Automobiles and Men

We live within a short distance of the greatest automobile city in the world.

We are reading a great deal these days about the great loss of life through automobile accidents.

We are all more or less interested in these wonderful machines.

Have you every thought of the similarity between automobiles and men?

The pastor preaches a sermon next Sunday evening in which he will endeavor to set forth this similarity.

You are invited.

The Woman's Literary Club

About thirty-five members were in attendance at the regular meeting of the Woman's Literary Club held at the home of Mrs. C. L. Wilcox last Friday afternoon. In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. J. Travis, the vice president, Mrs. R. E. Cooper, presided. Historical landmarks was the response to roll call. The program in charge of the fifth division, with Mrs. F. A. Dibble leader, was given as follows: Current Events, Mrs. C. H. Bennett. A fine paper, "Michigan of Today," was read by Mrs. J. R. Rauch, after which the club sang in unison, "Michigan My Michigan." An interesting paper, "What is Michigan Doing for her Unfortunates," was presented by Mrs. Luther Peck. The program concluded with two short papers on "Some Interesting Women of Michigan." 1st, "Mrs. Lucy A. Leggett," Miss Hazel Cooner; 2nd, "Mrs. Clara Bates," Mrs. F. A. Dibble. The club adjourned to meet in two weeks with Miss Lina Durfee.

A Close Call

What might have been a very serious accident occurred last Thursday evening at the approach to the first bridge outside of town on the Northville road. Earl Rider and sister, Gladys, were returning from Northville with three friends, when in passing a rig by the bridge their lights failed, and not being able to see the road, they turned out too far and went over the embankment. Fortunately no one was seriously injured. Miss Gladys was the only one hurt, receiving a few bruises and cuts about her face. The machine was not badly damaged.

Tell Them Where You Saw It

Why does a man or woman in buying an advertised article seldom tell the merchant where he or she saw the advertisement? That they did see it—and read it—is proved by the purchase they are making at the time, but the retailer is left to form his own conclusion as to what prompted them to come to his store. Newspapers and magazines everywhere urge buyers to tell where they see the advertisements and they really should do so. If they would the advertiser would know his advertising was paying him. He naturally would then do more advertising, and, just as naturally, he would sell more goods, he would be able to sell even cheaper than he is now doing—and the result would be that the public would benefit—and all from so little trouble as telling the business man where his advertisement was seen. In looking over our advertising columns in this issue, please tell the business man you saw his advertisement in our paper.

State Grange Meet At Ann Arbor Will Be a Big Affair

Plans are being made to make the sessions of the State Grange to be held at Ann Arbor, December 14-15-16-17, the largest and best in the history of the organization. Three sessions of the state grange a day will be held in Hill auditorium. The music rooms of the auditorium will furnish adequate committee rooms, and Harbour gymnasium, near by, will be used for special conference of lecturers and insurance companies, and as social headquarters under auspices of the university dean of women and the State Grange Women's Work committee. The campus guide book is being sent to delegates by the University, who, with other university authorities, is anxious to do everything possible to make the stay of the visitors one of mutual acquaintance and information, while the Civic association and Washburn county patrons stand ready to serve in any capacity. In addition to the usual routine of Grange business, the week will hold many delightful and instructive features. The university will tender the grange a musical program on Tuesday evening, and a reception on Thursday from 8:30 to 9 p. m. Acquaintance music from the Methodist church and School of Music will be organ. Guides will be furnished for the inspection of the university grounds.

Why not make a Christmas present of a magazine? It will last all the year. Phone, Frank W. Beale, 166. Editor

Plans for Big Banquet Well Under Way

Plans for the big banquet to be given by the Plymouth Improvement Association Tuesday evening, December 14, are progressing nicely. The banquet will be held in the dining room of the Methodist church, which will be ample to accommodate the large number who will want to attend. The ladies of the Methodist church will serve the banquet, and the menu, which has been submitted and approved by the committee, includes a most elaborate and substantial layout of good things to eat that will bring a smile of satisfaction to every man. The program committee are not ready to report this week, but they are making a special effort to provide an evening's entertainment that will be filled with pleasure and enjoyment. The tickets are now on sale and can be purchased at Schrader Bros., Brown & Pettingill's, Geo. Richwine's, Karl Hillmer's, Mail office and Gayde Bros. It will be necessary for the committee to know several days in advance of the banquet how many tickets can be disposed of, that the ladies may know how many to prepare for. Get your ticket early and help boost a good cause.

Epworth League Convention

At Ypsilanti on Friday evening, December 3, Dr. George Elliott delivered his famous lecture, "The Debt of Society to the Preacher." On Saturday morning and afternoon the District Epworth League holds its annual convention in the Methodist church at Ypsilanti. Plymouth people are invited.

Class Will Give Carnival

The young people of Mr. Farber's Sunday-school class will give a grand old-fashioned carnival in the Grange hall, Tuesday evening, Dec. 7. All kinds of games and other stunts. Something particularly interesting to the High school people. Everyone come, eat, laugh and grow fat.

Mr. and Mrs. James Barlow entertained several friends at their home last Saturday evening.

Select your Christmas gifts early at Pinckney's Pharmacy, and they will lay them away for you until Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Beardsley and Miss Helen Passage motored down from Rochester, Mich., and were over Sunday guests at E. N. Passage's.

Harmon Gale and family, with Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Selem, spent Thanksgiving with the former's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Gale, on Ann Arbor street.

The Pythian Sisters gave Mrs. Edwin Hutchins and father, Fraser Smith, a pleasant surprise at the former's home last Friday evening. About twenty were present, and after an evening of cards, an oyster supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Warner of Washington, D. C., are the happy parents of a baby girl, born Nov. 23. Mr. and Mrs. Warner were graduates of Plymouth High school in 1907. Mrs. Warner will be remembered as Miss Carrie Baker, who gained her reputation as an excellent teacher in the schools of Elm, Stark and Newburg. After his graduation from the engineering department of the Michigan Agricultural college, Mr. Warner accepted a position with the General Electric company of Schenectady, New York, which he has held for the past three years. Two months of this time was spent at the plant in Pittsfield, Mass., and the remainder of the time in Schenectady, up until August, 1915, when he was promoted from the test department to the patent department at Washington, D. C. In connection with his work, Mr. Warner is attending night school at the National University of Law.

Dogs Kill Sheep

Dogs got into a flock of sheep owned by Frank Rambo, and which were pastured in a field on Chas. Merritt's farm just west of the village, last week Thursday night, and killed eight out of the flock of nine. Saturday night they got into a flock owned by George Durfee west of the village, killing six and wounding six others so badly they had to be killed. Two of the guilty dogs were discovered and shot by Deputy Sheriff George Springer.

Enjoyed a Fine Time

On Tuesday evening of last week the officers and teachers of the Methodist Sunday-school enjoyed a pot-luck supper and business meeting at the home of the superintendent, Evered Jolliffe. Twenty-two were present. A report of the proceedings of the recent state Sunday-school convention, held at Battle Creek, was given by the delegate, Mrs. Evered Jolliffe, and many practical ideas were noted, which it is believed can be put into operation in the local Sunday-school.

The Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school will be held on Friday evening, Dec. 24th. All of the committees have been appointed. Further announcement regarding Christmas will be made a little later.

