Barn Burns

Last Friday night a barn on the Henry Lewis place now occupied by Mr. Swaggles, near Cherry Hill, burned to the ground. The origin of the fire is unknown. Three horses were in the barn, also a quantity of grain. Two of the horses were saved but the other one perished in the flames. Lee Fisher with several others from this place were attending a party at Cherry Hill and when the alarm of fire was given they hastened to assist in removing the horses. Mr. Fisher was badly burned about his neck and ears but no one else was injured. The loss of barn and contents is partially covered by insurance.

New Pastor at the Baptist Church

Rev. Archibald L. Bell of Quincy, Mich., has accepted a unanimous call to the Baptist church of Plymouth. Mr. Bell was born in Scotland, receiving his education at Glasgow. He came to America soon afterward. He has held important pastorates in Michigan during the past sixteen years or more.

Rev. Archibald L. Bell

After filling the pulpit here last Sunday, he returned to Quincy to make arrangements for shipping his household goods. He will return Saturday and preach Sunday morning and evening. His family will arrive about the last of the month and will occupy the parsonage which has lately been enlarged.

Miss Ina Dunn of Ann Arbor, visited relatives here this week.

Miss Eua Reichelt of Detroit, visited her sister, Mrs. Louis Reber over Sunday.

Mrs. Peter Gayde and granddaughter, Marian Beyer are visiting friends in Detroit this week.

K. H. Williams has sold his house and lot on W. Ann Arbor street to Mr. Maynard, who expects to soon move his family to town.

For Business Men to Consider

With the beginning of the fall trade our business men should begin to sit up and take notice. There is no use to expect the residents of this section to go around with a microscope trying to find out whether this or that is sold in this town. The only plan that will work is to keep everlastingly telling them what you have on hand. That is the way the up-to-date merchants get their trade. There is no reason why the people of this vicinity should be expected to adopt any different method in regard to trading than other places. Tell them what you have; let them know what it costs; show them that you can save them time and money by buying from you and they will come to your store and not carry home mail order catalogs.

There are hundreds—yes, thousands—of people within trading distance of town who scarcely suspect what there is for sale in your store. Let them know where you are. Invite them to your store. Tell them about your bargains. Show them that you want their trade just as much as it is wanted by out-of-town merchants and a little more, by the way—and they will begin to come to you. But if you sit and expect them to hunt you up, you are going to be very sadly disappointed.

It costs more to keep goods a year before selling them and they get shabby and out of style. You can't get business without asking for it and the best way to ask is by attractive advertising.—Er.

Class Seems to Be Unlucky

The 1913 graduating class of the Plymouth High school was the largest class ever graduated from here at one time, and the class received considerable attention from that fact. There were thirty-two graduates, twenty-five girls and seven boys. Since the time of graduation a series of misfortunes has occurred to a number of its members and the old superstition of the unlucky thirteen is being revived. At the time of graduation Anna Linden's younger sister was seriously ill and grave doubts were entertained for her recovery, making it very hard for Anna to go on with her work. Clarence Wright was ill at commencement time and it was feared at first, that he would not be able to attend the exercises, however, when the time came he had recovered sufficiently to be present. On commencement day Avis Clifton was taken ill and later developed appendicitis which caused her death. Cearina Penney came down with scarlet fever the night of commencement and was ill for several weeks. A few weeks later Helen Van De Car received a shock from lightning from which her nervous system has not yet fully recovered. Late, Clarence Wright's father contracted typhoid fever and was in Ann Arbor hospital for several weeks during the past summer. A few weeks ago Leslie Hudd was called home from college on account of the sudden death of his father. Not long ago Daryle Downs cut his finger, blood poisoning developed and it was feared for a time that he would lose his hand, however, he is much better now. Two weeks ago Imogene Smith was operated on at Harper hospital for appendicitis, and last Friday a mild attack of small pox developed. She is now confined in the Kiefer hospital, Detroit, but is rapidly improving. Such are the many misfortunes that have happened to the class of 1913 and the members are wondering what next.

W. C. T. U. Convention

About fifty ladies were here in attendance at the W. C. T. U. convention held in the Methodist church this week Tuesday and Wednesday. Tuesday evening Mrs. E. L. Calkins, state president of the W. C. T. U. gave an interesting talk on the good work this organization had done in the state legislature during the past year. Wednesday evening the diamond medal contest took place. There were four contestants. Miss Gifford of Ypsilanti, won the diamond medal. A more detailed account of the convention will be given next week.

Keep next week Thursday, Friday, or Saturday open for the Art Exhibit.

Mrs. James Hayes of Saginaw, was calling on friends here last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Albro attended the funeral of a friend at South Lyon last Sunday.

