...THE HYPHEN...

We have been hearing a great deal about him.

There is no doubt foundation of fact in what our President has to say about him.

But there is another side to this subject that we ought not to forget.

Come and hear a discussion of this interesting individual and his relation to our national life.

Voters Favor Selling Lighting Plant

The special election held last Monday to decide whether the voters wished to dispose of the municipal electric light plant to the Detroit Edison Co. for the sum of $50,000, resulted in a majority of three in favor of selling the plant. There were a total of 365 votes cast, 222 of this number were for selling the plant and 142 against the proposition. It requires a majority of three-fifths of the total vote cast to decide a question of this kind. About sixty women taxpayers took advantage of their right to vote on matters of this kind. It is now up to the council to take further action in the matter of disposing of the plant.

Death of Mrs. Benjamin Bolton

Mrs. Benjamin Bolton, aged 57 years, passed away at her home west of town last Tuesday morning. She had been in failing health for some time but was confined to her bed only a few days. The deceased is survived by her husband, three sons, Cass, Edward and Clifford, and two daughters, Zaida and Ethel, besides an aged mother, Mrs. David Oliver, and four sisters. The funeral was held from her late home yesterday afternoon, Rev. H. F. Farber conducting the services. Interment in Riverside cemetery.

The Alumni Play

The Alumni play entitled, "The Private Secretary," was presented at the opera house Friday evening of last week and Tuesday evening of this week. A goodly crowd was in attendance and the proceeds will go towards the alumni memorial in the new school building. The members of the cast look their parts in a very creditable manner and the play was declared a success in every way. After the entertainment on Friday evening the alumni reception was held in the council room for the members of the alumni, friends, and seniors. The room was prettily decorated in the class colors, green and white. A short business session was held and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, George Burr; vice president, Genevieve McClumpha; sec. and treas., Roxy Jones. Louise Wilcox and Lester VanDeCar were also chosen to complete the executive committee. Water and punch were served.

Death of Joseph Webber, Jr.

Joseph Webber, Jr. died at the home of his father about two miles north of this village, Saturday, June 17. Mr. Webber was taken ill with pneumonia last April at Leslie, Mich., where he was then residing. He had practically recovered from this illness and returned home about two weeks ago, when he suffered a relapse, which ended in his death. He was a man highly esteemed by all who knew him, and his death came as a great shock to his many friends. He leaves a father, one brother, William Webber, and two sisters, Mrs. W. K. McGorrey and Mrs. Matchie McLain of Detroit, to mourn their loss. The funeral was held from the family home Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, Rev. Fr. Dowdle of Milford, officiating. Interment in Riverside cemetery.

Joseph Webber, Jr. was born in Detroit, Mich., January 20, 1876. He came to Plymouth with his parents in 1897 and for the exception of the past year has always resided here.

Plymouth High School Commencement

The evening of Thursday, June 15th, left nothing to be desired in weather, class spirit, and inspiring address. The program opened with a most arousing class yell, energetically led by John Jones. Then followed the invocation by Rev. Joseph Dutton. Chas. B. Sikes of Ann Arbor, then delighted the audience with two vocal solos of high classical order. The commencement speaker, Rev. B. F. Farber, took for his theme, "Possessing Our Possessions," as subject, which he treated in a very instructive and inspiring manner, introducing just enough humor to keep his audience thoroughly alert. Then followed two more solos by Mr. Sikes which were generously applauded. The acceptance was W. Lloyd Kemp of Ann Arbor.

Harvey Stoneburner, class president, then gave an outline of a play which the class had purposed giving, and had already begun work upon, when the fire occurred and school facilities becoming less convenient, the class decided in the interest of scholarship to drop the play. The giftingian, Miss Helen Gardner, kept the audience thoroughly entertained for a half hour in the presentation of a gift to each member of the class. If any member of the class had some characteristic weakness the gift revealed it in a humorous way. In a few well chosen words Superintendent C. F. Reebbs presented the diplomas to a class of twenty-two happy and promising young people who last week ended their high school career, but "commenced" the more practical and still more fascinating life courses that lie ahead. The decorations, floral and electrical, the enlivening class yell, the class colors and pretty white attire worn by the class, all served to make the evening memorable. Great credit is due Miss Hanford upon whose shoulders the responsibility of the program rested.

Miss Athalie Hough, who has been attending St. Mary's college, is home for the summer vacation.

SELECT WILSON AND MARSHALL TO LEAD THEM

Democrats Name Their Candidates at St. Louis Amid Scenes of Wildest Enthusiasm.

AVOID THE FRIDAY "HOODOO"

Nominations Were Made Only Few Minutes Before Midnight on Thursday—President Wilson at Once Notified of the Convention's Choice.

St. Louis.—By strenuous suppression of oratory and rushing proceedings the Democratic national convention dodged Friday as the day on which it renominated President Woodrow Wilson and Vice President Thomas Riley Marshall.

The superstitious party engineers beat the clock by only a few minutes, but it was enough to avoid the hoodoo.

Wilson Named at 11:52 P. M. Mr. Wilson was nominated by acclamation at 11:52 p. m. Thursday.

Mr. Marshall was only a trifle behind crossing the line at 11:55. In this lightning sprint Mr. Marshall made a record. Senator Kern was due for a nominating speech.

Sensing the approaching midnight he threw his energy on the floor and simply said: "I renominate Thomas Riley Marshall." Somebody seconded. Somebody moved to make it by acclamation. And it was done, the whole job of nominating a vice presidential candidate taking up just 180 seconds.

Friday Superstition Averted. Thus the ancient superstition against Friday nominations was averted, although President Wilson had made it known that he regards Friday as his "lucky day."

Dramatic scenes attended the naming of the ticket. William Jennings Bryan in an impassioned panygeric placed his O. K. upon the president and his administration.

The Nebraska, who resigned from the cabinet, was not a delegate to the convention, but he was called to the platform by unanimous consent. He lauded Wilson to the skies for keeping the nation out of war, lauded the Wilson Mexican policy and extolled the economic legislation from tariff to currency act.

Bryan at times spoke under the strain of emotion. It was the first convention in 20 years in which he has not been an active figure, but the oration and the outburst that punctuated his remarks indicated that he is still a powerful force behind the scenes of the party he once dominated.

Wescott Names Wilson. The Nebraska through with his speech, John W. Wescott of New Jersey placed Mr. Wilson in nomination. As the time grew short Wescott, cutting short his peroration, shouted: "I nominate Woodrow Wilson."

Then followed a great demonstration that lasted 46 minutes. Delegates and galleries were roused to a high pitch of enthusiasm and emotionalism. They yelled and shouted and paraded and sang. Some of them wept in an ecstasy of feeling.

Harmon Secondu Wilson. Former Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio, who was a candidate for the presidential nomination at Baltimore four years ago, made the first seconding speech for President Wilson.

The next was by Gov. H. C. Stuart of Virginia. Senator Hughes of New Jersey moved that the rules be suspended and the nomination made by acclamation. The motion was carried with a tremendous roar.

The only objection came from Robert E. Burke of Chicago, the only anti-Wilson delegate in the convention. He shouted "No."

Senator James declared President Wilson nominated at 11:52 p. m.

Kern Names Marshall.

Senator John W. Kern of Indiana then was recognized. He moved that the nomination of Vice President Marshall be made by acclamation. No nominating speech was made.

Vice President Marshall was declared nominated four minutes after the nomination of President Wilson.

Numerous seconding speeches which had been prepared were not made.

Former Gov. Martin H. Glyn of Iowa was chairman of the committee to notify President Wilson of his nomination.

Roger C. Sullivan presented a resolution expressing thanks to former Governor Glyn, Senator James and other officers of the convention.

A resolution was adopted giving state committees authority to fill vacancies caused by death or resignation on the national committee.

