CHILDREN'S DAY

Long ago Jesus said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Today it is as true as then. Christ wants the homage and praise of each little heart and rejoices in the love of every child. The celebration of Children's Day is one way the Sabbath-school has of honoring the children and impressing upon each mind the truths taught from Sabbath to Sabbath. The songs learned, the stories listened to and the texts committed in childhood are those that stay fresh in our memories longest, showing the importance of correct early training.

Next Sunday morning at the regular church hour we will keep this day. The church will be decorated for the occasion, a fine program has been prepared and it will be a day of joy to young and old. Come.

Fire at the Alter

Motor Car Co. Plant

About two o'clock Monday afternoon fire was discovered in the upholstery department at the Alter Motor Car Co.'s plant. An alarm was turned in and the fire department responded quickly. The men at the plant with the aid of hand extinguishers and water had about subdued the blaze when the firemen arrived, and the chemical of the fire department soon finished the work. It is thought that the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion. It was a mighty lucky thing that the blaze was discovered before it had much of a start, as there is much inflammable material in this department of the factory. At the meeting of the village council held Monday evening it was voted to lay a pipe from Farmer street to the building, so that they will be better equipped to fight a fire. This is the right thing to do, as all of our factories should be given every possible protection from loss by fire. The action of the council will meet with the approval of the taxpayers.

1915 Class Listen to Baccalaureate Sermon

The baccalaureate sermon at the village hall Sunday evening was largely attended. The high school chorus under the direction of Miss Beulah Dyer in the structure of music in the school rendered several selections in a fine manner. Seats were reserved for the class of 1915 directly in front of the stage. Rev. B. F. Farber of the Presbyterian church read the scripture lesson and delivered the invocation. Rev. A. L. Bell of the Baptist church delivered the sermon. The address of Rev. Bell was one filled with good thoughts and a message to the members of the class who have finished their school work here and are about to take up their work in other fields of endeavor. The speaker especially admonished them to be faithful and diligent in their work, and to have a fixed purpose in life. His address was delivered with much earnestness and impressiveness which held the close attention of the audience. Rev. Bell closed his discourse with a congratulatory message to the class, in which he felicitated them on the opportunities which lay before them, and then dismissed the audience with the benediction.

First Free Entertainment Saturday Evening

Beginning with Saturday evening, June 19th, and continuing every Saturday evening for twelve weeks, there will be free band concerts and moving pictures on the street in Plymouth. This free entertainment has been provided for by the merchants, and they cordially invite the people of the village and the rural communities to come out and enjoy the music and the pictures. The Chaffers band of Inkster, has been engaged to furnish the musical end of the entertainment and they will render a program that will be highly pleasing to everyone. The number will be especially good. Then there will be the "movies" with four reels of up-to-date pictures. It is going to be some treat for you, so make your arrangements to come early and get a good place, because there is sure to be some crowd.

Plymouth Won Another Game

The Plymouth team defeated the Chicago team of Detroit, in a close game at Athletic Park last Saturday afternoon by a score of 6 to 4. The features of the game was the work of Layer, our third base and the battery work of Carpenter and Kibler for the local team. Saturday, June 19, the Y. M. C. A. team of Detroit, will stack up against Plymouth on the home grounds. This is sure to be a close game as the visitors will come to Plymouth with a strong aggregation and will make the local team to win. Game called at 3:00 o'clock. A division 10 and 15 cents.

Just two days more of the great selling event at Riggs.

At the Methodist parsonage in Plymouth, on Tuesday morning, June 15th, Miss Grace Linn and John E. Ross were married by Rev. Joseph Dutton. The bride lived near Plymouth in the vicinity of Hudson. The groom resides on First Street in Lake Erie, where the happy couple have gone to live. Mr. Ross is a salesman by occupation. Prices beyond belong to Canada. The wedding pair were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carter of Lapeer's.

"The Last Class Banquet"

The opera house was crowded to its capacity Wednesday evening, by relatives and friends of the class of 1915 of the Plymouth High school, to witness the class play, entitled "The Last Class Banquet." The stage was set to represent a banquet room, with the twenty-three members of the class seated at the tables. The decorations and color scheme was in red and white, the colors of the class, and the stage and tables presented a very pretty appearance with the streamers of red and white artistically arranged and the beautiful flowers. The class motto, "The Way is Won by Energy," was suspended across the rear of the platform. Myron Beals, in a most able and dignified manner, acted as toastmaster, and delivered the President's address. He introduced each speaker of the evening with some little characteristic of school days, which with the witty toasts responded to by members of the class caused much merriment. The class yell, with Deo Durycie, as yellmaster, was given with much enthusiasm. The class history by Miss Marion Hood; the class poem by Miss Louise Wilson; the class prophecy by Miss Mildred Mills were all exceedingly fine and each one of the speakers was roundly applauded for her efforts. Kenneth Harrison, as giftorian of the class, caused no little merriment when he distributed his gifts to the individual members. It is of course needless to say that they were very appropriate for the recipients. The last banquet of the class of 1915 was brought to a close by the singing of the class song, with piano and violin accompaniment by Eleanor Kessler and Lester VanDeCar. It was one of the most successful and entertaining class day programs ever given here.

Work Started on Good Roads From Plymouth

Work was begun last Monday by the county road commissioners in the construction of the cement road from the village limits to Michigan avenue. The route it is proposed to follow will run east from the south end of the village, then west a mile to the Canton Center road, going down this road to Michigan avenue, where it connects with the Belleville road. This will be one of the greatest road improvements in this part of Wayne county. There is some talk that if negotiations could be entered into with the road commissioners to do this work, and The Mail hopes the village council may see its way clear to make such an arrangement.

Methodist Sunday-school Observes Children's Day

Children's Day was observed at the Methodist church last Sunday morning at the usual hour of service. There was a goodly number present. The platform was decorated with large bouquets of beautiful flowers. The program was in the nature of a pretty little cantata entitled, "The Festal Queen." The music was pretty and tuneful and all of the children taking part did exceedingly well, indeed. A chorus of 25 voices rendered special music for the occasion. Those who had the cantata in charge are deserving of much credit for the splendid manner in which it was presented. Several children were presented for baptism at this time.

He eyed indecisively the stairs and then glanced toward the brilliant night outside. It would not be possible to sleep in that room again. So he tiptoed out to the cafe veranda and dropped into a comfortable chair. He would hunt them up some time during the day. He would ask Mallow for fifty pounds, and he sincerely hoped that Mallow would refuse him. For he was grimly resolved that Mallow should pay for those half-truths, more damning than bald lies. It was due to Mallow that he was never more to see or speak to Elsa. He emptied the ash from his cutty which he stowed away.

The great headache and the greater disillusion would not have fallen to his lot had Elsa been frank in Rangoon, had she but told him that she was to sail on the same steamer. He would have put over his sailing. He would have gone his way, still believing himself to be a Bayard, a Galahad or any other of those simple dreamers who put honor and chivalry above and before all other things.

Elsa! He covered his face with his hands and remained in that position for a long while, so long indeed that the coolies, whose business it was to scrub the tilings every morning at four, went about their work quietly for fear of disturbing him.

Elsa had retired almost immediately after dinner. She endeavored to finish some initial work on old embroideries, but the needle insisted upon pausing and losing 'titch after stitch. She went to bed and strove to sleep, but that sweet healer came not to her wooing. Nothing she did could overcome the realization of the shock she had received. It had left her dull and bewildered.

The name echoed and re-echoed through her mind: Paul Ellison. It should have been an illumination; instead, she had been thrust into utter darkness. Neither Arthur nor his mother had ever spoken of a brother, and she had known them for nearly ten years. Two men, who might be twin brothers, with the same name; it was maddening. What could it mean? The beautiful white-haired mother, the handsome charming son, who idolized each other; and this adventurer, this outcast, this patient, brave and kindly outcast, with his funny, parakeet, what was he to them and they to him? It must be, it must be! They were brothers. Nature, full of amazing freaks as she was, had not perpetrated this one without calling upon a single strain of blood.

She lay back among her pillows, her eyes leveled at the few stars beyond her door, opened to admit any cooling breeze. Her head ached. It was like the computations of astronomers; so certain as the human mind could comprehend them. It was more than chance. Chance alone had not brought him to the crumbling ledge. There was a strain of fatalism in Elsa. She was positive that all these things had been written long before and that she was to be used as the key.

Paul Ellison. She drew from the past those salient recollections of Arthur and his mother: First, the day the two had called regarding the purchase of a house that her father had just put on the market—a rambling old colonial affair, her own mother's birthplace. Sixteen; she had not quite been that, just free from her school days in Italy. With the grand air of youth she had betrayed the fact almost instantly, while waiting for her father to come into the living room.

"Italy!" said Arthur's mother, whom Elsa mentally adopted at once. The stranger spoke a single phrase, which Elsa answered in excellent formal Italian. This led from one question to another. Mrs. Ellison turned out to be a schoolmate of her mother's, and she, Elsa, had inherited their very room. What more was needed?

The Ellisons bought the house and lived quietly within it. Society, and there was a good deal of it in that small Kentuckian city, society waited for them to approach and apply for admittance, but waited in vain. Mrs. Ellison never went anywhere. Her son Arthur was a student and preferred his books. So eventually society introduced itself. A person who ignored it must be interesting. When it became known that Mrs. Ellison had been the schoolmate of the beautiful and aristocratic wife of General Chetwood, when the local banker quietly spread the information that the Ellisons were comfortably supplied with stocks and bonds of a high order, society concluded that it could do very well without past history. That could come later.

With her father dead, Elsa became as much at home in the Ellison house as in her own. But never, never anywhere in the house, was there indication of the existence of a brother, so like Arthur that under normal conditions it would have been difficult to tell them apart. Even when she used to go up to the garret with Mrs. Ellison, to aid her in rummaging some old trunk, there came to light none of those trifling knickknacks which any mother would have secretly clung to, no matter to what depth her flesh and blood had fallen. Never had she seen among the usual amateur photographs one presenting two boys. Once she had come across a photograph of a smooth-faced youth who was in the act of squinting along the top of an engineer's tripod. Arthur had laughingly taken it away from her, saying that it represented him when he had had ambitions to build bridges.

