Knights of Pythias' Day

The Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias Brotherhood has issued an official circular in which he says:

"I desire to call your special attention to the observance of Pythian Memorial—Decoration Day, and do hereby officially designate Sunday, June 14th, as the day for these rights in this Grand Domain. I am naming this one day as THE DAY in the hope that each and every lodge will make a special effort to meet in their respective Castle Halls (or in some appropriate place) at one and the same hour, that we may pay tribute to our departed brothers simultaneously. There is no more beautiful exemplification of the teachings of our great Brotherhood than our Memorial and Decoration Day Service, and I hope that every lodge will make a special effort to hold these services upon this day, and I can conceive of nothing that will be a greater inspiration to all members and their friends throughout the Domain; than for us to meet at the same hour and with one accord."

Pursuant to this request the Plymouth Orders of Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters will attend the morning service of

Judge Larwill Out for Congress

Adrian Man Makes Formal Announcement of His Candidacy for the Nomination on the Republican Ticket at the August Primaries.

Judge Harry L. Larwill, of Adrian, and one of Lenawee county's most prominent citizens and officials, who has been frequently mentioned as a probable candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the Second district, of which Plymouth is a part, has formally announced that he would enter the list for the August primaries. The announcement comes after several months of consideration and the earnest solicitation of the many friends of Judge Larwill in his home county and throughout the district, where he has received assurances of strong support at the coming primaries.

In his home county Judge Larwill has served as judge of probate with an unassailed term of service extending over 14 years and has won the respect and confidence of the citizens of the entire county. This was amply illustrated at the last election, when it was hard sledding for all Republicans, but the judge was re-elected being one of the two G. O. P. candidates on the county ticket to pull through. Judge Larwill's many qualifications would make him an ideal man to represent the Second district in congress. He is a man of sterling worth and character, a genial gentleman whom it is a pleasure to meet; an erudite of rare ability, possessed of splendid business ability, and above all a man who has a keen knowledge of the needs and rights of the people of the Second district. Should he receive the nomination and be elected as our representative to congress, he would serve this district with honor and distinction.

In commenting on his candidacy recently, Judge Larwill said:

"After a careful canvass of the political situation in the Second district, and at the solicitation of many friends, I have concluded to enter the race for the Republican nomination for congress this fall.

"For several months past considerable pressure has been brought to bear upon me to take a formal announcement of my candidacy, but I have preferred to wait until the situation in the district should be cleared and until I could learn whether the Republicans of the district, outside of the county of Lenawee, desired to present candidates for the office. As far as I have been able to learn, it seems to be generally conceded throughout the district that Lenawee county is entitled to this honor.

"I do not think it necessary, at this time, to make an announcement of my candidacy, but I am sure that my friends and supporters are well acquainted and have always been in every

Meeting of Plymouth Improvement Association Will Be Held at the Village Hall Tonight.

A fairly well attended meeting of the Plymouth Improvement Association was held at the village hall last week Thursday evening to listen to a proposition made by a couple of Detroit gentlemen to manufacture a cycle car. Briefly stated, the gentlemen said they had a money-making proposition in the manufacture of this car, had already a million dollars worth of orders for same in sight and all they lacked was the cash to go on and construct the machines. They asked the people of Plymouth for a cash subscription to stock in a company to be formed, the Plymouth people to subscribe $20,000 of a $50,000 capital, the $15,000 to be considered the interest of the Detroiters in the company, which was also to be managed by themselves.

W. H. Hoyt was chairman of the meeting and upon motion a committee of three was appointed to go down to Detroit and investigate the claims of the gentlemen, and report at a subsequent meeting. The gentlemen have several machines built and running, which are it is said, much superior to any other cycle car built.

The committee consisting of F. F. Schrader, John D. McLaren, Coelo Hamilton and W. H. Hoyt visited Detroit Tuesday. The committee were very favorably impressed with the proposition and President Schrader of the Improvement Association has called a meeting of the Association and all citizens who are interested in the welfare and progress of Plymouth, at the village hall this evening, (Friday) at 7:30 o'clock, when the committee will make its report. Everybody is urged to attend this meeting and see what can be done toward the securing of another industry for Plymouth. Be a booster.

Children's Day at the Presbyterian Church

Children's Day exercises were observed in the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening, and were largely attended.

The decorations about the platform were very pretty and most artistically arranged. The children of the Sunday-school gave a splendid program of recitations, dialogues and songs that was highly appreciated by those present. Leona VanDeCar gave a violin, and accompanied by Miss Bertha Beals on the organ that was finely rendered. The excellence of the program and its rendition reflects much credit upon the teachers and the children who took part.

"What's the Good of Going to Church?"

We are very largely creatures of habit. Our habits are good friends or bad friends. The habit of perusing the good news is most valuable, hence the habit of church going is one worthy of being cultivated. There can be no higher dream of living, than the dream of how to get into right relation with things, thoughts, men and God. Acquire the habit of making the most that is possible out of life here, because men do not understand their relationship to other men and to the wonderful and intricate world about them. They quarrel and fight, shedding each other blood in war. The Christian church is an institution to develop between man and man the best elements in human nature. The Christian church is the only organization that stands prominently for the development. It is the only organization that appeals for the development of the individual who permits his days to go by without acquiring the habit of associating with his fellow men in the work of this organization, is truly allowing his own better nature to be starved. We should find the place where we are most concerned, which appeals to the best within us and then give with earnestness our work and worship to that cause.

WILL REQUIRE A BILLION DOLLARS TO CLEAN MEXICO

Methods to Prevent Pestilences Hopelessly Out of Date.

WORK FOR THE MEDICAL MEN

Sanitation and Not Running Down of Banditti Will Be Task for U. S. If It Intervenes and Occupies Distracted Country.

Washington.—"It will cost a billion dollars to clean up Mexico," said a noted sanitary expert here. He referred to the medieval condition of the Mexican cities regarding measures for the prevention of pestilences. This work of sanitation and not the running down of banditti is the great task the United States will undertake if it intervenes in Mexico and occupies that distracted country.

But just now the medical men here are not directly concerned with the problem of rendering all Mexico a country of healthy, modern cities. They are bending every effort to assure the freedom from sickness of the thousands of boys in khaki already in the terraces, cañales, or hot coast lands, and the tens of thousands who may soon land there.

Nothing could illustrate better the necessity of proper medical staffs in the field than recent reports of conditions in the Mexican federal army. The Mexican army has no medical corps that deserves the name. After a recent battle with the rebels the wounded who could not stand were piled in a heap and left to die. Those who could stand were crowded on a train bound for Mexico City. Their wounds were untreated and putrefaction set in. The poor wretches had not even water. Those complaining of their condition were taken to the doors of the coaches by the guards aboard the train and thrown off. Some rolled underneath the wheels. Only the few who reached hospitals in Mexico City had a chance to survive.

The American surgeons and Red Cross workers on the field of battle, as in the fighting at Vera Cruz, treat friend and foe alike. But even before the wounded become their care, army medical men find plenty to do. Sanitary work has really only been learned since the time of the Spanish-American war. It used to be axiomatic that disease killed more than bullets in a war. This was strikingly true of 1898.

