the oldest known members of the group. The largest and most remarkable of these Siwalik forms of typical oxen is the one for which Mr. Lydekker proposed the name B. acutifrons. From the aurochs and its relatives this Siwalik ox is distinguished by the sharp longitudinal ridge down the middle of the forehead. More or less perfect skulls of a very remarkable type of ox have been obtained from the alluvial upper Pliocene deposits of the Val d'Arno in Tuscany, and corresponding formations in Southern France. This extinct Etruscan ox (B. alatus or B. etruscus) represents a distinct subgenus known as Leptobos, and is characterized by the absence of horns in the cows, and by those of the bulls arising on each side of the skull from a point nearly midway between the occiput and the socket of the eye; the skull itself is also remarkable for its shortness.

Another interesting progenitor of the ox is the great extinct bison (B. priscus) of the caverns and gravels of England and the superficial formations of Europe. This animal differed from the living species in the enormous size of its horns.

The upper jaw. When the animal has taken in as much food as it requires it seeks a place of safety and settles down in the field. It commences to ruminate, and proceeds to masticate, that is to say, bring back the food it has taken in, and chew it up in the powerful mill formed by its cheek or paunch teeth. When the food has been re-swallowed it is taken into the reticulum, or honey-comb chamber, of the stomach, where it is acted upon by the digestive juices, and is then passed on through the pepticum, or mannyles, the abomasum and pyloric opening into the small intestine.

When a ruminant is engaged in chewing the food, after a mouthful of food has been masticated and swallowed, the animal, as may be seen if a herd of recumbent cows are watched shortly after their meal, will remain perfectly still for a few seconds, after which a kind of convulsive movement will be observed in the throat, followed by the sudden upward movement of a "bolus" through the gullet into the mouth to be masticated.

The most striking feature in the structure of members of the ox family is the development of the foot. Both the horse and the ox tribe have developed towards the one end of great speed over firm ground, and both have become specialized almost as completely as possible; but they have adapted themselves in different ways. In the case of the horse the middle toe has been developed and the others suppressed. The ox and its allies, on the other hand, have developed the two central toes, hence the name of their sub-order, Artiodactyla.

This specialization has entailed an enormous extension of the two bones corresponding to the middle bones of the hand (metacarpals) and of the foot (metatarsals); these have also become more or less completely fused in the different members of the family, consequently the joint corresponding to the human wrist has become the knee in oxen. Our illustrations showing the bones of the fore foot of various members of these two sub-orders, Artiodactyla and Perissodactyla (or odd-toed) will make this point clearer than much discussion. It will be seen that the hoofed (ungulate) animals really walk on the tip of what corresponds to the finger nails in man and the claws in carnivores, and not on their feet as all of us are led to believe from the point of view of creatures like ourselves who walk in plantigrade fashion.

One of the most fascinating studies in connection with modern history is the way different members of the same family will modify and adapt themselves to the varying local conditions to be met with. A glance at our illustrations will show the wonderful variety of these variations. At first sight the wild oxen, or wild ox of Europe, recorded by the Greeks and Romans in 1500, bears a greater resemblance to the ox than to the wild ox of the East. The latter, says Lydekker, is a more primitive form, and bears a closer resemblance to the ox of the East than to the ox of the West.

quaintness to the artist. Even more strange are the Kathiwar buffaloes of northern India, with their pathetic expression caused by their curling ram-like horns; an ungainly, ill-made beast but powerful. It stands fully five feet high at the shoulder. At the other end of the scale comes the aurochs, or pigmy buffalo, of the island of Celebes; it is the smallest of all the wild cattle, and is about the same size as the dwarf semi-domesticated humped cattle of India. It stands only three feet three inches at the shoulder, though it is rather higher at the loins. "Despite its slender build, as compared with larger cattle, its small, neat ears and upwardly-directed horns, which incline upwards and outwards in the plane of the face, without any distinct curvature, the aurochs is essentially a buffalo, whose affinities are with the Indian species," says Mr. Lydekker.

Although the remains of the bovidae are slight, comparatively speaking, we have evidence that they formed the quarry of the men of the Stone Age, because at Cambridge the skeleton of an aurochs, or wild ox, is preserved which was killed by a stone weapon, and many other skeletons have been found which show that the animal was slain in the chase. There is one prehistoric drawing of an extinct buffalo which was found in North Africa; but as a rule the artists of the prehistoric age showed very little enthusiasm for the ox as a subject to sketch, in spite of their obviously keen interest in him, as an addition to the lair; their pictures are chiefly concerned with horses, men and dogs. Somewhat after the

War has had many children since the world began, the new York Mail remarks. Some of them are dead now, but others are alive. War's first born was slavery. The savage who conquered his neighbor in the forest killed him as a matter of course, but he made captives of his family and his dependents, and these captives were slaves. By and by it became so profitable to hold slaves that conquered men were not killed, but spared for a fate worse than death. And in the measure that war drove and spread and became vaster and more dreadful, slavery spread and flourished, too. It was but yesterday that we ended it in America; and it is not yet gone from the earth. War's next child was pestilence. She was hideous! But not so hideous as slavery. She follows war like a shadow. With the wings of the vulture, she hovers over the camp. Born on the battle field, she flies over all the world for that point of vantage, and her victims vastly outnumber those of war itself. She is so closely associated with her blood-stained parent that it is probable that if war were no more on the earth there would be no more pestilence as long as the world endures. Then famine. This sister came later than pestilence, and her ravages have been more dreadful. In this age and quarter of the world we do not have famine in the same guise as that in which she visited the middle ages and still visits Asia. Our people do not die and rot upon the streets, as in Lucknow or Madras. The famine, says Lydekker, is a more primitive form, and bears a closer resemblance to the ox of the East than to the ox of the West.

Teacher—Away back in 1776, Washington was the nation's champion.
Jennie—Aw! Whatchu givin' us? The Washington team never won the championship!—Judge.

She visits us in unemployment and adversity. She drags out her curse over the years. The crust may not be wanting; but the horrible waste and charge of the armaments, upon the western world, withheld from the mouths of countless thousands, the scrambling food to which their hard toil entitles them. Famine, as the child of war, means for us the untold millions that are squandered on battleships which in a few years are junk to the robbery of legitimate industry. Hatred between peoples, fratricidal enmity, is another child of war. This ugly sister of pestilence and famine we have had with us many years in America. Even to this day, after half a century, she waves her bloody shirt in the halls of congress. Then there is arrogance, which is war's legitimate offspring; and death, for all is fair in war, and the student in the military academy is taught first of all to fool the enemy with all manner of lies, the baser the better. And arson and pillage—are they not the children of war that survive to this day? Last of all, the ultimate breeding power of war has been well expressed by one who said: "War is the father of more wars." Never was there a war that did not leave its offspring in hatred that had somehow to be worked out. The world is full today of wars that are merely awaiting their declaration. The state of Europe is more like war than it is like peace. Every dreadnought, every added regiment of the mighty armaments, is a war child of the monster that Napoleon and Bismarck let loose upon Europe.