To build bridges. The phrase awoke something in Elsa's mind. Bridges. She sat up in bed, mentally her for the first time since dinner. "I have built bridges in my time over which trains are passing at this moment. I have fought torrents, and floods, and hurricanes, and myself."

He was Paul Ellison, son and brother, and they had blotted him out of their lives by destroying all physical signs of him. There was something inhuman in the deliberateness of it, something unforgivable.

They had made to foolish attempt to live under an assumed name. They had come from New York to the little valley; in order to leave behind the scene of their disgrace and all those who had known them. Arthur was an inveterate traveler. Half the year found him in Europe, painting a little, writing a little less, frequenting the lesser known villages in France and Italy. He did not care for horses, for hunting, for sports of any kind. And yet he was sturdy, clear-eyed, fresh-skinned. He walked always; he was forever tramping off to the pine-wooded hills, with his painting kit over his shoulders and his camp stool under his arm. Later, Elsa began to understand that he was a true scholar, not merely an educated man. He was besides a linguist of amazing facility, a pianist who invariably preferred as his audience his own two ears. Arthur would have been a great dramatist or a great poet, if he had fought for prizes coveted by mankind, if he had thrown aside his dreams and gone into the turmoil, if he had taken up a man's burden and carried it to success. Elsa, daughter of a man who had fought in the great arena from his youth to his death, Elsa was not meant for the wife of a dreamer.

Paul Ellison. What was his crime in comparison to his exploitation of it? He had built bridges, fought torrents, hurricanes, himself. No, he was not a scholar; he saw no romance in the multifarious things he had of necessity put his hand to; these had been daily matter-of-fact occupations. A strange gladness seemed to loosen the tenseness of her aching nerves.

Then, out of the real world about her, came with startling distinctness, the shriek of a parrot. She would have recognized that piercing cry anywhere. It was Rajah. In the next room, and she had not known that Warrington (she would always know him by that name) was stopping at the same hotel! She listened intently. Presently she heard muffled sounds; a clatter of metal. A few minutes later came softer tinkles, soursy of pattering feet, then silence.

Elsa ran to the door and stood motionless by the jamb, waiting, ethereally white in the moonshine. She should have gone back to bed, but a thrill of unknown fear held her. She saw Warrington, fully dressed, leave forth cautiously, glance about, then pass down the gallery, stepping with the lightness of a cat.

She returned hastily to her room, threw over her shoulder a kimono, and went back to the door, hesitating there for a breath or two. She stepped out upon the gallery, walked as far as Warrington's door, and paused there. The gallery floor was trellised with moonlight and shadow. She saw something lying in the center of a patch of light, and she stooped. The light was too dim for her to read; so she returned her own room and turned on the light. It was Warrington's letter of credit. She gave a low laugh, perhaps a bit hysterical. There was no doubt of it. Someone had entered his room. There had been a struggle in which he had been the stronger, and the thief had dropped his plunder. (A matter of fact, the Chinaman, finding himself closed in upon, had thrown the letter of credit toward the railing, in hope that it would fall over to the ground below, where, later, he could recover it.) Elsa pressed it to her heart as another woman might have pressed a rose, and laughed again. Something of his; something to give her the excuse to see and to speak to him again. Tomorrow she would know; and he would tell her the truth, even as her heart knew it now. For what other reason had he turned away from her that first day out of Rangoon, hurt and broken? Paul Ellison; and she had told him that she was going home to marry his brother!

CHAPTER XVII.

The Battle.

Next morning, when it became known among the bankers and foreign agencies that a letter of credit for ten thousand pounds had been lost or stolen, there was more than a ripple of excitement. They searched for it, but no loss as heavy as it came to light. Even the managing director of the Bank of Burma came in for his share of annoyance. He was obliged to send out a dozen cables of notification of the loss, all of which had to be paid out of accrued dividends. Thus Warrington had blocked up the avenues. The marvelous rapidity with which such affairs may be spread broadcast these days is the first wonder in a new epoch of wonders. From Иркутск to Auckland, from St. John's to Los Angeles, wherever a newspaper was published, the news flew. Within twenty-four hours it would be difficult to draw against that letter as it would be to transmute baser metals into gold.

At half past ten Warrington, apparently none the worse for a sleepless night, entered the private office of the consul general who, gravely and with studied politeness, handed to him an unopened cablegram.

"I rather preferred to let you open it, Mr. Warrington," he said.

young man's face; calm, unmoved, expressing negligent interest in what would be the most vital thing in his existence, next to life. A fine specimen of a man, incredibly wholesome despite his ten years' knocking about in this ungodly part of the world. It was a pity. They had evidently refused to compromise.

"Bad news?" Warrington stood up with sudden and surprising animation in his face. "Read it," he said.

"If Ellison will make restitution in person, yes."

The consul general jumped to his feet and held out his hand. "I am glad, very glad. Everything will turn out all right now. If you wish, I'll tell Miss Chetwood the news."

"I was going to ask you to do that," responded Warrington. The mention of Elsa took the brightness out of his face. "Tell her that Parrot & Co. will always remember her kindness, and ask her to forgive a lonely chap for having caused her any embarrassment through her goodness to him. I have decided not to see Miss Chetwood again."

"You are a strong man, Mr. Warrington."

"Warrington? My name is Ellison. Paul Warrington Ellison. After all, I'm so used to Warrington, that I may as well tell well enough alone. There is one more favor; do not tell Miss Chetwood that my name is Ellison."

"I should use my own name, if I were you. Why, man, you can return to the States as if you had departed but yesterday. The world forgets quickly. People will be asking each other what it was that you did. Then I shall bid Miss Chetwood good-by for you."

"Yes, I am going to jog it home. I want to travel first class, here, there, wherever fancy takes me. It's so long since I've known absolute ease and comfort. I wish to have time to readjust myself to the old ways. I was once a luxury-loving chap. I sail at dawn for Saigon. I may knock around in Siam for a few weeks. After that, I don't know where I'll go. Of course I shall keep the Andes advised of my whereabouts, from time to time."

"Another man would be in a hurry. It was on the tip of his tongue to tell Warrington what he knew of the Andes Construction company, but something held back the words, a fear that Warrington might change his mind about seeing Elsa. "Well, wherever you go and whatever you do, good luck go with you."

"There are good men in this world, sir, and I shall always remember you as one of them."

"By the way, that man Mallow; have you met him yet?" The quizzical expression in his eyes made Warrington laugh. "No."

"I was in hopes . . . The consul general paused, but Warrington ignored the invitation to make known his intentions.

He shunted further inquiry by saying: "A letter of credit of mine was stolen last night. I had a tussle in the room, and was rather getting the best of it. The thug slipped suddenly away. Probably hid the letter in his lap cloth."

"That's unfortunate."

"I have sent out a general stop-order. No one will be able to draw against it. The sum will create suspicion anywhere."

"Have you any idea who was back of the thief? Is there any way I can be of service to you?"

"I really suspect Mallow and a gambler named Craig, but no court would hold them upon the evidence I have. It's my belief that it's a practical joke which measures up to the man who perpetrated it. He must certainly realize that a letter so large will be eagerly watched for."

"I shall gladly take charge of the matter here for you. I suppose that you will eventually meet Mallow?"

"I wish," thought the consul general, "I could have told him about the way the scoundrel spoke of Elsa."

And Warrington, as he sought the cafe veranda, wished he could have told the basic truth of his fighting mood; the look Mallow had given Elsa that day in Penang. Diligently he began the search. Mallow and Craig were still in their rooms, doubtless sleeping off the debauch of the preceding night. He saw that he must wait. Luncheon he had in town.

At four o'clock his inquiries led him into the billiard annex. His throat tightened a little as he discovered the two men engaged in a game of American billiards. He approached the table quietly. Their interest in the game was deep, possibly due to the water laid upon the result; so they did not observe him. He let Mallow finish his run. Liquor had no effect upon the man's nerves, evidently, for his eyes and stroke were excellent. A miscue brought an oath from his lips, and he banged his cue upon the floor.

"I Found That in My Room Last Night."

"Rotten luck," said Warrington sympathetically, with the devil's banter in his voice.

Mallow spun around, stared for a moment, then grinned evilly. "Here's our cue at last, Craig."

"Speaking of birds of ill-repute, the crow passes his admiration to the kite and the vulture," Warrington spoke coolly.

Mallow looked at Craig, who scowled back. He was beginning to grow weary at the sight of Warrington, bobbing up here, bobbing up there, always with a subtle menace. He chalked his cue, got the balls into a corner and finished his string.

"That'll be five pounds," he said.

"And fifty quid for me," added Warrington, smiling, though his eyes were as blue and hard as arctic ice.

"I'll see you comfortably broiled first," replied Mallow, as he tossed five sovereigns to Craig. "Now, what else is on your mind?"

Warrington took out the cigar band and exhibited it. "I found that in my room last night. You're one of the few, Mallow, who smoke them out here. He was a husky Chinese, but not husky enough. Makes you turn a bit yellow," oh, Craig, you white-livered cheat! You almost got my money belt, but almost is never quite. The letter of credit is being refused. It might have been just devilry; just for the sport of breaking a man. Anyhow, you didn't succeed. Suppose we take a little jaunt out to where they're building the new German Lloyd dock? There'll be no one working at this time of day. Plenty of shade."

DESTINED FOR HIGH PLACE
Even as a Child Napoleon III Had Confidence He Was to Be a Man of Destiny.

"Being a boy" meant very little to that destiny was not the same as that of other children; that it held something greater and more serious. But I cannot tell whether it gave me a feeling of pride or of fear—perhaps both together.

Louis Napoleon, for he had it in his mind almost from the day he was born to be emperor of the French. In a moment of confidence he said to his bosom friend, Baron d'Amboise, who in turn confided it to his diary, now published as "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III."

