THE OPEN BOOK

Growth along all lines which make for real progress has always followed where the BIBLE has been an OPEN BOOK, read and studied by the people. One of the most encouraging signs of the day is the marvelous increase in the number of those who are studying God's revelation of Himself in the Holy Scriptures. Men in large numbers all over our land, and in Colleges and Universities, are organizing for definite study of the Bible. It is, therefore, especially significant that the Pennsylvania and other legislatures have enacted laws requiring the reading of a portion of the Bible each day in the public schools. That High Schools in one of the Dakotas gives a credit of one unit toward graduation upon the successful completion of a course of Bible study. The church has preserved the Bible in its integrity, and seeks to proclaim its message of God's love for needy men.

So today we point you, in His name, to the Open Bible, and we invite you to the Bible classes organized for the study of the Word, and to the services of the Church, that you may hear the message and worship Him who is revealed in that Word.

Home-coming at Wayne Plymouth Loses A Game

A big home-coming celebration will be held at Wayne, August 20-21 under the auspices of Nankin Lodge No. 396, I. O. O. F. The Wayne Oddfellows are making preparations to make this two days event the greatest celebration that has ever taken place in our neighboring village. There will be a historical street parade each day at 9 a. m. Athletic sports of all kinds, base ball games, horse races, good speaking and singing and band concerts. A big bowery dance each day and evening. One of the features will be a magnificent display of fireworks in the evening.

Owing to the Devon team cancelling their game at the last moment, the Wixom club furnished the home fans a good game at Athletic Park last Saturday afternoon. They were re-informed by the presence of Hank Perry, the extirger, who played at short. Plymouth got away to a bad start and had to fight an uphill game all the way as a result. The locals nearly overtook the visitors in the ninth inning as they had they had three men on bases and a hit or two then would have tied up the game. The final score was 10 to 7, in favor of Wixom. The Daisy team and Plymouth will clash Saturday, July 25, at 3:00 o'clock. Admission 15c.

A "Smooth" Salesman

Last Friday about noon a well dressed young man dropped into George Richwine's harness shop and introduced himself as representing a made-to-order clothing house in Detroit. He carried a fine line of samples of cloth and was willing to dispose of an extraordinary good suit for only $10.00, with a deposit down of $3.00. Mr. Richwine told the stranger that he did not see how he could afford to sell such a fine piece of goods at so low a price, and he replied that it was for the purpose of advertising their goods that his firm was making this offer. Mr. Richwine was suspicious that there was something wrong about the deal and told the salesman that he would not think of making a deposit of the $3.00 without some reference, whereupon the man told him to call his firm on the 'phone and his statements could be verified, and gave Mr. Richwine the money to pay the 'phone message.

When Mr. Richwine got into communication with the firm whom the stranger referred him to, he was told that the man who claimed to represent them was an impostor and to have him arrested. When told this by Mr. Richwine he said there must be some mistake, and as it was dinner time he left his samples in the harness shop, saying he would soon return and convince Mr. Richwine that he was not an impostor, but a mistake had been made. Mr. Richwine notified Deputy Marshal Hawthorne of the circumstances, but after a diligent search the officer could find no trace of the man, and he failed to come back and get his sample case which is now in the possession of Mr. Richwine.

Library Money

Penal Fines or Library Money is to be Apportioned

On July 15 of this year the Superintendent of Public Instruction sent to the county clerks of the state a statement showing the districts that are entitled to share in the distribution of the penal fines or library money in their respective counties. The apportionment of this money should be made by the county treasurer before the first day of August to the several townships in his county. The township treasurers are required by law to make a report to each director in their township of the library money due his district on or before August 15.

If the township treasurer has not received his statement from the county treasurer within a reasonable time after August 1 he should apply for same, and directors of school districts should see that their township treasurer has made a report to them on or before August 15 of the primary and library funds due their respective districts.

Robert Gardner and family and Mr. Mrs. P. B. Whitbeck motored to Detroit Wednesday to visit the latter's daughter, Mrs. C. H. Washburn.

Mrs. Frank Oliver left Wednesday for Jackson, where she will join a party of friends and leave the first of the week for Lodi, California.

After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three-fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want." For sale by all dealers.—Advt.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of "THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," ETC.

SYNOPSIS

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweet-heart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quincy Iron works for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andrzejewski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her.

"Yes, you would, Kazia! But I guess it's more than just the money. You see, in Bethel there's no chance, nothing to do: except grow old and nose into your neighbor's business and—want the things you can't have." "Yes," she said slowly, "I know." "You know? Do you want things, too?" "Want things?" She drew a long wondering breath, as she measured desire. She did not wait for his question. "To be different."

They Sat a Little Above the Carriage Road.

well-dressed, self-conscious respectability—as "different" from Kazia as anything he could conceive. "Like that?" "Yes, like that. Sometimes." She looked wistfully after the departing respectabilities. "But mostly, just to belong to somebody." "But Roman and the Matka and Piotr—" "They're ashamed of me and afraid other people'll find out about me. When I went to school the other boys and girls said things—and did things I didn't care. Her head went up and her voice told how passionately she had cared. "But Piotr told them at home and they wouldn't let me go any more. They'd be glad if I were gone. And some day—I'll go."

CHAPTER VIII.

