Memories of the Past Pierre S. Bennett Weds In and Around Plymouth

In This Paper Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

The addition to Mrs. Peck's house is nearly completed and a great improvement to the place.

Mrs. M. Conner and Will Conner and wife are spending a week at Whitmore Lake. They left Tuesday.

Providence seems to have been on the side of the Detroit ball club at several different times lately—it allowed it to rain, thus saving the Detroit club from getting defeated.

A bus load of Plymouthites while coming to camp meeting yesterday had the misfortune to break their conveyance and had to take a lumber wagon. Such is life.—Belleville Enterprise.

Mrs. Ed. Baker, of 64 Washington avenue, Detroit, visited relatives here last Friday, going home in the evening, and taking her granddaughter with her. Miss Nellie has been visiting here some time at Mrs. L. C. Hough's.

Farmers get your grinding done at the Phoenix Mills.

Ann Arbor is going to have street cars and try to be a city.

Our base ball boys did up the Marsh club on the fair grounds here last Saturday.

While on his trip homeward, Rev. G. H. Wallace spent a little time with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rally, in their new home at Singerslands, seven miles from Albany, N. Y. The village is quite small but pretty and destined at no late future to be the suburban home of many of Albany's wealthy citizens. A warm welcome was given and an interested inquiry made concerning Plymouth's welfare and the health and happiness of her citizens. The Rev. gentleman was laden with messages of good will and remembrances of everybody, irrespective of age, condition or color. Mr. and Mrs. R. have evidently a warm place in their hearts for Plymouth and her people, which we believe is fully reciprocated by the latter, who will always rejoice in their prosperity and happiness.

Rev. G. H. Wallace returned last week Thursday evening from his vacation trip to the East, having had a very pleasant time among old friends and relatives.

The Art entertainment at the M. E. church Tuesday evening was a decided success and heartily enjoyed by a large number of our citizens. The specimens of art were not only enjoyed but the singing, the recitations, etc. were pleasing and proved to be a large part of the enjoyment of the evening. The receipts were over twenty-two dollars.

A Proud Man

Is one who holds the lines over a spirited team. HARVELL'S CONDITION POWDER puts spirit into a horse that is run down and in poor condition. Put a little in the feed for a few days and note the improvement. The frame gradually fills out with firm flesh, the coat becomes smooth and glossy and the run down animal soon shows the vigor and spirit of a colt. Price 25c. Sold by J. W. Blickenstaff & Co. and Byers Pharmacy.—Advt.

Pierre S. Bennett of this village, and Miss Grace Bennett of Detroit, were quietly married at the home of the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Caroline Bennett on East Ann Arbor street, Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, Rev. Joseph Dutton performing the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Jessie Robinson, while the groom was attended by Mr. Fred Holloway. Mr. Bennett is the son of Harry C. Bennett and has lived in Plymouth all his life and is highly esteemed and very popular among the young people of the village. The bride is a most accomplished and charming young lady. The happy young couple left immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and other eastern points. Upon their return to Plymouth they will make their home in a new and elegantly furnished home on Union street. The Mail with a host of friends extends congratulations.

Brighton will have a gala day August 29. Saline claims to have the model creamery plant of the state of Michigan. It is reported that the cucumber crop in the vicinity of Brighton will be short this year.

The Chelsea Standard has just celebrated its forty-second birthday. It is one of the best papers that comes to our desk.

A big labor day matinee is scheduled at Wayne, Monday, Sept. 1st. There will be four events with liberal purses. Music will be furnished by the Wayne band.

The Belleville Driving club is the name of a new organization in that town. The association have leased a piece of land and are having a track surveyed.

A well known Northville business man put in a call for an Ypsilanti party Friday and after a long wait, got in his auto and drove over to that city and returned home to Northville again just as the operator was calling to tell him they had his Ypsi party for him.—Northville Record.

Two Wrecks in Railroad Yards

A rear end collision between two freight trains on the P. M. occurred here Sunday morning about 4:30. The trains came from the north and the first section stopped about a mile out from the Plymouth yards. Before a man could be sent back to warn the train following, it was coming around a short curve in the road at a 30-mile rate and crashed into the rear of the standing train. The engineer and fireman of the second section jumped, both escaping without injury. Fourteen cars were piled up in a heap less than a hundred feet square, some of them being reduced to nothing more than kindling wood. The engine was buried out of sight. All day Sunday the wreck furnished a sight for many people, and it was not until Monday noon, before trains could pass.

Another serious wreck occurred on the Pere Marquette about 3:30 o'clock Tuesday morning when a string of freight cars detached from the engine on the Grand Rapids division of the road crashed into a switch engine in the yards here. The engine was overturned, and engineer Geo. Kramer and Lawrence Hill, who were on the engine, escaped with their lives, although Kramer was quite badly bruised up and was scalded below the knees. Six cars were smashed up, several of them being loaded with live stock and a number of hogs and sheep were killed. Between twenty and twenty-five head of cattle are still at large.

Storm Does Much Damage

A barn on the farm of P. G. Gronowickie, two miles east of the village, was struck by lightning during the storm yesterday noon, and burned to the ground including all the season's crops, a new automobile and a livery horse owned by Harry C. Robinson, that had been placed in the barn for feeding. This is said to be the fourth barn lost in this manner by Mr. Gronowickie in recent years.

The home of Wm. Griffith in this village and the farm house of Ed. Cook were struck by lightning during the storm yesterday, but only slightly damaged.

THE BANDITS AND THE BURIED GOLD OF EL TEJON

By HARRY CARR

LD Joaquin Murrieta's buried gold is growing restless in its hiding place. One of the herders of El Tejon rancho came in pale and frightened the other night. He had seen a ball of light flickering and dancing along the plateau of the Banderillos. He said it floated along the road in front of him for a long time as though to lead him somewhere. Finally, it stopped by the side of the road; he hurried past and went home as fast as he could. Being a Gringo from Cincinnati, he thought it was a ghost.

Any Mexican vaquero would have recognized the sign. Such a light burns over buried treasure—somewhere else.

Had he followed the light, it would probably have led him to the buried loot of old Joaquin Murrieta, Three-Fingered Jack, Tiburcio Vasquez or some other one of the hundred bandits who infested the Tejon Pass and the Valley of the San Joaquin.

And sir, they were bandits. Dick Turpin! Fought! A wretched pliker! Dick Turpin and Claude Duval couldn't have got a job currying horses for Joaquin Murrieta. Don Joaquin was, without doubt, the most terrible, bloodthirsty and successful bandit who ever held up a stage.

He was chief of a band that sometimes numbered nearly a hundred daredevils, and the treasure that he collected must have been enormous.

An examination into the events of his picturesque career would clearly indicate that the stories of his buried gold are not mere vaquero myths. He must have left treasure in considerable quantities cached somewhere in the vicinity of the Tejon ranch—very likely in the Tejon Pass.

Murrieta is described as a very ordinary-looking young Mexican at the time he began his depredations. He sometimes went by the name of Carrillo and many suppose that to have been his real name.

He came up from Mexico, where he was born, at the time of the California gold excitement in 1849. With him came a beautiful young Spanish girl of a high-born family. Her name was Roseta Felix.