"I have retained a very lively impression of an hour, about my seventh year, when the idea occurred to me for the first time, and very clearly. "In any case I had already illustrious names and important events to look back upon in my past. I knew that my grandmother, who was dead, had been an empress, that my mother had been a queen, and my father a king—and my uncles had been kings, too."

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENT BOARD APPOINTS TWO DEPUTY COMMISSIONERS.

DODGE IS STATE MEDIATOR

In Opinion On Merrill Case Fellows Hold That Carrying Companies Cannot Be Compelled to Refund for Spur Tracks.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing—The industrial accident board appointed Fred A. Zierleyn of Grand Rapids and Ora A. Reeves of Jackson as deputy industrial accident commissioners in conformity with an act passed by the last session of the legislature and the new appointees assumed their new duties June 15. Mr. Zierleyn was deputy labor commissioner, a democrat of considerable prominence having been appointed deputy labor commissioner several months ago. Mr. Reeves was for two years one of the industrial accident board having received his appointment from former Governor Chase S. Osborn. When Governor Ferris assumed the reins of office and Reeves term had expired he was succeeded by Thomas Gloster, of Detroit. Reeves being a republican. However, the industrial accident board members realizing the work of Mr. Reeves were glad to tender him the appointment created by the legislature and he will again resume his connection with the state department.

The work of the deputy commissioners will in a measure, be similar to the regular commissioners. The many arbitration hearings that are held necessitate the time of the commissioners and one of the duties of the two deputies will be to assist in holding arbitration cases and making inspections. The work of the department has been constantly increasing necessitating an additional force of clerks and other assistance.

The appointment of the two deputy commissioners marks the carrying out of the only act passed by the legislature affecting the industrial accident board. Many proposed laws were introduced in the legislature at the last session but with this one exception they either died in committees or were killed by the house members.

The appointment of Deputy Zierleyn leaves a vacancy in the state labor department and James F. Hammel, of Lansing, present chief clerk will be appointed deputy in place of Zierleyn. If his health improves, he having been confined to his home on account of poor health.

Frank L. Dodge, Lansing attorney, and several times Democratic candidate for congress in the Sixth district Saturday was named state mediator by Governor Ferris. The appointment was made by the governor on the 12th, this being the thirtieth day since he signed the Hillendegen act creating the office of state mediator of industrial disputes.

The act specifies that the governor shall appoint a mediator within 30 days of the passage of the act. The governor has construed it passed on the day he signed it. It is held by some that the governor did not necessarily have to follow this provision, as the act does not become a law until August 25 and cannot legally direct the governor's action before it is in effect.

Attorney Dodge has been considered the leading candidate for the place since the bill was signed, but the governor has considered the qualifications of several other candidates. As mediator he will hold office until January, 1917. After that the mediator's term will be two years. The mediator's salary is $2,500 a year.

In an opinion rendered to the state railroad commission, Attorney General Fellows holds that the Merrill Farmers Elevator company of Merrill cannot force the Pere Marquette railroad to refund the cost of constructing a spur track, after the completion of the track such as the railroad company allowed to other companies for which it has constructed similar sidings.

The question raised by the railroad commission involved the point as to whether the existing contract without refund provision from the elevator company is discriminatory.

Attorney General Fellows that the statute shows that a refund is not obligatory upon a railroad company. "The company under the terms of the act is required to provide an adequate and suitable spur, but it is also provided that such company may require the applicant to pay the legitimate cost of the same," said Attorney General Fellows.

"This is a matter that is optional with the company, and consequently, in our opinion, the elevator company cannot legally insist upon the refund provision in the contract. As to whether the contract is discriminatory, in view of the fact that tracks have been constructed for others under a contract providing for refund, depends entirely upon the present situation. If the Pere Marquette company is now exercising its option of compelling shippers to pay the cost of such track

The average condition of wheat in the state is $1 according to the crop report issued by Secretary of State Vaughan. Damage by Hessian fly is estimated at 4 per cent, while two per cent of the wheat crop will be plowed up because it was winter killed. The condition of rye is $1 and oats is $1.

Eighty per cent of the fruit crops throughout the state report serious damage to all varieties of fruit by frost during the month of May.

without refund, no claim of discrimination can be made, in our judgment, because others, in the past, have been constructed with refund."

Fellows holds that the railroad commission cannot settle a matter of discrimination and that it is a matter for a court to determine.

The state tax commission is well satisfied with the supreme court decision in which it was held that the Findlay appraisal of the monies of the state, a valuation adopted as a basis for figuring the iron mine valuations was upheld. The commission has returned from the upper peninsula where a review of the iron mine assessments was held and Chairman Barnes of the commission reports that the valuations of the iron mines this year will not differ more than a million dollars from last year's assessment. The commission after holding reviews raised the valuations of several mines due to newly discovered ores and lowered the valuations of other mines since the valuations were determined last year.

For the first time in the history of the state the tax commission will review the assessed valuations of the copper mines this year. This work will be started as soon as conditions are again normal in the copper country and will include aside from the copper mine valuations all properties in Keweenaw and Houghton counties.

In 1908 when Prof. Findlay made his appraisal of the iron and copper mines of the state his report showed that the iron mines were undervalued but that the copper mine valuations as determined by the local assessing officers were nearly at cash value. As a result of this report the tax commission did not at that time change the assessments of the copper mines, but it is now figured that the time has arrived when a complete reassessment of the copper mine properties should be made.

Chairman Barnes reports that the local assessing officers of the upper peninsula are working hand in hand with the commission and that there is not the usual trouble experienced in the past years when little attention was paid to the suggestions of the tax commission. The legislature has, during the past four years, given the tax commission unusual powers relative to taxation matters and it stands a local assessing officer in hand now to obey the wishes of the commission.

Members of the Michigan State Bar Association at their annual meeting here expressed the confidence of the lawyers of the state in President Wilson and commended his policy as outlined in the last note to Germany.

Judge Howard West and Judge Rollin H. Person, of Lansing, and John Q. Ross, of Muskegon, drafted the following resolution which was adopted by unanimous vote of the members of the association here today: "The Michigan State Bar Association in annual meeting assembled, resolves that this nation owes a duty to common humanity, this duty permits neither the nation nor its individual members to sit quiet at this time, but imperatively demands that in his just efforts to maintain the civilization found in the laws of the nations, and the rights of neutrals in time of war, we stand by the president of the United States and go on record to that effect, regardless of political affiliation."

"The president of the United States is eternally right in his stand for the rights of neutrals and the maintenance of the humane laws of the nations. His fight is our fight and deserves our commendation and most active support as patriots. We further resolve to stand shoulder to shoulder with the president of the United States in the effort he is making to keep our civilization up to the American standard of justice."

In an address before the lawyers Friday morning Justice Stone of the supreme court advocated uniformity in the marriage and divorce laws of Michigan, and referred to the workmen's compensation act and other recent measures as evidence that Michigan is a progressive state.

Judge William L. Carpenter was elected president of the association at the closing meeting this morning. The other officers re-elected were Vice-President Burrill Hamilton, Battle Creek, Secretary Harry A. Silsbee, Lansing, Treasurer William E. Brown, Lapeer.

Attorney General Fellows has filed a bill for accounting in the Ingham circuit court against the United Fuel & Supply company of Detroit, Cadwell Transit company of Detroit, Superior Sand & Gravel company of Detroit and E. Jacques Sons & company, of Detroit.

According to the attorney general's department these companies have been using sand suckers in the St. Clair flats and it is the contention of the state that the companies should be made to pay for a certain amount of sand and gravel for which it is claimed the state has not been reimbursed.

Edwin M. Simpson, superintendent of the Detroit district of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, in an address, predicted that after the election in November, 1916, Michigan would be dry. "There are 44 dry counties in Michigan. Last year the liquor issue was submitted in 16 counties and in 14 of them prohibition was carried. Next year the question will be submitted to the voters on from 16 to 20 counties."

May was a busy month for the state game warden's department according to the monthly report issued by Warden Oates. The report shows 216 complaints, 168 cases started, 157 convictions, and three acquittals. The fines and costs collected amount to $2,100.45. There were 161 violations of the fish laws and 17 violations of the game laws. Forty-seven seizures were reported and the proceeds of sales from seizures amount to $411.

The Proudest Moment.

"Oh, no!" A fellow's proudest moment was not the time he came out on top in his first scrap with "the kid next door." Nor was it the first time he "saw" Mary Jane home from the party. Nor, again, was it when she "named the day."

It wasn't when he made his biggest business deal; got his largest raise; became a partner in the concern and was paying an income tax.

And while this, too, was a proud moment, the proudest of all was not when the first-born came, nor was it when the youngest first lisped "dada."

All those were big moments, moments most every fellow remembers long and happily, but the real proudest moment was the first time when— He wore his first pair of long pants!

Skulls as Drinking Cups.

The old Scandinavian sagas represent as among the delights of the immortals the felicity of feasting and drinking to drunkenness from the skulls of the foes they had vanquished on earth. Mandeville goes further, and represents the Guebres as exposing the dead bodies of their parents to the fowls of the air until nothing but the skeletons remained, and preserving the skulls to be used as drinking cups.

K. P. Memorial Service

Last Sunday morning Rev. B. F. Farber, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this place, addressed the Pythian Sisters and Knights of Pythias in observance of their Memorial Day. A goodly number was in attendance at this service. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion, with red and white bunting and out flowers. Red and white draped in front of the pulpit stand formed the background for a large K. P. emblem, this was surrounded by a bank of flowers carrying out the colors appropriate to the Order, blue, red and yellow. On either side was placed a large white dove, the emblem of peace and purity. Excellent music was rendered by the quartet, and special mention should be made of the beautiful solo, "The Golden City," sung by Miss Hilda Smye. Mr. Farber exhorted the "Knights of Charity," one of the fundamental principles of the Order. An excellent discourse was given in which the speaker brought out many good thoughts which might be carried home, not only by the members of the organizations, but all who were in attendance. The speaker's words were the words of the kind and earnest Pythian, and we regret that time and space does not permit our printing it in its entirety.