Harvey Springer was agreeably surprised last week Thursday evening by nineteen of his school mates, who gathered at his home in honor of his eighteenth birthday. He was the recipient of several nice gifts, among them a handsome book from the members of his class. Refreshments were served and after an enjoyable evening all returned home wishing him many happy returns of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beyer were very pleasantly surprised last Sunday morning when upon their return from church they found that about twenty-five relatives had invaded their home, and had prepared a fine dinner in honor of their forty-second wedding anniversary. This gathering was indeed an enjoyable one for all present and will long remain a happy memory in the hearts of the host and hostess.

Memories of the Past

In This Paper Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

Dan Adams returned Friday from Dakota.

Apple packing is keeping a number of our people busy at present.

A new harness shop soon to be opened here. I have come to stay, W. K. Gun-solus.

Dr. E. O. Bennett, of Wayne, and another gentleman whose name we are unable to recall were in town Monday.

The Plymouth fair association after paying expenses, lease of ground, etc., expect to have about $500 left from this year's exhibition.

The Detroit base ball club now occupies fifth place. Owing to their poor playing, orchard luck, as you choose to call it.

George Vandecar moved his barber shop from the Berdan house into the Lauffer building, on Tuesday, and Erney Passage immediately opened shop in the room which Vandecar left.

The Band of Hope reassembled in the Presbyterian church, on Sabbath afternoon, October 14, Mrs. Harry Shattuck presided. Readings were given by Blanche Starkweather and Ella Smith. There was music by the choir and by the children, interspersed with a few recitations. The address was given by the Rev. Geo. H. Wallace, on "The saloon the vermin of society." A collection of pennies and a distribution of children's papers preceded the benediction.

Pete Micol bought 500 bushels of wheat of a farmer in Salem the other day at $1.25 per bushel, the wheat to be delivered in Plymouth upon Micol's order any time within eight months from the time of purchase.

Dr. J. M. Oullier expects to leave today for his old home at Defiance, Ohio, or a visit of a week. Mrs. Oullier has been there for several days, having accompanied her sister who had been visiting here.

Leon Fattal of Corunna, was a Plymouth visitor this week.

Mrs. A. W. Chaffee entertained 25 ladies at a thimble party Monday afternoon. In the evening the ladies were joined by some ten gentlemen.

A Masonic school of instruction will be held in the Masonic lodge rooms this afternoon and evening. Northville, Wayne, Farmington and Belleville lodges will be represented. A supper will be served at 6 o'clock.

To Aid State Bean Growers.

Michigan Agricultural college has come to the aid of the bean growers of this state who stand to suffer heavy losses this season because of the ravages of anthracnose and blight, and a series of experiments will be conducted in an effort to combat the diseases.

The bean crop in Michigan is valued at $8,000,000, and the growers realize the crop is a quick and good money-getter when there is a large-crop of good quality. Under the direction of botanical department, experiments will be made to determine how badly anthracnose and blight affect the seed bean. The former disease is a spore development and an effort will be made to find something that will kill the spores.

TODAY'S REFLECTIONS

If hoopskirts come back, the tango will still be more sensational.

Here's one just handed in for public discussion: Does fishing make a man a liar or do only liars fish?

Those new styles are certainly fetching.

The price of gasoline doesn't save much on the winter coal bills.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.
If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicines that contain opium, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or a cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. This cleans out the clogged beds of breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world-wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. MOLLY McDONALD A TALE OF THE FRONTIER

By RANDALL PARRISH Author of "Keith of the Border," "My Lady of the South," etc., etc.

Illustrations by V.L. Barnes

Copyright 1912 by A.C. McCLURG & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, is ordered to suppress his daughter, Molly, who is a threat to the post. An Indian outbreak is threatened. Sergeant "Brick" Hamlin meets the stage in which Molly is traveling. They are attacked by Indians and Hamlin tells Molly he was discharged from the Confederate service in disgrace...

CHAPTER XXXIV.—Continued. They could perceive the blue of the overcoats as they rode over the ridge, and at their sudden appearance the little column of horsemen came to a halt. Hamlin swung up one hand in signal, and the two urged their ponies down the side of the hill. Three men spurred forth to meet them, spreading out slightly as though still suspicious of some trick, but as they drew near, the leader suddenly waved his hand, and they dashed forward.

"Yes, Major Elliott; I can repeat the story as we ride along, sir. You are the advance of Custer's expedition, I presume?" "We are; the others are some miles behind, moving slowly so that the wagons can keep within touch. Wonderful the way those wagons have pushed ahead over the rough country. Have you mind, camp twice since we left Fort Dodge."

"Before the blizzard all except your troop were at Camp Supply; they had joined since, and it was then we heard about your trip down here. What became of your men, Sergeant?" "Wagon and one private were killed, sir; the other private was frozen so badly I had to leave him in shelter on the Cimarron."