Two years ago 13,000 American troops were encamped several months at San Antonio, Tex. There was only one case of typhoid and not a single death from that cause. In 1898, 11,000 were in camp at Jacksonville, Fla., for about the same length of time and under similar conditions. There were 8,693 cases of typhoid, and 248 poor fellows died. Nothing could better illustrate army progress in preventing disease.

The Mexicans in Vera Cruz who were familiar with conditions in their own fighting force marveled at the preparations the American troops made to war upon disease. The trim, active surgeons, the long lines of mules and wagons, the complete equipment were somewhat of a revelation. Still more did they marvel when the soldiers were put to work carting muck from the streets and straightening up in the first days of the occupation.

Each army division, which is made up of four brigades, will have four field hospitals. In each hospital are 100 beds. In the rear of the field hospitals, supporting an advance movement, will be an evacuation hospital, which will hold twice as many beds as a field hospital. Behind the evacuation hospital, fifty or one hundred beds, depending on the position, will be a base hospital.

There are five surgeons assigned to each field hospital, three to each ambulance corps, two medical officers and twenty-two members of a hospital corps to each regiment and a chief surgeon and a chief sanitary inspector to each division.

WASHINGTON STATUE DRAGGED IN THE DUST

When the news of the taking of Vera Cruz reached Mexico City this statue of George Washington was dragged through the dust to the back yard of a police station and left lying there.

believes that the work of preparing the army for the field has been so effectively done that there will be little danger to the soldiers' health.

If the army were mobilized to occupy the whole of Mexico it would consist of some 120,000 regulars and twice as many volunteers. The regulars, excepting the recruits, would average one to three years of experience, which has taught them how to take care of themselves in the field.

The volunteers would not be without experience either. Many would be Spanish war veterans and others would have learned the proper sanitary measures from maneuver camps.

The green men would be taught in concentration camps. Most of the officers of volunteers are impressed with the value of sanitation in the field and they and the regular officers and older soldiers can be depended upon to instruct the new men quickly in correct habits. There was no such element of experienced men in 1898.

The responsibilities of the army sanitary officer are great. It is his duty to see that there is an adequate and pure water supply. All divisions which go to the front will be equipped with the Darnell filter invented by Major Carl R. Darnell of the medical corps, who is now in the Philippine Islands. In many places in Mexico filtering will not do and water must be boiled. Besides water, the sanitary officer must see that there is proper disposal of sewage, that all waste food is promptly destroyed, that mosquito nettings are always used by everybody wherever there are any mosquitos, that stable manure—the common breeding ground of flies—is never allowed to accumulate, but is promptly burned, that clothes and bedding are exposed to the direct rays of the sun at frequent intervals, that care is taken not to permit the troops to eat uncooked fruit or anything else which is liable to be infected, and generally that the rules of healthy living are observed by everybody.

With an army engaged in actual warfare, all this work has to be carried out under the excitement of the campaign and the pressure of the strategic and tactical needs of the moment and subject to the imperative need of attending to the wounded. For this reason, these precautions against disease are scarcely effective unless there is intelligent co-operation on the part of officers and men.

Yellow fever, tropical malaria, Mexican typhus, typhoid and dysentery are the diseases most to be expected in a Mexican campaign. To combat the first named Surgeon General Gorgas already has sent down three medical officers trained under him at Panama. There they are in command of case and the medical department of the army has perfected a simple and easily applied method of quickly sterilizing water in canvas bags, so that with ordinary precautions there should be none of this ailment. Mexican typhus is a disease of the otherwise healthy plateau lands. It is carried by parasites of the body. To combat it buildings must be disinfected and the person kept clean.

Colonel Jefferson Randolph Kean, an army surgeon, who has recently written an excellent monograph on "The

DR. WILLIAM C. GORGAS, Surgeon General of U. S. Army.

Prevention of Disease in the Army and the Best Method of Accomplishing That Result," says there has never been a time when the army of the United States was better prepared for war as far as military hygiene is concerned.

In case of extended operations in Mexico Major General Leonard Wood would be in command. He entered the service as a medical man. "The Fighting Doctor," as he is dubbed, can be relied upon to pay special attention to sanitation.

If the United States were to take over that billion dollar sanitary campaign in Mexico, Dr. Rupert Blue, surgeon general of the United States public health and marine hospital service, would undoubtedly figure. His corps rushes to any part of the United States where a dangerous epidemic breaks out. He is the man who stamped out bubonic plague in San Francisco by dyeing rats vermilion and yellow and green and by these brilliant messengers tracing the spread of the Asiatic scourge about the city.

DAMAGED STATUES IN BERLIN

Retired French Army Officer Broke Marble From "Sieges Allee" Monuments.

Berlin.—Serious acts of vandalism have been perpetrated in the famous "Sieges Allee" here. Four statues were badly damaged and the heads of several of the marble eagles which form the arms of the benches in the "Allee" were found to have been broken off.

A man who, at about the time of the outrage, was seen to step over the chain surrounding one of the statues was arrested in connection with the affair, and in his pockets were found a stone of considerable size and a strong knife.

The prisoner gave his name as Antoine Astier, a pensioned staff surgeon of the French marine. His age is given as forty-one. The statues which Astier damaged were those of Frederick the Great, the Elector Joachim Friedrich, the Elector Joachim II and Margrave Heinrich II. Astier claims to possess a Raphael "La Belle Jardiniere," which he desires to sell to the city of Berlin for £1,600,000.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

NEW ERA ASSOCIATION FILES PETITIONS FOR AMENDMENT.

MOVIES FOR STATE MILITIA

Gov. Ferris Considering a Recommendation to Next Legislature for General Purchasing Agent for Institutions.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing.—A proposed amendment to the state constitution aimed at the Mobile bill passed by the last legislature was filed with over 100,000 petitioners' names attached by Charles D. Sbarrow, general manager of the New Era association, at the secretary of state's office.

The passage of the amendment at the next election will give fraternal beneficiary societies the right to operate with a legal reserve fund or collect assessments upon a basis of rates which will in operation collect an amount annually in excess of the average mortality cost per thousand dollars of insurance in force of successful legal reserve companies of fifty years' experience, in addition to the necessary expenses of such societies. Under the Mobile law, the societies are compelled to charge an additional 100 per cent.

It will also give to the societies the initiative, referendum and recall in their governments. The provision of force for each is patterned after the state constitution's provision.

The number of signers is twice the number needed under the 10 per cent initiative clause of the state constitution. They were gathered in 60 days.

Adj.-Gen. Vandercook is authority for the statement that the M. N. G. boys will have a source of evening entertainment at the Grayling campsite this summer, when the annual state encampment is held. Moving pictures will be shown each night and Major M. J. Phillips, of Owosso, an expert in that line, will pick out views that he deems will suit the taste of the militia boys.

Arrangements have also been made for target practice at the campsite, the first time in two years that the artillery has had a chance to show its skill at shooting, and this event will mark the first time in a state camp for target practice. In former years the artillery has gone to Sparta, Wis., for such practice.

