SAVE - THE - CHURCH

This is the title of an advertisement that appeared in the Detroit Free Press last Wednesday morning, October 18th, over the signature of Dwight G. F. Warner.

It ought not to go unanswered.
It will be answered next Sunday evening. Subject:
"STONING THE CHURCH"

You are invited, especially if you believe anything in that advertisement.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Sunday, October 22nd:

10:00 A. M.—Miss Alice Gamlin of the "Billy" Sunday party will speak. Theme, "The Responsibility of Parenthood." Dr. Lau of Detroit, will sing.

11:30 A. M. Miss Gamlin speaks to all the Sunday-school scholars of Plymouth in this church.

7:00 P. M.—Answer to the Free Press Ad by the Pastor. Subject, "Stoning the Church."

WELCOME

Excursion to "Billy" Sunday Meeting, Friday, Oct. 27

Plymouth people are to be given the opportunity to attend the Sunday meetings without the inconvenience of waiting on trolley cars and running the risk of getting a seat when they get there. Next Friday, Oct. 27, a special excursion will be run, leaving here at 3:48 p. m. central time, arriving at Detroit in front of the tabernacle at 6:30 p. m., eastern time. Special reservation of seats has been provided and everyone will have a seat. The car leaves immediately after the meeting from the tabernacle and runs direct to Plymouth without change. The fare is to be 70 cents for the round trip. Tickets can be secured at the following places of business: Geo. Richwine, J. R. Rauch & Son, Ed. Huston, Gayde Bros.; also from Rev. A. L. Bell, Rev. F. M. Field, Rev. B. F. Farber. Tickets must be secured not later than Sunday night as final arrangements for cars must be made not later than Monday noon. As the cars have to be paid for regardless of their being filled or not filled, it is absolutely necessary to set a time limit for the sale of tickets. Here is an opportunity for the people of Plymouth to hear the famous evangelist without great inconvenience. Cars go directly to the tabernacle, seats are reserved and cars return directly to Plymouth from the tabernacle at the close of the meeting. Don't forget the time, 3:48, central time, Friday, Oct. 27. Secure tickets at once.

Plymouth High Football Schedule

The following is the schedule of games to be played by the local high school football team for the remainder of the season:

- October 20, Wayne at Wayne
- October 27, Belleville at Plymouth
- November 3, Pontiac at Pontiac
- November 10, Royal Oak at Plymouth
- November 17, Birmingham at Birmingham
- November 24, Wayne at Plymouth

A Most Interesting Address

The specially announced address at the Methodist tabernacle last Sunday night, when I. Solomon of New York City, a converted Jewish Rabbi, spoke on the subject of his conversion to christianity, proved a most interesting affair. Mr. Solomon paid a high tribute to the United States, saying: "I was born in Russia, without my consent, but I never knew what freedom was until I saw the statue of Liberty in New York harbor." He told of the persecutions of his people in Russia and said if the United States should be drawn into war there would be two million Russian Jews in this country who would fight for America. The speaker was very fervent in telling what christianity meant to him, although in becoming a christian he was ostracized by his parents and family and all his friends.

Rally Day for Young People

Miss Alice Gamlin, a member of the Sunday Campaign party, is to speak in the First Presbyterian church twice next Sunday. At the morning service at ten o'clock Miss Gamlin speaks especially to parents. She has had wide experience in work among children and has a message to parents which she will bring at this service. At 11:30 o'clock Miss Gamlin speaks to all the Sunday-school scholars of Plymouth and any other young people who wish to attend. All the churches and Sunday-schools unite in this service. Dr. Lau, well known in musical circles of Detroit, will be present. He will sing at the morning service and direct the singing at the service for young people. This will be a meeting to be greatly enjoyed and is an opportunity for Plymouth people to hear a gifted woman who is doing a great work.

County Farm Agent for Wayne County

Last week Wednesday Supervisor Ratenbury presented a resolution to the board of supervisors favoring the appointment of county farm agent for Wayne county, the same as is now maintained in 26 counties of the state, to co-operate with the federal and state authorities in the carrying on of farm extension work. The communication was referred to the ways and means committee, who reported favorably on the matter Wednesday of this week. A delegation of farmers from this vicinity were present at this time to urge the appointment of a county agent, and G. C. Raviler addressed the board and told of the great benefits to be derived in the appointment of an agent in this county.

Vegetable Growers Meet

The Plymouth Vegetable Growers' association held a meeting at the Grange hall last Thursday evening. A delegation of vegetable growers from Xpsilanti were present to get some ideas as to the organization of the local association, with a view to organizing a similar one. The matter of making an effort to get a branch experimental station established here was taken up and it is not unlikely that something of this kind may be secured for Plymouth if the right effort is put forth. The association decided to put on a course of lectures on all lines of farming for the coming winter. More particulars about this will be given later.

Young People Pleasantly Entertained

Nearly fifty young men and women were entertained at the Methodist parsonage last Tuesday evening by Rev. and Mrs. Field, the evening being spent in music and games, after which refreshments were served. The young people resolved themselves into a business meeting of the Epworth League and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:
President—Alton Richwine
Vice Presidents and Heads of Departments—Misses Bertha Crossman, Marilla Farrand, Edna Richwine, Ethel Smitherman
Secretary—Miss Ada Dagggett
Treasurer—Robert Jolliffe
Pianist—Miss Nellie Huger
Chorister—Evered Jolliffe
The first meeting this season will be held at six o'clock next Sunday evening and the newly-elected president, Alton Richwine, will be the leader.

Had Car Stolen

A Dodge car belonging to B. D. Brown of this place, was stolen from Cadillac Square, Detroit, last Sunday evening. Mr. Brown's son Harry had driven the machine to Detroit and left it parked only a short time when upon his return he found that it had been taken. He immediately reported the theft to the police and late Monday afternoon the car was found on Chene street, where it had been abandoned. As far as they could tell the machine had been driven about two hundred miles and was somewhat damaged. The extra tire, rim, tools and driving gloves had been stolen. No clue to the joy riders has been found. The car was insured.

Dancing School in Penniman Hall

Dancing school will begin in Penniman hall, Tuesday, November 7. Children's class from 4 to 5:30 p. m.; evening class from 7:30 to 9:00 p. m., after which an assembly will be held until 11:30. Price, five dollars for the term of ten lessons. Fancy dancing and private lessons given if desired. For further particulars inquire of Mrs. E. L. Riggs, Phone 86 F-3.

Will Deliver Temperance Address

Rev. Frank M. Field, pastor of the local Methodist church, has decided to take a hand in the State-wide Prohibition campaign in a local way, and at the Methodist tabernacle next Sunday evening will give a part of an address which made a decided hit in the local option campaign in Delta county last spring. "The Criminal at the Bar" is the subject of this address, which featured in the strenuous campaign in the liquor stronghold in the north. After giving it several times in the county Mr. Field was requested by the campaign manager to appear as the "losing shot" in the campaign in the big Gladstone tabernacle, where on the night before election he spoke to a thousand people.

In And Around Plymouth

The Oxford Leader is of the opinion that unless the price of news print paper stops soaring it will be cheaper to print in dollar bills.

Northville has found a way to improve its water system by utilizing the Saddle springs near the village by the installation of motor and pumps.

Nate Caverly, of Brighton, whose back was broken last summer in an auto accident, is reported as gradually failing and he is not expected to survive much longer.

At a special election held Tuesday, the village of Redford defeated a proposition to bond the village for $100,000, payable in five years for sewers, by a vote of 165 to 9.

The board of supervisors have appointed Arthur C. Whitcomb tax commissioner of Wayne county for the next two years at a salary of $3,500. Mr. Whitcomb has been chief clerk under County Clerk Farrel for a number of years.

Supt. Kennedy of the county good roads commission expects to have 4 1/2 miles of concrete roadway completed next week on the Northville end of the new road being built from that village to Grand River avenue. If the season should be favorable it may be possible that the road will be completed this fall.

The locating of the Harroun Motors Corporation plant at Wayne will be a big boost for that town. Arrangements are now under way for the building of one hundred houses in the village. The council has granted the company concessions in the way of water and sewer extensions and will provide for the ultimate extension of the village limits.

KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT AND HEW TO THE BATTLE LINE

By Dwight G. F. Warner Campaign Manager Michigan Home Rule League

As campaign manager for the Michigan Home Rule League I want to have a distinct, clear-cut understanding with the men and women of Michigan.

I want everybody to know, at all times, just where I stand on every phase of the fight—and why. I shall make a truthful, straightforward presentation of my case and I am going to ask the people of Michigan to back me up in my demand that those who are advocating prohibition and opposing Home Rule and local self-government shall be held to the strictest accountability for their every utterance in this contest.

I am opposed to prohibition for many reasons and every one of these reasons is sufficient to condemn prohibition in the eyes of every good citizen.

I am opposed to prohibition because it is a dishonest measure. It is dishonest because it is not and is not intended to be a prohibition measure. It would simply change the channels through which liquors are supplied to consumers in Michigan.

It is a dishonest measure because it would destroy property without compensation; increase taxes on real estate and personal property, and deprive men of their employment without giving anything of value in return.

