Eighth Annual Epworth League Banquet to be Held October 22nd

The next Epworth League banquet will occur on Friday, October 22nd. This is the eighth in a series of annual banquets, which have been looked forward to with increasing interest each year. The occasion gives promise of being the most successful banquet yet given by the League.

Dr. Mac Clintock, pastor of Central M. E. church at Pontiac, will act as toastmaster. Dr. Mac Clintock acted in this capacity at the last banquet and so well pleased his hearers that it was decided to ask him to return.

Dr. Ramsdell, the new district superintendent of the West Detroit district of Methodist churches, of which Plymouth is a part, will respond to a toast, and Prof. McKay of the State Normal College, is the third speaker. Judge Philip T. VanZile has been secured for the fourth speaker.

A male quartet from the U. of M. will be the chief musical attraction. This quartet is one of the best that could be obtained and a rare musical treat is expected.

Tickets are being sold very rapidly, and it is expected that by the end of this week all will be sold. Tickets may be bought of Robert Joffe, Ralph Brown and others. The price is seventy-five cents.

The banquet will be served in the new dining rooms of the M. E. church at 6:00 p. m.

Custer's Cavalry Brigade Will Hold Annual Reunion

John Stewart and Ephraim Partridge Plymouth Veterans of this Famous Brigade Will Attend

The annual reunion of Custer's Michigan Cavalry Brigade association will be held at Battle Creek, October 19-20. This reunion marks the 51st anniversary of the battle of Cedar Creek, where the Brigade fought so gallantly with "Sheridan twenty miles away." The Brigade will be guests of the city of Battle Creek, with headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce. Plans have been made to give the veterans an automobile ride around the city, a big banquet followed by campfire, entertainment, rooms and meals for two days in private homes will be provided. The city will be decorated in honor of the boys in blue, and every possible effort made to give them a generous welcome.

The city of Battle Creek is to congratulate upon its fine spirit in thus honoring the members of this famous Brigade, two of whom are well known residents of Plymouth. John Stewart enlisted in December, 1861, in Company L, Third Michigan Cavalry, and was discharged in March, 1863. He re-enlisted in Company I, First Michigan Cavalry. He was taken prisoner and was confined in Libby prison six months. When exchanged he weighed only ninety pounds. He was discharged in July, 1863. Ephraim Partridge became first sergeant of Company B, First Michigan Cavalry. He enlisted in August, 1861; was wounded June 1, 1864. He reported for duty Sept. 28, 1864, and was finally discharged at Fort Bridger, Utah, in March, 1866.

The gathering at the Baptist parsonage Tuesday evening was the first business meeting of Pastor Bell's Bible class since the summer vacation. Plans were laid for the winter campaign and several projects considered for future work. Out of an enrollment of sixty in the class, over two-thirds were present at the gathering. After the outlining of the proposed plans by Pastor Bell, ice cream and cake were served. Readings were given by Louis Schaal; a musical program was rendered by Mr. Smith, the recently appointed choir leader, who with Mrs. Robinson gave a deft and beautiful number now furnished by Mrs. Baker of Salem, who with Pastor Baker were guests at the parsonage. The usual class banquet was arranged to take place the second week in November.

The Citizens' Entertainment Course

Attractive pamphlets announcing the dates and attractions of the Citizens' Entertainment course for the season of 1915-16, are being distributed this week. The committee have selected a series of entertainments to be given on the course for the coming season, after much careful consideration, and they have every reason to believe that the course will be equal to any that has been presented in past years, and there have been some good ones. There is just enough variety in the attractions selected to please everybody. There are six numbers on the course and each one is a high-class attraction, all for the price of only $1.50, including reservation of seats.

The seat sale will be held at the village hall. The doors will be open at 5 p. m. and the reservation of seats will begin at 7:30 p. m., Thursday, Oct. 28. We believe this plan will meet with the approval of the patrons of the course, as it will give them an opportunity of being seated while waiting for reservations. Tickets for the course may be purchased from any member of the committee.

The first attraction on the course is the Old Colonial Band, which comes on Monday, Nov. 1st. This is something entirely new in the way of Lyceum attractions. There are twelve musicians. The band will present as a part of each program a musical novelty known as "The Spirit of '76." The accompaniment is true to the days portrayed and is elaborate.

The next attraction is the Beulah Buck Quartet company, on Tuesday, November 16th. This company is composed of four talented ladies. Their singing is spoken of in press comments as remarkably fine. Mrs. Buck is a reader of exceptional ability.

The third number on the course is given by Rev. George L. McNutt, Friday, December 10th. Mr. McNutt is known as "The Dinner Pail Man." For seven years the man from the pulpit, with his wife and boys, lived the life of the unskilled day-laborer's family, studying the problems and conditions of the laboring man and his family today. His lecture is intensely interesting, original and different.

On Tuesday, January 25th, the Carroll Glee club will furnish the entertainment. The Carroll Glee is a quartet of male voices. All the members of the quartet are college men with personalities of entertainers. According to the press comments they have made a decided hit wherever they have appeared.

Charles R. Taggart, "The Man from Vermont," is the attraction for Tuesday, Feb. 22. Mr. Taggart is an entertainer who can turn your pain into pleasure by music, your worries into wonderment by mimicry and your sadness to smiles by humor.

The closing number on the course is given by the Orchestral Quintet on Thursday, March 13. The company is composed of three ladies and two gentlemen. The program includes trombone and cornet solos, duets upon the cornet and trombone, cello solos, vocal solos, saxophone selections, etc. The work of this company has been praised by some of the most notable men in America.

As an extra attraction an illustrated lecture on "The Primitive Man in Michigan," will be given by Dr. W. B. Hinsdale of Ann Arbor, tonight, Friday, October 15th. This lecture is free to everybody and given under the auspices of the University Extension Service and the Citizens' Entertainment Course.

Rev. and Mrs. Farber Pleasantly Surprised

Last week Thursday evening was the occasion of a very pleasant surprise on Rev. and Mrs. F. Farber, when the ladies of the church invited the members of the congregation and friends to attend an informal reception held at the church after the prayer meeting. About one hundred were in attendance. It was the culmination of a very successful five years' pastorate here for Mr. Farber, and during the evening, W. J. Burrows, in behalf of the members, presented Mr. and Mrs. Farber with a handsome oak and leather library rocker, which expressed in a small measure the affection and esteem in which they are held. Mr. Farber responded feelingly, and said that it was one of the few genuine surprises he had met with during his life time. Ice cream and cake were served, and the guests departed, hoping that the pastor and his estimable wife might remain in our midst many more pleasant years.

Death of Asa Joy

Asa Joy, a prominent citizen of Plymouth, passed away at his home on Church street, Wednesday evening, after a short illness. Mr. Joy was a veteran of the civil war and was prominent in G. A. R. circles. He was commander of Eddy Post, G. A. R., and a member of the state soldiers' home board. The funeral will take place from the Presbyterian church, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A more extended notice will appear next week.

Rally Day--What Does It Mean?

All boys and girls, old and young, who are now members of the Methodist Sunday-school, know that this coming Sunday, Oct. 17th, is rally day. All of the departments of the Sunday-school, including the Cradle Roll and the Home Department, are rallying their forces for the good times and the big year's work ahead. The winners of the attendance contest, also the winners of building fund contest, will be decided that day. An interesting program will follow a brief lesson session. Last Sunday there were 170 people present. Our goal for rally day is 200, and you may be needed to make the two hundredth. Think about it, then act.

For some unexplained reason the lecture on Social Purity at the Baptist church on Tuesday afternoon, failed to materialize. Every arrangement was completed, church warmed for the occasion and a gathering of over thirty women, many or all of whom came at a sacrifice of time and other duties, were to say the least disappointed at the refusal of the speaker, who was present to deliver her address as advertised, and no one seems to give a satisfactory reason for the act.

Couldn't Blame It.

The hotel was not a very good one, and the traveling man knew it. Nevertheless they were obliged to go there when they came late at night to the little town. In the middle of the night one of them was dimly conscious that something was wrong. Suddenly he realized that the trouble came from a leaking gas jet.

"Wake up, Bill!" he shouted, shaking his friend violently. "The gas is escaping!"

"Well," growled Bill, "can you blame it?"--Ladies' Home Journal.

Man.

"The Kaiser could have rid the world of flies, of mosquitoes, of consumption--he could almost have rid the world of disease--at less than what this war is costing him."

The speaker was Dr. Harvey W. Wiley. He continued: "But men are like that. It is only big, grand, heroic things that attract men."

"Alexander wept because he had no more worlds to conquer. But no man man wept yet because there was no more coal to carry up or dishes to help his wife wash."

Small Chance.

"Do you ever expect to be married?" "Well, that depends. If I can find a girl with a million or two who doesn't want to be married for herself alone."

THE air in a coal range oven is very dry. It absorbs the juices from the roast, dries it out and causes a heavy shrinkage.

In an Acorn Gas Range oven the air is very moist. Hold your hand over the pipe collar of a gas range and feel the moisture.

The moist air will not absorb the juices as the dry air does. As a result there is little shrinkage waste and a juicier, better flavored roast.

An Acorn Gas Range will save you money on every roast you buy. Come in and see them.