Woodrow Wilson

Thomas R. Marshall

Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois was invited to the platform to make an address at 12:12 a. m. "I do not like to impose upon your time," said Senator Lewis. "I beg you will excuse me and I express my sincere thanks."

It was the shortest speech of his career.

Senator Hughes reported to the convention that the resolution committee had failed to complete its work on the platform. The convention then adjourned at 12:32 a. m. until eleven o'clock Friday morning.

Forty-six minutes of sheer enthusiasm and emotion followed the naming of President Wilson. The minute Mr. Wescott had yielded to the adjurations of his audience and had spoken the name "Woodrow Wilson," the galleries and the delegates were on their feet.

An immense oil painting of the president was dropped from the gallery back of the speakers' stand. It excited the gathering almost to the point of frenzy. Georgia bore down the aisle a banner—"Wilson: Dixie's gift to the nation."

The band blared and thumped out "America" and "Dixie" while the great pit, a crater of eruptive humanity, let out its collective lungs and throats to capacity.

Lockstep Dance in Hall. Groups of belated delegates kept outside by "strong arms" placed on the gates broke into the hall and joined their voices to the tumult. In lockstep the delegates danced around the hall.

A woman bore the California standard to the platform. Emblems from other states were grouped around it while the brilliant lights of the "movie men" turned the platform into a tableau vivant.

And the singing! The crowd fairly lifted the roof. They let out their lungs in national hymns, "Swanee River," "My Old Kentucky Home," "How Dry I Am" and that other old political anthem, "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." Then they burst into "Tipperary" and rendered it at the top of 1,000 voices. It was some chant. It was great congregational singing.

Bryan Lauds Wilson.

Bryan in his laudation of Wilson and his policies dwelt on the possibilities of America as negotiator of peace in Europe.

"I stand with the Democrats of the nation to give Woodrow Wilson a chance to be that man," shouted Bryan. In conclusion, and the hall echoed with cheering.

Details of the Night Session. St. Louis.—While the convention was assembling for the night session to nominate President Wilson it became known the Nebraska delegation planned to withdraw the vice presidential candidacy of Governor Morehead.

Before the convention was called to order the Coliseum was so full that the fire department took charge of the entrances and permitted no more to come in. William J. Bryan was stopped at the door. Senator James learned of the Nebraskan's plight and rescued him. Then the Nebraskan got his usual uproarious reception.

Chairman James rapped the convention to order.

Rev. W. J. Hardesty, chaplain of the Missouri senate, offered prayer. Senator Thompson then moved a suspension of the rules to permit Mr. Bryan to speak. When the motion was put there were some "Nos." but the chairman ruled two-thirds had voted in favor.

Senator James introduced Mr. Bryan as "one of the leading citizens of the world and America's greatest Democrat."

In spite of the distracting influence of the mob at the doors and the laughs that rose occasionally when a bedraggled leader finally forced his way into the convention hall Mr. Bryan held his audience.

Applause was frequent and thunderous. He spoke for forty-five minutes, finishing at 10:07.

Glyn is the Keynote. In a hall gay with flags and bunting and with pictures of party leaders, past and present, looking down upon them from medallions around the balcony, the delegates to the Democratic national convention assembled on scheduled time Wednesday. The proceedings were formally started when William F. McCombs, chairman of the national committee, ascended the platform and rapped for order. He incited the first burst of enthusiasm of the convention when, in a short address introducing the temporary chairman, he predicted victory for the party in the fall.

The keynote speech was delivered by former Gov. Martin H. Glyn of New York, the temporary chairman. He was frequently interrupted by applause when some point in his speech stirred the enthusiasm of the delegates. His eulogy of President Wilson started the biggest demonstration of the day. Following Governor Glyn's speech, committees on credentials, permanent organization, rules, and resolutions were announced, and that day's work was done.

The delegates were a little slow in assembling for Thursday's session, and it was almost noon when Temporary Chairman Glyn called the convention to order. Permanent Chairman Ollie James was escorted to the chair and introduced. He immediately launched into his address. He lauded the president and defended his policies, particularly in regard to the controversy with Germany over the submarine warfare and our relations with Mexico. An enthusiastic demonstration greeted his praise of President Wilson, which lasted more than twenty minutes. At the close of Chairman James' speech the convention took a recess until nine o'clock in the evening.

Before the nominating speeches began at the evening session the Democrats indulged in a love feast in which the advent of harmony in their ranks was celebrated. The leader of this demonstration of good will was William Jennings Bryan.

Wilson Praised by Bryan. Mr. Bryan was cheered enthusiastically as he entered the press section with Mrs. Bryan shortly after nine o'clock. A few minutes later, upon the motion of Senator Thompson of Kansas, the convention suspended the rules amid tumultuous good feeling and invited Mr. Bryan to the rostrum. A committee conducted Mr. Bryan amid wild cheering to the side of Chairman James.

Mr. Bryan laud the administration of the president.

Following Mr. Bryan's address the convention got down to the real business for which it had been convened and the renomination of President Wilson and Vice President Marshall was quickly put through as related above. The convention took a recess until eleven o'clock Friday morning, when the report of the committee on resolutions was presented and the platform was adopted with little discussion and practically no opposition.

"TOM" TAGGART PROVES TO BE CONVENTION RESCUER. St. Louis.—Senator "Tom" Taggart, Indiana's popular citizen, was one of the most sought-after men in the convention. Delegates who wanted "just one more ticket for a friend" went to Tom; newspaper men wanting favors of all kinds sought him out; officials worried about arrangements poured their troubles into his ears, and the marvel of it all is that none went away dissatisfied. The Hoosier solon found time and means to grant every request, or, at least, pour enough oil upon the troubled waters to send his visitors away smiling.

necessarily, but generally, the presidency.—Christian Science Monitor.

Poor Man! "And what is that monument in the public square?" asked the young lady from the East.

"That there monument," said the native, "marks the last resting place of the great General Jim Noyes. He was the best sheriff this county ever had, and he died with his boots on!"

"Dear me!" exclaimed the visitor, "How very uncomfortable!"

Hawaii Has Its "Shamrock." St. Louis.—The Hawaiians are distinguished by a bright orange-colored cord that they wear around their waist. A real Democrat from County Cook, Illinois, asked the meaning.

"It is symbolical of our national emblem," said Lincoln McCandless, delegate from Hawaii.

"What?"

"In fact, we call it the shamrock of Hawaii," he continued.

"I get you," replied the man from the great central market.

CALL TO ARMS FOR NATION'S DEFENSE

The call to the militia of all the states was contained in the following statement of Secretary of War Baker addressed to the governors of the states:

"Having in view the possibility of further aggression upon the territory of the United States and the necessity for the proper protection of that frontier, the president has thought proper to exercise the authority vested in him by the Constitution and the laws and call out the organized militia and the National Guard necessary for that purpose.

"I am in consequence, instructed by the president to call into the service of the United States through you, the following units of the organized militia and the National Guard of the state of which the president directs shall be assembled at the state mobilization point (or at the place to be designated to you by the commanding general, eastern department, for muster into the service of the United States.

"Organizations to be accepted into the federal service should have the minimum peace strength now prescribed for organized militia. The maximum strength at which organizations will be accepted and to which they should be raised as soon as possible is prescribed in section No. 2, 'Tables of Organization,' United States army.

"In case any regiment, battalion or squadron, now recognized as such, contains an insufficient number of organizations to enable it to conform to muster to regular army organization tables, the organizations necessary to complete such units may be moved to mobilization camp and there inspected under orders of the department commander to determine fitness for recognition as organized by the war department.

"Circular 19, division of militia affairs, 1914, prescribes the organizations desired from each state as part of the local tactical division, and only these organizations will be accepted into service."