The postoffice force, mail carriers and wives, to the number of twelve were very pleasantly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Dickerson on East Ann Arbor street last Monday evening. The occasion was a birthday surprise on Mr. Dickerson. A social time was enjoyed and a fine oyster supper was served.

A STORY OF THE GREAT NORTHWEST

SYNOPSIS.

Siletz of Dally's lumber camp directs a stranger to the camp. Walter Sandry introduces himself to John Dally, foreman of the Dillingworth Lumber Co., and makes acquaintance with the camp and the work he has come from the East to superintend and make successful. He writes to his father that he intends to get a handful of the wealth of the ancient timber of the region.

Sandry was enjoying her succinct precision of knowledge and expression. "And you've spent all these years in the midst of this wet-blanket climate?" he smiled. "How in the world did you do it—and keep your cheerfulness?"

"Son," said Ma Dally kindly, "you can knock the country to me, but don't you go down it where the men'll hear you. We've been used to hear the Easterners talk about it. It's a chip on every Oregonian's shoulder. You don't want to queer yourself."

There was a note of genuine good advice in the words and tone, and Sandry got a sudden insight into several little happenings that had puzzled him—for instance, the emphasized wearing of blue shirts in a rain that had soaked his overcoat, and a few remarks about the fact that Oregon rain didn't wet through.

"Thank you, Mrs. Dally," he said earnestly with a sudden feeling of friendship between him and this shrewd, kindly old general of men. He turned presently to the girl busy in the lamp-light, her black head shining a shadow over her eyes.

"By the way," he said, "if you care to you may ride Black Bolt whenever you wish." She nodded quietly, without a flicker of the pleased excitement he had expected in the light of her seeming passionate love of the animal, but a slow, dull flush spread upward in her dark face and her fingers trembled a bit, he fancied, on the reins.

They trembled in all surety the next morning, when, with a bridle of colored and woven horsehair over her arm, she entered the lean-to.

Black Bolt was a gentleman born. Though he was wild as the girl for the free air, the green slopes and the yielding sod under his feet, he stood still while she came up lightly, as a cat springs, with a little soft alighting, and they were gone, down over the smooth slope of the valley toward the lower railway.

There were two interested spectators to that splendid flight—Ma Dally from the cook-hatch porch, who wiped her eyes a bit and said aloud: "Bless the child! Wild—wild! But it's natural," and Walter Sandry standing at the south window of the office.

"Did you like it?" Sandry asked her amusedly that evening as he passed through the eating room.

"Yes," said Siletz with her beaming quietness. "I believe I've found a study," he said to himself as he went on, "a worthy study in human nature."

And Siletz had found a new heaven and a new earth. Something wild within her that had never moved restlessly broke forth, a glorious flower of ecstasy. Day by day thereafter she loosed Black Bolt and sped into fields of Elysium, lost to earth, intoxicated mad with the rush of wind and rain. Always when she came back there was the dusky flush in her face, the sleepy look of intoxication in her eyes. This winter closed in on the lonely camp in the mountains, blue-black and gray with mist and rain and vivid green with the new grass of the coast country.

CHAPTER VI.

Trouble With the Yellow Pines.

Walter Sandry sat in the office at the slough's edge, busy with file and ledger. Two months had passed and something had lifted from him in these two months; a weight had lightened. Where had been a huge disgust, almost intolerable in its intensity, for this rain-soaked land, there had crept in an insidious admiration. Often now he looked down the green little valley, sharply defined between the binding hills and felt the subtle charm of the intimate shadows, the near white dusk and the great trees under whose drooping feathery boughs there lay silence and a sense of refuge.

Suddenly there came to him a clamor of voices, oaths and the throaty tones of strong men in anger. Up from the lower railway a group of loggers came stalking in their splined boots. Behind them Murphy roared excitedly along in the tiny locomotive.

Sandry shut his ledger and stepped outdoors. "What's the matter, Collins?" he asked of a huge man in the lead, a perfect type of the logger of the great Northwest, sun-browned, hard-muscled, wiry of figure and with the endurance and power of a bull elephant. "Matter enough. Them damned Yella Pines's sawed five piles in the railway an' tore up two lengths of track."

Sandry went ahead down the track and found a state of things sufficient to raise the ire of any riverman or timberjack.

Where the track approached the railway it had been torn up bodily, the ties and rails thrown into the narrow slough, as evidenced by a few projecting ends, and the railway itself, a slanting floor of logs some two feet thick supported on a group of graduated piles, sagged in the center where two piles had been cut and piled aside. The lower edge also drooped for the same reason. It had been the work of pure malice, that he saw at a glance.

"Collins," he said as the men came up in a sullen group, "get to work and see if you can raise those sawed supports and pry them back on their bases."

The gang went slowly down the sharp bank of the tidewater slough. "Johnny Eastern," said one softly, "all right, all right. Praise up a railway for my Aunt Maria!"

Sandry stood near, realizing his limitations and raring helplessly watching them lazily testing and punning here and there.

"Hadn't we better just spike 'em on to the sides?" asked Collins, with a droll upward glance.

Sandry was about to reply when John Dally slipped down from the track beside him under the lee of the damaged railway.

"Collins," he said sternly, "you get back to camp and bring tools—peavies, hooks, a couple of chains and some picks. Bring a couple of axes, too. What do you mean by such business?"

"Orders," said Collins with a grin. "You see, Mr. Sandry," said Dally apologetically, "there's no fixin' such timbers as them, not when they've got to carry such weight. They'll have to be taken out entirely an' new ones set."

"I didn't know," returned Sandry frankly; "won't they hold back the work?"

"A day or so, mebber. We can take the fallers out an' put them on with Collins an' the rest. There's enough down to keep the buckers busy a day or two, anyway. We won't lose much."

"Do you think this is the work of the Yellow Pines people, Dally?"

"Sure," said Dally with certainty, "they've done worse than this before now. Cut our best cable two years ago, and twice they've run the dinky on the track into the slough. They're bad actors."

"But what's the use? What do they gain?"

"They want to run us out of the hills. Been at it for ten years. They're just givin' you a hint as the new owner."

"I didn't know," returned Sandry frankly; "won't they hold back the work?"

"A day or so, mebber. We can take the fallers out an' put them on with Collins an' the rest. There's enough down to keep the buckers busy a day or two, anyway. We won't lose much."

"Do you think this is the work of the Yellow Pines people, Dally?"

"But what's the use? What do they gain?"

"They want to run us out of the hills. Been at it for ten years. They're just givin' you a hint as the new owner."

The repairing of the damaged railway was another revelation to the easterner. New timbers were brought down and the slanting floor was thickly underpinned. Then with pick and shovel the men went at the work of digging out the damaged timbers. The work was heavier, more dangerous and disagreeable by reason of the water, four feet deep at low tide, eight at high, which lapped their bases.

Dally put them at the digging from the slope side at low tide; but on the second day he stood long running his blunt fingers through his hair, as was his custom when perplexed.

Sandry had come down from the office and now stood on the track above the railway looking over the wet country below. At the railway's foot the sluggish ribbon of tidewater, sullen and discolored, wound up from the slough. To the north the valley lifted gently toward the camp and the wilderness beyond.

Suddenly, "Dally," he said, "what are you going to do about it?"

"I don't just know. The men can't work in the water, and them piles have got to come out. But there's a way of doin' it, of course."