Death of Lee Nowland

Lee Nowland passed away at his home on Dept street last Saturday morning after a lingering illness of nearly a year, and although his death was not unexpected, it came as a shock to his relatives and friends. Mr. Nowland was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nowland of New Boston, and was born at that place February 21st, 1852. In 1873 he was married to Rebecca VanDeCar of New Boston, and to them one daughter was born. In 1883 Mr. Nowland with his wife and daughter moved to Plymouth where he has since resided. On February 14th, 1892 his wife preceded him to the higher life. April 16th, 1895 he was united in marriage to Mrs. Jennie Harrison of Ann Arbor, who survives him. Besides his widow and daughter, Mrs. Wm. Hoops of Flint, he is survived by one sister and three brothers, Mrs. Samuel Adams, Ed and Henry Nowland of New Boston, and Eli of this place, also other near relatives. The funeral services were held from the Methodist church last Monday afternoon, Rev. Joseph Dutton conducting the services. Mr. Nowland had for some time been constable and deputy marshal and Mr. Springer and deputies acted as pall-bearers. "Abide With Me" and "It Is Not Best To Die," were feelingly rendered by Mrs. Wm. Bake and Miss Hazel Conner. Interment was at Riverside cemetery. The family has the sympathy of many friends in their sad bereavement. The out of town friends who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newell, Mr. and Mrs. Don Voorhies, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Smith and E. R. Reed and daughter of Detroit; Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Cook and J. M. Cook of Ann Arbor; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hoops of Flint; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Nowland and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nowland of New Boston.

It may be that Uncle Sam some day will have to go to war, but it will never be to serve the highest bidder. A New York theatrical manager is looking for the homeliest woman on earth. He'd better get some other woman to point her out.

REDFERN

has come to be considered the fashion event of the season in this community.

EACH season we devote to the special showing of Coats, displaying the very newest ideas and creations of the world's best designers. For Fall, we will surpass all previous efforts in quantity of display.

Dame Fashion has been very liberal this season—no hard and fast rule—which makes it all the more important to consider carefully where you are going to buy.

Select that establishment which sells a proven line of merchandise, and in whom you have confidence of their ability to purchase correctly.

This store has successfully sold Redfern garments for many seasons.

When you make your selection here you are assured that your coat is not a freak, with only: "It's different" to recommend it.

Of course the prices are reasonable, and as for wear, the Redfern label is the makers guarantee of Satisfactory Service. And in addition, we, personally, stand back of every garment we sell.

Come in to-day and look at some beautiful coats.

The pleasure of entertaining, the enjoyment of your everyday meals is enhanced by the assurance that your cooking will be perfect

All uncertainty is dispelled, all risk removed with the right cooking equipment. Buy a range that will give you confidence in your cooking ability, that you know will afford your table consistently perfect results for dinner parties as well as daily demands.

The 'Garland' Cabinet Gas Range is the Ideal Equipment

It insures perfection in cooking by being easy to regulate and simple to control. A turn of the lever and you have the exact heat required. A glass oven door tells you the condition of your pastry at a glance. Aluminized interior and removable parts make cleaning easy and insure the desired sanitary condition of the oven and broiler.

And with all this, you cook in an erect position; no stooping, no muss, no dirt, no ashes.

There is no other household convenience that can compare with or offer the advantages of the gas range.

Birds of the White House Enjoy Shower Baths

WASHINGTON.—The feathered tenants of the White House grounds have discovered the delights of the shower bath. And birds of many kinds are taking advantage of the excellent accommodations provided by the rotary lawn sprinkler. The blackbirds, most inquisitive and curious of all birds, first found out about it. It may have been accident that led the bird Columbus in this exploit under the spattering drops of water thrown off by the sprinkler. If so he found it good. Generous, or unable to keep his counsel, he spread the news. Other blackbirds tried it with resulting delight. Then the tale spread of the advance in bird civilization.

And still the wonder grew as bird after bird submitted itself to the pleasure of the bath. The sparrows, who inhabit two whole trees in the White House grounds when they are at home for a night's rest, found it so good that they quarreled for place and turn. Then a few thrushes who live in the precincts acquired the shower-bath habit. And finally the pigeons and doves, slowest to adopt new customs, were converted. So the shower-bath cult has grown among the birds.

There are a half dozen such lawn sprinklers scattered over the White House grounds, with purpose or hope to make the grass grow. They are going all day, scattering drops of rain in an ever revolving circle. As is modest, the birds take their shower baths in secluded spots where the sprinklers are at work.

"Old Nick," the Champion Long-Distance Smoker

UNCLE SAM has the champion long-distance smoker of the world, consuming 1,000 cigars a day on an average. They call him "Old Nick," not because he is in any way diabolic, but because he can hold an amazing amount of nicotine. And it takes very little effort of the imagination to characterize "Old Nick" as a human being; for, in make-up, he performs all the functions of the flesh and blood lover of the weed, even to the action of the lungs. "Old Nick" is merely an ingenious apparatus for testing cigars.

Uncle Sam's mechanical man is no fastidious chooser of what he smokes. The most expensive imported brand and the humblest of the domestic are the same to him. In the lower left-hand corner of his mechanical anatomy is a jar. In the cork of which are inserted the tubes holding four cigars. The receptacle contains water which takes up the nicotine. So it is that none of it gets into the "lungs" of "Old Nick," and the smoke that goes out from his "mouth"—the exhaust—is wholly free from nicotine. The "lung" is at the extreme right and inhales and exhales the smoke of the cigars.

A tube leads into the "lung" from the jar into which four individual cigar tubes are placed. There is also an intermediate jar, which arrests whatever of the nicotine may have escaped from the direct repository.

One Woman Who Knows Secrets, and Keeps Them

THERE is only one woman in the United States who has knowledge of international events before they happen. Her name is Margaret M. Hanna. She is the confidential secretary and assistant of the second assistant secretary of state, Alvey A. Adee, who is the only permanent official of high rank in the department.

No matter who may be the executive head of the department, and regardless of whether the administration is Democratic or Republican, the course of the foreign office is steered by Mr. Adee. All of the diplomatic affairs are managed by him. The complex unwritten code called international law is to him familiar in its every paragraph, and he has all precedents at his fingers' ends. But it goes without saying that such business involves an immense amount of detail, which is where the peculiar and exceptional talent of Miss Hanna comes into play. She takes all that part of the work of Mr. Adee's hands. To him she is like a card catalogue to a librarian—and quite a bit more, in addition.

Incidentally to her duties she helps to prepare many state papers that are in the last degree confidential in character. She is the custodian of many an important secret affecting the welfare of the country; but, from her point of view, this is merely a part of the day's work. She forgets the secret automatically when she leaves the office and goes home.

It has often been said that a woman cannot keep a secret. Perhaps most women cannot. Holding that belief, wrongly or rightly, the department of state prefers not to employ them in confidential capacities. But the rule is broken in Miss Hanna's case. "She knows how to keep a secret, and the government of the United States is willing to bank on her reliability in this regard."

Snake Bite Antidote for Forest Service Men

BEST pocket instruments for treating snake bites, always possibilities among the experiences that befall woodsmen, are to be furnished by the United States forest service to its field employees. The device when not in use is apparently a plain wooden cylinder, about the length of a cigarette and slightly larger in diameter, and has a screw cap on each end. When one of the caps is removed there is disclosed a small insect, with which the bitten part may be quickly slit open. The other end of the cylinder is hollow and contains a supply of permanganate of potash crystals, one of the most effective antidotes for the poison of snakes' fangs. The crystals are placed in the open wound as soon as possible after the bite is received, and become effective by dissolving and entering the blood. Similar instruments have been used regularly by the field force of the geological survey for several years and have in many cases been the means of saving life.

The dangers to which forest workers are subjected of being bitten by poisonous reptiles are forcibly brought out in a recent report to forest service headquarters in Washington from the Shasta national forest in northern California. Three men, sent across the path of a recent fire to fight flames found themselves completely surrounded by scores of rattlesnakes. The men driven from their rocky lairs by the heat. It was necessary for them to turn snake-lighters, since they could not otherwise have escaped. After a six-hour battle all the reptiles were killed and the men were able to return to camp.

The construction of modern bungalows has established a characteristic style of architecture that is especially or typically American. It has often been said that there is no American style of architecture, but such remarks date from earlier writers and should be revised to meet strictly modern conditions. The possibilities of bungalow construction are extremely interesting to men of moderate means as well as to those who are about to build extensively or expensively.

The modest bungalow shown in the accompanying illustrations represents an easily built dwelling that a carpenter with little experience can handle with credit to himself and with satisfaction to the owner. At the same time it possesses considerable artistic merit and there is an air of home comfort about it seldom found, even in more expensive houses. The effect is due in great measure to the sensible profile and the well-balanced proportions of the building. The wide projection of roof, the style and grouping of the windows, the front and side entrances, the pitch of the roof and the

The same principle of economy of space applies to the arrangement of both the lower and upper hallways. In fact, it would be difficult to point to any waste floor space on either floor except where the low roof intersects on the upper floor.

The kitchen in this interesting bungalow will meet with special favor from all good housekeepers. The kitchen proper is only nine feet by thirteen and a half feet, rather a close communion affair when compared with some house kitchens, but it is so compact and so thoroughly well arranged that the small size really is an advantage, because it saves steps. The modern housekeeper does her work quickly by the aid of modern conveniences near at hand instead of traveling back and forth a thousand times to reach inaccessible places.

This little kitchen is lighted by four windows and a glass door which opens on to a splendid rear porch. There is an extra small door on this porch for the benefit of the iceman or rather to benefit the housekeeper by keeping the iceman out of the kitchen. A splendid kitchen sink is placed in front of the rear window and next to the pantry for the purpose of saving steps at dishwashing time.

A great many bungalows are shy on clothes closets. Storage room is always at a premium in a bungalow. But this plan is a little different, from the fact that there are more clothes closets than usual.

