"Seek Ye First=="

"FIRST THINGS FIRST" is just as important in RELIGION as it is in business. Steam beats the piston is more important than electric lights in the Pullman. This is true in all things. The chief purpose of the church in the world is to encourage men and women, boys and girls, to "seek FIRST the kingdom of God," which means "the kingdom of God" RIGHT NOW, here in Plymouth, as well as in eternity. Let us engage in all the civic, social and moral reforms, but let us do them in their order, second, or third, or fourth. Let us not delude ourselves into the belief that they should be done FIRST from a religious point of view. "Seeking FIRST the kingdom of God" is simply getting acquainted with Jesus Christ, on Sunday and Monday and Tuesday and every other day. It means BEING SOMETHING as well as doing something; it means something added to your life, and nothing worth while taken away. We are anxious not only that you should get acquainted with us, but also with Jesus Christ, the best friend man ever had or can have. Is this not worth your while? We seek not your's but you.

WELCOME

Marse Van March 16 and 17

The home talent play Marse Van to be given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian church at the opera house, Monday and Tuesday evenings, March 16-17, promises to be something extra good in the way of entertainment. The play is under the direction of Mr. W. J. Hall, who has had considerable experience in work of this kind. The play is a Virginia romance, and in the hands of some of Plymouth's best histrionic talent is sure to be a success. There will also be several good specialties, with an entire change for both evenings. A four-piece orchestra will furnish the music. The stage decorations will be in the hands of Haineymer, the well known decorator and florist of Detroit, which is ample proof that this feature alone will be well worth seeing. The general admission has been placed at 25c. Seats went on sale at J. W. Bickens' drug store this morning. You can get them reserved without extra charge. For cost of characters see ad on this page of the Mail.

Shriner Band Scores A Big Hit Here

A large audience greeted the Moslem Temple Band, of Detroit, at the opera house Monday evening and if the liberal applause that was given each number on the program in any criterion, the band and the other gentlemen on the program scored a big hit with the large audience. Dr. Russell Pearce, president of Moslem Temple, made a few introductory remarks in which he gave a short history of the band and told a few stories in a most entertaining manner. The band of thirty pieces gave a splendid program of classical and popular music that was greatly appreciated by the audience. While this organization is composed of members of Moslem Temple and is only an amateur band, yet their playing would do credit to a professional band. J. J. Reuther sang a tenor solo in an exceptionally fine manner and responded to an encore. Frank Wilcox in a monologue introducing the German Congressman was great and kept the audience in an uproar. Billy Baker, Captain General of Arab Patrol, gave a monologue that was one of the big hits of the evening. His funny stories, and he had a fund of them too, had the audience a going every minute. It was a splendid evening's entertainment and should the Moslem Temple Band ever favor Plymouth with another visit they will be accorded a most hearty reception indeed. Come again gentlemen.

A Pretty Home Wedding

A pretty wedding was solemnized last Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Huston in Canton, when their oldest daughter, Seda, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Kelly of Ypsilanti. The house was prettily decorated in pink and white, and the wedding service was performed by Rev. Addis Leeson of Ypsilanti, under a beautiful ball of pink and white roses. The bride was daintily gowned in cream shadow lace over cream satin and was unattended. Miss Clara Barker of Sheldon, played the wedding march. After the service a wedding supper was served to about 100 guests. The gifts were numerous and costly, and the happy couple have the best wishes of many friends. They will reside on a farm near Ypsilanti. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Wyman Hartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schrader and Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Huston of this place.

Hundreds of pleased customers are carrying away great bargains at Riggs' big sale, why not you.

Miss Verna Willett received a box of flowers this week from Mrs. A. E. Miller of San Diego, California. Mrs. Miller was a former resident of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Griffith of Detroit, wrote over Sunday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thilston. Mr. Thilston has been very sick, but is much better at this writing.

The MAID of the FOREST

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harmar, meets Simon Girty, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Harmar, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort.

"I do not trust the villain, but I'll hear his tale. I may need you, Mr. Hayward; remain there in the back room until I call."

"I could see no door."

"Where, sir?"

"In the den, beyond the robe hides the entrance. If I need you I will call. The dog is coming now."

The interior of this room which I now entered for the first time was a revelation to me. It was fitted up as a lounge room, a den; yet bearing more resemblance to the tepee of a savage, than any abode of civilization. The trappings of war, the trophies of the chase, were everywhere in evidence. I saw all this with a single glance as I shut the door, yet almost with the instant, my entire attention was riveted upon an occupant, and I stood motionless, scarcely crediting my own eyes, as I stared across the table at the couch against the farther wall. It was in shadow, underneath the window, draped by a yellow blanket, and in one cushioned corner sat a girl, her dark head bent low over an open book. So intent was she upon the pages that she had not heard my entrance, or else remained indifferent, thinking me no stranger to the apartment.

She was young, scarcely out of her girlhood from the clear profile of her cheek, olive-tinted in the shadow, with a profusion of hair black as night, and a figure slender, but not tall. I moved rattling the latch to attract attention to my presence, yet the witch never glanced up, turning a page of her book lazily.

"Your pardon," I ventured, and cap in hand, advanced to the table nearer her.

