There are many people in the world, no doubt some of them in Plymouth, who ignore religion and the things of the spirit. Some do so unconsciously. Others deliberately put the subject away from them. ## Young Girl Accuses Farmhand of Crime

Fred Champkin Arrested On Co. plaint of Glenna Briggs

With the arrest of Fred Champkin at Salem yesterday evening by Deputy Sheriffs Wilsam E. Eldert and Marthew Max on a warrant, charging an unspeakable crime on 14-year-old Glenna Briggs, it is possible that Andrew Gale; an aged farmer and his son Ray, both of whom have been charged with a like crime by the same girl, will be able to establish their Innocense.

The Briggs girl, dressed in her best bib and tracker, led by Mrs. Maria Peel, officer of the probate court, was brought before Justice W. G. Doty yesterday attenuon and reluctantly admitted that Champkin has been paying illist attention to her for more than ten months, it was evident from the girl's demianor that, despite her tender years, she was deeply in love with Champkin, who is nearly three times her age and who is reputed to have a wife and children in England.

Champkin, who has been employed on the farm of Daniel Briggs' foster father of the complaining girl, says that he has been divorced from his wife. Henies the charge made against him by the Briggs girl and was held, pen ling an examination which will be accorded to him next week. Champkin has retained Dewey Forshee to defend him.

The Gales, father and son, when the complaint against them was made by the Briggs girl, several months ago, immediately came to the city and furnished bail for their appearance in circuit court. They hear an excellent reputation.—Saturuay, Oct. 3, Ann Arbor Daily.

GIRLS IN A BOARDING SCHOOL

ENERALLY speaking, there are few things that one can think of duller and less interesting than the result of a census. The one item therein that most of us care to hear about is how the numbers of a people or a community have increased or decreased, and when this is known the details remain a dry mass of figures, with nothing to lighten the tale except, perhaps, some official speculation as to how many of the fair sex concerned have returned their ages at lower figures than the actual facts warrant.

cerned have returned their ages at lower figures than the actual facts warrant.

But the latest cenus of the population of India is different. The story of how it was taken and the facts which it brought to light are as entertaining and picturesque as anything the readers of newspapers have had to amuse them in many moons, and as unusual and striking, too, as one would expect from that strange and mystic land.

There will be stodgy government reports on the subject before long, in which most of the romance and the oddities will be buried in masses of statistics, but by the courtery of the India office in London the present writer has been able to steal a march on officialdom and to give berewith a few of the queerest details in connection with what must have been with what must have been the most extraordinary cen sus ever taken.

To begin at the beginning and get the dry facts over as soon as possible, this latest senumeration of the "teeming millions" of India was taken on the night of March 10. 1911, this date, the chief enumerator tells us, having been chosen so as to enable the saumerators, who numbered more than two million, "to work by moonlight" and to avoid "certain dates regarded as auspicious for marriage and for bathing in the sacred d for bathing in the sacred

The cost of thus enginerat-The cost of thus enumerating the inhabitants of an area of more than 1,803,857 square miles was $675,000; and the result is the discovery that since 1901, when the last census was taken, the population of this annalms and witch is three times as large as that of the United States, has increased from 294,361,056 to 315,156.

394, of which number by the way the "literaries." I. e., those able to write a letter and to read one which is the test employed), number only slightly more than 18,000,000.

The incidents of the taking of the census were ly more than 18,000,000.

The incidents of the taking of the census were both comic and tragic. It was the more difficult, as the officials explain, "on account of the long lines of railway, the big rivers on which boat travel sometimes for days without coming to the bank, the forests to which woodcutters resort oftan for weeks at a time, the numerous sacred places which, on occasion, attract many thousands of pligrima," and, they might have added, the ferocity of many of the tribes and the dangers from wild beasts. Likewise, the terror with whichs the mere idea of being counted inspired some communities.

Fearing that some dire disaster would befall some communities.

Fearing that some dire disaster would befail them if they suffered themselves to be enumerated, one small aboriginal tribe fied from forest to forest, but wherever they fied they found, the "course field" pureling them, and in the end they had to yield and were duly counted.