A great convenience is the coat cupboard opposite the big front door. A similar convenience is arranged in front of the side entrance which is intended to hold an old-fashioned hat rack with pegs to hang coats and hats and a cupboard with a drop cover to hold rubbers and other common apparel that is only wanted occasionally. Such hat racks usually have an umbrella stand attached at one end. A bungalow like this needs considerable embellishment in the way of climbing vines, shrubbery and flowers. The two entrance porches may be made into bowers of beauty by a little work in selecting and planting a few hardy vines and flowers that bloom at different times during the summer.

The rear porch presents a different problem. This should be made into a kitchen annex. It is large enough for a table and a couple of easy rocking chairs to make it homey. To have it right it is necessary to make the columns square and plumb, then to set panels of fine wire fly screen carefully between the posts to keep out undesirable insects.

Outside of the screen and two or four feet distant therefrom is the proper place for the climbing vines of the broad leaf variety. They should be pruned carefully to develop just enough shade and still admit a ray of sunshine here and there.

Convincing Argument. One year when the youngsters of a certain Illinois village met for the purpose of electing a captain of their baseball team for the coming season it appeared that there was an excessive number of candidates for the post, with more than the usual wrangling. Youngster after youngster presented his qualifications for the post, and the matter was still undecided when the son of the owner of the ball field stood up. He was a small, snub-nosed lad, with a plentiful supply of freckles, but he glanced about him with a dignified air of controlling the situation. "I am going to be captain this year," he announced convincingly, "or else father's old bull is going to be turned into the field." He was elected unanimously.

Make Home Attractive. The best way to keep the boy of the street corners is to make his home so attractive that he would not think of leaving it. This cannot be done by trying to quench his spirits and by throwing a wet blanket on all his fun. What if he and his friends do become very noisy? Better far that your son should be noisy in his own home than on the streets, where he might risk arrest for disorderly conduct or rowdiness. Home is the only place for growing boys in the evening and encouraging the visits of their friends will serve to keep them there.

Serious Matter. "I wouldn't mind people talking so much, if they would only wait until they had something worth while to say," remarked the fretful person. "My friend," said the philosopher, "would you keep nine-tenths of the world's population silent from the cradle to the grave?"

hall and the two large rooms may or may not be closed, or partly closed with draperies, according to the wishes of the housekeeper or the general style of furnishing the house.

By this arrangement of rooms it is possible to place the big chimney between the dining room so that the one chimney can be used for the dining room fireplace and the kitchen range. A third fire in the same chimney is built for the furnace in the basement.

Besides the living room, dining room and kitchen, this floor contains two bedrooms and a bathroom and a very pleasant sun parlor.

At the end of the house is a side entrance built after the manner of the old-fashioned New England stoop, which makes a very artistic and pleasing second entrance. This side entrance is naturally used by the family and intimate friends. It also makes it possible to turn the sun parlor into an office suitable for a farmer or physician without in any way interfering with the main part of the house.

The two bedrooms and bathroom on the first floor are intended for the members of the family, while the three bedrooms and bathroom upstairs make good rooms, or, in case of necessity they are rightly arranged for renting purposes.

As the average American family consists of but four members this plan will be appreciated by thrifty persons who are skimping to pay for their home.

Birds of the White House Enjoy Shower Baths

WASHINGTON.—The feathered tenants of the White House grounds have discovered the delights of the shower bath. And birds of many kinds are taking advantage of the excellent accommodations provided by the rotary lawn sprinkler. The blackbirds, most inquisitive and curious of all birds, first found out about it. It may have been accident that led the bird Columbus in this exploit under the spattering drops of water thrown off by the sprinkler. If so he found it good. Generous, or unable to keep his counsel, he spread the news. Other blackbirds tried it with resulting delight. Then the tale spread of the advance in bird civilization.

And still the wonder grew as bird after bird submitted itself to the pleasure of the bath. The sparrows, who inhabit two whole trees in the White House grounds when they are at home for a night's rest, found it so good that they quarreled for place and turned. Then a few thrushes who live in the precludes acquired the shower-bath habit. And finally the pigeons and doves, slowest to adopt new customs, were converted. So the shower-bath cult has grown among the birds.

There are a half dozen such lawn sprinklers scattered over the White House grounds, with purpose or hope to make the grass grow. They are going all day, scattering drops of rain in an ever revolving circle. As is modest, the birds take their shower baths in secluded spots where the sprinklers are at work.

wide white window and door all harmonize to produce the desired effect. It is a low-cost bungalow because the work is all straight and there are no expensive ornaments.

The floor plans as shown in the two diagrams are especially interesting because the bungalow contains five bedrooms besides the necessary living rooms. This is accounted for by making use of the large attic to secure three bedrooms and an extra bathroom in what would otherwise be waste space.

The heavy front entrance door opens into a small reception hall which divides the living room from the dining room. The wide openings between the ard that meets the demands of packing houses.

A bungalow like this needs consider-

The hog that best meets the demand of the present time is a muscled hog, that will amount of lard, and is marbled with lean, and be market at any desired age.

Practical pig growers, and of market hogs look for good depth, length and width of form, uniformity of type, regardless of breed, color and characteristics.

However, it is essential that select our breeding animals from well-established breed, for progeny has a tendency to degenerate of all the breeds employed crosses and to throw a few years of systematic mating, and perpetuates a type in the breed. This has been illustrated by mating land China and half Chinese sow with a pure-bred Berkshire. The pigs resulting from the red, spotted, speckled and showing that the improved three used in the cross was with it the improvement in markings.

The result was the return spring by the principle of the original scrub type.

When live stock is a factor on the farm make every field hog-tight and sheep-tight; have thoroughly good permanent pastures; grow leguminous crops; build a silo; and keep only pure-bred males. These five things are absolutely essential in the economical production of live stock.

Function of Live Stock.

It is an important function of live stock on the farm to furnish a market for the crops grown, enabling farmers to convert the grasses, forage crops, legumes, and so on, into higher-priced finished products and to return to the soil the plant food taken from it.

Conditions have changed in many ways

Statistics show that there has in all probability been a decline in Bright's disease and other degenerative diseases within the last few years. Certainly the cause is sufficiently high to warrant the individual advancing toward middle life.

The custom of raising the hat to ladies is a relic of the past, and so forth, which make up the creed of the and not improbably have been admonished as to the evil effects of certain favorite indulgences that a single gratification of their weakness is not temperance may seem Spartan virtues to the self-reliant, but are worth cultivating if one would challenge Father Time

The custom of raising the hat when passing a lady or when speaking to one dates back to the days when helmets with visors were worn. A knight, entering a large gathering, invariably the helmet with the visor down, for enemies were likely to be in the throng. When meeting a lady or when a woman's voice was heard, however, as a matter of courtesy and to show that he regarded her as friends and knew that they would take no advantage, every the custom of keeping the hat off during an entire conversation with a lady in the street is dying out, but the rule still holds that should be raised in meeting a lady, should be taken off while conversing with her; each party to the conversation

Some interesting experiments have been made recently with falling bodies. It is stated, for instance, that a car of broken rock could be dumped into the shaft of a mine a mile deep and would fall to a man standing directly underneath.

The reason is that the rock would never reach the bottom, but would slide in the sides of the shaft on timbers that protrude a few inches at intervals—that is, the rock would not fall straight, since these shafts are exactly vertical. In the experiments conducted two round metal balls were dropped into the center of a shaft by burning threads by which they were suspended, so as to give them no lateral motion. It was tried to catch the balls in a box of clay at the bottom of the shaft. None of them were caught. One ball was never found afterward. The other was found in the east wall of the shaft, only a few hundred feet below the surface. The explanation is that the earth is revolving from west to east, which gives the ball an eastward component in its fall, because a particle on the surface of the earth is traveling at a higher rate of speed than one nearer the center, although at the same angular velocity. Do you know the easiest way to keep that brimming, bubbling boy of yours out of mischief? It is a perplexing problem, yet one easily solved. The only way is to turn that superabundance of life and spirits into some useful channel; in short, give the boy something to do. Activity and accomplishment are parts of the boy's nature, and there must be some outlet for this energy. Therefore it is up to every parent to give his boy something to do, something into which he can put his energy and enthusiasm. Give him something to do that falls in with his own plans, not something diametrically opposed to them. Have some regard to his personality and you will see him doing the right thing. Hours formerly spent in mischief will be put in on the woodpile. In the workshop he will make the chips fly, and when he gets out into the great workshop of the world he will continue to make the chips fly. He will do something and be somebody, and the world will hear from him. So, if you would be proud of your boy, fond parent, give him something to do.

All social and business conversation over the telephone could be conducted in five or seven minutes. Yet I have heard people talk an hour straight. Often each one conversing seems

GIGANTIC PLANT BORN OF WAR'S AWFUL DEMANDS

Millions of Dollars' Worth of Explosives to Be Made in Pennsylvania.

GREAT SECRECY MAINTAINED

Mammoth Industry Due to Europe's Demands for War Materials Springs Up—Hazardous Work for Which Men Are Paid Big Wages.

Philadelphia.—In order to fill vast war orders, a mighty high explosive plant is being built in a valley near the small town of Emporium, Cameron county, Pennsylvania. Emporium for years has manufactured powder and dynamite, the explosives being used chiefly for mining and blasting purposes. An explosive company, backed by millions of dollars, has bought up the old powder and dynamite plants in Cameron county and has started the manufacture of gun-cotton and other high explosives in the plant now being brought to completion near Emporium.