The Hairroom.
A Pittsburg drummer in a small town dropped into a place to get a bite to eat. The place looked familiar, but he didn't know the proprietor.
"Been running this place long?" inquired the drummer.
"No; I just inherited it from my father."
"Ah, yes. I knew him. I recognize this old cheese sandwich on the counter."

Mixture of Caution and Economy.
At the Union depot a few evenings ago a mother who had gone to see her daughter, a miss of about 18 years, safely started on a journey, was heard to give the young lady the following words of advice just before the train started: "Now, good-by, my dear. Take good care of yourself and remember not to be too free with strangers on the train. But if a nice looking man should speak to you be polite to him—he may buy your supper for you."—Kansas City Star.

No Social Tact.
At a club dance an enthusiastic member approached a rather dull member and said unto him:
"Say, for heaven's sake go over and talk to Miss Fryte. She is sitting all by herself."
"But—but what shall I say to her?"
"Tell her how pretty she is."
"But she ain't pretty."
"Well, then tell her how ugly the other girls are. Ain't you got no social tact?"

A Question of Names.
In some of the country districts of Ireland it is not an uncommon thing to see carts with the owners' names chalked on to save the expense of painting. Practical farmers delight in rubbing out the signs to annoy the owners.
A constabulary sergeant one day accosted a countryman whose name had been thus wiped out unknown to him.
"Is this your cart, my good man?"
"Of course it is," was the reply. "Do you see anything the matter with it?"
"I observe," said the pompous policeman, "that your name is obliterated."
"Then ye're wrong," quoth the countryman, who had never come across the long word before. "for me name's O'Flaherty, and I don't care who knows it."—Youth's Companion.

Deliberating.
The Rev. James Hamilton, minister of Liverpool, while on holiday in Scotland, had a narrow escape from drowning. Accompanied by a boy, Mr. Hamilton was fishing for sea-trout when he slipped on a stone, lost his balance, and being encumbered with heavy wading boots, had great difficulty in keeping his head above water. Finally he managed to get back to the shore, although in a very exhausted state, and said to the boy: "I noticed that you never tried to help me." "Na," was the deliberate response, "but I was thinkin' o't."

Her Ruffing Passion.
The woman who had chased dust and dirt all her life finally reached St. Peter.
"Come in, you poor, tired woman," he said, and held the gate ajar.
But the woman hesitated.
"I'll be first," she said, "how often you clean house?"
"The saint smiled."
"You can't shake off the ruffing passion, can you?" he said. "Oh, well, step inside and they'll give you a broom and dustpan instead of a harp."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Simple Explanation.
To illustrate a point that he was making—that life was the race with a future and not a race with a past—Booker T. Washington told this little story the other day.
He was standing by his door one morning when old Aunt Caroline went by.
"Good morning, Aunt Caroline," he said. "Where are you going this morning?"
"Lawless, Miss Washington," she replied. "I've done been what I've gwine."—Kansas City Star.

Shock for a Brother.
"John," said an eminent physician, wearily, entering his home after a hard day's work, "John, if anyone calls excuse me."
"Yes, suh," agreed John, the old family darkey.
"Just say," explained the doctor, "that the massener is with me."
A little later the doctor's brother called—called and received the shock of his life.
"I want to see the doctor at once," said he.
"Yuh can't do it, sur," solemnly announced the old darkey, turning up his eyes till the whites alone showed. "Yuh can't do it, suh. The doctor, suh, am wid de Massiah."—New York Evening Sun.

"He bit the hand that fed him" said Teddy of Big Bill. And didn't tell us if the bite had made the biter ill. Now had Toastee been the subject of Bill's voracious bite He'd have come back for another with a keener appetite.

August 15th the Day

Plymouth will have a gala day on Thursday, Aug. 15th, at about the time the farmers will have their harvesting cleaned up and can take a day off for a little recreation. The management of the affair will again be in the hands of the Plymouth Fire Department and its success is again assured, as it was last year. All the details have not yet been arranged, but we expect to be able to print them next week. But remember the date and get ready to celebrate.

Instantly Killed on the Track

William G. Oliver, aged 65 years, was instantly killed Tuesday afternoon at Oak Station by the Detroit & Saginaw north-bound passenger train. Oliver was engaged in hauling gravel for the good roads commission. His team became frightened at the approaching train and ran directly upon the crossing in front of the train. The horses cleared the track, but the wagon was struck squarely and Mr. Oliver thrown quite a distance, the terrific impact killing him instantly. The train was stopped and the body taken on board and brought to Plymouth at the suggestion of Dr. Patterson, who was a passenger. Undertaker Schrader having been notified took charge of the remains upon their arrival here.

Mr. Oliver lived at Perrinsville, and the funeral was held from the Perrinsville church Friday afternoon at one o'clock. He leaves a widow and seven grown children—Mrs. Wm. Stewart of Detroit, formerly of this village, Mrs. Wm. Houk of Inkster, Mrs. L. J. Mel-drum of Plymouth, John of Elm, Mabel of Detroit and Roy and Florence, living at home.

A Crook Behind the Bars.

William Hammond of Brooklyn, N. Y., was arrested early Tuesday morning by Deputy Springer, while occupying a room in Pierce's hotel, and the officer is entitled to much credit for the clever capture of what undoubtedly is a notorious crook.

Leon Renshaw, a fireman on the P. M., slept in a couch in the yards Monday night, intending to take out the early morning train for Toledo. He had rolled his pants, containing two pocket-books and a $100 diamond ring, in a bundle, and clothed in overalls, stepped out in the yards about 4:30 o'clock, leaving the bundle in a seat. Returning a few minutes later, he found both pocket-books and the ring missing.

Notifying Officer Springer, that gentleman at once got busy. Inquiring of the night clerk at Pierce's hotel if any one had come in lately, he received the information that a "traveling man" had arrived a short time before and been assigned a room. Going there, the officer found the man busy looking over some letters and who grew quite indignant at being intruded upon and being suspected as a thief. But he had to show up and in one of the suit cases, the officer found a complete outfit of ladies' wearing apparel. In a pair of gloves was found a diamond ring which the man claimed as his own. In one of the pocket-books lost by the fireman, there had been a $2.00 bill. This had been paid to the hotel clerk and was identified by the fireman. Taking all the circumstances together, Deputy Springer felt justified in placing handcuffs on his man and escorting him to the lock-up. The letters found on him were addressed to different persons, showing he was a man of many aliases and an experienced crook.

