We have all laughed at the reputed story of Pat Murphy, at the battle of 'Trafalgar, whose version of the battle was as follows: Lord Nelson came on deck and said, "Is Pat Murphy on board?" And I said, "Here'I am, me Lord." Then said his Lordship, "Let the battle proceed," And yet, while this was written for a joke, there is more in it than we are apt to think! For, if it had not been for the Pat Murphies, or John Joneses or Tom Smiths and the others on hand, there would have been no victories for the Nelsons. Wellingtons. Napoleons or Grants who now live in history as great commanders. It is the individual soldier that goes to make up the army and one of the first things he must learn is the sense of his own personal responsibility.

Next Sunday is our Rally Day. We wish to see every member of the congregation, who can possibly be present, in attendance upon at least one of the services of the day. The pastor will look for YOU! Will you be there?

The pastor and church are now making preparations to entertain the Wayne Association of Baptist churches. One hundred and fifty delegates are expected and some fine addresses will be delivered. The program for the occasion will appear in this paper later.

A Sad Death.

Ward Hess, the nineteen year old son of Mrs. Minta Hess, passed away at F. J. Pierce's restaurant last Sunday morning. The deceased had been in failing health for the past month, but was confined to his bed for only a few days previous to his death. He is survived by his mother, who resides here and three sisters, Mrs. Spencer and Josephine and Doris Hess of Grand Rapids. The remains were taken to Clarksville last Tuesday, where the funeral and interment took place. Mrs. Hess and

The gentle, sometimes plaintive voice of the preacher had no power to distract from thought. His wistful message could not reach the man for whom it had been prepared in the hope that it would come to him with healing in its winge.

"Love would do that.

"His own chance words kept running through Mark's mind, bidding him follow them along a new path. He followed, wondering that he had never trod that way before.

Was that, then, the evidence of love? Was there another manifestation of the miracle than that he had asked and awaited? For he had sought love, thinking to find it expressed as he had known it before, in the old romantic visioning, the rhapsodic sentimentalities, the lust to possess. Mark Truitt was not the first to make that mistake. The coast of life is littered with the wrecks of those who have taken the filckering glow of youthe blind impulse to wed or the red fisme of manhod's passion for the true light. "He came back to us a few weeks ago, the forlornest waif I've ever seen. I don't know how he had been living—we'd no trace of him since Uncle Roman died. He was starving and his mind was clearly gone. I suppose he wouldn't have come to me otherwise. I ought to have put him away somewhere, but he was harm-less and it seemed so crue. He just sat around poring over books as he used to when he was a foy. He seemed to have forgotten all that's happened since then. And then three days ago he swoke. The Miracle.
"I shall know it," he had thought.

"I shall know it," he had thought,
"when it comes."

And as he drove there came to him
the knowledge of his miracle. It came, not with the lazy juxuriousness of youth drifting, ignorant and caring not for wiedom, toward a mate, nor yet with the ecstatic feverish excitement of the passionate man, but with a deep, solemn, all-pervading joy. Peace followed it—the peace of certitude, for,
he knew that in the woman who had sinned he had found the one who fitted into him as a member into its body, completed him, with him formed the perfect unity—of content, for he knew that from its infinite preciousness neither trial nor failure, disap-

"She must know," he thought. "She must be made to know—that nothing else counts—that we are to begin over again together."

He remembered his mission.

There was a rumble of thunder. He glanced overhead and saw the blackened sky, heard the rushing wind. A few scattered dropa fell. He urged the horse forward.

He was miles away from the village

"How badly I hurt you."

"I told you I haven't blamed you."

"But that isn't true—it can't be true. It wouldn't be human not to resent, don't you?"

"Why do you preas me with what is ended? I don't want to think of it—or to be unjust. I—" She tured sharply to face him. "Yes, if you must know it, I do resent."

"You have every right to resent."

"You have every right to resent," be answered sadly.

She started swiftly along the bank toward the village. He followed, trying to keep up with her, and with a real effort managed it. A quarter of a relation to the skin by the pelting rain, entered the shelps."

"Y-yes," quavered Plotr.

"What's the matter—sick?"

"I'm a-sfraid," came the whimpering reply, "it's the storm."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotio and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McGrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endarament of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

ing Germans turned at bay to give battle to their allied pursuers.

The real fighting started on the norning of the fourteenth, when the battle became general along the range of heights to the north of Alsne.

The fighting was sustained with deadly earnestness during all of the next day, the Germans contesting every foot of the way in a supreme "endeavor to hold their positions until re-enforcements could arrive.

on the night of the fifteenth they appeared to have been strengthened, and commenced their formidable movement against the French and British all along their front. A furious attack on the silles' extreme left, with the big guns of the rival artilerists lighting the line of the opposing fronts in fierce silhouette, was repulsed with great courage by the alles. Again an't again the Germans returned to the attack with the tenacity that was the marvel of French troops, but each time they were repulsed. No fewer than ten times did they drive their dense masses of pussed. Its their dense masses of troops at the allied infantry, but never were they able to break through.