In many butts of the country, too, the enumerators found it almost impossible to get the actives to disclose their real ages, on account of a belief on their part that to tell one's real age is to reduce the span of life and also to enable one's memies to set the forces of black magic against them, hence all sorts of ludicrous replies were given on this point and in most case the officials were forced to kness the native's age as nearly as possible and let it go at that.

Nor did the native ideas of some of the dusky

Nor did the native ideas of some of the dusky aumerators themselves help much in the direc-tion of accuracy. Some of them, in reckoning be number of a family, counted in not only their ots and pans and other household utensils, but ports and pans and other nucestors, certain devils, and sometimes the very folls which they worshiped. One of the latter, by the way, was solemnly de-ecribed by the census taker as being two hundred years of age and "speaking the Hindu language."

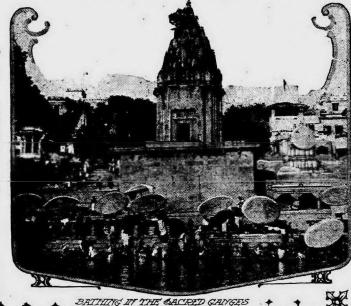

Several of the enumerators, and more of their assistants, lost their lives in the performance of their dury. One of the latter, who had left his home on account of the ravages of a man-eating tiger, volunteered to abow the enumerator the way to his own village, and then, just as he reached it, the brute pounced upon him and carried him off.

In various districts, too, many of the census staff had to march by night through forests infested by man-eaters and had to carry torches to rested by same scare them away.

This great census, which, its takers proudly solut out, was completed with a rapidity "not approached even in the amaliest European states," brought out curious facts almost without end. It have the whereas part of the population of shows that whereas part of the population of India indulges in the bloodlest of human sacri-fices to propitiate its many and singularly un-pleasant gods, others hold human life so sacred that they are forbidden so much as to use the word "cut."

AN ARRA" DEFORE VICTORIA STATION, BOMBAY, MOUR-

Strange new discoveries regarding the complicated laws of caste have been made and also as to the religious observances of the Hindus, the Moslems, the Huddhists and all the other queer sects who owe allegiance to the British raj, but queerest of, all, perhaps, are the details which the census have brought to light regarding marriace in India and the many strange forms, rites and superstitions that are connected therewith.

In the land of the rajahs, in the first place,

In the land of the rajahs, in the first place, practically everybody is married. The age statistics show that the great majority of the unmarried of both sexes are quite young children, three-quarters of the bachelors being under fifteen years of age, while a somewhat larger proportion of the spinsters are under ten. Only one bachelor in 24 is over thirty and only one spinster in 14 is over fifteen.

This, to us, amazing state of affairs, is due to the fact that in india marriage is not looked upon as a luxury, but as an absolute necessity for man and woman alike. According to indian belief, every man must marry in order to beget a son who will perform his funeral rites and thus "rescue his soul from hell;" while in the case of a girl, it is incumbent on her parents to give her in marriage at an age when most girls neithighted countries are still at their lesson books. Pailure to do so is punished with social ostracism in this world and hell fire in the next!

Up to a few years ago, in many tribes, female

Up to a few years ago, in many tribes, female infants were killed at birth. Usually they were drowned in milk or poisoned with "bhang" or by a preparation of oplum smeared on the mother's breast. Others were suffocted or killed by pour ing ice cold water over their heads, while som were allowed to die a cruel, lingering death.

Today among the Khatris, the Rajputs, the Jate and all classes of the Sikhs, girl bables are neglected to such an extent as to amount to deliberate murder. In Gamjam, for instance, villages were found by Pritish officials that did not contain a single female child?

contain a single figmale child:

The reasons for this terrible slaughter of the innocents are many and various. In the majority of cases, however, the parents are inspired by motives of economy, girls being sacrificed to avoid the necessity, in future, of buying hubbands for them.