The company has huge war orders to fill and to fill them on time it has been necessary for hundreds of imported men to work night and day in building the new explosive plant, which extends over one mile up the valley and which is composed of over 100 separate buildings, the "cotton plant," as the gun-cotton department is called at Emporium, being the most extensive of the new buildings.

At this time the creation of a great industrial plant near the village of Emporium has taxed the rooming capacity of the town far beyond its limits. In order to do the necessary building and to start work in the buildings as soon as completed, over 600 outside men have been brought into Emporium. In order to house the future permanent workers of the new plant, practically a new town will have to be built, either by the company or by local speculators. Many new homes are now under construction and many more are to be built.

Suspicious of Strangers.

On account of the filling of war orders for high explosives the company is suspicious of strangers who visit the new plant. On duty all the time at the plant are 26 armed guards, deputy sheriffs carrying rifles and revolvers, who do not hesitate to hold up strangers on the state highways near the plant and question them as to their business in Emporium. Naturally, the company fears some fanatic might gain entrance to the plant and do mischief which might result in the killing of workers and a delay in filling war orders. The town of Emporium was thrown into a panic a few days ago by the report that an aeroplane was seen hovering over the new gun-cotton plant at night. From all the writer could learn at Emporium the story of the aeroplane was a mere fabrication. Nevertheless, the company leaves no stone unturned to protect its property from strangers who might be bent on making trouble.

Reports have circulated throughout western Pennsylvania and western New York to the effect that there is work at Emporium for hundreds of men. As a result, the little town has been and still is deluged with job seekers, most of whom are fitted in no way for the work the company desires done. Emporium and towns near it have raised many powder and dynamite workers. These men have been given employment in the new plant at greatly increased wages and they are the real backbone of the new industry. Explosive makers are not made over night and the big company is not hiring careless incompetents to do the work of filling its great orders. Carpenters and masons, concrete workers and steamfitters, and various other skilled workers have been in demand at Emporium and the demand has been pretty well filled. There is no place there, however, for the average common laborer who is out of work, for the average common laborer cannot be trusted with the handling of high explosives.

Attracts Many Workers.

The boom at Emporium has attracted many men in search of work, men who would have been hired by the company if they had not lost nerve after reaching the new explosive center. The making of high explosives is a hazardous occupation, and many men who would like to draw the good wages paid by the explosive company have given up their chances of employment at the last moment through fear. There are men, too, who have come to Emporium for work who have left the place because they did not care to work upon war orders. In fact, the creation of the new plant, which will bring great prosperity to the little mountain town of Emporium, has played hob with the consciences of hundreds of people. It is one thing to make powder for firing shots in coal mines and quarries and quite another thing to make high explosives for the use of an army or armies. In Emporium and in the neighboring larger towns of Ridgway and St. Marys the old-fashioned conscience has been discovered even among big business men who will have nothing whatever to do with the new company as long as it manufactures explosives to be used in the slaying of human beings.

While the company is absolutely secretive as to its orders, it is building a plant which has every evidence of being a permanent establishment. Were the war in Europe to stop tomorrow there would be a slump in the making of high explosives in the United States. It is rumored at Emporium, all statements there pertaining to the new explosive plant being rumors, that the great plant being built by the holding company may eventually be taken over by the United States government for the manufacture of explosives to be used by the United States army and navy. The presence of government inspectors at the big plant has given rise to this rumor. Influential men in Emporium, men who are supposed to know a little of the inside workings of the explosive company, are noncommittal as to the government's interest in the plant, stating that it is perfectly natural for government inspectors to inspect the manufacture of explosives at any plant in the country and that it is not at all unlikely that the government is having gun-cotton made for future use, a fact which would account for the presence of the federal inspectors at the plant.

A Gigantic Concern.

The completion of the new explosive plant at Emporium will have been done in record time. The company recently raised the wages of all its workers 50 per cent, promising them an additional 50 per cent raise if the war in Europe continues another year. It is unofficially stated the company has orders from Europe for $35,000,000 worth of explosives. It is estimated the Emporium plant at completion will have cost $5,000,000. The company has other plants, but the new one at Emporium will be its largest. The most modern machinery designed for the making of high explosives has been installed in the plant at great expense. There are huge retorts weighing 21,000 pounds, which have been put into position lately, the biggest retorts ever used in the manufacture of explosives. Everything about the new plant is on a vast scale, a scale which dwarfs the old explosive plants still operating in the Emporium district. Into the closely-guarded, high-fenced

SPORTING KING OF EUROPE

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

While all the other crowned heads of Europe are engaged in wartime pursuits, either directing their armies or else preventing their country from becoming involved in the war, Alfonso, the "sporting king of Europe," is enjoying himself as if there was no such thing as the most stupendous of wars raging at the very border of Spain. The king, who is fond of all outdoor sports, is particularly partial to yachting and boating, and in the recent regatta of the Santander Yacht club he sat at the helm of his own boat and handled it so splendidly that he won second place in the race. The enthusiastic admirers of the royal sportsman lined the course and cheered their monarch to victory.

plant the Pennsylvania railroad has run a track and cars are loaded with explosives inside the enclosure at a great shipping depot. Great quantities of cotton are unloaded at the plant daily. The utmost secrecy is maintained as to the destination of the explosives shipped out from the plant. Box shops are kept busy night and day making boxes to hold the explosives, the boxes being labeled within the plant. There are two construction offices and a general office maintained by the company at the plant. The whole plant is connected by telephone wires. If a guard encounters a suspicious person in the road near the plant, he at once notifies other guards of the presence of the person if the stranger elects to walk along the road the length of the plant. The guard system gives a very warlike appearance to the new plant. A state policeman also patrols the highway along the plant daily, but does not interfere with some of the high-handed holdups made by the deputized guards.

In Ideal Location.

Emporium is an ideal situation for an extensive explosive plant for it is in the heart of the great chemical district in which is made acetate of lime, much of which goes into the manufacture of high explosives. Quite near at hand are some of the wood products factories in which acetate is made. Emporium was formerly a lumber center. The timber in its vicinity was being almost all cut off and with the passing of lumbering the creation of the new explosive plant comes as a great business boom to the residents of the town. Since the town has been overrun with new employees and with men looking for work, the merchants have taken on new life. Emporium today being one of the busiest towns of its size in the United States. Its hotels are crowded to their limit, its boarding houses are overcrowded, and many men have been forced to go out into the country and put up at farmhouses in order to get the shelter necessary for their comfort.

The new plant presents a mile-long scene of great activity, such activity as Emporium never before knew. The buildings are not close to each other as a general rule, for, in case of explosions, the company desires to save as many of its buildings as possible. The recent explosion at Sinnemahoning, not far from Emporium, in which six men were blown to bits, drove terror into the hearts of the new workers at the Emporium plant. Some of the new men left the plant in haste after the Sinnemahoning explosion. The company finds no difficulty at present in filling up its ranks of laborers, there being men on hand at Emporium who do not balk at the most hazardous of jobs. While there are men willing to take their lives in their hands and join the working force at the plant, here are residents of Emporium who fear to drive past the new plant, thinking they may be caught in an explosion. Of course, the business men of the town are boosting hard for the new company which has been the means of trebling their business during the past few months.

Peaceful Little Valley.

It is a peaceful little valley in which the giant explosive plant is situated, a valley, however, which may be shaken by a tremendous explosion some day as might any valley which harbors a gun-cotton factory. Pitched down as it is between mountains, the force of the possible explosion will be somewhat broken before it reaches the town of Emporium. Nevertheless, the Emporium folk, used to the presence of small dynamite factories near their town, do not feel as secure as they once did as the magnitude of the new plant has stirred their imaginations. That is why they are "seeing" airships hovering over the plant at night and looking for spies from Europe when strangers enter the town. It is necessary to make high explosives for armies under the present scheme of civilization and it may as well be made at Emporium, Pa., as any other place in the United States, but the making of it there is being carried on in terror and mystery, which ill accords with modern civilization.

Mother of Russian Cities

KIEV, the wealthiest, most important and largest city in the path of the Teutonic invaders of Russia, is one of the oldest, and most important of Russia's towns. A statement given out by the National Geographic society describes this place, the famed "mother of Russian cities."

Kiev is beautifully situated on the broad Dnieper among a cluster of golden hills. There are other cities in Russia to dispute its claim of being the cradle of the modern empire, but it is the undoubted cradle of orthodoxy, the birthplace of Russia's church, and it is still a first religious center. Holy Kiev is known as the Russian Jerusalem. It is a city of many churches, monasteries, sacred relics and of numerous saints. More than a quarter of a million pilgrims have regularly visited the holy city each year during times of peace. As a place of pilgrimage, Russian Kiev ranks with Mecca, with Jerusalem and with Rome.

It is a prosperous city, a modern and a progressive one. In its newer parts the streets are broad and straight, and are built up with fine homes and public buildings. In the old quarter there are modern buildings from three to six stories high, which is a rare thing in Russia. The Krostchatik is a splendid thoroughfare, cut upon the most approved of western city plans. However, as in Petrograd, the wide, regular streets of the southern metropolis are a heritage from the founders.

Founded in Seventh Century.

Take away the churches, with their turnip, pineapple and pear-shaped domes, take away the pilgrims and the a fruitful region, which, during recent years has been making rapid progress. It is 225 miles southwest of Moscow by rail, and 496 miles by rail northwest of Odessa. That part of the city built along the river runs in flat, while behind, the streets run up and down the hills and through picturesque gullies. Kiev is rated as one of the most beautiful cities in Russia.

