Detroit Y. M. C. A. Takes Care of Strangers Coming to the City

Parents of the young men who are leaving home to go to Detroit will be interested to know of a new department that has recently been installed by the Detroit Young Men's Christian Association. It is called the Inter-City Work Department and its purpose is to get in touch with young men immediately upon their arrival in Detroit and see that they are comfortably located in proper boarding houses—that they receive all the assistance possible in obtaining positions and that they get in touch with the right kind of friends and companions. An organized force of five young men in Detroit are ready and willing to call upon the strangers and render the service needed. It is desired that it be thoroughly understood that this is purely a plan of helpfulness and friendliness, with not the slightest obligation placed upon the recipient, either as to fee or membership. If there are any young men in this vicinity who wish to locate in Detroit, Mr. F. M. Sheffield of this village will be pleased to meet them and give them all necessary information regarding the Y. M. C. A. service.

A Sad Death

Wm. D. Felton, perhaps better known to Plymouth citizens as Jack Lane, passed away at the Detroit Sanitarium, Saturday, May 17. It will be remembered that the young man met with a serious accident at Brighton, December 30th, 1912, while employed as a brakeman on the Pere Marquette. His injuries were very serious and since that time he has been confined in the institution where he died. Deceased was born at New Boston, December 12, 1887. He was married to Miss Alta Smith, January 19, 1907. He leaves to mourn their loss, a wife, one son, father, mother, four brothers and two sisters. He was a young man highly respected by all who knew him and had many friends who sincerely regret his untimely death. The remains were brought here Saturday afternoon and taken to Schrader Bros. undertaking rooms until the funeral, which was held Monday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. B. F. Farber officiating. There were many beautiful floral offerings. The interment took place in Riverside cemetery.

New Gun and Rod Law

The new gun and rod law passed by the last legislature is causing more or less anxiety among the sports and hunters of the county and there seems to be a difference of opinion as to the real meaning of this law which becomes operative August 15, 1913.

The law is apparently much misunderstood and misinterpreted. According to the state game warden's interpretation a license is not necessary for any Michigan resident to fish anywhere in the state. He is also entitled to fish and hunt within the confines of the county wherein he resides.

If a citizen of one county, however, desires to hunt in another he must secure a license to do so, and this tax is one dollar. This must also be paid in addition to the regular deer license in case hunters from one county go to hunt deer in another.

While Michigan residents may fish without a license, non-residents of the state are compelled to pay a license of one dollar for the privilege of catching anything but trout. If a non-resident desires to angle for trout, he is taxed $3. Michigan citizens, however, may take any kind of fish anywhere in the state in season without securing a license.

If your automobile needs repairing, take it to Homenway's Garage in the rear of the Commercial Hotel.

Dr. Peck was elected Vice-president of the Michigan State Homeopathic Medical Society at its forty-seventh annual convention held in Grand Rapids this week.

New Schedule

on D. U. R.

The summer schedule of the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Railway will go into effect Tuesday, May 27, but will not affect the operating time on the Plymouth-Northville Division except that the even hour cars will not run through to Detroit but go only as far as Wayne, where passengers will be transferred to main line cars. It had been hoped that Michigan avenue within the city limits would have been widened this year so as to enable the company to construct a double track to the Limits but the appropriation for this widening was not allowed by the Board of Estimates by the City of Detroit and the pressure of traffic has been so great on this part of the line that cars have been more or less delayed in getting through the city. It is expected that by cutting off some of the cars that the schedule can be operated much more successfully.

Canton Citizen

Passes Away

Lander Truesdell passed away at his home in Canton last Wednesday morning. Although he had been in failing health for several months he was able to be about until last Saturday, when he suffered a stroke of apoplexy. The deceased was born in Columbia, Van Buren county, Sept., 1861, and removed with his parents when a small boy, to a farm in Canton where he has resided for the greater part of his life. He was married to Miss Ella Lester of Canton, Dec. 5th, 1883 and to this union four children were born, all of whom are living. His wife preceded him to the high life Oct. 29, 1892. Mr. Truesdell has been a member of Plymouth Grange for several years and this Order will take charge of the services which will occur at his late home Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. D. C. McNair, pastor of the Congregational church at Wayne, will conduct the services. Interment in Riverside cemetery. He is survived by one son and three daughters, Lemuel and Frances Truesdell and Mrs. Rebecca Gust of Canton, and Mrs. Ernest Ash of Livonia, and three sisters, Mrs. August Schaefer of Plymouth, Mrs. Randolph Brown of Superior, and Miss Grace Truesdell of Canton, besides many other more distant relatives, and a host of friends.