She and Joaquin settled in Stanislaus county and had begun washing the gravel for gold when the tragedy occurred that turned Murrieta into the cruellest outlaw the world has known.

At that time there were all manner of race riots through California as a result of the "anti-foreign" mining laws that had been passed. During one of these riots, Murrieta and his bride were driven out of the gold diggings with insult and indignity. Shortly thereafter, Joaquin, while riding a horse borrowed from his half brother, was arrested and whipped as a horse thief.

With black murder in his heart he "took the road," and no one knows how many innocent lives were sacrificed to wipe out the wrong done this Mexican peon when lashed to a tree at Murphy's Diggings in Calaveras county that day when they took him from the borrowed horse.

On account of the injustice of the anti-foreign legislation, there were hundreds of young Mexicans ripe for Joaquin's picking and he soon collected a desperate band of cut-throats. Chief among them were Manuel Garcia, known as Three-Fingered Jack on account of a mutilated hand which had been wounded in the Mexican war; Reyes Felix, a brother of his bride; Claudio, Joaquin Valenzuela and Pedro Gonzales.

Three-Fingered Jack was a monster of vice and manual cruelty. He seemed to take a special delight in murdering Chinese. On one occasion he rounded up six Chinamen on the road, tied their queues together and cut their throats one at a time—laughing at the terrified yells of the living as the dying men struggled in their blood.

For about four years Murrieta's band ravaged central California. Their main field of operations was through the San Joaquin valley. The old-timers say that the stage that ran from Los Angeles to Stockton was held up so many times in the vicinity of Bakersfield that it became an ordinary and commonplace event. No road was safe and every traveler rode at the peril of his life. The solitary horseman, rounding a clump of chaparral, was quite likely to hear the sing of a riata through the air and feel the rope settling around his shoulders with a jerk that dragged him from the saddle. The band of robbers that worked for Murrieta were unique in that the riata was their chief weapon—the riata and the bowie knife. Many of Murrieta's victims were dragged from the saddle and had their throats cut.

There was seldom any parley with the victims nor any mercy shown. With Murrieta it was not only a quest of treasure but a merciless war of revenge against the Gringo.

On one occasion Murrieta and his men held up a schooner on the river near Stockton and, murdering the crew, got away with $20,000.

In the firm discipline that he maintained over his gang of cut-throats, Joaquin was comparable to Robin Hood. Also like Robin Hood, all sorts of stories of his impudent daring and his whimsical kindnesses are told. Some of the stories, in fact, are very like the legends of Sherwood forest and the men in the Lincoln green.

Murrieta took all sorts of reckless chances. On one occasion one of his bandits was on trial in a San Jose court. Murrieta had, shortly before, waylaid and murdered a gentleman named Samuel Harrington. Taking Harrington's papers, Joaquin went into court, pretended to be Harrington, gave false testimony and secured the acquittal of his pal.

Another time, in Sacramento, a crowd stood looking at a poster which offered $5,000 for the capture of Murrieta. A Mexican pushed his way through the crowd and wrote on the bottom of the placard: "I will give $10,000 myself—Joaquin Murrieta." Jumped on a horse and escaped. As might be imagined, the horrors of Murrieta's crimes roused a great hue and cry throughout California. Hunted like wild animals, Murrieta and his followers selected a dark canyon near the mouth of Tejon Pass for their headquarters and divided into three bands.

The country was becoming too dangerous for him to continue his work in. Claudio had been killed in a desperate battle at San Luis Obispo. Felix, Joaquin's brother-in-law, had been hanged in Los Angeles. Pedro Gonzales had been shot by an officer near Camulos to prevent his rescue from arrest by the bandits. The Tejon Indians, becoming enraged at some depredation that concerned them, had swooped down upon the bandits, stole their horses and whipped some of the gang with lashes.

Although he wreaked a horrible revenge against those who tried to capture him, he never made any attempt to punish these Indians who took even the clothes from the gang.

General Bean of San Gabriel, who tried to organize a movement against Murrieta, was waylaid on the road and murdered. A campaign was started against the bandits in the town of Saw Mill Flat and Murrieta had the water poisoned.

But finally, Murrieta's Nemesis appeared. He was a Texas frontiersman, named Harry Love, who had come to Los Angeles to live. He organized a company of rangers from among the daring horsemen of Los Angeles and went on a systematic hunt for outlaws.

After various adventures and narrow escapes on both sides, the end came early one Sunday morning, July 25, 1853. Love and two or three companions were riding ahead of the mounted rangers on the flats just west of Tulare lake in the San Joaquin valley. They came upon a small company of Mexicans eating breakfast around a camp fire.

Love asked them what they were doing and one of them replied that they were on their way to Los Angeles. He asked a further question of one of the peons; whereupon a Mexican on the other side of the fire spoke up haughtily, saying: "I am the leader of this band; say what you have to say to me."

"I will speak to whomever I please," retorted Love. Noticing that the Mexican had risen and was sidling over toward a saddle that lay on the ground, Captain Love covered him with a revolver and told him to stand still, for there were revolvers on the saddle.

While they were standing there, a ranger who knew Murrieta by sight came up. The recognition was mutual. Joaquin suddenly yelled for his men to escape as best they could. Leaping on a horse without saddle or bridle, Murrieta went heading over a bank and down into a ravine, landing in a tumbled heap at the bottom. Neither his horse nor himself was hurt, however. Scrambling to their feet, they started off at a dead run down the canyon. One of the rangers had followed them. His horse had fallen also. Without attempting to remount, he took careful aim and shot Murrieta's horse as it ran.

The outlaw leaped from the falling horse and continued his retreat on foot. By this time half a dozen rangers were following him. Three times, as they fired, he was seen to hesitate and reel; then run on again. One last shot and he stopped.

Turning, he raised his hand and said: "Don't shoot any more; the work is done." He stood for a minute with weakening limbs; then he sank slowly to his right side, his head upon his arm. Wicked old Joaquin Murrieta was no more. Another pursuing party overtook and killed Three-Fingered Jack. One of the bandits escaped and drowned himself in the San Joaquin river. Another was murdered by Mexicans who were afraid he might reveal to the authorities their connection with the band.

Murrieta's head was cut off and, until the San Francisco earthquake, was on exhibition in a museum in San Francisco.

At the time of his death Don Joaquin was preparing his grandest coup. He intended to collect all his booty and march his men openly, like an army, into Mexico. The old-timers assert that he had his loot cached in the Tejon for this "get-away" and that it is still there.

Ismael Ramirez says that he spent three months looking for the buried gold. One rainy night he saw the mystic light flickering underneath an old oak tree back of the ruins of Fort Tejon. He carefully noted the location, intending to dig at the indicated spot the next morning. When he went there at dawn, however, he found that a rancher had also seen the light. Ramirez found an enormous hole and a great iron kettle from which the rancher had taken $50,000 in gold.

According to all reports the light has begun to dance and flicker again around the Tejon, ready to guide some one to the uneasy gold of the arch cut-throat and bandit, Joaquin Murrieta.

NOT HARD TO MAKE A GUESS

Asylum Superintendent Does Not Reveal Name of Last Relative to Visit Lunatic, but We Know It.