I am opposed to prohibition because it is unsound as a governmental policy. Even if prohibition were intended to prohibit it would not be enforceable, and to put upon the statutes or write into the Constitution a law that is not to be enforced is to make hypocrites of our people and perjurers of our public servants.

I am opposed to prohibition because it drives from the liquor business every law-abiding man engaged in the business and at the same time attracts the class and vicious element and protects them in their lawlessness.

I am opposed to prohibition because it makes the proper regulation of the liquor business practically an impossibility. It puts the law in the hands of the class and vicious element and protects them in their lawlessness.

I am opposed to prohibition because I believe in the separation of church and state and I most seriously object to the injection of religious opinion into the state's political affairs, knowing as I do that religion is not to be used as a cloak for the extension of hatred and strife, bitterness, and persecution.

I am for Home Rule because I believe in local self-government in all matters pertaining to local affairs and because I know that it is essential to our American form of government to force the opinions of one community upon another.

Prohibition, even if it should be made to prohibit, as there is no prohibition whatever that it will ever prohibit, is not and cannot be a reasonable measure. Its only real reason, that temperance means self-control and prohibition means control by others.

The professional prohibitionists do not care in their advocacy of prohibition by any means or means of prohibition. They care only for their own selfish interests and for this very reason shall demand and expect the concentration of every Michigan man who values his right to control his own personal conduct under the guidance of the conscience that was given to him by his Creator.

that the fight for prohibition in the frankly units, town, city, county and State, has but one object and that is to lead up to nation-wide prohibition, which is intended to destroy even the right of a State to reject prohibition no matter how overwhelming may be the majority sentiment against such preposterous invasion of individual and community rights.

Other objections, and they are manifold, will be brought out as the campaign progresses, but what I want to do now is to urge the people of Michigan to co-operate with me in demanding that the issue be clear-cut and that the attitude and purpose of the leaders of both sides shall be well defined.

The people of Michigan should demand that the prohibitionist campaign shall declare clearly and frankly why they are advocating prohibition and just what they propose it shall mean to the people of this State.

The people of Michigan have a right to know what the prohibitionists mean when they talk of prohibition and what they are for it. They have a right to know whether or not it is intended to prohibit, and if so, to what extent. They have a right to know whether it is the purpose of the prohibitionists to shut out liquor from the State of Michigan or whether it is their purpose to have this State flooded with shipments of liquor from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York and certain parts of Canada.

They have a right to know just what unit of government control is advocated by the prohibitionists. They have a right to know why the prohibitionists can advocate Home Rule and local self-government in one State, county unit in another, State-wide prohibition in another, and nation-wide prohibition for all.

They have a right to know what element of sincerity there may be in the prohibition movement when the professional prohibitionists insist upon providing in their prohibition laws ways and means whereby consumers shall obtain liquors in wholesale quantities.

They have a right to know why the Nation-wide prohibition bill, supported even now by the very men who are demanding State-wide prohibition for Michigan, is so worded as to provide for the lawful manufacture, transportation and importation of liquors in wholesale quantities for personal use throughout the length and breadth of this Nation.

They have a right to know why the Hobson bill is so drawn as to make lawful the establishment of a distillery on every farm in the United States and the establishment of a kitchen bar in every home in the land.

They have a right to know why the professional prohibitionists talk so hysterically upon the subject of drunkenness and contend so vociferously for the sacrifice of any and every fundamental governmental principle that may stand in the way of prohibition when these very prohibitionists are committed, heavily and soul, to the preservation of the lawful right of every man to make and use as much liquor as his blood will hold.

I yield place to no man in my opposition to interference and in my advocacy of that self-control which means real freedom of choice and for this very reason shall demand and expect the concentration of every Michigan man who values his right to control his own personal conduct under the guidance of the conscience that was given to him by his Creator.

The Formidable Tom.

A writer, traveling on foot through the southern mountains studying the people for literary purposes, came upon a man of whom he sought information as to the location of a certain cabin where he had been advised to put up for the night. "You'll get there," asked the man. "Well, Tom's a first-class man, take him just right, but he's mighty queer." "What do you mean?" "It's like this: Tom'll be settin' outside, most likely, an' he'll see you all an' of you all don't suit him he may set the dawg on you. If he don't and you gets to talkin' with him, and say anything he don't like he may throw you down an' tramp on you all. But of you all's too careful in your talk, on the other hand, he's liable to get suspicious an' take you all for a spy an' use his gun first an' ask questions afterwards. But it ain't no use tryin' to get by without stoppin'. If you all want to try that, it would be all up, for he'd think you all was proud an' haughty. If you all wants to come over the mountain whole, don't go past Tom's cabin without stoppin', whatever you do."—New York Times.

Never Pays to Wait Too Long.

Some of us let mighty good opportunities slip by, waiting for inspiration, or the psychological moment, all the time forgetting that illness never inspired anybody to do anything.

Enterprising Eye.

"How did you get such a brisned eye, Rastus?" "Well, boss, I was out a-lookin' for trouble, an' dis yere eye was de fust to find it."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Paradox.

No word upon the lips of humanity would be more true today than the paradox "what I have I have," for the creative force grows in proportion as it is generously expended and, with life itself, divides as it is eked out and repressed.

The business men of Sturgis donned overalls and with pick and shovel leveled the grounds surrounding the new theater which is being erected by a manufacturing company for the amusement of its employees.

Benefits of Sleep.

Sleep is not a matter of convenience, but a necessity. It should be made a comfort and the sleeping room should be the most pleasing place to its occupant of all places in the house. Far more time is spent in the sleeping room than in any other place during the course of 24 hours. Almost every healthy adult requires eight hours' sleep. If the system is kept up to its highest standards of health, and may require several hours more. The bedroom should be a place of rest, quiet, comfort, cheery, quiet in color, and tone, soothing in its fitness to the character of the occupant. It should be conducive to repose, to happy thoughts as companions to the hand of sleep.

At Least, Just at That Time.

Rastus, the burly colored man, was telling a worse for wear-and-wine-stained fellow up the dormitory steps, pausing and wiped the perspiration from his brow when a bystander felt himself moved to make comment. "What is your official capacity, Rastus?" "Who, me?" was the reply. "Well, I'll tell you right now, boss, and it's this yere I'm de director ob sports at dis yere institution ob learnin', yassah, de G'rector ob sports."

Too Late for Regrets.

Nancy was ready to go to her first party. "Try to be careful of this little sissy dress, dear," cautioned her mother. "I am afraid it will not be so pretty after it is washed." An hour later Nancy came running home, sobbing wildly, holding up the skirt of her blue frock. "It did be careful," she sobbed. "but the ice cream fell in my lap. Oh, now I wish I had gone bare naked to the party!"

The Extra Block.

Mary, aged five, had built a bed with her blocks, but had one block left. She knew she must use this block, too, for her teacher had said to use all the blocks. She studied a while, then exclaimed: "Oh, that will be the bed-bug."

Playing Safe.

Real Cause for Worry.

Parker—"What's wrong? You seem very worried." Streeter—"I am. I wrote two notes—one to my brother asking him if he took me for a fool, and the other to Miss Golding asking her if she would be mine. While I was out somebody telephoned. 'Yes,' and for the life of me I don't know which of 'em it was."

Genial Man Always Liked.

The genial man has a kind word or smile for all whom he meets. He is ever ready to hear with sympathy the tale of another's grief, to give such consolation and aid as he can. He does not feel his place in society so insecure that he is in danger of losing it by speaking to one outside of "his circle."

Ancient Industry of Venice.

From decaying Rome the manufacture of glass was transferred to Constantinople, thence, in the seventh century, to Venice, which for many hundred years was to remain the center of the industry, the Venetian goblets and drinking cups being exported all over the world.

The Haglographa.

The Haglographa is Greek for "sacred writings." The name covers 11 books—Ruth, Psalms, Job, Proverbs, Canticles, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Daniel, Esther, Ezra and Chronicles, to give them in the order in which they occur in the Jewish Talmud.

Great Man Superstitious.

The learned Doctor Johnson had a special dislike of stepping over a threshold with the left foot foremost, and he was often seen to make a great circuit in order to avoid a certain hallway in Leicester Fields, which he believed to be fatal to him.

PATTENGILL ASKS REMOVAL OF NAME

Declares He Is Not a Candidate for Governor.

ON TICKET BY ONE VOTE

Lansing Man Requests Secretary of State to Place Him on Ballot to Be Voted on in November Election.

Lansing.—Henry R. Pattengill of Lansing has written Secretary of State Vaughan that he is not a candidate for governor on the National Progressive ticket, and does not want his name printed on the ballot.

In the primary election Mr. Pattengill received one vote for governor on the National Progressive ticket. One vote was also registered for Henry Ford as the Progressive's gubernatorial candidate. The tie was broken by the board of canvassers by drawing lots and the nomination went to the Lansing man.

However, Mr. Pattengill, who was one of the organizers of the Bull Moose party in 1912 and was the National Progressive candidate for governor two years ago, is now supporting Charles E. Hughes, the Republican candidate for president, and declares he is not a candidate for office himself this year.