L. O. T. M. M. Association

Last week Thursday, the L. O. T. M. M.'s of this place entertained at Grange hall the members of the Wayne County association of the Order. About two hundred and fifty ladies were present. Several notable members of the organization were in attendance among them Frances Burns of St. Louis, Mich., Great Commander; Carrie M. Gilbert, chairman of the Finance Auditors, and Dyanne Latitudes of Detroit, presiding; and Dr. Isabella M. Holden of Port Huron, Great Medical Examiner. In the morning a business session was held after which a fine pot-luck dinner was served. The dining room was tastefully decorated in white and green, large bouquets of peonies, asters, roses and at each place was a pearly boutoniere. The lodge room was also made attractive with cut flowers and was prettily decorated in colors appropriate to the order. The afternoon session was called at one-thirty, Mrs. Bertha Davis of Detroit, presiding. The opening exercises were given by members of other Hives throughout the county. Mrs. Retta Smith, Commander of the Plymouth Hive, in a few fitting words welcomed the guests, and a pleasing response was given by Mrs. Sarah J. LaTour of Detroit. A quartet of twelve candidates from Northville and Plymouth were initiated into the order. Three ladies who had passed the age of seventy years, and were receiving the old age claim were present and invited to the Commander's station, where they were given the Chauteau salute. Frances Burnham of Detroit, presiding, an interesting talk. Mrs. Burns has recently returned from the West and she spoke with great pride of the beautiful fraternal parade which she witnessed while attending the Panama Exposition. In this parade were many beautiful floats, many of them costing thousands of dollars. This parade was five miles in length, many societies being represented. She also stated that the Order was never in better financial standing, than many new members, had been added throughout the state during the past year, and that Michigan has more societies than any other state in the Union. Dr. Holden, who was obliged to leave early to meet another engagement, spoke very briefly. Later in the afternoon a fine program composed of playlets, vocal and instrumental music and readings, was given by Detroit, Northville and Plymouth talents. The meeting closed by all standing and singing in unison "God Be With You 'Till We Meet Again." The next convention will be held in Northville next September, Dr. Isabella Holden of Port Huron, will be the principle speaker.

OUR LAST CALL

There is so much that is good in the worst of us. And such that is best in the best of us. That it behooves all of us to be careful. Just what we say about the rest of us. A fourth result is that men are led to think of his fellow's defeat rather than his victories. We see the sin man commits. But there is something we do not see—the sin he does not commit. Personal experience teaches us this truth. We know that envy, malice, hatred, lust, passion grip us again and again. Sometimes, all too often, we fall before their temptations. But many times we have gained the victory. These victories have not been seen because the battles were fought upon that inner battlefield where none is privileged to see save God alone. So let us be charitable and give our fellows credit for their silent victories in the heart and not emphasize always the defeats we observe.

"And, now, in the second place we want to observe what is the glory of charity. Its glory is found in that which it can do for those who follow her teaching. Henry Drummond has given us this in his exposition of the 8th of First Corinthians. And we are led to see that the glory of charity makes a man patient—"charity suffereth long;" the glory of charity makes a man kind—"and is kind;" the glory of charity makes a man generous—"charity envieth not." And so down through the list—humble, courteous, unselfish, good tempered, guileless, sincere. Surely, where charity hath her perfect work she is glorious. And if we would have charity to reign in all her glory in our lives we must first of all be charitable ourselves. We must remember to always be charitable toward each other and thus fulfill the law of brotherhood and the law of Christ. Peter says: "And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover a multitude of sins." And finally, let us take as an example of charitable feeling the Lord Jesus Christ. Where would men have found themselves in His day if He had not been charitable? Indeed, where would we find ourselves if He were not most charitable toward us in our faults, shortcomings and sins? To observe the "glory of charity" abiding in all its fulness look to Him. Follow Him and we will learn to be charitable in all our dealings. Let us follow His example and go forth today with this prayer in our hearts:

If any little word of mine may make a life brighter. If any little song of mine may make a heart God help me speak the little word, and take my lot of singing. And drop it in some lonely vale to set the If any little love of mine may make a life the If any little care of mine may ease the burden of another. God give me love and strength to help my fellow human.

An article under a Plymouth date appeared in the Free Press last Tuesday morning, in which the writer makes it appear that the reason the Plymouth band will not give Saturday night concerts was because, as Plymouth voted out the saloons, the sympathies of the band were with the "wets." The band boys were very indignant over this statement, as nothing could be farther from the truth. The boys decided as long ago as last summer not to again give concerts this year, claiming that they did not wish to be themselves up every Saturday night. Many of the members work in the factories and as they have Saturday afternoon off, they are precluded from taking the day and evening for themselves because of their agreement to play in the band. It was only by strong effort that the band was induced last summer to give Saturday night concerts, and their decision not to play this summer is not based on either the "dry" or "wet" issue. The Mail is pleased to set the boys "right" before the public.

Pains and Aches
Caused by Kidneys

Many women attribute ailments and suffering to something so peculiar to their sex, when often the pain and misery is caused by weak or deranged kidneys. Household office work or factory work may start the trouble, and dizzy spells, nervous under eyes, sore muscles, stiff joints, discolored or scanty urine, sleep disturbing bladder ailments, rheumatism or diabetes may result.

When the kidneys are strong and healthy they filter out from the blood the poisonous waste matter. When they are sluggish or overworked they need a medicine to clean them out and invigorate them. Foley's Kidney Pills are prepared expressly for the purpose of dissolving all poisonous substances and uric acids that lodge in the joints and muscles and to cleanse and strengthen stopped-up, inactive kidneys.

Men and women in all parts of the county testify to the wonderfully satisfactory results they have had from taking Foley's Kidney Pills.

L. O. T. M. M. Association

Last week Thursday, the L. O. T. M. M. of this place entertained at Grange hall the members of the Wayne County association of that Order. About two hundred and fifty ladies were present. Several notable members of the organization were in attendance, among them Frances Burns of St. Louis, Mich., Great Commander; Carrie M. Gilbert, chairman of the Finance Auditors, and Deputies LaTour and Surrill of Detroit; and Dr. Isabella Holden of Port Huron, Great Medical Examiner. In the morning a business session was held after which a fine pot-luck dinner was served. The dining room was tastefully decorated in white and green, large bouquets of peonies adorned the tables and at each table a pansy boutonniere. The ladies room was also made attractive with cut flowers and was prettily decorated in colors appropriate to the order. The afternoon session was called at one-thirty, Mrs. Bertha Davis of Detroit, presiding. K. P. Memorial Service

Last Sunday morning Rev. B. F. Farber, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, addressed the members of the Pythian Sisters and Knights of Pythias in observance of their Memorial Day. A goodly number was in attendance at this service. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion with red and white bunting and cut flowers. Red and white draped in front of the pulpit stand formed the background for a large K. P. emblem, this was surrounded by a bank of flowers carrying out the colors appropriate to the Order, blue, red and yellow. On either side was placed a large white dove, the emblem of peace and purity. Excellent music was rendered by the quartet, and special mention should be made of the beautiful solo, "The Golden City," sung by Miss Hilda Smye. Mr. Farber's theme was the "Glory of Charity," one of the fundamental principles of the Order. An excellent discourse was given in which the speaker brought out many good thoughts which might be carried home, not only by the members of the organizations, but all who were in attendance. It was one of the best sermons of the kind ever heard in Plymouth, and it is regretted that the space does not permit our printing it in its entirety.

After giving something of the history of the K. P. order and stating what the emblems and colors represent, the speaker took up his subject, "The Glory of Charity." Defining the word to mean love in its highest and best form, he said, in part:

"We want to notice, first of all, what the absence of charity means in the lives of men. For one thing it leads to misinterpret the motives of their fellows. He is a man who does a kindness to a fellow citizen. Immediately, men, who are uncharitable, declare that he did it because he had 'some axe to grind.' There are implications that he is not sincere and that his act of kindness had behind it some ulterior motive. Envy and jealousy lead to false assertions that they have no right to make. How many times we say uncharitable things. If we do not see our own failing in this regard, we know that men fail to understand us because they are not charitable. On every hand we hear little, mean, contemptible, hurtful things which men say about each other. Sometimes there is an element of truth in what is said, but all too often there is an absence of truthfulness and at least justice and fairness are not considered. When the glory of charity is at work, these things are not so. Another thing that the absence of charity brings is that it causes men to hide their hopes and ambitions. Because men are so unsympathetic and uncharitable, men hesitate to tell each other their hopes and ambitions. They are afraid to within themselves and do not know that many parents crush the ambitions of their children through their uncharitable attitude. When the boy comes forth with his boyish dream, the father, all too often, forgets that he was a boy once and built his air-castles, too. He is afraid to lose his investment in his boy because he manifested no sympathy for his son and his dreams. The same is true of the mother and daughter. It is true also in friendships. There are very few real friendships, where men reveal to each other the longings of their hearts. Why? Because men are so uncharitable. They do not try to catch the point of view of their friend. They treat confidences with a lack of charity. So men lock their secrets in their hearts. The glory of charity is that it opens that lock and heart to heart. A third reason why the absence of charity is found in the fact that it leads men to condemn the sins of men and to overlook their good points. Goethe is reported to have said: 'There is something in every man's heart which if you only knew it would make you hate him.' It is true, but how much more charitable it is to overlook his weaknesses and emphasize his strength. We realize that many men, we ourselves among them, are worthy of censure and condemnation, but it is uncharitable in any of us to act as judge over the best of us. Let us again heed the familiar couplet:

There is so much that is good in the worst of us And so much that is bad in the best of us That it behooves all of us to be careful Just what we say about the rest of us. A fourth result is that men are led to think of his fellow's defeats rather than his victories. We see the sin man commits. But there is something we do not see—the sin he does not commit. Personal experience teaches us this truth. We know that envy, malice, hatred, just passion grip us again and again. Sometimes, all too often, we fail before their temptations. But many times we have gained the victory. These victories have not been seen because the battles were fought upon that inner battlefield where none is privileged to see save God alone. So let us be charitable and give our fellows credit for their silent victories in the heart and not emphasize always the defeats we observe.