The United States department of agriculture recently issued a report showing that climate is the principal factor in determining the varying characteristics of wheat grown in different regions. The bureau of chemistry had previously called attention to the fact that environment had more influence upon the crop than had the composition of the seed. And now these new tests show that in environment climate plays a more important war the comportant of the seed that the comportant contracts the contract of the seed that in environment climate plays a more important or the contract of the of which this earth is composed, and it is on the products of sunlight, there fore, that we have to depend for the source of all human energy. Con versely, it is logical, then, to look for any absence of human energy or har mony in some lack of this univertal driving power.

Passing sunlight through a prism

Passing sunlight through a prism splits it into bands of color which we know as the spectrum. The spectrum is made up of six prominent hues, supplemented by a multitude of subordinate ones, the total number which the eye can recognize as distinct being not less than 1,000, each one of which corresponds to a definite wave length of light and each probably producing some definite physical reactions on similar substances.

At the red end of the spectrum we strailar substances.

At the red end of the spectrum we find the long waves and at the violet end we find the short waves, and we have demonstrated that it is the short rays at the violet end that act on the delicate silver saits, while vegetation responds most to the yellow and red sections. The red end is known as the heat, or thermic, rays, and the violet end as the chemical, or actinic, rays.

Uncle Sam Makes Fine Reputation as Architect

ASHINGTON.—When the average citizen beholds the beautiful lines of the modera federal buildings in most of the principal cities of the United sizes, he probably does not realise that in addition to his many other vocations and professions. Uncle Sam is also an architect, represented at present by Oscar Wenderoth, supervising architect of the treasury. Yet, Uncle Sam is making a wonderful reputation for himself in this capacity. Not only is he doing good work, but he is being widely copied, and those who are acquainted with the facts realize that he is doing more to set the fashion and elevate the standard of architecture in this country than any other agency.

For the first 75 years of our mational existence the public buildings were put up in a sort of haphasard way. Commissione appointed by the accretary of the treasury selected the architect of a building and attended to all the details of its construction. The result was that no fixed idea was carried out, and our earlier public buildings had no uniformity of design at all. Today it is different. Uncle Sam has become an architect on his own account, and he is designing his own buildings. The result is that one may now recognize the new federal buildings of the country on sight by their uniformity of style. There is just enough diversity in detail to prevent too much similarity.

uniformity of style. There is just enough diversity in detail to prevent too much similarity.

In times past the government roamed the whole world over to find new ideas in architecture, and in the older federal buildings one may see everything from the Oothic down to the Romanesque. But after trying them all, the classic style based on the best French and English influence as illustrated by the Senate office building in this city, has been decided upon as embodying the best that there is in beauty and utility in architecture.

An example of some of the failures of bygone days is the old Washington post office on Pennsylvania svenue and the Muntchal building which Supervising Architect Wenderoth styles "an architectural nightmare." A Boston architect imported the Romanesque style along in the eighties, and made a great hit with it in Boston and Clincinnati. Then came along the supervising architect at that time with a determination to copy the style in the Washington post office.

VICE-PRESIDENT MARSHALL has a habit of telling a funny story at the eleventh hour. In fact, he usually waits until the eleventh hour and about fifty-five minutes. The consequence is that when he enters the senate chamber to convene that body of solemit tollers he is apt to have a half suppressed smile on his face, and the Rev. Forest J. Prettyman, the senate chapitals, has even more difficulty in maintaining the serious counteance of a man about to lead in prayer.

Here is the way the thing works out: Along about Ri-30 Marshall shifts from his office; in the senate office building to his room in the capital comes to be in readiness to accompany the vice-president into the chapital comes to be in readiness to accompany the vice-president into the chapital makes Marshall think of a funny story. At about five minutes prior to the hour of opening the senate he starts to tell this story with calm deliberation.

The golden moments speed on their way, and by the time Marshall has the basic part of his story and the senate of the chapital comes to the door, watch in hand, to make certain that the vice-president is going to reach his seat in due season.

Marshall gets up from his desk and proceeds across the corridor, still working toward the point to his story, and by a burst of speed gets out the climax just as he pushes open the door into the senate chamber. Chapital may back into shape ready to offer prayer while walking the few steps from the door to the rostrum.

and halt the Hagerstown train booming down the line behind. A rear-end collision was narrowly averted through the agility of the flagman, who put sufficient space between himself and the Frederick train to give the sacond engineer stopping room. In the meantime, the engineer, conductor and many passengers riled out and surrounded young Shipley, demanding to know the danger. Unabashed, the boy explained that he had found a red flag on the track and wanted to return it. He was questioned closely, but to no further effect.

The conductor took the flag, and trainmen unanimously admitted that they had encountered a remarkable case of an honest boy. They added with some allow of bitterness, however, that there are times when too much honestly is not the best policy.