"By gad, it sounds interesting; and so you tackled the villain alone, and had some fight at that before rescuing Miss McDonald. Well, the story will keep until we make camp again. However, and he bent low over the lady's hand, "I must congratulate Miss McDonald on her escaping without any serious injury."

"That is not all I should be congratulated upon, Major Elliott," she said quietly. "No—perhaps I do not understand."

"I desire that you shall; I refer to my engagement to Sergeant Hamlin."

and silence, and as they were still miles away from the position assigned for Black Kettle's encampment, the men were permitted to build fires and prepare a warm meal under shelter of the bluffs. Two hours later the main column arrived and also went into camp. It was intensely cold but the men were cheerful as they ate their supper of smoky and half-roasted buffalo meat, bacon, hard-tack, and coffee.

In response to orders the Sergeant went down the line of tiny fires to report in person to Custer. He found that commander encamped in a small tent, hastily erected in a little grove of cottonwoods, which afforded a slight protection from the piercing wind. Before him on the ground from which the snow had been swept lay a map of the region, while all about, pressed tightly into the narrow quarters, were his troop officers. As Hamlin was announced by the orderly, conversation ceased, and Custer surveyed the newcomer an instant in silence.

"Step forward, Sergeant," he said quietly. "Ah, yes; I had forgotten your name, but remember your face," he smiled about on the group. "We have been so scattered since our organization, gentlemen, that we are all comparative strangers." He stood up, lifting in one hand a tin cup of coffee. "Gentlemen, all we of the Seventh rejoice in the honor of the service, whether it be upheld by officer or enlisted man. I bid you drink a toast with me to Sergeant Hamlin."

"But, General, I have done nothing to deserve—" "Observe the modesty of a real hero. Yet wait until I am through. With due regard for his achievements as a soldier, I propose this toast in commemoration of a greater deed of gallantry than those of arms—the capture of Miss Molly McDonald!"

There was a quick uplifting of cups, a burst of laughter, and a volley of questions, the Sergeant staring about motionless, his face flushed. "What is it, General?" "Tell us the story!" "Give us the joke!" "But I assure you it is no joke. I have it direct from the fair lips of the lady. Brace yourselves, gentlemen, for the shock. You young West Pointers lose, and yet the honor remains with the regiment. Miss Molly McDonald, the toast of old Fort Dodge, whose bright eyes have won all your hearts, has given here to Sergeant Hamlin of the Seventh. And now again, boys, to the honor of the regiment!"

Out of the buzz of conversation and the hearty words of congratulation, Hamlin emerged bewildered, finding himself again facing Custer, whose manner had as swiftly changed into the brusque note of command. "I have met you before, Sergeant," he said slowly, "before your assignment to the Seventh, I think. I am not sure where; were you in the Shenandoah?"

"I was, sir." "At Winchester?" "I saw you first at Cedar Creek, General Custer; I brought a flag." "That's it; I have the incident clearly before me now. You were a lieutenant-colonel?" "Of the Fourth Texas, sir." "Exactly; I think I heard later—but never mind that now. Sheridan remembers you; he even mentioned your name to me a few weeks ago. No doubt that was what caused me to recognize your face again after all these years. How long have you been in our service?"

"Ever since the war closed." "For a moment the two men looked into each others' faces, the commander smiling, the enlisted man at respectful attention. "I will talk with you at some future time, Sergeant," Custer said at last, resigning his seat on a log. "Now we shall have to consider tomorrow's march. Were you within sight of Black Kettle's camp?"

"No, sir; only of his pony herd out in the valley of the Canadian." "Where would you suppose the camp situated?" "Above, behind the bluffs, about the mouth of Buffalo Creek."

Custer drew the map toward him scrutinizing it carefully. "You may be right, of course," he commented, his glance on the faces of the officers, "but this does not agree with the understanding at Camp Supply, nor the report of our Indian scouts. We supposed Black Kettle to be farther south on the Washita. How large was the pony herd?"

BREAK IN ROUTINE

By ELIZABETH LILLIAN HIGGINS.

"It is needless to say that I am disappointed—bitterly disappointed and grieved," spoke Almond Wear to his nephew, Walter Ridley, but there was more of severity in his tones than true pathos. "I am sorry, uncle," was the earnest response, "but I must follow my duty as I see it."

"You see it through wrong glasses, then," declared Mr. Wear, stormily. "You are throwing away the chance of a lifetime. Hester Beale is ready to fall into your arms—wealth, social standing, family influence. I learn that it is in the power of her uncle, as the head of the great Timour Steel company, to appoint you surgeon for the plant. Think of that—all your assistants to do your work, and a royal salary!"