The lunatics tore up and down the white beach; they howled and leaped in the blue sea, quite like sane people.

"They enjoy the summer outing at our shore branch," the superintendent said. "It does 'em good, poor dubs!"

"It's a funny thing about a lunatic's relatives. There are reliable statistics about the way a lunatic's relatives stand by him.

"The relative who stands by a lunatic least, who stops visiting him in the asylum first of all, is a brother. The next relative to drop off is a wife. That sounds hard, but it's true. Don't count on your wife if you are going to become a lunatic. Next, husbands drop off. A little truer than wives husbands are, but only a little. Next fathers abandon the lunatic. Next sisters.

"One relative never abandons him till she dies, or he dies, she comes regularly on visiting day, bringing underwear and ties, cakes and tobacco—provided, of course, that the lunatic's a male. If it's a female this relative is equally faithful. And even though, as sometimes happens, the poor, mad creature hates her, curses her, tries to strike her when she visits him, she still remains faithful. When her visits cease they cease for only one reason—death.

"Nor do I need to tell you which relative this one is."

NO POSSIBILITY OF DOUBT

Why Western Bishop was Convinced of the Ancient Lineage of His Eastern Entertainers.

A western bishop once attended a general convention in the east and was entertained by a New England family of long and honorable, if not lovable, lineage. They made no secret of a time-won superiority over any one from the new and crude west, and cited their Pilgrim ancestors constantly. The bishop was amazed to bear this in Christian humility and forbearance, and did. But on his return home, he recounted his experiences to the wife; and she, good soul, spoke her mind as it is the privilege of her kind to do, even where mere man must be silent.

"I don't believe that their family is such an old one," she remarked.

"Are you sure that their ancestors were Pilgrims?"

"I am certain, my dear," answered the bishop. "This may seem to be exaggeration, but at times you could positively detect the fragrance of the 'Mayflower.'"—New York Evening Post.

PATENTS FUNDS FOR FIGHTING PLAGUE

State Legislatures in 1913 Made Generous Appropriations to Check the Spread of Tuberculosis.

Out of 41 state legislatures in session during the season of 1913, laws dealing with tuberculosis were enacted in 28 states, while in 34 states consideration was given to bills dealing with the prevention of this disease. This is a summary of the legislative campaign for 1913, issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis today.

Appropriations to the amount of over $5,000,000 have been set aside for the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis by the various state legislatures in session this year. Most of this money is for the maintenance of state sanatoria. There are at the present time 39 such institutions in 31 different states, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, each having more than one sanatorium. Delaware is the only state which has made provision for a state sanatorium for tuberculosis patients. In addition to the amounts appropriated by the various state governments, congress will be obliged to set aside nearly $1,000,000 for the maintenance of the United States public health, the army and the navy sanatoria, and the tuberculosis hospital of the District of Columbia.

Not for Long.

POTENTATES AMUSE LONDON

When a foreign potentate or royalty of minor rank visits London for the first time, a clerk from the foreign office is usually detailed by the government to "show him round," or, in official language, to act as the potentate's "visiting attaché."

I have acted on several occasions officially as guide, counselor, and friend to a number of minor foreign royal personages, and when doing so have had some rather amusing experiences.

I acted as attaché to Prince Lidi Eyassau, of the Abyssinian royal family, when he came to London some years ago. He was rather an awkward sort of person to have to take charge of. He had a habit when he went into a shop of picking up things to look at, and if they did not take his fancy, of dropping them to the ground in the most lordly and disdainful manner.

On one occasion we went into a dealer's shop in Bond street, where he took up an old Dresden vase and, after looking at it critically for a few minutes, threw it to the ground. I made a frantic but unavailing effort to catch it. The prince had subsequently to pay £300 to the dealer for the vase.

Another gentleman I had the honor of escorting about London for a couple of weeks was the Sultan of Oran. I went with him to a dinner party one night given at one of the embassies. All went well until the end of the dinner, when the ambassador and his wife rose from the table. The chief guest then suddenly hit the table a resounding blow with his fist, and shouted out something in his native tongue, while his eyes appeared to blaze with anger as he glared first at the host and hostess and then at their guests. So one seemed to know quite what to do.

Then, in a low undertone, the sultan explained to me in French he was endeavoring to thank his host for his hospitality, and the incident ended happily.

Occasionally minor foreign potentates who come here neglect to make proper arrangements about having money advised to them from their native country to London, and, as a result, find themselves in considerable financial embarrassments when they get here.

Some years ago a prince of the reigning family of a minor European state arrived in London for a short visit without a penny.

The attaché, however, who was commissioned to look after him, brought a pawnbroker to the hotel where the prince was staying, who advanced £1,000 on the prince's jewels, which lasted the prince until he obtained money from his own country, fortunately only a few days later.

One of the most amusing incidents I remember in connection with my experiences as a visiting attaché was when I took the then crown prince of Siam to a great society bazaar. The prince evidently did not understand, though I tried to explain to him, that the ladies selling at the bazaar were persons of high rank.

A few minutes after he entered the bazaar several great ladies approached him, asking him to buy some of their wares. One of these was a duchess. "Tell these women to kneel when they address me," he said to me in broken French. The ladies, who understood him, promptly did so, and succeeded in taking about £50 off the prince before they rose. Nothing on earth could, however, convince the crown prince of the high rank of the saleswomen.

The Easy Summer Meal

Has Grape-Nuts as its foundation.

Ideal these hot days because Grape-Nuts food requires no cooking, and is at the same time a perfectly balanced food.

Try a hot weather breakfast of

Fresh fruit,
Grape-Nuts and cream,
A soft-boiled egg or two,
Slice of crisp toast,
Cup of Instant Postum in place of coffee.

Such a meal starts the day right, keeps the blood cool and the body and brain well nourished.

Compare the cool, contented Grape-Nuts-fed man or woman with your meat-fed neighbor who is sweltering and miserable.

Grape-Nuts is fully cooked at the factory—ready to serve from the package. The cooking is done on scientific principles, so that the starch of the grain is transformed and ready for quick digestion.

HE WAS A TRUE MAN

What Eastern Miner Learned When He Made Pilgrimage to Old Home.

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE. "We are looking for a good candidate for mayor, and we're come to you."

The speaker was one of a group of a dozen husky miners, rough, red shirted, lacking all the formality of the average "Committee," but representing not only the brawn but the brains and enterprise of Lucky Gulch. Ransome Jordan's eye glowed for a moment, he threw back his head in his characteristic bluff and independent way. Pride and pleasure showed for a fleeting moment in his handsome well bearded face. Then it faded, slowly, steadily, until those of the men who viewed him became as grave as his own from some innate sympathetic sense.

"Boys," he said, and his full clear voice was broken from some intense emotion. "I thank you, but I cannot accept."

"See here, Ransome Jordan!" cried Big Ben, leader of the crowd, the giant irresistible champion of a man when he was his friend, "you'll run. There isn't a man in the Gulch who doesn't want you."

