THE BEST HYMNS

The "Seven Best Hymns" as tested by the favor of Christians through generations.

- Rock of Ages
- Where I Survey the Wondrous Cross
- Jesus, Lover of My Soul
- Evening Hymn
- Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken
- "Sun of My Soul"
- A Morning Hymn

A Philadelphia authority on hymnody, the Rev. Louis F. Benson, D. D., has written a treatise on "The Best Hymns," giving the date of composition and the history of the hymns. Since the selection of the "Best Hymns" must necessarily vary with individual taste, Doctor Benson resorted to the fairest method possible, by comparing all the standard hymnals in the English language, both British and American, and tabulating those hymns which appeared the greatest number of times in these hundreds of volumes. The result fairly represents the verdict of Christendom on the hymns. The seven favorite hymns are, in the order given, those named here. We will sing the first three of these hymns Sunday morning. Come and join in the singing of these good old hymns and the worship of the hour.

Special Notice

In and Around Plymouth

Ypsilanti is to have a new, modern high school.

Howell votes September 7, whether it will become a city or not.

Carleton will hold her annual homecoming celebration, August 6.

The Wayne Fourth of July celebration netted the Masonic Association of that place a little over $300.

The Wayne water works system is fast nearing completion. The large pump is now being installed.

Birmingham merchants have agreed to shut up shop Wednesday afternoons during July and August.

It is reported that a herd of hogs at Holly are affected with cholera. Two farmers there have lost 21 porkers. A quarantine has been established.

The Northville Protective Association is the name of a new society just formed for the purpose of preventing the stealing of horses around that village.

Howell fair managers have signed a contract with New York parties to have a flying machine at their fair September 1 to 4, making two flights each day.

Northville's Chautauque will take place August 16-20 inclusive. Some fine attractions have been secured, and no doubt many Plymouth people will attend during that week.

Judge Harry L. Larwill of Adrian, was the first to file his petition with the secretary of state as a candidate for the Republican Congressional nomination in this district. The petitions were signed by about 600 voters.

The fourth homecoming of Rochester old boys and girls will be held Thursday and Friday, July 30 and 31. The first day will be given over to visiting and the renewal of acquaintances, while on the second day there will be games, sports and a banquet.

Wednesday, July 22, is Pontiac day in that city, with a barbecue big enough to feed 3,000 people. At this time a number of lots, held by the Commercial association will be sold for the purpose of raising a fund for the inducement of factories to locate in Pontiac.

The Wayne County Audit is the name of a new paper just started at Wayne. It is a bright and newsy paper and deserves the liberal support of the merchants of Wayne. Miss Regina V. Cullen is the editor. The Mail wishes the new paper unbounded success.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Proat, former residents of this place, were in the street car collision near Jackson recently and both were severely bruised up, though not seriously injured. It was an experience they never want to go through again. They had taken the car at Chelsea and were going to Lansing.

Surprising Cure of stomach Trouble

When you have trouble with your stomach or chronic constipation, don't imagine that your case is beyond help just because your doctor fails to give you relief. Mrs. G. Stangle, Plainfield, N. J., writes: "For over a month past I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising booklet came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three-fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want." For sale by all druggists.—Adv.

Stolen Auto Recovered Here

Last Sunday morning about two o'clock an automobile driven by two young men who afterwards gave their names as Joseph Elmer and Max Barrow of Chicago, became stalled near the home of Fred Shutt, about two miles northwest of Plymouth, for the lack of gasoline. The men aroused several of the farmers in that vicinity hoping to get enough gasoline to continue their journey, but were not successful, and they were finally compelled to walk back to Plymouth, where about six o'clock they aroused W. T. Conner, who went to the store and procured the gasoline for them. Mr. Conner required the men to leave a deposit of $1.00 for the return of a car with David Corkins at H. C. Robinson's livery barn, which they did. Mr. Corkins thought that the actions of the two men were suspicious and telephoned Deputy Sheriff Geo. Springer his suspicions. Officer Springer came up town at once and was at the barn when the two men and the auto made their appearance to return the oil can. After questioning them closely the officer decided to arrest them on suspicion, they finally telling him they had taken the machine from the corner of Woodward and Jefferson avenues in Detroit Saturday night about 9 o'clock. Officer Springer telephoned the Detroit police of the arrest and recovery of the machine, and was informed that the machine belonged to Dr. Vaughan of that city. The men were taken to Detroit and turned over to the police. Dr. Vaughan came out later in the day and returned to the city with his machine much pleased over its recovery. The two men claimed to be on their way to Chicago when interrupted in their getaway.

