KILLS SELF AT NEWBURG

Indiana Man Cuts Throat And Arteries In Wrists Tuesday Morning.

Joseph F. Herbst, 36 years of age, of Butler, Indiana, committed suicide at Newburg, three miles east of this village, Tuesday forenoon by cutting his throat and the arteries in his wrists. He was identified by a Masonic receipt and a letter from his wife, who was visiting in Flint. Herbst arrived in Plymouth on the early morning train from Toledo. He inquired at the depot as to where an officer could be found, and on being told, went to the home of Deputy Sheriff George Springer. He told the officer that someone was after him and he was in great fear. The officer invited him into the house and after a few minutes conversation with him, found out that he was on his way to Flint to see his wife, who was visiting a sister there. He said that he had been having a pain in his head that was giving him trouble lately. He soon quieted down and conversed with the officer for an hour or more and appeared to be rational in his manner and talk. Later he rode up town with the officer and expressed himself as feeling much better, and as the Flint train had gone he inquired of Mr. Springer as to whether there was not some way of his getting there without waiting for the afternoon train, and upon being told that he could take the D. U. R. to Detroit and get a car for Flint, he said that was fine and he guessed that would be the best thing for him to do. Officer Springer accompanied him to the car and explained to the conductor the man's strange actions when he first arrived here, and asked him to see that when the car arrived in Detroit that he got safely on a car bound for Flint.

Just before the car reached Newburg, Herbst got very uneasy and in spite of the conductor's protests he got off the car at that station. He went to the Carson store and inquired if they kept revolvers for sale and was informed by Mrs. Carson that they did not. In a few minutes he left the store. Another passenger who was on the same car with Herbst was in the store at the time he came in and told Mrs. Carson that he saw Officer Springer put the man on the car at Plymouth and she had better call him up and inform him of the circumstances. While she was doing this, a search was made to see where the stranger had gone and he was soon found near the milk house, just west of the store, in a dying condition. Dr. A. E. Patterson was summoned, but the man was beyond all earthly help. He had used a jack knife in his act of self destruction.

Justice Floyd Bassett empanelled a jury, who viewed the remains, and the inquest was set for Wednesday morning at ten o'clock. The jury returned a verdict of suicide as a result of insanity.

Undertaker F. D. Schrader took charge of the remains and they were placed in Schrader's Bros. morgue until the arrival of relatives Wednesday morning. Herbst's relatives could not account for his taking his life, and they were unaware that his mind had become unbalanced. The only reason they could give that might have caused a mental trouble was worry and grief over the death of a little son several weeks ago. Herbst was superintendent of the electric light plant at Butler, Ind. The remains were shipped to Wapakoneta, Ohio, the home of his parents, for interment.

The Plymouth excursion to the Billy Sunday meeting which was to have taken place this evening had to be abandoned on account of all reservations for Friday evening being withdrawn. It is high school night and the large number of Detroit students who will attend, sink out all outside delegations.

Campaign a Success; Banquet is Climax

Local Lodge of National Protective Legion Give New Members Warm Welcome

With nearly fifty members present, Legion, No. 965, the local branch of the National Protective Legion, enjoyed a banquet at the Hotel Plymouth, Tuesday evening, as a fitting climax to a membership campaign. As a result of the campaign, thirty-one new members entered the order and the banquet was held both as a celebration of the success of the campaign and as a welcome and reception for the new members. In the role of toastmaster, J. H. Norgard of Detroit, who is Michigan's representative on the home office executive board, proved himself fully capable of filling this position. His clever and humorous manner of introducing the speakers added greatly to the evening's enjoyment. Geo. A. Scott of Waverly, New York, the national president of the order, was the principal speaker of the evening. He spoke on the value and benefits of the Legion. He congratulated the local members on the success of their campaign and stated it was one of the most successful in the history of the organization. Among the others who responded to toasts were: Mrs. Mae Durham, Miss Kate Baird, Chas. G. Curtis; Mrs. Minnie Hotelling, secretary of the Northville Legion; Mrs. Kate Murray of Charlotte, a special deputy, who has been in charge of the campaign here, and Chas. C. Cooper, district manager, of Detroit.

Mrs. Mae Durham was given a beautiful gold watch for securing the greatest number of new members. Others receiving prizes were: Warren Wheeler, Mrs. Eva B. Hansen, Miss Kate Baird and Mrs. Beatrice Shafer. The dining room was beautifully decorated in Halloween, and red carnations were the favors. A neat and attractive program, which was printed by the company, was one of the features of the evening. VanDeCar's orchestra furnished music during the banquet, and the delicious seven-course dinner was fully up to the high standard maintained by the Hotel Plymouth.

Methodist Bazaar

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church will hold a bazaar in the opera house, Thursday and Friday, November 2 and 3. The sale will open at one o'clock Thursday. Aprons of all kinds, fancy work, baked goods, doll clothes and farm products will be displayed. The Japanese tea room and the fish pond will be of interest to all. Be liberal with your patronage of this bazaar. It will be greatly appreciated by the Methodist ladies.