She came to her feet in an instant, the book sliding to the floor, the long black lashes no longer shadowing the dark eyes gazing toward me in sudden interest. She was small, swift of movement as a forest hare, yet for the instant I saw only her face, and the unfathomable depths of those eyes. They were full of bewilderment, surprise, laughter. As though some mysterious message had passed between us, I knew she was glad I had come.

"Why, monsieur," she exclaimed, hesitating slightly over the words, "I am startled! You should feel my heart beat—so fast. I thought it the general, yes—who else? But I never saw you before; you—you are an officer of the Americans?"

"Yes, I belong to this garrison. But the surprise of finding you here was mine also. I was not told the room was occupied—and you are French?"

"You do not know me, monsieur?" Her eyes drooping, then upflitting again. "An' you an officer of the Americans?"

"No; I have been absent hunting. I only returned an hour ago."

"Then the woods? Way out beyond? An' you saw no Indian, no French courier des bois?"

"Not one; only a white renegade I brought in with me bearing a message."

"From the tribes, monsieur? From Detroit?"

"From the tribes, yes," I answered, surprised at her eagerness, yet seeing no harm in a frank reply, "but they were in council at Sandusky."

"Sandusky!" the word seemed to cling to her lips. "He—he was a Frenchman then?"

"Who? The messenger? Not he. We can understand the relationship between the Canadian French and the savages. They have always been friends, but this cur is of another breed—warring against his own people."

She leaned forward, the laughter, all gone from her eyes.

"Who—who was he, monsieur?" I hesitated, wondering at her insistence, her eagerness. She leaned forward, almost touching me with her fingers.

"Please, monsieur; you can tell me." "A white dog named Girty; we know him well."

"Shooa Girty!" her hands clasped, her lips unconsciously repeating the name. "And from Sandusky? You say he brought message from the tribes? Mon Dieu! The strange they should choose him. He said so, monsieur?"

"He claimed to represent the tribes, but his message was from Hamilton."

"An' he is there—at Sandusky—this Monsieur Hamilton?"

"He was there—yes; at least so Girty reports; but I know nothing of where he may be now—back in Detroit likely, plotting new mischief."

My indignant speech had slight effect on her, for she laughed as I ended. "But was done most well—so fine I tell, monsieur. But why you say that to me? Because I am here? In this den of the Americans generally? And we are together, we are alone. My people are yonder in the woods; I have not those long faces who sing psalms. Tell me, monsieur," she touched my hands, her pleading eyes looking up into mine, "why is set you are here? I can be trusted."

"I stared down into her eager face, almost believing I must be dreaming, yet conscious enough of her deep earnestness. What was it she thought or imagined? Could she mistake me for another? Or deceived as to my identity? The thought seemed impossible, almost ridiculous. How should it be, when I stood before her in uniform, and had already declared myself an officer of the garrison? The eyes gazing up at me seemed misty, as though they held unshed tears.

"Please, monsieur," she urged anxiously. "I am but a girl—a girl of the north—yet I can be trusted. Tell me quick, so I can help."

"But I do not understand, mademoiselle, I have told you who I am. Why should you speak like this?"

"Because I know you," she insisted. "Because I have seen you before."

"Know me!" I smiled, indulgent of her whim, convinced now that I dealt with a mind diseased. "That is hardly possible."

"But I do, Monsieur Hayward. I do. Have you no memory of me? Of my face? Why are you so afraid to have faith?"

She had spoken my name, and I gazed at her in wide-eyed astonishment. Surely he had never met, yet how could she know?

"Am I not right?"

"Yes, but I have no memory of seeing you before, and you are not one to be easily forgotten. Tell me who you are?"

The dimples exhibited themselves in either cheek, yet she faced me without a movement.

"Eet is not right you should forget, monsieur; eet is no compliment. Yet I will answer; I am not afraid, and then you must remember. I am Renee D'Auvray."

The name meant nothing, told nothing.

"Renee D'Auvray?" I repeated dumbly, striving to make the sound familiar. "Oul, monsieur; now—"

She sprang back beyond the table, one finger at her lips. The door opened at my back.

"Now, Hayward," said Harmar's voice

"Not clearly, sir; because of some prisoners we hold, is it not?"

"It was Greek to me, also, until Girty explained. That is where trouble arises. We have no such prisoner, but if I send that word back by Girty, they will believe I lied. But if an officer of this garrison goes boldly to them, in response to their challenge; faces them at their council fire, and says so openly they will probably accept his word."

"If the Wyandots join the other tribes it will mean war?"

"Yes; the length and breadth of the frontier. I have no force with which to meet them; hundreds of lives—men, women and children—will be destroyed; settlements ruined. I doubt if there be a white man left north of the Ohio in three months if those hounds break loose. This is not my work, endeavoring to treat with those red devils. It is the duty of the governor. But St. Clair is away; I have no means of reaching him with this information. The Wyandots demand instant reply, and our messenger must reach them as soon as, if not before, the return of Girty."

"Do I have my choice of scouts?" "Certainly."

"Then I will take Brady, sir."

"The best man available. I would have named him, only I feared your late trouble had left you enfeebled."

"Not at all; it was a fair fight."