The Coming State Fair

From the Publicity Bureau of the Michigan State Fair.

"Better Farm Horses" is one of the slogans of the educational campaign of the Michigan State Fair.

Improving the breed of farm and draft horses will be encouraged to a greater extent this year than ever before. Special inducements will be offered for the breeding of horses which are adapted to farm and army service.

The Fair will attempt to teach the farmers the profit of breeding horses up to U. S. Army requirements. Canada and western ranges are supplying the army demands at the present time, but they fall short, and there is no reason in the world why Michigan farmers should not realize a handsome profit by breeding for army use.

The direct object of the Fair in this particular line is to show the small producers that supplying the big demand means correspondingly bigger profit.

This year's prize awards in the horse department are greater by fully 20 per cent than last year's, and so while the breeder is being rewarded for his education he may at the same time establish a name for himself which counts so much in the horse markets of the east.

It is now assured that there will be an exhibition of wild fowl at the Michigan State Fair. It has been arranged to exhibit all the wild game birds which make Michigan their home. They will be shown in wooded surroundings so that their plumage and habits may be more carefully observed. The shooting laws governing these birds will be explained as well as their peculiarities. This is the first time this has ever been tried at the Michigan State Fair and it is bound to receive public approval from the outset.

All ball players and others who are interested in having a ball team here this coming summer are requested to meet at the base ball park, Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

STILL USE CARRIER PIGEONS

French Military Authorities Train Birds to Carry Messages as They Did in the Past.

A military pigeon is still used in France owing to the experiments made during the siege of Paris, when, of 302 carrier pigeons, 73 were liberated from balloons, 73 returned safely. These birds were messenger pigeons, photographed on celluloid to show in good quills, stretched by

One of the most interesting national cemeteries is that on Custer's battlefield in Montana. The story of how the dashing, yellow-haired young major general and every man of five companies of the Seventh cavalry lost their lives in battle with the Sioux, June 25, 1876, is known to every one. The 266 dead, including those who fell under Reno and Benteen, were buried where they fell, the bodies in most instances being found naked and shockingly mutilated. Subsequently the bodies were taken up and reburied in a square to the east of the monument. Near by are buried the men who fell at the Port Kearny massacre in 1866 and those killed by the Sioux at Fort Smith a year or two later. Several soldiers who died in the Philippines and veterans of the civil war have likewise found a last resting place there, so that the interments in the cemetery now total upward of 1,200.

MYSTERIOUS ROMANCE

By A. W. BEER.

Had it not been for the handkerchief I would have said that it was clearly a case for the Society for Psychological Research and have washed my hands of it. But though to be sure a flimsy enough object, the handkerchief, with the initials "E. B. M.," daintily embroidered in one corner, was of a tangible nature, and in no way to be fitted into any theory of spooks.

And yet the whole thing was absurd on the face of it. No doubt the simple explanation was that the fever which had possessed my body for many weary weeks still dominated my brain.

Wearying at length of the problem, I placed the delicate bit of cambric and lace beneath my pillow and again resigned myself to sleep.

A year later I was in California, ostensibly on a vacation, but also with a view of absorbing color for a novel of pioneer days which I was planning to write.

I was at dinner one evening in San Francisco with my friend Maxfield, a newspaper man, when I caught sight of a familiar face at one of the restaurant tables.

"That's singular!" I exclaimed presently.

"What's singular?" queried Maxfield.

"If you have reference to the fair creature at whom you are gazing so intently, I may say that while she is certainly single, I do not know that she is looked upon as singular."

"The fact is," I returned, "that for the moment I imagined that I had met the young woman somewhere before, but I am probably mistaken."

"You've seen her portrait in some of the literary papers, perhaps," suggested Maxfield. "That's E. B. M. Merryweather, who is coming to the front as a writer of some rather fetching verse."

"Enid B. Merryweather?" said I.

"Then her initials are 'E. B. M.'?"

"Correct," replied Maxwell. "You got it right the very first time. But why get so excited over a bunch of initials?"

"Maxfield," I retorted, "you ought to know that the facetious is not your line, so why attempt it? What I'd like to know is whether or not you have the honor of Miss Merryweather's acquaintance; if so, I want you to present me."

"Nothing easier, old man," he replied promptly.

There are some persons one meets to whom an introduction seems almost superfluous. You somehow feel that you have known them always.

Thus it was with Enid and me. We met, not as stranger, but as old friends who for a time had been separated in body, but never in spirit.

But one evening Enid said:

"Do you know that I worried about you a great deal when you were ill last winter?"