Sightseeing Indians Amused at Boys' Warfare

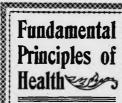

TwO Indians were sightseeing up Capitol Hill way. Both were civilized to the artical of cheap ciothes that didn't fit, and, as small concessions to a tribal past, each wore a single quill in his gray sombrero. Also, one wore gold hoop earrings, and the other displayed on his breast a Catholic medal and cross. They shuffled along list-lessly until, as they came to the library, each stopped with sudden alertness to watch two tiny boys playing on the grass. Each small chap had on an Indian suit of brown cambric with a war bonnet of turkey quills. And each waved a tinsel steel tomahawk and danced exactly as real Indians don't do and never did. And whan one boy put his hatchet between his toeth and crawled over the grass to attack a portly black nurse who made believe she didn't know what was coming to her, the two who were the real thing looked at each other and chuckled.

thing looked at each other and chuckled.

And inside the library there are doubtless many books beautifully be and illustrated to prove that the red man is a stoic who has never known to smile.

His Powerful Appeal.

THE COLOR OF FOODS.

The brilliant green chlorophyl of the vegetable kingdom is in some way connected with the golden yellows of the pumpkin and the carrot, the bril-liant reds of the cherry and the straw-berry, the blush of the peach, the apple and the pear. It has to do with the bronxing of the sliken tassel of the corn and the golden hue of the wheat corn and the golden hue of the wheat —in short, with the general riot of color running all through the vegetable kingdom and touching berries, fruit, vegetable and cereal, which is a certain indication whereby nature gives notice that the process is completed and the product has reached maturity and is fit and wholesome food for mankind.

This ripening process is due to the absorption of a definite amount of solar energy and elemental matter which is tied up in vastly complicated molecules, and which, being tora apart under the action of our digestive organs, supplies us with food—the energy and material necessary to both drive and repair our machines. Small Boy Finds Red Flag; Nearly Wrecks Train

A TWELVE-YEAR-OLD boy came near causing a disastrous rear-end collision on the Metropolitain branch of the Baltimore and Ohio ruilroad near the scene of the Terra Cotta wreck, the other morning, when he flagged the Frederick local due here from Frederick. Md. at 8:30 o'clock.

As usual, the train was crowded, as was the Hagerstown train, following it. The engineer of the Frederick local jammed on his emergency who lives at Stott's, near the district line, frantically waving a red flag on the track ahead, not far from the Stott station.

Quick work was necessary to flag and halt the Hagerstown train booming down the line behind. A rear-end collision was narrowly averted through the agility of the flagman, who put sufficient space between himself and the Frederick train to give the sacond engineer stopping room.

The green color of the plant, chlorophyl, bears some direct relation to the plant's ability to absorb the wave length needed to break up the carbonic acid of the air and convert it into sugar, starch and gums. Excluded from light, plants lose their color by reason of the fact that this chlorophyl becomes submerged into the protoplasm from which it came and from which it is again devolped by exposure to light and heat. This seems to indicate that vegetation normally growing under sunlight might reasonably be expected to show variations if derived of any part of the light, and Grains Etc.

For five long months we had little to eat but fish and sea birds' eggs, which were plentiful enough," said Mrs. Jensen. "My youngest baby was only a few days old when we went to sea last January 15 and less than two months old when our ship was wrecked. Both my children have spent nearly their whole life at sea, but it agrees with them, as you can see." She pointed proudly to her two daughters, who, like herself, are true descendants of the Vikings.

The Nokomis left Port Townsend January 15 for Palta, Peru, laden with lumber. Five days out she ran into one of the severest storms of the winter and was damaged, putting into Grays Harbor for repairs. Mrs. Jensen, whose home is in Olympia, refused to go back, however, and proceeded with the ship on its long voyage south. On February 28 the Nakomis was driven upon the rocky shore off Clipperton island, about seven hundred miles off San Blas, Mexico. The crew took to the boats. One of the children fainted in the mother's arms, but no one was drowned. The crew managed to save a small quantity of the ship's stores before the vessel pounded to pieces.

During the work of rescue Mrs. Jensen remained bravely on the deck of the rapidly splintering vessel and with her babies in her arms spoke words of encouragement to the sailors at their perilous task. She was one of the last to leave, and was loudly cheered by the men for her heroism as the boats put off from the doomed schooner.

nbol of Royalty That Goes Far Back Into the Records of Euro-pean History.

One of the most famous crowns is that which is not bedecked with jew-els, but is made of iron. This historic iron crown has played a romantle role in the history of Italy. It was fash-ioned in the year 594 by the command, it is said, of Theolinda, the widow of a Lombard king, on the occasion of her marriage to a duke of Turin.

The iron is overlaid with gilt. The significance of the crown was supposed to lie in the fact that the weight of royalty could never be lightened by its splendid exterior. The iron of the inner portion was traditionally held to be one of the long nails used at the crucifixion.

For a long time the crown was kept in the famous monastery at Monza. In 774 it was brought forth to be placed upon the head of Charlemagne as "king of the Lombards," and on later occasions it figured in the triumphs of Frederic IV and Charles V. Finally, in the presence of all the representatives of state, the foreign envoys and princes and officers, Napoleon Bonanarte solemnit united it voys and princes and officers, Na-poleon Bonaparte solemnly united it to the crown of France. The crown belongs to the state, and the custodian of it is the legiti representative of the basilica of Mon-za. The title of "grand custodian," za. The title of "grand custodian," however, pertains to the head of the Order of Cavaliers.