Predicts Long Stay at Border.

Michigan guardsmen will see more service at the border than all organizations from other states, in the opinion of Col. J. S. Hersey, adjutant general.

"It will be several months, at least, I think, before the Michigan troops will be mustered out," he said. "There are several indications to this end."

"In the first place the Michigan troops are admitted to be in better condition for service than the majority of the organizations at the border, not only as far as equipment is concerned, but in personnel. Compared to the other state troops, the Michigan soldiers were exceptionally well equipped, while they are among the few who were immunized against typhoid fever and smallpox before reaching the border.

"Another thing is that the Eleventh division, composed of Michigan and Ohio troops, is now complete. It seems probable that the war department will keep this division intact."

"Many of the National Guard organizations have been mustered out. It is absurd to think that the troops would be at the border if none were needed there, and it is reasonable to believe that the more troops sent to their home stations the more probable it will be that it will be some time before the Michigan guardsmen are relieved from service."

Hits Health Regulations.

"At 10 cents a quart the consumer is paying too much for milk. Somebody is making just a little too much profit, and that somebody is not the farmer."

That, in a nutshell, is the idea which James W. Holme, state dairy and food commissioner, has about the milk question. Contrary to most people, however, Mr. Holme insists that not all of the blame belongs to the distributor. A large part of the present high price of lactical fluid is due to "impossible, impracticable and impracticable" sanitary and health regulations, he says.

"Don't put all the blame of the high price of milk on the distributor," he urges. "Everybody knows that this year a peculiar condition arises because there is no fall pasture. That is going to make milk scarce. But don't forget, too, that these theorists and fanatics on the boards of health are responsible for a lot of rise in the price of milk."

"Every time they put a new regulation into effect, one which is impracticable, impossible and impracticable, as most of them are, they tend to create a monopoly and up goes the price. That has been the history not only in this state but in all other states, where the fanatics have been able to control legislation, both state and municipal."

Mothers' Pensions Increased.

According to Secretary Murray of the state board of corrections and charities the total amount expended in Michigan under the so-called mothers' pension law last year was $408,684.10, an increase of $124,338.03 over the previous year.

"Within the past year there were filed with the probate judges 1,812 petitions in which the matter of awards was considered," said Secretary Murray. "Awards were granted in 1,316 cases, applying to 3,755 children. The classification of mothers follows: 193 widowed, 20 unmarried, 156 deserted, 66 divorced, 62 in which husbands are in hospitals for the insane, 3 in which

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Grand Rapids.—City Physician Edwards reports that sickness in Grand Rapids during September was at the lowest mark known in years.

Dowagiac.—Floyd Timm, aged twenty-four, a druggist of Jones, is dead, his brother, Clarence, postmaster at Jones, is seriously injured, and William Miller, a mail carrier, was fatally hurt, the result of having been run into by a backing freight train on a local crossing.

Kalamazoo.—Officers solved the series of grocery store robberies, which have been taking place in Kalamazoo, when four boys confessed to the county agent that they had committed the thefts.

Menominee.—Officers elected by the Upper Peninsula Educational association convention here include S. O. Clinton of Baraga, president; H. D. Lee of Hancock, vice president; J. M. Mason of Crystal Falls, treasurer, and G. L. Brown of Marquette, secretary. One thousand teachers attended the convention. The meeting in 1917 will be at Escanaba.

husbands are in institutions for the blind, and 23 in which husbands are in state penal institutions.

"The percentage of increase over the number of petitions filed the previous year is 9.5 and over the number granted 6.5. The gain in the number in which awards were granted is made up of cases to which the law was extended by the legislature of 1915; cases in which husbands are in hospitals for the insane, institutions for the blind and penal institutions.

"The average amount of the award paid per week per child is $1.075 and for the previous year $1.135.

Government Crop Report.

A summary of the October crop report for the state as compiled by the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture, is as follows:

Corn.—October 1 forecast, 47,800,000 bushels; production last year (final estimate), 56,000,000 bushels.

All Wheat.—Preliminary estimate, 12,631,000 bushels; production last year (final estimate), 20,448,000 bushels.

Apples.—October 1 forecast, 4,080,000 barrels; production last year (final estimate), 3,150,000 barrels.

Peaches.—Estimated production 1916, 2,010,000 bushels; estimated production 1915, 2,300,000 bushels.

Beans.—Preliminary estimate, 3,730,000 bushels; production last year (final estimate), 4,250,000 bushels.

Prices.—The price given here is the average on October 1 this year, and the second average on October 1 last year: Wheat, $1.39 and 99 cents per bushel; corn, 85 and 77 cents; oats, 45 and 34 cents; potatoes, $1.38 and 40 cents; hay, $10 and $12.25 per ton; eggs, 27 and 23 cents per dozen.

Camp Ferris Deserted.

Camp Ferris.—Practically all that was left of the tented city that had stood here for months, following the calling out of the National Guard by President Wilson, was destroyed by fire, following the departure of the last units of the Michigan National Guard for the Texas border. Major F. L. Wells, senior muster officer; Lieutenants Clarence Crandall, E. C. Rimmer and Capt. O. H. Tower, who were the only officers left at Camp Ferris, were turned out of houses and buses early in the morning when the fire started from storks from the chimney in the tent formerly occupied by Brigadier General Kirk.

Camp Ferris had practically been deserted when a train of 26 cars, carrying ambulance companies No. 1, Detroit, and No. 2, Bay City, and Field Hospital No. 1, Grand Rapids, left for El Paso, Tex., where these troops will join the Eleventh division. Major Howard A. Grabe of the field hospital, who has been camp surgeon since the departure of Col. Charles Wilcox, U. S. A., had charge of the section.

Hope to Come Home Soon.

El Paso, Tex.—Members of the Thirty-first and Thirty-second Michigan regiments are happy because they believe that they may be sent home soon. The two regiments are back in camp here after the maneuvers of the Tenth division at Las Cruces had been cut short by orders directing the entire division to return at once to El Paso. The reason for the sudden change in plans was not made known, but the men believed that it meant that they might return home at once, and there was almost as much rejoicing in the company streets as if orders had come to entrain for Michigan.

The hopes of the men were strengthened when it became known that the wives of two Detroit officers had been told by the wife of a high regular army officer that they might prepare to leave El Paso for home October 19 or 20; that the Georgia troops would arrive here October 18, and the Michigan troops would return home in the same cars.

It is believed that the Thirty-first will be the next regiment to be sent home, and that it will be mustered out at Fort Wayne, instead of Camp Ferris. This was hinted by Colonel Barlow.

General Kirk was expected to assume formal command of the Michigan brigade, with the reuniting of the three Michigan regiments and other units of the state troops here. He saw his first border service with his troops here; he rode at the head of the Thirty-second regiment in maneuvers at Las Cruces.

DEATH AND MADAM GOTTFRIED.

ONE fine day in 1825, Herr Rumpf, a respectable and prosperous wheelwright of Bremen, felt much like dancing and singing...

So this merry wheelwright felt that the occasion needed a celebration, and he went to his favorite gasthaus and invited everybody to have something.

"You have been so busy these many years," said he, "that you don't know what's been happening around you."

Herr Rumpf Laughed at Such a Story.

people sicken and die. If you must live in that house, at least see that Madam Gottfried moves out.

Herr Rumpf laughed at such a story. He was a hard-headed, practical man and didn't believe in the evil eye...

Terrible Mistake. "Hello, Brown," said Jones. "I saw your wife this morning. By Jove, that new coat of hers must have cost a pot of money."

"No, not exactly," replied Brown, moodily. "Fact is she got it by accident."

"Well, old fellow, it was this way. I got home rather late the other night. The hall was very dark, but I could just distinguish a figure standing by the chair."

In a few weeks Madam Gottfried was practically a member of the Rumpf family. She spent most of her time in their part of the house...

Then the hired nurse who had been in attendance, and who hadn't yet left the house, fell sick, and also a servant maid; three apprentices who had their meals at the Rumpf home began to suffer from the same mysterious malady.

Led Astray. "Did you take your son into your office for the summer, as you planned to do?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Gracolin, "but I found his presence there highly demoralizing, so I sent him off to a summer resort."

"Indeed?" "Yes, I fell into the habit of going out with him every afternoon to see a baseball game and neglected my business."

In Despair. "Is there such a thing as a model cook?" "There may be wax ones," answered the melancholy subordinate, "but I've never seen one."

house and soon recovered. The doctor wore a path to the house, and the undertaker looked in that direction constantly. Rumpf's friends begged him to open his eyes before it was too late...

An examining magistrate visited the house, and the result of his investigation was that Madame Gottfried went to jail. Then a curious thing happened. This plump and handsome woman suddenly became a repulsive hag.

There were many examinations, and months elapsed before the truth was known. At first the madam denied everything, but the constant examinations and questionings finally overcame her composure...

He had bought her home. She had also poisoned the nurse, the servant and the apprentices, and could assign no reason for it.