"Of course," said the easterner, "and why not go at it from above?"

The foreman looked at him inquiringly.

"That left bank of the slough up there is in the form of a ridge. Don't you think we could set a crew at it at low tide and dig it through, turning the water into the field pond? That would leave the slough empty here for the time between high tides. Could you get the timbers out in a few hours?"

Dally's experienced eye had already taken in every detail of the possibilities as Sandry talked.

"That's a good scheme, Mr. Sandry," he said slowly. "I believe it'll work." So it was that the first practical suggestion of the new owner was set into action.

The whole crew of the camp was brought out of the hills and set to work and the damaged railway was repaired as good as new, the break in the west bank filled, the slough running full again and nothing to show for the trouble but the flooded field of tules.

Under Walter Sandry's cool demeanor there was a small glow of satisfaction, a sense of having in a way redeemed himself.

At supper time Siletz, moving between the tables, laughed to herself, softly, and her dark eyes under the little shadow of her parted hair held a sparkling gleam as if she had seen that conflict and enjoyed it.

"Siletz," said the owner, coming in suddenly from the east porch after the men had tramped heavily away to the bunkhouse, "whom do you know outside this camp?"

She was alone in the big spotless kitchen, her sleeves rolled up from her arms, slim and brown with a smooth color that was of the sun's giving.

"Outside the camp?" she asked, turning to him for a moment, stopped in some task of the aftermath of the meal, "why—nobody."

"Don't you ever go down to Toledo?" Sandry was leaning in the doorway, his bright blue eyes upon her.

"Sometimes."

"Have you no friends there? No girl friends?"

She shook her head and he noticed the clean profile, the shape of the small pointed chin, the good forehead conflicting with a vague suggestion of feeling wild things in the velvety eyes.

"Is there no one with whom you associate outside the camp? Think."

Suddenly there passed over her features a quick change. He could liken it to nothing but a wind on the surface of water, just a breath of change.

"Only the preacher," she said with a swift slurring of softness in her voice.

"The preacher?"

"You don't know him. He only comes sometimes. He was here just before you came."

"Who is he?" asked Sandry curiously.

"I don't know. Nobody knows. But I love him."

"The preacher," he said to himself a little later in the bare south room under the dripping eaves. "H'm! The Bible—of course."

With a new interest he picked up the quaint old book of Holy Writ and let it fall open in his hands as it had a way of doing.

Out from that marvelous song of an inspired soul, the Psalms, there looked his answer, as he was to know in another day, the truest answer that could have been given to his question:

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath lifted his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.

With an odd feeling of truth struck from the page he closed the book and laid it gently down on the white cloth.

CHAPTER VII.

Night Wind.

From that time forth Sandry began to take a keener interest in Siletz. For one thing, he noticed that everyone called her Siletz, with a soft slurring of the first syllable, and he found himself using the name which he thought particularly beautiful. It was the name of the reservation to the north and of a small part of the odds and ends of tribes thrown in there by a beneficent government. What was her other name? He had always thought of her as Ma Dally's daughter; and yet, now that he came to think of it, she had never seemed akin to the easy-going, open-minded foreman who was so like the old woman. She was alien to both with her silences, her whimsical speech and her look of hidden fire.

One day in the late fall, when the white mist and the evergreen of the forest had got on his nerves unbearably, Sandry left the office and went to the shed for Black Bolt, only to find him gone. He had meant to ride off the fit of blues. Failing that, he decided to walk it off, and struck up the wet green valley to the north.

Almost immediately the tumbling hills closed in upon him and he found himself in a wilderness of towering firs, of dripping vine maples and mysterious paths lost in the crowding ferns. He was standing at rest in a small glade carpeted with pine needles and surrounded with ferns, when he caught the sound of voices. They came from the dense wall of the woods at his right and unconsciously he listened, tipping his head and straining his ears. Presently a look of blankness spread upon his face.

One of the voices was familiar, soft and slithering with minors, the voice of the girl Siletz, and she was speaking jargon.

"Even as this amazing knowledge was borne in upon him the tangle parted and she stepped out before him. A Siletz squaw followed her, a short brown creature of comely features, clad in brilliant flannel, a towering pyramid of baskets slung to one shoulder. Nosing eagerly at the girl's elbow stepped Black Bolt, while Coosnah brought up the rear. They perceived him instantly and the Indian woman turned away with a few guttural words which Siletz answered gently. But in the moment that she had confronted him, Sandry had seen her face and received a shock.

Beginning just under the lower lip and running downward to the base of the chin there stood out three blue bars, each composed of minutely tattooed designs. Unconsciously she started eyes flew to the dark face of the girl. There, on her lighter skin, tall tales in its truth of outline, was the beginning of the same mark, broken in its inception by some mysterious hand.

For a moment Sandry's head whirled and a sort of nausea came over him. Then he became conscious of her dark eyes, level and calm, upon his face and a thrill that sent the blood pounding in his veins shot through him. The mighty trees around them, the eternal majesty of the hills under the intimate gray sky, the girl in her trim, sensible attire of blue shirt, short skirt and boots, with that sudden revelation of the wild about her, combined to suggest the unreal, the mysterious, the

There, on her lighter skin, tall tales in its truth of outline, was the beginning of the same mark, broken in its inception by some mysterious hand.

For a moment Sandry's head whirled and a sort of nausea came over him. Then he became conscious of her dark eyes, level and calm, upon his face and a thrill that sent the blood pounding in his veins shot through him. The mighty trees around them, the eternal majesty of the hills under the intimate gray sky, the girl in her trim, sensible attire of blue shirt, short skirt and boots, with that sudden revelation of the wild about her, combined to suggest the unreal, the mysterious, the lawless; in a flash he understood her silences, her calm, her occasional stilled modes of speech, and her whimsicalities.

"Why—why—Siletz!" he stammered, following out the train of his illumined thought, "what are you? Who are you? A star in the dusk! The night wind in the pines!"

In the flush of the pregnant moment he laid his hand on her bare arm under the rolled-up sleeve—her soft arm, wet with the mist—closing his fingers strongly upon it. For the enchanted present she was romance and mystery, and Sandry was beneath its spell.

But Siletz looked from his face down to the hand upon her arm. The blood rose slowly in her dusky cheeks, and when she raised her eyes again they were dim with the same look of intoxication as had come with the madness of the rushing wind on Black Bolt's back.

"Yes," she said dreamily, "I am the Night Wind. That's what they call me—my friends the Indians. But how did you know?"

"I didn't. I just heard the words in my heart. They are right."

He did not remove his hand, and silence fell between them while they stood gazing into each other's eyes. Sandry saw the heavy look in hers, the dull fire that bespoke a very drunkenness of emotion, and in another moment he had lost his head. Without thought, as simply as the first runner of those forests took what he wanted, he leaned forward and kissed her, softly, lightly, on her smooth cheek. Her eyes darkened perceptibly and she covered her face with her hands.

In a sudden great embarrassment Sandry stood silent beside her, his heart pounding and his manhood already upbraiding him. He searched his clearing brain for some word of apology, some contrite expression, but found none, and the next moment could not in any case have spoken it; for Siletz lifted her face and it was glorified. The intoxication had drifted away from her features, leaving them bare in the utter simplicity of the primeval woman, and there was in them a white fire of self-surrender.