I sat thinking in silence, and Harmar waited. The danger of the journey unrolled before me in imagination—the perilous waterways; the long trail through the trackless woods, menaced by roving Indian bands; the hostile tribes in council; the chances of treachery and death lurking in every step of the way. Audacity, determination, the lives dependent on my success, gave me courage. It was a work someone must do. I drew the letter over again, and studied it.

"You are sure, general, this 'Wa-pa-tee-tah' is not in our hands? At some of the other forts?"

"As sure as I can be; I heard from Pitt yesterday, with reports from the garrison between, and no account was made of such a prisoner being brought in. Hambrook wrote me from Vincennes two weeks ago—some French voyageurs left the letter on their way up the river—and he mentions nothing save his trouble with the Indians of the Wabash, who are most impatient and unruly—the worst of the lot, by my notion, I expect the fellow has been killed in the woods."

"A man, then? A chief?" To my ear the name had feminine sound—"Wa-pa-tee-tah; 'tis as musical as a brook."

"Ay! it sounds like that; but Girty gave me some other name; I have forgotten. Gad! I hated so to talk with the foul-mouthed renegade, that I asked few questions; only you may be sure 'tis no squaw the Wyandots would war over. A medicine man, or something of that kind, say I understand;

"Then I am to talk boldly; threaten, if necessary?"

"I've done with that scoundrel, and would speak again with you."

My eyes hung for just an instant to those of the girl, shrinking back into the shadows. Then I turned and went out, my mind full of bewilderment.

CHAPTER III.

A Perilous Venture.

General Harmar strode across the room to his chair, and sat down, starting out of the window, his eyes frowning. I closed the door, and stood waiting, swiftly determining to discover the identity of that young woman within, and feeling slight heed of aught else. Harmar turned his eyes toward me, surveying me a moment in silence.

"What do you weigh, Hayward?" he snapped out, as tho' noting my girth for the first time.

"Two hundred and thirty, sir."

"Huh! and every inch muscle and bone from the look of you. I've got some serious work picked out for you. How far north have you ever been?"

"To the forks of the Muskingum."

He drummed with his fingers on the table; then pored over a rough map. "Huh! the hard travel will be beyond, after you leave the boat. Would you undertake a journey to Sandusky?"

"Alone, sir?" I asked, startled at the question, the distance vague in my mind.

"With a scout, who knows the woods," he answered, studying my face, "and an enlisted man to cook, and do odd jobs around camp. A small party is better than a large one on such a trip." He paused, thinking.

"I will obey orders, sir. I am a soldier."

"Yes!" he got to his feet. "But now that isn't what I want. I expect my men to do that. But this is not strictly a military matter, and I give you no orders. I need a confidential messenger, a man of intelligence and nerve; but he will take his life in his hand, and possibly to no purpose. I half suspect treachery, and will order no officer of my command to such hazardous service."

He stopped, and stood staring out of the window, his broad back toward me. "You must deem this matter of grave importance," I said, firmly, "and need seek no further; I volunteer to go."

He wheeled about, and grasped my hand.

"I thought so, Hayward. I am not often mistaken in a man, and I like your face. Yet do not be too hasty in decision. Sit down here, where we can have the map between us, until I can explain what hell is brewing in the pot of those north woods. What think you honestly of Simon Girty?"

"Everything bad; a scoundrel from head to foot."

"Ay! yet Hamilton uses him. The man was a messenger, even as he claimed. The Englishman wrote that with his own hand; I have seen the writing before."

He pushed the crumpled bit of paper across, and I read the crooked lines slowly, for the penmanship was almost illegible. Twice I read it, half convinced my brain played me some trick.

"Is this true, sir?"

"Some of it is; enough to make me afraid it may all be. The exact situation is this, Hayward. The tribes of the northwest are ready for war. In spite of the influence of the chiefs many of the young men are already on the war trail. They are in small parties ranging the woods, attacking outlying settlements and hunters. Stories of outrages come drifting in here every day. Nothing prevents a general outbreak but British restraint, and the opposition of the Wyandots."

"A strong nation."

"The most important in the Indian alliance. They are no friends of ours, yet they claim to be Christian, converted by French Jesuits, and thus far the priests have held them on the side of peace. For the first time their chiefs have met in council with the others and threaten war. Do you understand the cause?"

"Not clearly, sir; because of some prisoners we hold, is it not?"

"It was Greek to me, also, until Girty explained. That is where trouble arises. We have no such prisoner, but if I send that word back by Girty, they will believe I lied. But if an officer of this garrison goes boldly to them, in response to their challenge; faces them at their council fire, and says so openly they will probably accept his word."

"If the Wyandots join the other tribes it will mean war?"

Audacity, determination, the lives dependent on my success, gave me courage. It was a work someone must do. I drew the letter over again, and studied it.

Girty said a religious teacher, whom the tribe loved more than a chief."

I crossed the narrow room twice, endeavoring to sum up the evidence clearly.

"A poor pretense for war, surely," I said at last, "but might be sufficient to Indian mind."