SAVE MICHIGAN FROM THE FATE OF MAINE

By Dwight G. F. Warner, Campaign Manager Michigan Home Rule League

Here are three facts that the voters of Michigan ought to consider when listening to the appeals of the statewidens to put Michigan in the class with Maine...

The second fact is that there is one city among all the municipalities in the forty-eight commonwealths of this nation—just one city that has the disgraceful distinction of having one arrest for drunkenness for every eight persons who have the misfortune to live within its bacchanalian boundaries.

The third in this trio of damning facts is related in a news dispatch from Bangor, Maine, and printed in the Boston American. The story in itself is a plain tale easily told in a few words...

I want every man and woman in Michigan to read this news item that I am reproducing herewith and I want every reader to ponder over the unspeakable iniquity of trying to foist upon Michigan the same kind of law that has debauched Maine...

BANGOR, ME., Sept. 8.—Having won his point against Mayor Woodman by threatening to resign if he could not keep the saloons closed during the street car strike, Police Chief Gilman says now that he will keep them closed through the strike...

The difference between the chief and the mayor came down to a point where the chief tendered his resignation. This settled the matter. The mayor withdrew and the saloons remained closed, just as the chief meant to have them.

CONDUCTOR SET FREE. Charles E. Sleeper, a non-union conductor, who appeared before Judge Wentworth today to answer a charge of threatening to shoot Martin Nagle, a strike sympathizer, was found not guilty.

Judge Wentworth warned both the strike-breakers and the strikers against carrying weapons and told the strike-breakers not to mind being called names. He said that he himself had been called a "scab" for riding on one of the company's cars.

The so-called Home Rule Amendment is a "wolf in sheep's clothing"

Editorial From the Detroit Evening News, a Neutral Paper.

It is an effort to hide the real issue.

It is an attempt to confuse the voter by making it necessary to vote YES on PROHIBITION and NO on the so-called "home rule."

The bees know not whether they will eat the honey they harvest. As they go from flower to flower, collecting more honey than themselves and their offspring can need, let us go from reality to reality, seeking food for the incomprehensible flame, and thus, certain of having fulfilled our organic duty, prepare ourselves for whatever may befall. The very suspicion of the possible aimlessness of its exhausting effort will only render the duty the clearer, will only add more purity, power, disinterestedness and freedom to the arduous wherewith it still seeks.—Maurice Maeterlinck.

THE COUNTERPLOT

By KEITH KENYON.

Susy opened and closed her fan impatiently while Bob went on pleadingly: "You used to care, Sue. I'm positive you did. At least you were awfully nice to me, and at the Washington ball you didn't mind a bit when I took six dances. It's all I can do now to get one."

"You're greedy! Just because it happened that you got more than your share of dances once you expect the same thing forever."

"You are begging the question, Sue. If one must use plain English, here goes: You know I love you. I told you so two months ago, and you promised to answer my question in a week. That was the week Bert Ewing came, and you scarcely looked my way once while he was here. I guess you forget that I'm still waiting. I can't stand this suspense any longer. What is it to be—yes or no, Sue?"

She temporized. "Suppose it's no?" "It's just about what I expected!"

It was the spark needed to send the tinder into flame. "You're jealous—that's what you are, and I'm sure it would be anything but bliss to spend the rest of my days with you. So I'll say 'No' since you're so anxious to hear it."

Bob made no answer. The music had stopped and the return to the house was made in silence. Susy convinced herself that she had done exactly right in refusing Bob. "If I had said 'Yes' to him tonight, that would have meant slavery for the rest of my days."

But that night, after she got into bed, somehow things looked different. The despair in Bob's eyes had gone straight to her heart and stayed there. So she cried herself to sleep.

Daylight lightened her remorse, however. She realized now that although she was sure she loved Bob, she was just as certain that he was unduly jealous. And so her busy brain hatched a plan that was calculated to set everything right in the future.

So she wrote the following letter to Bert Ewing and dispatched it forthwith: "Dear Bert: You told me to count upon you when I needed a friend. I do need one now, and I want you to do me an unusual favor. I don't want to be engaged to you for two reasons—first, because I don't love you, and second, because you don't love me—you would let me convenient to let people think we are for a little while? You see (I may as well tell you) it's Bob. He's so jealous and I want to cure him before I take him for good and all. I refused him last night."

"Faithfully," "SUE."

To which letter Bert replied in the affirmative, declaring his intention of spending the next two weeks in town anyway and saying they could "fix things up."

So Bert arrived and, by paying Susy constant attention and acting the part of the devoted lover, the rumor soon got abroad that they were engaged.

But, to Susy's consternation, the effect upon Bob was not all that could have been desired. His spirits had risen like a barometer on a bright sunny day, the cause being apparently pretty Isabel Fleming, whose brother happened to be Bert Ewing's host.

SECRETLY SUSY RAGED

Secretly Susy raged. "Bob's making a perfect goose of himself. The idea of pretending to be so completely annihilated when I said 'No.'"

Bert had to leave finally, and Susy went with him to the station. There they met Isabel and Bob waiting for the same train. Susy's heart sank when she saw the traveling bags. It looked like a honeymoon! But, to her relief, Isabel said good-by to her escort and turned to Bert as the train came in.

"Take good care of her!" called Bob. "You bet I will!" returned Bert as he and Isabel disappeared inside.

Bob faced Susy. "May I drive you home?" It was the first time he had spoken since the night she had refused him.

"Yes," she answered. And then with a catch in her voice: "Oh, Bob, when you can't get Isabel you want me! Do you think it's fair! You've scarcely looked at me lately."

"It works both ways, I think," he said grimly. "You haven't had much time yourself."

"But I didn't mean anything, Bob. Really there was nothing in it all."

"All right. I'm glad of it, but I don't see why you're telling me."

"Be—because I don't love anyone but you, Bob, and I'm sorry I said 'No.'"

They were in the motor now and had taken the long way home. The road, walled in by trees on both sides, was quite secluded.

"You're sure you mean that, are you, Sue?" "Yes, I'm sure! Very sure!"

He drew a long breath. "It's good to hear you say so, dear. I've always loved you devotedly and I do this minute, dear little Susy."

"But why were you so nice to Isabel?" He hesitated. "We were good friends; that's all. Just like you and Ewing, I suppose. Do you know where they are going?"

"They? No." "To be married. They've been engaged all along." (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Cervantes Versus Turks. Cervantes did his bit against the Turks at Lepanto in 1571. He was ill with fever at the time, but insisted on fighting, and he lost his arm in the battle. This was but one of the many exciting episodes of Cervantes' eventful life. Born in 1547, he led a wandering life for many years, ultimately becoming a soldier in the Italian army, and seeing active service at Navarino and Tunis. In 1575 he set out for Spain, but was captured by Barbary pirates and held for ransom for five years. When freed he tried to earn a living with his pen, but was unsuccessful, and in 1587 we find him engaged in gathering stores for the Armada. His unbusinesslike methods lost him this post, and until his death in 1616, he lived in extreme poverty, despite the great and immediate success of "Don Quixote," which he published in 1605.

How Catarh is Contracted Mothers are sometimes so thoughtless as to neglect the colds which their children contract. The inflammation of the mucous membrane, at first acute, becomes chronic catarrh, a disease that is seldom cured and that may prove a life's burden. Many persons who have this loathsome disease will remember having had frequent colds at the time it was contracted. A little forethought, a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy judiciously used, and all this trouble might have been avoided. Obtainable everywhere.—Advt.

Widely Desires to be Bidden Vocabulary. He and the Golf Links.

The members of a certain club were recently getting tired of the freckled face of a local hanging over the hedge who had essayed a round on the links, and late, there was the same man apparently listening to everything was said, and making copious notes on a very grimy pocketbook.

The official interviewed the mother and lodged a complaint. "I can't see that Willie's doing any harm," said the lady. "I've lost anything, have you?"

The secretary denied having read such a thing. "I'm sure I don't want you out of 'seem' a lot of old men a ball about," continued the mother, with some asperity. "I never said a word about it at all, but I'll make inquiries and let you know."

She called at the secretary's next day in high dudgeon. "Ought to be ashamed of yourself, all the lot of you, too," she declared. "I've had a look at that pocketbook you was talkin' such a lot about. Disgraceful, that's what it is!"

"Yes, disgraceful. Willie's be playin' at soldiers with the neighbors' children lately, and they've made a drill sergeant."

"Well?" asked the secretary. "It ain't well," snapped the mother. "Most of your members have been in 'im play the part too lately. I've got a pocketbook full of swear words."

KANSAS PROHIBITION

Kansas is the state "glorified" by prohibition. Prohibition orators love to talk about Kansas. They boast that prohibition has been proved to be workable there. They say "Kansas has solved the liquor problem."

Has it?

THE TESTIMONY OF TOPEKA, KANSAS. THE ACTUAL FACTS—
(From the Pittsburgh Dispatch, January 23, 1916)

Topeka, Kansas, Jan. 22—Topeka, the state capital, the citadel of prohibition in America, on complete returns in the office of the county clerk, consumed in 1915, more than 400,000 quarts of liquor, mostly whiskey. These reports are made by three railroads and two express companies and are official. They do not include the strong drink brought in suitcases and handbaggage. Complete returns, it is estimated, will show 500,000 quarts of liquor brought into Topeka by the transportation lines and smuggled across the Missouri line, and consumed by Topeka residents in 1915.