"Foolish girl!" I replied. "You had never met me."

"And yet I seem always to have known you," she murmured.

"Enid," I said presently, "there is something queer I want to tell you in connection with that illness of mine. It seems utterly unreasonable, but there are some things beyond our understanding."

"I had been dwelling for weeks in a strange, fantastic world, when one night I awoke calm and rational, and I saw bending over me one who seemed the very embodiment of my heart's desire. I closed my eyes again for a second, doubting the reality of what I saw, and when I opened them again the lovely vision had faded."

"I can't explain it, but it was you who came to me that night; and, more wonderful still, here is the proof!" I took from my pocket the handkerchief which I had found resting lightly on the counterpane after the disappearance of my mysterious visitor.

She took the handkerchief and examined it.

"Yes, it is mine," she said presently. And then she added:

"As a writer of romances you would perhaps prefer the story left as it is, but I feel bound to tell you just how this handkerchief came into your hands."

"I don't know," she continued, "how or why you came to occupy so much of my thoughts, when I knew you only through your books, but nevertheless such was the case."

"When last winter it was reported that your life was despaired of, I could not rest. Some of my friends guessed my secret and rallied me accordingly. I saw out that I intended visiting Los Angeles for a few weeks, but instead of doing so I went on by the southern route to New York."

"I knew that the physician who conducted the sanitarium in which you were undergoing treatment, Dr. Starbrook had been an old friend of my father's, and upon arriving in New York I made myself known to him. I told him that you were a very dear friend, but that for personal reasons I did not want you to know of my presence in New York. There was no fear of that, however, as for a long time you knew no one."

"At length one evening when I had called to inquire about you and had been admitted to your bedside as usual, you looked at me with rational eyes. To avoid discovery I fled from the room, and this handkerchief I suppose was dropped in my confusion."

"Now, then," she concluded, "does not that destroy all your pretty and mysterious romance?"

"But I think the answer I gave her convinced her that it did not."

Immediately after the war the work of formally establishing national cemeteries in places where Union soldiers and sailors were buried proceeded rapidly. The last such cemetery to be established was that at Greenville, Tenn., provided for by an act of congress approved June 12, 1906. This cemetery contains the tomb of former President Johnson and only ten others, though it has an area of 850 acres.

The eighty-four national cemeteries are divided according to importance into twenty-six first class, twenty second class, sixteen third class and twenty-four fourth class cemeteries. Those in the first class include Arlington, Andersonville, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Chattanooga, Nashville, Corinth, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, Jefferson Barracks, Shiloh and Vicksburg. In the number of interments that at Arlington stands first. That at Vicksburg is second. The Nashville cemetery is third.

Arlington as is generally known formerly belonged to the wife of Gen. Robert E. Lee. Mrs. Lee was a daughter of George Washington Parke Custis, who was a grandson of Martha Washington. The stately mansion whose classic columns have been seen by most visitors to Washington city was inherited by her, and at the outbreak of the Civil war it was the Lee home. Lee, then a colonel in the United States army, wrote his resignation there April 20, 1861. Two days later he quit his beautiful home forever to accept command in the military forces of his state.

In 1864 the estate was sold for taxes by the "rump" Union government of Virginia, and was bought by the national government, which set it apart as a cemetery. After the war Lee considered making an attempt to reacquire the property, but finally decided that the time was not ripe. Subsequently a son brought suit to recover on the ground that the estate had been illegally sold. After long litigation he established his claim, but reconveyed his rights to the United States for $150,000.

Overlooking as it does the Potomac and the capital a more beautiful spot could scarcely be imagined. Magnificent oaks shade its glades and knolls, and art has perfected what nature left undone. The cemetery contains the tombs of Logan, Sheridan, Lawton and other noted generals, but the most famous monument is that to 2,111 unknown dead gathered from the fields of Bull Run and the route to the Rappahannock. As the inscription states, "their remains could not be identified, but their names and deeds are Soldiers of the Revolution, of the War of 1812, of the Mexican war, of the Civil war, of the war with Spain, and of many minor conflicts—all have found a final resting place in the national cemeteries. A special disinterment corps has been maintained by the government for bringing home the bodies of soldiers who died in Cuba and the Philippines. In 1908, for example, 147 bodies were brought home from the Philippines, of which number ninety-three were delivered to friends or relatives, while the rest were reinterred in national cemeteries. For every soldier or sailor buried in such a cemetery the government which he served furnishes a headstone and footstones, unless relatives or friends erect something more elaborate.