July came, such a month as the city could not remember, humid and sickeningly hot. Children played languidly, always in the shade, and flocked around ice wagons, quarreling over the division of the fast melting, cool fragments. In the mills the men toiled on, "speeding up" as always to feed a world hungry for steel. They drank vast quantities of water; they salted it that they might drink the more, believing that in much sweating alone lay safety. There were giants in those days. But sometimes they fell. A sudden drying up of sweat, a violent lurch, a sharp binding pressure upon the brain—in a few minutes or fewer hours they were dead; their names did not always appear in the daily lists. Some that did not die found their strength forever broken.

The fierce heat blistered Mark's naked sweating skin. The water he drank carried out through his pores the food that should have nourished him. The heavy labor put upon him a weariness sleep could not dispel. The incessant roar, tearing at quivering nerves, impeding thought, became in his overwrought state exquisite torture. Hate, for the mills, for those above who drove so pitilessly, even for the men beside him, filled him; and fear. Once, when Henley, passing, gave his careless nod, he was answered only with a venomous glare that summoned the master's sardonic grin. Mark could have killed him then. He envied Roman, often almost bitterly. The big Pole felt and showed the effects of the intense heat, but he was the same unfurled philosopher, calm workman as ever, always with a cheerful word; so rear of collapse disturbed him. Through watching him Mark was beset by a new temptation. When their turns were ended Roman and the men invariably flocked to the nearest saloon and there drank repeatedly—whisky and brandy mostly—until vigor returned to their worn-out bodies. It was a false vigor, Mark knew, and short-lived. But there were times when the thought of the hour of surcease from fatigue, of spirited outlook, lured him almost irresistibly. And one evening he followed Roman and his companions to the bar. "Whisky," he ordered. Roman put out a restraining hand. "You better not drink," he counseled gravely. "Or only beer."

Mark laughed recklessly and repeated his order. Twice he drank. The weight dragging at his limbs lifted, the misery ranking in his heart dissolved. He was cheerful, talkative, soon maudlin. Before he reached home the whisky had possessed his unaccustomed brain; he was staggering, drunk. Roman understood him and put him to bed without supper. But he had had his period of forgetfulness. The next day he said—and the craving gnawed more sharply. That evening Roman, understanding, avoided the saloon and led Mark by a straight course homeward. Thereafter it was his custom, until Mark saw the care and forbade.

"You needn't be afraid. It costs too much. Everything," he added with a bitterness for which Roman had not the key, "costs too much." "Zo? But you are tired. Unto you are not strong. Vy do you not let the work?" "I think it is." "That's a funny thing to say," she laughed. "Your voice sounds funny, too." He had just been condemning Whiting for the indecent length of his stay. Now he said: "Let's go out on the porch a while."

They went out into the moonlight. He sat upon the railing and stared grimly in the direction of Whiting's departure. It was past midnight; the street slept. From the valley below them came the rumble of the mills that were teaching him fear and self-control. He was silent for a few minutes, while he tried to master the ugly thing within him. "What is it?" she asked wonderingly. "Kazia," he blurted out, "you shouldn't let him do that." "Oh! You saw?" "I didn't mean to." "Why do you say I shouldn't?" "He—he's not fit to touch you." "He's very jolly and nice to me," she said quietly. "And—and he wants to take me away." "But you're not going, are you?" he cried. She sighed, "I don't know—yet." "Kazia!" He did not know how his voice was shaking. "Promise me you won't go away with him." "Why not?" She turned to him. "Why not?" "Because," he began unsteadily, "because I want the best for you. Because—because this!" With a sudden rough reckless movement he caught her close to him. She suffered him as she had Jim Whiting. "Don't you know I want only the best for you?" "I think I do." She put a hand to his cheek and turned his face out of the shadow, looking long and searchingly into his eyes.

CHAPTER VIII.

Gradually his senses cleared. He began to see the ugly treachery of what he had done. His strong clasp slackened. She seemed to feel, with the sixth sense that was hers, the change in him. "What is it?" She looked up in quick alarm. "Nothing." To avoid her eyes he caught her close again, burying his face in her hair, and yielded to the intoxication of her. "Oh! Kazia, Kazia!"

He saw the figure crouching on the floor at the bedside. The late darkness fell, dispelled a little by the faint glow from a nearby street lamp; it found him lying inert but awake. His mind was beginning to behave queerly, seeing strange shadowy objects that moved stealthily about. He caught himself watching to them. He wondered if he were growing delirious, but he could not summon energy to call out or arise. It must have been 10 o'clock when he thought he heard a light tap on the door. He made an effort to speak. "Come." The door opened. Some one tiptoed softly to the bedside and leaned over him. "Are you sick?" came the broken anxious whisper. "You looked so tired—and you came up without—speaking to me. They said, let you sleep. But I've been—so afraid."

He caught her hand and clung to it. "Would you mind staying a while?" He whispered back. "My head does funny tricks in the dark." She put her free hand to his hot forehead. Then she gave a low pitiful cry. "You are sick!"—Wait!—she left the room quietly. Soon she returned with towels and a basin of water, in which ice tinkled. She lighted the gas jet and turned it very low.

"Close your eyes now," she said softly, "and try to sleep. I didn't tell any one, because I wanted to help you myself." He lay passive, while she placed cold wet towels over his eyes, bathed his hands and wrists in the icy water and stroked his throbbing temples. He wondered dully that hands which worked so hard could be so gentle. For many minutes they did not speak. The stealthy shapes were laid. The sharp pounding in his brain began to subside. Drowsiness was stealing over him. His hands groped until they found hers. "Kazia, Kazia!" he breathed. "Hush!" she said. "It's such a pretty name," he murmured sleepily. "I won't tell him. He'll find out soon enough."