Events Leading to Mexican Crisis in Brief Chronology

The following brief chronology constitutes the highlights in the political history of Mexico, starting with the Madero revolution against President Porfirio Diaz. November 13, 1910, culminating in the present crisis, as follows:

- 1910. NOV. 23—Francisco I. Madero proclaims himself provisional president, and two days later Diaz resigns, sailing with his family for Europe May 31, 1912.
- 1912. OCT. 16—Second revolution started under General Felix Diaz. Two weeks later he is captured by federal troops and uprising apparently crushed.
- 1913. FEB. 21—Third revolution takes place and Victoriano Huerta proclaimed provisional president. Gustavo Madero executed.
- 1913. FEB. 21—Fourth revolution, this time against Huerta, started by Carranza, governor of Coahuila.
- 1914. OCT. 14—Huerta proclaims himself dictator and abrogates constitution.
- 1914. APRIL 9—Paymaster and seven sailors arrested in Tampico by Mexican soldiers. Though released a few hours later, Rear Admiral Mayo demanded an apology, punishment of the Mexican officer in charge and a salute of twenty-one guns. This was the APRIL 21—United States marines occupy customhouse at Vera Cruz and take charge of city.
- 1914. JUNE 24—Peace protocol signed by "A. B. C." mediators at Niagara Falls, Ontario.
- 1914. JULY 15—General Huerta resigns as provisional president.
- 1914. AUG. 14—Carranza, by agreement with General Oregon and General Iturbide, named provisional president, to succeed Francisco Carbajal, who held office one month after Huerta's resignation.
- 1915. NOV. 11—The outbreak of hostilities between Carranza and Villa takes place.
- 1915. JAN. 5 to MARCH 5—Sporadic fighting between Villa and Carranza forces.
- 1915. Oct. 19—United States formally recognizes Carranza de facto government. Willa jubilation in Mexico City.
- 1916. JAN. 1—Villista atrocities against Americans become daily.
- 1916. JAN. 13—Fifty Americans massacred by Villistas near Chihuahua City.
- 1916. JAN. 15—Fight between American troops and Mexican soldiers near Fort Hancock, fifty-three miles east of El Paso.
- 1916. JAN. 17—Villa orders his troops to shoot all Americans on sight.

Militia Below Peace Strength.

Records of the division of militia affairs of the war department show that the National Guard of the country lacks 22,000 men of the number required to bring it up to its supposed peace strength of 151,000. It is short by 182,000 men of its full war strength of 313,000.

Of the 12 divisions existing on paper, only two, the Sixth New York and the Seventh Pennsylvania, have a divisional headquarters organized.

Or the 36 brigades on paper, making up these divisions only 23 have their headquarters organized. Due to the troops of many of the brigades and most of the divisions being from different states, and the war department having no regular officers to spare, there is no one available for these staffs.

For the 127 regiments of infantry and cavalry there should be 635 machine guns. At last reports a few weeks ago there were but 172 in the possession of the various regiments.

The ordnance department had only 77 available. There were 67 others in the sea-coast defenses, but they were needed there.

ORIGIN OF POLITICAL "BOOM"

Term First Used in Connection With Movement for Third Term for Grant.

The word "boom," as applied to a political movement, so far as known, was first used by the editor of a Republican newspaper in St. Louis, Mo., pending the return of Gen. U. S. Grant from the trip around the world undertaken by him in 1878, immediately following his retirement from the presidency of the United States. The term was used so persistently and so cleverly that it soon began to lodge in popular thought, and to take on the meaning which the editor intended to convey when he declared that the movement looking to a third term for Grant was "booming," or when he employed the invention as a noun and spoke of "the Grant boom."

The idea had come to him from a common expression used by the people along the Mississippi river. When that stream was at flood tide and sweeping everything before it it was said to be "booming." The St. Louis editor aimed to convey the thought that the movement for the nomination of Grant for the presidency in 1880 was like the onward sweep of a great river under such conditions, and therefore a boom. The term soon came into general use, and has been applied in the United States ever since, like the spontaneous and preconcerted or organized movements looking to the placing of some person in an office of importance, not

It reaches that stage we're done. I'm afraid to go out there again. Things may get dull and I might look around and see some of these reporter persons doing embroidery."

Music Wherever Penny Goes. St. Louis.—There was a parade on Twelfth street. It consisted of a band playing "Dixie," and the Pennsylvania delegation. They marched into the lobby of the Hotel Jefferson and business stopped for some ten minutes. At 10 a. m. there was another parade. It consisted of a band and the Pennsylvania delegation going to its caucus. The band played "Dixie." At 11 a. m. another parade came down Olive street. It was headed by a band playing "Dixie" and followed by the Pennsylvania delegates. They were returning from their caucus.

"Where does Pennsylvania get the call on the brass?" asked a bystander of an Oklahoman man.

"They hired the band," was the reply, "and it's a case of use it or lose it."

Irone, the Gotham Queen. In England, where everybody is practicing the most rigid economy, even the noblewomen at the royal court, it is deemed a mark of respect for alien visitors to dress as simply as possible, particularly avoiding a gaudy display of jewels when they attend court functions. We Americans, such sticklers for good taste ourselves, are much gratified to learn that Mrs. Verone Caudie maintained that sympathetic manifestation of respect which marks every well-bred visitor in England at this time. When Irone danced before the queen last month she attired herself as modestly as she could and still be consistent with her station; she wore a chiffon frock, and left off all her jewels except a diamond necklace and a diamond bracelet on her left ankle.—Kansas City Star.

No Opening. "What are you going to do now that you are through college?" "Well, I did think of going into the banking business, but it's awfully hard to get a start, even if one is willing to start at the bottom, as I am. I went to seven different banks yesterday and applied for a position as fourth or fifth vice president, but there wasn't a single vacancy."

Resourceful. "Blinka, the aviator, showed remarkable presence of mind the other day when his motor stopped while he was two thousand feet above the earth."

"What did he do?" "He came right down."

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

BURING THE CONVENTIONS IT WAS A PASTIME TO TALK POLITICS IN LANSING.

OATES FOR GAME WARDEN

The Fishing Season is Open—Justice Kuhn to Be Next Chief Justice—Various Matters.

Lansing.—At the annual meeting of the public domain commission which will be held the latter part of this month, it is believed State Game Warden William R. Oates will be re-elected for another year.

At least none of the commissioners has expressed any opposition to the present incumbents and unless something unexpected develops before the annual meeting, it is believed they will all be re-elected.

There was some talk a while ago that Oates should be reappointed for a term of three years.

He says that the next legislature will probably repeal the Odell bill and place the appointment of a state game warden in the hands of the governor once more.

Auditor General Fuller has always been opposed to the public domain commission and was not in favor of the Odell bill which prevented Governor Ferris and his democratic friends from gaining control of the game warden's department.

Some State Politics.

Chase S. Osborn will not be a candidate for the republican nomination for governor this year.

Never allow rubbish, such as paper rags, cobwebs, old clothing, boxes, etc., to accumulate in closets and unused rooms.

Never run your stove pipes through a wooden partition or through the roof without proper protection.

Never put up gas brackets so they can be swung against the wooden window casings or against, or immediately under, curtains.

Never keep matches in any but metal or earthen safes, and when you light one never throw it on the floor.

Never allow smoking in proximity to inflammable merchandise or materials.

Never take an open light to examine a gas meter or into a closet.

Never close up your place of business before going over the entire premises to see that all fires and lights are safe or extinguished.

Never forget that carelessness and negligence are the cause of over two-thirds of all fires.

ten bass in his possession at one time. In the matter of walleyed pike the law is more liberal.

White bass, calico bass, rock bass, blue gills, sun fish, perch and crappies may be taken during any season of the year.