As the evidence against him seemed conclusive, he owned up to the theft and told where the pocket-books could be found and complimented the officer highly for "nabbing" him so easily.

Before Justice Campbell he demanded an examination which was set for Wednesday morning. At that time he pleaded guilty and was remanded for trial in the circuit court.

Midway at the Fair.

By a happy-thought the management of the Michigan State Fair struck the right track when the noisy midway attractions which have hitherto occupied the most prominent point of vantage in the fair grounds along the walk leading to the grand stand, the horse races, night horse show and other events, were removed to a point down towards the Grand Trunk sidings. The former location of the midway shows will be occupied by attractions for the children, a pony show and other events of an elevating and interesting character. In past years, visitors at the Michigan State Fair gave too much prominence to it's midway shows. The problem of placing this show, attended by so many, at a point which would not put it too far away, but at the same time would remove it from the direct path of travel, placing it within easy reach but out of the regular line of travel. With the show in its present location and decidedly different from last year when every effort was made to purify the exhibition, it is not improbable that the attractions of this year will be even more popular with the masses.

All freaks and pit shows have been refused space and the midway will not be objectionable to the children and ladies in the future. Herbert A. Kline will have full charge of the attractions. The State Fair management by this innovation and the many others introduced for the present year, has not decreased the interest in the fair in the slightest, for at the present time there have been secured one-quarter more concessions than had been closed for at the same time last year and this in spite of the fact that every catch penny device has been cut out. Only high class productions will prevail, as every concession must occupy a high priced space of at least 10x50 feet, to cost $100 or more. The hot dog vendors will all be gone and only the best of restaurants will be tolerated, these being conducted mainly by the churches of Detroit. The State dairy and food commission will send representatives to the fair to make a careful inspection, this commission having cleaned out many last year. The State Fair management intends to provide a model fair for 1912 and these are but a few of the innovations that are to be introduced.

CARD OF THANKS—We desire to extend our sincere thanks to friends and neighbors for their assistance in our late bereavement and also for the beautiful floral gifts.

Mrs. O. A. Fraser,
Mrs. Esther Loomis.

Telephone Merger.

The Home Telephone Co. of Detroit, which included the Plymouth plant, has been sold to the Michigan State Telephone Co., and if the deal is sanctioned by the State railroad commission, there will be but one system in Plymouth. The deal has been under consideration for more than a year, the Home company finding themselves financially unable to pay expenses, excepting only the Plymouth branch and the Detroit River branch. While excellent service has been maintained by the Home company it is not expected that this will continue under the new management and further, it may also be expected that rates will be boosted. Users of both 'phones will be benefited by the merger.

To our Friends and Customers:

A few words to remind you of last winter's experience on Coal. The situation is as we see it now. The hard coal operators were absolutely sold out on coal at the end of the season or about March 15th. It was an impossibility to get Anthracite Coal. This was due to the severe winter and to the numerous petty strikes the operators were experiencing with the miners. In the face of this, the operators were without a pound of surplus coal to take care of summer orders. With no coal produced until after April 1st, the operators are asked to supply an unprecedented demand for coal. The dealers everywhere are filling every available place, for they realize that we will see a severe shortage of Anthracite Coal this season. Added to this the railroads are in a very congested condition and at a time of the year when, practically speaking, there is nothing to move, and when they should make deliveries on stuff in two days it takes them a week or ten days. By September 1st the car shortage will begin. A few days of snappy weather and every one will want coal. At the present time, and at the season of the year when we are always able to get all the hard coal we want, we are getting a car a week. We are writing this to tell you the true situation and to urge that you do not delay ordering your coal and having your bin filled. Don't think that it will help matters any to order your coal now and ask to have it delivered in October, for it won't. It is an impossibility to store enough coal to take care of the winter demand. So it is up to the consumers to take as much of their coal in the summer as possible.

There is no summer price on coal. Our prices are as follows up to September 1st:

Chestnut, delivered	$7.50
Chestnut, at the bin	7.25
Egg and Stove, delivered	7.25
Egg and Stove, at the bin	7.00

After Sept. 1st the price will no doubt be 50¢ to 75¢ a ton higher. This is not certain, but we believe that Anthracite Coal will be selling at a premium by October. Also bear in mind that you get better coal in the summer than you do in the winter, when we have to take what they ship and glad to get it.

This article is not written wholly to sell coal, but to urge you all to help both us and yourselves to make the winter situation as pleasant as possible. Your order left now will help to do this.

No Foam on the Communion Wine.

Mildred Elaine, the granddaughter of a south side minister, recently enjoyed her fourth birthday party. Though she often went to church with her mother, last Sunday was the first time she witnessed the solemn ceremony of the Lord's Supper...

The little miss was in a deep study over the communion service and it was not until the family was seated about the dinner table that she ventured an opinion on the ceremony. With a strong note of childish anxiety in her voice, she looked up at the food grandparent...

"Drandp," she asked, "why don't you beer at church foam like daddy's?"

Making a Fire in Papua.

One of the latest travelers in remote parts of Papua describes their method of making a fire. They get a piece of dry soft wood, split one end and insert a piece of tapa cloth, then taking a piece of cane, which they carry twisted round their waists, they place it under the wood on which they stand. Grasping each an end of the cane they pull it backward and forward vigorously...

Subway for Naples Planned.

Naples, Italy, is to have a subway, and when under the heights of Vesuvius the tunnel will lie about 500 feet below the surface. Electric elevators will be used here so well as at all places lying at depth of over 45 feet. At one end the line connects with the Vesuvius railroad outside the city limits, and at the other it joins a suburban electric road. The estimated cost of the undertaking is about $4,000,000.

Woman in an Orchard.

Miss Elizabeth M. Hayward is the manager of one of the largest apple orchards in this country. The orchard is situated near Hancock, N. H., and is owned by Miss Hayward's father, who managed it himself until a few years ago, when because of his illness she took over the management. The orchard comprises one thousand acres and is one of the best in the country.

DENVER IS HIT BY CLOUDBURST

THIRTY-FOOT WALL OF WATER SWEEPS DOWN CREEK INTO CITY; LOSS, $1,500,000.

MANY DIE AND HUNDREDS ARE HOMELESS.

A Telephonic Warning From Some Unknown Source Gives Hundreds an Opportunity to Escape.