Without a word—and Sandry knew instinctively that she could not speak—she turned to Black Bolt, threw the reins over his head, crouched beside him on a little lift of moss and leaped upward. He watched her land on the horse's blanketed back with that inevitable grace of the wild, turn and ride swiftly down one of the mysterious paths whose nodding ferns closed after her. Coosnah, following with a little rolling of all his huge muscles, cast a lowering glance backward at the man.

The incident had taken all the helplessness out of the day and the wildness, and Sandry wended his way slowly back to camp, arriving just in time for supper. Siletz touched the table in her usual silence, but when she reached him she was constrainedly aloof, as if fearing to break a word or word of touch. Once he looked up at her, striving for recognition, but she avoided his eyes and to save his life he could not repress the wild thrill that had betrayed him in the hills, though he was conscious of anger flushing hot upon it. He suffered a very real humiliation in that he had so far forgotten his training, his sense of the fitness of things, as to kiss this wild mountain creature. His ancestral blood rose up in condemnation.

The next few days were crowded full to overflowing with work and he laid aside all personal perplexities. The first raft of logs, a great cigar-shaped monster, laced together in all its length and breadth with giant chains, lay in the backwater at Toledo ready for its voyage into the world beyond.

A crew of river drivers was picked from among the men and all was in readiness save for a draft of directions which was to be given, along with the raft, into the custody of Captain Grafz of the long dun-colored steamer that would stand in across the bar at Newport on the twenty-sixth.

Sandry thrilled with contemplation of the great, reddish-brown door, slightly raised in the center, sloping gently to the sides. Its building had been a thing of wonder to him. It would in all probability scatter to the ends of the earth, and its worth ran well into five figures. He watched its departure, an impressive matter of sluggish rising with the tide, of almost imperceptible motion and then of majestic speed that carried it westward toward the ocean. Then he turned back to his logging camp with a heightened joy in the new life.

That night he wrote to the white-haired gentleman who was then going to bed under silken covers with the aid of the faithful Higgins, and his letter was long and hope, that light of awakening strength and ability which, beginning to stir his heart to its foundation.

"Ah," said Mr. Wilton Sandry when he got that letter, looking down on the pageant of Riverside drive in its winter livery, "what a boy he is! What a son! The metal is beginning to ring."

Nourish Your Nerves. People of a nervous disposition need a nourishing, nerve building diet. Eggs served in various ways, milk, cereals, etc., should be a standard part of the diet. Be careful of a lavish use of tomatoes or red beets. Supply your table with quantities of fruit and fresh vegetables and vary your bread or biscuit with oatmeal. Should you have a tendency to obesity be careful to avoid an excess of starch and sweets. Consult your physician about any special tendency that you know your family or any member of it to possess and, guided by his advice, eliminate such foods as might be harmful. In families where there is no special disposition or hereditary tendency to be considered let common sense guide you, read up on dietetics and keep your table free from unwholesome combinations and indigestible foods. You will find this study an interesting one, but beware of fads. A diet must be varied to be wholesome, and it is better to use spices and condiments in moderation than to let your table lack flavor from overzeal in leaving out everything that is not pre-eminently wholesome.

Kaiser Man of Many Titles. The Kaiser is a man with many titles, being an emperor, a king, eighteen times a duke, twice a grand duke, ten times a count, fifteen times a seigneur, three times a margrave—these add up to fifty, and he is one or two other things, count-prince, and so forth, making his titles at least fifty-two.

EASY TO DYE AT HOME.

NO NEED TO SEND MATERIALS TO PROFESSIONALS.

Housewife May Save Much Expense and Achieve Equally Good Results—by Doing the Work Herself—Some Useful Hints.

In almost every household in the spring and fall there are articles for household and personal use that must be sent to the dyers. These can be done equally well at home.

Now that one dye can be bought which will answer alike for silk, cotton and woolen fabrics, success is well-nigh assured if the directions on the packet are strictly followed. These are usually explicit, and experienced dyers need no other; but the amateur is apt to strike snags despite directions. She may not think it necessary to clean the article to be dyed, but oil or grease of any kind kills dye, so that any garment known to be greasy at all should be soaked in a warm solution of ammonia and water for half an hour, then thoroughly rinsed in hot water before going into the dye pot. Cotton goods should be washed in hot soapuds and given a thorough rinsing. To leave soap in will interfere with the dye.

When dyeing cotton or mixed goods they should be allowed to become cold in the dye bath. Dyes set very slowly in these fabrics, so the cooling process is necessary to success. Woolens, on the contrary, absorb the dye quicker, and may be rinsed while hot. Closely woven woolen goods should be dyed a little longer than those loosely woven.

Woolen goods of any weave should never be allowed to boil fast. The simmering will bring the best results. If boiled violently, the tiny hairs that cause shrinkage, besides making the material close and board-like.

The fiber of linen, being harder and tougher than that of wool, silk or mixed goods, requires longer and faster boiling. Linen should be allowed to boil until the desired shade is obtained. This will be longer than in the case of the other materials mentioned.

Silks are so often weighted with fillers that on dyeing them they will fall apart. It has been proved that sixteen ounces of silk can, with effort, be made to weigh double that amount. Good silks, satins and ribbons will dye satisfactorily, but it is a waste of time to bother with cheap silks. It will be better to wash them through and use for linings or trimmings when making over garments.

Two different articles may be dyed to match if they are the same color before being dyed. If otherwise, it is practically impossible to dye them to match, but they will dye black.

The home dyer should guard against over-dyeing. Use only the quantity given in the directions.

Never wring dyed articles too firmly, and always dry in the shade. The drying process goes on until the article is dry, consequently any portions exposed to the sun will dry quickly and the result will be a streaky garment.

Luncheon Dish. Tasty, and easily prepared, is this dish. Wash, then pare and slice thin, three medium-sized white potatoes, two large onions, two tomatoes or a cupful of canned ones. Put this in an agate kettle, add two tablespoonfuls of rice and one quart and one pint of cold water; simmer for one hour, season with salt and pepper, two tablespoonfuls of minced parsley and a cupful of good, rich gravy, or one may substitute two tablespoonfuls of beef extract. Stir until dissolved. Now drop in one tablespoonful of pea nut butter and stew for five minutes longer serve hot, with croutons or thin brown buttered toast.

Olive Sauce. Allow as many olives as it is desired to use to remain in a basin of cold water for 30 minutes, meanwhile putting a small slice of onion in a saucepan with a few tablespoonfuls of salad oil and cooking until the onion commences to brown. Now add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until smooth. Pour in a pint of rich stock and remove the pan to the side of the fire to simmer gently. Stone the olives and add them to the sauce seasoning with salt and pepper and simmer for 20 minutes longer. Skim well and just before serving squeeze in the juice of a lemon. If a thick sauce is desired, use less flour.

Canning Pays. Canning at home, where fruits and vegetables are grown, is an attractive business which may be started in a small way, and developed into something bigger. It is essentially a farm industry and every member of the family may have a part, either in producing the crops or in the canning operations. The boys and girls of the home generally take an interest in canning and when given a chance to make some money, for themselves, they will develop habits of industry and thrift.