It is altogether likely that Gov. Ferris will recommend to the next legislature a general purchasing agent for the various state institutions. Superintendent Pierce, of the capitol, has demonstrated during the past year that he can buy coal much less for the state house than other state institutions are paying for it, and the governor has become much interested in the manner Pierce goes about his buying.

Statistics compiled by the Publicity club at the state agricultural college, show that that institution has had an increase of more than 218 per cent in its enrollment during the last ten years. The enrollment now is 2,006, only four less than the total number graduated since the college was founded in 1857. The average cost for the regular four-year course is $1,323 and the average amount earned in that time is $524 per student, or 44 per cent of the cost. Fifty-six per cent of the agricultural students have had farm experience, 34 per cent own, or will inherit, farms and 45 per cent will go upon farms after graduation.

Secretary of State Frederick C. Martindale has appointed Gottlieb C. Liebrand, of Gladwin, former prosecuting attorney of Gladwin county, as corporation clerk in the state department to succeed Leslie B. Clark, who was killed in an automobile accident a week ago.

Liebrand comes to the state department highly recommended and he will fill one of the most responsible positions in the state department. The corporation clerk is pitted against the best corporation lawyers in Michigan and other states and it is up to him to see that all new companies comply strictly with the corporation laws when new companies are being admitted to business.

A person who practices animal dentistry need not be a licensed veterinary unless dentistry is a part of the treatment of a disease or injury, according to a ruling by Attorney General Fellows. Fellows also rules that a moderator may vote at meetings of district school boards.

In an opinion rendered to the state tax commission Fellows holds that a supervisor must complete the tax roll so that it shall be in the possession of the board of review at the time provided by law for the meeting of the board.

Fellows also ruled that state reward money received by a township issuing bonds prior to the time that act 23 of the public acts of 1913 became operative should be applied on the principals of the bonds.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ICE TRUST

Just a Few Reasons Why There Should Be an Advance in Price of Summer Necessity.

The ice trust having offered a silver loving-cup for the best excuse which might be invented for raising the price of ice after the cold winter, we hope to submit the following:

1. The ice being so thick and heavy, it costs more to handle it.
2. The blocks are so large that there is great waste in cutting them up for the retail trade.
3. The ice is so cold it freezes solid in the storage houses and is very difficult to get out.
4. As the winter has been so cold, the summer will necessarily be very hot, and the demand for ice very great, so that it is doubtful if there will be enough to go around.
5. The ice being extra thick, extra cold, and extra quality all through, it is only proper that an extra price should be demanded.
6. The price of ice never had any relation to the cost of production, anyhow.—Life.

SCALY PSORIASIS ON LIMBS

Troop H, 6th U. S. Cavalry, Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis.—"I was troubled with psoriasis for nearly two years. Portions of my arms and limbs were affected mostly with it. It appeared in scaly form, breaking out in very small dots and gradually grew larger and white scales formed when about the size of an ordinary match-head. The looks of it was horrible, which made it very unpleasant for me. It itched a little at times.

"I tried several treatments which cured me for a month, but it always broke out again. One day a friend saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper and I sent for a sample. They helped me, so I purchased two more boxes of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap and they completely cured me. It took three months for Cuticura Soap and Ointment to complete my cure." HAD NO RATIONS TO SPARE

Good Reason Why Confederate Commander Was Willing to See His Prisoners Escape.

When, at Gaines Mill in 1862, the Fifth Texas captured two whole regiments of Union soldiers, the Texans were all very proud of their achievement. One of them has described an amusing scene in connection with the surrender.

When the Union officers gave up their swords to Colonel Upton they were so prompt in the duty that he was compelled to lay down the frying pan which he carried in place of a sword and hold the weapons presented in his arms.

Just then he noticed a commotion at the far end of the captured regiments. That was near the timber, and a squad of the prisoners were making an effort to pass by "Big John" Ferris of Company B, who stood there unaided, endeavoring to intercept them.

Springing upon a log, the armful of swords dangling about in every direction, Upton shouted:

"John Ferris, what are you trying to do now?"

"I am trying to keep these fellows from escaping," yelled Big John.

"Let them go, you fool!" shouted back Upton. "We'd rather fight than feed them!"

The Fingertless Kind.

Lillian Russell, during a recent visit to Atlantic City, was amazed to see the number of slashed skirts that still prevailed on the Boardwalk.

"They must be last spring's leftovers," she said.

Just then a young girl in a skirt outrageously slashed at back and front, asked her companion, in passing:

"How do you like my new dress? Fits like a glove, doesn't it?"

"Fits like a mitt, she'd better say," murmured Miss Russell, with a smile.

It helped me and I am in the best of health at present. I work in a factory all day long besides doing my housework so you can see what it has done for me. BLOCKADE IS OFF

HUERTA RESCINDS DECREE AS TO TAMPIO AS GUNBOATS REACH PORT.

MAKES PLEA TO MEDIATORS

Carranza Will Address Note to Envoys In Which He Will Announce That He Is Sending Delegates to Mediation Conference.

Mexican City, June 10.—The blockade of Tampico has been suspended. This formal announcement was issued on Monday by the government.

Niagara Falls, June 10.—The protests of the Mexican delegates and the A.-B.-C. plenipotentiaries have forced President Wilson to stop the shipment of war supplies to the constitutionalists. A statement was made public by the Mexican envoys which shows that Washington has promised that the ammunition aboard the Antilla will not be landed at Tampico.

Washington, June 10.—General Carranza will address a note to the A.-B.-C. mediators in which he will announce that he is sending delegates to the mediation conference. The instructions of these envoys will preclude their acceptance of any protocol or other agreement which provides for the settlement of Mexico's internal affairs.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 10.—The announcement that the Huerta government at Mexico City had countermanded the order on Monday for the blockade of the port of Tampico was scarcely of greater significance here than the disclosure that the United States government had accepted in principle the plan of pacification for Mexico drawn by the American and Mexican delegates here.

Washington, June 9.—General Carranza's reply to the last communication of the mediators has been received by the constitutionalist junta in Washington and will be sent to Niagara Falls this week. General Carranza expresses his willingness to enter the Niagara Falls conference, but on his own terms. The rebel chief will not consent to enter into any armistice. He still stands out against any attempt on the part of the United States or the A.-B.-C. diplomats to interfere with Mexico's internal affairs, but he gives evidence of a willingness to let down the bars slightly in regard to this question of a settlement of Mexico's own differences through peaceful conferences. Carranza is willing to mediate the international questions involved in the present situation, and it is understood that he acknowledges that it may be necessary in this connection to discuss some phases of Mexico's internal affairs.

The stand that Carranza has taken was communicated to Secretary Bryan and it was apparent that the administration found ground for hope in it that the mediators might finally admit Carranza to the proceedings. Carranza's reply to the mediators, as received in Washington, consists merely of certain instructions to his agents here. The mediators' communication was addressed to Senator Zubaran, Carranza's representative here, and the reply based on the first chief's instructions, will be sent over the signature of Senator Zubaran. It is understood that the Zubaran note will seek to minimize the question of an armistice, at the same time giving no indication that Carranza will ever consider yielding on that point.