"But I do not wish others to do my work," explained Walter, quietly, but with a latent force back of it that told. "I wish to do some good in the world. The people down at the old settlement mills have no physician. I am going among them."

"To starve, to get down to their de-basing level, to be robbed and laughed at for your mistaken philanthropy!" snarled the old man, wrathfully. "And that girl, too—the daughter of that worthless old inventor, Darley. She's the attraction, I doubt not."

"Yes, uncle," confessed young Ridley, frankly, "Miss Darley is, indeed, the attraction. I love her—I shall always love her." "Trapped you, eh?" sneered the uncle. "Don't malign her, uncle," said Walter. "Her father's position was as high and honorable as your own, before the family with which you wish me to ally myself robbed him of his star inheritance. As to Bertha, she has become an angel of mercy among the poor operatives. She has cast her lot among them, not only from necessity but from choice. As to trapping me—"

"Certainly, although in case of going into action the overcoats will be discarded. Look over your ammunition carefully tonight."

"They fled out of the tent one by one, some of the older officers pausing a moment to speak with Hamlin, his own captain extending his hand cordially, with a warm word of commendation. The Sergeant and Major Elliott alone remained."

"If I strike a fresh trail, General," asked the latter, "am I to press forward or wait for the main body?" "Send back a courier at once, but advance cautiously, careful not to expose yourselves. There is to be no attack except in surprise, and with full force. This is important, Major, as we are doubtless outnumbered, two to one. Was there something else, Sergeant?"

"I was going to ask about Miss McDonald, sir?" "Oh, yes; she is safely on her way to Camp Supply, under ample guard. The convoy was to stop on the Cimarron, and pick up the frozen soldier you left there, and if possible, find the bodies of the two dead men."

and usefulness. The needy and unfortunate knew that they were welcome to free consultation, attendance and even free medicine, and his office was soon overrun. It was, indeed, blessed work! He was out of from all financial co-operation from his steely-hearted relative now, and his old-fashioned patients were fast dropping away from a physician who catered to "the coarser element," as they phrased it. The misery he saw and alleviated, however, the relief and joy is brought where there had been misery and pain, the true hearts of "old" he discovered in the homes of the lowly and worthy, more than compensated him for his strong self-sacrifice.

Then one day a break in the routine—two thunderbolts, each devastating and vital. They came with a shock to Walter. His uncle had practically lost his entire fortune. A side issue of his great friends, the Beales, had failed, carrying down an army of credulous investors.

Walter went to his uncle and suggested what assistance and sympathy he might proffer, but the sullen old man rebuffed him. That very afternoon a barefooted, wild-eyed girl rushed into his office.

"Oh, Doctor Ridley," she gasped, "there's been an accident. Miss Darley—" and fainted away. Walter was at the works fast as his feet could carry him. He found Bertha, pale and disheveled, seated on a work bench near a dismantled machine. A dozen of the child workers surrounded her, frightened, weeping and solicitous for her welfare.

Bertha Darley had been a heroine. She had sprang to a falling shaft just in time to save half a dozen from being crushed and injured. She had fought a noble battle with the whirling monster of steel.

There were a dozen severe abrasions, and one crushed finger, which Walter attended to, ah, so tenderly! long to kiss the poor lacerated hand. It would be two weeks before Bertha could resume her wonted tasks.

He called at the smaller quarters to which his uncle had betaken himself, but was refused admission. He heard that Mr. Wear was severely ill with a contagious disease, but he was not sent for.

Then Bertha was absent from home for two weeks. Her father professed ignorance of her whereabouts, but one day Walter received a telephone call from his uncle.

He found Mr. Wear recovered from his illness, a new, softer light in his old eyes. "Walter," he spoke, "I should have died but for the gentle ministrations of a volunteer nurse, whose true identity I did not know until an hour since. I have changed my mind as to the feeble friends of this uncertain world. I wish to realize upon what little I have left, and make a new home with you down at the settlement, where heart and home are not mere hollow words."

Why Old Backs Ache. What a pity that so many persons past middle age are worried with lame backs, aching kidneys, poor eyesight, sick headache, dizziness, gravel, dropsy or diarrhoea. This is because the kidneys are not doing their duty. Doan's Kidney Pills bring these disorders in youth or age, and is a dangerous thing to neglect. It leads to Bright's disease and uric acid poisoning. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought new strength to thousands of lame backs, and rid thousands of annoying urinary troubles.

SEES ERA OF LASTING PEACE IN URUGUAY

By Gen. Rafael Reyes

General View of Montevideo

Stock Exchange, Montevideo

It has been said by a famous writer that the blood that has been shed in Latin-American revolutions would form but a small rivulet in comparison with the oceans of blood that have been shed in Europe to indulge the ambitions of despots, or to satisfy the righteous claims of freedom. That truthful observation may be applied with peculiar force to the republic of Uruguay, which, during its brief existence as an independent state, has passed through many periods of stress and storm; but it is just such occasions that evolve the principles of liberty, order and justice, indispensable to the survival and welfare of a nation.