Sweet Gherkins. Fill a tub with salt water strong enough to bear an egg. Put gherkins and cress a finger long in this and let them stand nine days. Take them out and wash them by letting them stand in fresh cold water for several hours; then spread them out on a folded tablecloth to free them of moisture.

Meat Roast. Two pounds stew beef, one onion, one egg, two slices of fat pork, four slices dried bread, salt and pepper. Grind beef through meat chopper, grind onion, add egg; mix together in loaf, put the pork on top, salt and pepper. Bake one-half hour.

All the Good From Potatoes. Before baking potatoes, rub them dry and grease. This causes the outer skin to peel off very thin, thus saving the most nourishing part of the potato.

GETTING A START

By
NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, Jr.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MY NEIGHBOR'S KEEPER.

Don't presume to judge the world until you are elected. Inside your own home-house and yard you have a good-sized job on your hands.

Don't disinfect your town until you have disinfected your own house.

Don't preach moderation immoderately.

Don't attempt to tell the other fellow what to do until you have learned how to do it yourself.

Don't worry about your neighbor's actions until you have harnessed your own and know how to drive them.

Don't chase the racing automobilist at his unlawful speed; meet him head on and make him stop.

Now your own lawn before you condemn the man next door for letting his grass grow.

Don't find fault with the storekeeper for underpaying his clerks until you are willing to pay a fair price for what you buy.

Don't kick against the slow trolley and then rush out of your yard after it has passed and make it wait for you.

Don't ask the newspaper to print what you would not publish if you owned it.

Don't expect the minister to be fearless when, if he expressed his thoughts, you would be the first to demand his resignation.

Don't ask your employer to raise your pay unless you would increase his if positions were reversed.

Don't borrow money of the man to whom you would not lend.

Don't kick at your neighbor's dust until you have watered your own.

When it rains, let it rain, until you are elected clerk of the weather.

Don't sit in the sun and growl at the heat.

Don't expect to keep warm by an empty stove, or cool in a kitchen.

Don't leave your raincoat and umbrella at home and find fault with the weather because you get wet.

Don't expect anybody else to attend to your business. He won't.

Don't lurch on a cup of coffee and a piece of mince pie and expect to feel like doing business.

Don't bolt your breakfast, run for the train, and condemn the doctor and his medicine.

Don't blame your neighbor for doing what you are doing, and don't expect him to help if you won't help yourself.

When you haven't anything to say, don't say it.

When you don't know what you are talking about, shut up.

Don't help the fellow who doesn't need your assistance.

Don't keep away from the primaries, refuse to vote when it rains, and talk against the office holders when the sun shines.

Put yourself in the other fellow's place before you criticize him.

I stood on a steamboat wharf when the wind was blowing forty miles an hour. A dozen inconsiderate yachting youngsters had moored their cat and "bitten" boats in the channel. A big steamer had to make the dock, and she was hard to handle without strong steering way. The captain was a veteran, but he had to maneuver with the wind and the tide against him. A dozen yachtsmen were on the dock, and each one of them told the others what the captain ought to do, while some of them called him a fool and said he was not fit to handle a canal boat. The captain was on the bridge, the critics were on the wharf, and not one of these amateur navigators could have docked an empty mud scow when the water was as calm as a mud puddle and the wind as blowless as the timid breeze of an electric fan.

Don't be a fool unless you have to be, and perhaps you don't have to be.

LEARN TO DO BY DOING.

Theory and book learning are not of secondary importance. They occupy major positions in every form of education. Without them experience would not be well founded.

Thinking and planning begin in theory, but are valuable only if they go beyond theory and enter practice.

The dreamer, even though he may possess marvelous talents, remains a theorist, and little that he does accomplishes anything. He begins and does not finish.

The best way to learn to do a thing is to do it, or to try to do it, even though the first result may be unfeathered and near worthless.

The pencil draft, born in the mind, be taken out on a leash at once becomes justified.

The only advice the report offers the man who is going to take up a hobby for the benefit of the resulting exercise is to choose one that permits of its being followed the year round, rather than one that depends upon seasons of the year. For that reason the amateur gardener or chicken fancier is far more fortunate in his choice than the amateur geologist, botanist or ornithologist. The latter must wait on the seasons and must find favorable locations for indulging their hobbies, while the former have year-round pastimes.

Unfavorable Comparison.

Two peevish old dames were sent over from England to inspect a Red Cross hospital in France. They came back and reported that a black cat was kept as a pet in the institute. The head of the hospital was written to about it, and replied:

"The black cat is the Tommie's mascot, and they're fond of her—a lot fonder than they were of the two old cats you sent out here to inspect us."

KEEP RECREATION IN SIGHT

When One Exercises It Should Be a Matter of Principle That It is Really Play.

When you exercise, play. That is one of the points most strongly urged to the attention of the public in recently published Public Health reports.

No matter whether you are walking, gardening, exercising in a gymnasium or playing golf, keep your exercise free from the spirit of drudgery and make it all recreation. Make it an enjoyable as anything you may do throughout the entire day. If you don't, much of the good that it might do you is lost. The very best thing a man can do," says the report, "is to make a hobby of his exercise. No matter how poor the hobby, if it only induces outdoor exercise it is perfectly justifiable."

"The woman who is obliged to take her baby out for a two hours' airing every day is far more fortunate than she often realizes. And the baby being taken, the poodle dog that must Punctuation System Said to Have Been First Employed by Famous Greek Philosopher.

The punctuation marks which separate and conclude sentences and thereby simplify the perusal of what is written are said to have been first employed by Aristophanes. The system devised by him was not, however, generally known, and soon fell again into complete oblivion. It was nearly a thousand years before a similar attempt was again made. It was in the time of Charles the Great that punctuation marks were again introduced into writing at the instigation of the distinguished linguist Warnefried and Alcuin. These signs also, however, fell into disuse. The present system of punctuation, now used in all modern languages with but insignificant variations, was introduced in the first half of the fifteenth century by a Venetian printer named Aldus Manutius. He is the real father of our punctuation marks, of the full stop, comma, semicolon, colon, question and exclamation marks, apostrophe and inverted commas. Manutius' system was adopted later by all printers until it finally established itself throughout Europe.

Christmas Presents Any Boy Can Make

By A. NEELY HALL

HERE are a few contrivances for the kitchen and pantry which will be appreciated by mother if made by her handy boy. Nothing better could be selected for her Christmas gift.

The tool rack shown in Fig. 1 is most convenient when hung directly over the kitchen worktable. The length of the hook strip will be determined by the space in which it is to hang, and by the number of forks, spoons and other tools which it will be required to hold.

The appearance of the rack will be improved by planing a bevel on the face edges of the hook strip and the end blocks, as in the illustration. Use two holes through both covers and leaves each side of the center of the rack. Then pull a piece of narrow ribbon through the holes and tie a small bow. Fasten pieces of ribbon to the lower points of the heart, both front and back, by which to tie the little case shut when not in use. Mark brass screws or galvanized nails for hooks, and screw a screw eye into the top edge of each end block to hang the rack by.

The bottle rack in Fig. 2 will hold your mother's bottles of extract, catch-up, sauces and dressings, and eliminate the possibility of upsetting bottles when reaching for the one wanted.

Narrow strips should be used for the division strips of the rack, to save space and make the rack light in weight. Laths planed smooth on all sides will do for the side and center strips, also for the cross strips. The ends must be about three inches wide.