"And, now, in the second place we want to observe what is the glory of charity. It is found in those who follow his teachings. Henry Drummond has given us this in his exposition of the 13th of 1st Corinthians. And we are led to see that the glory of charity makes a man patient—'charity suffereth long and is kind; charity makes a man kind—'and it kind; the glory of charity makes a man generous—'charity envieth not.' And so down through the list—humble, courteous, unselfish, good tempered, guileless, sincere. Surely, where charity hath her perfect work she is glorious. So let us be charitable and give our fellows credit for their silent victories in the heart and not emphasize always the defeats we observe.

An article under a Plymouth date appeared in the Free Press last Tuesday morning, in which the writer makes it appear that the reason the Plymouth band will not give Saturday night concerts was because, as Plymouth voted on the saloons, the sympathies of the band were with the "wets." The band boys are very indignant over this statement, as nothing could be farther from the truth. The boys decided as long ago as last summer not to again give concerts this year, claiming that they did not wish to tie themselves up every Saturday night. Many of the members work in the factories and as they have Saturday afternoon off, they are precluded from taking the day and evening for themselves because of their agreement to play in the band. It was only by strong effort that the band was induced last summer to give Saturday night concerts, and their decision not to play this summer is not based on either the "dry" or "wet" issue. The Mail is pleased to set the boys "right" before the public.

AMERICAN NOTE WELL RECEIVED

BERLIN PAPERS BELIEVE WAY IS OPENED FOR PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT.

KAISER MAY DRAFT REPLY

Important Paragraphs in Second Communication on Loss of American Lives in Sinking of Lusitania.

Berlin—President Wilson's second note on the sinking of the Lusitania has been received here with a friendly spirit.

It is accepted that Emperor William himself will have much to do with the framing of the German reply.

Though there is no confirmation from official sources, the fact that the full text of the American rejoinder was rushed to the emperor at all possible speed is taken to mean that he intends to play a very important part in the drafting of Germany's answer.

The official viewpoint probably can be correctly appraised only after conferences of the imperial chancery, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the foreign secretary, Herr von Jagow, and representatives of the army and admiralty, the naval and general staff. The emperor, it is believed, will speak the final word.

The answer will certainly not be drafted and the lines of the German policy probably will not be definitely decided upon, before Dr. Meyer-Gerhard, Ambassador Bernstorff's special envoy from Washington, has arrived and made his report.

Both the Lokal Anzeiger and the Vossische Zeitung had the second American note as opening the way for further negotiations between Germany and the United States, which both profess to believe will straighten out the situation.

The important paragraph in the American note which relate to the Lusitania follow:

Your excellency's note in discussing the loss of American lives resulting from the sinking of the steamship Lusitania, adverse as some might regard certain information which the imperial German government has received with regard to the character and outfit of that vessel, and your excellency expresses the fear that this information may not have been brought to the attention of the government of the United States.

It is stated in the note that equipped with masked guns, supplied with trained gunners and special ammunition, transporting troops from Canada, carrying a cargo not permitted under the laws of the United States to a vessel also carrying passengers, and serving, in virtual effect, as an auxiliary to the naval forces of Great Britain. Fortunately these are matters concerning which the government of the United States is in a position to give the imperial German government official information.

American Laws Was Observed.

Of the facts alleged in your excellency's note, if true, the government of the United States would have been bound to take official cognizance in performing its recognized duty as a neutral power and in enforcing its national laws. It was its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action, that she was not serving as a transport, that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States and that in fact, she was a naval vessel of Great Britain, she should not receive clearance as a merchantman, and it performed that duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials.

It is able therefore, to assure the imperial German government that it has been mistaken in its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action, that she was not serving as a transport, that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States and that in fact, she was a naval vessel of Great Britain, she should not receive clearance as a merchantman, and it performed that duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials.

Whatever may be the contentions of the imperial German government regarding the carriage of contraband of war on board the Lusitania or regarding the explosion of that material by the torpedo, it can only be said that in the view of this government these contentions are irrelevant to the question of the legality of the methods used by the German naval authorities in sinking the vessel.

Rights of Humanity Supreme.

Whatever be the other facts regarding the Lusitania, the principal fact is that a great steamer, primarily and chiefly a conveyance for passengers and carrying more than a thousand souls who had no part or lot in the conduct of the war, was torpedoed and sunk without so much as a challenge or a warning, and that men, women and children were sent

No old age pensions will be paid until the minister is 63 years old, regardless of how long he has served, the western Michigan diocese convention of the Episcopal church decided at the close session at Muskegon Thursday.

A summer camp for girls between 6 and 14 years is to be established in Jackson this summer under the direction of the Jackson Organized Charities on the Ella Sharp farm, and it is expected that about 80 girls will be given a two weeks' outing.

Mrs. Jeanne Voorheis, of Plymouth, mother of Wayne's assistant prosecuting attorney, Paul Voorheis, and a leader in the Michigan W. C. T. U., is dead. She had been at a Battle Creek sanitarium for some time.

The monthly report of the state treasurer shows $9,972,758 in the treasury July 1, of which $6,432,838 is in the primary school fund and $3,539,920 in the general fund. The fund is expected to be depleted by October, two months before the state begins to receive its share of the federal money.

to their death in circumstances unparalleled in modern warfare. "The government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privileges of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity which every government honors itself in respecting and which no government is justified in resigning on behalf of those under its care and authority.

"Only her actual resistance to capture or refusal to stop when ordered to do so for the purpose of visit would have afforded the commander of the submarine any justification for so much as putting the lives of those on board the ship in jeopardy.

"This principle the government of the United States understands the explicit instructions issued on August 3, 1914, by the imperial German admiralty to its commander at sea to have recognized and embodied, as do the naval codes of all other nations, and upon which every traveler and seaman had a right to depend. It is upon this principle of humanity as well as upon law founded upon this principle that the United States must stand."

Would Act As Peacemaker.

"The government of the United States is happy to observe that your excellency's note closes with the intimation that the imperial German government is willing, now as before, to accept the good offices of the United States in an attempt to come to an understanding with the government of Great Britain by which the character and conditions of the war upon the sea may be changed. The government of the United States would consider it a privilege thus to serve its friends and the world. It stands ready at any time to convey to either government any intimation or suggestion the other may be willing to have it convey and cordially invites the imperial German government to make use of its services in this way at its convenience. The whole world is concerned in anything that may bring about a peaceful accommodation of interests in any way mitigate the terrors of the present distressing conflict."

Position on War Zone Repeated.

"The government of the United States cannot admit that the proclamation of a war zone from which neutral ships have been warned to keep away may be made to operate in any degree as an abbreviation of the rights either of American shipmasters or of American citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on merchant ships of belligerent nationality. It does not understand the imperial German government to question those rights. It understands it, also, to accept as established beyond question the principle that the lives of non-combatants cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unresisting merchantman, and to recognize the obligation to take sufficient precaution to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact of belligerent nationality, or is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag.

"The government of the United States therefore deems it reasonable to expect that the imperial German government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect of the safe-guarding of American lives and American ships and asks for assurances that this will be done."

ROBERT LANSING, Secretary of State, ad Interim.

Die Folgen des Tauchbootkrieges gegen England.

Wir sind gefehert und dadurch gezwungen, so schreibt Kapitän zur See A. v. Hülowetter in der stöhnlichen Volkszeitung, England lediglich als das „meerbeherrschende Nation“ zu betrachten und denken dabei gemeinlich nur an die Tatsache, daß seine überlegende Schiffsflotte, jeder anderen an Zahl nicht überlegen, Herrin der Meere ist. Es ist uns geläufig, daß England durch diese Beherrschung des Meeres den Grund zu seiner Größe und zu seinem Reichtum legte, daß seine Seefriede das Großbritanniens, wie es vor dem jetzigen Kriege stand, geschaffen haben. Weit weniger waren wir gewöhnt der Entwidlung dieser Tatsache nachzugehen und damit ihre Schritte zu betrachten, die die Abhängigkeit Englands von dem Meer. Auch in England selbst liebt man es nicht sehr, die „Britannia rules the waves“ zu singen und den Britanniens Weltbeherrschung, als einer an sich selbstverständlichen, man kann fast sagen gottgewollten Einrichtung zu sprechen, aber von der Abhängigkeit Englands von der See sprach man weniger gern, und konnte sich dann oft eines Altruismus nicht ganz erwehren. Der Zustand war nicht immer so. Das England vor 100 Jahren erlangte Reichtum und Ueberfluß im Seehandel, das England von heute kann seines Vorgesang Nahrung und Nahrung nicht anders beschaffen, als über See. Die Abhängigkeit Englands zum reinen Jutehandel im Verein mit dem Jutehandel.

terhandelt in England schon im Jahre 1800 um 20 Prozent geliegt haben und daß dann bis zum April die allgemeinen Notizen der Lebensführung auf 50 Prozent über den Friedensschnitt stiegen und wissen, daß die Kohlen heute in England doppelt so teuer sind und immer noch teurer werden. Wir wissen auch moher das kommt. Alle Schiffsfrachten nach England fallen heute drei bis sechs mal soviel als im Frieden und weil alles über See kommt, erhöhen sich alle Preise damit. Und die Schiffsfrachten sind so hoch und werden noch immer höher, weil die Seefahrt nicht nach England fahren wollen, ohne daß man ihnen für die Gefahr, der sie sich aussetzen, hohe Löhne zahlt. Weiter weil die Versicherungsgesellschaften natürlich keine Schiffe auf der Fahrt nach England mehr versichern wollen, ohne daß ihnen ungeheure Prämien gezahlt werden, denn sie wollen doch verdienen und schließlich wollen auch viele Reeder ihre Schiffe nicht nach England fahren lassen, weil ihnen die Gefahr überdies zu gefährlich ist und die Schiffe anderswo besser und sicherer ausnutzen können. All das verstandene sagt, sobald der Unterseebootkrieg aufhört, denn unsere Auslandsfrachter, die in gleichem Sinne wirken, können das heute leider nicht mehr.