The fratricidal wars in most cases waged in the cause of human liberty, which mark the history of the Latin-American countries, are apt to be magnified as indications of the unformed character of Ibero-Americans, on account of their recent occurrence. Just as the proportions and sanguinary nature of European wars and revolutions are unconsciously diminished through the remoteness of the period in which they took place. Whether or not it be true that the evolution of the Uruguayan republic has been hastened, or even impeded, by the many internecine wars which have torn and distressed the people, it is beyond question today that the republic has entered upon an era of permanent peace based on the highest principles of justice and of the respect of all legitimate rights.

Uruguay is in South America what Switzerland, Belgium and Holland are in Europe. Of small territorial extent and population, its people may justly claim to have attained a degree of civilization and progress equal to that of their more powerful neighbors.

In commenting upon the laws and constitution of Uruguay, Anatole France expressed the opinion that the Uruguayan nation was capable of creating "a superior type of civilization." The constitution, which is the only one in the South American republics that has remained unaltered since its formulation, eighty years ago, embodies the fullest liberty and protection for all, irrespective of race or religion. Treating the same point, M. E. Stocquart, the distinguished Belgian jurist, in his work "Belgian Law," says "Uruguay, from the point of view of civil rights, is the most advanced of all the countries of South America," and when we look at the wise provisions and high civic ideals contained in the constitution and in subsequent legislation, there would appear to be abundant justification for M. Stocquart's opinion.

The laws of Uruguay, as in many American states, are codified, and some of these codes might well be used as models for the legislators of other countries occupying a more prominent position in the world than the republic of Uruguay. Of its commercial code a great Italian master has said that it is "one of the most notable legislative works of our time, worthy of being used as a model by all who have to legislate on mercantile law."

The penal and rural codes are equally replete with sound and far-reaching provisions. The former is largely based upon the doctrines of Zambardelli, Mancini and Savelli, and the Spanish and Chilean codes, while, in regard to the rural code, M. Lepelletier, in his criticisms of the French rural code, stated that "it is possible to envy nations which, like Uruguay, have known how to produce a work of such utility in a country where agriculture constitutes the main source of national production. Commenced in 1873, the rural code of Uruguay was promulgated in July, 1875, and revised three years later, and it has never since then ceased to be changed and improved by laws and decrees which, together with the text of the original, make it today a legislative achievement of the highest value."

Equally wise and just are the codes relating to civil and criminal procedure as well as the military and administrative codes, which regulate and provide equitable laws on the subjects with which they deal.

Without doubt Uruguay is one of the healthiest and most beautiful countries of South America, differing from many in appearance through the absence of the snow-covered mountains which appear so frequently in the southern portion of the continent. The country is flat, with slight undulations. It is traversed by something like 500 rivers and small streams, which make it extremely fertile.

Uruguay, from the American point of view, is a small country, although it embraces a larger area than many important countries of Europe. The ownership of the land is not so much divided as it should be, but, just as Mr. Farquhar has already implanted a system of colonization in the Paraná, the government and the railroad companies of Uruguay have already purchased large tracts for the purpose of introducing it in form of colonization which will ultimately give to the rapidly increasing number of settlers full ownership.

The principal industry of the country is stock raising, which is constantly increasing in extent and quality through the growing importance of

The capital of Uruguay is built on the left bank of the mouth of the River Plata, practically opposite Buenos Aires. Between the two cities there is a service of splendid steamboats, which perform the journey, generally at night, through the silvery waters of the River Plata in seven or eight hours. From Rio de Janeiro and other parts of Brazil the journey is much longer, and can only be made comfortably in the transatlantic liners which, on their way from Europe to Buenos Aires, touch at Brazilian and Uruguayan ports. The long-projected railway, however, from San Paulo to Montevideo, a distance of about 3,500 kilometers, will soon be completed, and with the regular schedule proposed, the splendid equipment, and the route of the line, which crosses the rich Brazilian states of Paraná, Santa Catarina and Rio Grande do Sul, the road should largely help the further progress of Montevideo.

In Uruguay there are two political parties, the "Whites" and the "Reds," and the ambitions of these rival factions have often stood in the way of national advance. To such an extent has this been the case that M. Clemenceau has stated that "when a boy is born in Uruguay he is given a white or red ribbon, which he is enjoined to defend and hand down to his progeny."