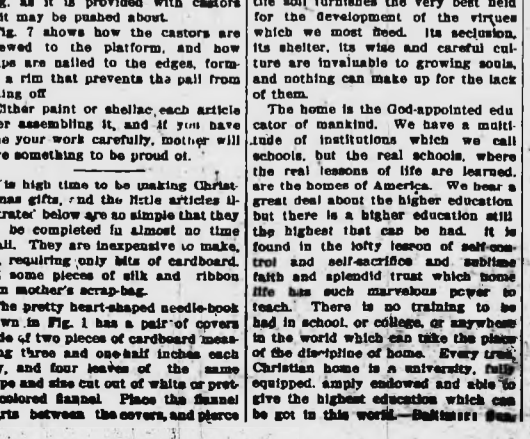

The swinging shelf shown in Fig. 4 is an excellent provision for the sugar and salt crocks, as it makes it possible to swing these out from between the pantry shelves, then back into place after using, without lifting them.

Fig. 5 shows how the swinging bracket is made of a strip two inches wide and ten inches long (A), with a block two inches wide and six inches long nailed to each side of it at one end (B), and how to the top of this bracket a cake tin is screwed or nailed on which to set the crock. Hinge the end of the bracket strip A to one end of the shelf supports, or else set in an upright piece between two shelves to screw the hinge to. Use a medium-sized T bing for this bracket.

In the same way that the swinging shelf eliminates the lifting of the sugar crock, the platform shown in Fig. 6 saves the lifting of the scrub pail from place to place while scrub-

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as the kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uræmic poisoning occurs, and the person dies and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Auric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his medical opinion, without charge—absolutely free. This "Auric" of Dr. Pierce is 37 times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system, and hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Auric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Auric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women.

Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Auric Tablets for the kidneys and backache.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, makes women well. No alcohol. Sold by tablets or liquid.

Enjoy Your Work and Your Play
 "I have given Foley Cathartic Tablets a thorough trial, and from the results obtained, I can honestly recommend them as a mild but sure laxative. They work without griping."
 Wm. O. E. Bielek, Hancock, Mich.
 Sometimes you feel so heavy and stuffed up, so uncomfortable and bilious-like, with a mean headache, a nervous unrest and thick furry tongue. Your system is clogged, your bowels are not eliminating freely, your vital resistance is lowered and your system becomes more susceptible to the inroads of disease.
 Foley Cathartic Tablets relieve this condition over night, with no unpleasantness and no costive after-effects. They are the ideal laxative and those who depend upon them for results are the healthy, happy, care-free people who have no headaches, no business, and who can enjoy both the work and the pleasure that comes into their lives. Your druggist sells them.
Good for Constipation
 Chamberlain's Tablets are excellent for constipation. They are pleasant to take and mild and gentle in effect. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

Farmers here is your chance. The agricultural college will come right here to Plymouth if you want it. R. J. Baldwin, superintendent of the agricultural extension department at East Lansing, will hold a school some time during the winter, providing there are enough farmers who want it. At least 50 names are required to get the school. They are not very anxious to hold the school in Plymouth, as the school here last year was very poorly attended, the average attendance being only 14. It is hoped that more people will take advantage of the school this year. Remember that the cost is only fifty cents for the week. This amount to cover all local expenses. Application may be made by calling E. Harshbarger before Dec. 9. This school is open to all farmers or those interested in farming.

Costumes for Skating Season

Skating, like all other outdoor sports, happily finds its number of devotees increasing from year to year. The interest in the pastime for those who skate and to those who are simply onlookers increases in proportion to the variety and fitness which is evidenced in skating costumes. The skating field makes a background for color which the sport-loving have not failed to appreciate, and the adoption of beautiful colors for skating clothes will make it as fascinating as the dancing floor.

Head wraps, with muff to match, are among the most fetching of novelties. They are soft turbans, with their velvet drapery extended into a scarf or muffler. The scarf portion is lined with silk and usually tapers to a point which terminates in a tassel or a ball of fur or some other ornament that will serve to weight it a little. The muff to match is small and usually barrel shaped. Besides those of brilliant colors all white caps and mufflers and magenta sets, like those shown above, look well on the ice. They are good examples of current styles, and their usefulness does not begin and end with the skating field. It covers all the outdoor recreations of the wintertime. They are made of knitted yarns, and similar ones are made in an endless variety of color and color combinations.

Pretty Luxuries of Dress for Gifts

It is the privilege of women to wear all sorts of pretty accessories of dress, and there are all sorts of airy and alluring fabrics that inspire them to make these luxuries of apparel. Laces and ribbons, nets and metallic gauzes, and other transparent materials are translated into neckwear, headwear, and other finery that bespeaks the dainty woman. Interest in these things is more keen than ever when the holidays get near. Anything that promises an easily made and pretty gift is welcome.

The breakfast, or boudoir cap, has more than prettiness to recommend it. It is a cheerful and most becoming bit of finery that any woman may own, and is always an acceptable gift, like a pretty pair of slippers. Besides the boudoir cap there are those for traveling and those that are worn at night, and the most essential cap of all—the dusting cap. This last one is made of washable cotton flannel with a ruffle of the material. Traveling caps are made of washable silk or of dark colors not easily soiled. They are usually gathered over elastic cord or filled on a ribbon run through a casing about the edge of the crown. The ends are drawn through a slash in the casing and tied in a bow. This allows the cap to be flattened out when it is pressed.

The picture shows a group of three breakfast or boudoir caps. Two of them are of lace and one of net and lace combined. A wide net top lace forms the body of the first cap. The embroidered edge is turned back about the face and the straight edge is gathered into a narrow lace insertion. This insertion borders a circular piece at the back, forming the crown. The lace is extended into a tab, which hangs under a bow of soft satin ribbon, at the back. The second cap is very simply constructed of a band of shadow lace edged with val, and a puffed crown of net with a rill of net across the back at the neck. The lace band is extended into tabs and the net crown is plaited about the edge and sewed into the band. It is trimmed with little bows and flowers of narrow satin ribbon.

The third cap is of lace scalloped on both edges, such as is made for corset covers. The scalloped edge about the face is turned back, and satin ribbon is threaded through the laces woven in the lace. The fullness at the back is gathered over an elastic cord. Refreshing Ribbons. Ribbons and silks can usually be made to look fresher if they are washed in soapy water, dried and ironed. If they are desired stiff they should be ironed while wet. If they are to be soft they must first be dried, and any wrinkles which refuse to iron out without water can be moistened with a sponge wrung dry. Pockets Are Large. The craze for pockets does not seem likely to die out. In fact, the newest models created by famous Paris dress-makers exploit pockets which are large, unexpected, and numerous.

Capes Are Again in Fashion. Two writers ago at the home show saw the first return of the shoulder cape. It was a lovely polka-dot white mink, with a dear little round muff, hardly big enough to hold the hands, and was worn by a woman who stood for the last thing in fashionable clothes. Here and there since there have been tentative models seen, but it is only this autumn that the fashion of polka-dot capes that hang anywhere from just below the shoulder to the waist have appeared seriously in fashion. There are now delightful models from the French designers, but what is more to the point, they have already been taken up by women of fashion.—New York Herald.