CHAPTER IX.

Liquid iron. For fifty-seven years Roman had toiled as few men can toil—on the tiny farm that had been his father's, to satisfy the greedy tax gatherer; in Essen, learning another craft under the master Krupp; in the new land whose promise had lured him. Not once had his superb strength and endurance failed him; therefore he had never known fear, had not believed that the fate that overtook others must some day be his. He had been very prodigal of that strength. But one day—such a one as in that season the steel-workers called "cool"—he staggered and fell. It was three days before he could go back to his job. During that time Mark Truitt was in charge of the furnace. He who returned was not the careful, precise, unfurled workman. He knew fear. He tired easily and was uncertain of temper. The heat fretted him and he worried over his work. He lost in efficiency; several times he tapped the furnace either too soon or too late and was sharply reprimanded. To keep up and to forget the new weakness he drank more whisky than ever. Within two weeks he collapsed again.

He Saw the Figure Crouching on the Floor at the Bedside.

It looks that way," Mark assented. "It's come pretty sudden with him. It does that sometimes." "Yes," Mark stared sadly through the furnace mouth at the boiling flame-swept slag. The drama had become a tragedy. There was an element in steel of which chemists took no account—the lives and souls of men. "He can't expect to keep his job," he heard the foreman continue, "away half the time like this. And last week he spoiled two heats. I'm afraid we'll have to let him go." "Yes!" Mark's mouth twisted in an ugly sneer. "He's given you the best he had. And now he's breaking down. So—scrap him, of course!" "That's funny talk," grunted the foreman. "Especially since the superintendent and I've been talking it over and we think of you for the job. That makes it look different, don't it?" He laughed.

"No, it doesn't. Do you suppose I haven't been thinking of that—crouching on it—ever since he broke down? Why, that's the worst of you. You drive us to the limit and when we break you kick us off like an old man. And that isn't tough. You've made beasts of us, every man dogging the fellow ahead, glad when he drops and lets go his job. Damn you all, anyhow!" "Then I'm to tell the superintendent you don't want the job?" Mark looked again into the boiling furnace, felt its consuming breath, listened to the mills' strident voice. Through every sense he caught their menace; his spirit covered before it. But he who had come so near to failing could know the bitterness of him through whose fall advancement would come.

"No!" he snarled in savage contempt for himself and his hollow high indignation. "You can tell him I'm a beast like all the rest." He was on the night turn then. In the morning he went reluctantly to Roman's house. At breakfast he was alone with Kazia. But there was no love-making that morning. Nor did he explain that he was to supersede her uncle at the furnace. "How's Roman?" he asked with an added inward twinge. "He's not much better," she sighed. "We're worried about him. He frets because he thinks he might lose his job."

He said nothing. "Do you think he will?" "Yes," he made shift to raise his eyes to hers. "I think he will." "Just because he's sick. Oh, surely not!" "Because he's used up. And when you're used up, you've got to get out to make room for better—for those that can still be useful." "Oh, that would break his heart. How I hate those mills!" she cried. "But don't tell him you think that." "No." His eyes fell. "I won't tell him. He'll find out soon enough." Roman did not go back to work until his shift was on day turn again. Some presentiment of the impending calamity may have come to him, for as he and Mark set out for the mills that morning the irritability that had marked him since his first collapse gave way to a deep dejection.

It was not until they were entering the mill shed that Mark said: "Roman, I think Gracey wants to see you." He tried to make it very gentle. "Zo?" Roman halted, looked intently at Mark. He drew a long whistling breath. "Zo!" He understood. But his presentiment had not told him how deep the hurt would be. He tried to look the man he had been. But his tired lack-luster eyes belied the stony martial shoulders and firm step. He went straight to the foreman. "Mine chop?" he asked steadily. "You'll take it away?" "I'm afraid we'll have to let you go, Roman." "Unt' vy?" There was no complaint. "You're laying off too much," the foreman answered bluntly. "And you're getting careless in your work. You've lost your grip." "I had been sick. Meppiy." Roman made an effort to speak the confidence he did not feel. "meppiy I'll get better." "I hope so. You've been a good man in your time. But I don't think so. You're getting too old for the work." Gracey was still young; he could speak carelessly of growing old.

"In my time! Old!" Roman repeated slowly. "I haf not believedt zo." He did not wince. But the shoulders he had been holding so bravely erect sagged. "Old! It is so." He started to move away, but the foreman called him back. "See here, Roman," he said with rough kindness. "You've always drawn good pay. And you've quite a bit laid by, I hear. Why don't you go back to your own country and take it easy the rest of your life?" Roman eyed him listlessly. "Here's my own country. But I do not want to take it easy. Always haf I workedt—the work of strong men." He left the foreman and walked slowly, heavily before the furnaces until he came to his old station. There he stopped, watching the crew at work; in particular watching the figure—so slight for that labor—of the young man who had endured where stronger men fell. How neatly he fitted into his new niche! "Unt he is not oldt. Oldt!" Roman shivered.

