As a Traveller Sees It!

The Viewpoint of a Man who has Twice Circled the Globe.

"The outstanding impression of the observing world-traveller is the comparative difference between Christian and non-Christian lands. In a way tremendous with significance, wherever the forces of Christianity have flowed, civilization and progress and power have followed. So strikingly is this true, that critical study reveals the so-called 'world powers,' whether because of their military, commercial or educational strength, to be Christian. Japan is far from exception to the rule, for her recently acquired power and position have come from adopting the arts and sciences of Christian nations; her weakness from a failure to acquire Christian principles and ideals. No demonstration is needed to show the dominant part of the church in fostering this growth of favored portions of the earth to a greater civilization. She is, and has been, the God-given agency for the spread of Christ's Kingdom among men. Through her instrumentality, the bright places of the world have been lighted. Without her, we in America might be of the caliber and condition of the mystical Hindu, or the medieval Chinese, or the benighted African."

This traveller thinks that the church has placed all the world under a debt that may be partly paid by church attendance and support. Wherever the church goes on earth she carries new light and life. Beware of trying to push down the ladder by which you arose.

Grange Picnic A Success

The Grange picnic held at "Shady Neck Farm," the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tiltonson the Fourth was a grand success. By 12 o'clock a large number had gathered on the shady lawn to enjoy the basket dinner which the ladies had prepared. Mrs. Charles Roberts, Mrs. Norman Miller and Mrs. James Gates had charge of the tent where ice cream, lemonade, cranberry juice, etc., were sold and netted the Grange ten dollars. Much credit is due Mr. and Mrs. Roberts and Worthy Master Howard Brown for their hard work in making the picnic a success. Howard Brown had charge of the sports. There was a clay pigeon shoot and ball game, various races and a tank driving contest by the ladies. The orchestra rendered several fine selections and Miss Anna Baker of Plymouth, sang. The company left for their homes about six o'clock, declaring the day to have been one of the pleasantest of their lives. Several friends of the Grange who are not members of the society were present and enjoyed the day very much. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Miller and daughter Miss Margaret, who especially enjoyed seeing others enjoy the shade of the beautiful woods. Mr. Miller had planted fifty years ago on the farm he had owned for many years.

Mass Meeting Called

President F. D. Schrader of the Plymouth Improvement Association has called a meeting of the Association and every citizen who has the best interests of the village at heart to meet at the village hall on Tuesday evening, July 14th, at 7:30 o'clock, to consider the proposition of securing a Detroit manufacturing concern that wants to locate in Plymouth. Come to the meeting.

Another Boost for the Albar Car

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reiman noticed a Red Ace in their new Albar machine and here is what they say of the trip.

Red Ace, July 4, 1914.
 Dear Sir—We thought you would like to hear how we got on with our Albar machine. We went on a trip at 8:15 and got home Red Ace at 11:15. The machine is a beauty, but we found lots of bad spots, but in what they were working on the road and driving in the mud, and only once to get stuck. We were with the Albar machine when the ground was gilled right up in the middle of the road and a big ditch on each side. The machine with its power was pulled through. And it made the hills just fine. Red Ace has made some hills he wouldn't have tried with a Ford. We were pretty tired but certainly enjoyed the trip.
 Mr. and Mrs. F. Reiman.

Dog Owners—Take Notice
 The village ordinance relative to the muzzling of dogs goes into effect July 15 and will require that every dog be muzzled. Owners of dogs must see to it that their dogs are properly muzzled. If at large, or they will be seized. The officers are going to see to it that this ordinance is strictly enforced, so if you don't want to lose your dog keep him muzzled or have him seized.

Roosevelt Tells His Own Story

"The River of Doubt" is There—Go See For Yourself.

What will undoubtedly prove one of the most interesting and instructive stories of recent times has just come from the pen of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. In it he tells with his characteristic directness and forcefulness of his thrilling experiences on the trip of adventure and research into the Paraguayan and Brazilian interior, through the great tropical forests which so few white men have traversed. The fascinating articles give a complete account of the journey up the Paraguayan river in the gunboat yacht of the president of Paraguay, includes many delightful impressions of bird and animal life; a visit to a Brazilian ranch; observations of the jaguar; the hunting of the formidable jaguar and when the highland wilderness of western Brazil is reached a wonderful account of the Vampire Bat, "that suck the blood of living creatures;" of the beautiful falls of the Salto Bello; of the Parvatis Indians who play football with their heads; of a wonderful colony of strange spiders and all sorts of blood thirsty creatures. The complete trip, the most perilous expedition he has ever made, with all its adventures from the selecting of his party to the floating of the "River of Doubt," a hitherto unknown stream over 1,000 miles long, is graphically told and fully illustrated by numerous photographs taken by Kirmit Roosevelt and other members of the exploring party. The Detroit Free Press has secured exclusive Michigan rights for the publication of the Colonel's own story, and will start the fascinating series Sunday, July 12, continuing each Sunday thereafter during the summer and early fall. It is the story that has been breathlessly waited for and that every American wants to read.

Epworth League, local representative for the Free Press, is circulating now to take care of the increased demand in his Sunday when the story will come.

A Fine Pair of Horses

Schneider Bros. have just purchased a pair of horses, one of the best pair of horses ever brought to Plymouth. They are beautiful dapple gray, excellently matched and perfect in every particular. This team was purchased at Lexington last week Thursday by F. D. Schrader and shipped to Plymouth the same day. Schrader Bros. have been on the lookout for a team of this kind for some time, to use on the farm, but were unable to find just what they desired until they found this pair of beautiful animals. This team will make a splendid addition to their already complete and up-to-the-minute farm equipment.

Phillip Barn of Bay City, visited his sister, Mrs. Peter Gayde, last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Enelide Cooper and Mrs. Annabelle St. Clair left Wednesday for Oakland, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Peck and children visited friends at Northville the latter part of last week.

Base Ball Saturday

There will be a game of base ball between the Daisy team and Winton at Athletic Park, Saturday, July 11, at 2:30 o'clock. Admission 15 cents. Chicks Hatch While Kindergarten Class Watch

CHICAGO—The kindergarten class of the Walsh school has proved itself to be one of the most interested and observing audiences that ever watched the hatching of eggs. The object of their attentions is known locally as Mrs. Chick A. Biddy, and the children regard her as something of a wizard, having seen her transform a number of common every day eggs into little live creatures that run around and peep and insist on being fed.

Mrs. Biddy came to the Walsh school a few weeks ago, and the teacher, Miss E. Casandra Truby, placed her in a corner of the room, and the children fed her all during the time she was acquiring a family.