"More than one war, even among civilized nations, has been started on less," he answered soberly. "Besides, it is my judgment all those devils want is an excuse. They may have manufactured this out of whole cloth; to me it don't look reasonable. But you have all the facts now, Hayward, and can understand what to say and do. Those red devils know our weakness, and are wild to break loose. If I send back a formal letter by the hands of their messenger, denying any knowledge of this medicine man of theirs, and expressing regret at his disappearance, they will consider it a lie. I know Indian nature; they have got to be bluff at their own game. Show fear, and they are after you at once, the whole pack in full cry; face them boldly, and they hesitate. If you go straight to them, through the woods to their council fire, an officer of this garrison, in uniform, they will interpret your coming as a sign that we are not afraid of their threats."

"Then I am to talk boldly; threaten, if necessary?"

"With discretion—yes. It is our only chance to avert war. The scheme may not work, but if it even results in delay, it will be worth the effort."

"When do I start?"

"At dusk tonight. Come here first for full instructions, and a letter to Hamilton. You will go up the Muskingum to the forks by boat, and then straight through the woods. There must be no loitering on the march."

"There will be none, sir; and what about Girty?"

"I will hold him on some pretext until morning. Your party will have fifteen hours' start."

There seemed nothing more, and, after waiting a moment in silence, I saluted.

"Very well, sir; that is all?"

"All at present."

I turned toward the door, then hesitated, as memory suddenly returned.

"Pardon me, general," I said impulsively, "but I met a young woman in the room yonder. Might I inquire who she may be?"

He stared at me with open mouth, then laughed.

"The witch! I never knew she was in there, Hayward, or I should never have exposed you to such danger. Said she anything about herself?"

"Only her name—Renee D'Auvray."

"Huh! that does not sound much like the one she gave me, though by my soul, I've forgotten it; 'twas just as Franchised, and I never dared to speak it aloud. How came she to tell you?"

"That's the odd part of it, sir. She knew me, called me 'Monsieur Hayward,' and insisted I would remember her when she named herself. Then she did, but it was no name I ever heard before, nor have I ever seen the face; I'd swear to that."

"And she is not the sort to be forgotten easily. If they raise such devils in the Illinois country, I would like service there. The tale is, as repeated by the soldiers who talked with the boatmen, that she seeks her father, who left this Kaskaskia a year since with Vigo, on a journey up the Ohio. She stops at each settlement to inquire, and the girl has money—French and English gold in plenty. Yet, if this be the truth, there is small hunting done. Once only was she at the village for an hour; nor has she spoken yet of departure. She puzzles me with her pert speech, and French talk, for she pretends little understanding of English. But that my wife likes her I should have sent the hussy on her way before now."

"But, general," I asked, still lingering, "how came she to know my name?"

"Perhaps you spoke it first in her hearing."

"Not I, sir; we spoke of other matters."

India's new winter capital, new building near Simla, will, it is now estimated, cost $40,000,000, and when the work is well under way from 15,000 to 20,000 men will steadily be employed. Twenty-five miles of tramway are being laid about the site. The general work is considerably backward.

Capt. Ragsdale Testifies That Discipline Was Lax at First But Men Settled Down and Conduct Was Excellent.

Chicago—Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, Tuesday night told the congressional committee investigating the Michigan copper strike of his deportation from the mining district last December.

Three men, he said, entered his hotel room in Hancock the night of his deportation. They asked him if he would receive a larger committee of citizens, and on agreeing to this, Moyer said, 15 or 18 other men entered the room.

They asked if he would permit the citizens to contribute to the relief of the survivors of the Christmas eve disaster at Italian hall.

Moyer said he replied that he had not told the members of the federation they should not accept outside help in caring for their dead, but said the families felt they ought not to, and that he would not advise them to accept relief contributed by those outside the federation.

The rest of Moyer's story was just as he had told it before.

The defense of the Michigan National Guard before the committee was concluded. Captain R. O. Aagsdale, United States army instructor, observed the conduct of the men. He said that at first the men seemed to look on the situation as a joke, and the discipline was not of the best, but later the men settled down and he considered their conduct excellent.

COURT WILL NOT REVIEW CASE.

Pardon Only Can Save Union Officials From Prison.

Washington—The supreme court refused to review the conviction in the "dynamiting cases" of Frank M. Ryan, and 23 other members of the iron workers' union. Only a pardon can now keep the convicted men from the penitentiary.

The convictions were based largely on the confession of Ortle McManigal and James B. McNamara, former secretary of the union. The crimes for which the dynamiters were convicted were transportation of dynamite and high explosives in interstate commerce. Their conviction had been confirmed by the federal circuit court of appeals at Chicago.

Mellen Freed of Manslaughter Charge

Bridgeport, Conn.—By sustaining a demurrer filed by counsel for Charles S. Mellen, Judge Tuttle of the superior court Tuesday wiped out the charge of manslaughter on which the former president of the New Haven road was arrested following the disastrous wreck at Westport, October, 1912, in which many persons lost their lives. Mellen will not be brought to trial unless State's Attorney Judson should proceed further under a new bill of particulars.

Gives Sleds to Boys and Girls.

Harbor Springs, Mich.—Ephraim Shay, inventor of the Shay locomotive, whose home and private machine shops are located here, has just completed 460 pairs of bob-sleds, which he has presented to the girls and boys of the village.

Early in January, Mr. Shay, who is over 70 and a lover of children, publicly announced that he would give every girl and boy of the town a pair of coasting bobs.