Mark Truitt ate—or pretended to eat—his supper in the saloon that night. He could not bring himself to face the ordeal of sitting at table with Roman's family. There was no sense of triumph in his promotion, honestly earned though it was as his world measured such things. He walked to Roman's house, with a firm tread that was the outward expression of his mood. He knew just what was coming. He dreaded it, the moment when he must again face the man by whose fall he profited, must again break the sweet ties this life formed only to sever. Yet he did not flinch. He might rail against the issues presented to him, but at least he had always the courage of his choice. There was none of the trappings of tragedy in the moment he had dreaded. The family was gathered as usual in the dining room. Roman had himself in hand once more. Mark stopped in the doorway. For the life of him he could not speak the commonplace salutation on his lips. He saw Kazia steal quietly from the room. But he knew that she stayed within hearing. It was Roman who bore the silence. "At the saloon?" "You haf eaten?" "Zo?" You should come. Ve asked." Piotr snarled, "I got a nerve in come back here."

"You want me to go. I suppose you blame me. I blame myself somehow—I don't know why. It—it isn't fair! It isn't my fault you've been fired. You ought to see that. And I'd be a fool not to take your job, now that you can't have it any more." "Huh!" sneered Piotr. "You're glad enough of the chance, too." "Piotr!" The boy subsided. Roman went on: "It is not your fault I am old, no. But—it is as better you go. You haf mine chop. It is not good for me to see unt hear of the work of strong men ven I am not strong." "I will go tonight." "I haf not zaldt tonight. Ven you haf another good place to go." "I will go tonight." "Well—good-by, then," said Piotr promptly.

Mark waited a moment longer. But there was really nothing more to be said. He went upstairs. His carpetbag packed—a brief task—he waited. And this was hard—

"Huh!" sneered Piotr, "You're Glad Enough of the Chance." "Huh!" Now there was at least the semblance of a struggle. It almost shook him because with that went—Kazia. Instinct, brushing aside the mist of false teachings, interpreted anew and aright the passion he had thought ignoble, warned him to take this whole love while yet there was time. "Almost thou persuadest me," But not altogether. His desire—to survive, to win his place among the masters—still held the whip, kept him facing doggedly his straight road ahead. And, as if jealous of any rival for supremacy over him, it claimed the pale lesser love. He could not see the unlettered Hunky girl sharing that conquest.

When she came, she stood for a moment at the door, a question and a great fear in her eyes. "I—I was waiting for you," he said. "I know. But I couldn't come any sooner." Her glance fell to the bag, rose again. She walked slowly toward him. He rose. Scarcely an arm's length away, she halted. Suddenly tears stood in her eyes. She put out both hands in a quick pleading gesture. "Don't go!" "They don't want me to stay, Kazia." "That's because you've taken his job. Don't take it!" He shook his head. "You don't understand. There's no reason why I shouldn't take it." "He's your friend." "You don't understand," he repeated wearily. "If I could give him back his job by not taking it, I'd not take it." He believed that then! He began again the old reasoning. "But I couldn't. Some one else would get it—that's all. Isn't it better for me to have it than a stranger?" Roman, he concluded bitterly, "ought to see it that way."

"I know there isn't any good reason. But—I couldn't go with you, if you took it." She couldn't go with him! His eyes fell miserably. "Oh, no!" With one swift step she bridged the space between them, throwing her arms around his neck. "Oh, no! I didn't mean that. I'd go with you, whatever you did. I'd have my secretions analyzed me as thoroughly as you did. I'd have my teeth pulled, I'd use Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me. I have a good health since." "You can't understand," he cried again. "I've tried—" "I know. I've seen it troubling you, though I didn't know what it was. But—can't you see? I'm the reason. You'll never find any one that can love you like I can. It's all I know—to love—to love you. I don't ask much. But I can give—everything." With a force that must have hurt her he freed himself from her clasp and sank shaking into the chair, covering his face with his hands. For a breath the scales quivered. Then: "Kazia," he whispered, "I haven't been square with you. There's—there's another girl—" "There is—And you—" After what seemed like a long silence he dared to glance up to see how she had taken it. By then she had crept to the threshold and was looking back at him. About her lips a dazed, foolish little smile was playing. And her eyes were the eyes of one who had just seen a great horror. When he looked up again, she was gone.

An hour later—how he could not have told—he found himself wandering in the streets, carrying his ancient carpetbag. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live. Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good, so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong. "I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefited by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."—Mrs. MARTHA SEAVEY, Box 1144, Unionville, Missouri.

Puzzled the Parson. At a marriage service performed some time ago in a little country church in Georgia, when the minister said in a solemn tone: "Will thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" Instead of the woman answering for herself, a gruff man's voice answered: "I will." The minister looked up very much perplexed, and paused. He repeated the sentence, and again the same gruff voice answered, "I will." Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said: "She's deaf, parson, an' I'm answerin' for her."

Women's Times of Danger

Women suffer a great deal from kidney diseases. Their indoor life, tight clothing and trying work all tend to weaken the kidneys. Woman's life also includes times of danger that are apt to leave the kidneys weak and start attacks of backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness and urinary ills. Prompt treatment, however will avert the danger of dropsy, gravel, or fatal Bright's disease. Take Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended, special kidney remedy. Doan's are used successfully throughout the civilized world—have brought new life and new strength to thousands of tired, ailing women.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

WORKING OUT THE PROBLEM OF FARM LABOR AT PORTS OF ENTRY.

SEC. CARTON WRITES LETTER

Experts From Federal Agricultural Department to Visit Michigan and Help Improve Potato Crop.

[By Guard M. Hayes.]