In India there are no fewer than 9,412,642 girls of under sixteen who are wives and 302,425 under the age of six who also have entered the married state! The astoundingly early age at which girls are married there is accounted for by the census taker by pointing out that astrologers indicate certain seasons, occurring generally once in ten or twelve years, as especially asspicious for marriage, and when these come round every possible unmarried to some person or something.

Even unborn babes are married to one another, and if, after birth, they are discovered to be of the same sex, the marriage is declared null and wild.

the same sex, the marriage is declared null and void. In some cases a little girl is solemnly mar-ried to a man who is married already and who-atterward divorces her; in others she is married to a bunch of flowers which is then thrown in a well.

These mock marriages in India are quite common. A third marriage is regarded there as unlucky, and when a man has lost two wives and is planning a third matrimonial venture he often goes through a mock wedding with a sheep, a pigeon or a plant so that his next wife may be his fourth and not his third.

SCENE IN DELHI

In most parts of India it is thought desirable that the bridegroom should be older than the bride, but when the latter is the elder various means of balancing the discrepancy are employed. Sometimes this is supposedly accomplished by making the bridegroom swallow a two-anna bit, but more often it is done by tying to the bridegroom was there are years in the difference between her age and the bridegroom's!

Another reason for child marriage in India is a dread of increasing the number of unhappy ghosts which walk the earth no spirit, accord-ing to Indian belief, being quite so miserable and bothersome as one who has been denied the bliss of realized love.

The husbands of most of these girl wives, by the way, are adults, the figures showing that whereas nearly 10,000,000 girls under sixteen are wives, the boys under that age who are husbands number only 3,500,000. These facts explain the appalling number of child widows in India, those under twenty numbering no less than 800,000!

Of these moreover more than 9,4000 are seed

Of these, moreover, more than 94,000 are aged between five and ten, while more than 17,000 child widows are aged five and under. Miserable, too, to the last degree is the lot of child widows, especially those who lose their husbands while extremely young.

While, however, the vast number of these child While, however, the vast number of these child widows who represent 17 per cent of the total number of females, is due partly to the early age at which girls are given in marriage and partly to the disparity which generally exists between the ages of husbands and wives, it is attributable most of all to the prejudice against the remarriage of widows. Many castes, especially the higher ones, forbid it altogether, and even where it is not absolutely forbidden it is unpopular. The prohibition of widow marriage, in fact, is a badge of respectability. Castes who do not allow it rank higher on that account in social distinction.

not allow it rank higher on that account distinction.

Many of these census statistics are sheerly amazing; for instance, those about lepers. Regarding the actual workers among these unfortunates some gruesome information is given. Nearly six thousand of them are engaged in agriculture in different forms, "which," remarks the chief enumerator, "is probably the safest outlet for their energies," but 155 are raisers of farm stock (which implies that they constantly handle animals supplying milk, cheese, etc.), 281 are connected with "industries of dress and tollet, 59 with food industries and 422 with trade in foodstuffs."

Owen, said to be a rich mine owner store that they constantly handle animals supplying milk, cheese, etc.), 281 are connected with "industries of dress and tollet, 59 with food industries and 422 with trade in foodstuffs."

Fourteen male lepers are hotel or restaurant keepers, 17 practice medicine, 38 are schoolmasters, 11 are policemen, 77 are engaged in religious duties and six find places under "public administration."

TRAMP'S DOG KEEPS GUARD OVER MASTER

Watches Over the Vagrant as He Sleeps and Defies an Irate Farmer.

Columbus, O.—A tramp was sitting on a failen tree along the bank of Alum creek, and beside him lay a big coach dog. The owner of the land, who happened to come along just as the observer was getting a picture of the pair, ordered the tramp from the place. The tramp, however, looked up indifferently at the landlord and made no effort to obey the command. The owner them proceeded to pick up a large stick and drive the tramp away. As the man came forward to use the weapon upon the vagrant the dog arose and stationed himself in front arose and stationed himself in front of his master. In the animal's eye there came an angered look and he growled victously at the landlord, who lost his nerve and retreated, promising, however that he would have a constable attend to the tramp.