Sex hygiene will not be taught in the schools of Saginaw. The pupils will be reached through the mothers. The eastside school board has made arrangements for a series of lectures in all east-side school houses to which the mothers will be invited. Four women doctors will talk to the mothers.

Edwin P. Knight, aged 76, and one of the best known pioneer residents of Eaton county, died suddenly Saturday of neuralgia of the heart. He was the first white child born in Eaton Rapids—and had always resided here.

Peter Grosbeck, the 70-year-old farmer who was found by his son Tuesday night unconscious from escaping gas in his home, near Lapeer, died Friday. He never regained consciousness, being asleep for 86 hours.

As a result of a survey which has been made by Hillsdale high school concerning the illiteracy for work to follow graduation, the following results have been obtained: Agricultural lines, 10 per cent; commercial work, 16 per cent; school teaching, 17 per cent; higher school work, 50 per cent.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Grand Rapids.—When St. John's Orphan asylum was found to be on fire, the children, awakened suddenly from their sleep, marched in order from the building and no one was hurt. The fire damage was slight.

Kalamazoo.—Kalamazoo prisoners who work on the roads this year will also be compelled to raise their own vegetables. The good roads commission decided at a meeting to have the prisoners work on the county farm also.

Standish.—The Arenac school, about five miles east of town, was closed this morning on account of diphtheria and the Pine River school, five miles east. There are now three cases and it is feared several pupils attending school were exposed and that an epidemic may result.

Ann Arbor.—Three physicians appointed to inquire into the mentality of Edward Jahnke, who recently shot A. Clever Wilkinson, have returned a verdict that he is insane. Jahnke was taken to the sick bed of his mother to stay good-by. He will be taken to the asylum for criminal insane at Ionia.

Lansing.—Richard Baldwin, an employe of the Atlas Ford Forge company, was shot in the thigh and hand by his wife, Myrtle Baldwin. The pair were separated for two years. She visited him and wanted to return. He refused and she tried to kill him with a revolver. In the scuffle he was shot, but not dangerously. The woman has not been arrested.

Standish.—Fire, which started from a defective flue in the kitchen of the Hannon house, the only hotel in Au Gres, 15 miles east of here, destroyed the hotel, a livery stable and several other buildings. The damage exceeds $12,000. The hotel, which is owned by Charles Dougherty, who also owns the livery stable, was the oldest in north of Bay City and was built years before there was any railroad in this vicinity. It will be rebuilt.

Sandusky.—Alger Jarrett, ten years old, died at his home two miles west of here. In 1911 he swallowed a stove bolt while playing. No bad effect was noticed until two years later when he was treated for an abscess of the lungs. He was taken to Port Huron last July and an X-ray examination showed the bolt lodged in a lung. In Chicago, in December the bolt was removed, but the lad has been steadily falling since the operation.

Ann Arbor.—Acacia fraternity dedicated its new $30,000 lodge with a reception, for which 400 invitations were issued, and a formal dinner and dance in honor of the house guests, the Misses McIntosh, Ypsanti; Vera Maynard and Bernice Vernier of Charlotte; Lydia Nagle, Albion; Julia Collins, Howard City; Bertine Collins, Otsego; Marietta Van Ness, Colon; Helen Ehrman, Detroit, and their chaperon, Mrs. L. C. Goodrich of this city. The house was beautifully decorated with palms, feathery ferns and quantities of cut spring flowers.

Potosky.—Emmet county's only "wild man" is in "limbo." He is Clarence Purchis, who has lived for several months in a lonely shack near Pelletton. He was taken to Stanton to face a grand larceny charge. Purchis has frightened people away from his shack, declaring he would never be taken alive, and boasting of being wanted on different charges in Kent and Montcalm counties. Under Sheriff Tuttle and a deputy, disguised as hunters, surprised Purchis and at the point of guns handcuffed him and brought him to the Potosky jail. The man has a wife and three children whose care is puzzling officials here.

Hillsdale.—Fire which started by the overturning of a stove in the Gene Yarrick printing office, gutted the Waldron block, entailing a loss of $25,000 to the building, and several thousand dollars more to the occupants of stores and offices in the building. The principal losers by the fire are: S. P. Bull & Son, drugs, stock, $9,000; insurance $7,000; Spencer Furniture company, loss $4,000; insurance $2,000; Game Yarrick, loss $1,000; insurance $500; Lloyd Boyer, attorney, loss $1,000; insurance $500. One of the legs of the stove was jarred from beneath it by the vibration of the press, causing it to turn over.

Port Huron.—Following an investigation of Port Huron's water supply, Secretary of the State Board of Health Burkhardt and State Engineer Rich met with the newly appointed water commission this evening, participating in the regular discussion which has already resulted in improved conditions. The

By WALTER WILLIAMS, LL.D.
(Dean of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri)

GERMANY—A REPUBLIC?

Munich, Bavaria.—"Every Social Democrat is synonymous with enemy of the nation and of the fatherland." The words are from an official letter of William II, emperor of Germany. Again and again, in spirit if not in exact substance, he has repeated the statement. Nor has the German emperor, more powerful than any other European monarch, hesitated to use his enormous power toward suppression of the party which he so vigorously denounces.

Electorate 30 Per Cent. Socialist.