Lansing, Mich.—Secretary A. C. Carton of the public domain commission finds that the farmers of Michigan appreciate the efforts of the public domain commission in assisting them to secure desirable farm laborers and the new plan inaugurated by Secretary Carton and Chairman Frederick C. Martindale several months ago is working out in a most satisfactory manner.

Secretary Carton is sending to farmers in various parts of the state the following letter: "The public domain commission and immigration commission of Michigan is desirous of assisting the farmers, as far as possible, in procuring farm laborers to work upon the farms of this state. With this object in view we have a special representative of the Michigan immigration department located at the port of entry in the city of New York, for the purpose of directing desirable immigrants from the rural districts of Europe to the farms of Michigan."

"Our great industrial activities in the cities during the last two decades have made heavy drafts upon the rural districts and the drift of labor has been from the country towards the cities. This, in addition to the fact that a great many of our young men and women have left the rural districts and gone to the manufacturing centers, has left the rural districts without the labor necessary to produce the agricultural products the land is capable of producing. This shifting of our population, whereby the consumers have increased out of proportion to the producers, is the main reason for the high cost of living."

"With all the talk about the farmer's great prosperity, I am thoroughly convinced that the farmer, even with the present prices, is not making any more money, or as much as he should. I am also convinced that it costs the farmer fifty per cent more to produce an article today than it did fifteen years ago. Any movement to reduce the high, or check the higher, cost of living at the expense of the producer, will be a blow at the root of the whole industrial situation of this country. The net annual income of the farmer, which represents his purchasing power, must be preserved, in order that the industrial activities of the city may continue. The greater the prosperity of the rural districts, the greater the prosperity of the urban. The country needs the city and the city must have the country."

"The efforts of the Michigan immigration department will be directed along the line of assisting the rural districts in obtaining a larger production, by supplying farm labor to help do the producing. In this way it is hoped that the prosperity of the farmer will be increased and the prosperity of the country as a whole."

"There are about 190,000 farms in Michigan, half of which hire help. This would make 98,000 farms in the state upon help is needed. The best statistics available show that there is only about one-half enough farm labor obtainable in this country, and if this is true we can use 49,000 good, honest, industrious farm laborers helping the farmers of this state which will have a great effect upon the prosperity of the rural districts."

Farmers who are in need of help are requested to fill out a blank which accompanies Carton's letter showing the number of men he wishes to hire and giving the nature of their duties. The farmer is also asked to state which nationality is most acceptable, whether experienced or "green" hands are desired and whether married or single men are preferred. The prospective employer is also requested to tell whether children are objectionable and whether the services of a farm hand's wife are desired, giving the wages to be paid in all cases. The hours of labor and a declaration as to whether the position is of a permanent nature must also be stated.

Replies are forwarded to the Michigan immigration agent at New York and he gets into direct communication with a farmer in need of help whenever desirable applicants are available. Many farmers have benefited by this plan which costs them nothing and it is expected to develop into one of the big features of the work of the public domain and immigration bureaus.

The recently inaugurated state-wide campaign for the improvement of the Michigan potato crop will in August receive support from the federal department of agriculture, which has announced to M. A. C. authorities that three specialists will arrive here next month to join with Michigan workers in the grappling of the tuber problem. One of the specialists with the federal party will be Gabriel D. R. Appel, of Berlin, Europe's leading authority upon potato diseases. The other government experts will be W. A. Orton, pathologist in charge of cotton and truck diseases and sugar plant investigations and William Stuart, potato specialist for the department of agriculture at Washington. They will be joined by Prof. George W. Coons, Michigan's plant pathologist, and C. W. Ward, secretary of the Michigan Potato Growers' association.

COMMISSIONER A. C. CARTON

The Michigan public domain commission is doing a good work in assisting farmers to secure desirable immigrants for help.

All five men will tour the state. On August 15 they will make a general inspection of the potato growing districts of southwestern Michigan, on August 16 they will go north and on August 17 and 18 they will visit Houghton and other points in northern Michigan.

According to word received at M. A. C. from Washington, the purpose of the trip will be to promote the breeding of new productive and disease resistant varieties, the production of improved strains of standard varieties for seed purposes, the elimination of diseases that are carried by seed potatoes and the introduction of an official system of seed inspection and certification with adequate standards and safeguards.

The specialists will do their work in the fields. Visits will be made to the field stations of the department of agriculture, to the state experiment stations and to farmers and seed growers.

Officers of the various breweries contributing to the fund collected by the Personal Liberty League with a view to defeating local option in Ingham county, may be prosecuted under the terms of the corrupt practices act, according to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Fellows to Prosecuting Attorney Hayden of Ingham county. "It has heretofore been the holding of this department that a committee organized for the purpose of conducting a campaign upon the question of the adoption of local option must be deemed to be a political committee within the meaning of the statute, and if this construction be correct, it seems apparent that the law was flagrantly violated during the local option contest in Ingham county," said Fellows.

"It has come to the attention of the Industrial Accident Board" said Secretary Richard L. Drake, "that some adjusters, to induce the signing of settlement receipts, are making statements to injured employes that such adjusters have received a ruling from the Industrial Accident Board on the injured man's case and that the Board has ruled that the compensation to be paid is limited to a certain amount. These payments, the Board has been given to understand, have been offered on the mythical basis of a so-called ruling by the Board. Every employe of Michigan should understand," continued Secretary Drake, "that no ruling is made by the Industrial Accident Board until both parties have had full opportunity to be heard. This principle has been so well established by the Board that we are surprised to learn that any settlement is being attempted on any basis other than that provided by the act itself. Insurance men and adjusters generally are complying not only with the letter of the law, but also its spirit and in almost all cases the Board has found them fair in their adjustments. A word of warning, however, seems to be necessary at this time, and injured employes should carefully read any agreements or receipts which they are asked to sign, and if they have any doubt on the subject a letter to the Board will gain for them any necessary information. Our bulletin 'Information to Employes' will be sent on request."