Several hundred men, women and children of Denver, Col., are homeless, a number of deaths are rumored and a million and a half dollars' worth of property is in ruins as the result of a cloudburst which resulted in the overflow of the shallow bed of Cherry creek, through the city.

The big city auditorium is a refuge camp. At dawn five hundred of the homeless were gathered there and are being fed by the city. Twenty-five children from six months to six years old, whose parents may have been lost, are in the care of a police matron.

After directing relief and rescue work all night, Mayor Arnold organized relief parties at dawn to begin the search of the course of the flood, which is a trail of wrecked dwellings and other debris, trapped in the current of the lower Platte river.

The chamber of commerce opened a relief subscription this morning. The flood is without parallel in the history of the city.

Reports along the course of Cherry creek indicate an augmentation of the loss of property in the butting districts.

Warning Saves Many.

Had it not been for a note of warning sounded over the telephone from an unknown source to the city hall just before the crest of the flood reached the city, many could not have escaped death. Many fled in their night clothes, and that many more were caught in the flood while sleeping is the general belief.

Gen. H. M. Duffield Is Dead.

Gen. Henry M. Duffield, veteran of two wars, and one of the most widely known citizens of Michigan, passed away at his home in Detroit. Death followed a general breakdown. He had been ill for two years and had been confined to his room since last Christmas. The general was 70 years of age. Gen. Duffield passed away on the fiftieth anniversary of his first battle of the civil war at Murfreesboro, Tenn., where he was taken prisoner. When the end came, four of his sons, who are residents of Detroit, Henry, Divis B., Dr. Francis and Graham Duffield, were at his bedside.

State Board After Traverse City.

The state board of health has ordered a sanitary survey of Traverse City at the suggestion of prominent citizens, who have been trying to get rid of unsanitary conditions. Appeals have been made to the local health authorities, but they failed to act because of business and political reasons. The issue will now be pushed until all objectionable places have been cleaned up and necessary sewer connections made.

State Will Offer Maps for School Use.

At nearly every meeting or convention of public school teachers between now and the opening of the school term in September the United States government will be represented by a topographer, whose errand is to induce the schools to abandon the use of the old geographies, which have been considered standard for more than a generation, and adopt the vastly superior unit system of geography of the United States.

An electrical storm which passed over Allegan Sunday caused heavy damage, lightning striking several buildings.

William G. Ward, of Big Rapids, was elected department commander of the Michigan Spanish War Veterans in convention.

A postoffice has been opened at Neah-la-wan-ta, a resort, with S. Fred Cummings as postmaster, mail being delivered by boat once a day from Traverse City.

Inspector of Police James S. O'Neill, former single scull champion oarsman of New England, is dead at his home in Chelsea, Mass., of a complication of diseases. He was 53 years old.

The Michigan Equal Suffrage association decided, at a meeting in Kalamazoo, to organize every county in the state and to bring speakers of national prominence to Michigan to aid in the campaign.

Second Assistant Secretary of State Adee has just returned to Washington from his annual bicycle tour in France. He traveled nearly 1,000 miles on his wheel, his itinerary covering a large circle beginning and ending at Havre, and approaching within 50 miles of the Mediterranean on the south. Mr. Adee was accompanied for much of the distance through the most interesting historic portions of France by Consul-General and Mrs. Thackeray of Berlin.

The Commercial club is back of a movement to secure a legislative grant of $100,000 for an addition to the State Normal school at Marquette.

The Board of Commerce of Detroit has appointed a special committee consisting of W. H. Gray, James Cousens and William H. Campbell, to work with the business committee of the State Fair to provide a number of innovations for the coming event which opens Sept. 16 and closes Sept. 21.

WHITE REPLACES SHIELDS.

Osborn Appoints Thomas B. White, of Plainwell, to Tax Commission.

Thomas B. White, of Plainwell, former probate judge of Delta county, was appointed by Gov. Osborn as member of the state tax commission, to succeed Robert H. Shields, removed from office by the governor.

As Mr. White is a recess appointee to fill a vacancy his term will expire in January, and he will be subject to reappointment by the next governor. If he is named and the Legislature approves he will hold office until 1915.

Mr. White has been one of the state inheritance tax examiners under Auditor-General Fuller since Feb. 1, 1909, and as such has made an extensive study of the tax laws and conditions of the state. He was born in Oneida county, N. Y., in 1859, and graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan in 1886, having removed to Michigan some time before.

Soldiers to March 251 Miles.

The first and third battalions of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, stationed at Fort Wayne, will march the entire distance of 251 miles to attend the state encampment of the Michigan National Guard, which meets near Lexington, July 22. This will be the longest hike that federal troops have ever been asked to take in the state. The return trip will be made by rail.

BARONESS VON SUTTNER

Baroness Bertha von Suttner of Vienna, famous among other things because it was she who inspired the founding of the Nobel prizes, is in America to appeal to the women of the United States to do their utmost toward the abolition of war.

TELEGRAPH NOTES.

George Watson of Pickford, Chippewa county, has been appointed as a member of the state live stock sanitary commission to succeed T. F. Marston, resigned.

Four thousand dollars' worth of goldfish are to be planted in swamps, pools and canal basins in Newark, N. J., in an effort to kill off the mosquito. Goldfish can live in stagnant water, and feed eagerly on mosquito larvae. In muddy water goldfish are dark in color, turning to gold in clean water.

A large number of dockers in Liverpool and at Birkenhead, England, have struck work, refusing to register under the new clearing house scheme in connection with the national insurance act. The employers threaten a general lockout unless the men comply with the scheme.

Charges that the annual dance festival of the Flathead Indians, including the famous sun dance, now in progress in Arlee, Mont., is a round of drunkenness, gambling and fighting, were made to the county attorney, and that officer ordered the festival closed last night.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Hayward, who rode on the first steam passenger train in the United States, and who made a flag used by Gen. Grant during the civil war, died in Chicago at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Sturtevant. The train ran between Albany and Schenectady, N. Y. The flag made by Mrs. Hayward is one of the mementoes preserved in Grant's tomb. She was 91 years old.

The treaty of mutual trade benefits, which was signed at Ottawa last April by representatives of the British West Indies and members of the Canadian government, has been ratified by all governments, with the exception of Trinidad. It is expected that Trinidad will ratify the treaty within a fortnight. This deal was put through after the Canadian conservatives snubbed American reciprocity.

The world gathering of scientists now in London comprises delegates from 33 universities, including President Hadley of Yale, Dr. Robert S. Woodward of the Carnegie Institution, Woodward, Prof. Hodge of the Washington academy and Dr. Clarke of Johns Hopkins. The scientists attended a banquet at the Guild hall last night to celebrate the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Royal Society. The guests included Premier Aquilino, Lord Morley and Rudyard Kipling.