Kiev ranks next to Petrograd and Moscow in educational and scientific institutions. Its university is famous and has more than 3,000 students. The city is also the Magdeburg of Russia, the center of the empire's beet-sugar industry. This industry has been steadily gaining in importance. In 1910, 10,000,000 tons of beet sugar were produced in the czar's realm, while just before the war its production had risen to more than 140,000,000 tons. There are innumerable rich refineries in Kiev. Further, there is a considerable manufacture of machinery, chemicals, hardware, paper and tobacco. The conserved traits of Kiev have a European reputation, and during recent years they have been successfully competing with English conserved. Kiev has a population of nearly 500,000, and has been rapidly adding numbers through the last ten years.

Pinsk a Waterway Center.

Pinsk, captured by the invading Germans, is probably the place of greatest promise of all the cities of West Russia. The secret of the advantage of the little town is its wonderful waterway connections. It can send the forest and agricultural products of West Russia, assembled in its warehouses, by water to the north and the Baltic sea or to the south and the Black sea. A line drawn east from Brest-Lit-visiting peasants, and Kiev has little that is typically Russian. With the growth of its industry and commerce, it has adopted the modern city habit, a habit which is the same the world around.

Despite its obtrusive fortress, Kiev is an ancient city. Its fortunes have been intimately connected with the fortunes of Russia. It was founded about the beginning of the seventh century, and its authentic history begins with the arrival of the two Scandinavian knights, Askold and Dyr, who left Novogorod to take possession of it. Kiev early became Christian, and the Greek faith was carried to the rest of the Russians from here. In the eleventh century there are said to have been 400 churches within its walls. The relations between Byzantium and Kiev were close, and much of the Greek culture that has mixed itself with Russian life entered the empire by way of this city.

Kiev has been badly battered in more than 1,000 years of wars and internal disorders, but it has had a saving way of quickly covering up its wounds and beginning afresh with redoubled courage. At one time it was the capital of the Russian state. It was subject for more than two generations to the Mongols, when it fell to the possession of the Lithuanian principality for 250 years for 85 years it was under the sway of Poland, and was finally reunited to Russia in 1686. It is by far the most important city in the Ukraine.

Has Beauty and Industry.

The city lies on the right or west bank of the Dnieper, in the midst of lovs, through Pinsk, marks the lowest depression of the vast, unhealthy marsh tract. In the direction of this line the Pripiet flows east, and numerous tributaries flow to the Pripiet from the north and from the south. Pinsk is joined by a canal to the west with the Bug, and thus with the Vistula and German Danzig. The Orghynky canal to the north connects it with the Niemen, while the Pripiet brings it into connection with the rich lands of Little Russia. The Russian government has been conducting works for the draining of the swamps around Pinsk since 1872, and some 6,000,000 acres have been reclaimed. To the east of Pinsk, however, lies a great stretch of land almost hopelessly water-logged.

While the introduction of railways diverted some of the water-borne traffic of Pinsk, it still enjoys a considerable commerce, and, before the war, there was every promise that its river and canal carried trade would increase enormously. Grains, meats and other farm products; leather, timber and timber products form the bulk of its commerce. The town has a number of factories which turn out matches, leather goods, soap, beer and wood-work. It has a population of about 30,000, more than two-thirds of which is Jewish. The hand of Mars has borne heavily upon the town, and it has been raised to the level of its own swamps several times in the brief passage of invaders.

He Knows It Now.

"That fellow certainly needed a haircut," remarked a customer who had just taken the chair occupied by an individual with a wondrous thatch-covering, in a nearby tonsorial atelier. "That man is the finest musician in New York," said the barber. "Why do musicians wear long hair?" asked the inquisitive customer. "Pshaw, I thought everybody knew that," answered the man in the white coat. "They wear long hair to protect their ears, of course—their sensitive ears. All depends with musicians on the ears, the same as all depends on the eyes with painters. And the ears of musicians are delicate, liable to take cold, liable to aches, inflammations and what not. So they protect them with long hair, and you have no more right to laugh at the mane of a pianist or violinist than at the protective shields and pads of your favorite half-back!"—New York Times.

western hemisphere rendered Rome peculiarly vulnerable to barbarian invasion, and a deterioration of the national character brought about by excesses and conceit in its own powers, made the empire less able to cope with the situation. The division of the empire into two parts, the eastern portion being governed from Byzantium (Constantinople) and the western from Rome, added to the decay of its power. The provinces drained to inaction by taxation levied for army and court, and in disruption through intestine war, could not repel barbarian invasions. The policy at first introduced of conciliating the invader and giving him military command proved futile, and eventually Rome was taken by the Goths, A. D. 408. The invader was bought out at a heavy price, but from that day the might of the Roman empire departed.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD WILL PARTICIPATE IN TEST IN SUPREME COURT.

CASE FROM BAY CITY BANK

Governor Ferris Still Receiving Evidence for Use in Investigating Industrial Home for Boys.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing—The Federal Reserve board, in charge of the new Federal Reserve banks was Friday given permission by the Michigan state supreme court to intervene and file a brief in the quo-warranto proceedings brought by the trust companies of Michigan against the First National bank of Bay City.

When the state conventions of the various political parties are held next spring for the purpose of electing delegates to the national convention, it will be necessary at that time to elect the chairman of the state central committees.

Heretofore the state chairman, secretary and members of the committee have been chosen at the fall conventions following the primaries.

This plan has not always been satisfactory to the other candidates on the state tickets and at the last session of the legislature, a law was passed providing that the election shall take place in the spring.

Michigan state banks and trust companies, 469 state banks and six trust companies, show a gain of $7,705,984.27 in aggregate business since June 13, 1915.

Cross earnings for the same year period amounted to $22,625,507.12, but expenses paid, taxes, interest and losses such as bad debts, etc., forced the net earnings down to $6,119,258.45.

Since the last report of the banking department, June 23, 1915, there has been a total increase in loans among the state banks amounting to $7,851,229.82 with total increases in deposits of $7,854,105.28.

As compared to the report of the state department a year ago the present report shows increases in loans amounting to $26,366,622.35 with total increases in deposits of $19,315,868.11.

The total reserve maintained by Michigan state banks and trust companies on September 2, 1915, was $86,021,713.69 or 21.38 per cent.

Since January 1, 1915, 12 new state banks have been organized, while 14 state banks have increased their capital stock.

Since Governor Ferris began his investigation of the Industrial School for Boys at Lansing several weeks ago he has received letter from all parts of the state volunteering information relative to the methods of punishment at the institution.

Boys who were formerly inmates at the school have described in detail some of the alleged methods of punishment, and while the governor does not place faith in all the statements he is of the opinion that a certain percentage may be accepted as the truth.

Wednesday afternoon a little old woman appeared at the executive office shortly after noon and asked to see the governor.

Although all details of the project are being kept secret, it is known that agents for the allies, having headquarters in Chicago, are endeavoring to place contracts for millions of shrapnel shells in western Michigan machine shop and factory plants.

The orders are generally placed, wherever possible, with no one machine shop or foundry, handling more ushered into the governor's private office. In her hand she carried a package and this bundle she left on the governor's desk.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Keller is still investigating the educational methods in vogue at the institution and is planning to recommend a radical change in the course of study and the method of teaching.

Cross earnings for the same year period amounted to $22,625,507.12, but expenses paid, taxes, interest and losses such as bad debts, etc., forced the net earnings down to $6,119,258.45.

Since the last report of the banking department, June 23, 1915, there has been a total increase in loans among the state banks amounting to $7,851,229.82 with total increases in deposits of $7,854,105.28.

As compared to the report of the state department a year ago the present report shows increases in loans amounting to $26,366,622.35 with total increases in deposits of $19,315,868.11.

The total reserve maintained by Michigan state banks and trust companies on September 2, 1915, was $86,021,713.69 or 21.38 per cent.

Since January 1, 1915, 12 new state banks have been organized, while 14 state banks have increased their capital stock.

Since Governor Ferris began his investigation of the Industrial School for Boys at Lansing several weeks ago he has received letter from all parts of the state volunteering information relative to the methods of punishment at the institution.

Boys who were formerly inmates at the school have described in detail some of the alleged methods of punishment, and while the governor does not place faith in all the statements he is of the opinion that a certain percentage may be accepted as the truth.

Wednesday afternoon a little old woman appeared at the executive office shortly after noon and asked to see the governor.

Although all details of the project are being kept secret, it is known that agents for the allies, having headquarters in Chicago, are endeavoring to place contracts for millions of shrapnel shells in western Michigan machine shop and factory plants.

NO PEACE IN SIGHT SAY ORIENTALS

THAT WARS WILL CONTINUE SO LONG AS TWO CODES OF LAW EXIST.

SPEAK TO PEACE CONGRESS

Chinese Editor Tells of Preparation for War by China to Defend Herself Against the Japanese.

San Francisco—Count Okuma, Japanese premier, and Dr. Ng Poon Chew, a Chinese editor of San Francisco, told delegates to the International Peace congress Tuesday that world peace was yet a fantasy and will be until the militaristic order of things is changed.

In a message to the congress, Count Okuma said there was no hope for peace so long as there exist nations or individuals who believe or exploit themselves as absolutely superior to others, and to assert their superiority to not hesitate to appeal to material forces.

On the floor of the congress to-night Dr. Ng Poon Chew added to Count Okuma's statement. "There will be wars and more wars just so long as there are two codes of laws and two standards of morality, one governing nations, the other individuals," he said.

War, the doctor said, was going to keep right on in one place or another. Even China was preparing. He blamed western militarism, which he said had not only perilled China, but had destroyed her ideals of peace, and he called Japan the disturber of peace of the Orient.