Chief Justice Kuhn. Judge Franz C. Kuhn will be chief justice of the Michigan supreme court next year and he will have the honor of being the youngest man to ever fill that position on the supreme bench.

Man begins fight in Petersburg. Man begins fight in Petersburg, Va., against the German government.

With the exception of Auditor General Fuller, Hughes was the first choice of all the republican state officials before the national convention.

Republicans state officials are very well satisfied with the nomination of Charles E. Hughes as the republican candidate for president.

With the exception of Auditor General Fuller, Hughes was the first choice of all the republican state officials before the national convention.

However, since Hughes' nomination and the publication of his letter of acceptance, Auditor General Fuller is of the opinion that the national convention acted wisely and he says he is well satisfied with a ticket headed by Hughes and Fairbanks.

State Fire Loss. State Fire Marshal Winship has issued a few hints how to prevent fire. Here they are:

It is an old maxim that fire is a good servant but a hard master. Shakespeare wrote: "A little fire is quickly trodden out; which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench."

Fires are the result of accident, of spontaneous combustion, and of design. If they have been accidental the cause can generally be discovered, and it will be found they might have been prevented.

If the following precautions are taken, fires from accident or spontaneous combustion will seldom occur: Keep your house, store, or factory clean.

Never allow rubbish, such as paper rags, cobwebs, old clothing, boxes, etc., to accumulate in closets and unused rooms.

Never run your stove pipes through a wooden partition or through the roof without proper protection.

Never allow your furnace, steam or hot water pipes to come in contact with wood.

Never put up gas brackets so they can be swung against the wooden window casings or against, or immediately under, curtains.

Never keep matches in any but metal or earthen safes, and when you light one never throw it on the floor.

Never allow smoking in proximity to inflammable merchandise or materials.

Never take an open light to examine a gas meter or into a closet.

MICHIGAN BREVITIES

Adrian.—Mrs. I. Gould and son Maurice of Detroit were injured here when the automobile in which they were riding struck a telephone pole.

Albion.—City Manager Remley has established a city greenhouse in which all the plants for use in Albion's several parks will be grown.

Hastings.—Kenneth, four-year-old son of Herbert Wilcox, residing east of this city, was seriously scalded when he fell into a pan of boiling water.

Kalamazoo.—Selling stock in a church at $10 a share is the unique way members of the Stockbridge Avenue Methodist Episcopal church have hit upon to raise the church debt.

Kalamazoo.—Mrs. N. E. Sprinkle, forty-two, died, leaving motherless five small children. She was taken to a hospital to be operated on for appendicitis.

Charlotte.—William Beckman, former postmaster of this city, died at the home of his daughter as the result of a stroke of apoplexy about a week ago.

Albion.—The creamery of the Maple City Dairy company burned in this city. The loss is $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

Grand Rapids.—The jury in the request to determine whether the shooting of Elmer Spiedell by Deputy Sheriff Grant Ellsworth was intentional or accidental, returned a verdict exonerating the officer.

Ann Arbor.—William Beaubien of this city was the victim when a hammer with which a fellow workman was driving a beam slipped and broke Beaubien's nose.

Hastings.—Hundreds of members of Odd Fellow lodges in Hastings, Woodland, Freeport, Prairieville, Caledonia and Nashville attended a school of instruction held in the Odd Fellow temple here.

Kalamazoo.—Frank Verbridge lost a little home where he had been given permission to live without paying rent, because he threatened to whip a painter who came to paint the house.

Easton Rapids.—Mrs. George Goodnow, widow of an Onondaga Civil war veteran, died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Will Steel, of apoplexy. She was sixty-eight years old, and is survived by a son and daughter.

Grand Rapids.—Because Theodore Hollis became involved in a quarrel in a local cafe, he will have to complete a 15-year sentence in Marquette prison, of which he has served but two years.

Kalamazoo.—If any more city officials take junkets they need not expect that their bills will be paid by the city.

Ann Arbor.—Edmund O. Dewey, for 16 years postmaster of Owosso and 18 of the Republican organization in this county, whose Democratic successor soon will be appointed, it is alleged, was chosen manager of the campaign in Shiawassee county to make Michigan dry.

Albion.—Burglars entered two Albion houses, taking a gold watch, money and jewelry in the home of Ernest Kable, but were scared from the home of Henry Keck before taking anything.

Battle Creek.—Behind closed doors in the city hall, representatives of the Advance Rumely Thresher company defended their complaint against the 1916 assessment made on the property by Assessor C. J. Ashley.

Plymouth.—The Detroit Edison company through its vice-president, A. C. Marshall, has made the village of Plymouth an offer of $50,000 for the local electric plant.

Grand Rapids.—When Martha Smith quit paying board at the county jail for Charles E. Arnold, who was arrested December 21, 1914, on a capias, Arnold was dismissed.

Standish.—The largest graduation class in the history of the Standish school will receive diplomas this year, with 17 normals and 28 high school graduates.

St. Joseph.—Despite inclement weather the annual pilgrimage of summer resorters to the twin cities and surrounding resort centers is on.

PELERINE EASY TO MAKE, Frits and Puffings Will Quickly Convert the Simple Elbow Cape into a Furbelew.

To make a pelierine is no difficult matter, especially if the silk chosen is soft and bright. Pussy willow and soiree are perhaps the best, but they are rather expensive and a great many of the imported capes are of taffeta, which, with modeling, achieves most bewitching effects.

The simplest little cape is the circular one corded three times around the shoulders, yoke fashion, and trimmed with a double border-placed ruching or a plaid ruffle, but puffs, ribbons and laces may be added and an orchid collar makes a pretty neck trimming.

Valuable Banana, No other plant gives such a quantity of food to the acre as the banana, which is forty times more than that of the potato and 133 times more than that of wheat.

LIGHT MORNING FROCK

An appropriate gown for morning wear on the hot forenoon of the coming summer. It is of dotted voile, having two flounces, and the waist and tunic are in one. Full length sleeves are worn. A wide Dutch collar of white organdie and a bow of satin with two dangling streamers complete the costume.

SUMMER CORSETS IN CHIFFON

Combine Lightness of Weight With Wearing Qualities That May Be Called Remarkable. One of the daintiest accessories for the bride or bridesmaid for that matter is the corset of flowered chiffon.

A very pretty new sports model is laced down both sides of the front about four inches apart. A narrow panel of silk elastic is inset at the sides to give perfect freedom. The newest models are rather high in the bust, with a prominent incurve at the waist and distinctively shorter in the hips, but they curve down shield-fashion back and front.

Another innovation is the taffeta corset made of pastel-tinted or pompadour-flowered silk to match the elaborate plaited and ruffled petticoats of the season.

The corsets are to be worn beneath the thin summer dresses without any camisole and with merely a net under-bodice to veil their charms.

Corsets of silver cloth, while they were very much used during the winter, are not shown for summer, and upon the whole the silver lace camisoles to be worn under evening dresses of black and colored tulle are rather more chic. But the line of the corset top, the thick portion of the camisole and the upper edge of the bodice or girdle are identical and the fashion for the very close-fitting figure, especially at the waist line, tends to eliminate all unnecessary layers of material, be they ever so fragile.

To Clean Hair Brushes. To clean hair brushes take a cupful of cornmeal and rub the brush, rubbing gently with the hand. As it absorbs the grease and dirt shake it out and clean thoroughly. This is better than ammonia, as there is no water to insure or loosen the back of the brush.

The First Skater. The first man or nation to skate is lost in the mists of antiquity. The Eskimos of the farthest north were found to be in possession of runners carved from walrusbone when they were first discovered. Skating is mentioned by a Danish historian about 1144, and Fitzstephan, in his "History of London," says that in the twelfth century young men fastened the leg bones of animals under their feet by means of thongs, in order to slide along the ice. A pair of these rude skates is now in the British museum. Londoners got the idea from Holland, probably via 14th-century, where skates have been used on the frozen fens from the very earliest times.