Work upon the new dairy building at the Michigan State Fair grounds progresses most favorably and the handsome structure will be ready within the coming month. LORIMER UNSEATED BY VOTE OF 55 TO 28

CHARGES THAT ILLINOIS SENATOR SECURED ELECTION BY BRIBERY IS UPHOLD.

BOTH OF MICHIGAN'S SENATORS VOTE TO EXPEL.

Stripped of His Toga Lorimer Walks Out of Senate Chamber Alone After Fatal Vote.

By a vote of 55 to 23 the United States senate unseated William Lorimer, the junior senator from Illinois, and declared his title to his seat invalid.

The end of the long fight to oust the senator came after six days of protracted debate, in which Senator Lorimer himself had occupied the floor for three sessions, making an impassioned defense of his election.

The final vote came upon the resolution offered by Luke Lea, senator from Tennessee, declaring the Lorimer election by the Illinois legislature in 1909 invalid.

The adoption of the Lea resolution carried with it the senate's verdict that corrupt methods and practices were employed in the election of William Lorimer "making his election invalid."

The closing moments of the trial were intensely dramatic. Lorimer, holding the floor, making a last defense of his seat, declared he did not appeal for the vote of any senator, but asked for justice.

Senator Lorimer, when the vote was announced, walked slowly toward the back of the room and passed into a cloak room, Senator Smoot, of Utah, throwing an arm over his shoulder.

The man who had occupied a seat in the senate since June 18, 1909, by the vote passes out of the records and never officially has held a seat in the senate of the United States.

The Lea resolution adopted by a vote of almost two to one was as follows:

Resolved, That corrupt methods and practices were employed in the election of William Lorimer to the senate of the United States from the state of Illinois, and that his election was therefore invalid.

In his closing sentences, Lorimer expressed gratitude for tributes which senators had paid to his private life.

Congress May Quit Soon.

The end of the Lorimer case and the disposition of the senate to postpone until autumn the impeachment trial of Judge Robert W. Archbald, of the commerce court, forecast an earlier adjournment of congress than has heretofore been indicated.

The Panama canal bill, despite Great Britain's request for delay, has been made the unfinished business of the senate. It must go to conference with the house, however, and the British government eventually will have an opportunity to fully state its bill before the measure is finally acted upon. The British contention that the provision which practically gives free tolls to certain American ships is in contravention of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, is not without support in both houses of congress.

Mayor's Home Dynamited.

An attempted was made to destroy Mayor R. L. Hammond's home, in Iron Mountain, with dynamite placed under the kitchen floor and set off with a long piece of fuse. The kitchen was entirely destroyed and furniture and glassware in other rooms smashed. Mrs. Hammond was the only one home and was sitting on the front porch. No clue has been found as to who did the deed.

Ex-Mayor Miller's home was wrecked in the same manner several years ago.

Fourteen Killed in Wreck on C. B. & Q.

Chicago, July 14.—Fourteen persons were killed and 17 were injured in a wreck on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad at Western Springs, a suburb of Chicago.

Coming through a dense fog with supposedly a clear track ahead, train No. 8, a fast mail, ran at full speed into the rear of train No. 2, known as the Overland Express, from Denver, which was standing still on the track, telescoping two of the Overland's Pullman cars.

Girl Slayer Drowns Himself.

The body of a man found floating in the Hudson river, New York, and taken to a morgue in Hoboken, was identified as that of Nathan Swartz, indicted for the murder of the child Julia Connors, in the Bronx, on July 7.

The identification was made by Frank Alexander, Swartz's brother-in-law.

The father of Nathan Swartz, who has been sought in connection with the crime, admitted to the grand jury that his son had confessed to him he was guilty of killing the girl.

Albert Steiner, employed by the Michigan Central railroad, was crushed to death between two freight cars at Niles. This is the fourth accidental death in Niles in one week.

State Food and Dairy Inspector W. T. Hulshizer is making a general cleanup in Traverse City. He has caused the arrest of one milkman on a charge of watering the milk. Several restaurant proprietors and fruit men have been ordered to clean up.

The city of Charlotte, Mich., will be represented at the Michigan State Fair by a display prepared by the scholars of the public schools of that city. This exhibit has been on view for some time in a store at Charlotte and has attracted the attention of many of the people of the city.

BOY'S WIFE'S THROAT, SHOTS POLICE OFFICER

Norman Stanley Slays His Youthful Bride at Lonely Spot in Bay City; Then Takes Own Life.

Bay City, Mich., July 16.—Mrs. Myrtle Stanley is dead, murdered by her husband; Norman Stanley, the husband, is dead by his own hand, and Police Sergeant Harry Anderson is in the hospital with these charges of shot in his body, fired there by Stanley.

All this in 12 hours.

And Stanley was only 21 years old. Early this morning an employe of the planing mill of W. H. Nickles near the Michigan Central depot, on his way to work found in the mill yard the body of a young woman lying in a pool of blood. Her throat had been cut, her white corduroy suit was stained with blood, and her hands on which were two diamond rings, were grimed with the coal dust and clinders into which she had fallen.

On being promised the raise in wages they demanded the striking transport workers, who at one time threatened to bring on a sympathetic strike and tie up the business of the whole port of Montreal, returned to work.

A "san kink" is believed to have caused the wreck of Glendye, C. B., when the locomotive plunged down a cut embankment and Engineer William Campbell was killed. A "san kink" is the railroad term to express twisting of the rails by the sun's heat. Fortunately the passenger car did not leave the rails, and Campbell's death was the only casualty.

Lieut. Culp, of the torpedo destroyer McDonough, at present located at Newport, will take charge of the splendid new torpedo boat, the USS Albatross, which is being built at the Naval Yard at Newport.

WOLVERINE NEWS BREVITIES

Marine City—Edward O'Leary, son of John O'Leary, a farmer living near here, lost his life in the St. Clair river while boating. In attempting to change seats in the boat he lost his balance and the boat was capsized. O'Leary and his companion started to swim ashore, but O'Leary was unequal to the task and sank to his death. His companion reached the shore exhausted. O'Leary was twenty-six years old and unmarried.

Port Huron.—The freight steamer G. J. Grammer, owned by Frank Seiver, Cleveland, O., was sunk in a collision with the freighter Northwind just north of Port Huron. The boat sank in 26 feet of water. The crew was taken off in small boats. The G. J. Grammer was a wooden boat, 418 feet long, built in 1902. The Northwind also is a wooden boat.

Owosso.—The apparent suicide of H. C. McGinness, a local insurance man for many years, whose body was found hanging in the garage in connection with his residence, with a rope encircling his neck, is attributed to despondency over the recent death of his wife, the burning of a business block he owned and other reverses.