When you have a silk dress that cannot be rolled in a damp cloth or otherwise dampened, and you wish to press it out, try hanging it in a damp place for a few hours and it will absorb enough moisture to press nicely.

MUST KNOW SIGNALS

IMPORTANT PART OF THE WORK OF A RAILROADER.

English Magazine Tells of Methods Which Are in Use in That Country to Make Men Expert in That Respect.

One of the most important parts of a railroad driver's technical education is that of acquiring a sound knowledge of the roads and signals of the district in which he is required to work, says London Tit-Bits. He must know all the gradients so as to work his engine accordingly, be conversant with speed restrictions at junctions, round curves, and at important stations, and, above all, be able to read the signals promptly and correctly. On long runs, over busy portions of the line, some hundreds of signals are encountered, and it is imperative for public safety that no error be made with them. In the eyes of his officials it is the greatest possible offense for a driver to mistake or overlook a signal, and when such occurs the delinquent is punished either by a fine, reduction in rank, or dismissal, according to the importance of the signal concerned and the result of not acting on it. If, during fog or falling snow, a driver is doubtful about a signal, he is required—according to the position and nature of same—to pull up, or run at caution until he observes the condition of the following one.

Some companies keep a register, in a book or on foolscap, of all the roads that their drivers are acquainted with individually, whilst others resort to a card-index system, having a separate card for each man, the whole number being arranged alphabetically so as to be readily accessible. They are headed, "I, hereby certify that I have a thorough knowledge of the roads and signals between — and —" whilst below this they are partitioned off into several squares. The various destinations, with routes, are entered separately in the squares, and the driver signs his name, with date, underneath each place he is acquainted with. The men, as a rule, obtain a general knowledge of the signals of their respective localities during the period they are engaged as firemen. Often, however, when promoted to drivers, they do not feel sufficiently conversant with them in some part to undertake the responsibility of running trains there offhand under their own charge. It is customary then to supply them with an engine pass, and they travel as third man on engines engaged working to and fro in the neighborhood concerned until they have overcome their deficiency and have confidence in signing their names as possessing the required knowledge. Men, transferred from one district to another also learn the roads and signals in this manner.

NEW METHOD OF LUBRICATION Is Said to Do Away With Much Trouble Which Has Hitherto Been Experienced. Considerable trouble was experienced in lubricating crosshead pins with oil, which resulted in adopting other means of lubrication, says Popular Mechanics. Pin grease was used successfully on the side and main rods of the locomotives for lubricating the brass and crankpin, and the idea embodied in the sketch was worked out, which clearly illustrates the method. The grease is put into the cavity, and the plug forces the grease into the slots cut in the bearing surface of the pin. In order to overcome delays in removing bent taper pins, which were used to prevent the nuts from working off the crosshead pin, a spring ring was devised. The sketch shows the method of its application. To remove the device, insert a chisel and pry the ends out of the holes.

Does Away With the Weeds

DOES AWAY WITH THE WEEDS

Mechanical Sprinkler Accomplishes the Work With the Utmost Thoroughness and Speed.

The accompanying illustration shows how certain railroad and trolley companies are resorting to mechanical sprinklers for eliminating weeds and grasses from the roadbed. Hand-weeding has three strong objections: It is expensive, it does not destroy the roots, and hence is only temporary in its effects, and it disturbs the road surface, inviting dust and washout. Burning the weeds and grasses is also inefficient, for besides its expense, it stimulates the weeds, and is a danger to surrounding property and to the right of way. With the aid of the equipment in the illustration, however, a distance of 18 to 20 miles, and a width of 12 feet can be sprayed with the solution at an operating speed of 15 miles an hour.—Popular Science and World's Advance.

BROTHERS IN ODD ACCIDENT

When Hit, One is Pitched to One Locomotive and the Other to Second Train.

Ernest Laura, thirty-four years old, and Albert Laura, twenty-two, brothers of Springfield, are expected to die as a result of an unusual accident which occurred at a point near London, where the tracks of the Big Four and Pennsylvania railroads run parallel within only a few feet of each other.

The brothers, who were riding in a carriage, attempted, it is thought, to cross the tracks ahead of a Pennsylvania train, when a Big Four locomotive struck the vehicle. Ernest was hurled to the pilot of the Big Four engine and his brother was thrown upon the pilot of the Pennsylvania locomotive. The engineers knew nothing of the accident until they reached Columbus and found the men on the engines. The injured men were taken to a hospital. They have not regained consciousness. Ernest Laura sustained a fractured skull and his right eye was torn out. The other brother has several fractured ribs and internal injuries.—Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch to Cincinnati Enquirer.

Festival of the Sun.

The annual sun festival (fete du soleil) of the Astronomical society of France, which has been held annually on the Eiffel tower since 1904, on the evening of the summer solstice, was omitted this year on account of the war. Several Spanish members of the society, however, as well as other Spanish astronomers, held a sun festival of their own at the Fabra observatory, in Barcelona, the director of which, Senor J. Comas Sola, is well known for his solar investigations. It is likely that this event will hereafter be celebrated annually at Barcelona, as well as at Paris.—Scientific American.

The Serpent and the Eagle.

A serpent and eagle were struggling with each other in the throes of a deadly conflict. The serpent had the advantage, and was about to strangle the bird. A countryman saw them, and running up, loosed the coil of the serpent, and let the eagle go free. The serpent, irritated at the escape of his prey, let fly his poison, and injected it into the drinking horn of the countryman. The rustic, ignorant of his danger, was about to drink, when the eagle struck his hand with his wing, and seizing the drinking horn in his talons, carried it up aloft.—From Aesop's Fables.

The Special Kind.

Said a local newspaper wit to a comrade in crime, "What was the first lambasting which Adam got from Eve?"

"I guess it was a lamb chop," answered the other feebly, after deep and prolonged thought.

"Nothing of the kind," chuckled the first. "It was a rib roast."

A Sidestepper.

"Is your husband going to be a candidate?" asked one woman.

"I don't know," replied the other. "He says he is in the hands of his friends."

"That's John, all over. Always trying to put the responsibility on somebody else!"

Preferable. "He's one of those fellows who read up on things and then insist on talking about them."

"Well," replied Miss Cayenne, thoughtfully, "that beats the fellow who insists on talking about things without reading up on them."

True. "Dubson reminds me of a golf ball." "I don't see the resemblance, except in the head. Dubson wasn't even made unless sufficiently wry."

"Neither will a golf ball."

GIRL WINS LAND

BY GREAT RIDE

Beats Men in Famous Race for Homes at Oklahoma Opening.

Jennings, Okla.—Not for Al Jennings of "Beating Back" fame, but for Joe Jennings, an early day character in this section of the Southwest, cowboy, horse trader and general roustabout, was the town of Jennings named, according to Col. George McElroy, the last of the cowmen still in the business in this part of Oklahoma.

RECALLED BY FESTIVAL

Twenty-Second Birthday of Town of Jennings Brings Back to Memory of Old Times Thrilling Story of Early Days.

The original townsite of forty acres was given by Joe Jennings upon receiving a promise that the town would be given his name, McElroy says. The Pawnee Indian country, including the old Oklahoma triangle, in the center of which is Jennings, was opened to settlement along with the old Cherokee strip in September, 1893. Just twenty-two years ago. A number of the towns within the strip have just been celebrating the event of their twenty-second birthday with appropriate ceremonies.