He has allied with him in this determined opposition the clerical and conservative classes, combinations of capital and possessors of privilege, the agricultural interests, the less radical liberals of the middle class and yet—nearly one voter in every three in Germany is a Social Democrat, the largest single party in the Social Democratic party and its membership, organized on military and well-disciplined lines, is, with occasional and temporary lapses, steadily increasing. The figures which political statistics furnish showing its progress are sufficiently impressive as to its growing strength and importance. In thirty years it has increased the number of its voters from 300,000 to more than 3,000,000, from 6 to 30 per cent. of the total number of votes polled, with 110 representatives, despite an absurdly inequitable suffrage system, in a reichstag or parliament of 397 members.

Far more impressive even than these figures are the conversations of the Man in the Street, the program which to him is gospel, the organization which he has built up and maintained, and Vorwärts (Forward) the trenchant daily newspaper which he reads. These will count, whether we approve or disapprove, in tomorrow's Germany, and tomorrow's Germany is to loom large in tomorrow's world.

What Social Democrats Demand.
The party platform or program may be summed up in few words. The editor of Vorwärts declared it thus: "Adult suffrage, one vote for each man and each woman; government responsible to parliament; local self-government; referendum; voluntary militia; freedom of speech and of the press; equality of woman and man before the law; no state church; compulsory attendance, with free tuition at state schools; free legal proceedings, medical attendance and burial, provided by the state; progressive income tax and succession duty."

In advocating this program the Social Democratic party has other and less clearly defined purposes. It is committed, through its leaders, to an attack upon the church which has led its more radical members and official utterances to approve atheism. "The party is confessedly and entirely atheistic," said a Berlin Conservative Journalist. "On the contrary, the man in the street, while attacking the church as a kind of class privilege is frequently careful to distinguish between church and religion, between ecclesiasticism and the Deity. Indeed, an entire section of the party or ally of it, the Christian Social Union, as its name suggests, is at variance with the doctrines of atheism.

For Peace and His Throne.
The abolition of monarchy is, of course, held as an end to which the Social Democrats look forward. It is not strange that the emperor views the party with such scornful and vehement disapproval. The assertion is often heard in German cafes that the emperor, war lord as he is, and seeker after military renown, has been constrained to become an advocate of peace many times, and just now in the latest—but not the last—Balkan struggle, for the predominant reason that a war might and probably would mean the downfall of the monarchy. Peace and a throne have been preferred above war and William Hohenzollern, private citizen. The Kaiser keeps his own counsel and the assertion may be wholly unjustified, but there have been twenty-five years without war and the emperor at Berlin still reigns and rules.

The purpose of a program is sometimes more indicative of a party's desire than the program itself. This huge workingmen's party has expressed its purpose in much writing. Of making many books on the Social Democratic party in Germany there is no end. Much translated quotation therefrom is a weariness to the flesh. A single quotation from an official handbook of the party, with an early announcement of purpose, furnished at the office of Vorwärts, the official organ, will suffice:

"The aim of Social Democracy is not to divide all property, but to combine it and use it for the development and improvement of mankind, in order to give to all a life worthy of man. Work shall become a duty for all men able to work. The word of the Bible, 'He that does not work neither shall he eat,' shall become a true word.

Declares for Love Marriages.

"Marriage, in contradiction to religious teachings, is innumerable cases a financial transaction pure and simple. Woman has value in the eyes of man only when she has a fortune and the more money she has the higher rises her value. Therefore marriage has become a business, and thousands meet in the marriage market, for instance, by advertisements in newspapers, in which a husband or a wife is sought in the same way in which a house or a pig is offered for sale. Consequently unhappy marriages have never been more numerous than at the present time, a state of affairs which is in contradiction to the real nature of marriage. Social Democracy desires that marriages be concluded solely from mutual love and esteem, which is only possible if man and woman are free and independent. If each has a free existence and an individual personality, and is therefore not compelled to buy the other or to be bought. This state of freedom and equality is only possible in the socialistic society.

"Who desires to belong to a church shall not be hindered, but he only shall pay for the expenses of his church together with his co-religionists.

"The schools and the whole educational system shall be separated from the church and religious societies, because education is a civil matter.

Wants Brotherhood of Nations.

"The God of Christians is not a German, French, Russian or English God, but a God of all men, an International God. God is the God of love and peace and therefore it borders upon blasphemy that the priests of different Christian nations invoke this God of love to give victory to their nation in the general slaughter. It is equally blasphemous if the priest of one nation prays the God of all nations for a victory over another nation. In striving to found a brotherhood of nations and the peaceful co-operation of nations in the service of civilization, Social Democracy acts

Is Substantially a Unit.
What is the future of the Social Democratic party? Others than the German Kaiser and those of the established order are asking this question most seriously. In part due to its influence, though perhaps more largely due to the paternalism of the government and other causes, much progress has been made in the wide field of social reform. The party has remained substantially a unit. Bebel's towering influence aided in maintaining this unity. His successor, without Bebel's historical importance though possessed of his ability, may not be able to prevent the rise of discordant factions and the destruction of the party, as so many other parties have been destroyed, on the rock of personal ambition.