So steigen Nahrungsmittel und Rohstoffe für die Industrie gleichmäßig. Lenkung der Lebensmittel führte zur Unruhe in der Bevölkerung, zum Verlangen nach Steigerung der Löhne und damit zu Konflikten zwischen Arbeiter und Arbeitgeber, denn die Arbeitgeber sehen damit das Geschäft, das sie vom Krieg erwarteten, dank Englands Seeherrschaft überall hin zu liefern, wo sonst die deutsche Konkurrenz besser und billiger war, gerinnen. Streit zwischen Arbeitgeber und -nehmer führt immer zu Streiks und Verminderung der Produktion, und die bedeutet zusammen mit den ungeheuren Kosten und Ersparnissen, die von der Unruhe herrühren, schmerliche Entleerung und Mangel an Kriegsmaterial, von dem wir in englischen Zeitungen und Ministerien lesen. Damit steigt die Notwendigkeit der Einfuhr, die ihrerseits wieder die Preise treibt. Außerdem aber fällt mit dem Rückgang der Produktion die Ausfuhr, und damit steigt die passive Handelsbilanz. Aber das Ueberwiegen der Einfuhr über die Ausfuhr, das England heute schon hat. Was es einführt, muß es bezahlen, kann es das nicht mit Waren, die es ausführt, und das ist jetzt schon längst eingetreten, dann in Gold. Damit fließt kein Geld ins Ausland und es hat zurzeit keine Einnahmen mehr, die diesen Abfluß decken. Und dabei wollen wir daran denken, daß englischer Mund verhandelt, die letzte Währungsveränderung, die die Welt in der Geschichte gesehen hat, denn der Unterseebootkrieg wird dieses noch brechen. Und doch muß ich dabei immer wieder an die Frage denken, die mir vor kurzem eine sehr beachtenswerte Person stellte: „Wo aber willst du dann unter Unterseebootkrieg, wenn noch wie vor Tausenden von Schiffen in englischen Häfen aus- und einlaufen?“ So ist ja zu lesen in allen englischen Zeitungen. Nehmen wir nun wirklich einmal diese Ankündigung englischer Zeitungen als bare Münze, trotzdem wir nicht wissen, ob die Fählung überhaupt gemacht ist und ziemlich sicher kein Kommando, daß jedes Küsten- und Handelschiff mit jeder An- und Abfahrt darin verhandelt ist. Die Wäner, die unteren Unterseebootkrieg planten und leiten, wußten, daß Hunderte von Dampfern täglich nach vierzig hundert Hafen Englands über See ziehen so gut, wie das unterer Unterseebootkrieg keine Lücke mehr waren, und neue sich nicht aus der Erde stampfen lassen, daß diese Kriegswerkzeuge, Mann wie Schiff, auch unerschöpflicher Aube bedürfen und daß ihnen schließlich auch noch andere Aufgaben zufallen, als der Handelsverkehr. Damit konnte ihnen der Gedanke nie kommen, mit einem Schlag Englands Handelsverkehr zu zerstören und seine Dampfer auf dem Meeresgrund zu sehen. Sowieb Lorpedes hätten alle Schiffe den Welt zusammen kaum liefern können.

Das Ziel war für uns also grundtätig ein ganz anderes. Auch der Krieg ist Politik und Politik immer die Kunst des Möglichen. Die Abhängigkeit Englands in seinem ganzen Wirtschaftsleben von der ungeführten und unbedachten Seefahrt und Abfuhr über See das ist der Hebel, an dem unser Unterseebootkrieg ansetzt. Ob und wie das Wirtschaftsleben gestört wird, das läßt sich nicht übersehen. Es können viele Dinge der Öffentlichkeit vornehmlich werden, aber nicht was die Lebensführung selbst und was willen wie heute in England sein kann. Wir wissen, daß die Ausgaben eines Arbeit-terhandelt in England schon im Jahre 1800 um 20 Prozent geliegt haben und daß dann bis zum April die allgemeinen Notizen der Lebensführung auf 50 Prozent über den Friedensschnitt stiegen und wissen, daß die Kohlen heute in England doppelt so teuer sind und immer noch teurer werden. Wir wissen auch moher das kommt. Alle Schiffsfrachten nach England fallen heute drei bis sechs mal soviel als im Frieden und weil alles über See kommt, erhöhen sich alle Preise damit. Und die Schiffsfrachten sind so hoch und werden noch immer höher, weil die Seefahrt nicht nach England fahren wollen, ohne daß man ihnen für die Gefahr, der sie sich aussetzen, hohe Löhne zahlt. Weiter weil die Versicherungsgesellschaften natürlich keine Schiffe auf der Fahrt nach England mehr versichern wollen, ohne daß ihnen ungeheure Prämien gezahlt werden, denn sie wollen doch verdienen und schließlich wollen auch viele Reeder ihre Schiffe nicht nach England fahren lassen, weil ihnen die Gefahr überdies zu gefährlich ist und die Schiffe anderswo besser und sicherer ausnutzen können. All das verstandene sagt, sobald der Unterseebootkrieg aufhört, denn unsere Auslandsfrachter, die in gleichem Sinne wirken, können das heute leider nicht mehr.

So steigen Nahrungsmittel und Rohstoffe für die Industrie gleichmäßig. Lenkung der Lebensmittel führte zur Unruhe in der Bevölkerung, zum Verlangen nach Steigerung der Löhne und damit zu Konflikten zwischen Arbeiter und Arbeitgeber, denn die Arbeitgeber sehen damit das Geschäft, das sie vom Krieg erwarteten, dank Englands Seeherrschaft überall hin zu liefern, wo sonst die deutsche Konkurrenz besser und billiger war, gerinnen. Streit zwischen Arbeitgeber und -nehmer führt immer zu Streiks und Verminderung der Produktion, und die bedeutet zusammen mit den ungeheuren Kosten und Ersparnissen, die von der Unruhe herrühren, schmerliche Entleerung und Mangel an Kriegsmaterial, von dem wir in englischen Zeitungen und Ministerien lesen. Damit steigt die Notwendigkeit der Einfuhr, die ihrerseits wieder die Preise treibt. Außerdem aber fällt mit dem Rückgang der Produktion die Ausfuhr, und damit steigt die passive Handelsbilanz. Aber das Ueberwiegen der Einfuhr über die Ausfuhr, das England heute schon hat. Was es einführt, muß es bezahlen, kann es das nicht mit Waren, die es ausführt, und das ist jetzt schon längst eingetreten, dann in Gold. Damit fließt kein Geld ins Ausland und es hat zurzeit keine Einnahmen mehr, die diesen Abfluß decken. Und dabei wollen wir daran denken, daß englischer Mund verhandelt, die letzte Währungsveränderung, die die Welt in der Geschichte gesehen hat, denn der Unterseebootkrieg wird dieses noch brechen. Und doch muß ich dabei immer wieder an die Frage denken, die mir vor kurzem eine sehr beachtenswerte Person stellte: „Wo aber willst du dann unter Unterseebootkrieg, wenn noch wie vor Tausenden von Schiffen in englischen Häfen aus- und einlaufen?“ So ist ja zu lesen in allen englischen Zeitungen. Nehmen wir nun wirklich einmal diese Ankündigung englischer Zeitungen als bare Münze, trotzdem wir nicht wissen, ob die Fählung überhaupt gemacht ist und ziemlich sicher kein Kommando, daß jedes Küsten- und Handelschiff mit jeder An- und Abfahrt darin verhandelt ist. CAPTAIN TELLS OF SHIP DISASTER

LUSITANIA COMMANDER TESTIFIES THAT LINER WAS NOT ARMED.

INQUIRY STARTED TUESDAY

Survivors and Relatives Express Disappointment That Admiralty's Instructions Are Not Made Public.

London.—Fifty survivors of the Lusitania disaster, with relatives of passengers who lost their lives, and privately-retained lawyers, attended the opening session Tuesday of the board of trade inquiry into the destruction of the liner by a German submarine, May 7, with a loss of more than 1,100 lives.

The survivors and relatives of the dead expressed disappointment at the fact the testimony relating to the admiralty's wireless instructions to the Lusitania was given in private.

Captain Turner was principal witness. He appeared to be in good physical condition, and in full control of his nerves. His voice was hearty and firm, his manner brisk and his answers prompt.

Captain Turner denied emphatically the Lusitania was armed. The captain estimated that 10 seconds after the Lusitania was struck it was impossible to stand on deck. He said the three difficulties in rescuing passengers were the list of the ship, her headway, which carried her two or three miles after being struck and the lack of time.

The captain testified he had given orders to look out for submarines and to proceed at full speed if any were sighted. He said the boats had been swung out the morning of the day preceding the disaster. Two lookouts were placed in the "crow's nest," two at the bows and two officers were on the bridge.

When asked whether the passengers were giving help as far as they were able, he replied, "The passengers showed a desire to assist in every way possible."

THE EXPENSE OF GREAT WAR

Canada's War Loans and Pension List Growing.

Ottawa, Ont.—The minister of finance, Hon. William T. White, estimates that from information compiled by officials of the department the special war revenue act passed last session will bring in $1,865,000 in revenue up to July 1, next.

Mr. White states that the total amount of interest which will have been paid and accrued by July 1 on account of money borrowed from the British government for war outlays since August 1 is $1,100,000.

If the total amount of $150,000,000 already appropriated by parliament on war account is expended before March 31, next, there will be an additional amount of interest payable after July 1 approximating $315,000. There is every indication, says the minister, that the amount appropriated will not be sufficient to provide for the war expenditure up to March 31.

The appropriation of two million for pensions made last session already is being drawn upon, and in the opinion of the minister will be insufficient to meet the demand.

Big War Loan Is Voted.

London.—The house of commons Tuesday afternoon voted another credit of $1,250,000,000, making with previous sums a total of $4,310,000,000 already allowed for war purposes.

In introducing the measure Premier Asquith remarked that from April 1 to June 12, expenditure had been at the rate of $13,300,000 a day. He estimated the total daily expenditure during the currency of the new credit would be not less than $15,000,000, because as the war extended its area, Great Britain's financial obligations to the Allies would increase.