"She is essentially a military nation, and she has in herself the perfect compilation of the militarism of Germany and the navyism of England. Her ambition is boundless.

"With such neighbors what must China do but prepare for defense?" "Before the European war broke out we imported a large number of men, the followers of the 'Prince of Peace' from Europe, the seal of Christendom, into 'heavenly China.' If you are pleased to call us so, to instruct us to turn our plowshares into swords and our pruning hooks into spears."

Selfishness, jingoism, yellow journalism and politicians are chiefly responsible for misunderstandings that have existed between the United States and Japan, said Kiyu Seo Inui, a lecturer of the Japan society of America.

WARNS AGAINST BAD SEED

M. A. C. Advises Farmers That Normal Crop of Beans Can Only Be Restored By Proper Seed.

East Lansing—Michigan farmers, who this season suffered the loss of millions of dollars worth of beans through inroads made on the crop by anthracnose and blight, are being warned by the Michigan Agricultural college to exercise extreme care this fall in selecting seed for next spring's planting.

"It is estimated from rather general observation that the state crop, after being hand picked, will not average more than 30 or 35 per cent of normal, and may be considerably less.

"Michigan bean growers may not, however, appreciate the serious condition in regard to a suitable source of seed beans for planting the 1916 crop. In most cases the home grown beans cannot be recommended for planting, but on account of the high market price of beans, there will no doubt be a tendency to plant badly diseased stock.

Hereditary. The baby had finished his bottle of milk, and the proud mother thought it would be a good time to get him to say "mamma," "papa," and "by-by." The baby simply gurgled. THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or who should more properly be termed counterfeiters, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

Reminded. "When the autumnal frosts touch the foliage with tints of red and yellow against the gray sky, doesn't that inspire you to thought?" "It certainly does. The reds and yellows make me think of the job ahead of me tending the furnace, and the grays make me think of the dust when I sift the ashes."

Waited for Orders. A drill foreman in Cuba cut sent a negro to the top of the mast on one of his drills to straighten out a rope which had slipped off the sheave. Just after the man went up the general foreman came along and talked about the job for half an hour. In the meantime the man on top of the drill was forgotten and after the general foreman left he was discovered still roasting on top of the mast. The foreman called to him: "Aren't you through up there yet?" "Oh, yes, sir, boss."

Has His Own Cage Now. "Squabbling and fighting—there's another very frequent cause of divorce," said Prof. L. Watts Ingersoll in an address before the Cleveland Antidivorce league.

"A man had been haled before a Cleveland magistrate for non-support or some such fact. "But let me see," the justice said, "aren't you the man who was married in a cage of wild, man-eating tigers and leopards?" "Yes, your honor, I'm the man," was the reply.

"Exciting, wasn't it?" said the justice. "Well, your honor," said the man, "it seemed so then. It wouldn't now!"

Good Times. Henry Ford, praising the good times, to New York, said: "The good times are spread the country over. There isn't a spot that hasn't got its share."

"Anybody who can contemplate these times with optimism must have a disposition like the bookkeeper's wife. "The bookkeeper said one day at dinner: "Gee, I wish-I could get up an appetite for once!" "Oh, go on, John," said his wife, impatiently. "What do you want an appetite for? It would only give you more dyppepsia."

Case of Muat. "You're not smoking as much as you used to. Did your doctor order you to stop?" "No, I'm a martyr to fashion."

"What's fashion got to do with smoking?" "If you saw my wife's dressmaker and milliner bills you wouldn't ask such a foolish question."

Someone Responsible. An angry man entered the water office of an eastern city the other day and fiercely announced to the clerk: "Sir, you can send up and take your old gas meter out of my house."

"This is not the gas office." "It isn't?" "No, sir; this is the water office." "Oh, it is! Well, then, send a man up to my house at once and turn the water off! I'm not going to walk a mile and a half for nothing!"

Men Who "Do Things" should be most particular about what they eat. They require nourishment that builds mental and physical energy, the force behind all large undertakings. Grape-Nuts FOOD made of choice whole wheat and malted barley, contains the virgin, strength-giving nutriment of these grains, including the vital mineral salts—Phosphate of Potash, etc. These salts are not found in proper proportion in many ordinary foods but are essential to complete up-building of sinew, brain and nerves. Grape-Nuts is a concentrated cereal ration—partially predigested in its making. When served with cream, it is a self-sufficient food, but is usually eaten as the cereal part of the meal. Those who understand right eating know "There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts. Sold by Grocers everywhere.

After the introduction to Johnson his hand had gone mechanically to his coat pocket. The demon at his ear was whispering "kill! kill!" and his fingers sought and found the weapon. While he was listening with the outward ear to Bainbridge's cheerful reminiscences, the little minutiae were arranging themselves; he saw where Broffin would step, and was careful to mark that none of the bystanders would be in range. He would wait until there could be no possibility of missing; then he would fire—from the pocket.

It was Johnson who broke the spell. While Bainbridge was insisting that Griswold should come in and make a social third at the hotel dinner table, the teller picked up his handbag and mounted the steps. Griswold's brain fell into halves. With one of them he was making excuses to the newspaper man; with the other he saw Broffin stop Johnson and draw him aside.

What the detective was saying was only too plainly evident. Johnson wheeled about to face the sidewalk group, and Griswold could feel in every fiber of him the searching scrutiny to which he was being subjected. When he stole a glance at the pair on the porch, Johnson was shaking his head slowly; and he did it again after a second thoughtful stare. Griswold, missing completely now what Bainbridge was saying, overheard the teller's low-toned rejoinder to the detective's urgings: "It's no use, Mr. Broffin; I'd have to swear positively to it, you know, and I couldn't do that."

No, I don't want to hear your corroborative evidence; it might make me see a resemblance where there is none. Wait until Mr. Galbraith recovers; he's your man."

Griswold hardly knew he made shift to get away from Bainbridge finally; but when it was done, and he was crossing the little triangular park which filled the angle between the business squares and the lake-fronting residence streets, he was sweating profusely, and the departing fear-mania was leaving him weak and tremulous.

Passing the stone-basined fountain in the middle of the park he stopped, jerked the pistol from his pocket, spilled the cartridges from its magazine, and stooped to grapple for a loose stone in the walk-border. With the fountain base for an anvil and the loosed border stone for a hammer he beat the weapon into shapeless inutilty and flung it away.

"God knows whom I shall be tempted to kill, next!" he groaned; and the trembling fit was still unnerving him when he went on to keep the appointment made by Charlotte Farnham.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Dust and Ashes.
A full moon, blood-red from the smoke of forest fires far to the eastward, was rising over the Wahaska hills when Griswold unlatched the gate of the Farnham inclosure and passed quickly up the walk.

Since the summoning note had stressed the urgencies, he was not surprised to find the writer of it awaiting his coming on the vine-shadowed porch. In his welcoming there was a curious mingling of constraint and impatience, and he was moved to marvel. Miss Farnham's outlook upon life, the point of view of the ideally well balanced, was uniformly poised and self-contained, and he was wondering if some fresh entanglement were threatening when she motioned him to a seat and placed her own chair so that the light from the sitting-room windows would leave her in the shadow.

"You had my note?" she began.
"Yes. It came while I was away from the hotel, and the regular trip of the inn brake was the first conveyance I could catch. Am I late?"

Her reply was qualified. "That remains to be seen."
There was a hesitant pause, and then she went on: "Do you know why I sent for you to come?"

"No, not definitely."
"I was hoping you would know; it would make it easier for me. You owe me something, Mr. Griswold."

"I owe you a great deal," he admitted, warmly. "It is hardly putting it too strong to say that you have made some part of my work possible which would otherwise have been impossible."

"I didn't mean that," she dissented, with a touch of cool scorn. "I have no special ambition to figure as a character, however admirable, in a book. Your obligation doesn't lie in the literary field; it is real—and personal. You have done me a great injustice, and it seems to have been carefully promulgated."

The blow was so sudden and so calmly driven home that Griswold gasped.
"An injustice to you?" he protested; but she would not let him go on.
"Yes. At first, I thought it was only a coincidence—your coming to Wahaska—but now I know better. You came here, in goodness knows what spirit of reckless bravado, because it was my home; and you made the decision apparently without any consideration for me; without any thought of the embarrassments and difficulties in which it might involve me."

Truly, the heavens had fallen and the solid earth was reeling! Griswold lay back in the deep lounging chair and fought manfully to retain some little hold upon the anchorings. Could this be his ideal; the woman whom he had set so high above all others in the scale of heroic faultlessness and sublime devotion to principle? And she was so much a slave of the conventional as to be able to tell him coldly that she had recognized him again, and that her chief concern was the embarrassment it was causing her? Before he could gather the words for any adequate rejoinder, she was going on pointedly:

"You have done everything you could to make the involvement complete. You have made friends of my friends, and you came here as a friend of my father. You have drawn Edward Raymer into the entanglement and helped him with the stolen money. In every way you have sought to make it more and more impossible for me to give information against you—and you have succeeded. I can't do it now, without facing a scandal that would never die in a small place like this, and without bringing trouble and ruin upon a family of our nearest friends. And that is why I sent for you today; and why I say you owe me something."

Griswold was sitting up again, and he had recovered some small measure of self-possession.
"I certainly owe you many apologies, at least," he said, ironically. "I have really been doing you a great injustice, Miss Farnham—a very great injustice, though not exactly of the kind you mention. I think I have been misapprehending you from the beginning. How long have you known me as the man who is wanted in New Orleans?"