After the owner had deputed the tramp lazily lay down on the log, stretched his arms and proceeded to take a nap. The dog lay down beside him, placed his head across the tramp's knees, and watched the landlord until he was out of sight. Every time a passerby would happen to walk near the tramp the dog would raise his head and watch him until he had passed.

London.—The official press bureau state of descriptive account of the operations in France of the British force and the French armies in immediate touch with it, communicated by an eye witness present at the headquarters of Field Marshal Sir John French.

"Bept 25, 1914—For four days there has been a comparative lull all along our front. This has been accompanied by a spell of fine weather, though the nights are now much colder. One cannot have everything, however, and one evil result of the sunsaline has been the release of files, which were torpid during the wet days.

"Advantage has been taken of the arrival of re-enforcements to relieve by fresh troops the men who have been on the firing line for some time. Beveral units therefore have received their baptism of fire during the week.

"Esplonage plays so large a part in the conduct of the war by the Germans that it is difficult to avoid further reterence to the subject. They have evidently never forgotien the saying of Frederick the Great: 'When Marshal Soubies goes to war he is followed by a hundred cooks; when I take the field I am preceded by a hundred spies.'

"Indeed, until about twenty years ago there was a paragraph in their field service regulations directing that the service of 'protection in the field'—outposts and advanced guards—should always be supplemented by a system of esplonage.

Many Spies Give Signala.

Though such instructions are no longer made public, the Germans, as is well known, still carry them into effect. Apart from the more elaborate arrangements which were made in peace time for obtaining information by gaid agents, some of the methods which are being employed for the collection or conveyance of intelligence are as follows:

"Events have moved so quickly during the last two months that anything connected with the mobilization of the British expeditionary force is now ancient history. Nevertheless, the following extract of a German order is evidence of the mystification of the enemy and is a tribute to the value of secrecy, well and loyally maintained at the time in England:

"Tenth Reserve Army Headquarters, Mont St. Guibert, Aug. 20, 1914, 22,40.—Corps order, Aug. 21: The French troops in front of the Tenth army corps have retreated south across the Sambre. Part of the Belgian army has withdrawn to Antwerp. It is reported that an English army has disembarked at Calais and Boulogne, en route for Brussels."

DEATH COMES SWIFTLY TO TWO GERMAN SPIES

London.—A story received from a point in France it is not permitted to specify says:
A soldier comes out from behind a pine tree with rifle and fixed bayonet:
"Ou allex vous?" he says, stepping before me and dropping his bayonet point a little toward me.
"Je vals me promener." I reply smiling, and anticipate his next demand by pulling out my case and displaying my special permit, also various other papers and an officially stamped photograph, which proves my identiphotograph, which proves my identi-fication with the name upon the spe-

"Monsieur, permit me," says the solder suddenly in very fair English.

"Monsieur is re man that writes. I shake you by se hand with ver great pleasaire. It is to me an honor!"

We "shake" with enormous empressment and I compliment him upon his English.

He smiles, gratified, and disclaims with great modesty. He beckons me back among the trees.

"One comes!" he says. "Ssh! Ze woods here have been many times set in flames. We have suspects these be done with intention."

Bee Spy Among Trees.

He ceased his whisper abruptly and we both bent forward together. A hundred yards down the narrow path among the pines a man in a workman's blue blouse is standing, looking quietly in every direction.

Buddenly he takes a couple of steps in among the trees, stoops and litts a stone.

Far down the hillside at the end of the narrow vista among the trees, stoops and litts a stone.

Far down the hillside at the end of the narrow vista among the trees, so utter is the silence that I can hear him plainly as he coughs. He begins to haul on something, and I realize suddenly the meaning of the whole incident that I am watching. The two men have located the underground private telephone wire going up to the fort. They have been tapping it for "Crack!" comes the sharp, snapping bang of the weapon, and the man down the vista of trees gives a queer little jump and then turns right around quickly and looks behind him. And thus looking, and seemingly unaware that he is the person who has been shot, his heart stope and he roils over quite easily and gently on his side—a merciful enough death, as these violent deaths go, for some of them are so dreadful.