RASH SPREAD RAPIDLY

Granton, Wis.—"My sister had a very bad, deep, wet, running sore on the side of her face and it ran up to her ear. It commenced with a small blotch of pimples which turned into a kind of rash and spread rapidly. It itched and looked red and sore for some time and slightly swelled. A thin fluid dripped and ran from the sore which looked like water. Then the swelling would go down and it would keep on spreading. It bothered her during sleep and she would be restless. It was a kind of eczema."

"She treated for some time and it did not help her. It kept spreading larger and deeper. Having always used Cuticura Soap we tried to try it so she got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them. It was two months when it was gone." (Signed) Miss Emma Retzlaff, Apr. 7, 1914.

One Hundred Years Ago.
The curious modes which women affect now began as far back as 1738, which is a period we should hardly wish to copy in most respects. A dance not at all unlike the tango was in vogue at that time, and had many exponents, who danced in loose bodices opening in a V shape from the shoulders almost to the waist. Skirts were slit and were often made of transparent gauze.

We may return to the gowns of that period, which were without waists, having simply a girdle to the bust, with skirts caught up rather short in front and slightly trained at the back. In 1800 women wore sandals and bare feet. Corset belts were only about two inches wide. Some gowns were caught up to the knee with large canoes. Soon fashion overreached itself, and then came crinolines, pointed footgear and unnaturally small waists. Are we coming to this?

GOOD CHANGE.
Coffee to Postum.

The large army of persons who have found relief from many chronic ailments by changing from coffee to Postum as a daily beverage, is growing each day.

It is only a simple question of trying it for oneself in order to know the joy of returning health as realized by an ill, young lady. She writes: "I had been a coffee drinker nearly all my life and it affected my stomach—caused insomnia and I was seldom without a headache. I had heard about Postum and how beneficial it was, so concluded to quit coffee and try it."

"I was delighted with the change. I can now sleep well and seldom ever have headache. My stomach has gotten strong and I can eat without suffering afterwards. I think my whole system greatly benefited by Postum."

"My brother also suffered from stomach trouble while he drank coffee, but now, since using Postum, he feels so much better he would not go back to coffee for anything."

Names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled—1lb and 25c packages. Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly—30c and 50c tins. The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

as represented by Zedekiah their King, Ezek. 21:25-27. Was this a contradiction of Gen. 49:10 where it was declared that "the sceptre" should not depart from Judah—until Shiloh come? Who is our blessed Shiloh? How glad we are that when Shiloh comes it is to bring peace and happiness to all the willing and obedient and not to curse and damn everything and everybody except the elect church, and then burn up our grand old planet. Is it not marvellous what the ap reach of the dawning light of the new dispensation has disclosed for some of us? What will it be when the "Son of righteousness in all his beauty" has steadily shown with direct rays on our fair planet with its teeming millions for 100 years, yes for 500 and then 1000 years. Who can doubt but what the "desert" then will rejoice and blossom as the rose, and the "waste and desert places be made glad," and sure enough "the desire of all nations shall have come." A complete treatise of the "crown" and sceptre question can be found on Pages 81-88 in vol. II. "Bible Keys." Wednesday evening meeting, July 29 at Mrs. Valentine's, Main street. All are welcome.

He sustained several broken ribs and several severe bruises about the head. The automobile was badly smashed up.

Plymouth's Oldest Residents

The following article was taken from the Detroit Journal of July 18th, in regard to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burrows, Sr., two of Plymouth's oldest and most highly esteemed residents. The article was accompanied by a half-tone likeness of Mr. and Mrs. Burrows.
 Mr. and Mrs. William Burrows, Sr., are Plymouth's oldest inhabitants. Mr. Burrows is 86 and his wife 87. Mr. Burrows is blind, but threads her own needles and has sewed enough tags for 30 yards of carpet, besides knitting rugs, and recently making an apron for her daughter, with excellent hemming. Mr. Burrows is a retired shoe merchant and is almost deaf. He is one of the best read men in the village and has one of the finest gardens in this vicinity, taking care of it himself. Since he retired from business he and his wife are living with their daughter, Mrs. Cyrus Pinckney.

 The big July clearance sale at the E. L. Riggs store is being well patronized this week. Many people are taking advantage of the big bargains that are being offered at this time. Some very special bargains are offered for Saturday. See ad in this issue. It will pay you to read it over carefully.
 George Gebhardt and family and Mabel Gottschalk motored to Park Lake to visit the latter's sister, Mrs. Fred Smith. They stopped while enroute to call on Mr. and Mrs. George Hull and Bessie Rouse. Miss Rouse accompanied them home for a few days' visit. They found some good roads and very steep hills and some roads that were impassable—only for Ford cars.