As illustrating in some measure the harmful effects of revolutionary movements upon the industries and commerce of the country, it may be interesting to point out that even the process of refinement of native stock has been retarded in part years by revolutionary outbreaks. An explanation of this is to be found in the military code of the republic, which provides for compensation to owners of stock which has been commandeered during a period of revolution. That code, which has since been changed, fixed an arbitrary value upon each animal, not taking into account the higher value of improved stock, with the result that cases frequently occurred in which the loss of valuable pedigree animals was compensated for on an utterly inadequate scale. Hence during the many years over which revolutionary outbreaks were of frequent occurrence prominent stock raisers naturally limited their operations.

The railways which unite Uruguay with some of the adjacent republics and widen the sphere of labor are being extended with great vigor in all parts of the country. Among the many railroads now under survey or construction one of the most important will be that stipulated for in a contract with the Pan-American Transcontinental Railway company, from the northern frontier of the republic to its southern border.

In foreign commerce each year shows a substantial increase over the previous corresponding period, and foreign capital is rapidly flowing in to further develop the national resources.

Education, which is obligatory in its elementary form, is highly advanced. In its elementary distributed through all the large centers of the republic, and the University of Montevideo has a large number of faculties, which include agriculture, commerce, and the social sciences. The government likewise maintains schools of arts and trades and a national military college. Through the increased immigration the number of schools has been largely added to, but the government is now further extending its educational efforts by establishing primary schools throughout the republic, so that there will be at least one school for every thousand of the inhabitants.

The generous ideals, the progressive spirit, and the patriotism of Uruguayans render it possible for Uruguay to be regarded by the peoples of Europe and of the rest of the world as an example of the energies and the aptitudes of South America, and as a land of the future for the myriad of immigrants who leave the congested spots of the old world in search of a new horizon, a new country, a new life.

JUST THROWING OUT A HINT

If Charity Fund Was to Be Given to the Needy, He Could Use Part of It.

The children of a Boston Sunday school class had contributed their pennies for weeks to a fund which was to be devoted to charitable purposes, and on the day when they were to decide on the matter of its distribution each child was called upon to express an opinion as to how it should be spent.

The teacher explained to them that there were several charities which would be glad to receive the fund, either in Boston or among the foreign missions. She had impressed upon them, however, that the money might be spent to good advantage among the sick and needy children of their own parish. Several bright speeches on the subject had been made, when one seven-year-old boy arose and, evidently bearing in mind the teacher's remarks about charity beginning at home, said:

"I want you to know that I have put a good many pennies in that box—" and then, after some delay—"and I've got a terrible cold myself."

Signatures on Paintings.

Experts rarely rely on signatures alone to determine the authenticity of an old painting, but trust rather to their knowledge of the painter's technique. Sometimes the painter's name is found in a conspicuous place, as, for instance, in Raphael's "Spositalo" at Milan.

Proof of having surpassed his master the youthful genius wrote on a trieste in the very center of the canvas, Raphael's "Urbino."

Rayolds hardly ever signed his work. But upon the completion of the portrait of Mrs. Siddons as "The Tragic Muse," he wrote his name large on the gold embroidery of her dress. He was unable, he said, "to resist the temptation of sending my name to posterity on the hem of your garment."

PIMPLES ALL OVER FACE

1413 E. Genessee Ave., Saginaw, Mich.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me of a very bad disease of the face without leaving a scar. Pimples broke out all over my face, red and large. They festered and came to a head. They itched and burned and caused me to scratch them and make sores. They said they were seed warts. At night I was restless from itching. When the barber would shave me my face would bleed terribly. Then scabs would form afterwards, then they would drop off and the so-called seed warts would come back again. They were on my face for about nine months and the trouble caused disfigurement while it lasted.

"One day I read in the paper of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it was so much value to me that I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment at the drug store. I used both according to directions. In about ten days my face began to heal up. My face is now clear of the warts and not a scar is left." (Signed) LeRoy C. O'Brien, No. 13, 1313.

Women of Middle Age

From 40 to 50 Woman's Critical Period.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, severe headaches, melancholia, dread of impending evil, palpitation of the heart, irregularity, constipation and dizziness are promptly treated by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life.

This is the most critical period of woman's life and she who neglects the care of her health at this time invites incurable disease and pain. Why not be guided by the experience of others and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It is an indisputable fact that this grand old remedy has helped thousands of women to pass through this trying period with comfort and safety. Thousands of genuine and honest testimonials support this fact.

From Mrs. HENRY HEAVILIN, Cadiz, Ohio.

Fort Worth, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and derived great benefit from its use. It carried me safely through the Change of Life when I was in bad health. I had that all gone feeling most of the time, and headache constantly, I was very nervous and the hot flashes were very bad. I had tried other remedies and doctors, but did not improve until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has now been some time since I took the Compound and I have had no return of my old complaint. I always praise your remedies to weak women."—Mrs. HENRY HEAVILIN, R. F. D. No. 4, Cadiz, Ohio.