And now, besides Mrs. Biddy there are Brownie, Wink, Blink, Tinkle, Hob, Mob, Cob, Bob, Sucky, Hittabob, Tiny and Tot Biddy to keep them interested.

This is how it came about. Miss Truby believed that a setting hen would furnish her class amusement as well as knowledge. So she borrowed Mrs. Biddy and installed her in a box fitted with excelsior and fifteen eggs. Every other morning papers were laid on the floor around the box and an improvised fence was made of tables stood on edge. Mrs. Biddy took her nest only at meal time. When she returned to her nest she would duck her head and move her body so that the eggs in the center were rolled to the outside, and those on the outer edge were rolled to the center. In this way all the eggs got their fair share of warmth.

All this delighted the children and made them ask questions. They wondered how she could sit so patiently all day, and then, when the inhabitants of the shells began to pick their way out toward the light the class sang and collectively held its breath for half a second, and then exhaled it in a label of noise. The first one out was a brown one, then before many hours three yellow ones and eight black chiseled holes in their cells and stumbled out into the expectant world.

"It was beautiful," said Miss Truby, "to notice how the children watched the hen taking care of her brood, how she fed them, tended them, took them under her wings, and how proud she was of them."

Bold Bandit, Thirteen, Robs and Sells His Plunder

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Clarence Hoe, thirteen years old, was arrested on suspicion of having committed twenty acts of burglary in a couple of hours in one night recently, and all in the same place. According to the police he admitted the charges. Young Hoe's loot, which included quantities of railroad tickets, pencils, blotting paper, ink and rubber stamps, came from the Ocean Shore railroad depot at Mission and Twelfth streets.

Risking discovery by the night watchman the young bandit expertly jimmied the back door of the depot and entered. Within all was dark and the reckless youth had neglected to provide himself with the electric flash which every up-to-date burglar is supposed to carry. "I didn't know what I would want," young Hoe is reported as saying, "so I took everything."

Twenty laborious trips were made by the young malefactor between the depot and a "cache" on an empty lot at Market and Tenth streets which frequently had been used by Clarence Hoe as a place of concealment for his school books on the days when he decided to acquire information in nickel-shedrooms instead of at school.

Next day one of the most peculiar small business establishments ever seen in San Francisco appeared on the lot not far from the "cache," with Hoe presiding over it. Pencils, penholders and various other articles were exposed for sale.

The little stand came under the observation of Detectives Fred Kracke and Jack Dolan, who had heard of the burglary at the Ocean Shore railroad depot. Young Hoe's combined career of crime and business was cut short.

The youthful burglar lived at 1535 Tenth avenue, South, with his father, George Hoe, a teamster. Now he is a charge of the juvenile court.

"Kiddies" Bring Officer Their School Reports

CLEVELAND, O.—The blue-coated patrolman on traffic duty lifted his cap and looked seriously at the freckle-faced lad who had beaten his little companions out of Hough school. "Not so good, Johnny; better study a little more next week," said he. "That's fine, Mary," as he examined the grade card of a little girl who came dashing up. Other children excitedly clamored for the patrolman to examine their weekly averages.

This is a regular weekly scene at Hough avenue and Crawford road, where Patrolman Daniel P. Tafa, 11212 Ada avenue, is on traffic duty. Tafa is a friend of every child attending Hough school, and it is to him that they exhibit their grade cards each week, for praise or criticism, before taking them home. The children's attachment to the patrolman has come to the attention of Director of Public Safety Benesch, and he has written Tafa a letter complimenting him on his work.

"The patrolman is a servant of the public school and should never aspire to be its master." In this sentence Tafa summarizes the secret of being a good patrolman and it is a motto which Director Benesch will endeavor to impress on the minds of every member of the police force. "Tafa has the right idea," Benesch said.

Tafa ascribes his interest in the work of school children to the fact that he was unable to attend school after he was ten years old, and was forced to amuse himself by study at night. "I like to encourage them in their work," said he.

Bored Blotched Giraffe Sighs in Its Park Home

NEW YORK.—It was some day at the New York Zoological park recently, for which Raymond L. Dinnara, the curator, is authority. And no wonder. A blotched baboon was received, as was the highest-priced baboon ever brought to the park; also a crate of thirteen tortoises and a number of rare birds of the heron variety.

The giraffe has been on the way from Africa via Germany, then Baltimore and finally New York. The curator had received giraffes before, so when he sent out two men to measure the height from the ground to the trolley wires it was not out of the ordinary. The "B" of landing showed an eight-foot giraffe in a two-foot crate, and as the crate was to go on a wagon of some height the curator got out his pencil.

"That's just two inches to spare," he exclaimed, "but we can't take any chance of having the giraffe electrocuted." As a precaution he sent the two men along with the expressmen, each wearing a pair of rubber gloves, so wires could be lifted if necessary. But the curator's figuring was accurate, and the two men saw the crate slide neatly under the trolley wires as the park was neared with the high-priced, high-priced giraffe.

From the animal sighed when it got out of the crate and went into its new home for two weeks in the park. It was the third time it had been brought to the park since it left Africa. The German officials would not let it out of the boat until month disease, so it remained on a scow in German waters for many days. It was later quarantined in Baltimore.

PHIN'S GOOD LUCK

By GEORGE MUNSON.

Phineas Kelly was accustomed to see "a look in the old woman's eye," as he phrased it, when he came home to his tea after eight hours of peaceful employment as a bricklayer. Years of practice had enabled him to interpret it accurately. It meant, "The law, Phineas, for things have been at sixes and sevens all day."

On such occasions Phineas, good, honest man that he was, would slip out quietly after tea to the corner saloon, where he would sit talking politics and domestics with his cronies and over a glass or two, till the time came to retire home, strictly sober, and prepared to find that the odd and even numerals had straightened themselves out during his absence.

On this occasion there was an altogether different look in Mary's eye.

"What is it, woman?" he exclaimed, sensing that something quite different from anything in his experience had happened. "Speak out, Mary, girl! Is it the measles? If Tim's got them I'll whole the life out of him!"

"No, it isn't!" snapped his better half. "Uncle Jim's dead and has left me all his money. The lawyer thinks it will come to five thousand dollars." While Phineas sat, exhausted from emotion, in his chair, Mary read him the letter from Ireland.

"What'll I do with it?" ejaculated her husband.

"You're going to be a contractor, Phineas, as you have always wanted to be," answered Mary. "And at the end of the month we leave."