TODAY'S REFLECTIONS

The politicians are such friendly fellows these days.
 As Caesar said "sub jugnum."
 The garden sassa is filling a long felt want now.
 When all the street paving is finished wont Plymouth be some class?
 Paid your taxes yet?
 Brace yourself and get ready to do so.
 The open season for mosquitos is at hand.
 The old family bath tub is the best summer resort of all.
 Sweet corn is on the market.
 And tastes just as good as the price sounds.
 How's the ice lasting these days?
 That's an evanescent subject.
 "Eat less and live longer," says a doctor. Bang goes another professional secret.
 Like other eavesdroppers, dictagraphs never hear any good of themselves.
 Hail, ye candidate, make hay now!
 Some will be among the missing after August 25.
 So live your life that when you die, even the undertaker will be sorry.
 Gala day in Plymouth, August 20.
 Oh, well, it might be hotter.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Armstrong and daughter were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Gale and Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Gale the latter part of the week.
 Last Saturday Mr. and Mrs. S. Gale took Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Armstrong and daughter Irma of Alhambra, Cal., for an automobile ride to Whitmore Lake, Ann Arbor, Wayne and around by Plymouth, which was greatly enjoyed by all, as the day was an ideal one for the trip.

Requisites of a Companion.
 A companion to be interesting, ought to bring new elements and not be a repetition of our own too familiar personality. We have enough of ourselves in ourselves; we desire a companion who will relieve us from the bounds of our own thoughts, as a neighbor opens his garden to us and delivers us from our own hedges.—P. Softening Gold and Alloys.
 Pure gold can be softened by heating it for four days at the boiling point of water. At higher temperatures it softens much more rapidly, taking but a few seconds at 400 degrees F. It takes much longer to soften alloys, however, and since gold and silver coins are not pure metals it takes a considerable period for the softening. It requires 535 degrees F. for a period of sixteen days to soften gold coins.

REVISED SYSTEM OF STUDY URGED

SUPT. KEELER SETS FORTH ADVANTAGES OF "SIX-AND-SIX" PLAN.

KEEP STUDENTS IN SCHOOL

Work Along Elective Lines May Be Begun in Seventh Grade and Four Lines of Study Are Offered.

Lansing, Mich.—A revised system of study for pupils in Michigan schools, which, its backers assert, should be of great importance in keeping students in school after passing through the seventh and eighth grades, will be urged during the coming year by Fred L. Keeler, superintendent of public instruction. Supt. Keeler stated Tuesday that his department is now preparing an outline of the proposed system.

"The course will indicate work along four distinct lines—college preparatory, agriculture, domestic art and commercial," says Keeler. "The work will be outlined so that pupils may begin to choose the line they wish to pursue in the seventh grade instead of the ninth. This will make the division between the elementary school and the high school come with the seventh grade. It is believed that the large number who now leave school in the seventh and eighth grades will be held in school by giving them work especially which meets their needs. This organization also will enable schools to teach all grades above the sixth by the department plan—that is, by having a special teacher for each subject. Moreover, the pupils will advance by passing subjects instead of grades.

"Present conditions in Michigan schools are such that the proposed plan can be adopted easily. Several cities of the state have already tried it. In other states the plan is meeting with favor wherever tried. Because it divides the school course into two parts, covering six years, the proposed organization is commonly called the 'six-and-six' plan."

PLANT BURNS AT ST. JOSEPH

Forty Thousand Dollar Loss Sustained By Sash and Door Factory.

St. Joseph, Mich.—A $40,000 fire in the heart of the manufacturing district between this city and Benton Harbor, early Tuesday morning, destroyed the sash and door plant of the W. A. Preston Co. and threatened to wipe out a half mile of lumber yards along the canal. The fire originated in the boiler room of the Preston plant and one wing of the structure was in flames before discovery was made. The Benton Harbor fire department was hampered early in the fight by poor water pressure.

The Preston mills are among the oldest in southwestern Michigan. John Arbuckle, superintendent, was injured when a stack fell across the power leads. A wire caught him under the chin. A frame structure, the building went fast and people from all parts of the city rushed to the scene, attracted by high flames.

Aged Wanderer Is Killed.

Flint, Mich.—Clifford Beebe, 70, died Tuesday morning in Hurley hospital from injuries received Monday night, when he was struck by a Saginaw and Flint car a short distance north of the city. He and his wife are tramping through the country working at odd jobs. They have no home. They had been picking berries north of the city and Beebe was sitting on a platform while they waited for a car to go to Clio. As the car drew up to the platform it caught Beebe's legs, breaking one of them in two places and badly cutting it. He died from the shock.

Farmer Killed Under Wagon.

Ithaca, Mich.—Frank Walters, 45, was run over and killed by his own wagon after racing with death for a block. He was walking behind his team of horses and his heavy load of lumber when the animals bolted, giving him no time to escape. A hundred people saw him lose his frantic dash, when one of the horses started tripping him and seat him under the wheels.

MICHIGAN NEWS ITEMS

Lightning struck Mike Superczynski's house near Bessemer Wednesday night, following an electric wire. Another bolt killed two cows in the field. The house was only slightly damaged.

The foundation for the new St. Clair county poor house has been laid and work of construction will be pushed rapidly, the contractors planning to have the building ready by fall.

Acting on the advice of Attorney-General Fellows, Secretary of State McMillan will release petitions for the placing of names of candidates for the state central committee on the ballots for the August primary. The new legislation passed a law providing for the initiation of the committee at the primary, but the attorney-general held that the law was defective.