Jap Statesman of Prominence
Governor Hattori of Hyogo prefecture, who was among those awarded honors at the coronation of the emperor of Japan, has held his post since 1900, a unique distinction among his gubernatorial confreres. The happy relations which he enjoys with all official and private classes in Hyogo prefecture have caused him to repeatedly decline offers of promotion, by which he might have held a seat in the cabinet and exercised diplomatic abilities in higher and more stormy spheres. He was born in 1851 and is a graduate of an American college. Rutgers, from which he received the degree in the '70s of bachelor of commerce. He was nominated a member of the house of peers in 1903.

Signs of Paratyphoid.
Paratyphoid has recently come to the front as a disease. Among the allied troops in France there have been more than 1,200 cases, with a case mortality of 15 per cent. The London Lancet says it is not always possible to distinguish it from typhoid, but in general it is a milder disease with shorter duration and often appears as a sudden onset with shivering, abdominal pain and aching limbs, without abdominal distension and when there is an eruption this is of large and palpable spots. Abnormally slow heart action is characteristic. The mosquito is suspected as the means of transmission from patient to patient, but this is still in doubt.

OPPORTUNITY TO GET EVEN

Farmer Had it in His Heart to Do Unto Others as it Had Been Done Unto Him.

Here is a good motor story. A farmer strolled into a motor sales-house.

"What's that worth?" he asked, pointing to a small car.

"Five hundred dollars," was the reply.

"And that?" pointing to a better car.

"Seven hundred and fifty dollars."

"And that there one?" pointing to a seven-passenger with a jerk of his thumb.

"That one is a fine car and is worth twelve hundred dollars."

"I'll take it," said the farmer.

"The car is cash, you know," said the salesman.

"Yes, I got the money," said the farmer, as he pulled a roll of bills out of his pocket, peeled off twelve one-hundred-dollar bills, and paid for the car.

"Now, you'll show me how to drive the critter?"

"Sure," said the salesman, "that's a part of the sale."

So they started out, and after going three miles overtook a man in a wagon with a mule team. The salesman tooted and honked, and tooted, but the man with the mules refused to heed.

"This is my car, ain't it?"

"It is," said the salesman.

"And I paid for it?"

"You did."

"Then," said the farmer, "you run right over that sunnava-gun; that's the way automobile drivers always done with me!"—Toronto (Kan.) Republican.

ROYAL ADMIRER OF AMERICA

Queen Sophia of Greece Invariably Employs Architects Trained in This Country.

Queen Sophia of Greece is a great admirer of American country homes and knows many of our finer places well, remarks the Saturday Evening Post. She takes regularly all our publications devoted to country life, and studies in detail our methods of landscape gardening, tree culture and floral display. She thinks we have the most cheerfully and brilliantly beautiful homes in the world—"brilliantly cheerful" was her phrase, in fact—and is trying to adapt American ideas to the ornamentation of the royal residences not only in the country, but in Athens as well.

Her majesty does us the honor to employ American architects on all the buildings in which she is personally interested, and an American has made the plan for the model Greek hospital which she hopes to build as soon as the funds accumulate. There are practically no Greek nurses and no training school for nurses in Greece, and as it is a part of her majesty's plan to have such a school in connection with the new hospital when it is built, she has a dozen or more Greek girls in the United States now being trained at her personal expense in one or two of our hospitals and at a school in Boston for teachers and supervisors positions.

A CARD—We wish to thank the kind friends and neighbors who came to our assistance in our late bereavement, the singers for the selections rendered and Rev. B. F. Farber for the beautiful words of consolation.—Mrs. Joh. Hirschlieb, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Pankow, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hirschlieb.

OBITUARY

John Hirschlieb was born in Asoherden, Germany, March 3, 1840. At the age of 21 years he was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Friederika Soener, this union being blessed with three children. In the early sixties he crossed the ocean with his family, coming to America and settling in Detroit, Mich., where he resided until 1874, when he settled on the farm which he purchased in Livonia township. Here he tilled the soil until 1896 when he retired, taking up his residence near Perrinville, where he remained until the end. His death was not unexpected as he was taken ill in December and passed peacefully away Wednesday, June 14, at the age of 76 years and three months. In life he was always known for his sterling uprightness of character and fair dealings with all who came in contact with him socially or in business. He leaves to mourn their loss, a bereaved widow, two sons and one daughter—Wm. Hirschlieb of Perrinville, Chas. Hirschlieb of Elm, and Mrs. Wm. A. Pankow of Plymouth, together with a host of friends. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement. Funeral services were conducted Saturday, June 17, Rev. B. F. Farber of Plymouth officiating. The remains were laid to rest in the family lot in Livonia Center cemetery.

BIBLE STUDENTS

"Will a man rob God?" Yes! In what? "Tithes and offerings" (money and self denial). Result: "Cursed with a curse." Exhortation: "Bring ye all the tithes into the store house and prove me now herewith and see if I will not pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it. Now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered. From the days of your fathers ye have not kept mine ordinances." Exhortation: "Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts." "Them that honor me I will honor, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed." See Malachi 3.

Bowel Complaints in India

In a lecture at one of the Des Moines, Iowa, churches, a missionary from India told of going into the interior of India, where he was taken sick; that he had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with him and believed that it saved his life. This remedy is used successfully in India, both as a preventive and cure for cholera. You may know from this that it can be depended upon for the milder forms of bowel complaint that occur in this country. Obtainable everywhere. —Adv.

A Story of Today and of All Days

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright by the Century Company

Clem is wearing out her heart for Alan. Does he understand this? Is he keeping away from her for the sport it affords him to watch a girl's heart break? Or does he feel he is unworthy of her affection? Will she "kiss" him yet?

CHAPTER XXXI

Maple House was riding the crest of a happy way. In a body it advanced on the lake to picnic and supper by moonlight and in a body it returned. The little ones excited and wakeful, the grown-ups tired and reminiscent. Days followed that were filled with laziness and nights that rang with song. The cup of life was filled to the brim with little things. Sudden peals of unrestrained laughter, shrieks of children at play, a rumble of the piano followed by a rollicking college song, ready smiles on happy faces, broke like commas into the page of life, and turned monotony into living phrases. But beneath the gaiety ran the inevitable undertone. When joy paused to take breath it found Alan half aloof and Clem wistful behind her unvarying sweetness.

One evening Alan found himself alone with Nance. She had frankly cornered him, then as openly led him off down the road towards Elm House.

"Alan," she said, "you've turned into a great fool of a great coward. Which is it?"

Alan glanced at her. "What do you mean?" he stammered.

"You know what I mean, Clem. You're breaking her heart."

She felt Alan's arm stiffen. For a moment he was silent, then he said: "Don't worry, Nance. You're wrong. Of course, but anyway, no harm is going to come to Clem through me. I'm going away. I've meant to go for ever so long, but somehow I couldn't. Something seemed to hold me. I tried to think it was just the Hill, and that it would be all right for me to stay on until the general break-up. But you have wakened me up, and the proof that I'm not quite a coward yet is that I'm going to get up and run."

They came to the entrance to The Elms, but Nance led him on down the road. "Run? Why are you going to run? Alan, don't you love her?"

A tremor went through Alan's body. "I don't know," he said, "whether I love her or not. If I ever loved anyone before, then I don't love her, for the thing that has come over me is new—newer than anything that has ever happened to me. I would rather see her come down from her room in the morning than to have watched the birth of Aphrodite, and yet I would rather see myself damned, once and for all, than touch the hem of her frock."

"Why?"