"A long time; though I tried not to believe it at first. It seemed incredible that the man I had spoken to on the Belle Julie would come here and put me in such a false position."
"Good heavens!" he broke out; "is your position all you have been thinking of? Is that the only reason why you haven't set the dogs on me?"

"It is the chief reason why I couldn't afford to do anything more than I have done. Goodness knows, I have tried in every way to warn you, even to pointing out the man who is shadowing you. To do it, I have had to deceive my father. I have been hoping that you would understand and go away."

"Wait a minute," he commanded. "Let me get it straight! You still believe that the thing I did was a criminal thing?"

"We needn't go into that part of it again," she returned, with a sort of placid impatience. "Once I thought that there might be some way in which you had justified yourself to yourself, but now—"

"That isn't the point," he interrupted roughly. "What I want to know is this: Do you still believe it is a crime?"

"Of course, it is a crime; I know it, you know it, all the world knows it."

Again he sat back and took time to gather up a few of the scattered shards and fragments. When he spoke it was to say: "I think the debt is on the other side, Miss Charlotte; I think you owe me something. You probably won't understand when I say that you have robbed me of a very precious thing—my faith in the ultimate goodness of a good woman. You believe you have always believed—that I am a criminal; and yet you have been weak enough to let expediency seal your lips. I am truer to my code than you are to yours, as you shall see if the day ever comes when I shall be convinced that I did wrong. But that is neither here nor there. You sent for me; what is it that you want me to do?"

"I want to give you one more chance to disappoint the Wahaska gossips," she replied, entirely unmoved, as if seemed, by his harsh arraignment. "Do you know why this man Broffin is still waiting?"

"I can guess. He is taking a long chance on the chapter of accidents."

"Not altogether. Three days ago, Mr. Galbraith had Miss Grierson telegraph to New Orleans for some one of the bank officials. Yesterday I learned that the man who is coming is the teller who waited on me and who gave you the money. As soon as I heard that, I began to try to find you."

Griswold did not tell her that the danger she feared was a danger past. "Go on," he prompted.

"You are no longer safe in Wahaska," she asserted. "The teller can identify you, and the detective will give him the opportunity. That is doubtless what he is waiting for."

"And you would suggest that I make a run for it? Is that why you sent for me?"

"It is. You are tempting fate by staying; and, notwithstanding what you have said, I still insist that you owe me something. There is a fast train west at ten o'clock. If you need ready money—"

Griswold laughed. It had gone beyond the tragic and was fast lapsing into comedy, farce.
"We are each of us appearing in a new role tonight, Miss Farnham," he said, with sardonic humor; "I as the hunted criminal, and you as the equally culpable accessory after the fact. If I run away, what shall be done with the 'swag,' the bulk of which, as you know, is tied up in Raymer's business?"

"I have thought of that," she returned calmly, "and that is another reason why you shouldn't let them take you. Right or wrong, you have incurred a fresh responsibility in your dealings with Mr. Raymer; and Edward, who is perfectly innocent, must be protected in some way."

It was not in human nature to resist the temptation to strike back. "I have told Raymer how he can most successfully underwrite his financial risk," he said, with malice intentional.

"How?"
"By marrying Miss Grierson." He had touched the springs of anger at last.
"That woman!" she broke out. And then: "If you have said that to Edward Raymer, I shall never forgive you as long as I live! It is your affair to secure Edward against loss in the money matter—your own individual responsibility. Mr. Griswold, he accepted the money in good faith, and—"

Again Griswold gave place to the caustic humor and finished for her.
"—And, though it is stolen money, it must not be taken away from him. Once, when I was even more foolish than I am now, I said of you that you would be a fitting heroine in a story in which the hero should be a man who might need to borrow a conscience. It's quite the other way around."

"We needn't quarrel," she said, retreating again behind the barrier of cold reserve. "I suppose I have given you the right to say disagreeable things to me, if you choose to assert it. But we are wasting time which may be very precious. Will you go away, as I have suggested?"

He found his hat and got upon his feet rather unsteadily.
"I don't know, possibly I shall. But in any event, you needn't borrow any more trouble, either on your own account, or on Raymer's. By the merest chance, I met Johnson, the teller you speak of, a few minutes ago at the Winnebago house, and was introduced to him. He didn't know me, then, or later, when Broffin was telling him that he ought to know me. Hence, the matter rests as it did before—between you and Mr. Galbraith."

"Mr. Galbraith?"
"—Yes. That was a danger past, too, a short time ago. I met him, socially, and he didn't recognize me. Afterward, Broffin pointed me out to him, and again he failed to identify me. But the other day, after I had pulled him out of the lake, he remembered. I've been waiting to see what he will do."
"He will do nothing. You saved his life."
Griswold shook his head.
"I am still man enough to hope that he won't let the bit of personal service make him compound a felony."
"Why do you call it that?" she demanded.
"Because, from his point of view, and yours, that is precisely what it is; and it is what you are doing, Miss Farnham. I, the criminal, say this to you. You should have given me up the moment you recognized me. That is your creed, and you should have lived up to it. Since you haven't, you have wronged yourself and have made me the poorer by a thing that—"

"Stop!" she cried, standing up to face him. "Do you mean to tell me that you are ungrateful enough to—"

"No; ingratitude isn't quite the word. I'm just sorry; with the sorrow you have when you look for something that you have a right to expect, and find that it isn't there; that it has never been there; that it isn't anywhere. You have hurt me, and you have hurt yourself; but there is still a chance for you. When I am gone, go to the telephone and call Broffin at the Winnebago house. You can tell him that he will find me at my rooms. Good-by."

He was half way to the foot of Lakeview avenue, striding along moodily with his head down and his hands behind him; when he collided violently with Raymer going in the opposite direction. The shock was so unexpected that Griswold would have been knocked down if the muscular young iron founder had not caught him promptly. At the saving instant came mutual recognition.

"Hello, there!" said Raymer. "You are the very man I've been looking for. Charlotte wants to see you."

"Not now she doesn't," was the rather grim contradiction. "I have just left her."

There was a pause, and then Griswold cut in morosely.
"So you did take my way out of the labor trouble, after all, didn't you?"

Raymer looked away.
"I don't know just how you'd like to have me answer that, Kenneth. How much or how little do you know of what happened?"

"Nothing at all"—shortly.
"Well, it was Margery who wrought the miracle, of course. I don't know, yet, just how she did it; but it was done, and done right."

"And you have asked her to marry you?"
"Suffering Scott! how you do come at a man! Yes, I asked her, if you've got to know."

"Well!" snapped Griswold.
"She—she turned me down, Kenneth; got up and walked all over me. That's a horrible thing to make me say, but it's the truth."

"I don't understand it, Raymer. Was it the No that means No?"
"I don't understand it, either," grumbled the iron founder, with grave magnets. "And, yes, I guess she meant it. But that reminds me. She knew I was looking for you and she gave me a note—let me see, I've got it here somewhere; oh, yes, here it is—gilt monogram and all."

Griswold took the note and pocketed it without comment and without looking at it.
"Were you going to Doctor Bertie's?" he asked.

"I was. Have you any objection?"
"Not the least in the world. It's a good place for you to go just now, and I guess you are the right man for the place. Good-night."

At the next corner where there was an electric light, Griswold stopped and opened the monogrammed envelope. The enclosure was a single sheet of perfumed note paper upon which, without date, address or signature was written the line:
"Mr. Galbraith is better—and he is grateful."

CHAPTER XXX.

Applies of letakhar.

The swinging air light suspended above the street crossing sputtered and died down to a dull red dot of incandescence as Griswold returned Margery's note to his pocket and walked on.

There are crises in which the chief contention looms so large as to leave no room for the ordinary mental processes. Griswold saw no significance in the broken line of Margery's message. The one tremendous revelation—the knowledge that the cross-creating curse had finally fallen upon the woman whose convictions should have saved her—was blotting out all the subtler perceptive faculties; and for the time the struggle with the submerging wave of disappointment and disheartenment was bitter.

He was two squares beyond the crossing of the broken-circuit air light, and was still following the curve of the lakeside boulevard, when he came to the surface of the submerging wave long enough to realize that he had entered Jasper Grierson's portion of the water-front drive. The great house, dark as to its westward gables save for the lighted upper windows marking the sick room and its antechamber, loomed in massive solidity among its sheltering oaks; and the moon, which had now topped the hills and the crimsoning smoke haze, was bathing land and lakescape in a flood of silver light, whitening the pale yellow sands of the beach and etching fantastic leaf-traceries on the gravel of the boulevard driveway.

There was no inclosing fence on the Mercedes border of the boulevard, and under the nearest of the lawn oaks there were rustic park seats, Jasper Grierson's single concession to the public when he had fought for and secured his property right-of-way through the lake's margin. Griswold turned aside and sat down on one of the benches. The disappointment was growing less keen. He was beginning to understand that he had made no allowance for the eternal feminine in the idealized Pheidias—for the feminine and the strally human. But the disheartenment remained. Should he stay and fight it out? Or should he take pity upon the poor prisoner of the conventions and seek to postpone the day of reckoning by flight?

He had not fitted the answer to either of these sharp-pointed queries when a pair of light-fingered hands came from behind to clap themselves upon his eyes, and a well-known voice said, "Guess."

"Margery!" he said, and she laughed with the joyous unconstraint of a happy child and came around to sit by him.

"I was doing time out on the veranda, and I saw you down here in the moonlight, looking as if you had lost something," she explained, adding: "Have you?"

"I don't know; can you lose that which you've never had?" he returned musingly. And then: "Yes; perhaps I did lose something. Don't ask me what it is. I hardly know, myself."