Traverse City.—A representative of the state pure food department has made a visit to this city, and local milk men are in a panic. He has condemned several dairies and has refused to let owners of cows sell milk unless they conform strictly to the state law. One firm went out of business and three others are expected to follow. Failure to keep milk at a temperature of 60 degrees when delivered to customers, and lack of bottling facilities are the causes of trouble.

West Branch.—James McKenna, a nine-year-old boy of this place, was rescued from drowning by Kenneth Ross. A number of boys were swimming and all but McKenna came out and dressed. He was learning to dive, and in one of his attempts got into deep water, and being unable to swim he sank the third time, when Young Ross swam with all his clothes on and rescued him.

Ann Arbor.—A. J. Carlton, who says his home is in Hartford, Conn., was arrested after a chase down State street, on a charge of trying to pass a forged check on Wagner's men's furnishings store. He had in a check for $137.75, signed by William Herz, in payment for a bill of goods, but telephone inquiry of Mr. Herz elicited the information that he had made out no check to Carlton, and the latter is locked up.

Grand Rapids.—William Cole, a paroled Ionia prisoner found selling rings on the streets here, was returned to prison to complete an unexpired four years' term. Edward Quilp, another paroled prisoner, was arrested, charged with robbing his roommate. He will be returned to serve three more years.

Grand Rapids.—President E. L. Blake of the state barbers' examining board, dropped into town and dug his probe deep into the local tonorial places. Deplorable conditions were discovered; a great many of the shops being in unsanitary condition. A general cleanup has been ordered.

Jackson.—Samuel John, charged with larceny of $192.92 from a shoe-shining parlor in the Sun building, pleaded guilty in circuit court and was sentenced for two to five years at hard labor in the reformatory at Ionia. The court recommended three years.

Holland.—Johnny Merritt, eleven years old, was instantly killed while trying to board a moving freight train. Young Merritt with two companions had been in swimming and concluded to steal a ride. He fell under the wheels and his body was horribly mangled.

Since he was released from the Newburg asylum a year ago, Paris has at times made threats against the life of his aged wife. He purchased a revolver and several boxes of cartridges.

Sault Ste. Marie.—After searching steadily since half an hour after the crime was committed, Sheriff Baylies and his posse found the body of William Paris, who shot and killed his wife in a fit of rage, in a swamp east of the city. He had killed himself.

It was after his wife had refused, to be reconciled to him after a separation of two years that Paris shot and instantly killed her in her home.

Port Huron.—A report was received at police headquarters that Harry Conners, a ten-year-old boy, was missing. Chief of Police Marx immediately sent Police Captain Kerwin to investigate the affair. The latter discovered that Conners and some other boys had been playing around the old dry dock. The Conners boy fell into the water and the other boys, becoming frightened, ran away. Fortunately some men working near by saw the boy and rescued him.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of fiasco prevents their seeing Malabar on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Mrs. Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Temple appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Later comes Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Conversation of Maljorie's decorative bridal party. Her and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding blessing.

He sank into the seat opposite Marjorie, who gave him one terrified glance, and burst into fresh sobs: "Oh—oh—boo-heo—I'm so unhappy—py."

Perhaps, Mrs. Temple was a little miffed at the couple that had led her astray and opened her own honeymoon with a wanton fib. In any case, the best consolation she could offer Marjorie was a perfunctory pat, and a cynicism:

"There, there, dear! You don't know what real unhappiness is yet. Wait till you've been married a while."

And then she noted a starting look of completeness in the bride's hand. "Why—my dear!—where's your wedding ring?"

With what he considered great presence of mind, Mallory explained: "It—it slipped off—I—I picked it up. I have it here." And he took the little gold band from his waistcoat and tried to jam it on Marjorie's right thumb.

"Not on the thumb!" Mrs. Temple cried. "Don't you know?"

"You see, it's my first marriage." "You poor boy—this finger!" And Mrs. Temple, raising Marjorie's limp hand, selected the proper digit, and held it forward, while Mallory pressed the fatal circlet home.

And then Mrs. Temple, having completed their installation as man and wife, utterly confounded their confusion by her final effort at comfort: "Well, my dears, I'll go back to my seat, and leave you alone with your dear husband."

"My dear what?" Marjorie mumbled inanity, and began to sniffle again. Whereupon Mrs. Temple resigned her to Mallory, and assigned her to fate with a consoling platitude:

"Cheer up, my dear, you'll be all right in the morning." Marjorie and Mallory's eyes met in one wild clash, and then both stared into the window, and did not notice that the shades were down.

CHAPTER XI.

A Chance Encounter.

While Mrs. Temple was confiding to her husband that the agitated couple in the next seat had just come from a wedding-factory, and had got on while he was lost in tobacco land, the people in the seat on the other side of them were engaged in a little drama of their own.

"I came from there originally." "So did I," said Mrs. Lathrop, leaning closer, and leaning like a big sun: "I don't suppose you remember Mrs. Lathrop?"

The old maid stared at the bachelor as if she were trying to see the boy she had known, through the mask that time had modeled on his face. And then she was a girl again, and her voice chimed as she cried:

"Why, Ira!—Mr. Lathrop!—is it you?" She gave him her hand—both her hands, and he smothered them in one big paw and laid the other on for extra warmth, as he nodded his savage head and roared as gentle as a sucking dove:

"Well, well! Annie—Anne—Miss Gattie! What do you think of that?" They gossiped across the chasm of years about people and things, and knew nothing of the excitement so close to them, saw nothing of Chicago slipping back into the distance, with its many lights shooting across the windows like hurled torches.

Suddenly a twinge of ancient jealousy shot through the man's heart, recurring to old emotions.

"So you're not married, Annie. Whatever became of that fellow who used to hang round you all the time?"

"Charlie Selby?" She blushed at the name, and thrilled at the luxury of meeting jealousy. "Oh, he entered the church. He's a minister out in Ogden, Utah."

"I always knew he'd never amount to much," was Lathrop's epitaph on his old rival. Then he started with a new twinge: "You bound for Ogden, too?"

"Oh, no," she smiled, enraptured at the new sensation of making a man anxious, and understanding all in a flash the motives that make coquettes. Then she told him her destination.

"I'm on my way to China." "China!" he exclaimed. "So'm I!" She stared at him with a new thought, and gushed: "Oh, Ira—are you a missionary, too?"

"Missionary? Hell, no!" he roared. "Excuse me—I'm an importer—Anne, I—I—"

But the sibilous swear reverberated in their ears like a smitten bell, and he blushed for it, but could not recall it.