Phineas uttered various exclamations, but he was as straw in his wife's hands. Before he went to bed it was understood that he and Mr. Hogan, with whom the subject had been broached at times of day-dreaming, should go into the contracting business. Hogan had saved a tidy sum, and with this legacy their dreams could be realized. During the twenty-eight days remaining before Jung Phineas was to continue laying bricks.

The days that followed were not of unalloyed bliss. Phineas wanted to remain in the little flat, even if he was to be a contractor. But Mary had the "social bee" and she did not fail to impress it upon her husband that, for Tim's sake, they must move to a locality more suited to their new station in life. And, as the days went by, and the whole neighborhood assumed a more cordial friendship than ever before, Phineas found that he was no longer free of Raftery's saloon.

"We can't afford to be too friendly with that sort, Phineas," explained his wife. "Flaherty and his wife are good enough people, but just common clay."

"We've shook dice together each Saturday night in years," pleaded Phineas. "And what about that Sunday picnic with them and the Hooligans?"

"There won't be any picnic," asserted Mary irritably.

Nevertheless Phineas did manage to meet his old friends by various subterfuges, and he carefully explained the situation to them.

"The best woman in the world, Mike," he told Flaherty. "But you know how it is with women, Mike. The money's sort of turned her head."

"That's all right, Phin," responded Mike Flaherty. "This one's on me."

To the neighbors, indeed, it seemed a natural thing that Mrs. Kelly should want to rise in the world; and if there was a little evasive gossiping, the sight of the good woman, as she went down the street resplendent in her new gowns (purchased with the last of their saved money) turned envy to admiration.

Meanwhile Hogan and Kelly had arranged their partnership. There was a fine opening in the town, and Hogan was to put in a couple of thousand, supplementing his smaller contribution with his political "pull." The new apartment was leased and the Kellys were preparing to leave.

Mrs. Kelly only required a week to pack, being a methodical woman. But as the week progressed that look came into her eye more and more frequently, till Phineas, having no refuge now, to which to fly, was driven to beg

"What is it, Mary?" he asked one evening, when his wife had been more than usually morose.

He half expected the tartest of rejoinders; but, to his astonishment, his wife burst into tears and laid her head upon his shoulder. And Phineas found himself caring for her as he had not done since Tim was a baby.

"Phineas," she wept, "I feel so mean and hateful, the way I've treated the Flahertys and the Hooligans, after the friends we've been. It's for the boy's sake, Phineas, dear, isn't it?"

"Sure, that's all right," answered her husband. "They understand."

"Do you think they think I think they aren't good enough for us?" inquired his wife, raising her face, wet with tears.

"I guess they think they'd do as much if they were in your place, Mary," he answered.

"For half a pin," said Mary, "I'd stay right on here for old times' sake, and—invite the Hooligans and Flahertys to the picnic after all. But—" she stebbed—"It's for Tim's sake, isn't it?"

"Sure," answered her husband, bravely, though he, too, was thinking of his old friends and those merry evenings at Raftery's.

But three days remained when the post brought a letter from the lawyers in Ireland. Phineas brought it dutifully to his wife. She opened it and gave a scream.

"Phineas! We haven't got any money at all!" she gasped.

Phineas Kelly, with a mixed feeling of joy and sadness, took up the missive and spelled it out:

"We beg to inform you," he read, "that an error was made in stating that the estate of your late uncle, Mr. James Smylie, was likely to be proved at five thousand dollars. The total amount of the estate is seventeen thousand, all of which goes to you under the will, and—"

"Seventeen thousand!" cried Mary Kelly, springing from her chair and grasping the letter from her husband's hand. "Phineas! It's true! Listen! And a check for this amount will be forwarded in a few days to you."

Suddenly the excited woman began to execute a pas seul before her husband's eyes.

"Mary!" he exclaimed, "you'll be too tired to pack if you—"

"But we're not moving, Phineas! We've got to stay right on here."

"But we've got seventeen thousand, woman!" he cried.

"That's why, Phineas," she answered. "With five thousand we could never be sure that the neighbors really looked up to us, but with seventeen thousand we know. We can afford to now. See?"

Phineas saw. He saw a welcome corner in Raftery's and the familiar faces of his old friends smiling out of a cloud of tobacco smoke.

And the kiss he gave Mary drove away the "look" forever.

REAL INVENTOR OF SEXTANT

Thomas Godfrey of Philadelphia is the Man to Whom the Honors Properly Belong.

One of the earliest of America's "self-made" men was Thomas Godfrey, who invented the sextant. Godfrey, born in 1704, was a humble glazier, but a man of intellectual force.

John Hadley also invented a sextant, evidently carrying out a suggestion of Newton which was found in Sir Isaac's original draft among Hadley's papers after his death.

Godfrey antedated Hadley by about one year, but for a long time his claims were not recognized, and Hadley received all the credit.

How the humble glazier received his first inspiration to design the instrument of so great use to mariners is an interesting story.

One day, while replacing a pane of glass in a window of a house on the north side of Arch street, in Philadelphia, opposite a pump, a girl, after dilling her pail, placed it upon the sidewalk.

Godfrey, on turning toward it, saw the sun reflected from the window on which he had been at work into the bucket of water, and his philosophic mind seizing upon the incident was thus led to combine the plan of an instrument by which he could draw the sun down to the horizon by a contrivance incomparably superior to any that had ever before been used for the purpose of ascertaining angular measurements.

Test of Character. But responsibility is the great character-developer, and very few of us really know what we can do until we are put to the test. The market is long on men who can take orders, but short on those who can intelligently issue them. Responsibility requires a certain amount of initiative; the willingness to act when occasion demands and the courage to hail under honest effort and take the consequences.

Of course you may fail; but you can't tell whether you will succeed until you try; and having tried to the utmost of your ability and failed, it is better than never to have tried at all. Better because in every loss there is the compensation of experience, while mere inaction means mental and physical stagnation, the dam and sire of amputation.—Lestie's.

The Best Kied. "The poor widow, who lost her only support in her husband, has received a large number of notes of sympathy from her friends."

BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Last year approximately 100,000 Americans died from Bright's and other diseases of the kidneys.

Had a railroad wreck or a Titanic disaster killed one-hundredth this number the world would gasp in horror and the newspapers of the country would be taxed to issue special editions in sufficient number to meet the public demand for information on the subject, and senatorial or congressional committees would be appointed to investigate the cause and formulate laws for the prevention of like disasters in the future.