From Mrs. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Fleetwood, Pa.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do. "One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong, well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—Mrs. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

From Mrs. F. P. MULLENDORE, Munford, Ala.

Munford, Ala.—"I was so weak and nervous while passing through the Change of Life that I could hardly live. My husband had to nail rubber on all the gates for I could not stand to have a gate slam. "I also had backache and a fullness in my stomach. I noticed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was advertised for such cases and I sent and got a bottle. It did me so much good that I kept on taking it and found it to be all you claim. I recommend it to all women afflicted as I was."—Mrs. F. P. MULLENDORE, Munford, Ala.

MOLLY McDONALD

A TALE OF THE FRONTIER

By RANDALL PARRISH
Author of "Keith of the Border," "My Lady of Doubt," "My Lady of the South," etc., etc.
Illustrations by V.L. Barnes

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army... Molly McDONALD, a young girl... Hamlin... Dupont... Ripley... The story follows Molly's journey through various adventures and challenges in a frontier setting.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Molly's Story. The two rode steadily, following the trail left by Hamlin and Hughes earlier in the morning. As there had been no wind, and the cold had crusted the snow, the tracks left by the two ponies were easily followed. As they skirted the ridge the Indian pony herd could be distinguished, sufficiently close by this time to leave no doubt as to what they were. Hamlin cautiously kept back out of sight in the breaks of the ridge, although his keen eyes, searching the upper valley, discovered no sign of pursuit.

The Mere Presence of Hamlin Was an Assurance of Safety.

...a few steps around the end of the hotel would bring me safely to the front entrance. The temptation to try was irresistible. I heard your voices within and thought I understood her game. It was dark below, yet I knew how close the earth was, and there was no sign of any one about. I clambered over the railing, let myself down as far as I could, and dropped. The slight fall did not even jar me, yet I was none too soon. As I crouched there in the darkness, she flung open the curtains, and looked out to the vacant balcony. I saw the flash of light, and heard her laugh—it was not pleasant laughter; for she was disappointed not to find me there. After the curtains fell again I could no longer hear your voices, and my sole desire was to get back into the hotel unobserved. I was not afraid, only I dreaded to meet any one who might recognize me.

to recall more clearly the exact facts. "The guests were already beginning to struggle back to the dance hall from supper, and I waited in the shadow of the building for an opportunity to slip into the hotel unobserved. While I hid there a cavalry soldier from the fort rode up, swung down from his saddle, and ran up the steps. I heard him ask for Major McDonald. Almost immediately he came out again and I passed him on the porch. Just inside the door I met my father. He was leaving the hotel with Dupont, and the latter swore savagely when I caught my father's arm, asking what message the orderly had brought. He answered strangely, saying he had received orders to go at once to Ripley on the stage; that he might be gone several days. There was nothing about all that to startle a soldier's daughter, but Dupont kept his hand on my father's arm, urging him to hurry. The actions of the man aroused my suspicions. I knew my father was acting paymaster, and I could perceive the outlines of a leather bag bulging beneath his overcoat. If this contained money, then I grasped Dupont's purpose. My plan of action occurred to me in a flash—I would accompany him until—until he was safely in the stage, and find opportunity to whisper warning. I remember asking him to wait a moment for me, and rushing to the cloak room after my coat. But when I returned they were gone. I ran out into the street, but they were not to be seen; they had not gone toward the stage office, for the lights revealed that distance clearly, and they had had no time in which to disappear within. With the one thought that Dupont had lured my father out of sight for purposes of robbery, I started to run down the little alley-way next the hotel. I know now how foolish I was, but then I was reckless. It was dark and I saw and heard nothing to warn me of danger. It was in my mind that my father had been lured on to the open prairie behind the hotel. Suddenly I was seized roughly, and a cloth whipped over my face before I could even scream. I heard a voice say: "Damn'd if it ain't the girl! What will we do with her?" then Dupont's voice answered gruffly: "Hell, there ain't anything to do, but take the little hussy along. She'd queer the whole game, an' we've got an extra horse." They jerked me forward so roughly, and I was so frightened that—that I must have fainted. At any rate I remembered nothing more distinctly until we had crossed the river, and I was on horseback wrapped in a blanket, and tied to the saddle. Some one was holding me erect; I could not move my arms, but could see and hear. It was dark, and we were moving slowly; there were two Indians ahead, and a white man riding each side of me. They thought me unconscious still, and spoke occasionally; little by little I recognized their voices and understood their words.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The Advance of Custer. The Sergeant swung down from the saddle and forced both ponies back below the crest of the hill, his swift glance sweeping back over the trail. Then he gazed again searchingly into the valley below. "What is it?" she questioned. "A moving column of horsemen, soldiers from their formation, for Indians never march in column of fours. They are too far away for me to be certain yet. What troops can be away out here?" "Wasn't there to be a winter campaign against Black Kettle?" she questioned. "It was the rumor at Dodge. Perhaps—"