Already three distinct schools or factions struggle for supremacy. The older and more radical faction wish to insist on all their reforms in their entirety or none; the younger, or revisionist elements, apparently now the stronger, are willing to join with the Liberals and others to get half a loaf today rather than no bread, expecting the whole loaf tomorrow; a third and influential faction seek to harmonize the old and the new schools, preserving unity of action.

Party's Future Provision.
Discussion of the general strike as a political weapon is acute just now as is criticism by the radicals of their representatives in the reichstag who voted, according to the revisionist principles, for direct instead of indirect taxation for military purposes as the lesser of two evils. These discussions are of less consequence than consideration of the future of the party as a whole. There are no signs that this future will be less important in the empire than has been the party's past. Indeed the contrary appears probable. The Social Democratic party, in a country where men and women are educated to understand and do what they are told without asking for any reasons, is superbly organized. Its leaders have courage, common sense, ability, the confidence of the rank and file. It is the one potential political force for democracy in Germany today. All that it hopes it may not soon, if at all, accomplish. Under its influence, however, or the influence of the party or parties into which it breathes life, bureaucracy, feudalism and caste, now so obnoxious in this mighty nation, will be shorn of much of their offensiveness and power. Short of socialism, Germany may be content with a republic.

Whatever else may come from the determined struggles of the Social Democrats, it is certain that William II is the last German emperor who will write in the Golden Book of Munich Suprema Lex Regis Voluntas. His successor, Kaiser or president, will write rather the motto on Missouri's coat of arms, "Salus Populi Suprema Lex Esto." He will live up to the motto, or, failing, lose his job or, perhaps, even his head. For this Germany has the Social Democratic party, aided and abetted by the German emperor himself, to thank.

August Bebel.
In a most Christian spirit, and tries to realize what the Christian priest of all nations, together with the Christian monarchs, hitherto would not or could not realize. By combining the workers of nations, Social Democracy tries to effect a federation of nations in which every state enjoys equal rights and in which the peculiarities of the inner character of every nation may peacefully develop.

The anti-socialist finds in these principles attacks upon the state, society, the monarchy, the family, the church, and is quick to denounce both program and principles.

Leaders Able; Followers Devoted.
The Social Democratic party is remarkable in the high personal character and ability of its leaders and in the well-nigh blind devotion of the followers. Almost exclusively a party of workingmen, strongest in the industrial centers, its leaders are men from the ranks who, in many cases, give their services without pay, supporting themselves and their families by daily toil in shop or factory.

The funeral in Switzerland of August Bebel, long the leader of the party, took place a few days ago. The praises to Bebel's intellect and character were numerous even in the government press. Before his portrait, draped in crepe in the window of the Vorwärts newspaper office, was seen a veritable procession of German workingmen, reverently pausing to pay silent tribute. While Bebel was alive the great German historian, Professor Mommsen, had written: "Everybody in Germany knows that with brains like those of Bebel it would be possible to furnish forth a dozen noblemen from east of the Elbe in a fashion that would make them shine among their peers." Of the followers Professor Mommsen wrote: "The devotion, the self-sacrificing spirit of the Social Democratic masses, impresses even those who are far from sharing their aims."

Some Causes of Party's Growth.

The German government tried force to suppress the growth of the Social Democratic party and then prosecution of its leaders, but without avail. Workmen's insurance followed—minus the unemployed benefit of Great Britain—but this, too, had no effect. The party continued to grow. The immorality suggested by the advertising in the newspapers and by the terrible fact that one of every ten births in Germany is illegitimate, the low wages and crowded housing of the working classes, the official caste system, even the democracy taught in the schools, where sons of Kaiser and day laborer sit on the same benches causes contributing to its growth.

The founder of the Social Democratic party in Germany was William Liebknecht who began, at the suggestion of his wife, the movement. Liebknecht was a poor journalist. When he had created and organized the party and was serving in his old age as editor of Vorwärts, after having been in jail from time to time for his political opinions boldly expressed, he was sharply cross-examined by a committee of the party as to his household expenses and censured for keeping a domestic servant and accepting a salary as editor instead of living like an ordinary workman.

Not a Job-Getting Party.
The party has succeeded to the present time in maintaining a strict discipline among its members. It is, of course, in its discipline by the spirit of organization which is drilled into the German from childhood. Its leaders are never beyond party criticism, but its masses act as a unit under the leaders' direction. It has added strength because it has not permitted itself to be used by politicians to get jobs. It has been a cause which has held the members together rather than a campaign to get offices. All this, added to the considerable and widespread industrial discontent, has increased the membership of the party, bringing to it at the elections many bankers, merchants and professional men of advanced Liberal views who were disappointed at the ineffectiveness of the Liberal parties—which like most else in Germany live under government inspiration—and displeased at the ineptitude of their leaders.

WATERY BLISTERS ON FACE

Smithville, Ind.—"Six months ago our baby girl, one year old, had a few red pimples come on her face which gradually spread causing her face to become very irritated and a fiery red color. The pimples on the child's face were at first small watery blisters, but a small blotch on the skin. She kept scratching at this until in a few days her whole cheeks were fiery red color and instead of the little blisters the skin was cracked and scaly looking and seemed to itch and burn very much.