Washington, June 9.—President Wilson is expected to accept the senate amendments to the Panama tolls exemption repeal, specifying that the United States does not waive its right to discriminate in favor of its own shipping, but he does not feel that the senate gives its assent to the repeal in "ungrudging measure" by attaching amendments. Mr. Wilson takes the position that as legislation in no way waives treaty rights he may accept the measure, although he desired passage of the repeal without limitation. The senate judiciary committee voted to begin work immediately on the Clayton omnibus trust bill passed last week by the house.

WILL ACCEPT TOLLS PLAN

President Wilson Expected to Agree to the Amendments Proposed in Congress.

Washington, June 9.—President Wilson is expected to accept the senate amendments to the Panama tolls exemption repeal, specifying that the United States does not waive its right to discriminate in favor of its own shipping, but he does not feel that the senate gives its assent to the repeal in "ungrudging measure" by attaching amendments. 3 KILLED IN A STORM

SIX HURT IN CYCLONE WHICH DESTROYS IOWA TOWN.

Electrical Storm Does Great Damage to Northern Indiana—Loss Will Reach $100,000.

Mason City, Ia., June 9.—Three persons were killed and six injured by a cyclone which partially demolished the town of Sanborn, near here, and caused considerable damage in the territory surrounding that place according to advices received here. Telegraph and telephone communication with Sanborn was destroyed by the storm and only meager details have been received here.

Automobiles loaded with food and medical supplies and clothing were dispatched to Sanborn. According to reports received here, ten residences, four business buildings, two grain elevators and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul roundhouse were razed. Scores of other buildings in the town and in the surrounding country were damaged.

Mrs. B. L. Fisk and P. W. Yotuma, sixteen, were killed when their homes were demolished. Patrick Doherty was missing today and it was believed his body was buried in the debris. Among the severely injured were J. B. Long and Mrs. G. W. Bonner, both of whom were struck by falling wreckage.

Insurance men say the losses in the northern Indiana tier of counties may reach $100,000.

CLAYTON BILL WINS

ANTI-TRUST MEASURE CARRIES EXEMPTION FOR LABORITES.

Farmers' Societies Are Also Immune—Only Two Democrats Oppose the Legislation.

Washington, June 8.—The administration's anti-trust legislation passed the house of representatives by decisive votes on Friday. The three bills carrying plans for further reforms of big business and an issuance of securities will be rushed to the senate.

On the Clayton general trust bill which carried the labor and farmers' organizations' exemption clause and limitations on the power of courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes the vote was 275 to 54. A roll call on the stocks and bonds bill resulted 325 to 12. A federal trade commission bill passed without opposition.

The Clayton bill, besides the pro-labor amendments, carries legislation against the use of unfair methods by large corporations and seeks to restore competition. It provides also against interlocking directorates among competing concerns and between corporations and their supply companies. It is believed this provision will bring to the front a number of new men now held in subordinate positions because of the enforced retirement of directorates, besides opening to individuals opportunities in the supplies contract field.

Opposition to this bill came largely on the labor exemption and the injunction and contempt sections.

Only two Democrats went on record as opposing this legislation. They were White of Ohio and Geary of Rhode Island. The latter announced a pair with another member and withdrew his vote. All the Progressives except Chandler of New York voted for the bill.

EX-MAYOR IS FATALLY SHOT

"He Refused to Treat My Sick Child," Says Assassin of Doctor Dunn at Duquoin, Ill.

Duquoin, Ill., June 9.—Dr. D. Winton Dunn, formerly mayor of Duquoin, was shot and fatally wounded here on Sunday by Jesse Joplin.

"He refused to treat my sick child because of an unpaid bill," said Joplin in extenuation of his act.

News of the shooting so inflamed the community that the authorities took the precaution of hurrying Joplin to Pinckneyville, where he is held in the Perry county jail. Doctor Dunn was taken to St. Louis on a special train soon after the shooting, but died in a hospital later. He had been wounded in six places by Joplin, none of whose bullets failed to hit the physician.

Speaking of the Vera Cruz situation, the president reverently declared that "I pray God the boys there will not have to fight any more." He added that the real good they will do will be their impression on the Mexicans.

SAGINAW MAN IS FOUND MURDERED

RAILROAD OFFICIAL'S BODY SHOWS SIGNS OF VIOLENCE.

MISSING FOR THREE DAYS

Albert Sherman, Superintendent of Transportation of Street Car Lines, Probably Killed By Enemies.

Saginaw, Mich.—Albert Sherman, 52 years old, and for three years superintendent of transportation of the city car lines in Saginaw and Bay City was found dead in a clump of bushes near Zilwaukee, five miles from Saginaw, Tuesday noon. He had been missing from home since Friday, and had asked his employers for a few days' vacation to go to Toledo.

Sherman's face was badly mutilated and distorted. His mouth was cut and there was a long scar on his forehead. One hand and coat sleeve as far as the elbow was matted with blood. Coroner Alden summoned two doctors to make an examination of the body. Dr. M. D. Ryan stated that there was a sharp wound on the scalp evidently made by some sharp instrument. Coroner Alden believes there was foul play.

He had been threatened several times in the last year, and only two weeks ago engaged in a fight with two men he had discharged. Recently he arrested men in Zilwaukee, who stole traction company goods. Ten months ago a discharged conductor followed and slugged him with a beer bottle. Sherman carried a book of transportation and it was missing from his pocket.

Clarence King, a conductor, said Tuesday night that Saturday afternoon four men approached him and inquired for Sherman, saying they were going to kill him.

Sherman worked through all departments of the Toledo street railway, and had been employed in that city 20 years before coming here.

The United States government will pay the salaries of 11 men for a period of seven months to patrol the headwaters of Michigan's navigable streams.

The marriage of Miss Irene Aseneth Bucknum, daughter of Mrs. Elsa Bucknum, of Grand Rapids, and Ard E. Richardson, mayor of Saginaw, was celebrated at the home of the bride's uncle, C. N. Halsted, Saturday evening. Rev. Dr. N. S. Bradley, of the First Congregational church, of Saginaw, performed the ceremony.

The state railroad commission issued an order Wednesday directing the Grand Trunk railway to stop two more trains at Davison. They are No. 6, eastbound, and No. 1, westbound.

The builders and traders' exchanges of four cities, Muskegon, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Holland, will unite in a big joint outing to be held June 23 at the Lake Harbor hotel at Muskegon. The builders have secured exclusive use of the hotel for this day and will put on a fine program of sports and games. A banquet in the evening will conclude the event.

BOSSIE'S "JOY TROT" RESULTED IN GRIEF

Attacked Horses, Chased Automobiles and Hurled Feet Against Patrol Wagon.

Chicago.—"Bossie," a cow belonging to Mrs. Peter Udelhoefer, 7247 Morton street, went on a "joy trot" in Rogers Park the other day. After "Bossie" had attacked several horses, chased automobiles and hurled her hind feet against the front of a patrol wagon, she was shot and killed by Rogers Park policemen. Half a dozen calls had been received by alarmed teamsters and automobilists.

"Bossie" abandoned her home at Mrs. Udelhoefer's shortly after eight o'clock in the morning and took to the highways. In North Clark street she attacked two horses attached to a wagon and was lashed by the driver until she scampered with a defiant switch of her tail.