CHAPTER XII.
The eloped-in-the-Maystack. The eloped-in-the-Maystack couple sat long in mutual terror and a common paralysis of lassitude. Marjorie, for lack of anything better to do, was absent-mindedly twisting Snooksleums's ears, while he, that pocket straggle of a dog, in a well meaning effort to divert her from her evident grief, made a great pretense of ferocity, growling and threatening to bite her fingers off. The new ring attracted his special jealousy. He was growing discouraged at the ill-success of his impersonation of a wolf, and dejected at being so crassly ignored, when he suddenly became, in his turn, a center of interest.

Marjorie was awakened from her trance of inanition by the porter's voice. His plantation voice was ordinarily as thick and sweet as his own New Orleans sorghum, but now it had a bitterness that curdled the blood:

"Excuse me, but how did you-all get that fleash dog in this heah cab?" "Snooksleums is always with me," said Marjorie briskly, as if that settled it, and turned for confirmation to the dog himself, "aren't you, Snooksleums?"

"Well," the porter drawled, trying to be gracious with his great power, "the rules don't 'low no live stock in the sleepin' cars, 'ceptin' humans." Marjorie rewarded his condescension with a blunt: "Snooksleums is more human than you are."

"I p'sume he is," the porter admitted, "but he can't make up berth. Anyway, the rules says dogs goes with the baggage."

Marjorie swept rules aside with a defiant: "I don't care. I won't be separated from my Snooksleums." She looked to Mallory for support, but he was too sorely troubled with greater anxieties to be capable of any action.

her of his presence. "I—I'm here, Marjorie." She looked at him just once—at him, the source of all her troubles—buried her head in her arms, and resumed her grief. Mallory stared at her helplessly, then rose and bent over to whisper:

"I'm going to look through the train." "Oh, don't leave me," she pleaded, clinging to him with a dependence that restored his respect.

"I must find a clergyman," he whispered. "I'll be back the minute I find one, and I'll bring him with me."

The porter thought he wanted the dog back, and quickened his pace till he reached the corridor, where Mallory overtook him and asked, in an effort at casual indifference, if he had seen anything of a clergyman on board.

"Ain't seen nothin' that even looks like one," said the porter. Then he hastened ahead to the baggage car with the squirming Snooksleums, while Mallory followed slowly, going from seat to seat and car to car, subjecting all the males to an inspection that rendered some of them indignant, others of them uneasy.

If dear old Doctor Temple could only have known what Mallory was hunting, he would have snatched off the mask, and thrown aside the secular scarlet tie at all costs. But poor Mallory, unable to recognize a clergyman so dyed-in-the-wool as Doctor Temple, sitting in the very next seat—how could he be expected to pick out another in the long and crowded train?

All clergymen look alike when they are in convention assembled, but sprinkled through a crowd they are not so easily distinguished.

In the sleeping car bound for Portland, Mallory picked one man as a clergyman. He had a lean, ascetic face, solemn eyes, and he was talking to his seat-mate in an oratorical manner. Mallory bent down and tapped the man's shoulder.

The effect was surprising. The man jumped as if he were stabbed, and turned a pale, frightened face on Mallory, who murmured:

"Excuse me, do you happen to be a clergyman?" A look of relief stole over the man's features, followed closely by a scowl of wounded vanity:

"No, damn you, I don't happen to be a parson. I have chosen to be—well, if you had watched the billboards in Chicago during our run, you would not need to ask who I am!"

Mallory mumbled an apology and hurried on, just overhearing his victim's sigh:

"Such is fame!" He saw two or three other clerical persons in that car, but feared to touch their shoulders. One man in the last seat held him specially, and he hid in the turn of the corridor, in the hope of eavesdropping some clue. This man was bent and scholastic of appearance, and wore heavy spectacles and a heavy beard, which Mallory took for a guaranty that he was not another actor. And he was reading what appeared to be printer's proofs. Mallory felt certain that they were a volume of sermons. He lingered timorously in the environs for some time before the man spoke at all to the dreary-looking woman at his side. Then the stranger spoke. And this is what he said and read:

"I fancy this will make the bigots sit up and take notice, mother: if there ever was a person named Moses, it is certain, from the writings ascribed to him, that he disbelieved the Egyptian theory of a life after death, and combated it as a heathen superstition. The Judaic idea of a future existence was undoubtedly acquired from the Assyrians, during the captivity."

He doubtless read much more, but Mallory fled to the next car. There he found a man in a frock coat talking solemnly to another of equal solemnity. The seat next them was unoccupied, and Mallory dropped into it, parking his ears backward for news.

"Was you ever in Moine?" one voice asked. "Was I?" the other muttered. "Wann't I run out of there by one of my audiences. I was givin' hypnotic demonstrations, and I had a run-in with one of my horses, and he done me dirt. Right in the midst of one of his catalytic trances, he got down from the chair where I had stretched him out and bit me!"

"He's a bun baker, gosh, and owes me two weeks' pay." Thank God, there was a break down opinion on a dark alley leading to the switch yard. I caught a caboose just as a freight train was pullin' out."

Mallory could hardly get strength to rise and continue his search. On his way forward he met the conductor, crossing a veritable between cars. A happy thought occurred to Mallory. He said:

"Excuse me, but have you any preachers on board?" "None so far." "Are you sure?" "Positive." "How can you tell?" "Well, if a grown man offers me a half-fare ticket, I guess that's a pretty good sign, ain't it?" Mallory guessed that it was, and turned back, hopeless and helpless. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

TWO IMPORTANT REQUISITES IN PROFITABLE PEAR ORCHARD

Objects to be Obtained in Pruning and Training are to Secure Symmetrical, Evenly Balanced Heads; Admission of Sunlight and Air and Foliage for Shade.

Intermediate or Natural Form.

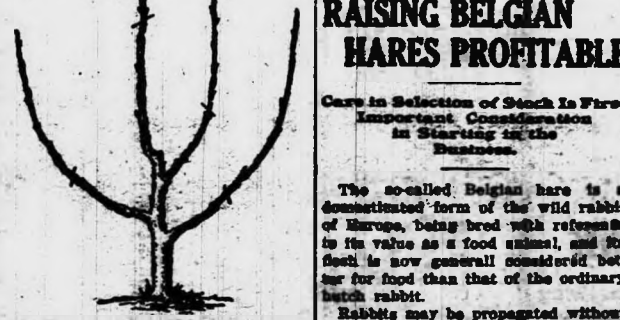

(By G. B. BRACKETT, Pomologist, United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pruning and training are important requisites in the successful management of a pear orchard. The objects to be attained are: (1) Symmetrical, evenly balanced heads; (2) the admission of sunlight and free circulation of air into all parts of the tree tops; and (3) the maintenance of sufficient foliage to protect the trunks and branches from the intense heat of the sun's rays, which would otherwise be likely to scald and injure both tree and fruit.