"Ben!" interrupted Jordan in a tone of unutterable pathos. "I can't do it. There is a reason. Next time maybe, but not until—"

"Until what?" challenged Big Ben stormily. "Until—later," faltered Jordan. "Don't press me, boys. It's an honor that fills my soul with pride and gratitude. Pass it up till next year. Then—maybe."

That was the way that Ransome Jordan turned down what his friends called the chance of his life. The committee retired, less worked up as Big Ben expressed it than uneasy. There was a reason, Jordan had told them. He held his secret and his loyal friends respected it.

"Ransome, dear, why?" were the words that greeted him as the wife who had overheard all met him at the doorway, and that was the hardest part of it all.

She was a little dark woman, the daughter of an old prospector who had picked up Jordan in the old days when he was sick and poor. It was Nance Fullwell who had nursed Jordan back to health. It was she who had staked him with a claim that panned out big, and married him after she had turned him from his old reckless ways.

Now those clear searching eyes of hers challenged his soul. His love, his gratitude, his loyalty spoke in his fervent returning glance.

"Don't ask, Nance!" he pleaded. "See here, it is you who made me what I am. The boys have helped, I don't know why."

"Who could help it!" gently murmured Nance, stroking his great brown head caressingly.

"Now they want me to be mayor. In these new days of progress, that means something. It means schools, churches, good roads, better citizens instead of saloons, gambling houses, road bandits and roustabouts. A man of clear record, who will make the district proud of him, deserves the office."

"Is there a better one than you?" cried Nance, her eyes sparkling with pride. "Is there a man who has made Lucky Gulch clean and respectable as you have done? What is it, Ransome—what is troubling you?"

"It is—no, I can't tell even you!" declared Jordan. "At least not now—let me see, do you trust me?" "To the death—and after!"

"If I go away—away to—to pay a debt, to clear the books, to take my medicine like a man so that when I come back and can look every man in the face and say honestly 'I owe the world nothing, what will you say?'"

Nance gave her husband one look of ineffable love and faith. Then she stood back with set lips and steady eyes.

"Ransome," she said resolutely, "how soon shall I help you pack up for your journey?"

And thus began the pilgrimage of Ransome Jordan. It was no brief one: over the ranges, past the prairies, the great lakes, the eastern ranges, and one evening the train to Easton, a little New England town, halted to let the pilgrim arrive.

This was his Mecca—perhaps his Gethsemane, he knew not, but was study for the outcome, be it what it might. Dusk was falling. In a certain furtive way Ransome Jordan strolled through his native town, and every step he advanced seemed accompanied by dim hovering wraiths of the past.

Several times he passed under the red lamp of a police station. Finally he entered the place, asked for the officer in charge, and was shown into the captain's private office. The official glanced admiringly at the bronzed stalwart specimen of humanity.

"I am from the west," stated Jordan without ceremony. "I have come to give myself up as a fugitive from justice."

The police captain regarded his visitor with curious expectation. "My name is Ransome Jordan. Did you ever hear it before?"

A strange smile crossed the face of the official. "Why, yes"—he began, but Jordan went on with his story!

"I was a wild wilful fellow here years ago, and trained with a wilder crowd. One night in a drunken brawl a friend named Prescott insulted and attacked me. I resented him with a knife thrust. I heard later he died. It was self defense, but I have come back to clean the slate, whatever the law may say."

"I have heard of you!" cried the official, arising and wringing the hand of Jordan with strange fervor. "Come this way."

He led his visitor into an adjoining court room. He pointed at a large oil portrait. "William Prescott still lives. He is judge of this court, and after that night you refer to become a reformed man."

"Thank heaven!" murmured Jordan in a great aspiration of joy and relief. "Do you recall nothing further of that night?" asked the official, a queer expression on his lips.

"Little but fight, despair. My brain was crazed with the drink and the horror of my deed. I recall a fire, and plunging into its exciting whirl, hoping fate would blot me out."

"Again—come, with me," invited the official. He led the way to the street and to the outskirts of the town where a large building stood.

"The fire you speak of," he said, "destroyed the old structure of the Dorothea Sisterhood. That night a brave man by means of a plank spanning two roofs saved every soul in the building from death. You never heard of it? Strange! See, and Jordan's guide pointed to a neat column surrounded by an iron fence, and bearing a broad metal plate plainly visible in the white moonlight.

"I will read the inscription," said the official. "In grateful memory of 'Ransome Jordan, Hero, who lost his life after saving fourteen imperiled women. He was a true man!'"

"And that was me, gasped the petrified Jordan. "That was you," responded the official, reverently lifting his cap. "Held in loving memory, because you disappeared amid the flames and it was supposed you had perished."

So the pilgrimage ended, but its echoes, now made public, reached Lucky Gulch ahead of Jordan's return. And when he appeared, a cheering deputation of welcoming friends knew he would now accept a rightful honor.

A patient loving little woman clasped her arms around his neck as he stepped from the train. "Oh, my love! my hero!" she sobbed—"a man among men, and mine, all mine!"

KEPT LIVING BY MAGNETISM

French Physician Makes Public Assertion of Remarkable Success of Experiments.

Dr. Henry Durville of Paris, whose feats of mummification and preservation of animal and vegetable bodies by the magnetism that passes from his hands are attested by well-known physicians, now asserts that by similar passes he has been able to extend in an extraordinary way the results obtained by Dr. Carrel in preserving life in the detached parts of living organisms.

According to Dr. Durville, he has succeeded in keeping a frog's heart, immersed in a seven-tenths of 1 per cent. solution of salt water, beating for twenty-four hours and more by "magnetizing" it with passes from time to time. In this way, he says, he also has succeeded in making the hinder parts of a frog respond to an electric current fifteen days after killing the animal, three days being the extreme limit under normal circumstances.

He further declares he tested his theory with two frogs' hearts. One of these which had ceased to beat he put in a magnetized serum; the other, still beating, was immersed in an ordinary serum. At the end of several days the magnetized heart began to beat and continued to beat at the contact of an electric current, while the other was completely dead.

Dr. Durville began his experiments with a study of the effect of magnetism on microbes, and says he is able to stuperly or even kill cholera germs. He says also that he has completely mummified a human hand by passes.

One-Sided Deal. "What are you and your wife always quarreling for? When you married each other, it was with the understanding that you were taking the step for better or worse, wasn't it?"

"Yes, and that's the trouble. My wife keeps complaining that ever since she's been getting the short end of the transaction."

Want Changeable Dresses! At the recent International Congress of Applied Chemistry in London one of the most celebrated lecturers, Giacomo Ciamician, predicted that women of the future will not be contented with a dress which remains constantly of one color, but will demand colors that change in harmony with their surroundings.

Thus the color of the apparel may be changed without changing the dress. Passing from darkness to light the color would brighten, thus conforming automatically to the environment—the last word in fashion for the future.

This prediction will come true as soon as chemists learn to understand better what are called "phototropic colors," or colors that change with the intensity of the light upon them. In men's wear this might mean that the light-colored suit of the bright summer day would be transformed into a dark suit at night.

Strange to Say. "Here is a unique novel by a British author." "What makes it unique?" "An American girl is introduced in the story and she speaks very fair English."

Getting Close to Nature. "This is an interesting moving picture of frog culture." "Yes, and if it were a talking moving picture, we might even hear the frog's creak."