The Rogers Park patrol wagon was called into service and "Bossie" was found chasing automobiles in North Clark street. When the patrol wagon approached "Bossie" whirled around and in approved army mule fashion started to nip invaders. However, she was lassoed and seven shots ended the incident.

"I had Boss for many years," Mrs. Udelhoefer said, "and she must have become giddy in her old age."

FORESEES HOUR OF DEATH

Woman Arranges Funeral and Buys Costly Casket; Minister Engaged to Preach Sermon.

Grand Junction, Colo.—Mrs. Clara B. Carter died on the day and at the hour she had predicted for her own death two weeks before.

Mrs. Carter spent her last hours making paper flowers to be used in decorating her coffin. She left an extended obituary notice of her life, with the request that it be published in the newspapers. According to this, she was born in 1876, in Belleplaine, Kan., and was converted at Burlingame, Kan., at the age of sixteen. She was educated in the schools of Kansas, and came to Grand Junction eight years ago, since which time she has been prominent in the upbuilding of the city, using every opportunity to advance its interests, according to her own statements.

Mrs. Carter made every preparation for her burial, even to the extent of arranging with Rev. J. J. Giblin to preach her funeral sermon. She told him at the time that she was certain she would die in plenty of time for the funeral services.

She also told the nurses that she intended to return to earth in spirit form and see how her instructions had been carried out. She was especially cheerful in arranging for her burial and funeral, and took genuine delight in it, according to the nurses.

She bought a $500 coffin, had her grave dug and cemented, and picked out the gravestone to be placed at her grave. The body of her six-year-old daughter, who had been buried in Kansas, was brought here at her request some time ago, to be interred in the grave with her.

Rat Reveals Girl Thief.

Greenwich, Conn.—A rat playing tag at night unearthed a mystery to the family of Clifford D. Mallory, at Greenwich, Conn. The rat knocked from a cellar rafters a pawn ticket with the name of Gertrude Opderbecke thereon and Mrs. Mallory found it on the floor. The girl, a servant in the family, was questioned and confessed to taking about five thousand dollars' worth of diamonds and jewelry.

Mule Lives to Age of Forty-Eight.

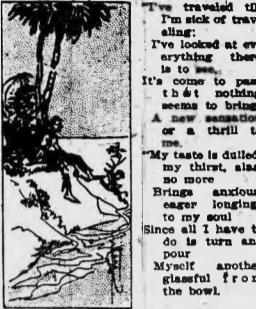

Springfield, Tenn.—A mule born in 1855 on the farm of Robert Holman, near this place, and sold 30 years ago as a "plug" to an old negro, passed in his checks as the oldest mule Tennessee ever produced, being at his death forty-eight years old.

Not Strong on Visiting.

Camden, N. J.—Although living but 20 miles apart, Mrs. Mary Jamieson and Mrs. Margaret Dawson, sisters, met here a few days ago, for the first time in 32 years. They said they were not "much on visiting."

The ONLOOKER HENRY HOWLAND

HIS EMANCIPATION

"I've traveled till I'm sick of traveling. I've looked at everything there is to see. It's come to pass that I'm making a new sensation or a thrill to me. My taste is dulled, my thirst, also, no more. Brings anxious, eager longings to my soul. Since all I have to do is to turn and pour myself another glassful from the bowl."

"I've broken sporting records and I've played. At working corners up in stocks and wheat. Such things have lost their charms for me; I've made. The whole great round, the circle is complete."

"Woman, wine and song—bah! Not for me. There's nothing left to long for any more. There's nothing left to do or taste or see. The world has not another thrill in store."

But fate was kind to him who thus complained. It came to pass by happy chance, one day. That, all alone and with his pockets. He on a far-off shore was cast away.

There, where his voice could reach no farther, he sat. And where remittances could not be had. Hard masters made him toil from year to year. And every time he ate his soul was glad.

He longed for things that he could not obtain. The prospect of a day or two of rest. The chance to save a little extra-plain. Sent new thrills trooping gladly through his brain.

He sat him down no more with listless sighs. But with the hope of winning liberty. He worked and looked ahead with eager eyes. Till Death was kind enough to set him free.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics." "I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not; but I thought I was once, and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging-house vote."

Naturally.

"We gave our preacher a parcel of $500 last Sunday, and also a beautiful album containing the pictures and signatures of the people who had contributed the money. He was greatly affected, and almost with tears streaming down his cheeks said he valued the album much more than the purse." "What happened then?" "We went home with diminished confidence in our preacher."

How to Please Her.

"My dear," said Billington when he returned after having remained out on the road four days longer than was absolutely necessary, "you seem to look younger every time I come home." "When are you going away again, John?" she asked. "And can't you manage it so that you can take your trips oftener and make them shorter?"

IT WOULD BE USELESS.

"Mike, how would you like to live to be a hundred year old?" "I don't want to. Pat, I never seen a man that old that could put up any kind of a fight."

Properly Rebuked.

"Mamma, how much alimony did you receive when you got divorced from papa?" "Sh! My dear child, don't you know that it is an indication of very poor taste to talk about financial matters in the presence of formal callers."

The Beginning.

"There," said the man who intended to become great. "I have finished my autobiography. It is full of anecdotes of an ordinary sort. Now I must go to work and do something so that the book will be a delight to cultured minds."

The Main Question.

Each cloud may have a silver lining. The sun of golden beams so odd. But be that's down to his feet on the ground. Oh, has he still a single friend!

He lowered himself into the stream, which was deep to the shore, as silently as a ghost. A dozen feet away I lost sight of him entirely amid the dim, dancing shadows. Then I followed with equal caution, my face turned up to the sky. It was a dark night, but with a few stars visible peeping down through rifts of cloud. The small river was not wide, nor the current particularly swift, and I had not been carried far down stream when the overhanging branches of the opposite bank gave shelter. I drew myself ashore, and sat there, shivering in my wet clothes, the night air chill, and stared anxiously about, and across to the shore we had just left.

I moved down the shore cautiously, keeping well below the concealing bank until I found Brady. He was crouched in the shadow of a great tree root, his whole attention riveted on the opposite side.

"There are no signs of pursuit?"

"Not that I can see. I have watched here some minutes, but there has been no movement along the bank. We will move on down stream."

"It was hard wading amid the tangled roots, and we made slow work of it. Brady, in advance, stumbled once or twice, and I noticed, held one hand pressed against his side as though from pain, breathing heavily. To our left, but some distance away, a voice called, and was answered by another. So, totting on, we came to a sharp bend in the stream.

"It must be about opposite here, Hayward," he said stopping, "the girl told you the boat would be. What is that lumping shadow yonder? Your eyes are younger than mine."

I looked where he pointed, shading my eyes, and gradually focusing the outlines until they assumed definite shape.

"It is a big tree bent down over the river; no doubt the one she meant."

"You see no movement?"

I strained my eyes, searching the dark shore inch by inch, but could perceive nothing; the lights of the fires were far away.

"It is still as death over there."

He shot a swift glance at me, as if the words pleased him little. In the dim starshine his face appeared ghastly white.

"Perhaps the days of miracles are not gone," he said doubtfully, "and Girty may have played fair. Anyhow there is nothing to be done now but test it. Come on, lad; we'll take to water again."