After they have been sobered up and are able to go to work again, the temporary guests are invited to enroll as members, take part in the weekly business meetings and pay such weekly dues as they can afford for the maintenance of the club and its rescue work. The dues vary according to each member's income, from five cents to $1 a week. Extra assessments for the benefit of club members in distress are also collected in varying voluntary contributions.

Certainly Some Voices.
Here is a little story that was told by Congressman John E. Bakwer of California the other night, when the talk topic in the lobby of a hotel took a musical turn:
Some time ago the guests at a reception were discussing the relative merits of several songsters, when one of the party turned to a man named Brown.

"By the way, Brown," said he, "you are something of a singer, are you not?"

"Not so your life!" was the emphatic response of Brown. "I never sang a note that somebody didn't threaten to send in a riot call. You are thinking of my brother."

"Perhaps I am," was the thoughtful rejoinder of the other. "Has he a heavy bass voice?"

"Yes," smiled Brown; "so damped heavy that it makes him bowlegged to carry it."—Philadelphia Telegram.

During courtship an ounce of false lury is equal to a pound of romance.

"You have just come from Doctor Bertie's?" she inquired.
"Yes."
"And Charlotte doesn't want to marry you?"

"Heavens and earth!" he exploded. "Who put the idea into your head that I wanted to marry her?"

"You did"—calmly.
"Then, for pity's sake, let me take it out, quick. If I were the last man on earth, Miss Farnham wouldn't marry me; and if she were the last woman, I think I'd go down myself in the lake!"

The young woman of the many metamorphoses was laughing again, and this time the laugh was a letter-perfect imitation of a schoolgirl giggle.

"My!" she said. "How dreadfully hard she must have sat on you!"

"Please don't laugh," he pleaded; "unless you are the heartless kind of person who would laugh at a funeral. I'm down under the hoofs of the horses, at last, Margery, girl. Before you and laugh in his face. Are you glad—or sorry?"

His answer was the answer of the man who was, for the time being, neither the moralist nor the criminal. With a swift outreaching he drew her to him, crushed her in his arms, covered her face with kisses.

"I am glad—glad that I am your lover," he whispered, passionately. "God, girl! but you are a woman to die for! No, not yet—when she would have slipped out of his arms—believe me, Margery; there has never been anyone else—not for a moment. But I thought it was Raymer, and for your sake and his I could have stepped aside. That is the one decent thing I have done in all this devilish business. Are you listening?"

She had stopped struggling, and was hiding her face on his shoulder. He felt her quick little nod and went on: "Since you know the one decent thing, you must know all the horrible things, too. A dozen times I have been a murderer in heart."

She looked up quickly.
"No, boy, I'll never believe that—never!"

"Wait," he said. "It was there this evening—just a little while ago. Miss Farnham and Galbraith were not the only ones I had to fear; there was another; the teller who got here from New Orleans on the seven-forty-five train. You didn't know about him, did you? He came, and an old newspaper friend of mine was with him. I stumbled upon them on the sidewalk in front of the Winnebago house; and Broffin was there, too. We were introduced, the teller and I, and Broffin was so sure he had me that he got his handkerchiefs out and was opening them."

Margery shuddered and hid her face again. "And I—I didn't know!" she gasped.

"Luck was with me again," he continued. "Johnson didn't remember me; refused to do so even when Broffin stopped him and tried to tell him who I was. I had a pistol in my pocket, and it was aimed at Broffin. If he had made a move to take me, I should certainly have killed him."

She sat up suddenly.
"Give me that pistol, Kenneth—give it to me now!"

"I can't," he confessed, shamefacedly. "When it was all over, I smashed the pistol with a stone and threw it away."

She drew a long breath. "Is that all?" she asked.
"All but one thing; the worst of them all . . . that day in the bank vault—"

The daughter of men buried her face on his shoulder again at that. "Don't!" she begged. "You couldn't help it, boy; I made you do it—meaning to. There! and I said that wild horse should never drag it out of me!"

Again he said, "Wait," and covered the shining head on his shoulder with a caressing hand. "It wasn't love, then, little girl; that's what it breaks my heart to tell you—it was just madness. And it wasn't clean; you've got to know that, too."

She nodded her head violently. "I know," she murmured. "I knew it at the time, and that was what made me cry. But now it's—it's different, isn't it, boy? now you are—"

"You have heard it all, Margery. You know what I thought I was, and what I have turned out to be. I'm afraid I am just a common crook, after all; there doesn't seem to be standing room anywhere else for me. But every living fiber of me, the good and the bad, loves you—loves you!"

"What do I care for anything else?" she flashed back. "You are you, Kenneth, dear; that is all I know, and all I care for. If you had stolen all a dozen men in the world, and had killed a dozen men to make your getaway, it would be just the same. Only—"

"Only what?" he demanded jealously. "It would be just the same to me; but— . . . Oh, boy, dear! It will never, never be the same to you!"

"I—I don't understand," he stammered.
"Some day you will. You call yourself a crook—man, man! there isn't a crooked drop of blood in you! Don't I know? You persuaded yourself that you had a right to take this money; perhaps you did have; I don't say you didn't. When I see anything I want, I reach out and take it, if I can—and I guess most people would, if they are dared. But you are different; you are good. Some day all these dreadful things that have come tagging along after the fact will rise up and gnash their teeth at you and tell you that it was a sin, a crime. And then—oh, boy, dear! then I shall lose you!"

Very gently he took her in his arms again; and for a time all things sensible and tangible, the deserted driveway, and the plashing of the little waves on the sands, the staring moonlight and the stenciled shadows of the oaks, were forgotten in the great soul-healing silence that wrapped them about and enveloped them.

Surely Prize Scarecrow.
An American tourist had been boasting again in the village inn, says London Tit-Bits.

"Talking of scarecrows," he said, with a drawl, "why, my father once put one up, and it frightened the crows so much that not one entered the field again for a year."

He looked triumphantly around his audience. Surely that had settled those country bumpkins.

But he was to meet his match.

"That's nothing," retorted one farmer. "A neighbor of mine once put a scarecrow into his potato patch and it frightened the birds so much that one rascal of a crow who had stolen some potatoes came next day and put them back."

"You have just come from Doctor Bertie's?" she inquired.
"Yes."
"And Charlotte doesn't want to marry you?"

"Heavens and earth!" he exploded. "Who put the idea into your head that I wanted to marry her?"

"You did"—calmly.
"Then, for pity's sake, let me take it out, quick. If I were the last man on earth, Miss Farnham wouldn't marry me; and if she were the last woman, I think I'd go down myself in the lake!"

Old Folks Saved From Suffering

Mrs. Mary A. Dean, Taunton, Mass., in her 87th year, says: "I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley Kidney Pills have proven most beneficial in my case."

Mr. Sam A. Hoover, High Point, N. C., writes: "My kidney trouble was worse at night and I had to get up from five to seven times. Now I do not have to get up at night, and consider myself in a truly normal condition, which I attribute to Foley Kidney Pills, as I have taken nothing else."

Mrs. M. A. Bridges, Robinson, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney ailments for two years. I commenced taking Foley Kidney Pills ten months ago, and though I am 61 years of age, I feel like a 16-year-old girl."

Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening and up-building, and restore normal action to the kidneys and to a disordered and painful bladder. They act quickly and contain no dangerous or harmful drugs.

The occasion was supposed to be Mrs. Cool's birthday, but it had been the preceding day, which caused much merriment, as it was a surprise all around. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in visiting. Luncheon was served, and a number of nice gifts were presented to the hostess in remembrance of the day by Miss Clara Coverdill, Mrs. E. C. Rocker, Mrs. H. C. Hager, Miss Amy Allen, Mrs. L. Truesdell, Mrs. L. S. Cool, Mrs. A. Tillotson and Mrs. A. E. Coverdill.

When You Take Cold

With the average man a cold is a serious matter and should not be trifled with, as some of the most dangerous diseases start with a common cold. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and get rid of your cold as quickly as possible. You are not experimenting when you use this remedy, as it has been in use for many years and has an established reputation. It contains no opium or other narcotic. Obtainable everywhere. -Adv.

Grange Notes

Last Thursday was apple day at the Grange. A fine collection of different varieties of apples was displayed. In response to the roll call, each member told something of interest on the subject of apples. Mrs. Geo. Everett and Mrs. J. A. Gates sang "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree." It had been discovered by apple growers present that no scale had been found on apples this year. The next meeting will be Nov. 4th, when the first and second degrees will be conferred.

LIVONIA CENTER.

The good condition of the roads and the bright sunshine of last Sunday, inspired everyone who had a place to go and a way to go to get out and enjoy the day.

How Catarrh is Contracted

Mothers are sometimes so thoughtless as to neglect the care which their children contract. The inflammation of the mucous membrane, at first acute, becomes chronic, and the child has chronic catarrh, a disease that is seldom cured and that may prove a life's burden. Many persons who have this loathsome disease will remember having had frequent colds at the time it was contracted. A little forethought, a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy judiciously used, and all this trouble might have been avoided. Obtainable everywhere. -Adv.

One of the finest weekly papers that comes to our table is the Ypsilanti Record, a new paper just recently launched in that town. It is full of news and is a dandy from a typographical standpoint. Ypsilantians would give the Record the loyal support that it deserves.

Despondency

When you feel discouraged and despondent do not give up, but take a dose of Chamberlain's Tablets, and you are almost certain to feel all right within a day or two. Despondency is often due to indigestion and biliousness, and which these tablets are especially valuable. Obtainable everywhere. -Adv.