"I mean by. charm," writes Arthur C. Benson in a delightful essay on "Charm" in the Century, "not a mere superficial gracefulness which can be learned, as good manuers are learned, through a certain code of behavior, but a thing, which is the flower and outward sign of a beautiful attitude to: life; an eagorness to welcome everything which is fine and fresh and unstained; that furns away the glance from things unlovely and violance from things unlovely and vio and unstained; that furns away the glance from things unlovely and violent and greedy not in a disapproving or a self-righteous spirit, because it is respectable to be shocked, but in a sense of shame and disgrace that such cruel and covetous and unclean things should be. If one takes a figure like that of St. Francis of Assis, who for all the superstition and fanaticism with which the record is intermingled showed a real reflection and restoration of the old Christian joy of life, we shall see that he had firm hold of the specet."

Coats for Fall are so Womanly

BEFORE the European war started, we placed our order for Baby Lamb Coats. It was lucky, indeed, because the material in these garments is imported from Great Britain. The embargo on trans-Atlantic shipping in August prevented the bringing in of this much wanted material for late deliveries.

The result is that by careful early buying, we have an exclusive showing of these fine coats. British mills are noted for their ability to produce fur fabrics of unusually high lustre. Reconizing this, we selected these coats from the Worth Styles factory; which has specialized in English material.

HANDSOMELY lined, and with collars that button high for wintery winds,

THE WOMAN WHO WANTS A DURABLE COAT CAN MAKE NO MISTAKE IN SELECTING THIS CLOTH.

ITS wearing qualities are superb and the beautiful finish will remain long as you wear it.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Because of their desire to share in the fruits of victory Italy and Roumania are considering seriously the advisability of joining the allies in the war upon Germany and Austria.

These two powers have been holding off, according to information received here, until the scales of battle inclined one way or the other. Apparently they have come to the conclusion that Germany and Austria are doomed to defeat, for both are preparing to join in the struggle.

Germans Try Flanking Movement

A new situation in the great battle in France developed Tuesday with the news from the front that the German right wing and the allied left were engaged in desperate efforts to outflank each other.

Back of this situation is said to be a new notive on the part of each army—that of the allies being to relieve the pressure on the Belgians and at the same time send forces to their aid at Antwerp, and that of the Germans being to cut off the French and mans seing to cut off the rener and the English from aiding Beigium and from making any move farther north. The statement in the Paris report that the battle front is "extending more and more widely" is accepted as meaning that the battle line has been stretched several miles north in the last 24 hours and that fighting is now in progress very near to Belgian fronter. Recent German reports indicated that their strategy included a stretching out of the enemy's line in the hope of so weakening it at some point in the center or right that they could break through and make a new advance on Paris.

Elimination of the pro-Washington—Elimination of the proposed manufacturers' tax on all motor vehicles produced in the United States was decided on by the democratic sentorial caucus Tuesday night. This action makes it certain the new war revenue law will not carry any tax on automobile manufacturers' sales, because the bill, as it passed the house, did not carry the suggested tax.

The senste committee on finance recommended a manufacturer's tax of 50 cents per horsepower as an amendment to the house bill, but the action of the caucus is a decisive rejection of the plan.

MANUFACTURING HEAT.

You have let the furnace fire go out because you do not now need it to keep you warm. You have put fly screens in the windows and doors in order that they may be thrown wide open to permit a free cisculation of air through the house. Thus you may avoid the heat and be comfortable without letting disease hearing insect posts in. You know that a cheed room in summer is uncomfortable, and you have heard perhaps that it is dangerous as well and you are guarding against that danger. But have you reasoned out why it is so? Do you know? Do other things about your person prove and proclaim that you have acted consistently and according to known principles, or that you are full that you have acted consistently and according to known principles, or that you are full that you have acted consistently and according to known principles, or that you are cause others do it?