Not Disorderly. "So you have been to the art exhibit?" "Yes, and I found several Whistlers there." "You don't say! Why don't a guard put them out?"—Birmingham Age Herald.

Directs Expenditures. "Who's that impressive-looking woman over yonder?" "That's Mrs. Packum. She's a remarkably strong-minded woman, and they do say that she commands a very large salary."

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the name signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines. It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and setting off all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Young Men Took Warning. "Charles," said a sharp voiced woman to her husband in a railway car, "do you know that you and I once had a romance in a railway car?" "Never heard of it," replied Charles, in a subdued tone.

"I thought you hadn't, but don't you remember it was that pair of slippers I presented to you the Christmas before we were married that led to our union? You remember how nicely they fitted, don't you? Well, Charles, one day when we were going to a picnic you had your feet up on a seat, and when you weren't looking I took your measure. But for that pair of slippers I don't believe we'd ever been married."

Important Measures Made Law. Among the notable advances in the legislative enactments of this year, are the tuberculosis registration law of Colorado; laws providing for subsidies to local hospitals in Minnesota, and Wisconsin, an act providing for the establishment of county hospitals in Indiana, and the establishment of state bureaus for the prevention of tuberculosis in Ohio and California.

"Well, I assure you, gentlemen," said Brown, "if I hadn't seen it myself I shouldn't have believed it." "Ia—h—well," said one of the two doubtful ones, "you must remember old man, that we didn't see it."

How He Would Have Them. How will you have your eggs cooked?" asked the waiter. "Make any difference in the cost of 'em?" inquired the cautious customer with the brimless hat and the ragged beard. "No."

"Then cook them on the top of a slice of ham," said the customer, greatly relieved.

Post Toasties

Are mighty handy to have in the house as well as mighty good to eat direct from the package with cream. Besides being the most delicious ready cooked cereal food made of corn these crisp, crinkly flakes serve many another useful purpose in home cooking. Rolled into crumbs and used as an outer dressing for breaded veal, lamb, chicken, pork or ham; they give a zest to the 'fry' that makes the home folks ask for more. Softened with milk and used with usual spicing and fixing as an inside dressing for baked fish or fowl they impart a delicate flavor to the finished dish, reminding of the chestnut fillings that cast a halo around the days of old-time cooking. Johnston Corn Binder. When we say the Johnston Corn Binder is without a peer, we say it because every farmer that has ever used a Johnston Corn Binder testifies to its merit. The one-piece main frame is of steel and exceptionally wide. The pole is attached inside the wheel and the elevator on one side and the operator on the other. The binder attachment is therefore in direct line of draft. The machine is always perfectly balanced and has absolutely no side draft. There is no danger of the machine tipping on side hills. A forty-inch drive wheel of the suspension pattern is used. Angle steel calks are placed at right angles the same as on the main wheel of the grain binder. Dust-proof roller bearings on the hub reduce wear and draft. The cutting apparatus consists of two stationary knives, and a sliding knife which cuts the same as a sickle. The method of cutting is very similar to that of cutting the corn by hand with a sickle. The stalks are cut at just the moment when bent and held in the taut position as when cut by hand. This feature of the cutting apparatus enables the Johnston to cut large, tough corn as easily as short and tender corn. No clogging or complex cutting attachments to give you trouble. The gathering chains with stationary fingers pick up the row knocked down in opening the field. They also handle tangled corn perfectly. Every Johnston Corn Binder is equipped with another exclusive feature that are known as automatic gauges. The corn is carried to the binding attachment by conveyor chains with folding fingers. Just before the blades pass around the bundle, these automatic chains release the fingers, which pass on and the stalks are thrown away from the machine. This feature does away with all packers, and entirely does away with the knocking off of the ears than any other binder. The binder attachment can be adjusted to bind from eighteen inches to thirty-two inches from the butts. Can bind above or below the ears. For very short corn, the binder frame extension is removed and knotted lowered. The stalk channel has a six-inch adjustment. Every lever is within easy reach of the operator. The machine is five feet, eleven inches wide, and will easily pass through any ordinary farm gate way. Sold by E. H. Langworthy, The Implement Dealer and Auctioneer, WAYNE, MICH. ## This Store has a pure food law of its own

It applies to everything, and everything must live up to the provisions of this law. You might think that some things (Canned Goods, for instance) would have to be taken on trust, but an observing grocer soon learns where each brand of these goods belongs, no matter what the labels may say, and acts accordingly.

The moral of all this is that this might be a good place to come when you want pure food eatables.

GREAT FUNERAL FOR SLAIN MINERS

THOUSANDS OF STRIKERS IN MARCH PROCESSION CARRYING FLAGS.

TWO DEPUTIES UNDER ARREST FOR MURDER.

Judge Murphy Said to Agree With Prosecution Lucas That Killing Was Illegal and Unwarranted.

The most largely attended funeral ever held in Houghton county was that Sunday afternoon of Diaz Tapan and Steven Rudrich, the Croatian miners killed Thursday night in the battle between copper mine strikers and deputy sheriffs.

It is estimated that 5,000 men, women and children participated in the funeral parade from Painesdale to Lakeview, Calumet. The funeral started at Painesdale at 11 o'clock. A special copper range train took the bodies to Calumet. The train traversed practically the entire strike district. Of course, most of those in attendance were fellow strikers.

At the palestra, Calumet, a meeting was held; then the bodies were escorted to the Croatian Catholic church, where funeral service was conducted by Rev. Fr. Medin.

Besides many American flags, the marchers carried cardboard banners, crudely inscribed with elementary sentiments. "Give back our lives, O thugs," was one, underneath which was drawn a rude hand holding a smoking revolver. "The Lord said take not what you cannot give," was another.

Harry James and Edwin Polkinghorne, the two local deputies who engaged in the fight at Seeberville, have been arrested on a charge of murder. Deputies Raleigh, Cooper, Groff and Davis, of the Waddell forces, have not as yet been located. They reside outside the state.

The county board of supervisors, it was announced, might endeavor to hire a special prosecutor to handle the case against the deputies who took part in the fatal fight, on the ground that Prosecutor Lucas, son of a miner, is prejudiced in the case.

Attorney Lucas will resist any attempt to hire a special prosecutor. Lucas charges that the deputies are arresting men who do no more than "make faces," and that he has and will continue to order the discharge of the strikers against whom there is insufficient evidence.

"I want to find out right now," he declared, "whether the law is to govern legal activities in connection with this strike or whether copper company influence is going to stack the cards from Lake Superior to Lansing against the government."

Another element has entered into the case, as it is said the deputies had no warrant for the man they sought to arrest, and no complaint had been made before a court. The men, it is said, acted on the order of an assistant mine manager who told them to arrest one miner, Stimach, who was said by the deputies to have intimidated non-union men. Prosecutor Lucas declares that the attempted arrest was thus illegal and that any self defense plea by the deputies is of no value.

Judge Alfred J. Murphy, of Detroit, representing Gov. Ferris, will not discuss the question. It is known that he holds the same view and records the Painesdale cases as clear murder.

To Lay Tracks in Cornuna.