They give a program of instrumental quartets, trios, duets, and vocal duets. The violin-playing of Prof. Pedersen is said to be wonderful. The admission is 25c for adults and 15c for children. Don't miss this entertainment.

Travis, Dr. Luther Peck, Miss Lina Darzee, J. E. Wilcox and Paul Bennett.

The Free Mail Delivery Question

We print below an excerpt from a letter written to President Louis Hillmer by Senator Charles Townsend, in response to a letter from Mr. Hillmer relative to the delay in establishing free mail delivery here:

July 10, 1914.

Mr. Louis Hillmer, Pres., Plymouth, Michigan, My dear Hillmer:—

Immediately upon receiving your letter of the 7th I called on the Superintendent of Free Delivery at the post office here and he informed me after looking through many papers, that the Plymouth matter was now under investigation, and he assured me that he would push the matter as rapidly as he could and that he would report to me what progress he is making at the earliest date. There has been a let up in the work of establishing free village delivery and I am convinced that the department is trying to economize along this line. You may be sure that I will do the best I can for Plymouth free delivery.

Sincerely yours,
Chas. E. Townsend.

FIFTEEN DAYS,

Beginning Saturday, July 18, '14

In accordance with the established policy of this store in having two big Clearing Sales a year (one at the close of each season), our July Clearing Sale will begin on above date. A harvest of Bargains for you. The reaping is good for those who do not delay long. Banner crop of big values.

THIS SALE will mark the close of the greatest Spring business this store has ever done. We are not making any pretense of lack of business and overstocked lines for holding this sale. As a matter of fact, a store always has goods to close out at the end of the season, and usually more at the end of a good trading season than at the end of a poor one, for heavy trading makes us buy accordingly. We have goods in every line to close out

You will find this an interesting sale just the same, as all of our semi-annual sales have been. Every article in the store is perfect merchandise, bought for our regular business, not stuff bought with a special sale in view. We cannot urge too strongly the many advantages you can gain by coming to this sale. The great bargains in Dry Goods, Clothing, Ladies', Misses' and Children's Spring Cloaks, Suits and Skirts, Carpets, Rugs, Mattings, Oil Cloths, Curtains, Shoes, Hats and Caps, Trunks, Suit Cases, Shirts, Underwear, Gloves, Laces, Embroideries, Silks, Trimmings, Ladies' and Gents' Furnishings, etc., will prove great money-saving opportunities.

SYNOPSIS.

For three days, hearkening to Roman's counsel, he did nothing but sleep and eat. His cold disappeared. His flagging strength revived. Then he gave himself anew to the endless, narrow grind—till, eat, sleep and toil again.

around the house, waiting on the table, sweeping and sewing. Having certain standards of beauty, he carelessly decided that she had none of it.

CHAPTER VI.

Melting Ore.

A gentleman, who must pass down in history as Mr. A, led to the discovery, Mr. A, an earnest man who could stroll his boat five miles an hour in still water, undertook to row twenty-three miles up a river whose current ran two and one-half miles an hour, and back.

He sat down and quickly worked out the problem. Then he led Piotr slowly through the equations thrice, after which he let the boy begin unaided a stumbling but finally successful pursuit of the elusive x.

When he awoke, the late morning sunshiny filled his room. But the eager expectancy pervading him, as if some long-planned holiday had dawned, was more than a reflection of this outer radiance.

He bathed and dressed carefully. And for the first time he perceived that his clothes, relic of Bethel days, lacked something when judged by city standards. He frowned at the image in the cheap mirror.

When he went downstairs he found Kazia bending over a window box in the dining room, where three scarlet geraniums flamed. She heard his approach and turned slowly.

"Hello!" she said quietly, and moved away toward the kitchen.

"Er—" he stammered. "It's a fine morning."