TO DO AWAY WITH COLLISIONS

An Illinois man has invented a portable derailer for cars, the idea being that, if a train is blocked, a rear signal can be set, and, if not needed, a rear train is thrown off the track.

on the locomotive as it passes and operate the pneumatic brakes, bringing the train to a standstill. Such a device would be entirely automatic, so that if the engineer failed to see the signal set against him the train would stop just the same and no one would be injured.

ENDOWED WITH LIFE?

OLD ENGINEER HAS IDEA ABOUT LOCOMOTIVES.

Study of Telepathy Convinced Him That His Notions When He Was Handling the Levers Were Pretty Nearly Correct.

After 30 years at the throttle in the service of one of the great trunk lines going out of New York, Sylvester P. Ames, locomotive engineer, retired recently and prepared himself to loaf away the remainder of his life.

He found it impossible to loaf, however, and yearned for a hobby or something else that would compensate him for the loss of rattle and roar so long a part of his existence. A friend suggested a study of telepathy, in which he was deeply engrossed.

The other evening an old-time friend called at the Ames flat in Brooklyn and thought to spend an hour or two in a game of cribbage, of which the old engineer was at one time very fond.

RAILROAD FIGURES

The largest and most powerful locomotive ever built is the so-called Triplex Compound, owned by the Erie railroad. It was built in 1914 and weighs 425 tons.

The fastest passenger train in the world is operated on the North Eastern railroad in England, from Darlington to York, a distance of 44 1/2 miles in 43 minutes, giving an average speed of 61.7 miles an hour.

The Canadian Pacific railroad, with a total of 13,322 miles of track, has the greatest mileage of any railroad in the world.

Ireland's "Straddle" Railroad. Running between Ballyunion and Listowel, in Ireland, is a unique "peg-leg" railroad, so-called because it runs a straddle a single rail, elevated a suitable distance above the ground.

Northern Line Being Built. An important railroad is being built northward from Petrograd to a point on the Arctic ocean near the Norwegian frontier, about five hundred miles west of Archangel, on a portion of the Arctic coast line, reached by the end of the Gulf stream, which makes the climate at that point much milder than at Archangel.

Important to Trainers. Trainers who know that a track at a place is commonly used by pedestrians must keep their train in control at that place, so that after the discovery of a pedestrian on the track they may avoid injuring him.

Second Nature. Crawford—I see the bellgerents are calling out the older residents. Do you think that married men should be compelled to fight?

Crawshaw—Why not? They are used to it.—Life.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER. Originator of "Their Married Life," Author of "The Journal of a Neglected Wife," "The Woman Alone," etc.

Helen is Depressed at Their Homecoming Until a Real Calamity Threatens

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Dear, it's so late—must you go to the office tonight?"

"Got to look over some of that mail before I see Griffin in the morning. This the one you want opened?"

Warren was unstrapping one of the trunks. "Both of them, and you'll have to open this suitcase," Helen handed him the key.

"Now, see here, don't try to unpack tonight. Just take out what you need and get to bed—don't stay up for me. Here, I'll not want this," taking a steamer cap from his bulging overcoat pocket.

"Wait, dear; do wear your muffler. It's much colder here, and you're not used to it yet."

But Warren, scolding the muffler, buttoned his coat with a vigorous, "Cold? This is fine—not that infernal dampness we got in London."

Anxiously Helen followed him to the hall door, and stood there until with a final nod he disappeared into the elevator. Then she turned back to the dusty, dismantled apartment with a feeling of utter depression.

How strange and unfamiliar everything looked! As she switched on the lights and went from room to room, Helen almost wished herself back on the steamer. Even their stateroom seemed now more familiar than this.

And their London apartment she pictured with an almost homesick throbb. After the excitement of traveling, there is always a "let down" in getting home. And now, instead of a feeling of relief at having left a war-mened country, Helen had a lurking longing to be back there.

How she dreaded the unpacking! Every article would bring a rush of memories of those weeks in London that now seemed so wonderful.

Never had her home life appeared so humdrum, so dullly uneventful. She shrank from taking up its daily routine. Yet with the feeling that such thoughts were disloyal, she tried to crush them out.

She had turned on the heat and the sizzling of the radiators emphasized the loneliness of the place. Everything was covered with dust. She gazed about helplessly—where should she begin?

When she had changed her traveling suit for an old kimono, Helen went out to look for a dust cloth. As she swung open the kitchen door there was a sound of dripping water, startlingly loud in the stillness.

Stumbling against a sharp corner of the table, she groped in the dark for the light. One of the faucets in the pantry sink was leaking! No, it was not turned off! Had it been dripping all these weeks?

Nora was too careless. They should never have left her to close the apartment, but Warren had insisted that it would be all right.

How had she left the refrigerator? A strong, musty odor greeted Helen as she opened it. Far back were a couple of shriveled tomatoes. In a greasy brown paper was a piece of bacon green with mold. And her last warning to Nora had been to leave nothing in the icebox!

There were no clean dusters. Nora had left them all in the bottom of the broom closet, black as floor cloths.

Not having the heart to investigate further, Helen turned off the kitchen light. In the hall closet rag bag, she found one of Warren's old undershirts which she took for a duster.

Even the toilet things on her dresser Nora had not put away, and the air had tarnished the silver and rusted the pins in the cushion.

The first thing tomorrow she would call up that Danish employment agency. She would never take Nora back, of that she was now grimly determined.

The snow blew in from the outside sill as she raised the window to shake out the dust cloth. It was piercingly cold. The wind was growing stronger. It rattled the window panes with a dismal whine. Oh, why had Warren gone down to the office on such a night!

How desolate it must be in that great deserted building with only the night watchman on guard.

She pictured him unlocking his dark office with the silent covered typewriters, the closed desks and safe. He had taken her there once at night, and she had never forgotten that impression of deathlike stillness, of tense suspended activity.

Her nerves already taut, she started violently as the phone shrilled out. It was Warren! He was calling her up just to break the awful loneliness of that office. She flew into the front room, falling over an open suitcase in her eagerness.

taking down the receiver did not seem. Then at last, "Cortland 1428 don't answer!"

"Oh, ring them again, central. I'm sure someone's there."

Another long wait, then central's voice with a note of finality, "They don't answer. I'll ring you if I get them."

Baffled, Helen hung up the receiver. He must be there! It was only thirty minutes to his office, and it had been an hour since he left.

Vaguely anxious, she went back to her work. Taking off the dusty sheet that had protected the bed, she turned down the covers and laid out her night-dress and Warren's pajama. Somehow the bed, now ready for the night, gave the first touch of home to the place.

Three times within the next half hour she called Warren's office, but still that baffling, "Cortland 1428 don't answer."

Even if he had started home before her first call, he would be here by now. What could it mean? Every gruesome possibility now obsessed her—an accident in the subway, in crossing a dark street, or in the elevator, run by the sleepy watchman.

Was this a swift punishment for her rebellious thoughts at the monotonous routine of their home? Was this routine to be broken by some tragedy? Abject in her remorse, with a tempestuous change of feeling, her home life now seemed ideal. If only nothing had happened to Warren!

By eleven o'clock Helen had worked herself into a state of feverish anxiety. Unheeding the stinging cold, she had thrown up the library window and was leaning far out, hoping to recognize Warren in every muffled figure that came up the street. Once more she turned to the telephone.

"Central," pleadingly, "see if you can't get that number now!"

Again the empty buzzing and again central's indifferent, "They don't answer."

Then, with a desperate determination, Helen found the number of a well-known cab company and called for a taxi.

In blind, trembling haste she got back into her traveling suit. This suspense she could not bear a moment longer. She was going down to his office. If he was not there or had not been there—then she would have to call up some of his family.

She was slipping on her long steamer coat when the front door banged. A breathless second was followed by the sound of Warren's heavy step.

He was struggling out of his overcoat, as with an inarticulate cry Helen rushed into the hall.

"Oh, I—I—"

But just then the telephone rang out clamorously.

"Who in thunder knows we're home?" Shaking off Helen's clinging arms, he strode into the front room to answer it.

"Hello, what's that? A taxi? You've got the wrong number," crossly. "We didn't order any taxi here."

"Oh, yes—yes, we did," excitedly Helen caught his arm. "You'll have to go down and give the man something—and send him away."

Warren stared at her.

"Oh, I couldn't get you on the phone—and I was terrified! I thought some thing had happened. I—I was going down to the office! Of all blithering—"

"Don't, dear, don't scold me now. If you won't send that cab away—I'll have to!"

"You stay where you are!" Warren caught her by the shoulders and almost fung her back in the room. Then the hall door slammed after him.

When he came back, Helen was curled up on the couch, her face in the dusty sofa pillows, sobbing nervously.

"Now what I'd like to know is," Warren stood over her, his hands in his pockets, "if it's softening of the brain—or if you're just plain dippy?"

He listened grimly, with an occasional snort, while Helen sobbed out an account of telephoning and her frantic anxiety.

Midsummer Coat of Heavy Cotton Cloth

The weavers of cotton cloths have become expert in making fabrics much like the heavier weaves of wool in appearance, as well as some novelties that appear only in cotton. These heavy weaves, including cotton corduroy and corded materials, are also at the neck and at the ends of the sleeves. Cretonnes in small figures are used for the collar and cuffs and are chosen in strong color contrasts. The white smocks are prettiest, but those in light brown are equally smart. They are the something new in outer garments that women are all ready to welcome.

Adorable poke bonnets in the same pretty coloring show to advantage atop blonde curls, for, unlike our American kiddies, the bobbed hair effect is not being worn on the other side of the water. The little girls all have their hair long and flowing over their shoulders and of course it curls whether naturelle or a la kide or upon machine stitching and buttons made by covering button molds with the fabric. It is cut along the same lines as popular sport coats of wool, with high, convertible collar, big pockets, and wide belt across the back.