"Because it is not for me. Once Alx called her glorious. I don't know whether that was a bit of hyperbole on her part or not, but to me she is just that. There is a glory about Clem—the glory of pure light. Do you think I dare walk into it? Me, with my scarred life, my bleached soul and the moral rags that only half hide the two? That would be cowardly. I'm not coward enough for that."

Nance sighed. "I'm disappointed in you. I thought that if ever man lived that knew a little about women it must be you. I won't say any of the things I was going to say. Instead, I'll just tell you that you don't know women."

They walked back in silence. Nance went into the house, but Alan said good night and stared thoughtfully down the road. His step quickened, and, walking rapidly, he passed over the moonlit brow of the hill and down, down into the shadows of the valley. Hard is the battle that has to be won twice, but when in the small hours of the morning Alan returned and crept noiselessly to his room, he felt that he had won, that he had put the final seal on the renunciation Nance's words had so long recalled. Still wakeful, Alan started packing. He left out his riding kit.

That day awoke to clouds that lowered and hung about waiting for the fatal hour of seven when they might with all due respect to atmospheric tradition start in with an all-day rain, but long before the hour struck Alan had foraged for a biscuit and a glass of milk and was mounted and away for a last ride.

Alan rode with the ease of one born to the saddle. There was nothing of the cowboy in his get-up. He used a mere patch of a hunting saddle, fitted like a glove to his horse's back, and rode on the snaffle with a light hand. The curb rein, that last refuge of a poor horseman, hung loose and forgotten. Alan himself was dressed in well-worn whipcord breeches, short coat, soft hat, and close-fitting boots adorned with rowelless spurs. For his health Red Hill had done wonders. His body was trim, supple and as vibrant as the young horse under it.

But Alan's thoughts were far from saddles and spurs. He was walking the restive animal down the dipping slope of Long lane and with his riding spurs fleetly, intent on setting down the business of life on his mounts' arched neck and quivering quarters. He was thinking of Clem. Where could he go to get away from Clem? Not tomorrow, not sometime, but today. Where could he go today? Once the world had seemed to him a fenceless pasture where it was good to wander, where every undisturbed glade promised fresh morsels to an unweaned palat, but now in his mind the whole world had shrunk to the proportions of Red Hill. Where Clem was, there was the whole world. Already he felt the yearning with which his heart must henceforth turn to its sole desire. He crossed the valley, and, as his horse breathed the opposing bill, he thought he heard an echoing hoofbeat behind him. He turned and with one hand resting on the horse's quarter gazed back through the gray light, but Long lane was veiled from view by overhanging trees. As he lifted his hand, its impress, clearly defined as an image, caught his eye. How strange! He had ridden a thousand times and he had never noted such a thing before. It was simple when reduced to physical terms. The horse was warm and moist, the hair cool and dry. His hand pressed the hair down into the moisture. But when he had reasoned out the why and wherefore and tickled the phenomenon, the impress still stared back at him. To his mood it seemed an emblem of isolation, a thing cut off, discarded, useless. With a smile of rebuke at his fancies he touched the horse with his crop and gave him his head. The horse sprang forward, cleared the top of the hill, and the rhythmic clatter of his hoofs as he dashed along the pebble-strewn road seemed to cleave the still morning in two.

Alan glanced at her. "What do you mean?" he stammered. "You know what I mean, Clem. You're breaking her heart." She felt Alan's arm stiffen. For a moment he was silent, then he said: "Don't worry, Nance. You're wrong. Of course, but anyway, no harm is going to come to Clem through me. I'm going away. I've meant to go for ever so long, but somehow I couldn't. Something seemed to hold me. I tried to think it was just the Hill, and that it would be all right for me to stay on until the general break-up. But you have wakened me up, and the proof that I'm not quite a coward yet is that I'm going to get up and run."

CHAPTER XXXII

Alan did not draw rein until he reached the top of the bluff dividing the valley from West lake. Then for a moment he sat and stared down the long slope. There was a smell of moisture in the air. The valley, the whole world, was expecting, waiting for rain, and even as he stared the rain came in a fine, veil-like mist that steeled the tones of earth and sky to one even shade of endless gray. Out of the gray came the click of iron on pebble. Alan recognized the quick, springy tread of a climbing horse. He turned and faced Clem. He felt the slow color rising in his cheeks and his hands trembled.

They did not smile at each other; they even forgot to say good morning. Alan licked his thin lips. They were as dry as ever they had been with fever. "Where's your hat?" he asked. A flicker of amusement showed in Clem's eyes. She was quite calm and she could see that Alan was not, that he was biting his tongue at the feeble words he had saddled on a heavy moment. "Hats are for sunny days," she said. "I like rain on my head. Have you anything special to do? Don't let me bother you."

"No," stammered Alan, "nothing that can't be put off." "Do you remember," Clem went on, "years ago I asked you to take me for a ride, and you said not then but sometime? I've never had my ride with you. I want it now."

Her eyes were fixed on his and held him. "I am ready," he said through dry lips. She turned her horse and he followed. They rode in silence at a walk and then at a trot. Clem turned into a wood-road. Her horse broke into a gallop, and she flicked him with her whip and his gathered limbs suddenly stretched out for a free run. The going was soft. Alan had fallen behind. Clots of mossy loam struck him in the face. Swaying branches showered drops of water on him. He lost his hat. Then his lips lightened, his eyes flashed and he began to ride. He was himself again.

He urged his horse forward, but he could not get on even terms; Clem held the middle of the narrow track. Suddenly they burst into the broad road. With a terrific clatter of flying stones and slipping, scrambling hoofs, they made the turn. Alan rode at last on Clem's quarter. "Clem," he cried, "stop! It isn't fair to the horses." But Clem only laughed. Her slim body swayed to the bends of the road; her shoulders were braced; she leaned slightly back, steadying her horse with a taut rein. Alan tried to draw even, but every time he urged his horse into a spur Clem's spurred foot. Alan grew angry. He watched Clem's whip, but it never moved. He settled into the saddle and rode blindly. His horse must catch up or he would kill him. He was gaining. A moment more at the same pace and he could reach Clem's reins before her horse's neck. Then Clem swerved again into a half-hidden wood-road and Alan's horse plunged through the brush, broke out, and followed, a poor second.

Alan's face and hands were badly scratched, but he rode on doggedly. It never occurred to him to give up the chase. In the end he would catch up; he knew that, but what puzzled him was what he should do to Clem when he caught her. Anyone else, man or woman, he would give a taste of their own riding whip for their own good, but not Clem. Alan suddenly knew that there was something in Clem that a man could not break. The wood-road made a gradual ascent that the willing horses took at a steady, hard gallop. They left the tree-line of the valley below them, scurried across an ancient clearing, pushed through brush and branches, and burst out on to the long, bald back of East mountain. Then came another clear run over crisp sod dangerously interspersed with wet, slippery stones and hindering bowlders.

At the highest point in all the countryside Clem suddenly drew rein and slipped from her horse before Alan could reach her. She stood with one arm across the saddle-bow and waited for him.

Alan threw himself from his horse and rushed up to her. His hands were itching to grip her shoulders and shake her, but he held them at his side. "What did you do it for?" he asked with blazing eyes.

Clem looked him over coolly. "Ever run after anyone before, Alan?"

"What?" stammered Alan. He felt foundations shudder from under him. Here was a person who could look Ten Percent Wayne at his best in the eye and never turn a mental hair.

"How do you like it?" continued Clem in an even, firm voice. Then she turned her square back to the saddle and faced him fairly. "I'll tell you what I did it for. All my life I've been best. You'll find them flickering out in the faces of young men and at the last gasp in the faces of lost women whose eyes hold the shadows of forgotten sins."

"Clem," He Cried, "Stop!"

running after you. Last night I heard you packing. I knew what you were doing—you were getting ready to go away. Before you went I wanted you to run after me—just once. A sort of consolation prize to pride."