But because we are used to it and because they are snuffed out only a few at a time we ignore this appalling sacrifice of 100,000 human lives and take it as a matter of course. And the absurdity of this position is the more startling when we know that fully 60 per cent of these deaths, or 60,000 could be prevented or at least postponed for many years with greater ease and certainty than a Titanic disaster can be prevented.

Our stupidity becomes still more amazing in the face of the fact that deaths from these diseases are steadily increasing at an enormous rate. In the vital statistics registration area, now covering approximately 60 per cent of our population, deaths from kidney diseases have increased 72 per cent in 20 years and 23 per cent in last ten years. In the city of Chicago the increase has been 47 per cent in the last ten years.

Bright's and the allied diseases are clearly diseases of civilization; they advance together. They are the diseases of highly seasoned food, or drink, of indolent habits of body and mind, and of mental "strain," commonly called worry.

The 1910 census gave the United States a population increase of 21 per cent in the ten-year period between 1900 and 1910 and showed the rural population to number 84 per cent and the urban population 48 per cent of the whole.

Within this ten-year period the rural population increased only 11 per cent while the urban population increased 34 per cent and this very material change in the ratio between the producers and the consumers of the necessities of life must become a powerful factor in the health of our people for two reasons: First, because of the change in proximity to food supplies. Less fresh food is being consumed by the increasing numbers flowing into our cities, and it is a self evident fact that the longer food is held the greater is the danger of contamination. Second, the increase in the ratio of consumer to producer of the necessities of life means a perfectly logical increase in the cost of the production, hence an inevitable increase in the cost of living and the worries incident thereto.

The subject of the preservation and transportation of food is of vast importance and is now receiving the attention of the federal and state authorities, but it is a subject on which the individual citizen must seek enlightenment if we are to make any progress towards a happier humanity.

We are fairly well informed through the daily press as to the dangers of chemical preservatives in foods, and because of these dangers cold is depended on to keep foods in fit condition in the average home. Cold does not kill bacteria, but it does inhibit or check their rapid growth, and in this fact we find the need of and the reason for public ice fund subscriptions in the battle against disease among the poor in our cities. But it must be carefully noted, however, that ice can be, at best, but little superior in purity to the water from which it is made, and therefore ice is itself a factor of enormous importance in the development and spread of disease.

As increasing intelligence opens our minds to a comprehension of the cause underlying ill health, particularly of the gastric disturbances of childhood, we learn that most of our ills are due either to insufficient or badly prepared and unclean food rather than to any excess in food values or quantity.

The very prevalent "summer complaints" and other digestive troubles of childhood and of humanity in general are traceable directly to a common cause—BIBB. High infant mortality goes hand in hand with BIBB. Food may be easily contaminated by washing dishes and other containers with polluted water, and fresh vegetables, such as asparagus, are open to the same danger from the use of impure water on them. Dirty hands and the general ignorant indifference of those handling and preparing food materials; partly decomposed fruit, vegetables and meat; flies on the butter, on the bread and in the milk, direct from the stable or gutter; dust from the street composed of finely ground horse manure—all contribute their quota of BIBB, and it is this element of things too small to be seen that is allowed to accumulate on the surface of foods, rather than the foods themselves, that is the cause of many of our troubles immediate and remote. Undoubtedly in the near future it will be conclusively demonstrated that Bright's disease and the degenerative diseases of the kidneys, heart, arteries and brain in general, including apoplexy, now assumed to be caused by deranged metabolism, the diseases now responsible for our heaviest and a steadily increasing economic loss by reason of the drain on the matured lives of the nation, originate in the "mild infections," those "insignificant dysenteries" arising from carelessness in the matter of personal hygiene and the saturating of the system with toxins from long continued ingestion of toxic elements in dilute polluted water and food matter in general.

THE CURE IDEA.

Four thousand years of human history demonstrate the utter futility of curative medicine in disease or of punitive remedies for the cure of crime. On the other hand, the marvelous results following the practical application of theories evolved from modern scientific investigation must convince the most skeptical that only along rational lines of prevention can the steadily rising tide of disease and crime be successfully combated.

There are no accidents in this world. Every happening is the inevitable result of a specific cause acting according to definite and immutable law, what we term "accidents" being a happening unexpected only because of our ignorance of the fundamental conditions and law. As heat and cold are one and the same, varying only in degree, so accident, disease and crime are only varying results from a common cause—instability, a lack of harmony in existing conditions.

Accident and disease are the result of transgressions of natural law; crime is the result of breaking man-made law. All three are very largely matters of geography, for the reason that what will result in one or the other in one country or state will not produce a like result in another place.

Either unknowingly or in spite of ourselves, and whether we like it or not, nature leads us by purely personal motive to fulfil her ends. In other words, humanity must react according to each individual nature and its environment. Because of this fact punitive laws have never been deterrent, never can be deterrent. In our ignorance we establish laws running counter to natural law and thereby make "criminals." Because of this fact society has been forced again and again either to remove the cause or to amend or repeal the law and legalize the crime.

But we can neither amend nor repeal natural law nor by resolution nullify the effect of a given action; and, as each act has a positive and inevitable result, irrevocable and extending to the end, either we must adapt ourselves to the new conditions or suffer in consequence. If we are elastic and adaptable we "react" and continue to enjoy good health, but if rigid and unadaptable we suffer disease and premature extinction.

We do not break natural laws; they break us if we are stupid enough to try to run counter to them. Therefore, the logic of the situation should drive us diligently to familiarize ourselves with the fundamental laws of the universe of which we are an integral part, that we may live in harmony therewith and fulfil our destiny, whatever it may be.

In short, good health does not come out of bottles nor law abiding citizens out of cells. Both are matters of physical balance, the product of intelligent breeding and of training beginning not later than the cradle period. Even morality, concerning which we are hearing so much under the captions "social evil" or "white slavery," is not a matter of wage, but of character, and therefore absolutely the result of training.

In the final analysis civilization is nothing more than the development of inhibitory centers enabling us to curb and subdue the remains of our jungle nature—always very near to the surface even in the best of us. But society deliberately breeds disease and crime, then coddles the one and punishes the other, and all the time permits both to breed more incompetents.

Science has demonstrated that good health and freedom from crime may be purchased by intelligent co-operation and the expenditure of money for the benefit of men as masses. And the day will undoubtedly come when ill health will be considered a greater disgrace than to be imprisoned, because the latter is only the result of breaking man-made laws, while ill health is the result of transgressing nature's law, for which there can be no excuse among intelligent people. When that day does dawn there will be no more prisons, for they will have passed with the thumbcrew, the rack and the stake. In place of jails, reformatories and penitentiaries, what we need are more organized nurseries and training schools for children, more hospitals and training institutions for the adult.