The common council of Cornuna, granted a new franchise to the Michigan United Traction Co. for service in that city, subject to the vote of the citizens at a special election to be held September 2. Several traction officials were present at the meeting and stated that the work of construction will begin in about four months if the franchise is ratified. These rails will replace the ones taken up by the company following a difference with the council several weeks ago.

Insane Man Kills Child.

His mind unblinded by financial worries, Frank S. Burgess, of Grayling, attacked his housekeeper, Mrs. Marvin House, and her 3-year-old daughter as they lay in bed in his home and then ended his own life with a bullet from a high power rifle. The child died the following morning from a crash across the throat inflicted with a razor. The mother escaped with a few gashes across the face, throat and shoulders, none of which will prove fatal, physicians say.

The annual reunion of the Twenty-second Michigan infantry, Veterans of the Civil war, will be held at Richmond, August 27-28.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 Free Methodists, housed in approximately 800 tents, are on the camp grounds at Manton, for the annual conference of the organization, with Bishop Prince presiding.

The City Clerks' association of Michigan elected the following officers: Dean Thompson, Ludington, president; C. L. Grosbeck, Pontiac, first vice president; H. S. Palm, Escanaba, second vice president; W. R. Wines, Albion, secretary-treasurer. Detroit was chosen as the 1914 convention city.

The finance committee and the common council, of Saginaw, have adopted resolutions whereby the city will buy Battery park at the river end of James avenue. The purchase price is $6,000. The park is a block from the auditorium and directly in front of the armory of the state militia and naval reserve.

CANADA TO SEND THAW BACK TO U.S.

MADMAN CAPTURED AT COAST-COOK MUST RETURN TO THIS COUNTRY.

BIG LEGAL BATTLE WILL FOLLOW DECISION.

Dominion Has Law for Deporting Undesirables Who Have Been Convicted in Other Countries for Crime or Insanity.

The Canadian government will order the deportation of Harry K. Thaw lunatic-slayer, who was arrested at Coaticook, Quebec, Thaw will resist any action sending him back to the United States with all the power that is his family's wealth is able to command.

The most sensational international legal fight ever waged is expected as a result of developments that have come since Thaw was taken into custody shortly after crossing the border line between the United States and the Dominion.

Both sides have already mapped out their plans. The Canadian government is acting on the law providing that any person who enters Canada within five years of his incarceration in a penitentiary or asylum may be sent back as an "undesirable."

Thaw, who was taken from Coaticook to Sherbrooke, Que., has already retained Solicitor W. L. Shurtleff, one of the best known lawyers in eastern Canada. Shurtleff has vast experience in tangled cases presenting great difficulty to counsel and has usually been on the winning side.

Despite Thaw's confident assertion when he was arrested that he "had done nothing for which he could be arrested," the Dominion's immigration department went ahead with its plans as if the legal formalities necessary for the return of Thaw would be soon accomplished.

Doctors Man By Wireless.

The steamer Maheno was proceeding from Sydney to New Zealand when a wireless message asking whether there was a doctor on board was received from the steamer Wimmera, going in the opposite direction. On being told that there was a doctor among the passengers the Wimmera sent a wireless message saying that the captain was ill and giving details of the symptoms. The doctor made up a prescription which was sent by wireless to the Wimmera.

May Cost Eastman Large Sum.

Thomas W. Stephens, president of the Anso company, of Binghamton, which controls the Goodwin Film & Camera company, said that as a result of the decision by District Judge Hazel in the United States court in Buffalo, declaring the Eastman Kodak company infringers on the Hannibal Goodwin Film patent controlled by the Anso company, the Eastman company will be compelled to account for the profits on films amounting to between $3,000,000 and $25,000,000 made in the last 21 years.

Workmen Sues Pere Marquette.

Thomas Kearney, of Reed-City, has instituted suit in the circuit court at Grand Rapids against the Pere Marquette railroad, asking $300,000 damages for injuries received while an employe of the company. He alleges great injury to his sight and attributes the cause to defective tools with which he said he was working when the accident occurred in March, 1912. He seeks action against the railroad and not through the body of receivers, as he suffered his injuries before the receivership was ordered.

Danish College Is Re-opened.

Leading Danish educators in the United States were present at the opening of the Danish college, one mile south of Grand, after the institution had been closed for 12 years. About 50 students were enrolled and a large number is looked for later in the fall. The buildings owned by the old Danish high school, maintained by the Grant Danish society, have been remodelled and a steam heating plant installed, and these will serve for the present for the college buildings.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

JOHN MITCHELL FINDS MICHIGAN COMPENSATION LAW ONE OF THE BEST.

GETTYSBURG COMMISSIONERS COMPLETE WORK.

Land Commissioner Carton Surprises Chief Clerk Havens By Advancing Him to Post of Deputy Land Commissioner.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

It is little more than eleven months since the employer's liability and workmen's compensation law went into effect in Michigan but the protection that it has afforded the employe as well as the employer, who is no longer required to stand excessive verdicts, causes officials of this state and representatives from other states to declare it one of the best statutes of its kind in the country.

John Mitchell, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and Cyrus W. Phillips, chairman of the National Civic Federation who inspected the workings of the Industrial accident law were highly pleased with its success in this state and declared the Michigan statute to be one of the best in the country.

At the present time there are 2,336 employers operating under the law and 451,287 employes are listed under the act. The total number of accidents reported during the past year is 16,537. The report shows that 307 workmen were injured, while the remainder of the accidents happened to men. During the eleven months that the law has been in operation 375 fatal accidents have occurred.

The employes operating under the act are classified as to division of industry as follows: manufacturing 24,314; transportation 42,650; public utilities 5,464; realty management 6,076; mining 40,901; merchandising 40,406; publishing 7,907; construction 61,615.

The employers are classified as to the method of carrying risks as follows: liability insurance 8,290; state insurance 305; own risk 566; mutual insurance 185.

Secretary Edwin R. Havens of the Michigan Gettysburg commission has completed his report of the commission's work.

Owing to the fact that the last legislature appropriated but $20,000 and the expenses of the commission together with the cost of transporting the veterans already amount to $20,981.13, it will be necessary for the next legislature to make up the deficit.

The amounts certified to the auditor general as being due the railroads are as follows: Lake Shore, $2,163.34; Ann Arbor, $1,056.37; Michigan Central, $7,176; Grand Rapids & Indiana, $3,369.12; Pere Marquette, $6,618.

Since it will be necessary for the next legislature to make an additional appropriation to meet the deficit the commission recommends that the appropriation be sufficiently large to provide for the payment of the railroad fares of all veterans who were actual survivors of the battle of Gettysburg.

"The number who applied for the benefits provided for the act so far exceeded the expectations of every one that it is sometimes a matter of question as to the validity of the claims," said Secretary Havens. "We can only say that the applications were carefully prepared by the commission, with the records available, and all whose records were not perfectly clear were rejected."

Twenty-five years of faithful service to the state by Edwin R. Havens, chief clerk of the land department, resulted in his appointment as deputy land commissioner.

Land Commissioner A. C. Carton called Havens to his office and informed him that his services as chief clerk would no longer be needed. Havens was greatly surprised and was about to ask the reason for his dismissal from the state's service when Commissioner Carton presented him credentials making him deputy of the department at an increased salary.