Probably no single contribution to the science of nutrition has been productive of knowledge capable of more profoundly influencing human life than has the calorie idea. By means of this unit of measurement food requirements become a matter of accurate demonstration, and it is proved that the transformations of chemical snergy into heat and work in the animal body take place according to the same general laws as in our artificial motors.

If air is dry it more readily takes up moisture and thereby cools us, whereas if the humidity is high—that is, if the air be close to its limit of water vapor asturation—of course these will be but little room in it for our moisture. For example: At 30 degrees Pahrenheit and 50 per cent themistive he air will have a capacity for 7.4 grains of water per cubic foot and a comparatively moderate volume of such air will keep our skins dry and cool; but if the humidity he 30 per cent then there is room in it for but 1.48 grains of water per cubic foot and we will heart and swear on the slightest exertion.

Very exhaustive teets in many parts of the world by various experts on many subjects prove that the average man, kept absolutely motioniess and hasting, develops 1,625 calories per fay, an amount of energy equal to lifting more than 2,500 tons one foot. FOOD ADJUSTMENT.

The public mind has been roused here and there to an interest in certain phases of the pure food question by the popular agitation of the subject as presented by various enthusiantic leaders, but there is much underlying truth which has entirely escaped attention. This is due to the fact that the movement has necessarily been ine movement has necessarily been involved in much that is in the nature of commercial warfare, and in commercial campaigns a well turned phrase or glittering epigram is frequently preferred to a straightforward valence of feet quently preferred to a straightforward statement of fact.

We have, for instance, heard much that is both true and false about benzoate of sode, but neither side has felt called on to state the whole truth, which is that as a general proposition the average individual is vastly better off without any of the dietetic whips around which the battle rages. We do not need instruction in the composition of sauces and dressings for our foods, but we are sadily in need of isstructions as to how to select and prepare a nutritious and healthful diet.

The average individual among laymen and physicians alike regards the fundamental problems of food and diet as permanently solved. The fallacy of this belief is quickly shown by a brief study of the mortality tables published by the United States bureau of census. These tables show a progressive decrease in mortality from all discasses other than those directly connected with metabolism, while the mortality from discasses caused by deranged metabolism show a progressive increase per 100,000 population. Obviously the fundamental problems of food and diet are far from being understood or solved, and probably the most imperfectly understood part of the problem is that of the quantity of food needed for the support of man.

They located the shop in question. It was queerly incongruous for its rude surroundings, brand new, gaudily painted, a ten by thirty structure more adapted for the office of some plant than for real work. A plate glass window took up nearly the entire front. It was bare of furniture inaide, where only a barrel or two showed.

"Yes," answered Grey shortly, "I've ing.

"Yes," answered Grey shortly, "Tve inherited this shant,"
"Well, I've given a ten years' lease on the land. Who am I to look to for the ground rent?"
"Not I." retorted Grey sourly; "I can't use the place. See here, Horace," he added, turning to his friend. "The sick and tired of this whole business. I'm subamed to go backhome. I have a brother out West pretty well fixed. I think I'll just go out and try my luck with him."

"But you might get something out of the place here," suggested Horace.
"Not much, I fancy," submitted the sam who owned the hand. "My lease holds, and of course you forfest the building if you don't pay the ground rest. The only way to get anything out of it is to lease the building to some one, or start in business in it."

Rhetorical Embellishments.
"What did you bring that parrot for "asked the manager of the militant suffragette meeting.

"Til do it, and work something out of it." said Horace. "Tim thinking hard. I believe I see a way to use that building. Name a price, give me time to pay you and Fil try the specu-lation."

"Nonsense! I'll give it to you." Finally, however, Grey consented to take a note for $50. Then he left on the next train for the West. Horace went back to the shop. He had a talk with the landowner, got some new ideas and looked over the inside.

legacy?"
"I don't know, but my cousin, Noah Cleave, had a good deal of money once. Of course it must be quite an amount. The letter from the lawyer at Booneville says I am sole legatee. I'm going to give up my job here. I'm going the enjoy life and luxuriate, and also you. I've got some literary ideas—you shall jot them down as they come to me."
"See here, Winfield," said blunt, practical Horace, "I'm friend enough of yours to give you some advice. Don't drop your position until you find out what your cousin has left you. Don't begin spending your fortune before you know what it amounts to."