Meantime we have to meet the demands of today: First, relief to the sufferers from our past blindness and folly—and most of them can be relieved. Second, to teach the injustice of passing limitations along to future generations.

A MERE INCIDENT

By HERBERT E. HANBLEN.

"Well, Mike, an' how's the new boy?" inquired the other friend.

Mike wanted to finish hauling the blue shirt over his head, and then replied:

"Oh, be Hivens, the finest in the world! Father Casey was in this morning, an' he says that Mike Ferrel, says he ya have the biggest an' handsomest baby on the block, an' that's no lie," says he.

"I'm worried about Nedrah, though; she ain't a bit well," Mike continued, the happy look of the proud father giving way to the troubled one of the husband and provider.

"I don't like the way the doctor looks at her," he said. "She's not strong, poor gyur-l. I had a bit of money saved up for this, but Katy got diphtheria an' that tuck it all, so now I haven't a cent; an' I'm ov'in' a good bit around, too."

"Ah, well," he continued philosophically, as he picked up the heavy slobber and tackled the first of his dirty shoes. "It's good I have a stiddy job."

After the fire was cleaned and the fire-room washed down, Mike remarked to his mate:

"I ain't had a wink o' sleep these two nights; I'm fatter 'er be home in bed today than afore these billsers, with this rotten cold; but I dassen't lose no time now for a spell."

The conversation was interrupted by the opening of the engine-room door—a bare crack. A hand and the grizzled beard of old Ferguson, the chief, protruded for a brief instant.

"Hey, ketch this!" he called in a stage whisper, as he flung his pipe into the yawning emptiness of the fire-room with a fatalistic confidence that was inspiring.

It seemed as if the entire plant always ran with clock-like smoothness and precision until the very minute the superintendent entered on his inspection tour; then the most unexpected things would happen, giving that fiery-tempered official occasion to berate all concerned. Now, Mike could hear his high-pitched voice, reading the riot act to the chief inside.

After half an hour, the insult with in having subsided, it was believed "His Nibs" had gone without bothering their department, an always hopeful, but seldom realized, experience.

Mike threw his brass-cleaning equipment in a corner and leaned against the wall. He was completely worn out. The fire-room was warm and the air heavy with evaporation from the wet floor. Almost immediately he dozed off, standing upright, as he was.

Suddenly the engine-room door was flung wide open, his face nearly hidden by a fiery red broom of a beard, stood squarely in the doorway, glaring savagely into the fire-room.

The super's eyes at once ruffed the sleeping man. Not a facial quiver betrayed his intentions. Slowly, deliberately, he entered the fire-room and traversed its length, scanning every detail with a quick, comprehensive glance.

A long, bony finger shot out from the superintendent's side and bored a hole between Mike's ribs. The big fireman's eyes came open slowly, and to a disinterested spectator, the transformation that passed over his features would have appeared comical.

"Hey, how long have you been here?"

"So-rr-?" asked bewildered Mike. "How long have you worked here?"

"Goin' on eight years, so-rr-?"

"What time do you get relieved?"

"At twilve o'clock, so-rr-?"

"All right; when you go out, you stay out; do you hear?"

"Yis, so-rr-?"

As the superintendent flitted away to deal to Darby and the coal-gasser their respective doses of vengeance, it suddenly dawned upon Mike that he was discharged. The spirit of murder welled up in his heart, but he restrained it. Nobody had ever accomplished anything by an appeal to His Nibs, except to add to that amiable gentleman's gratification—but Mike's need was desperate.

For the sake of Nedrah and the baby, he would humble himself. Choking back the desire to kill, he resigned humbly and approached the tyrant.

"At ye please, so-rr-?"

"Get out—get out—I don't want any talk from you; your shame is this pounds low now."

"But, so-rr-, I only wanted to see ye—"

"Shut up—shut up, I tell ye—get away from me; you're drunk."

Having thus gibbly pronounced the doom of a family, His Nibs hastened to the office of the chief engineer, his appetite for blood merely whetted.

As Mike packed up the traps that had accumulated in his closet during his more than seven years' incumbency, he kept muttering to himself: "An' me wid only wan day's pay stried."

When the rattle came in at noon, Billy Doyle slipped him on the shoulder.

"Hello, Mike, what ye lookin' an' hime about? Have His Nibs been thro'?"

As Mike picked up his traps and shuffled toward the door, he replied wearily: "He has."

That Whiff of Violets. "My! what a flowery whiff! That handkerchief must have been literally steeped in violets," exclaimed one girl to another who had just shaken out from its folds a fragrant square of linen.

"Not steeped in violets, my dear," was the answer, "but boiled in orris water. The effect is the same. On washing day I supply the washerwoman with a good-sized piece of orris root, and she throws it into the water where my handkerchiefs are boiling. When they come up from ironing they are as redolent of orris as can be. Then I slip them between the folds of a sachet filled with violet powder, and they never lose their fragrance. Violets and orris scent together make a real violet odor."

Travel-Talk Bore. "Now is the season when all the world, just back from Europe, is bent on boring us with travel talk."

The speaker was Mayor Rockwell of Akron. He resumed: "There are a number of ways to shut these travel bores up. A good way is the Coliseum one."

"The bore says to you, enthusiastically: 'And in Rome I saw the Coliseum by moonlight. Um-m-m, wasn't it fine!'"

"The Coliseum?" you answer, calmly. "Which one?"

"Of course, there's only one Coliseum in Rome. But the bore isn't sure about it, and if there are two, he doesn't want to expose his ignorance. While he hems and haws and stutters, very red in the face, you easily make your escape from him."

HIT THE SPOT. Postum Knocked Out Coffee Ails.

There's a good deal of satisfaction and comfort in hitting upon the right thing to rid one of the varied and constant ailments caused by coffee drinking.

"Ever since I can remember," writes an lad woman, "my father has been a lover of his coffee, but the continued use of it so affected his stomach that he could scarcely eat at times."

"Mother had coffee-headache and dizziness, and if I drank coffee for breakfast I would taste it all day and usually go to bed with a headache."

"One day father brought home a pkg. of Postum recommended by our grocer. Mother made it according to directions on the box and it just 'hit the spot.' It has a dark, real-brown color, changing to golden brown when cream is added, and a snappy taste similar to mild, high-grade coffee, and we found that its continued use speedily put an end to all our coffee ills."