The strip extended westward from the western boundary of the Cherokee nation, about thirty miles east of Jennings, to the Colorado and New Mexico border, including at one time, it is said, the famous No Man's Land, which is now divided into the counties of Cimarron, Texas, and Beaver. Chose Daughter for Race. The story of how Jennings was homesteaded and named is interesting, therefore, at this time, when the twenty-second birthday of the town has just been observed.

Joe Jennings had been a resident of this part of the Indian country for some time, according to Colonel McElroy, and had raised a family here.

including a half grown daughter, then perhaps sixteen or seventeen years old. She was the typical country-raised girl of the border day period, able to ride, shoot, hunt and throw a lasso.

Jennings conceived the idea, when announcement of the strip's opening reached him, that this half grown daughter should make the race for a quarter section of land, which the family would homestead.

The race for homes, when the Cherokee strip was opened to settlement will go down in the history of the Southwest as the greatest horse race that was ever pulled off under the sanction of the federal government.

Few knew she was a girl. There were several thousand choice quarter section farms as the prizes, and men came from all sections of the United States to make the race and win a claim if possible. The swiftest and most seasoned horses were selected wherever they were obtainable, for all the riders knew that by the men and animals with the best staying qualities would the farms be won.

Among the riders into the Pawnee country was the half grown Jennings girl, and she proved her ability as a horsewoman.

Dressed in men's clothing, with high-heeled boots and spurs, she entered the race and won a claim, a tract of valley land lying between two long ranges of low hills, one of the prettiest natural spots in the entire strip country.

Having won the claim, the family evidently did not care for it, for before long three-fourths of it had been sold to John Simmons and the other 40 acres had been given for a town site on condition that the new town be named Jennings. The family then left this section of the country, and in later years it was reported that Joe Jennings was living in Old Mexico.

GROWS IN SHAPE OF CROSS

Peculiar Plant in a Michigan Library is Exciting Much Curiosity.

Marquette, Mich.—In the public library building, in this city, is a plant which is growing in the shape of a cross. Three years ago Peter Doff, the custodian, had some clover growing in a pot.

Out of this clover sprang the stalk of a strange plant which grew upright until this summer, when two shoots branched out near the top of right angles with the stalk and formed a cross.

Mr. Doff has had amateur botanists and experts from the Northern States Normal school examine the plant, but nobody knows what it is. He does not remember planting anything but clover in the pot.

Michigan Happenings

Hilledale.—Pittsford's township treasurer, F. M. Denman, has received a check for $300 from the Hudson business Men's association for building one mile of state reward road adjoining Hudson.

Marshall.—Fire did nearly five thousand dollars' damage on the farm of Mrs. Nellie E. Roe, near Homer. The blaze broke out while Edward Archer and his family, tenants on the place, were away.

East Lansing.—Dr. T. T. Hallman, state pathologist, is investigating a disease of sheep which has been discovered in Ingham and Lenawee counties. The disease was thought to be hemorrhagic septicaemia.

Lansing.—A small shack used as a paint shop near the Michigan Agricultural college, East Lansing, burned, causing great excitement. The blaze attracted people from some distance, and in Lansing there were rumors that the college buildings were on fire.

Cadillac.—Cadillac schools and movies are again open. Following a report made by Dr. Edward Goodwin of Bay City to the state board of health, orders were sent to Doctor Goodwin to remove the strict quarantine measures.

Hilledale.—Fayette will get $5,050 in state awards for road improvements made this year. The state highway department has accepted a two and one-half mile stretch of nine-foot macadam roadway and a three-quarter mile trunk road on the Chicago pike.

Ionia.—Ionia lodge, I. O. O. F. 175, organized in 1871, celebrated its forty-fourth anniversary here with a gathering of nearly 300 members from Ionia, Saranac, Palo and other nearby towns. Oren C. Wright, who, with one exception, is the only charter member left, spoke.

Hilledale.—Friends have received word that Glenn M. Bates of this city, who is at his winter home in De Land, Fla., may lose his sight. He was driving a nail when the head flew off and struck him on the ball of one of his eyes. Jacksonville specialists are trying to save his eye. The second eye is being affected.

Howell.—Prominent leaders of the Presbyterian church gathered at Howell for the dedication of the new $75,000 home of that faith in this city. To a brilliant assemblage of more than 1,000 persons, Rev. J. Ross Stevenson, president of Princeton Theological seminary and moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of America, preached the dedicatory sermon.

East Lansing.—County agricultural agents of the state will convene in East Lansing December 6 and 7 to discuss experiences of 1915 and make plans for 1916. Addresses will be made by W. A. Lloyd, Acting President F. S. Kedzie, Dean R. S. Shaw, E. C. Lindemann, Dr. Eben Mumford, J. N. McBride, Dr. E. T. Hallman, R. J. Baldwin, Hon. I. R. Waterbury and members of the M. A. C. faculty.

Houghton.—County Game Warden Willson reported the biggest capture of contraband game in many years in the upper peninsula. He captured in the possession of Oscar Lahto of Victoria, Ontonagon county, 15 green partridge, four beaver pelts, two partridges and two rabbits. Lahto is said to have had a regular business of supplying mink country boarding houses with fresh meat. He was sentenced to 60 days in the Ontonagon county jail.

Lansing.—Deputy Game Warden Jones says there will be very little white fish spawn planted this year. Less than 1,000 white fish have been taken from the Detroit river up to November 26. The department has heretofore taken thousands of fish. Last year the department planted more than 200,000 white fish. Trout spawn is so plentiful this year that the department sold some to the state of New York.

Battle Creek.—Injured more than 15 years ago in a game of football, Homer Harbaugh of this city has been brought from the state hospital at Kalamazoo to the sanitarium for an operation to cure a slight form of insanity. Harbaugh's present condition is attributed to a blow on the head. X-ray examination has been made in an effort to discover some injury which might be remedied through an operation. Although injured several years ago, Harbaugh did not suffer serious effects until a year ago.

Kalamazoo.—Two of Kalamazoo's leading pastors preached their farewell sermons, leaving vacant the pulpits of the First Congregational church and the First Presbyterian church. Rev. W. J. Campbell of the Congregational church will go to Portland, Me., and Rev. Henry W. Weston, Presbyterian, will retire. He will move to California. Rev. Campbell preached as his farewell sermon the first sermon he ever preached in Kalamazoo.

Houghton.—John Kupka, arrested on a charge of embezzling $1250 in Chicago, will fight extradition. Attorney J. F. Hamblin has wired Governor Ferris to stay proceedings until the facts could be presented to him. Kupka is administrator of the estate of his deceased sister. He has been a resident of Houghton for two years and the money he is charged with embezzling was sent to him here in settlement of the estate. One-quarter of it belongs to his mother and two sisters, who are in Russian Poland. He has been unable to find them because of the war.

Grand Rapids.—William J. Minkst, deputy state dairy and food inspector, condemned 50 bushels of apples here because he found them covered with cedar oil. The coating was put on, he said, to make them shine and to act as a preservative, with ill effects to the consumer.

Flint.—Joseph Bryan, aged twenty-one years, in a fit of despondency over ill health, ended his life by the chloroform route. He had been ill for some time. He was found when discovered in the barn at the rear of his home. His parents and two brothers survive him.