Pruning should begin as soon as the trees have been planted by cutting back the young tree at the time of planting to the height from the ground it is proposed to start the branches to form the head of the tree, which should not be over 12 to 15 inches, as shown in figure 2. This cutting back will cause several of the upper buds to break and grow, thus starting the top or head at the proper height. The strongest shoots should be left at equal distances apart around the stem and should tend obliquely outward so as to spread and make an open head. The second year these shoots should be shortened back to the extent of about half of the growth, as shown in figure 4. The same plan should be continued the third and fourth years.

In all pruning, to give the desired form to the head and especially while the tree is young, the orchardist should keep clearly fixed in his mind the form of the tree as it is to be when old; for what may seem to be an open head when the tree is young may prove to be too dense and crowded when the tree is older. The branches should not be too close together for convenience in gathering the fruit.

During late winter or in early spring before the sap starts, each tree should be carefully looked over are not so conventional. The tree is allowed to grow more in accord with its natural habit, but it must be checked more or less in its growth so as to conform to the ideas of the planter. Different varieties of the pear vary greatly in their habits of growth. Some trees are upright and some are of a drooping habit. Both of these forms should be modified. Upright branches are shortened back and induced to spread out; and the limbs of the tree inclined to droop are encouraged to grow more nearly upright.

"'Twas a Pretty Thing. The young man produced a small, square box from his pocket. "I have a present for you," he began. "I don't know whether it will fit your finger or not, but—"

RASH ALMOST COVERED FACE

Warrenville, O.—"I have felt the effects of blood poisoning for eighteen years. I was never without some eruptions on my body. The terrible itching caused me much suffering and discomfort, with the itching and scratching made it worse. Last spring I had a terrible breaking out of blistering sores on my arms and limbs. My face and arms were almost covered with rash. I could not sleep and lost nineteen pounds in five weeks. My face was terribly red and sore, and felt as if my skin was on fire. At last I tried a sample of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and I found them so cool, soothing and healing, that I got some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Resolvent. I bathed with hot water and Cuticura Soap, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment every night for two months, and I am cured of all skin eruptions." (Signed) Mrs. Kathryn Kraft, Nov. 28, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 22-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L. Boston."

She Knew It. Stella—This is the presidential year. Bella—I know. The farmer we heard with keeps eight bull moose that chase you every time you go out.

The Moon's Offering. Looking out of the window one evening, little Marie saw the bright, full moon in the eastern sky, and, apparently, only a few inches from it, the beautiful Jupiter, shining almost as brightly as the moon itself. Marie gazed intently at the spectacle for a moment, and then turning to her mother exclaimed: "Oh, mother, look! The moon has laid an egg!"

Making Cheese in Olden Days. Cheese was made by the old-time farmers in the summer on the co-operative plan by which four cattle owners owning say 14 milk cows, received all the milk night and morning, according to the dairy yield of their little herd. Thus given two families having five cows each, one with three and one with one, supposing that the average yield per cow was the same, in two weeks, two owners would make five cheeses each; one would press three, and one only one cheese, but this one would be as good and as large as any of the rest. "Milkability of the Trades—The Farmer," Charles Winslow Hall, in National Magazine.

She Was a Duster. Mrs. Sutton answered for a woman to do general housework, and in answer a colored girl called, announcing that she had taken the position.

"Are you a good cook?" asked Mrs. Sutton. "No, indeed, I don't cook," was the reply.

"Are you a good handmaid?" "I wouldn't do washin' and ironin'; it's too hard on the hands." "Can you sweep?" asked Mrs. Sutton. "No," was the positive answer. "I'm not strong enough."

"Well," said the lady of the house, quite unprovoked, "may I ask what you can do?" "I dusts," came the placid reply.—Everybody's.

BALLOON FACES

Often Caused by Tea and Coffee Drinking.

How many persons realize that tea and coffee so disturb digestion that they produce a puffy, yellow complexion? A ten days' trial of Postum has proven a means to thousands of cases of clearing up a bad complexion.

A Washin' young lady tells her experience: "All of us—father, mother, sister and brother—had used tea and coffee for many years until finally we all had stomach troubles, more or less. "We all were sallow and troubled with pimples, had breath disagreeable taste in the mouth, and all of us sleep so many bundles of nerves."

"We didn't realize that tea and coffee caused the trouble until one day we ran out of coffee and went to borrow some from a neighbor. She gave us some Postum and told us to try that. "Although we started to make it, we all felt sure that we would be sick if we missed our strong coffee, but we tried Postum and were surprised to find it delicious."

"We read the statements on the package, more and in a month and a half we would have known us. We all were able to digest our food without any trouble, our skin became clear, tanned, cleared off, and nerves in the condition. We never see anything else but Postum. There is nothing like it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

RAISING BELGIAN HARES PROFITABLE

Care in Selection of Stock Is First Important Consideration in Starting the Business.

The so-called Belgian hare is a domesticated form of the wild rabbit of Europe, being bred with reference to its value as a food animal, and its flesh is now generally considered better for food than that of the ordinary Dutch rabbit.

Rabbits may be propagated without costly investment in land and buildings, and possess the further advantage that they contribute another animal to the farm stock that may be killed and prepared for the table at short notice. As a rule, the same treatment applies to all forms of rabbits, except the lop-eared variety, which require heated quarters in winter.

Care in the selection of stock is the first important consideration upon entering upon the raising of rabbits, and for the rest of the enterprise only observation and judgment are essential.

While not affording large profits, the raising of rabbits is a small way may be made interesting and fairly remunerative, as well as affording an agreeable change in the family diet where ordinary meats are high priced or difficult to obtain.

Separate Allings Chick. At the first sign of diarrhoea in a chick separate it from the rest of the flock and if it does not rally to treatment the bird should be destroyed.

The Aquaplane, Most Dangerous and Spectacular of All Water Devices, a Feature of Cadillac

Mason Rumney of the Detroit Country club on the aquaplane, traveling thirty-six miles an hour.

Balancing oneself on the narrow steel girder of a forty story skyscraper is an easy and safe task compared to performing on the aquaplane. Imagine yourself riding through the water on a narrow plank drawn by a high powered motorboat, cutting the waves at a speed of forty miles an hour.

It takes nerve to give an aquaplane exhibition. The three best and most fearless aquaplane stars will show their skill during Cadillac, the last week in July, at Detroit. Mason Rum-