In Topeka the police have discovered blind tigers operating and drug stores and "near-beer" saloons openly, flagrantly selling liquors within three hundred feet of police headquarters.

Topeka is the town where Carrie Nation made her reputation demolishing saloons. Booze is being shipped into every city and town in Kansas.

Every city and town in Kansas has its own blind tigers, its own boot-leggers, pocket-peddlers. Every railroad and express company carries liquor into every city and town in the state.

Kansas has "solved" the liquor question in its own way, by throwing out the open saloon and substituting for it the vicious, law-breaking boot-legger and blind-tiger.

Kansas has been under prohibition for a generation. Prohibitionists boast the youth of Kansas has never seen a saloon. They never mention the number of pocket-peddlers that approach him, the blind-tiger he patronizes.

The people of Kansas today are under the rule of prohibition. They cannot shake it off because of the power of professional prohibitionists, who make a livelihood by prohibition legislation.

But after 40 years Kansas residents still want and use liquor and break laws to get it.

After 40 years of operation prohibition in Kansas does not prohibit.

The mass of our future is in prospect for Michigan should it adopt state-wide prohibition this fall.

Do not know in Michigan.

Vote for Home Rule by which each city, village and township in Michigan can settle its liquor question for itself. State-wide prohibition will not prohibit you solve no problem, bring about no reform. Prohibition in Michigan would mean the forcing upon thousands of a law that is unworkable, unenforced, that they would hold in contempt.

Home Rule would solve the liquor question in these cities, villages and townships for the state. It would permit each to vote "yes" or "no" on this important question.

Home Rule being political progress means free returns, free selection of this important question.

Vote "YES" for HOME RULE—TRUE RULE, vote "NO" against state-wide prohibition November 7th.

DOES PROHIBITION PROHIBIT?

Efforts to regulate the personal habits of peoples seldom achieve results, for the reason that the reformer ignores the vital distinction between use and abuse—between Temperance and Intemperance.

Such efforts invariably result in rebellion on the individual's part and contempt for the law.

Prohibition is such an effort and meets with those results.

Here is proof of the contempt and rebellion prohibition meets in Seattle. Proof that it is unwelcome, that it DOES NOT PROHIBIT.

THE SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER, Aug. 31, 1916, says:

"The amount of liquor imported into Seattle and King county alone, in the past month, runs into thousands of gallons according to the county auditor's records.

"And this is said to indicate only about half the consumption. Large quantities have been imported and distributed by bootleggers.

"Monday, August 28, was the record day in liquor permits, a total of 1,096 men and women being granted them. A week ago 1,084 were issued.

"Since Jan. 1, 1916, when the dry law became effective, 69,887 liquor permits have been issued. This means approximately that many gallons of liquor, not including beer, have been legally imported by King county and Seattle residents."

THE ISSUANCE OF PERMITS BY MONTHS FOLLOWS:

(Note the increase.)

January	2,118
February	4,269
March	6,248
April	6,250
May	7,883
June	11,117
July	13,101
August	18,901

Does this record prove that temperance is being promoted in Seattle? That prohibition prohibits?

Prohibition here, as elsewhere, fails because most people are not in sympathy with a law that curtails their rights and liberties.

Seattle is under prohibition because the people of the state thrust it upon the city. Seattle folks did not want it. Had they Home Rule, Seattle today would be free of such unwarrantable conditions.

Home Rule, not statewide prohibition, should obtain in Michigan. It permits each city, village and township to decide the liquor question for itself, not allowing interference from outside. Each, with Home Rule, could vote "wet" or "dry" as it deemed advisable. The local problem could be given local solution.

Home Rule should become part of the state constitution.

Vote "YES" for HOME RULE—TRUE RULE, vote "NO" against statewide prohibition November 7.

Writes for the smaller option amendment under which 121,000 signatures were obtained.

REQUIRE BUT LITTLE WATER

Seasoned Soldiers Learn to Make Long Marches on a Minimum Amount of Fluid.

The water question with troops on the march and in the field is one of greater difficulty than civilians know. In few ways does the superior effectiveness of hard and regularly trained troops show above raw or untrained troops than in the matter of water discipline. The regular American soldier will make a day's march on his canteen of water. If he has been in the service long he will carry his rifle, ammunition and pack over a shadeless, dusty road, through a sweltering day and come to the end of the march in fit physical condition. He has learned to make that canteen of water answer his needs. It may have been a hard lesson to learn, but he has learned it.

When the soldier has learned to do with the minimum of water he ministers to his comfort and health. Cutting down the water below the real needs of his body causes the man to lose flesh, but in a very large number of instances this is beneficial, most well-fed men having flesh to spare. It is better for a man to be dry on a march than to be always guzzling water. To be "water wise" is one of the accomplishments of a good soldier.

Much less water is required by the human system than most men think, and troops from hot and dry countries march and campaign on a surprisingly small amount. A writer telling of the Beluchis, several regiments of whom are with the Indian contingent of the British army in France and Flanders, has said of them:

"Their most extraordinary physical characteristic is the facility with which, camel-like, they can for so long a time go without drink in their burning country—a draft of water once in the 24 hours is sufficient."

NO FAVORITES IN FAMILY

Parents Sometimes Make Serious Error in Showing Open Preference—May Spoil Young Life.

Favoritism among children should never be shown, for it is this oversight of parents, this habit of making favorites, preferring one child to another, which often rankles in children's minds, and is later the cause of jealousy and dissension in families.

Often enough the early treatment of one of these children by the parents causes the younger ones to expect too much from the Cinderella of the family.

She should, they think, give in at all times to them, relinquish her own desires and tastes in their favor, and, so used are they to her giving in to them that they almost fail to recognize the fact that she is their sister, that she should possess any individual rights, an opinion of her own.

Many a young girl's life has been spoiled in this way; her youth and girlhood blighted. Such a girl, downtrodden and subdued, naturally thinks little of herself; and not realizing that she possesses good qualities, prepossessing features that might attract, becomes old-fashioned in her style, dress and manner; and often as not her very unselfishness in not seeing after herself, dressing herself better, is the cause of her being looked down upon as dowdy and a fright.

Men, even, in seeking a wife often forget to notice the good qualities beneath that plain costume, and many suitors recognize when too late that they would have been wiser in choosing that loving, tender, sympathetic girl, who was only considered the "ugly duckling" for their wife, than any of her more showy and brilliant sisters.

In a Calmer Moment.
The topic having turned to the subject of regret, this story was recalled by Senator Henry F. Hollis of New Hampshire:

A German named Adam became depressed over the wobbly way in which the world was moving, and in a hasty moment jumped from the town wharf into the river. The crowd on returning from the river after a fruitless endeavor was met by a party named Jacob.

"Vat vas it?" queried Jacob, looking over the long-faced bunch. "Vat vas ader troubles apont?"

"Adam," answered one of the party. "He just committed suicide by jumping into the river."

"Poor old Adam!" mournfully commented Jacob. "He be sorry for dat tomorrow."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Mystery in Unclaimed Novel.

An "unclaimed" novel is the latest mystery of the London literary world. Some time ago an anonymous manuscript was left with a prominent publishing concern, which decided, in due course, to publish the same. Upon inquiry it was discovered that the author had not troubled to leave either name or address when he handed in his MS. Now all sorts of romantic conjectures have been made in connection with "Anonymous" identity and ultimate fate—without, naturally, hurting the book's chances when it appears shortly.

There was a large attendance of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the meeting held October 12, at the home of the president, Miss Cora Palm. The leaders of the program were Mrs. Safford and Miss Ada Safford who gave some excellent readings. Two very humorous poems were read by Miss Safford. One new member was enrolled.

Mrs. Killian of 82 Union street, will be hostess for the meeting of next Thursday. Time, 2:30 p. m. Leaders, Mrs. J. C. O'Bryan and Mrs. Wm. Harmon. Topics, "Why Don't They Go to Church?" "The Field That Was Ripe." "Current Events." These meetings are interesting and enjoyable. Don't miss them. Everyone welcome. Remember this lecture to be given by Michael J. Fanning, in the Presbyterian church next Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Urge your neighbors to go and let us have a big turnout for this farewell speaker.—Sept. Press.

Drive It Into the Barn

As we told you, a Low Cloverleaf gives the manure a double beating, and spreads manure eight feet wide or better. But the wonderful thing is that it does this from a box only 45 inches wide. The spreader itself is so narrow that it can be driven into any modern barn and loaded from the gutters. Only one handling of the manure for the quickest, best job of spreading you ever did. How does that sound to you?

If you have even begun to think about buying a spreader, come in and see this Low Cloverleaf. You will say you never saw a better manure spreader. It won't take long to look it over. We have one set up for you to see.

He did struggle half-heartedly against his first drink, but after he had taken it and after other drinks had gone the way of the first, he met a number of people whom he liked and to whom he was inspired to show his liking, and, strange to say, the more he drank the more of such friends he discovered. By late afternoon he was in a fantastically jubilant mood, and, seeking Kurtz, he bore him across the way to Delmonico's.