Among other new wraps of cotton for midsummer smocks made in white or blue or brown are commanding much attention. They are straight-banging garments with the fullness taken up by old-fashioned "smocking" at the neck and at the ends of the sleeves. Cretonnes in small figures are used for the collar and cuffs and are chosen in strong color contrasts. The white smocks are prettiest, but those in light brown are equally smart. They are the something new in outer garments that women are all ready to welcome.

One of the best models for a coat of cotton corduroy, corded cloth, or fancy weaves in cotton, is shown in the picture given here. Like a few of the heavy linen weaves, it is unmissable. For decoration it depends upon machine stitching and buttons made by covering button molds with the fabric. It is cut along the same lines as popular sport coats of wool, with high, convertible collar, big pockets, and wide belt across the back.

AT POINT OF REBELLION

Jimmy Had Reached the Stage of Boyhood When Kissing Became Rather Tiresome.

Little Jimmy had reached the conclusion that everybody in the world had kissed him or wanted to badly. He could not help being a boy that all the ladies wanted to pet and bestow their kisses upon. In fact, Jimmy longed for the day when he would have a say so in the matter of being kissed. One day a famous woman came to call upon his mother. Jimmy chanced to enter the parlor and was directed by his mother to come up and see the noted Mrs. So and So. Jimmy knew what was coming, but he could not prevent the occurrence.

The visitor took him by the hand and gently gathered him up into her lap, and as she let him down to the floor again she graciously bestowed a kiss upon his pouting lips. Jimmy jumped away from her and began to rub his lips in a vicious manner. "What you are not rubbing my kiss off, my little man?" questioned the woman. Jimmy was puzzled for a few moments, then replied: "No, ma'am, I'm just rubbing it in," and then vanished through the door.

Reason for Her Social Prominence. "Eh-yah!" said the landlord of the tavern at Polkville, Ark., in reply to the question of the Kansas City drummer. "The lady that just passed is one of our most prominent society leaders. She's already caused four men to be shot, and as you saw, she's still medium young and considerable handsome."

Hopeless. "Oh, dear," said Mrs. Bleecher. "I wish the home team would win a game or two. They've been losing steadily for two weeks."

"I didn't know you took any interest in baseball," said her friend. "I don't; but I want a new gown, and there's no use asking John for it until he's in better humor."

Expert in Silver Linings. "Hall—Blythe is a pretty optimistic character, I hear." Wall—"I should say so. If he failed in business, he'd thank heaven he had his health; if he failed in health, he'd thank heaven he had his business, and if he failed in both, he'd say there was no use having one without the other."

Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Brooklyn navy yard was established February 23, 1801, when the first land, twenty-three acres, was bought from one John Jackson for $40,000. The yard now comprises 144 acres, and has a water front of nearly three miles, protected by a sea wall of granite.

Self-Righteous. "Some people," said Uncle Eben, "talks about heaven like it was their own property dat dey was preparin' to tack a 'No admittance' sign on to."—Washington Star.

SHE QUIT But It Was a Hard Pull. It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did an Ohio woman. She tells her own story: "I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not, and could not, quit drinking it, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years."

"I was scarcely able to be around, had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it."

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would annoy me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally I asked myself what the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?"

"So I got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I now like Postum better than the coffee."

"One by one the old troubles left until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my house work and have done a great deal besides."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in plga. Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages. Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 25c and 50c tins. Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup. "There's a Reason" by Postum. Sold by Grocers.

Ostrich Boa In Enthusiastic Revival

The ostrich boa has met with an unanticipated but enthusiastic revival of popularity, and seems destined to outdistance other kinds of fluffy and airy neckwear. The unusually cool weather of spring has made some sort of protection almost a necessity, and there is no denying the becomingness of soft feathers about the throat.

White fox, red fox and light gray or tan fur neckpieces one sees with the most summery of white turbans and flower-trimmed hats. This vogue is probably a reflection from the western coast, for visitors to the Panama exposition have found the weather cool and everyone indulging in the San Francisco privilege of wearing furs with summer gowns.

The feather boa of today is short as to length, being as to fiber, and liked best in white, natural color or two-colored combinations. Occasionally a boa more than long enough to lie loosely about the throat is seen, but not often. They all fasten with bows of soft mescaline ribbon, apparently, or the expedient is so rare as to prove the rule.

Very smart sets consisting of boa and ostrich-trimmed hats are shown, and there are great numbers of cockades, fans, and other fanciful ornaments made of ostrich to be used on midsummer hats.

Three New Bathing Caps. The Tipperary bathing cap is a high model, finished at the top with a long rubber tassel, which hangs straight down the front of the cap. The cap is boned in the front to keep it high and straight, and acts as a support to the tassel.

EAST PLYMOUTH

One of the social events of the season in this community was the wedding of Miss Cecelia Gronowicki and Henry Messer of Newburg. The ceremony was performed at St. Mary's Catholic church at Wayne, at 9:30 o'clock last Saturday morning by Rev. Father Connor. Miss Mary Gronowicki and Miss Anna Garney of Detroit, acted as bridesmaids. Albert Messer, brother of the groom, and Frank Summers also of Detroit, were the best men. The gowns were of the most attractive designs, the bride wearing white silk crepe de chine with a beautiful bridal veil of white silk illusion, and carried a bouquet of white lilies. The bridesmaids were attired in pale green and blue silk crepe de chine and carried bouquets of white carnations. After the church ceremony nearly one hundred invited guests were received at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gronowicki of Livonia township, where festivity and dancing were indulged in the remainder of the day and evening. Leo Gurney's orchestra from Detroit furnished the music. The happy couple received many beautiful presents. LIVONIA CENTER.

The Young Men's banquet at the church Wednesday evening was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Following the serving of the chicken pie supper, a meeting was held with Rev. Farber presiding. Rev. Dutton of Plymouth, gave a short address followed by Mr. Martin Verburg, county secretary of the Oakland county, Y. M. C. A. It was decided to send five boys to the camp of the organization near Pontiac this month. The following young men were named for that purpose: Harry Wolf, Grover Johnson, Harvey Wagon, Robert Lee and George Hayball.

Mr. Lewis of Adrian, a former teacher of the school of this district 50 years ago, called upon Palmer Chilson, who was his pupil at that time. They spent several hours recalling reminiscences of half a century ago and could count four persons who are still living in this community and who attended the three month term of school which Mr. Lewis taught that year.

NEWBURG

Church service will be held in Newburg hall at the usual hour Sunday next.

There was the largest attendance of members at the L. A. S. meeting Friday last that has been there in a long time. Also one of the finest memorial services for deceased members that they have ever held. There were four charter members present. Mrs. James LeVan the eldest one of the number and also the first president of the L. A. S., spoke in a very touching manner of the members who had finished their course and gone to their reward. She also said it was an occasion of thanksgiving, inasmuch as three of the members, who had been absent on account of severe illness, were present for the first time in a number of months. Such a service as this helps to promote a feeling of love and friendship among the members. Sunday afternoon the ladies went in a body to the cemetery and placed flowers on all of the graves of the departed members.

Children's Day exercises passed off very pleasantly, the children doing their parts well. Special mention should be made of the girls, who repeated all the books of the old and new testaments without a mistake. Gladys Smith did fine, as she always does. The church was very prettily decorated with flowers for the occasion.

The L. A. S. are making plans to hold a fourth of July picnic on Saturday, July 3, on the lawn across from the schoolhouse, making a convenient place for the games and races on the schoolground.

The old building that has been such an eyesore for so many years on Newburg corners has been purchased by Mark Joy and moved onto his premises. The church will now occupy the place where the old house stood, making a decided addition to the corners.

The Youngs family had a reunion at Belle Isle park Saturday last to celebrate the birthday of Mrs. Youngs. They report a delightful time.

The Plymouth Road Local News

Since the Plymouth road has become one of the finest highways in the county, there has been a great increase in the traffic that passes over this thoroughfare, which connects this part of Wayne county with Detroit. There is almost a continuous stream of automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles passing over this fine piece of roadway every hour during the day. With the improvement of the highway, there has also come a general improvement in the property through which the road passes. Farm lands have advanced in value and find a ready sale when placed upon the market. Many farm homes and barns have undergone changes and improvements, which adds attractiveness to the countryside. Among the places near Plymouth, where marked changes have taken place, is the old Joy farm, now owned by Harry C. Robinson of this county and the Henry farm, now owned by "Cresbrook Farms," and owned by L. Thomas, formerly of Detroit.

Mr. Robinson has one of the neatest places along the "pike." He has remodelled the house and barn, erected a new silo and several other buildings for tools, etc., all of which are neatly painted and conveniently arranged. One of the attractive features of this place is the neatly painted fence posts supporting wire fencing which marks the boundary lines of the farm and separates the various fields. Mr. Robinson has the farm well stocked, and there is a general air of thriftiness about the whole place that appeals to the traveler. The farm is in charge of Fred Jackson.

An artistic sign bearing the words, "Cresbrook Farm" in front of a very pretty and modern cottage, with a large roomy veranda, furnished with comfortable porch furniture, attracts the attention of the passer by to a place made beautiful by the natural beauty of its surroundings. Mr. Thomas, the owner of "Cresbrook Farms," has added to what nature has already done by a fine garden of ornamental shrubbery and flower beds and well kept lawns. The place across the way, which is also owned by Mr. Thomas, has undergone many changes and improvements. The old house which has stood there for many years has been remodeled in a fine and attractive way. One of the features of "Cresbrook Farms" is the large and model poultry yards which command a prominent view from the road. Aside from general farming, a specialty is made of truck raising on a large scale. There is an atmosphere of prosperity and progress about "Cresbrook Farm" that calls forth favorable comment by passing travelers. George C. Raviller is the manager. There are also other places along the road where improvements have been made that are worthy of mention did time and space permit.

Northville can probably lay claim to the oldest "steepie Jack" anywhere in this part of the country, in the person of Theodore W. Wood, who attended to the planting of the pulleys on the flag-staff of the village hall for the raising of the stars and stripes on Memorial day. Although Mr. Wood is 72 years old, he is usually called upon when such "high altitude" work is to be done here. Few men of 20 less years than that like to attempt such jobs.—Record.