The cheerful note in his voice bolstered my own courage. We swam straight this time, with steady stroke, our eyes spanning the bank we were approaching. And the canoe was there, smuggled under the leaning tree, bow to bank, rendered shapeless by a covering of broken branches. We lay hold of the sides, standing waist deep in water, our eyes searching the high bank towering dark above us. There was no movement, no sound, and I lowered the branches one by one into the water, and permitted them to float silently down stream.

Concealed by the shade of the great tree I waded cautiously ashore and crept out into a mass of roots. The higher bank rose sheer before me. To the right there was an opening, as if a trail led down to the river, and we were there against the upper sky, something moved. For an instant I could tell no more; then I recognized a human figure stealing cautiously toward me through the gloom. It moved silently as a spirit, and my heart beat fiercely as I rose up and stared. She was close upon me before I was aware.

"Rene,"

"Oh, a little catch in the quick whisper; then—then it is you; how—how did you come here?"

I drew her back into the deeper shadow, and told her the brief story in swift words, clinging to her hands, as if held her close. I could not distinguish her face, but she listened, her soft breath on my cheek.

"Oh, I am so glad—so glad, monsieur. I did not know until after I gave the signal. I—I came down here to be sure—to say good-by," she faltered, "and—saw them waiting."

"Then it was treachery? The purpose was to kill me? Girty led?"

"Yes, monsieur. You—you will not believe I knew? That I suspected such a thing?"

My handclasp tightened.

"No, dear, no; go on. Where are the men?"

"Most of them, ten or twelve as near as I could make out, are in a ravine at the edge of the camp, under close to the shore. There are three others up above here, hiding behind the bank."

"I see; the attack was to be made by those above as we crept along, and if either of us got away those three devils were to complete the job."

CHAPTER XXIII.

In the Woods.

"You must get into the canoe, Rene," I said shortly. "Come, we have no time to lose."

"I hesitate,"

"Yes, yes; I am not going to leave you here for Hamilton to break his rage on. There is no time to argue now."

"But, monsieur—"

"Never mind that; will you go as I say?"

There was a silvery gleam of star on her upturned face, and I could see her eyes, startled, puzzled, half frightened, gazing up into mine. Then the long lashes drooped over them.

"Yes, monsieur," she said, her lips trembling. "I will go with you."

The dawn found me with the paddle, but Rene still wide awake. There was a thin, gray fog over the river, which turned to purple as the light strengthened, and we were at the apex of a great bend, the course of the stream ahead leading into the northwest. That was not our direction, and besides I felt if there was pursuit it would be safer far ashore. Just as the sun broke through the mist we came unexpectedly to the mouth of a small stream leading into the main river from the south. So thoroughly was it concealed by a thick growth of bushes, that we would have slipped by, had I not been skirting the shore closely, seeking some such opening. I headed the canoe straight in, pressing aside the branches to gain passage, and found beyond a narrow creek, up which we managed to paddle for several hundred yards. Then I stepped overboard, and dragged the light craft still higher, until I discovered a place of concealment behind a huge rotting log.

Here we left it, Rene and I bearing with us the guns and our small store of provisions. I had cut a cane for Brady, and with its help, he managed to get along slowly, although sight of his face made my heart ache. Thus in single file we waded up the tiny stream, until we attained a ledge of rocks where our feet would leave no trail. Over these we toiled, helping each other, until we came to the upland, into an open forest, carpeted with autumn leaves. By this time Brady was too exhausted to go further, sinking helplessly on the ground. Rene also looked worn and heavy-eyed, and I had no heart to urge them on. We ate sparingly of what food we had, but Brady barely touched his portion. I wrapped him in our only blanket, and the three of us slept.

It was the gray dawn when mademoiselle awoke me, shaking me soundly ere I could be aroused. That something was wrong I perceived instantly from the expression of her face, and sat up, glancing hastily about, expecting the approach of savages.

"What is it?"

"He is gone, monsieur! Monsieur Brady is gone."

"But he is not here, monsieur," she insisted. "See, it was there he lay. I will tell you all I know. I woke up in the night and thought of him, of how hard it was for so strong a man to be so weak and ill. Then I got up and went over quietly to be sure he was all right. But he was awake, monsieur, staring up at the sky with eyes wide open. He saw me, and said he was nervous and could not sleep. No, he told me he was not in pain, but complained of being cold. I spread more leaves over him, and he said that was better. Then—then he took my hand and kissed it, and begged me to go back and—lie down. He was very nice and gentle, and smiled at me. So I went back, and crept into my leaves, and tried to sleep. He did not move, yet I lay there a long while thinking, I—think I cried a little, monsieur, for I felt so sorry. At last I slept again. It was just a little light when I awoke once more, and my first memory was of him. I went over there—and he was gone. I could see where he had rested in the leaves, and the blanket on the ground, but—but he was not there. I sought for him, but there was no trace—nothing. So I came and woke you."

I was on my feet, a feeling of dread tugging at my heart. I felt that I already knew what had happened, yet I could not tell her—not now, not until I was sure.

"He could not have gone far, Rene," I said hastily. "Perhaps to the river for a drink. Come, we will see."

The ground about the camp had been so trampled by our feet that, at first, I could not pick up the trail. Finally, taking a wider circle, I came upon softer soil and the imprint of his moccasins. I knew they were his because of one foot dragging, and the impression of his cane. They led down toward the river, and I followed swiftly, the girl close behind, until we stood at the edge of the stream. The man's trail ended there. I explored the bank for some distance up and down, but without result. There were tears glistening in Rene's eyes, as I came back—she also was beginning to understand. Without a word I waded out into the water, and swam across to the other shore. There was nothing there—no sign, no mark of any description—and I came back to where she waited, wading out with dripping garments to the bank.

"There—there was nothing, monsieur!"

"Nothing," I answered gravely. "He has not crossed over." I hesitated an instant, but could not resist the questioning horror in her eyes. "You understand, do you not?"

"Yes—you think," she faltered, "that"

Monsieur Brady has been killed himself?"

"He has given his life for others, my girl—for you and me, and those soldiers of St. Clair's."

She stood a moment, silent, tears on her cheeks, looking blindly out at the water. Then she sank upon her knees, holding the crucifix against her face. I could see the movement of her lips, but heard nothing; only I knew that she prayed for his soul, and my own eyes were moist as I knelt beside her. Then I lifted her up by the hand, and we went back up the hill to the camp.

There was nothing to hope for in waiting, and all our duty lay beyond. Without the exchange of a word we packed what few things we had, and started, following the bank of the stream.

It was a raw November morning that we came unexpectedly upon St. Clair's outpost. The ground was covered with snow, and the little pools were skimmed over with thin ice. It had been too cold to rest, and we had walked much of the night, afraid to build a fire. Chilled to the marrow by the icy wind that swept through the trees and buffeted us, I hid wrapped the girl in our only blanket, fastening it about her head and face, hurt as I did so by the dumb, patient, bewildered look in her eyes. She tried to protest, yet at my first stern word ceased and wrapped herself closely in the folds. I was in front, breaking the trail that she might have easier marching, when suddenly a man stepped out of a thicket, and with gun at his breast roughly commanded a halt. I paused instantly, uncertain as to which side the challenger was on, yet a glance at his face and dress reassured me.