"That was at least ten years ago and Postum has, from that day to this, been a standing order of father's grocery bill."

"When I married, my husband was a great coffee drinker, although he admitted that it hurt him. When I mentioned Postum he said he did not like the taste of it. I told him I could make it taste all right. He smiled and said, 'try it.' The result was a success, he won't have anything but Postum."

HAVE NO ADMIRAL IN NAVY

Mexico Situation Calls Attention to Policy by Which American Prestige is Sacrificed—Clash at Port Narrowly Averted.

Vera Cruz, Mexico.—Mobilizing the Atlantic fleet off Vera Cruz has disclosed an astounding situation in the American navy, says James B. Wood in Chicago Daily News.

In the event of any united action Rear Admiral Craddock of the royal navy would command. Unless there should be special agreement between the British and United States governments the entire American naval forces would be under his orders.

Washington—by which is meant congress and the national administration, this and preceding ones—is responsible for the situation. With all its claims as a world power, with a $150,000,000 a year navy, including the largest superdreadnaughts of any nation, the American officers in foreign waters are usually outranked by those of other nations because America has neither admirals nor vice-admirals. Its highest rank is rear admiral, except the grade of admiral of the navy, which is held by George Dewey. His duties are seldom on sea, and the rank goes out when he goes.

In Mexico's waters the situation already has threatened serious consequences. Rear Admiral Craddock and Rear Admiral Fletcher were on the verge of friction at Vera Cruz, but the British government diplomatically advised Craddock to waive his rights of precedence.

Before the Mexican situation assumed its serious phases Great Britain, with customary alertness in affairs international, assured itself of having the ranking officer among the navies of the world that might come here.

As soon as the United States Atlantic fleet started to assemble at Vera Cruz Admiral Craddock, in the West Indies, was ordered to proceed at all speed to this spot. As soon as he arrived on the cruiser Essex, flying a rear admiral's flag, he was the ranking officer in port. In case of any concerted move by the world powers

ANIMALS CHEER ZOO FIGHT FOR KINGSHIP

They Gather About Ram and Goat and Keep Up the Noisy Excitement.

Norwich, Conn.—Superintendent John Duff recently introduced a big Angora goat to the deer yard in Mohegan park. A ram which has reigned as king of the yard didn't like it and began to butt the goat around.

Visitors to the park rushed to the ringside outside the fence, trying to frighten off the ram by shouts, while a big turkey gobbler perched on the top rail appeared in the role of referee. The ram only grew more furious at the interference of outsiders, renewing his rushes at the goat, which put up a stiff fight until one of his handsome horns was broken.

Every animal in the park appeared to be taking sides in the conflict, and the babel of noises drew Superintendent Duff. He arrived just as the Angora, with only one horn to defend himself, showed signs of yielding.

Duff drove off the ram and bound up the bleeding wounds of the Angora, especially the gash where the horn was broken off.

OKlahoma Lad, Who Rescued a Kidnaped Girl Sixteen Years Ago, is Rewarded.

Achille, Okla.—Charles Brown, a farmer of Bryan county, now has an income of $100 a week because sixteen years ago he saved the life of a child and the father did not forget.

Sixteen years ago Charles Brown, now of Achille, Bryan county, then mere boy, was working for a lumber company in Tennessee. The owner of the mill had a daughter, a little child, fair and winsome, who was the pet of the lumber camp. Two bandits, with a purpose of extorting a ransom, kidnaped the child and made away with her toward the Cumberland mountains. The father immediately informed the sheriff, who organized a posse and started in pursuit.

Charles Brown, because of his youth, was deemed unfit for service and left behind. Armed himself with two revolvers he set out on foot to overtake the bandits. All that night and next day the boy sped on his way, until his feet were blistered. He was without sustenance, for he was passing through an uninhabited country.

The second night he lay wild and captured the bandits, driving them 22 miles ahead of him to a telegraph station, where he notified the sheriff, and came home with the rescued girl and prisoners.

Brown had nearly forgotten the act, when one day last week he received notice from a firm of lawyers in Tennessee informing him that his old employer, who had grown to be a multimillionaire, had recently died and had left to him an allowance of $100 a week for life.

New York—Chief Steward Ballie of the United Fruit Line Metapan, which arrived from Central America the other day, utilized a new method of scaring sharks. When the alarm went off the shark stood on its tail, turned somersaults and tried to stop the clock by swallowing lots of sea water. It finally headed for the open sea at terrific speed, lashing the water with its tail.

Girls Boast Many Names

Father, Mother, Callers, Servants, All Have Own Designation for Child-nese Young Women.

Detroit.—A Chinese girl does not start life with one name and bear it with her for the rest of her days, as does the member of a Christian family. A fond father will call his baby girl his "Moonbeam," while his son goes under the designation of a "Phoenix," says the Detroit Times.

When she begins to run about her mother probably knows her as a "Little Sister." Callers address her as "Little Daughter of the House," and strangers and servants show their respect in the use of "Little Miss."

The Chinese word for a scold is conveyed by Lan. Girls of many types are all compared to the Queen of Flowers, but they are equally distinguished by words of two syllables, the latter of which is "lan." A Chinese proverb signifies "the words uttered from a heart full of sympathy have the fragrance of the orchid." As the flower ranks so high in the opinion of the people, it would be difficult to find a sweeter name for a girl.

A "Shy Flower" or a "Sweet Blossom" is a favorite appellation, and the girls' families and friends know them by such fanciful words as Pure Heart, Peace and Modesty coupled with Industry, Faith, Truth or some of the other virtues expected of the women of that Eastern land. Truth, for instance, is sometimes taken as the basis of names, and, with an adjective, becomes a key to the character of the individual to whom it is given. Wang

The free mail delivery which was to have been inaugurated in Plymouth on July 1, did not materialize on that date, and our citizens are now wondering what is causing the delay in starting the service here. In the north of the village where patrons would be especially benefited by free mail delivery there is much disappointment that it did not start at the time set, and at a public meeting held at the Baptist church Tuesday evening, it was decided to confer with the postoffice department and Congressman Beckes to ascertain why the promised service has not been started here. A sentiment seems to prevail among some of the people of the north side of the village that the business men of this end of town are opposed to free mail delivery and that possibly that is the reason why the service has not been installed. A canvass of the business men of this end of town disclosed the fact that they are heartily in favor of the free delivery of mail in the village and have absolutely done nothing to hinder its establishment here, but on the other hand think the service of north village are entitled to this service and great convenience, and want them to have it.