STATE NEEDS WOLF KILLER ON ISLAND

Lansing, Mich.—Michigan wants a man to shoot wolves. He must be a regular "dick-dead-eye" with a gun and must be willing to be marooned on Isle Royale all winter. This island, according to the game warden's department, is becoming overrun with wolves. Game is disappearing under the attack of the ferocious animals and the department has decided that it will employ a hunter. The job will pay well, for the man selected will receive pay as a deputy warden and in addition to that will get the state bounty on wolf pelts.

HUERTA'S RULE HAS BEEN ONE OF BLOODSHED

Killing of Madero Marked Beginning of Despotism.

MADE VAIN BOAST TO TAFT

Dictator Declared He Would Restore Peace at Once, but Refusal of United States to Recognize Him Assured His Downfall.

Victoriano Huerta took oath as provisional president of Mexico February 19, 1913, the day after President Francisco I. Madero, Jr., had been arrested at the national palace.

Three days later Madero and Jose Maria Pino Suarez, vice-president, were shot to death while on a midnight ride under guard from the palace to the penitentiary. The precise manner of their death has never been explained.

One of Huerta's first acts as provisional president was to telegraph William H. Taft, then president of the United States, the following message: "I have the honor to inform you that I have overthrown the government. The forces are with me, and from now on peace and prosperity will reign."

PROVOKES CIVIL WAR. The Mexican republic, however, was at once plunged into civil war again, notwithstanding the issuance by Huerta of a proclamation of general amnesty. The Sonora state congress officially repudiated the provisional government before Huerta settled himself comfortably in the presidential chair.

Zapata, revolutionary leader to the south of the capital, after negotiating a few days with the new regime, went back to his guerrilla campaign.

Salazar, one of the highest generals in the army, denounced Huerta.

Carranza, constitutionalist leader in Chihuahua, assailed Huerta in a bitter statement made public at San Antonio.

Francisco Villa announced himself an adherent of Madero and joined the northern army.

Pasqual Orozco of the clan of the northern revolutionists was the lone notable figure among the disaffected who declared for the new government.

TAFT LEAVES PROBLEM. President Taft, nearing the end of his term, left to his successor the problem of adjusting diplomatic relations with Mexico. To Woodrow Wilson Huerta sent felicitations on the day of the American president's inauguration.

Hampered at the outset of his administration by the refusal of the United States to recognize him, Huerta soon faced growing difficulties in raising funds to run his government. His uneasy hold on affairs was weakened by minor constitutionalist victories in the north and by recurring rumors of a break with Felix Diaz, nephew of Porfirio Diaz and Huerta's ally in the overthrow of Madero.

HUERTA CALLS ELECTION. May 1 Huerta announced that he would urge congress to call elections in October to choose his successor. The congress selected October 26 as the date of the election, and a decree to that effect was issued by Huerta June 3.

Felix Diaz, who had announced himself as a candidate for the presidency, was sent to Japan July 17.

Henry Lane Wilson, American ambassador, was recalled to Washington, and Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires, was left in charge of American interests in Mexico.

REJECTS PEACE EFFORT. Early in August it became known that President Wilson intended to send John Lind, former governor of Minnesota, to Mexico as his personal representative in an endeavor to arrange a basis for the republic's peace. Huerta announced that he would not tolerate foreign interference.

Nevertheless Mr. Lind delivered his note from President Wilson.

Huerta rejected all proposals made by the American government, chief of which were the suggestions that he resign and not be a candidate election day.

Relations between Mexico and the United States became acute. President Wilson proclaimed his policy in an address before congress to which was attached the correspondence between Mr. Lind and the Huerta administration.

HUERTA ARRESTS DEPUTIES. Huerta was attacked in the Mexican senate October 5 by Senator Dominguez, who had the hardihood to speak what was in the minds of himself and some of his colleagues. Dominguez disappeared.

The chamber of deputies adopted a resolution calling for an investigation. To this Huerta's reply was dramatic and swift. He marched a column of troops to the deputies' chamber, seized 110 of them and threw them into prison.

Through Mr. O'Shaughnessy the United States made representations against violence to the imprisoned deputies.

In the election campaign certain influence close to the dictator worked for his return to the presidency, with General Blanco as his running mate,

WIFE OF FORMER FRENCH MINISTER ON TRIAL

PARIS—Troops are required to hold back the crowds from the palace of justice where the wife of Joseph Cailaux, former French minister of finance, is on trial for the killing of M. Calmette, late editor of Le Figaro, on March 16. Not since the famous trial of Mme. Steinheil in November, 1909, has public attention been aroused to such a high point as by the present trial. The intrigue of love and politics, which lay beyond the assassination and the wealth and social position of the prisoner tend to elevate it to a position to attract attention far beyond the borders of France.

BOOSTS HEALTH MOVEMENT

Dr. John I. Burkhardt, Secretary of State Board Indorsees Idea of County Organization.

Lansing—Indorsement of the movement for the organization of county health organizations was given Monday by Dr. John I. Burkhardt, secretary of the state board of health, who declared that through such organizations the general health of the citizens of the district may be bettered to a great extent.

"Starting with Jackson county, quickly followed by Hillsdale county, the latter making the organization a permanent one, other counties have signified their intentions of organizing such associations, the latest to make arrangements for a good health week being Barry county, and we expect several others to follow," said Secretary Burkhardt.

"The fact that several counties are perfecting arrangements for a good health organization is encouraging evidence of the rapidly growing spirit of sanitation among people. We earnestly plead for an organization in every county. Where conditions prove that a county organization cannot be developed, why not organize city, village and township good health movements?"