"We used a number of remedies which seemed to give relief for a short time then leave her face worse than ever. Finally we got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed the child's face with very warm water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Cuticura Ointment very lightly. After doing this about three times a day the itching and burning seemed entirely gone in two days' time. Inside of two weeks' time her face seemed well. That was eight months ago and there has been no return of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. A. K. Wooden, Nov. 4, 1912.

35 BUSHELS PER ACRE was the yield of WHEAT

On many farms in Western Canada in 1913, some yields being reported as high as 60 bushels per acre. As high as 100 bushels were recorded in some districts for wheat. From 10 to 20 bush. for flax.

J. Keys arrived in the country 5 years ago from Denmark, with very little means. He homesteaded, worked hard, and now the owner of 320 acres of land in 1913 had a crop of 300 acres, which will realize about $4,000. His wheat weighed 68 lbs. to the bushel and averaged over 30 bushels to the acre.

Thousands of similar instances might be related of farmers homesteaders in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The crop of 1913 was an abundant one everywhere in Western Canada.

Why "Bucket Shop."
The phrase "bucket shop" originated in Chicago. The board of trade prohibited dealings in grain options in less amounts than 5,000 bushels. An open board was established for small gamblers under the rooms of regular board. When business was slack in the regular board the speculator would be sent down from the "bucketful" of speculators from the unauthorized exchange, which came to be known as the "bucket shop."

SCHOOL NOTES.
The second grade held chapel exercises Monday. They have lately been studying the life of Joseph, having various children retell the story. Some new books, including "The Four Wonders," "Nature's Wonder Lore" and "Old Fashioned Fairy Tales" are being enjoyed by the second grade. The fourth grade has invested in a quantity of packages of flower seeds to plant this spring. Birdie Bell is back in the fifth grade after a week's sickness. The fifth grade has finished the study of the booklets containing the writings of Longfellow. Floyd Eckles, one of the 1913 graduates, paid a visit to the school last Monday. Mr. Isbell is to teach Psychology and not Physiology, as the paper stated last week, at the Ypsilanti State Normal summer session. Dr. Ditman has written a valuable cyclopedia of health for the home, entitled "Home Hygiene and the Prevention of Disease" (Duffield), which I should like to place in the hands of all parents able to read newspapers. The illness and physical defects of children in the pre-school period weakens the work of the school. Taken from an article by Louis W. Raper in "School and Education."

It's The Difference That Counts
There's a difference in the way motor cars run; a difference in appearance; a difference in where they can go and where they can't, and a difference in the cost of operation. It's this difference the careful buyer wants to know about.
A Buick car is built in the Buick shops and means better material and better workmanship at a minimum of cost. A combination which gives the Buick owner the most for his money.

PRESIDENT READS TOLLS MESSAGE

URGES CONGRESS TO REPEAL THE EXEMPTION CLAUSE.

"IN VIOLATION OF TREATY"

Favoring of American Coastwise Vessels Declared by Chief Executive Also to Be Based on Mistaken Economic Policy.

Washington, March 5.—Declaring that the exemption of American coastwise shipping from the payment of Panama canal tolls was based upon a "mistaken economic policy" and was "in violation of our treaty with Great Britain," President Wilson today asked congress to repeal the act...

The president declared that all the world powers were unanimous in judgment that the exemption was in violation of our treaty obligations. Only in the United States, he said, was the exemption clause regarded as debatable or as open to question.

The president added that the United States "ought not to quibble" in the matter of a treaty obligation. He intimated that the Panama canal tolls question was involved in all the other foreign questions now before the United States, because he would not know how to deal with them unless the exemption is repealed.

The address follows: "Gentlemen of the Congress: I have come to you upon an errand which can be very briefly performed, but I beg that you will not measure its importance by the number of sentences in which I state it. No communication I have addressed to the congress carried with it graver or more far-reaching implications to the interest of the country and I now come to speak upon a matter with regard to which I am charged in a personal degree by the constitution itself with personal responsibility.

"I have come to ask for the repeal of that provision of the Panama canal act of August 24, 1912, which exempts vessels engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of tolls, and to urge upon you the justice, the wisdom, and the large policy of such a repeal with the utmost earnestness of which I am capable.

Exemption a Mistake. "In my own judgment, very fully considered and maturely formed, that exemption constitutes a mistaken economic policy from every point of view, and is, moreover, in plain contravention of the treaty with Great Britain concerning the canal concluded on November 18, 1901. But I have got come to you to urge my personal views. I have come to state to you a fact and a situation.

"Whatever may be our own differences of opinion concerning this much-debated measure, its meaning is not debated outside the United States. Everywhere else the language of the treaty is given but one interpretation, and that interpretation precludes the exemption I am asking you to repeal.

Consented to Treaty. "We consented to the treaty; its language we accepted; if we did not originate it; and we are too big, too powerful, too self-respecting a nation to interpret with too strained or refined a reading the words of our own promises just because we have power enough to give us leave to read them as we please. The large thing to do is the only thing we can afford to do, a voluntary withdrawal from a position everywhere questioned and misunderstood. We ought to reverse our action without raising the question whether we were right or wrong, and so once more deserve our reputation for generosity and the redemption of every obligation without quibble or hesitation.

"I ask this of you in support of the foreign policy of the administration. I shall not know how to deal with other meetings of even greater delicacy and nearer consequence if you do not grant it to me in ungrudging measure."