We are certain that when the postoffice department has been heard from the people will be satisfied that no one in Plymouth has been trying to knock a public benefit and convenience as free mail delivery would be. It is to be hoped this system will soon be installed here and we believe the department will yet grant the petition which received the signature of nearly every citizen of the village when it was circulated.

Great Exhibit of "Michigan Made"

One of the Leading Attractions at the State Fair this Year.

Two Weeks, Sept. 7-18, Will Be a Hummer in Way of Attractions.

"If we can by the two weeks of the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 7-18, stimulate an interest in the opportunities Michigan presents to manufacturers as the ideal spot for production, we will consider one of our tasks well done. No other state in the Union is so happily situated for transportation facilities as our own. Any number of excellent sites for factories are available along both railroads and waterways and we want manufacturers to know about them. When they do, they will realize the other advantages that will be theirs by locating here and it will mean many factories will come to the Wolverine State."

The speaker was G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the Michigan State Fair in conversation with several prominent Detroit business men.

Contradictory Humanity. A notorious thief, who was arrested at Philadelphia, was found to have devoted a great part of his ill-gotten gains for the past three years to the maintenance and education of two little orphan girls whom he had adopted.

Kick Me Had Coming. "Have you anything to say before sentence is pronounced upon you?" asked the judge. "The only thing I'm kickin' about," answered the convicted burglar, "is bein' identified by a man that kep' his head under the bedclothes the whole time. That's wrong."—Puck.

Appeal to Family Pride. "We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathen," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourthly at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men in the back seats who have been making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contribution. They are in duty and honor bound to help their brother heathens."

As to Breathing. To breathe wrongly is to impoverish the blood, and through it to reduce the whole body to a state of susceptibility, which opens a way for all kinds of disease. Comparatively few persons take in as much air as they ought; hence parts of the lungs are apt to become weakened through disuse. The first care should be to breathe the best air possible; the next to obtain the proper amount in the right way.

Flight of Life. Child! Child! No more! As if driven on by unseen spirits, the sun leads of time are running away with the light chariot of our destiny, and or us remains nothing except with aigh courage to hold fast the reins, and now to the right, now to the left, from a boulder on one hand or a precipice on the other, to guide the steeds in safety. Whether it goes who can say? One scarcely remembers whence he came.—From Goethe's Egmont.

IF ANYTHING IS GOING WRONG, PRESIDENT TELLS BUSINESS, CRITICS SHOULD AID.

HE CALLS FOR PATRIOTISM

Chief Executive's Fourth of July Speech in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, Urges Modernizing of Declaration of Independence.

Philadelphia, July 7.—President Wilson thrilled a huge crowd assembled in Independence square within a few feet of where the original declaration was signed by advocating the modernizing of the Declaration of Independence by applying its principles to the business, the politics and the foreign policies of the United States.

Following is the address of President Wilson in part:

"Mr. Chairman and Fellow Citizens: The Declaration of Independence was written in Philadelphia. It was adopted in this historic building.

"But have you ever read the Declaration of Independence? When you have heard it read, have you attended to its sentences?"

"The Declaration of Independence is not a Fourth of July oration.

"The Declaration of Independence was a document preliminary to war. It involved a vital piece of business, not a piece of rhetoric.

"If you will get further down in the reading than its preliminary passages, where it quotes about the rights of men, you will see that it is a very specific body of declarations concerning the business of the day, not the business of our day, for the matter with which it deals is past—the business of revolution, the business of 1776.

"I have heard a great many facts stated about the present business conditions in this country, for example, a great many allegations of facts, at this rate, and it is strange that these facts as stated do not tally with each other.

"Now, the truth always matches the truth, and when I find gentlemen insisting everything is going wrong when it is demonstrable that most things are going right, I wonder what they are trying to do. Are they trying to serve the country, or are they trying to serve something smaller than the country?"

"Are they trying to put hope into the hearts of men who work and toil every day, or rather, are they putting discouragement and despair into these hearts?"

"If they love America and anything is wrong, it is their duty to put their hands to the task of setting it right.

"When the facts are known and acknowledged, the duty of all patriotic men is to accept them in candor and address themselves to common counsel and to work in harmony and universal concert.

"I have had some experiences in the last fourteen months which have not been entirely refreshing. It was universally admitted that the banking system of this country needed reorganization.

"We met with hardly anything but resistance from the bankers of this country, or at least from the majority of those who said anything.

"Yet, just so soon as that act was passed, on the very next day there was a universal chorus of applause from the bankers of the United States.

"Now if it were wrong the day before it was passed, why was it right the day after it was passed?"

"Where had been the candor of criticism by the concert of counsel which makes a great nation successful? It is not patriotic to concert measures against one another; it is patriotic to concert measure for one another.

"So, I say, it is patriotic sometimes to regard the honor of this country in preference to its material interests.

"Would you rather be despised by all the nations of the world as incapable of keeping your treaty obligations, or would you rather have free trade for American ships? The treaty may have been a mistake, but its meaning was unmistakable.

"When I have made a promise as a man I try to keep it.

"The most honorable and distinguished nation in the world is the nation that can keep its promises, to its own hurt. I want to say, parenthetically, that I don't think anybody was hurt.

"I am not enthusiastic for subsidies to a monopoly, and nobody can get me enthusiastic on that subject. But, assuming that was a matter of expediency, I am much more enthusiastic for accepting the integrity of the United States absolutely unquestioned and unshaken."

T. R. IN KEYNOTE TALK

URGES PINCHOT'S ELECTION TO UNITED STATES SENATE.

Democratic Administration Assailed—Says It Has Failed to Keep Promises to People.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 2.—At a Progressive rally here on Tuesday night Col. Theodore Roosevelt made the first wholly political speech he has made since returning to the United States, and in it he struck the keynote for the campaign. In the first place he urged the election of Gifford Pinchot as senator and Dean Lewis as governor because of their personal worth and as a rebuke to Republicans and Democrats as well as to carry out Progressive principles.

The colonel then paid his respects to the Wilson administration, asserting that the president and his supporters had utterly failed to keep their promises of reducing the cost of living and solving the trust question by their method of tariff reduction. The administration is pursuing a course, he said, that prevents the existence of prosperity and that does not offer a single serious or intelligible plan for passing prosperity round should prosperity, in spite of the administration's efforts, at some future time return to the people."

After expressing his well-known opinion of the Republican bosses and their action at the Chicago convention, Colonel Roosevelt discussed at length the administration's anti-trust program and then set forth the Progressive view of the business problem.