""Oh, I'm quite sure it must be something substantial," insisted the optimistic Winfield Grey. "Anyhow, I want you to run down with me to Booneville till I take possession of the estate. I'll pay your expenses and for your time."

"Horace was willing. He was unemployed just now. It was his own fault. He had worked for three years for a local firm—mean, stingy and unapper preciative. He found this drudgery unit and took the train home that after."
"Done!" announced Horace prompting and took the train home that after."

"Done!" announced Horace promptly and took the train home that afternoon, to report to Dora and start in on his new independent business ca-

Now, it strangely happened that on the same train, also homeward bound, was Dora's father. Naturally he was

By plecemeal the story of Grey's inheritance came out. The rest of the circumstance was finally related.

"And you're thinking of moving to Booneville and starting in business, eh?" propounded Mr. Wayne.

"That's it," assented Horace. "You see, I'm a pretty fair tinker, and the man who is going to back me says there is plenty of work to pick up."

"What about Dora?" submitted Mr. Wayne archly.

Wayne archly Wayne archly.
"Why, you know we are of the kind

VOICE OF A LITTLE CHILD

How One of the World's Greatest Songbirds Was Discovered by Chance.

Many years ago a maid employed by Miss Lundberg, a famous dancer of the Royal Opers in Stockholm. Was given a holiday by her mistress and set out to take a walk. Passing a shabby little house in the poorest section of the city she heard a child's voice, which seemed to her wonderfully fresh and beautiful, and, looking up, she sa. a little girl sitting near the window singing to a pet kitten. In great excitement she rushed to her mistress and told her ef the exquisite voice she had heard. Miss Lundberg was somewhat skeptical, but finally went to the house and heard the sweet song. She, too, was convinced of the great natural beauty of the child's voice and reported it to Croelius, the singing master of the opers.

Croelius was also somewhat skeptical at first, but at Miss Lundberg's request he, too, went and, standing

It is a common delusion that great American millionaires smoke large cigars that cost about a dollar apiece company says it is not so. He was with one of the great railroad kings of America not long ago—a being who has as many millions as fingers—and was bare of furniture inaide, where only a barrel or two showed.

On the square roof on four sides was a sign. It read "Plumbing." The letters were painted in daxiling gilt. The signs etared an onlooker in the face conspicuously from the four cardinal points of the compass.

"I say," observed Horace, "those signs must have cost a fortune."

"Hub!" snorted Gray—"what good are they to me? I don't want to go into the plumbing business!"

Just here a man came up. He looked over the two visitors critically.

Town the land here, "he remarked "Any interest in the property?"

"Yes," answered Grey shortly, "I've land the property of the control of the plumbing hubble charters."

Republican Candidate

This district is normally Republican. We elected the Congressman in 1900 by plurality of 3,574; in 1902 by 3,236; in 1906 by 22,4:1(n Democratic candidate that year); in 1908 by 9,138; in 1910 by 6,390. In 1912 we lost the congressman by a plurality of 11; owing to a split in our party.

The Republicans and Progressives really belong inone party; box believe in a reasonable tariff, and in progressive in a reasonable tariff, and in progressive in a reasonable tariff, and in progressive in exception that would be neft all eleases of people—the Yarmer, the laborer, the businessman. There was an honest division of santiment in 1912, but I can see no reason why they should not get to get the progressive party can not hope to elect its candidate this year, then why not vote for Mark. R. Bacon? I claim to be progressive, liberal, temperate and particule; but believe that all reforms for the benefit of the people must come through the Republican party. By division we can accomplish nothing; we merely play into the hands of our opponents.

I believe the government should be run as a business man would run his business—on business principles and commission.