Alan's face hardened. "Stop, Clem. You can't talk like that to me and you can't talk like that to yourself." He looked at Clem and the blood surged into his neck and face. At that moment Clem was beautiful to him beyond the wildest dreams of fair women.

Her right arm was still hooked over the double horn of her saddle and her left hand holding a slim riding whip hung at her side. To the velvet lapels of her coat clung little drops of rain. Her hair was braided and firmly tied in a double fold at the back of her neck, but short strands had escaped from durance and played about her head. Her head, like the velvet lapels, was dusted with little silvery drops of water and little drops of water perched on her long, upturned lashes. Her cheeks were flushed, her bosom agitated, her lips tremulous. Only her eyes were steady.

Alan took off his coat and threw it over a rock. "Will you please sit down? I must talk to you."

Clem strode to another rock and sat down. "You are absurd. Your coat is as wet as the stones. Put it on." Alan hesitated. "Put your coat on." Alan obeyed; then he sat down before her, but turned his eyes away and gazed rather vacantly over the whole wet world. "If ever two people have known each other without words, Clem, it's you and me. Never mind the grammar. Even unshackled words are a dribbling outlet for a full heart, and my heart's as full today with things I've never said to you as the clouds are with rain.

"Nature, taken by and large, is a funny outfit, and the funniest things in it are the ones that make you want to cry. The world sees a good man, clean and straight, married to a faithful woman and laughs. Men see a pure girl give fire all to a cad, and they say, 'It's always the rotters that get the pick,' and they laugh too. But down in the bottom of our hearts we know that these things are things for tears."

"Yes, Alan," said Clem as he paused. She was no longer imperious, only attentive, with chin in hands and elbows on knees. "You know me," went on Alan, "but there are things about me that you do not know—things below you that you have no understanding for, thank God. I don't even know how to picture them to you."

"Yes, Alan," said Clem softly. Alan picked a bit of huckleberry bush and twisted it nervously in his hands. "First of all I've got to tell you what I thought you knew, that what there is of me is yours over and over again, and then I've got to tell you why you can't have it." A light came into Clem's eyes, trembled, flickered, and then settled to a steady flame.

"You've seen people smile—everyone has a smile of sorts," went on Alan. "Did you ever think that a smile had a body and soul? To me it has. It starts out in life like a virgin with a body to keep pure and a soul to guard unstained. There are smiles that illumine a face, that shine with essential purity, that glorify. Nobody has to tell you that they have never pandered to a ribald jest or added cruelty to denial. They are live smiles and they are rare among women and rarer among men. For one such you'll find a thousand living faces with dead smiles—smiles that have scattered their essence like rain on the just and the unjust, that have rolled in fifth and wasted their substance on the second best. You'll find them flickering out in the faces of young men and at the last gasp in the faces of lost women whose eyes hold the shadows of forgotten sins."

"Well?" said Clem. Alan sighed. "Between the lines of my words you must read for yourself. My smile is dead—I killed it long ago. Yours is alive—yours. You have kept it pure, guarded its flame and you shall hold it high like a beacon. You are ready to give all and you have all to give. I have nothing but the empty shell. I have kept nothing. I have gained the whole world—and lost it. The little strength left to the platoon of my soul could carry me up to clutch your beacon and drag it down, but Clem—dearest of all women—I love you too much for that. You've got to trust me. The things I know that you do not know above the duty of denial on to my shoulders. I could give you an empty shell, but I won't."

Alan had not looked at Clem. He had talked like one rehearsing a lesson, with his eyes far away in the gray world. He dropped the bit of bush, and his hands, locked about his knees, gripped each other till the knuckles and fingers showed white against the tan of his thin wrists. When he stopped speaking Clem turned curious eyes upon him. "Is that all?" she asked.

Alan sprang up and faced her. "All? All?" he cried. "Isn't it enough?" Clem rose to her feet. In her uplifted right hand she held her agate-headed riding whip. Alan's eyes fastened on it as she meant them to do. Then, with a full, free swing, she flung it from her. The whip, weighted by the agate head, described a long curve through the air and plunged into the brush far down the mountain side.

"That," Clem cried, her eyes flashing into his, "for the beacon. I kept it for you. It was too good for you; you would not take it, so there it goes."

"My God! My God!" He Cried.

Her lips trembled and she snapped her fingers. "It is not worth that to me." "Clem!" cried Alan, protesting. "Don't speak," said Clem; "you have said what you had to say. Now listen to me. You are blind, Alan, or worse than that, asleep. I'm not a thing-legged elf with skirts bobbing above my knees any more. You can't make me swallow my protests today with 'Clem, you mustn't this and you mustn't that.' There's one thing you've closed your eyes on long enough. I'm a woman, Alan, bone, spirit and a great deal of flesh. I love you, and you say you love me."

Alan started forward, but Clem held him off with a gesture. "What do you think I love in you? The things you have thrown away? Has a woman ever fallen in love with a man because he was perfect?" Clem made a deponding gesture with both hands as though she sought words that would not come. "Some men slip a wife on to themselves," she went on, "as you clasp a lid on a hot fire. If the fire grows cold quick enough the lid cracks. Some just let the fire burn out and take the dross with it. A woman knows that there is always something left in the man she loves. And even if she did not know it, it would be the same. She would rather give all for nothing than never give at all."

Clem's voice fell into a lower key. "The things you know that I do not know! What a child you are among men. A half-witted woman is born with more knowledge than the wisest of you ever attains and the first thing she learns is that life laughs at knowledge."

Clem stopped speaking and her eyes Clem had wandered came back to Alan's face. She drew a quivering breath. Her face had been pale, but now the sudden color surged up over her throat and into her cheeks. She put up her hands to her forehead. "Oh," she gasped, "you have driven me too far. I am a mean thing in my own eyes as I am in yours."

At first Alan had stood stunned by the words in which she had poured out her overburdened heart, but as she went on pitilessly laying bare her subjection a flame lit up his eyes and fired his blood. Now he sprang forward and dragged her hands from her face. "Mean, Clem? Mean in my eyes?" Then his tongue flamed him. He sank to the wet grass at her feet, took her knees in his arms and hid his hot face in her skirt. "My God, my God," he cried. "I am mean, but what there is of me has knelt to you by night and worshipped you by day. When you were little you were in my heart and you have grown up to it. When you were little there was room there for other things, but now that you have grown up you have filled it—all of it—every nook and cranny."

A tremor went through Clem's body. She bent the fingers of one hand on Alan's head and tried to turn up his face. But he held it close to her knees. "If you want me, Clem, if you want me, then there must be things left—things I have never—could never give—to anyone else. But I am ashamed to pour them into your lap—I must pour them at your feet."

"No," said Clem gravely. "I do not want you to pour things at my feet. It's got to be eye to eye or nothing, and if there's any man left in—"

"Clem," broke in Alan, "there is enough man left in me if you'll only give me time. Time to groom him. You can understand that, Clem? You know what grooming and a clean stable will do for a shaggy horse?" Clem nodded. "How much time do you want?"

Alan hesitated. "A year," he said. "I'll make a year do it." "You can have six months," replied Clem and added with a smile, "That's ten per cent under office estimates."

Then thoughtful of hours and meals and the little things in life that do not count when human souls mount to the banquet of the gods, they sat side by side and hand in hand on a big rock and stared with unseeing eyes at the gray world. "With you beside me," said Alan, "all skies are blue and filled with the light of a single, steady star."

Clem did not answer, but in her eyes content and knowledge, tenderness and strength, pleasure and pain played with each other like the lights and dappled shadows under a swaying bough.