HUERTA IS ELECTED

WASHINGTON HEARS THAT DICTIONARY WILL RETIRE IN FAVOR OF LASCURIAN.

BLANQUET ALSO GETS VOTES

Towns Prepare to Receive Rebels and Federal Officials Are Fleeing to Vera Cruz Before City of Mexico Falls.

Vera Cruz, Mex., July 7.—General Funston received information from a confidential source in Mexico City that Huerta had been elected president almost unanimously Sunday. The voting, it is stated, was very light, all the ballots being cast before one o'clock Sunday afternoon. In view of this the legality of the election is said to be doubtful.

Foreigners arriving from the capital reported the flight of Querido Moheno, who recently resigned as minister of commerce in the Huerta cabinet. Moheno is believed to have been accompanied in his flight by Jorge Huerta, son of the dictator, and Gen. Joaquin Maas, nephew of Huerta by marriage. Maas and young Huerta left the capital on the special train which carried Moheno away to Puerto Mexico, but it is not known whether or not they returned to the capital later.

A majority of the votes cast were for General Huerta and Minister of War Blanquet. Scattered votes were received by De la Barra, Camba and others.

Washington, July 7.—It was learned from a reliable source here that General Huerta has informed his representatives at the mediation conference that he will step down from the presidency in favor of Pedro Lascurain at the close of Sunday's balloting in Mexico.

Citizens have arranged for provisional officials and police. Refugees are arriving daily, foreshadowing serious developments in Mexico City. Among the refugees are men prominent in the Huerta army and politics.

CLAIMS TO HAVE SLAIN GIRL

Anonymous Writer Says He Killed Treslee Hollander—Court Refuses to Free Petras.

Geneva, Ill., July 4.—"I am the real murderer of Treslee Hollander; I kill myself." This startling line was written into a letter sent from Chicago to Judge Irwin, presiding at the trial of Tony Petras for the St. Nicholas' graveyard murder. Judge Irwin overruled if motion of the defense in the Petras trial on Thursday to take the case from the jury and direct a verdict of acquittal. When the state closed its case in the middle of the afternoon, freedom seemed to hover closely over Tony Petras, charged with having murdered Theresa Hollander in St. Nicholas graveyard last February.

The trainer managed to get out of the cage unaided and was picked up by fellow employees and rushed to the office of Dr. Wolfson, who pronounced the man in a serious condition. CARRANZA AND VILLA AT PEACE

QUARREL AMONG REBEL LEADERS IS SETTLED BY TORREON CONFERENCE.

RESULT IS SATISFACTORY

Troops Under Command of Villa Are to Be Supplied With Coal and Ammunition by First Chief.

Torreon, Coahuila, Mexico.—General Venustiano Carranza has been recognized as first chief of the constitutional revolution and Gen. Francisco Villa is subordinate to him; This confirmation of the relative positions of Carranza and Villa was regarded as the most important step taken at the internal peace parley here intended to reunite the Villa and Carranza factions.

In settling this point, the question of supplying the division of the north, which Villa commands, with coal and ammunition, probably will find an automatic solution. While General Villa owes Carranza absolute subordination, Carranza, on the other hand, is obliged to meet the wants of the Villa troops. The statement was made today that the result of the meetings was satisfactory, General Villa said today:

"I hope that the outcome of the conference will be beneficial to Mexico and that the patriotic motives will cause the compact to be kept."

While the conference was in session, brigades of the northern division were being sent north through Torreon to go into quarters in the country districts of Chihuahua. In these districts the cavalry horses will recuperate from the hard campaigns of Paredon and Zacatecas.

Coupled with this movement is the desire to maintain the army more economically. Food and forage have reached tremendous prices and since General Villa's purchasing agents buy at current quotations, it sometimes has been a problem to supply the troops with necessities.

Most of the army will be concentrated near Chihuahua city until the advance on Mexico City is resumed.

WELSH WINS THE DECISION

English Lightweight Fighter Takes Title From American Champion.

London.—Fred Welsh, lightweight champion of England, Tuesday night outboxed Willie Ritchie, the American champion, and on the referee's decision won the lightweight championship of the world.

The fight took place at Olympia and the 3,000 spectators witnessed a fast and clever fight. Rapid footwork and a good deal of infighting were pronounced features. The British victory was cheered to the echo, although there was some dissatisfaction among the American spectators at the decision, because neither man was bested at the finish. Although Welsh scored the greater number of blows, those of the American appeared to be more telling.

Niles.—Probate Judge Barr has admitted to probate a will of the late Mrs. Addie Moore, near Niles. One provision of the will, however, was not admitted. It was a clause giving to the Spiritualist society of Vicksburg a bequest of $2,600. The money will be distributed among the heirs. The court refused to recognize the Spiritualist bequest on the ground that there is no such society.

Saginaw.—The mystery surrounding the death of Alfred Sherman, superintendent of transportation of the Saginaw-Bay City Railway company, may be cleared through the discovery of a bottle which contained considerable liquid, believed to be poison. The contents of the bottle have been turned over to a chemist. The coroner's jury said Sherman died from the effects of a blow on the head and the heat.

Owosso.—One hundred and fifty farmers from Rush township were disappointed when they arrived at the city hall to find that the examination of Rev. Charles E. Loomis' of Henderson, charged with a statutory offense, was to be continued behind locked doors. So insistent were the curious ones on getting into the court room that officers had to use force to clear the corridors. After Mrs. Philip Blingham, whose husband says that she and the preacher had been intimate, had read her testimony and signed it, the case was adjourned until July 27. Eleven men of all religious creeds signed Loomis' bond for $1,000.

Ann Arbor.—Mrs. Ina Hanson, a bride of a week, is dead from excitement caused by watching a children's street quarrel in which the young son of her host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Leighton, was struck with a stone. Mrs. Hanson was formerly Miss Ina Martin. She was married to a Kalamazoo man and was soon to have gone there to make her home. She had recently recovered from a severe illness. After witnessing the quarrel, Mrs. Hanson went down the street to the home of Mrs. Patrick Walsh a few doors away. As she started to ring the bell she sank to the porch unconscious.

St. Joseph.—Hattie Bannat and her husband, Robert Bannat, are being held in the county jail here suspected of the murder of their child, born last week. The couple, grim slaves of long poverty, swear that the babe died at birth. Physicians declare that the child was born alive and healthy and its body bears marks of violence. After a searching examination by the officers to a spot in the woods where she had buried the infant an hour after it came into the world, Sheriff Franz believes that the wife's poverty of the couple caused the mother to kill her offspring rather than have it face the same miserable existence.