The modern French carrier pigeon is a cross between the bluet and the Belgian "traveller." The prevailing type is large, with a long body, head, neck and beak. The female lays two eggs at a time, from which are usually hatched a male and a female. Incubation lasts eighteen days, and both parents share in the process of upbringing. Birds chosen for races are fed on wheat, but when they are to be put to tests of endurance their diet is small dried beans and maize with water that contains iron. Beechnuts and buckwheat are sometimes given just before a race to impart extra strength for the flight.

Training begins when birds are three or four months old. They are placed in baskets, taken a mile or so from home, and liberated. A few days later the process is repeated at a greater distance, and so on in successive stages, until a bird flies homeward 100 miles or more. At five months, it will fly 300 miles in ten hours. A pigeon, however, is not at its best until it is four or five years old, when it can easily cover 600 or 700 miles. The average speed of a good carrier is 20 miles an hour, and the height at which it flies is from 450 to 500 feet. The price varies from $4 for an ordinary specimen to $250 and more for a prize-winner.

The Reo Motor Trucks

Model J Truck

Price, $1,950

On the pavement—the equal of any two horses that ever ate their $2 worth of feed a day; on sand and through mud—the equal of any four. Yet it works from morning till night on a pitance of gasoline and oil—say forty cents worth of the former and a nickel's worth of the latter.

Faets when not busy; needs no veterinary; no blacksmith; doesn't get frightened at a blowing newspaper; litters up no stable; requires no hay loft and grain bin; saves barn space and hired help; and can be operated by any man or grown boy who knows enough to pour fuel into a funnel. Lastly—costs but $750.

As Uncle Sam said to Mexico: "I ain't arguing; I'm just telling you." There is no argument can be no argument in the matter at all. We feel what we have to do is only to show that for $750 we can really build a 1500-pound truck worthy the high name and reputation of the Reo. For even the costly trucks—the kinds costing $1000 and up—are acknowledged to be superior to horses in cheapness of maintenance.

So all we ask is that you see for yourself that—at $750—we have really produced a motor truck answering perfectly and exactly all delivery needs for wares weighing less than a ton. We are not afraid of 500 pounds overload.)

Reo Light Delivery Truck, Stake Body—Price $750

Reo Light Delivery Truck, Express Body—Price, $750 Top $80 extra

Our salesmen, if you wish will explain how we have made this economy possible by utilizing the vast and varied experience of our associate company engaged in the manufacture of Reo pleasure cars.

NEW GARGAGE

We now have a first-class automobile man in our Garage who has had years of experience in one of the largest automobile factories, and is thoroughly competent to do all kinds of automobile repair work. Considerable petty thieving seems to be going on about town of late. Last Monday night someone entered the wood shed at the rear of J. D. McLaren's home on Union street and helped himself to the contents of the ice chest. He was not satisfied with the staples of life, such as roast beef, pork chops, bread and eggs, but evidently had a sweet tooth for he also confiscated a platter of home made candy. Moral—If your refrigerator is out side keep it locked.

SERIAL STORY STANTON WINS

Author of "The Game and the Candle," "The Flying Mercury," etc. Illustrations by Frederick Thorsbergh

At the beginning of great automobile races the mechanic of the Mercury...

CHAPTER X—(Continued). "Jes and I do not tire of our friends," she rebuked.

"What is the matter? What is twisted wrong, Miss Floyd?" She shook her head, smiling across her shoulders at him.

"Nothing—nothing but me. Only I feel disgustingly gloomy to-night; as if Jes and I were very far apart. Never mind, I wish you all good luck and victory for the race."

"What was that song you were singing on the first day I came here?" he asked irrelevantly.

"Off in the stilly night Ere slumber's chain hath bound me, Fond memory brings the light Of other days around me."

the trip to Indiana. No more orchids and laurel. He smiled in sardonic relief and went to open a window to the pungent October air.

CHAPTER XI. The Last Race. "Say, Floyd, got a spare tire extingisher in your camp?"

"Why, yes, Jack; but I haven't any time to fix your car now," came the sweet reply.

"One of the laughing mechanics ran forward, but paused as a tall figure advanced from the shadow of the stand."

"I am ready now. Get some warm things on, it is going to be chilly until the sun is out."

"It was not an emotional meeting, but both men were content. Stanton had felt the thrill of relief and pleasure upon seeing his mechanic which surprised him into recognition of how much uneasiness the incident of the night before had caused him."

"You will have to be kind to the tires," Floyd warned, as he complied with the directions. "We have only the ground. On the second time around, the Mercury struck an edged stone and lost a tire with a sharp report."