"Yes," she said. "My goodness!" he laughed. "Is 'yes' all you can say? Don't you remember we agreed to be friends?"

"I said I wanted you to stay," she corrected without enthusiasm. "I'll get your breakfast." This time she accomplished her escape.

He sat at the table, loftily amused. Probably—thus he considered her unresponsiveness—the poor thing still doubted his sincerity. And she had reason, beyond question; on the whole he had been selfish in his rigid seclusion.

all ashamed. But I ain't ashamed. I won't have you pity me."

"Do you know you're mighty good-looking, Kazia?" The angry crimson deepened. "You're laughing at me. You're—"

"But I'm not laughing. He caught her arm again, gently. "I'm only surprised. I didn't think you were. But you are—when you're interested or mad. Only please don't be mad, because—"

When he awoke, the late morning sunshiny filled his room. But the eager expectancy pervading him, as if some long-planned holiday had dawned, was more than a reflection of this outer radiance.

He bathed and dressed carefully. And for the first time he perceived that his clothes, relic of Bethel days, lacked something when judged by city standards. He frowned at the image in the cheap mirror.

When he went downstairs he found Kazia bending over a window box in the dining room, where three scarlet geraniums flamed. She heard his approach and turned slowly.

"Hello!" she said quietly, and moved away toward the kitchen.

"Er—" he stammered. "It's a fine morning."

"Yes," she said. "My goodness!" he laughed. "Is 'yes' all you can say? Don't you remember we agreed to be friends?"

He sat at the table, loftily amused. Probably—thus he considered her unresponsiveness—the poor thing still doubted his sincerity. And she had reason, beyond question; on the whole he had been selfish in his rigid seclusion.

At the end of an hour "My darling" stared at him from an otherwise empty page, and he was glowering out into the sunlit streets and wondering why Kazia wanted him to stay, why her indifference of the morning and why his disappointment.

A youth and his sweetheart strolled by below him. The sight of the music of their laughter, aggravated his restlessness and gave him an idea.

"That's it, exactly. I will go down and get Kazia and take a walk in the park. Poor girl! I expect she needs company, too."

He found her in the dining room—and already attired for holiday sauntering. A ladies' seminary graduate might have been stirred to criticism of the cheap white dress and coarse straw hat with its single blue ribbon; he was not. We may doubt that he saw them at all, for her eyes were dancing and her lips smiling mischievously at Piotr, who sat in one corner, nursing his club foot and glaring fiercely at her. She could be gay, then.

But the smile disappeared upon his entrance. Nevertheless, "Kazia," he announced boldly, "we're going walking in the park."

"Are we?" "Well, aren't we?" He modified his suaveness a little. "I'd like you to come."

"She's going with Jim Whiting," Piotr explained grumpily. "He's her fellow."

"Oh," Kazia blinked stupidly. Evidently other youths had discovered her. It was strangely disturbing. He recovered himself, grinning wryly. "Serves me right. I took too much for granted, didn't I? I'm sorry."

"I'll go with you," Piotr volunteered promptly. "Oh, all right. Come along, Piotr." "Pete," corrected Piotr. "In a minute."

So, though not as he had planned, Mark sallied forth into the golden afternoon. Piotr, anxious to impress this wonderful boarder whose learning made light of the difficulties of Messrs. A, B and C and defied the intricacies of the subjunctive, talked, at first shyly, then more freely, mostly of himself, in which he was deeply interested. Mark let him ramble on and listened to his own thoughts, which chiefly concerned Kazia. He ruefully wished that he had not been so ready to assume her assent.

Piotr's ambition, the monologue developed, soared high; it included notable achievements as a labor leader, although his notions of the historical conflict were a little vague.

As they passed the mouth of a little dell they were halted by this tableau: Kazia leaning against a tree and Jim Whiting at her feet tying the shoe-lace that had come loose. He was unconsciously long about it. Mark thought, "I must have said something, for she laughed, a clear ringing note. The kneeling gallant arose, Mark saw a man two or three years his senior, not ill-looking despite his too heavy lips and loose jaw and 'sporty' clothes. Mark disliked him at once. Whiting took Kazia's arm and led her slowly along the dell.

announced. He added the complaint, "You're late."