The opportunity for the advancement of Havens when Deputy Land Commissioner Glen R. Musshaw of Grand Rapids resigned to become deputy commissioner of immigration and supervisor of the field division of the public domain commission. Several years ago Musshaw came to the department as trespass agent and has worked his way up to one of the best places in the department.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Muskegon—Taking advantage of the misfortune of autoists on a malle of sand road that has been paved previous to repairing, several farmers are said to be reaping a nice harvest by hauling machines out of the sand at from $2 to $5 a haul.

The road is north of Dalton and is traveled extensively. No warnings are placed and the unsuspecting autoist drives into the sand in "stuck" in a double sense. He usually sees a farmer sitting on the fence near the scene. After some bargaining the farmer obtains a team and the machine is hauled out. It is stated that if signs were posted automobile men would be able to drive around the bad place. The matter has been reported to the local automobile club.

Battle Creek, Aug. 16.—"Auto bandits" of Chicago, who used the gasoline conveyance to move jewelry, have been outclassed by two enterprising crooks in this city, who use an auto to steal cows. One bull is missing from the farm of Henry Coe, four miles north of here, and only the tracks made by an auto across the field and barnyard give the local authorities any clue. Another cow on the adjoining farm of Winton Adams, was found with a broken leg and the same auto tracks were seen there. Deputy sheriffs believe that in trying to load the one owned by Adams, they accidentally broke her leg.

Potosky.—Although local officials will give no information on the subject, reports here, on good authority, are to the effect that the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad has placed an order with the General Electric company for five gasoline motor cars, similar to the one which is being tried out successfully on the Pere Marquette between Potosky and Charlevoix. It is known that officials of the road have long been considering the best way to replace the present resort suburban equipment between Potosky, Bay View, Harbor Springs, Wacoutensie, Oden, Wallowan Lake and other nearby resorts.

Hastings.—With addresses by Frank H. Chase of Smyrna, department commander of the state G. A. R., and Adjutant General Spaulding of Lansing, the annual reunion of the Perry county soldiers, closed here. Chase made a plea for more sacred observance of Memorial day, and Spaulding discussed aims of G. A. R. organization. Commandant Frank Pierce was re-elected president of the reunion association; William Reams, secretary; F. Soule, treasurer. Ninety-five veterans registered during the reunion, which was 23 less than last year.

South Haven.—After seeing her husband with another woman, Mrs. Charles Straub shot and perhaps fatally wounded him as he was crossing the river bridge on his way to his photographic studio. Mrs. Straub had been lying in wait near the bridge and when she saw her husband appear fired the shot which lodged in Straub's breast just above the lung. She surrendered and is being held pending the outcome of the inquiry. Straub is in the city hospital. Physicians say he may recover.

Standish.—Albert Saik, a well known Austrian farmer, residing a short distance south of here, near Worth, was arrested on complaint of his wife, Katherine, who charges him with a serious offense against his daughter, a girl in her teens. Constable Stewart made the arrest. The case was adjourned until August 22 before Judge Dyrce of Pinconning.

Kalamazoo.—A most remarkable condition was shown when seven supervisors reported to the poor commissioners that during the past year there had not been one case of poverty in their townships that needed aid of the county. Only once before has a township in Kalamazoo ever reported no case of destitution during a year.

Kalamazoo.—Christopher Kennedo, the Greek lad who lost both hands in one of the paper mills about a year ago, appeared before Industrial Commissioner John H. Kinnane. Only the thumb of one hand remains, but the paper company is contesting his claim on the basis that both hands were not entirely severed.

Pontiac.—The annual convention of Michigan city clerks will convene here with headquarters at the Hotel Iroquois. A banquet will be tendered the members in the evening at the historic Hotel's house.

Muskegon.—When George Gillard returned to his home in White River town July 28, after a brief absence he found his household goods loaded on a wagon in front of his home. Now he wants a divorce.

Cadillac.—Sheriff Chamberlain of Wexford county found Beesie Clark Weaver in Jenison, Ottawa county, only to learn it is not she, but Sarah Belle Miller, who is heiress to an estate of $200,000 in New York. Beesie Clark Weaver was adopted in 1893 by Mr. and Mrs. Weaver of Manton. Sarah Belle Miller was taken from a New York orphan's home by the same family ten years earlier. Sheriff Chamberlain was placed on the wrong track by residents of Manton, who insisted that Beesie Clark Weaver was the only child Frank Weaver had adopted.

TRAGEDY OF $5 BILL

CARELESS HABIT LEFT GIRL A WIDE TRAIL OF WOE.

And Worst of All in the Long List is the Seemingly Irreparable Break With Howard, Who Was Naturally Offended.

"I'm in a terrible trouble," wailed the top floor girl, according to the New York Times. "I don't know what I shall ever do about it."

"What's happened?" asked her sympathetic friend.

"Everything. It's all about Howard, and—oh, dear, it's awful! You see, I discovered the other day that I had lost $5. It had been handed me when I was at my writing desk, and instead of at once putting it away in a safe place I stuck it into an envelope and left it there. Later I wrote several letters and when I again remembered the $5 bill it was gone.

"My natural supposition was that I had sent it away in one of the letters I had just written. All those letters, except one, were business letters. The exception was to Howard Strong. I immediately wrote to every one of my correspondents and explained what I had done and asked them to examine the envelope for a trace of the $5. Howard Strong is the only one that has replied, so far; he sent me the $5. Fortunately, he said, he had not destroyed the envelope and there, tucked away in one corner, he found the $5 bill.

"Naturally I felt pretty good over that outcome of my mistake, but the next morning, when the second chapter began to unfold, I didn't feel quite so comfortable. I found then, in the top envelope of a bunch that I had previously overlooked that $5 bill.

"It's no way for anybody to try to imagine how I felt then, for it cannot be done. I spent fully two hours puzzling over Howard's motive in sending me the money. Finally, I came to the conclusion that he must have construed the letter as an ingenious way of asking for a loan, and he had forthwith responded in the same roundabout fashion. I wrote Howard a stinging rebuke. I claimed that by putting such a construction on my letter he had insulted me. I returned the $5.

"About two hours after I had mailed that letter chapter No. 3 began. Ellen Fariss and I use that writing desk in partnership. It was Ellen's turn at the desk. The first thing I knew she was upsetting things in general, looking for a particular envelope.

"What kind of an envelope was it?" I asked.

"One of those plain ones," she said. "It was right on top of this bunch. I stuck a $5 bill into it yesterday."

"At that point in Ellen's explanation I collapsed. It was her money that I had returned to Howard, and I had to take the last $5 bill I had in the world to settle with her. I haven't heard from Howard, and I have not the courage to write again. I said in my last letter that all was over between us, and, apparently, it is."

Public Meat Roaster.