When Clem and Alan reached home long after the lunch hour they found the Hill athrill with news. Alx had received a cable and had left at once for town. She had gone alone. That could mean but one thing—Gerry was at last coming back. It was from Barbados that Gerry had cabled. Ever since he had written his short note to Alx, through long doubting weeks at Piranhas and longer days of questioning and hesitation on board the slow freighter that was bearing him home, Gerry had been fighting himself. Only Lieber's sudden death and his burial, to which Gerry had ridden post-haste, had come in between as a solemn truce. On the freighter he had, had time enough and to spare to think. He had spent hours going over the same ground time and time again. For days he sat in his chair on the short bridge-deck, staring out to sea, making over and over the circle of his life from the time he had left home. He remembered sitting thus on the way out. He remembered the turmoil his mind had been in and the apathy that had followed, the long rest at Pernambuco, the trip down the coast and up the river, the glorious, misty morning at Piranhas, Margarita, catastrophe, awakening. What did that awakening stand for? Again he thought, if he could choose—would he wish to be back as he was before—as he was on the way out? A voice within him said "No."

Will Gerry have the courage to confess everything to Alix? Do you think Alix will forgive him for his affair with Margarita—his bigamy with an ignorant, innocent girl? (TO BE CONTINUED.)

GIVEN ONE HOUR TO RELEASE TROOPER

U. S. SOLDIER CAPTURED BY CARRANZA TROOPS AND HELD PRISONER FOR SEVERAL HOURS.

PERSHING TO ATTACK TOWN

If Prisoner Was Held An Hour Longer—But He Was Released By the Mexican Commander.

Colonla Dublin, Chihuahua, Mexico, (via Wireless to Columbus, N. M.).—An American soldier was captured by Carranza troops of the Casas Grandes garrison and held prisoner for several hours. He was released only when General J. J. Pershing, expeditionary commander sent a demand to the Mexican commander that if the soldier was held an hour longer American troops would attack the town.

Washington.—The issue of war or peace with Mexico hung in the balance awaiting General Carranza's decision as to the course he will pursue. Officials here believed that 48 hours might bring a clear understanding of what the immediate future has in store. A note signed by Secretary Lansing, conveying President Wilson's rejection of the demand for withdrawal of American soldiers from Mexico, accompanied by a specific warning that an attack on the troops "will lead to the gravest consequences," was telegraphed to Mexico City by Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican ambassador-designate.

In plain terms, it accuses General Carranza of having brought matters to the verge of war by open hostility toward the United States and failure to safeguard even the lives of Americans in Mexico or on the border, from the lawless elements among his countrymen.

In sternest terms, the note repudiates and resents imputations of bad faith and ulterior motives brought against the Washington government in the Mexican communication to which it is a reply. General Carranza is informed in so many words that protection of its own borders is the only object sought by the United States; and is told that object will be pursued whatever the consequences may be.

When the note had been handed to Mr. Arredondo for delivery to his chief, copies were sent to all embassies and legations for their information. A summary was telegraphed to Special Agent Rodgers in Mexico City that he might wisely counsel Americans resident there. He will not communicate it to Carranza officials.

RUSHING HELP TO AUSTRILIANS

The Germans Arrived Too Late to Relieve the Austrians at Lutsk.

London.—Russian semi-official reports that the Austrian General Pfanner's army has been cut in two and is in precipitate retreat, seem to be borne out by Russian official statement that the Russians have occupied three towns on the Sereth river, and the admission in the Austrian communication that Russian troops have crossed the River Sereth.

The Russians are pressing close on the rear of the Austrians in Bukovina, who were compelled to retreat hastily after the fall of Czernowitz. Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says the Russians covered 13 miles in one day in advancing southward from Czernowitz, and that the army of General Pfanner is believed to have been split into two or more segments.

It is stated that the Austrians and Germans have sent reinforcements to the southwestern front from the Italian, French and Balkan war zones, as well as from the Pinsk and Baranovitch regions. The Germans arrived too late at the Lutsk front to relieve the Austrians, having reached this region three days after the beginning of General Brusiloff's drive.

The occupation by Russian troops of the towns of Zadova, Stroginetz and Gliboka, on the River Sereth, was announced by the Russian war office. Three German attacks made on the French positions northwest of Hill No. 321 were repulsed by the fire of the French machine guns, according to an official statement issued by the French war office. The Germans are heavily bombarding the French positions in the neighborhood of Vaux, Chapitre and Chaitancourt.

MANY WITH LARGE INCOMES

In the City of Philadelphia There Are More Rich Men Than in Chicago or Boston.

Last year four men in this district paid a tax on incomes of over $1,000,000, remarks a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger. Seven others worried along on from $500,000 to $1,000,000. Philadelphia and this suburban territory had 175 persons whose incomes exceeded $100,000. In England and Scotland combined there are only 300 persons whose yearly income exceeds $50,000, but Philadelphia and these eight neighboring counties had 506 persons enjoying incomes of that size last year. Now that 20 per cent gain about which Collector Lederer informed me will likely advance about 200 more persons into that $50,000 exclusive set. We reside in one of the very wealthiest spots on earth. Why, there are nine states in the Union which do not have a solitary individual with an income of even $100,000. No wonder they favor a high tax on big incomes! Collector Lederer also told me that Philadelphia has many more very rich men than either Chicago or Boston. Those cities, however, show a large number of men earning fairly big salaries. All Massachusetts is in the Bar-

Overall-Aprons and Breakfast Suits

Those who specialize in certain lines of apparel have demonstrated that the most utilitarian of garments may be made with an eye to beauty.

These "breakfast suits" retail around three dollars and are used for all sorts of morning wear, indoor and out, in summertime.

These useful garments are turned out by manufacturers and retailed through shops at a lower price than they can be made for at home.

Breakfast suits are made of the same cotton fabrics or of plain unbleached cottons, trimmed with striped materials.

UNITES THE COASTS

REMARKABLE HISTORY OF LINE OF CANADIAN RAILROAD.

System Built Under Obstacles Which Appear Almost Insuperable is a Monument to the Skill of Its Engineers.

A strip a hundred miles wide, extending from coast to coast, was added to the attainable vistas of Canadian territory when the first train over the new Canadian Northern Transcontinental railroad rolled into Vancouver.

Since 1896 this new railroad system has been quietly and unostentatiously covering the middle section of Canada with a gridiron of steel rails.

In part this is due to the manner of the system's upbuilding. It started 19 years ago with a modest 85-mile railroad from Gladstone to Dauphin, Manitoba.

It was also characteristic of their shrewdness that this particular 85-mile territory through which the railroad ran was already noted as the best wheat-growing land in the province.

This first little railroad made money, although the franchise for its construction had gone begging for years before it was started.

WOODEN CARS ARE PASSING

Will Have Been Replaced by Steel Coaches on All Principal Railroads in Ten Years, it is Believed.

Disappearance of wooden cars from the principal railroads of the country within a period of ten years is considered probable.

At the beginning of the year there were 14,286 all-steel coaches in service, and of the 1,094 new cars under construction only three were of wood.

The cost of replacing the wooden equipment in use with steel is heavy—not less than $229,000,000, according to estimates presented to the interstate commerce commission.

CITIZENS MUTUAL AUTO INS. CO. FIRE-THEFT-LIABILITY

Costs $100 for policy and 25¢ per h.p. HOWELL, MICH.

$280,000 saved in the pockets of our 7,000 members in comparison with rates of stock insurance companies.

The only mutual company in Michigan on the second season of successful operation.

The company was started at the right time of the year and had the first pick of the careful auto owners. No insurance written in Grand Rapids or Detroit.

The policy is drawn very carefully, but protects the owner of a car anywhere in U. S. against fire, theft and damage cases up to $5,000. Costs only $6.50 on a Ford, others in proportion.

That's the reason 500 farmers and business men are joining each week.

Good Markets—High Prices. Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses.

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The best comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sheep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the eagerness of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producers. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.