"All right," Mark sighed. "Bring 'em out."

Then Kazia spoke her protest. "Piotr, can't you see he's tired?" "But I can't do 'em." Piotr became sulky at once. "And I haven't failed once this week."

"Piotr, you're a greedy Hunky pig. Don't you do it," she turned to Mark. "Sunday's the double turn."

Was this the olive branch? Nothing then could have persuaded him to give up the hour with Piotr. But he saw an opening; he unlimbered a big gun and sent one shell screaming toward her camp. "You," he said with crushing dignity, "will be walking in the park and won't care. Piotr, we're losing time."

She turned away so quickly that he could not judge his marksmanship. The lesson began and lasted until Piotr rushed off to school.

The double turn came and was duly endured, as are most of life's dreaded trials when they actually present themselves. But even Roman showed the effects of the long strain. When he reached home he began at once to drown his fatigue in huge potatoes. Mark went to his room.

There a surprise awaited him: clean clothes, neatly laid out—also Kazia, who had just completed this kindly service.

"I thought you'd like to clean up before supper," she explained with a new diffidence. "Thank you, Kazia. You always think of the right things."

"No, not always." She moved toward the door—eager to avoid him, as usual, he thought. But he had no spirit for the siege just then. He dropped into the chair, burying his throbbing head in his hands. He supposed that she had gone. But she had not gone. She stood uncertain in the doorway, watching the tired dejected figure he made.

"Not always," she repeated. The ready color mounted. "Sometimes I'm cranky when I don't want to be."

He glanced up, bewildered by this sudden striking of colors. "You look awful tired," she went on hurriedly.

BY HENRY HOWLAND

NOT NEEDED

"I am not needed here," he said. "His voice was full of bitterness; 'I often wish that I was dead. The world is sore at me, I guess; it seems my luck is always bad. It hits me everywhere I go. Good Fortune's makin' others glad. She never hands me favors, though."

"I've never had no chance to rise, There's ways something in the way! Luck never handed me a prize. But others get them every day; I'm sick of life, I'd like to be. I ain't and free from all the care; There ain't no place on earth for me. At rest been treated on the square."

He slouched away, still murmuring about the address of his case; He was an unattractive thing. With ragged stubbles on his face; He had not mastered any trade. Nor even learned his native speech; There was no goal that he had made Unflinching attempts to reach.

Why He Was Hurt. "My friends," he said the minister, after he had finished reading his text for the second time, "I promised last Sunday, as you will remember, to preach a sermon this morning that should be only 15 minutes long. I am very glad indeed to see such a large number of brethren and sisters present, but there is one thing that causes me extreme sorrow. It is not that the large turnout today is probably due to the fact that I have decided to make my remarks brief. I realize that few men have such gifts of oratory as to be interesting or instructive for an hour, or even half an hour at a time. It was this conviction which led me to decide to cut down the length of my sermon, but I do feel hurt, my friends, when I see at least a dozen of the brethren in the front pews take out their watches, as I begin my remarks, for the purpose of letting me understand that I am to be timed. I had hoped that if I was not able to thrill you I at least possessed your confidence."

What She Said. "Don't imagine," he said after she had refused him, "that I am going away to blow my brains out or drink myself to death."

"No," she replied, "I have no idea that you are going to do anything of that kind. You are going away to do some wonderful thing which will bring you wealth and fame and make me regret all the rest of my life that I didn't believe you when you intimated that you were one of the greatest little men that had ever come over the asphalt."

Some men succeed by working hard. And some by dreaming splendid dreams; Some win through luck. And some through pluck. And some through dark and staid schemes.

Some men succeed by aiming high. Some through schemes that court strings. And some because Their ladies' pae Are pressed in both hands, gazing out over the undulating acres of close-cropped greenward. "You like it?" he queried. She nodded. "Huh!" he boasted. "You ought to see the hills up in Bethel. They don't look like they'd just been to the barber's. And you can always smell flowers somewhere." He smiled reminiscence. "And the woods! You'd Ebs them. The trees are real trees, big fellows God have been there moose's hundred years. You can get 'best them."

CHAPTER VII.