In many of the well traversed streets of upper New York city there are being established cook shops of the French kind. The business is not only one of supplying hot roasted meats to customers in the little restaurant that is a part of the shop's plant, but also of roasting meats for persons in the neighborhood who may have a desire to eat meat cooked in the best, as it is one of the oldest, ways known to man—on a revolving "jack" before an open fire. It is no place for a hungry man to stand—before the plate glass window of the "roast shop." The windows disclose a

The saddest man in Plymouth today is Mr. O. F. Beyer, proprietor of The Rexall Store in North Village. Mr. Beyer, who is one of the most progressive business men in this city, has been looking forward to a delightful vacation in Boston, where he planned to attend the Eleventh Annual Convention of the United Drug Company, an international manufacturing and importing organization, in which he is a heavy stockholder. It is the irony of fate, too, that though Mr. Beyer wanted to attend the meeting so as to get new ideas with which to increase his business, he is prevented from leaving the city simply because his business is increasing. The many friends who have expressed sympathy for Mr. Beyer will be interested to learn what our fellow citizen has missed by not going to Boston, and why it is that he almost regrets the fact that his business is growing. When visited by a Mail reporter at the Rexall Store, Mr. Beyer gave his views on drug store service and vividly described a new form of practical co-operation, which he calls "The Rexall Idea."
"People ask me," he said, "how I can offer high-grade goods at such low prices; where I get such a lot of new merchandise; and why it is that I have the new at novelties and the latest wrinkles in store service before anyone else. I would be glad to take the credit for these things to myself, but frankly I owe much of my good fortune to the fact that I am a member of the United Drug Company. This company was started in Boston eleven years ago, by Louis K. Liggett. At that time there was no such thing as co-operation in the retail drug business. It was every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." Individual druggists manufactured their own remedies, good, bad and indifferent; bought their goods in small lots at high prices, and fought each other tooth and nail. Mr. Liggett saw that if the buying and manufacturing power of the leading druggists could be combined, and a standard policy adopted for all their stores, the result would be increased business and better service for the public.
"Beginning with forty of the biggest retailers in this country he formed the United Drug Company and began to manufacture a line of honest, household remedies, based on tested formulas, the sale of which was limited to one druggist in each locality. These remedies were made by skilled chemists from the best materials; and to further protect the public, each remedy was sold under a positive guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Furthermore, Rexall Remedies were not patent medicines; their formulas were published in book form so that before buying a remedy, a customer could see just what it contained.
"If you will remember that up to that time the buyer of household remedies never knew what he was getting or what he would be asked to pay for it, you can understand how the public appreciated the Rexall Store plan of doing business. From the very beginning, Rexall Remedies had an enormous sale. The Rexall Stores were opened, one in each locality, as fast as was possible, considering the fact that before any druggist is allowed to sell United Drug Company products, his financial standing and personal character are rigidly investigated, and that unless he is universally recognized as the leading druggist in his community, he cannot secure the Rexall sales privilege.
"As soon as the public realize what Rexall Remedies were, they by the same people that make by the same people that make Rexall." To meet this demand the United Drug Company began to manufacture Stationery, Rubber Goods, Brushes, Soda Fountain Supplies, Toilet Articles, in fact, almost everything found in up-to-date drug stores.
United Drug Company Covers 25 Acres.
"In 1903, the United Drug Company's business was confined to one building with 30,000 square feet of floor space. Today, it is operating laboratories, factories, mills, warehouses and branches, throughout the United States, Canada and Great Britain, and requires a total of over 1,000,000 square feet of floor space—more than 25 acres—for the manufacture of such exclusively Rexall Store products as Rexall Remedies; Harmony Perfumes; Liggett's, Penney and Saturday Candies; Symphony Lawn, Ustaco and Bokhara Stationery; Maximum, Monogram and American Beauty Rubber Products; Klenso and Marguerite Tooth Brushes; Liggett's Orangeade, Grape Juice and Fruit Syrup, etc., etc.

Rexall Means Low Prices.
"The people welcomed these new goods, just as they had, welcomed the first Rexall Remedies, and today, The Rexall Store sign is displayed by over 7,000 druggists in the United States, Canada and Great Britain, and everywhere it is accepted as positive evidence that the owners of those stores can be trusted to give a square deal, and that anything they sell will be of higher grade, cost less and last longer than would similar goods, bought elsewhere. This public confidence embraces not only the goods actually manufactured by the United Drug Company, the sale of which Rexall Druggists control, but extends to all the merchandise sold by The Rexall Store. This is due to the fact that instead of buying in individual small lots, Rexall Druggists bunch their orders, thus securing from manufacturers and jobbers, big price concessions of which they give their customers the benefit. The average druggist who buys, for instance, half a dozen hot water bottles from one manufacturer, cannot hope to secure so low a price as the manufacturer can afford to quote when the United Drug Company places an order to supply hot water bottles to over 7,000 druggists. It is the same with all other merchandise. Everything sold in The Rexall Store is bought at a rock bottom price, and can, therefore, be sold at a rock bottom price and still yield the druggist a fair profit.
Rexall Druggists are Importers.
"Another advantage enjoyed by Rexall Druggists is the fact that the United Drug Company has agents in all European countries, who are constantly on the watch for new goods and new ideas. When a customer goes into a Rexall Store to buy anything in drug store merchandise—I don't care what it is—he has his pick of the best goods from all quarters of the earth. If he wants to buy, say, the finest tooth brush made, he can get it in only two ways: by going to France himself, or by going to The Rexall Druggist, who controls the output of the finest tooth brush factories in France. If the purchase is a bottle of violet perfume, made from real Parma violets, a box of breakfast cocoa, made in Holland, a Christmas greeting card, created by an artist in London, the same is true. The customer can get it by going abroad or by trading at The Rexall Store.
Annual Meetings Held.
"Of course, with all these advantages, The Rexall Store is bound to succeed, provided only that the Rexall Druggist himself keeps up-to-date and makes the most of his opportunities. To insure this, we hold an Annual Convention in some prominent city at which we exchange ideas, show each other new goods, tell our experience, and plan new ways of giving the public better service and lower prices. Last year's meeting was held in St. Louis, Mo., and the meeting I hoped to attend is to be in Boston. It will last four days, Monday, August 18th, to Thursday, August 21st. There will be six business sessions which I am especially sorry to miss, because of the opportunity which they would afford to gather new ideas and buy new goods for best season. What makes it still worse, I expected to have a mighty good vacation in one of the best convention cities in the world. You see the United Drug Company is purely co-operative. Since there is only one Rexall Store in each locality, we are partners and not competitors. If I could go to Boston, I should meet and be on friendly terms with druggists whom I have known at other Rexall Conventions and who will go to this meeting from every state in the Union, from all the provinces of Canada and from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. During these meetings, and in informal talks between whites, I could give and get suggestions and criticisms that would be welcome, just as you would welcome a hint from a friend of yours.
Good Times in Boston.
"To realize what mighty good fellows these druggists are, you ought to see us when we 'Get Together,' as we say, for a good time. This year we would have theatre parties, motor trips, luncheons, smokers, banquets, a boat ride to Plymouth, where the Pilgrims landed, a field day at Nantasket, etc. I am sorry to miss the meeting for the sake of the good time, but it really will not be a loss to my customers, because a full report of the four days' meeting will be sent me, so that I can put into The Rexall Store in this town all the new ideas, better goods and lower prices, that give Rexall reputation to The Rexall Store."