Now, Kurtz was worldly and therefore tolerant. He had grown to like and to understand his young associate very well indeed, and something about Bob's riotous disposition to gladness awoke a response in the little tailor. It was that expensive and expensive hour of the afternoon when business worries are dropped and before social cares are considered. It was cocktail time along the avenue, the hour when spouses are born and engagements broken, and as it lengthened Wharton celebrated it as in days gone by. His last regret had vanished; he was having a splendid time, when a page called him to a telephone booth.

Adoree's voice greeted him; she was speaking from his own home, and her first words almost sobered him. Something was wrong; Bob was needed quickly; Lorelei was asking for him. For more than an hour they had been vainly trying to locate him. They had succeeded in reaching the doctor, and he was there—with a nurse. Adoree's voice broke Lorelei's, who was frightened and so was the speaker. Bob had better waste no time.

When Bob lurched out of the booth he was white; the noisy group he had left rose in alarm at sight of his stricken face. His legs led him to a crooked course out of the cafe, bringing him into collision with chairs, and tables and causing him to realize for the first time how far he had allowed himself to go. In a shaking voice he called for a taxicab, meanwhile allowing the raw air of the street to cool his head.

The terror of the unknown was upon him. But regrets were unavailing. "Something had gone wrong, and Lorelei needed him. She was calling for him and he was drunk. He would reel up to bed of pain with bleared eyes, with poisoned lips. How could he kiss her? How could he explain?

The cab swung into the curb, and he scrambled out, then stumbled blindly up the steps and into the building where he lived.

Adoree met him at his own door. Wharton's impression was vague; he saw little more than the tragic widening of the girl's eyes as she recognized his condition.

"Am I as bad as that?" he stammered. "Do you think she'll notice it?" "Oh, Bob!" Adoree cried, in a stricken voice. "How could you—at this time?"

"You said she wanted me. I couldn't take time."

"Yes! She has been calling for you, but I'm sorry I found you."

A silent-footed figure in a nurse's uniform emerged from the dining room, and her first expression of relief at sight of Bob changed swiftly to a stare of startled wonderment. Bob was not too drunk to read the half-spoken protest on her lips. Then he heard his wife calling him, and realized that somehow she knew of his coming. At the sound of her voice, strangely throaty and hoarse from pain, the strength ran out of his body. The doctor heard him fumbling at the bedroom door and admitted him; then a low, aching cry of disappointment sounded, and Adoree Demorest bowed her head upon her arms.

When Bob groped his way back into the living room his look was ghastly; his face was damp; his eyes were desperate.

"She sent me away," he whispered. "Poor thing!" He winced at Adoree's tone. "God! I heard her when she saw you. I wonder if you realize—"

"Oh, yes," he nodded, slowly. "I don't get drunk all over, like most men. I'm afraid I'll never forget that cry."

He was trembling, and his terror was so pitiful that Adoree laid a compassionate hand upon his shoulder.

"Don't let go, Bob. Hold your thoughts steady and sober up. We must all help."

Darkness found Bob huddled in his chair, fighting for his senses, but as the liquor died in him tangible fancies came to life. A frightened maid began preparations for his dinner, but he ordered her away. Then when she brought him a tray, anger at the thought that his own comfort should be considered of consequence made him refuse to touch it.

At length his inactivity became unbearable, and, feeling the desperate need of sane counsel, he telephoned John Merkle. Bob was too deeply agitated more than note the banker's statement that Mr. and Mrs. Hannibal Wharton were in the city, but, recalling it later, he experienced a stab of regret that his mother was not here to comfort Lorelei in the first great crisis of her womanhood. It had been Lorelei's wish that her own mother be kept in ignorance of the truth, and so, therefore, the girl had no one to lean upon except an unpractical stage woman—and a drunken husband. In Bob's mind the play of it grew as the time crept on.

she told him. "It's one of the penalties of this business that nothing must hold the curtain; but I'll be back the minute the show is over."

"Lorelei needed you," Adoree nodded; her eyes met Bob's squarely, and he saw that they were wet. Her face was tender, and she appeared very simple and womanly at this moment. Her absurd theatricalism was gone; she was a natural, unaffected young woman.

"I wish I could do something to help," wearily continued Bob, but Adoree shook her head so violently that the barbic beaded festoon beneath her chin clicked and rattled.

"She knows you're close by; that's enough. This is a poor time to preach, but—it seems to me if you've got a bit of real manhood in you, Bob, you'll never drink again. The shock of seeing you like this—when she needed you—didn't help her any."

"I know! I know!" The words were wrung from him like a groan. "But the thing is bigger and stronger than I am. It takes both of us together to fight it. If she should—leave me, I'd never pull through and—I wouldn't want to."

Never until she left Lorelei's house and turned toward the white lights of Broadway did Adoree Demorest fully realize whether her theatrical career had carried her. Adoree knew herself to be pure. But the world considered her evil, and evil in its eyes she would remain. At this moment she would gladly have changed places with that other girl whose life hung in the scales.

John Merkle had never lost interest in Lorelei, nor forgotten her refusal of his well-meant offer of assistance. It pleased him to read into her character beauties and nobilities of which she was utterly unconscious if not actually devoid. Soon after his talk with Bob he telephoned Hannibal Wharton, making known the situation in the most disagreeable and biting manner of which he was capable. Strange to say, Wharton heard him through, then thanked him before ringing off.

When Hannibal had repeated the news to his wife, she moved slowly to a window and stood there staring down into the glittering chasm of Fifth avenue. Bob's mother was a frail, erect, impassive woman, wearied and saddened with the weight of her husband's millions. There had been a time when society knew her, but of late years she saw few people, and her name was seldom mentioned except in connection with her benefactions. Hannibal Wharton was serenely conscious of her complete accord with his every action, and in reporting Merkle's conversation he spoke minutely, as a man speaks to himself.

"John loves to be caustic; he likes to vocalize his dyspepsia," the old man muttered. Mrs. Wharton did not stir; there was something uncompromising in the rigid lines of her back and in her stiffly poised head. "People of her kind always have children," he continued, "and that's what I told Bob. I told him he was laying up trouble for himself."

"Bob had more to him than we thought," irrelevantly murmured the mother. "More than we thought?" Hannibal shook his head. "Not more than I thought. I knew he had it in him; you were the one."

"No, no! We both doubted. Perhaps this girl read him."

"Sure she read him!" snorted the father. "She read his bank book. But I fooled her."

"Do you remember when Bob was born? The doctors thought—"

"Of course I remember!" her husband broke in. "Those doctors said you'd never come through it."

"Yes! I wasn't strong."

"But you did. I was with you. I fought for you. I wouldn't let you die."

There was a silence, then Hannibal looked up to find his wife standing over him, with face strangely hunched. Her eyes were appealing, her frail figure was shaking wretchedly.

"My dear!" he cried, rising. "I can't keep it up, Hannibal. I can't pretend any longer. It's Bob's baby and it's ours—Disregarding his denial, she ran on, swiftly: "You can't understand, but I'm lonely, Hannibal, terribly lonely and sad. Bob grew up and went away, and all we had left was money. The dollars piled up; year by year they grew heavier and heavier until they squeezed our lives dry and crowded out everything. They even crowded out our son and—spoiled him. They made you into a stolid man; they came between me and the people and the things I loved; they walled me off from the world. My life is empty—empty. I want to mother something."

Hannibal inquired, hoarsely: "Not this baby, surely? Not that woman's child?"

"It's Bob's baby and our's."

"He looked down at her queerly for a moment. The breed is rotten. If he had married a decent girl—"

"John Merkle says she is splendid."

"How do you know?"

"I have talked with him. I have learned whatever I could about her, wherever I could, and it's all good. After all, Bob loves her, and isn't that enough?"

"But she doesn't love him," stormed the father. "She said she didn't. She wants his money, and she thinks she'll get it this way."

"Do you think money can pay her for what she is enduring at this minute? She's frightened, just as I was frightened when Bob was born. She's sick and suffering. But do you think all our dollars could buy that child from her? Money has made us hard, Hannibal; let's—be different."

"I'm afraid we have put it off too long," he answered, slowly. "She won't forgive us, and I'm not sure I want her to."

"Bob's in trouble. Won't you go to him?"

Hannibal Wharton opened his lips, closed them; then, taking his hat and coat, he left the room.

But as the old man went uptown his nerve failed him. He was fixed in his ways, he had a blind faith in his own infallibility. Twice he rode up in the elevator to his son's door, twice he rode down again. Hannibal settled himself to wait.

During the chill, still hours after the city had gone to rest an automobile drew up to the apartment house; when its expected passenger emerged from the building a grim-faced stranger in a greatcoat accosted him. One glance challenged the physician's attention, and he answered:

"Yes, it's all over. A boy."

"And—Mrs. Wharton, the mother?"

"Youth is a wonderful thing, and she has everything to live for. She is doing as well as could be expected. You're a relative, I presume?"

The old man hesitated, then his voice came boldly. "Yes, I'm her father."