men. Now you can see clearly as they climb the hill. "There is no doubt," he admitted. "A single troop ahead of the main body; the others will be beyond the bend in the stream." He stepped back, where he could look directly into her face. "They are soldiers all right, but that was not what I wanted to be so certain about. When we ride down there, Molly girl, we shall be swallowed up into the old life once more, the old army life." "Perhaps you do not realize how different it will all be from out here alone together." "Why should it be different?" "I shall be again a soldier in the ranks, under orders, and you Major McDonald's daughter." "But—but—" her eyes full of appeal. "No, little girl," he explained quickly, reaching up and touching her gently; "we are never going to say anything about that to those down there—his comrades in arms. It is going to be our secret. I am glad you told me; it has brought us together as, perhaps, nothing else could, but there is no reason why the world should ever know. Let them think he died defending his trust. Perhaps he did; what you overheard might have been said for a purpose, but even if it were true, he had been driven to it by a merciless woman. It is ours to defend, not blacken his memory." She bent slowly down until her cheek touched his.

"I thought you would say that," she returned slowly, "but what else you said is not so—there will never again be a barrier of rank between us." She straightened in the saddle looking down into his eyes. "Whoever the officer may be in command of that detachment, I want you to tell him all." "All?" "Yes, that we are engaged; I am proud to have them know." The truth was shining in her eyes glowing on her cheeks. She leaned forward. "Kiss me, and believe!" "Molly, Molly," he whispered, "never will I doubt again." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

MELISSA WOULD NOT BE A WILLING DOOR MAT.

"Children who play with fire are sure to get burned sooner or later," observed Mrs. Merriwid's maternal maiden aunt Jane, with a sigh, not to say arch smile at her niece. "The surest thing you know, dearie," agreed Mrs. Merriwid calmly, "was the pitcher that goes often to the well is broken at last and it's a long lane that has no turning. 'Though I'm anything but clever, I could talk like that for ever; but what's the answer, dear?" "Are you not?" and she rose in her stirrups. "I am sure they are cavalry."

encouragement than any man I've known." Mrs. Merriwid brought her teeth together with a click. "That's so he'll get just a little harder jolt than any man you've ever known, dearie," she said. (Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

ESKIMO BECAME AN OUTCAST

Fate of a Native of the North Who Through Faith Turned to Christianity. The whole life of the primitive Eskimo is governed by precedent, writes E. W. Hawkes in the Wide World. Although outwardly the freest and most irresponsible being in the world, he is in reality the slave of public opinion and the numberless customs and superstitions of his ancestors. The ways of his fathers are good enough for him, and the word of the old men and witch doctors, who treasure up ancient precedent like the pharisees of old, is the standard he lives and dies by. For an Eskimo to break one of these unwritten laws is to render himself a social outcast. Although treated with kindness, he is no longer reckoned as a member of the tribe. I will remember such a case on the Diomedes. A brother-in-law of the chief had early embraced Christianity, being converted on a trip to Nome by one of the first missionaries. Being a very conscientious man, he soon recognized the incompatibility of retaining his faith and conforming to the worship of his people. The spirit of the Scotch covenanters was in his veins. He refused to go through the usual rites of his people, and prayed to the God of the white stranger at home. As a result he was forbidden his place in the village koo-ga (or meeting place), where every man has his recognized station, carefully graded according to merit. His son was not allowed to dance with the younger men or witness any of the councils or witch doctorings reserved for the men; his daughter could not take part in the annual dance of the women, nor was any member of the tribe bold enough to ask them in marriage. They all married Siberian strangers and left the old man's house desolate, but he stuck to his faith to the last. In my humble opinion, he was the best Christian I ever met. Always cheerful, always ready to help, living daily the faith that was in him, he was the only Eskimo I ever saw who was brave enough to withstand the witch doctor.

Frugal. Mother—Ethel, are you saving anything for a rainy day? Ethel—Yes, mother. I never wear my silk stockings around the house—Life. No thoughtful person was heard him. The black of blue in a large ballroom. The Red Cap, Ball Room, the blue that read him. Life. Doesn't Speak Well of Him. "Why did the last man who seemed here leave?" asked the woman's lodger. "I told him to go," answered the landlady. "And I don't want any more roomers like him. He should be living in a pig pen." "Rather careless, eh?" "Careless is altogether too mild a word, sir. I'm not fussy, because I can't afford to be, but I give you my word that I never put but one thing in his room that stayed clean." "What was that?" "His towel."