"Who are ye, yer' what do ye want?" he asked suspiciously.

"I am an officer of the Fort Harmar garrison," I answered, "with news from the north. To what command do you belong?"

"The Kentucky militia," he acknowledged sullenly. "Colonel Oldham."

"Where is your colonel?"

"Back yonder on that rise o' ground; you kin go on, but I'll keep an eye on ye."

We left him, following the direction pointed out, hearing him call to some one in our rear, yet paying no heed.

"He Has Given His Life for Others, My Girl."

The very ease with which he had passed us on was evidence enough of lax discipline, and small conception of the danger of the command. There was a plain track through the snow, which led to a camp fire blazing cheerily in a grove of trees, with maybe a dozen men clustered about it. No one appeared to notice us as we drew near.

"Which is Colonel Oldham?" I asked, glancing about the group. One stood up, a smooth-faced, ruddy-cheeked man of fifty, with iron-gray hair, and eyes that looked as if they laughed easily. I liked him at first glance.

"That is my name," he said shortly. "What is it? St. Denis, man!" as his glance swept over me, "you look as if you had been far from the setlements and had a hard trip."

"I have, sir; I came from the Maumee. I am an officer of regulars with news of importance for St. Clair."

"Every eye was on me now and Oldham took a step nearer.

"The Maumee?" he exclaimed. "Ay, that is a journey. News for St. Clair, you say—what news? There was a rumor down below that the Indians of the northwest were mustering. Know you anything of that?"

"They have already mustered, sir. I was at their rendezvous. Even now they are at my heels—the whole of them, Shawnees, Miamis, Delawares, Wyandots, and, for all I know, as many more. There are white renegades with them, and English officers I suspect—I saw Hamilton myself on the Maumee, and he evidently was managing affairs."

There was a muttering of voices, and Oldham let out an oath.

"Well, sir, I believe it, but I'll be hanged if you can make St. Clair. The arrogant old fool may listen to you, but I doubt even that. He thinks this is a pleasure party we are on. What do you think he did a week ago?"

I looked at him uncomplaining, stunned by such malicious words openly spoken.

"Sent back a whole regiment of regulars on a wild-goose chase after deserters, and we within fifty miles of the Miami towns."

"What force have you here?"

"Less than fourteen hundred—all militia but one regular at. From the Maumee, ensign? And did you come through alone with that squaw?"

Jenny behind me, the blanket drawn over her head and face.

"Take it off, Rene," I said quietly.

"Yes, monsieur."

Her hands obediently threw the wrapping aside, permitting it to drape over her shoulders. She lifted her head, and stood facing them, with eyes centering upon Oldham. He gasped, and jerked the hat from off his head.

"I beg your pardon," he stammered. "A white woman?"

"A French girl, sir, whom I found with the Wyandots. Can you send us back to St. Clair?"

He stared at her so long, hat still in hand, that I thought he did not hear. An officer touched him on the shoulder and spoke a word.

"Ah, yes, certainly—St. Clair. At once, sir, but I don't envy you your reception. By Jove, I lost my wits seeing such a woman as that here in this hole. Someone send Masters here."

I came quickly, a youngish lad, with white hair and eyebrow, but intelligent face, who never took his eyes off Rene. Oldham spoke brusquely.

"Take this officer and the lady to General St. Clair at once. Tell Butler I say it is important, that he be given immediate interview. Here, wait! get the lady a horse somewhere. Captain, can he take yours?"

"With pleasure, sir; I will fetch the animal."

They watched us depart until we had crossed the ridge, Masters and I trudging through the snow at the horse's head. Rene had drawn up her blanket, but I could see her eyes watching me, when I glanced around at her. It was not long, however, until we came out of the forest, into a bit of lowland near the river, where a dozen tents, grimy and dirty looking, stood on the bank. There were soldiers everywhere, gathered about the camp fires, with a few guards patrolling beats along the forest edge. Masters led the way through the motley crowd up to the central tent. There was delay there, Rene sitting motionless in the saddle, and I waiting impatiently beside her. At last Masters came back.

"He will see you, sir."

"Very well; are there any women in camp?"

"A few, sir; non-com' wives mostly, washerwomen and cooks; they are in those two tents there—the officers' kitchens."

"Take the lady over there, and leave her in good hands, Rene."

She looked down at me.

"Yes, monsieur."

"This soldier will take you to some women who will take care of you until I come. You will wait for me."

"Yes, monsieur."

I waited until they started, and then advanced to the tent. A tall, slender man, in a colonel's uniform, pointed the way within, and I stepped through the narrow opening. The interior was plain—a bearskin stretched on the ground, two officers on campstools against the canvas; a sentry beside the open flap standing motionless; a rude table of one unplanned board, and behind it, seated, St. Clair. He was a spare man, with broad shoulders and prominent nose, wearing a long queue of thick, gray hair, which was plainly visible below his three-cornered hat. He was attired in blanket coat, with hood dangling down his back. I had met him once, but it was clear he retained no recollection of me, as he surveyed me coldly across the table.

"Well, sir," he snapped, "Colonel Oldham says you bring news. Who are you?"

"Ensign Hayward of Fort Harmar," I answered, bringing my hand up in salute. "I was sent with a message to the Wyandots."

The stern lines of his face broke into a grim smile.

"Ah, yes, I recall that. One of Harmar's foot notions. Told him as much when I got back. Well, your peace offering didn't do much good, did it? I hear there is hell brewing in those north woods."

"It is already brewed, sir. The tribes have got together to crush you. They rendezvoned on the Maumee."

"Huh! that is a ways away. No great danger from that source till we're ready. What tribes were there, do you know?"

"I saw them, sir; Wyandots, Pottawatomies, Shawnees, Delawares and Miamis. There were also some Ojibwas, and a sprinkling of others, mostly young warriors."

"Who heads the conspiracy?"

"Little Turtle, of the Miamis, but there are Englishmen with them also; Hamilton himself was there."

"The cursed bound; so you were there, with them, hey? A prisoner?"

"Yes, general; a scout named Stephen Brady and I. We got away by means of a canoe on the river."

"Where is Brady? I know the old coon."

"He died, sir, and I came on alone."

"No one spoke, and I went on. It was a hard journey, and there were many delays on the way. I came as quickly as I could, sir, but I don't think the savages are far behind."

"Oh, don't you, indeed," sarcastically. "It was not advice I was asking, and as to what is in front of my own scouts keep me posted. You're young, and easily frightened. I happen to know there isn't a hostile Indian within fifty miles of us—not a bloody one. I don't care what they do up on the Maumee. We'll go on to the Miami towns tomorrow, raze them, and be back to the Ohio before that bunch gets started. I doubt if there is a shot fired. It's all a big bluff, sir; we've got them frightened half to death. I wrote Washington so a month ago."

Fundamental Principles of Health

EUGENICS.

Lester Ward declares that aversion in the relations between man and woman means that their union will result in some defect or imperfection in the offspring. And our knowledge of the laws of heredity and of environment prove this must be true.