When the doctor had driven away Hannibal strode into the building and telephoned to the Waldorf, but his words were short and oddly broken. Nevertheless they brought a light of gladness to the eyes of the woman who had waited all these hours.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Adoree Demorest, still in her glittering, hybrid costume, but heavy-limbed and dull with fatigue, paused outside her own door early that morning. The time lacked perhaps an hour of dawn, the street outside and the building itself was silent, yet from Adoree's parlor issued the sound of light fingers upon piano keys. Adoree entered, to find Campbell Pope, with collar loosened and hair on end, seated at the instrument. The room was dimly lit, the air blue and reeking with the odor of stale tobacco smoke, and the ash receiver at his elbow was piled high with burnt offerings.

Pope saw the shining eyes suddenly all and threaten to overflow; instead of the grotesquely overdressed and artificial stage favorite he beheld only a yearning woman whose face was softened and glorified as by a vision.

"I didn't know you cared for children."

Adoree shrugged; the beads at her throat clicked barbarously. "Neither did I, but I suppose every woman does if she only knew it. Tonight I began to understand what this ache inside of me means." Her gaze came back and centered upon his face; but it was frightened and panic-stricken. "I've sacrificed my right to children."

"How can you say—"

"Oh, you know it as well as I do! A snub wayed in the speaker's cheeks, then fled, leaving her white and weary. "You, of all men, must understand. I'm notorious. I'm a painted woman, a wicked woman—the wickedest woman in the land—and that reputation will live in spite of anything I can do."

She began to cry now in a way strange to Pope's experience.

Pope's habitual restraint all at once gave way. "Nonsense!" he exploded. "The thing that counts is what you are, not what you seem to be. I know the truth."

Now there was nothing sufficiently significant about these words to bring a light of wonderment and gladness to the girl's face, but her tears ceased as abruptly as they had commenced, and noting the slowly growing radiance of her expression, Campbell was stricken dumb with fright at the possible consequences of temerity. The knowledge of his shortcomings robbed him of confidence and helped to confuse him.

Adoree rose. For a moment she stood looking at him with a peculiar, tender smile, then took him by the lapels of his shapeless coat and drew his thin face down to hers.

"I'm not going to let you back out," she declared, firmly. "You asked me, didn't you?"

"Adoree! No, no! Think what you are doing," he cried, sharply.

But she continued to smile up into his eyes with a gladness that intoxicated him.

She snuggled closer to him, murmuring, cooily: "I don't want to think we'll have plenty of time to think when we're too old to talk. Now, I just want to love you as hard as you have been loving me for the last six months."

To all young fathers there comes a certain readjustment of values. To Bob, who had always led a selfish, thoughtless existence, it was at first bewildering to discover that his place at the head of his household had been usurped by another. Heretofore he had always been of supreme domestic importance, but now the order of things was completely reversed, if not hopelessly jumbled. First in consequence came this new person, tiny and vastly tyrannical because of its helplessness. Then the nurse, an awesome person—a sort of oracle and regent combined—who ruled in the name and stead of the new heir. Lorelei herself occupied no mean station in the new scheme, for at least she shared the confidence of the nurse and the doctor, and ranked above the cook and the housemaid, but not so Bob. Somewhere at the foot of the list he found his own true place.

Now, strange to say, this novel arrangement was extremely agreeable to the deposed ruler. Bob took a shameful delight in doing menial service; to fetch and to carry for all hands filled him with joy. But once outside of the premises he reassessed himself, and his importance grew as gas expands. Before long his intimate friends began to avoid him like a plague. It was his partner, Kurtz, who finally dubbed him "The pestilence that talketh in darkness and the destruction that wasteth our noondays."

One day, after Bob had acquired sufficient confidence in himself and in the baby to handle it with but a wary to the nurse, he begged permission to show it to the ballman downstairs. He returned greatly elated, explaining that the attendant, who had some impossible number of babies of his own and might therefore be considered an authority, declared this one to be the finest he had ever beheld. Oddly enough, this praise delighted Bob out of all reason. He remained in a state of suppressed excitement all that day, and on the following afternoon he again kidnapped the child for a second exhibition. It seemed that the infant's fame spread rapidly, for soon the tenants of neighboring apartments began to clamor for a sight of it, and Bob was only too eager to gratify them.

Every afternoon he took his son down stairs with him, until finally Lorelei checked him as he was going out.

"Bob, dear," she said, with the faintest shadow of a smile. "I don't think it's good for him to go out so often. Why don't you ask your father and mother to come up?"

Wharton flushed, then he stammered, "I—what makes you—think—"

"Why, I guessed it the very first day," Lorelei's smile saddened. "They needn't see me, you know."

Bob laid the child back in its bed, but that's just what they want. They want to see you, only I wouldn't let you be bothered. They're perfectly foolish over the kid; mother cries, and father—just wait." He rushed out of the room, and in a few moments returned with his parents.

Hannibal Wharton was deeply embarrassed, but his wife went straight to Lorelei and, bending over her chair, placed a kiss upon her lips. "There," said she. "When you are stronger I'm going to apologize for the way we've treated you. We're old people. We're selfish and suspicious and unreasonable, but we're not entirely to blame."

You won't be too hard on us, will you?"

The old lady's eyes were shining, the palms which were clasped over Lorelei's hand were hot and tremulous. The look of hungry yearning that greeted the elder woman's words was simple answer, and with a little choking cry she gathered the weak figure into her arms and thrilled as she felt the amber head upon her breast.

Hannibal trumpeted into his handkerchief, then cleared his throat prominently, but Bob forestalled him with a happy laugh. "Don't hold any post-mortems, dad. Lorelei knows everything you intend to say."

"I'm blamed if she does," rumbled the old man, "because I don't know myself. I'm not much on apologies; I can take 'em, but I can't make 'em." His voice rose abnormally. "Young lady, the night that baby was born I stood outside this house for hours because I was afraid to come in. And my feet hurt like the devil, too. I wouldn't trust that much sleep for the whole steel trust; but I didn't dare go back to the hotel, for mother was waiting, and I was afraid of her, too. I don't intend to go through another night like that."

Bob's mother turned to her son, saying: "She is beautiful, and she is good, too. Anybody can see that. We could love her for what she has done for you, if for nothing else."

"Well, I should say so," proudly vaunted the son. "She took a chance when she didn't care for me and she made me into a regular fellow. Why, she reformed me from the ground up. I've sworn off every blessed thing I used to do."

"Including drinking?" gruffly queried the father.

"Yes."

Lorelei smiled her slow, reluctant smile at the victors, and her voice was gentle as she said: "He thinks he has, but it's hard to stop entirely, and you mustn't blame him if he forgets himself occasionally. You see, drinking is mostly a matter of temperament, after all. But he is doing splendidly, and so may you perhaps."

They nodded understandingly.

"You'll try to like us, won't you, for Bob's sake?" pleaded the old lady, timidly.

"I intend to love you both very dearly," shyly returned the girl, and noting the light in Lorelei's face, Bob Wharton was satisfied.

Restraint vanished swiftly under the old couple's evident determination to make amends, but after they had gone Lorelei became so positive that Bob said, anxiously: "I hope you weren't polite to them merely for my sake."

Lorelei shook her head. "No, I was only thinking—Do you realize that none of my own people have been to see me? That I haven't had a single word from any of them?"

Bob stirred uncomfortably; he started to speak, then checked himself as she went on, not without some effort: "I'm going to say something unpleasant, but I think you ought to know it. When they learn that your parents have taken me in and made up with us, they're going to ask me for money. It's a terrible thing to say, but it's true."

"Do you want to see the baby? Do you want them to see the baby?"

"No—no!" Lorelei was pale as she made answer. "Not after all that has passed."

Bob heaved a grateful sigh. "I'm glad. They won't trouble you any more."

"Why? What?"

"I've been waiting until you were strong to tell you, you noticed how their silence hurt you, but—it's my fault that they haven't been here. I sent them away."

"You sent them away?"

"Yes! I fixed them with money and—they're happy at last. There's considerable to tell. Jim got into trouble with the police and finally sent for me. He told me everything and—it wasn't pretty; I'd rather not repeat all he said, but it opened my eyes and showed me why they brought you here, how they put you on the auction block, and how they cried for bids. He told me things you know nothing about and could never guess. When he had finished I thanked God that they had flung you into my arms instead of—some other man. It's a miracle that you weren't sacrificed utterly."

"Where is Jim now?"

"Somewhere in the boundless West. He gave me his promise to reform."

"The coming to them. My first eyes around the day after our baby was born and shook hands. He wanted to stamp right in here and tell you what a fool he had made of himself, but I wouldn't stand for it. Finally, when he saw the kid, he blew up entirely, and right away proposed breaking ground for a jasper palace for the youngster. He wanted to build it in Pittsburgh where he could run it, going to and from Business. Mother was just as foolish, too. Well, when I had had my little understanding with Jim and learned the whole truth about your people I realized that no matter where we went they would be a constant menace to our happiness unless they were provided for. It struck me that you had made a game fight for happiness, and I couldn't stand for anything to spoil it at the last minute. I went to mother and told her the facts, and she seemed to understand as well as I how you must feel in spite of all they had done, so we shook down the governor for an allowance."