Soldier and Maid.

He sat a little apart from her, that he might see her the better. It had been a delicious game, spinning nonsense to lure her forth from the grave ridiculous mood upon her that Sabbath afternoon and then letting her lapse into gravity and silence once more.

He had found a surprising skill for it; he could play upon her and elicit just the note he desired. It had been so, ever since she had so unexpectedly laid down her hostility. But he was not quite sure which of the two Kazias he liked the better—her of the clear ringing laugh with its hint of daring; or the subdued pensive maid whose eyes wistfully sought the horizon.

The softer mood was upon her then. She sat, chin cupped in both hands, gazing out over the undulating acres of close-cropped greenward. "You like it?" he queried. She nodded. "Huh!" he boasted. "You ought to see the hills up in Bethel. They don't look like they'd just been to the barber's. And you can always smell flowers somewhere." He smiled reminiscence. "And the woods! You'd Ebs them. The trees are real trees, big fellows God have been there moose's hundred years. You can get 'best them."

"You could leave that! Why? To make money," he responded earnestly. "I wouldn't leave it for money." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Kazia," He Announced Boldly, "We're Going Walking in the Park."

provingly the dishes she set before him. "You're a fine cook, Kazia. Now don't," he protested humorously, "say 'yes.'"

Unsmilingly she ignored both the compliment and the jest. "Will that be all?" "Well, no." "What else?" "You might," she smiled, "sit down and be friendly."

"I've got to work." "It seems," he complained, "you're always working."

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Bagshaw.—Paul, twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hartwick was drowned at Ottawa Island, at the Bristol street bridge, while swimming. His body was recovered. Flint.—Fire, supposed to have been started by tramps, destroyed three barns on the farm of Warren Hinkley, dairyman, about two miles east of Flushing. Three calves were cremated in the blaze. Loss about four thousand five hundred dollars. Holland.—William Krutloff of Crips, aged sixty-five years, was probably fatally injured in a runaway accident near Harlem. Krutloff was thrown from the wagon and dragged along the highway for nearly half a mile. Boyne City.—The Musical Instruments company's plant in this city was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $50,000. The company was organized last winter and is capitalized for $70,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. The plant will be rebuilt. There was $20,000 insurance. Muskegon.—Just as the last of five coaches crossed the trestle over Black creek, near here, a train for Grand Rapids on the Pere Marquette was derailed. A loose rail caused the accident. Several cars left the track, but no damage was done. Had the engine left the track a minute or two earlier, the coaches would have plunged 25 feet into Black creek. Allegan.—For several hours after Mamie Buyers, eleven, of Valley township, who was believed to have been kidnaped, had returned to her home, Sheriff Volney Ferris and his deputies were still searching for her. Her parents failed to notify Sheriff Ferris. The girl says she was lost in the woods and then went to stay with people who lived nearby. Mount Clemens.—Capt Jacob Lorenzo of Philadelphia, an animal trainer, died here as the result of a vicious attack made on him by two young lions. He saved himself from instant death by forcing an iron bar down the throat of one of the animals. The lions had not been fed for several hours, it is said, when they pounced on Lorenzo. Kalamazoo.—Victor L. Palmer, who started his career in Kalamazoo as a bookkeeper, and because of his efficiency in this work was promoted time and again by officials of the Michigan Piggy Bank company until he became its head, is now a bookkeeper in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Palmer will remain at this job two years, when it is said he will return to Kalamazoo after serving his sentence. Lansing.—Quartermaster Walter Rogers of the Michigan National Guard returned from Grayling, where he has been preparing the camp site for the summer encampment of the state militia. The camp will open August 3 when the citizen soldiers will assemble at the magnificent camp site presented to the state by Rasmus Hansen. Last year the militiamen were in the copper country and no camp was held. Major Rogers has made contracts with the railroads for transporting the men and horses and contracts have been signed for the ration. Pontiac.—Officers are trying to ascertain the whereabouts of Mrs. Carrie Reddie Humberger, whom Earl Humberger, suspected bigamist, is said to have married December 29, 1905, as his first wife. The woman was then living at 26 McDonald street, Detroit, but has since moved and cannot be found. It will be necessary to learn from her whether she has ever been divorced before it can be learned whether Humberger's subsequent marriage gave himself up to the officers two weeks ago, alleging he had married three women without having been divorced. He was brought here and is held on a minor charge while the officers are investigating. He married Miss Amy Eaton Humberger last month. Mackinac.—Governor Ferris will preside at the opening season soon at many men of distinction from the border states, Canada and Newfoundland will be present at the conference of the American peace centenary committee to be held here July 21 and 22. Among those who will represent Michigan are: Edwin O. Wood, Flint; Thomas J. O'Brien, Grand Rapids; Supreme Court Justice Joseph B. Moore, Lansing; President H. B. Hutchins of the University of Michigan; Bishop Charles D. Williams, Charles B. Warren, Judge William L. Carpenter, Harry E. Hunt, F. H. McPherson and Harry Blackwell of Detroit; Martin J. Cavanaugh of Ann Arbor, Commander Washington Gardner of the Grand Army of the Republic, Albion, and Rev. William E. Graham, Potosi, Mo. St. Clair.—Bruce Mead, seventeen years old, and his brother Neal Mead, fourteen, were drowned in Pine river near here and Roy Cleland, seventeen, who attempted to rescue them, barely escaped with his life. The boys had gone to a swimming hole and the head boys ventured out beyond their depth. Cleland, who was on shore, saw a small dock and attempted to reach them with it, but was dragged and barely escaped death. The remains of the Mead boys were recovered and buried after the tragedy. Grand Haven.—It is believed that deaths