Environment counts for fully 90 per cent in the development of the individual, and a family distraught by bickering, misunderstanding, and the lack of mutual consideration and forbearance, cannot well be considered favorable environment in which to develop normal children.

Sex selection and the survival of the fittest appears to have been responsible for the course of human evolution up to the time of the ancient Greeks, and if the fragments of that early civilization indicate anything, obviously they indicate a plane of pure and logical thought we have yet to attain.

Sex selection means the choice of superior mates, and therefore the production of superior qualities in posterity. Free, natural selection has been the uplifting power that has developed and conserved the race. The primitive selection inspired by natural instinct and maintained by strong arms and a stone club undoubtedly bred men and women relatively superior to those of today, and vastly superior to those certain to result from a like number of generations with choice largely governed by the power of property accumulated through more or less devious methods.

What is there in all recorded history that we can point to in evidence of our ability to improve on the forces that brought us from the primal cell to Thales, Anaximander, Hippocrates, and Euclid, intellects that still actuate the minds of men after more than twenty centuries?

Granting that beings vary among themselves generation after generation, granting only the fit survive, granting their qualities, then it follows that evolution is now going on and that we are either ascending or descending. We know it to be within our power to go in either direction, and therefore that we can develop a vastly superior and a happier race in a few generations if we will to do so. But what rational steps are being taken to this end? We laugh at the childish efforts to stave natural forces by imperial or legislative edict recorded in earlier ages; but are recent legislative enactments in the name of eugenics any more logical or do they promise to be any more effective than Emperor Caligula's command that the tide cease to rise?

The simple and disagreeable truth is that modern business has destroyed the fundamental principle of natural selection. Making women economically dependent on men eliminates the lifting power of woman's choice—and there can be no choice without freedom and no freedom except it be grounded in economic independence.

Because of woman's dependence and humanity's mental, sympathetic and social refinements, the fundamental principles of natural selection and the "survival of the fittest" through the struggle for existence have been forced into the background, creating an artificial condition certain to be corrected by self-destruction. Hence this cry for eugenics.

Eugenics cannot become a vital power in any nation until a sufficient body of the people become imbued with the true principles, and this is a condition impossible to attain through legislation, and is only to be achieved by individual effort and mental and physical development. No sane parents will knowingly deliberately condemn their children or their children's children to poverty, the insane asylum or worse; and the means of prevention lie in knowledge.

If every child were given a practical working knowledge of physics, chemistry and biology, studies that furnish material for true thought and fundamental understanding, the present unhealthy condition would automatically correct itself, and there would be no more talk of eugenics.

HEREDITY.

Irving Fisher in United States senate document No. 419, "National Vitality, Its Wastes and Conservation," says: "Human vitality depends upon two primary conditions: heredity and hygiene, or conditions during life." And Metchnikoff points out that part of the supposed inheritance of longevity may not be inheritance, but similarity of environment.

Nature's movements are on so vast a scale and contain so many complex and never to be understood forces that balance and counteract each other, that it now seems incredible that the world for so long should have accepted the authority of the past in a matter as vital to human happiness as the old idea of heredity. Fortunately we have finally evolved into the un-peal is observation and experiment, and not authority, however eminent it may have been in its day and generation. The old axiom, "like produces like," is now known to be incorrect. No two things can be produced exactly alike, and we know that ability to change is the evidence of life.

A farmer selects as a fine ear of seed corn one in which each kernel conforms in general type to a desirable ancestor, and from this ear he takes the seed for a new crop. Three factors enter into the results from the planting of this seed—heredity, climate, soil. Granting the first two factors to be ideal, there are ten elements required in the soil to produce a development equal in type and vitality to the parent seed. Oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, carbon, phosphorus, calcium, sulphur, potassium, iron and magnesium are the necessary elements, and the absence of one of these ten chemicals in necessary amount will determine whether there shall be a partial or even a total crop failure. Corn can be fed and bred up or starved and run down. One community will average ten bushels per acre and another will average 100 bushels per acre. By the intelligent adjustment of all the factors, 239 bushels per acre have been produced.

The same principles and factors apply to the animal kingdom, including man. Heredity determines the type, but environment governs what the individual shall be. In common with the corn of the field and with all other forms of life mankind reacts to the universal laws of change and modification; and this is the hope of humanity. There being no spontaneous generation of the human species, it follows that all are of equally ancient lineage, and investigation will show only a little way back a material taint in the line of the best, judged by present day standards. This is proof that in all life there is an inherent tendency to adapt and advance.

The fundamental problem of man is to stay here on earth—"We don't know where we are going, but we're on the way," and we might as well be comfortable about it. An intelligent application of the laws of heredity as laid down by Mendel, coupled with a rational adjustment of the individual to environment, could make a new race in two generations. We may be ascendent or decadent just as we see fit.

Type is a matter of heredity and counts for about 5 per cent of the individual—environment covers the remaining 95 per cent. A phonograph record disk may be large or small, depending on the type of mold selected to make it. Its capacity is determined by the mold, but whether it shall receive and give out a meaningless jangle of discord, a masterpiece of harmony, or a soul stirring call to human achievement, depends on the impression received after its creation. Whether it be used with intelligent purpose or marred, cracked and scratched by indifferent handling depends on unknown factors. And man, too, is the product of the sum of the impressions received in his experience.

Like the corn plant, man too is the product of three factors covered by the term anthropology, telturic, social, and granting the first two to be ideal, the third involves a complex mass easily accounting for most break-downs. The human body is made up of 14 elements—oxygen, hydrogen, carbon, nitrogen, phosphorus, calcium, sulphur, chlorine, sodium, iron, potassium, magnesium, silica and fluorine, and to attain perfect development must be supplied with all these elements in suitable quantity.

The now prevailing standard of food values which measures the heat units produced from food and completely ignores all other elements and factors, is not only woefully inadequate in the light of modern science, but constitutes a grave menace to the health, to the morals, to the sanity, and to the life of any people.

English Lord Bars Labor Union.

Some months ago a branch of the Agricultural Laborers' and Rural Workers' union was formed on the Lifford estate, Northants, and a large number of laborers became members. Recently a circular was issued by the agent of Lord Lifford, stating that no members of the union would be employed on the estate. It is understood that about sixty men are affected and that they have been given a stated time to "consider their position."

Well attended and orderly meetings, under the auspices of the union, held in the villages on the estate have passed a resolution emphatically protesting against the action of the lord of the manor (Lord Lifford) and the farmers of the estate.—London Chronicle.

Dainty Dish.

She was a young missionary to China, not yet quite proficient in the language of the country, and was giving a little dinner to some friends. During the course of the meal, she asked the servant to bring in some fruit—just least she thought she did.

He objected; she insisted; he refused; she grew angry. At last he left the room.

Presently he returned, carrying a large platter, which he placed before her with an air of supreme contempt. On it, carefully arranged, were her husband's every-day trousers.—Yutka's Companion.

Few people are so disagreeable that they can't keep on good terms with themselves.

An objection to paying taxes seems to be more certain than the taxes.

Fruit of Evil Associations.
Go with mean people and you think the world is mean.—Emerson.