"Bob! What do you mean?" Lorelei faltered in bewilderment.

"We asked him for a hundred thousand dollars and got it."

Lorelei gasped.

"He bellowed like a bull, he spat poison like a cobra, he writhed like a bucket of eels, but we put it over."

"A hundred thousand dollars!" whispered the wife.

"To a penny. And it's in the bank to your credit. But I didn't stop there." Bob's voice hardened. "I went to your mother and in your name I promised her the income from it so long, and only so long, as she and Peter stayed away from you. She accepted—rather greedily, I thought—and they have gone back to Vale. They have your old house, and I have their promise never to see you except upon your invitation. Of course you can go to them whenever you wish, but—they're happy, and I think we will be happier with them in Vale than in New York. I hope you don't object to my arrangement."

There was a long silence, then Lorelei sighed. "You are a very good man, Bob. It was my dream to do something of this sort, but I could never have done it so well."

Her husband bent and kissed her tenderly. "It wasn't all my doings; I had help. And you mustn't feel sad for something tells me you're going to learn finally the meaning of a real mother's love."

"Yes—yes!" The answer came dreamily, then as a fretful complaint issued from the crib at her side Lorelei leaned forward and swiftly reassured the baby into her arms.

"Is he sick?" Bob questioned, in alarm.

"No, silly. He's only hungry."

There in the gathering dusk Bob Wharton looked on at a sight that never failed to thrill him strangely. In his wife's face was a beautiful content, and it seemed to him fitting indeed that this country girl who had come to the city in quest of life should end her search thus, with a baby at her breast.

(THE END.)

SMOKERS IN DICKENS' WORKS

Great Novelist Had Many of His Characters Use Tobacco in One Form or Another.

The "cigarettes" mentioned by Dickens in 1857 were "brown paper cigars," an informant writes to the London Chronicle, and were evidently rolled by hand in the fashion not unknown to-day, though rapidly being superseded by the machine-made article.

In the first chapter of "Little Dorrit," written in 1857, the villain Rignold in his jail at Marselles has tobacco brought to him with his rations and he rolls it into cigarettes by the aid of little squares of paper which had been brought in with it. The scene, by the way, is dated by Dickens "thirty years ago." Whether the paper was white or brown does not appear, but it seems clear enough that the smokes in question, thus rolled in a prison cell, had more likeness to the modern cigarette than to a cigar, although the novelist sometimes calls them little paper cigars.

"Little Dorrit," I think, adds the corroboration, is the first of the novels in which the word "cigarette" appears, although pipes and cigars are frequently mentioned, usually in the mouths of the morally less admirable characters. Montague Tigg and Chevy Chase both smoke in an atmosphere in which tobacco is added to frostiness. Rogue Riderhood's masculinity is heightened by his use of a pipe, and the depth of Quill's inhumanity is emphasized by his abilities in the way of what is now called "chain smoking" with cigars.

While he swallows boiling rum from a panikin kept on the fire, Eugene Wrayburn's languid idleness is softened by cigars, but correct character, such as John Harison, never touch what Tony Weller calls "the flagrant weed."

Irish Soldier Gave Warning. A new story of the British encounter with the Prussian Guards is told by a corporal of a Warwickshire regiment who is wounded and at home in England.

"The night the Prussian Guards attacked us around Ypres," he says, "it was only by chance and heroism that we were warned in time. An Irishman of the King's Liverpool regiment had gone out of the bounds to meet a girl. Coming home late he stumbled on the Germans stealing quietly toward our position."

"Without a thought of consequences to himself he dashed toward our guard to give the alarm. The Germans shot him in both legs, but he got through with the warning."

Sells and Wheat. The influence of different soils on the composition of wheat is the subject of an investigation undertaken by the United States bureau of chemistry. The effects of several kinds of soil will be tested under identical atmospheric conditions. The program contemplates transporting to the Arlington experimental farm 1,500 of an acre of soil, three feet deep, consisting of about 16 tons each of sandy clay, marl, muck and a good agricultural soil, and in each of these plants the same kind of seed, will be grown.

City is Old, Yet Modern

Rouen Has Double Charm for the Visitor Who Has a Proper Eye for Civic Beauty.

Rouen, the old capital of Normandy, whence William the Conqueror planned his wars against England, is a city which persists in keeping up to date through the centuries. It is a bustling modern town today in spite of its long and strenuous past. You can buy the oldest of antiquities and the most modern of manufactures in Rouen, both strictly local products.

Like many American cities, Rouen makes its poorest impression from the railway stations. No matter which train you pass through on, if you want to take what you see through the carriage window as a fair sample of the old city, you would never alight and investigate. It is necessary to leave faith in Rouen, to believe in more beautiful things around the corner, and, as is often the case, he who has faith is rewarded.

There are few places where the contrast between the medieval and the modern stands out more clearly than in this old-new city of France. The broad and handsome boulevards, the brightly lighted shops, the bustling cafes are very much of the twentieth century; and the grim old stone houses, the time-blackened carved walls seem to look down on the present of modern life flowing past them with a dignified, pitifully disapproving. Leading off from some broad boulevard you often find one of the old-time narrow streets just wide enough for foot traffic, that was laid out in the days when Rouen was a walled city and the needs of the pedestrian, or at most the horseman, were the only ones to be considered.

The traditional idol of Rouen is Joan of Arc. They have named a street and a square for her, the best of her statues are found here, and there is a museum given over to relics of her strange career. Here is the tower where the unfortunate maiden was tried and condemned. Through these same streets she rode in her bright armor, and here she died at the stake.

PROHIBITION?? The Testimony of Seattle

The Promise:

- Seattle, the largest "Dry" city in America, was forced into accepting an unenforceable "Saharans" by adoption of state-wide prohibition. Prohibition was unwelcome to Seattle residents. It was forced upon them by the voters in the most remote townships. By voters who had naught to do with their affairs, no voice in the city's administration. The prohibitionists arbitrarily maintained that general total abstinence from stimulating beverages would follow the adoption of a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of beer and other liquors within the state of Washington. Did it?

The Actual Facts:

(From the Chicago Journal, July 13, 1916) SEATTLE A HARD DRINKER Figures Show Increase in Monthly Consumption of Liquor

Seattle, Wash., July 13—Six months ago Seattle, with the state of Washington, went dry, as regards the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The records of the auditor's office show that the citizens of Seattle, rounding out a half-year of arid conditions, have accepted the provisions of the state dry laws as follows: Permits to ship intoxicating liquor into the city were 38,464. These permits provided for the purchase of 227,712 quarts 35,903 quarts of whiskey; 1,051 quarts of wine; 891 quarts of alcohol; 626 quarts of brandy; 340 quarts of gin; 77 quarts of Vermouth, and 78 quarts of rum. Nearly 6,000 druggist permits have been issued. Beginning January 3rd, when the first liquor permit was issued, the number of permits have nearly doubled every succeeding month over permits issued for the previous month. The only exception to this is April, which for some unexplained reason fell 25 permits short of equalling the number issued in March. The citizens of Seattle did not want state-wide prohibition. Seattle citizens want and use liquor. Wanting it and using it, people will sell it to them, will bring it to them and violate the law doing either. Since January 1, permits to new drug-stores to do business have been issued in Seattle. An express company, whose sole business will be the transportation of liquor alone from San Francisco to Seattle, was organized in June. That the drug stores of Seattle sell liquor is proved by the tactics of Mayor Gill, whose "Destruction Squad," armed with axes, since July have demolished interiors of 27 drug stores where it was found liquor was illegally sold. The residents of Seattle did not want prohibition. It was thrust upon them. They refused to abide by it. Neither did thousands elsewhere in the state. In proof, Washington voters in November will vote on a proposition to amend the prohibition law to permit the manufacture and sale of beer in the state. The petitions were signed by 17 per cent of the state's voters. Had Home Rule obtained in Washington, Seattle residents and those in the other sections would have been enabled to decide their own liquor problem. They would have turned down state-wide prohibition. Home Rule, not state-wide prohibition, is what Michigan needs. Home Rule will permit each city, village and township in the state to decide its liquor problem for itself. Home Rule will do away with the sinless, distorting, hatred-breeding, prohibition agitation of the past 10 years. Vote YES for HOME RULE—TRUE RULE and "NO" against state-wide prohibition November 7th. Learn How Home Rule Operates. Write to J. J. Episcopal Church News

There was a crowded house at the opera house last Thursday evening when "The Old Homestead" was given for the benefit of St. John's Episcopal church. The play, which has a fine moral from beginning to end was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. Mr. H. Midworth, in a short speech, thanked all those who were present, and assured them how much such a large audience was appreciated by the vestry and members of the Mission. He thanked Mr. Fisher and Mr. Thompson for securing the play, also Miss Nellie Huger for her services as the piano. We were also pleased to see representatives of the W. C. T. U. present, who were busy distributing leaflets. The members of the Ladies' Guild are arranging for a bazaar to be held in December, the date and particulars will be announced later.