"Not yet. The Ruby Company telegrams that they shipped the order last week by express; the express carload on from Chicago two days ago and it must be here."

"The morning's work had begun. It was always a course race, the Cup event, and in many places the way over hastily prepared country roads. Here and there men were still at work, banking turns or smoothing the ground. On the second time around, the Mercury struck an edged stone and lost a tire with a sharp report. Stanton drew up by the roadside, and Floyd ran back to pitch the mischief-making rock into the fields.

"George and Palmer are out," he observed, returning. "They might come to grief on it, too. Besides, we ourselves might hit it again. I like a track race."

"Not yet. The Ruby Company telegrams that they shipped the order last week by express; the express carload on from Chicago two days ago and it must be here."

"The man-conscious age is when the boy seeks companions and he reads books, and the chances are that he will get hold of a bad book. Unless you get him a good book to take the place of the one that he has, he is more than likely to get a worse book."

When Edith Wynn Mattison first played "Everyman" at Princeton university, it was discovered that the stage of Alexander Hall, in which she appeared, had a mosaic floor, which made it impossible for the stage carpenter to cut a trap door beneath the grave into which Everyman descends at the end of the performance.

"That's all right, Sammy," said the old man. "Ye done wise to come right back here. This is the place to git what ye need. You go out in the truck garden behind the barn and will find a year's supply of pull wain' for ye right thar among them there weeds."

WHEN BOY NEEDS SYMPATHY

"Awkward Age" Time of Real Trouble That Average Youth Has to Pass Through.

Speaking of the troubles of an awkward boy, Dr. Edwin H. Hughes of De Paul university says in Mother's World:

"The boy is in a constant state of flitting moods. In the morning he believes, and believes tremendously, that his father is the finest man to be found anywhere, and in the evening he knows without a doubt that there never was a meaner man on the face of the earth than that same father."

"He may also need an appeal to his self-respect at this period. We do not have the one-hundredth part of the self-respect that we ought to have. And the boy at this time needs to have real tribute paid to his personality, so that he will feel that, after all, he is somebody in the world."

Collegiate Manners. When Edith Wynn Mattison first played "Everyman" at Princeton university, it was discovered that the stage of Alexander Hall, in which she appeared, had a mosaic floor, which made it impossible for the stage carpenter to cut a trap door beneath the grave into which Everyman descends at the end of the performance.

Plentiful Stock. The prodigal had returned and was trying to justify himself. "Of course I've been a failure," he said resentfully.

BOYS' HANDICRAFT

Author of "Handicraft for Handy Boys" and "The Boy Craftsman"

FOR THE SUMMER CAMP.

Perhaps you won't have a chance to go away from the city this summer, but that is no reason why you cannot camp out, just the same.

The suggestions shown in the illustrations should be found helpful in either the home camp, or a camp in the woods or at the lake.

A wall tent is probably the most commonly used form of tent, and one of these 8 feet by 10 feet in size can be purchased in most localities for about $8; but when a boy's spending money is limited this is a good deal for him to pay out for a single piece of equipment.

The upper portion of the tent may be supported at the ridge either on a ridge-pole, or on a rope stretched between two trees.

Fig. 4 shows a simple lean-to tent, with a front flap that may be raised to a horizontal position as a sun shield in the day time.

1,000 SETTLERS A DAY

WESTERN CANADA MAKING REMARKABLE PROGRESS.

Settlers from the United Kingdom and other countries of Europe landed in Winnipeg last week at the rate of one thousand a day.

The sturdy nations of Europe are all contributing to the rapid growth of Canada West. Two of the largest contingents reaching Winnipeg last week were from Germany and Scandinavia.

Numerous editorials record the sentiments, bordering on despair, of the Britons who see their towns and villages desolated by the desertion of favorite sons and daughters.

In addition to those from the old countries, the United States still keeps up in a strenuous manner, and is sending its thousands into that new country of the north.

Electricity and Plant Life. The theory has been advanced and backed up by experiments which are at least interesting, that pointed leaves standing up at the top of growing plants attract electricity from the atmosphere.

RASH SPREAD TO ARMS. 759 Reach Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.—"At first I noticed small eruptions on my face. The trouble began as a rash. It looked like red pimples. In a few days they spread to my arms and back. They itched and burned so badly that I scratched them and of course the result was blood and matter. The eruptions festered, broke, opened and dried up, leaving the skin dry and scaly. I spent many sleepless nights, my back, arms and face burning and itching; sleep was purely and simply out of the question. The trouble also caused disfigurement. My clothing irritated the breaking out."