HOW HE TURNED THE TRICK. After This, Mr. Mordcael Hammerfest Must Be Credited With Knowing a Thing or Two.

Mrs. Mordcael Hammerfest turned pale as her husband entered the dining room for breakfast. "Mordy!" she gasped. "Do you don't you feel well?" "Perfectly," he replied in seeming surprise. "But—but you are in your year underunda!"

"Tell me something I don't know. Pass the butter, please," said Mr. Hammerfest. She passed the butter, remarking nervously, "But, Mordy, dear, as you came in I saw you didn't have any shoes on." "Well, what of it. Your hair is in curl papers, isn't it?" "Why, y-yes."

"And he went on eating his breakfast in silence except when he snickered to pass the butter. Then he went upstairs and finished dressing, and the next morning and on succeeding mornings she reported for breakfast in regular clothes." Suspicious.

"Too bad Jinx and his wife don't get along well together." "Why, I always understood that they were an ideal couple." "So did I, but they must have had a dreadful scrap before he started for work this morning."

"Did he have a black eye?" "No, but he stopped in when we were on our way home and bought her a five-pound box of candy."

Ingenious Smuggling Device. A museum of criminology has been founded in Paris by M. Charles Perard, formerly chief of the police Anarchist brigade. Among its curious contents are a hollow wax baby which was used to smuggle brandy into Paris. A woman carried a baby into the city every day, but as it never grew any bigger the authorities examined it and discovered the fraud.

Going Him One Better. An English bishop, offering an orange to a little child, remarked, sweetly: "Now, my little man, I shall give you this orange if you tell me where God is." "My lord," answered the child, son of a clergyman, "I'll give you two oranges if you'll tell me where he is not."

A Woman's Opinion. Mistress—Have you any references? "Mald—I have, but they're like my photographs—none of them do me justice." Defined. "Pa, what is a theorist?" "A theorist, son, is a person who puts up the talk and expects somebody else to put up the money."—Baltimore Sun.

Keep Cool and Comfortable Post Toasties advertisement. Includes text: 'Keep Cool and Comfortable', 'Elephant Remembered Him', 'Must Have Been', 'Probable Duration of Sun', and 'The Memory'.

Elephant Remembered Him. When Henry Shag revisited a circus to which he had belonged many years before, no one of the people connected with it recognized him, but the elephant started trumpeting as soon as he appeared, and showed every sign of glad recognition. Must Have Been. Says Mr. Filson young in the Fall Mail Gazette: "I began yesterday by swimming in a sunlit sea, continued it by motoring through a hundred miles of lilac and gorse, and ended it listening to the most perfect concert program at Queen's hall that I have ever heard."