Death of an Aged Resident

Mrs. Hannah Ubank, aged 86 years, died at the home of her son, N. J. Humphries, in north village, Tuesday morning. Old age was the cause of death. Deceased was born in Fingert, Canada, in 1830. She was united in marriage to Edwin Humphries in 1849. To this union ten children were born, six of whom are living, three sons and three daughters. James of Escanaba, Daniel of West Lorne, Mrs. C. B. Fillmore, Hamilton, Mrs. Geo. Leslie, London, Canada; Mrs. Wesley Miller of Lathrop, Mich., and N. J. Humphries of this village. Her first husband died in 1866. In 1896 she was married to Henry Ubank of London, Canada, who survived her. The funeral will be held at 11 o'clock this morning from the home of her son, Rev. B. F. Farber officiating. Interment in Riverdale cemetery.

Big Democratic Rally

There will be a big Democratic Rally at the village hall, Saturday afternoon, October 28th, at 2:00 o'clock. F. D. Wood, congressman and ex-supreme judge of New York, will be the speaker. Mr. Wood is an eloquent speaker and will discuss the eight-hour day labor question and other topics of interest to farmers and laboring men. The Plymouth band will furnish music. The ladies are especially invited to attend.

A Sad Death

Little Velma, the six weeks old twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thumme died at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown on Depot street last Sunday morning. The funeral was held from the residence Monday afternoon, Rev. F. M. Fields, pastor of the Methodist church, conducting the services. Mr. and Mrs. Thumme have the sympathy of their friends in their bereavement.

Enjoyed Fine Time at Birmingham

About fifty Plymouth friends, having been previously invited by Mrs. Elmer Huston, went to Birmingham last Friday where they gave Mr. Huston a pleasant surprise. A six o'clock dinner was served the guests at the Birmingham Club house and later dancing and cards made the evening enjoyable. During the evening H. C. Robinson, in behalf of the guests present, presented Mr. Huston with a gold ring as a slight remembrance of the occasion.

Women's Literary Club

The second meeting of the Women's Literary Club was held at the home of Mrs. Sarah Armstrong on Pennington avenue last Friday afternoon. About thirty members were present. "Your Birthplace," was the response given to roll call. The president, Mrs. R. E. Cooper, presided over the business meeting after which the following program was given, with Mrs. C. F. Egan as leader: Paper, "Sir Christopher Wren," Mrs. Pierre Bennett; paper, "Richard Brinsley Sheridan," Mrs. Charles F. Reeb; a review of "Rivals," "School for Scandal," Miss Beate Hood; "Verdi," paper by Mrs. L. Thomas. Several selections from Verdi's operas were rendered on the Edison with descriptions by Miss Lina Durfee. The meeting adjourned to meet November third at the home of Mrs. J. H. Patterson.

Happenings of the World Tersely Told

European War News

The repulse of the Russian forces from the western bank of the River Narayuvka in Galicia has been completed, says the official statement issued at Berlin. At Fredal pass, on the Transylvanian front, 500 Roumanians were captured.

Four tons of projectiles have been dropped by a French air squadron of 24 machines on blast furnaces north of Metz and on the Metz and Thionville stations, the Paris war office announced.

Constanza, Roumania's greatest seaport, has fallen before Field Marshal von Mackensen's armies. It was officially announced at Berlin. Capture of the city and fortress is the greatest single achievement for the central powers since Roumania entered the war, eight weeks ago.

In an important speech at a luncheon given by the Foreign Press association in London, Viscount Grey, British secretary for foreign affairs, expressed approval of American movements for a league after the war to maintain peace.

Dispatches from Paris say that two of the best known French generals, Brigadier General Marchand of Fashoda fame and Gen. Sainte-Claire Deville have been seriously wounded in battle.

Charging in a blizzard, Italian Alpini have captured a strong Austrian position in the Dolomite Alps at the point of the bayonet, says a statement from Rome. All but 18 of the garrison were killed.

The Bulgarian defenses at the mouth of the Struma river, in northeastern Greece, were bombarded by an entente allied fleet, says a dispatch from Saloniki.

A British naval aircraft shot down and destroyed a hostile seaplane, according to an official statement issued at London. Several railway carriages were damaged by a bomb dropped at Sheerness, England.

The new offensive of Field Marshal von Mackensen in Dobruja has caused the Russian and Roumanian troops to retreat, the Petrograd war office announced. On the Transylvanian front, the Roumanians have been forced back to the Buzeu valley.

A general attack was made by the Austro-German forces in Galicia, southeast of Lemberg. The Berlin war office announced that the Russians had been defeated. The Austrians and Germans inflicted heavy losses on the Russians and took 755 prisoners.

The armed British transports Crosshill and Sedek were sunk in the Mediterranean by German submarines, says an official statement issued by the German admiralty at Berlin.

The Serbians are making a furious drive upon Monastir. After the capture of Brod, says a dispatch to London, the Serbians began moving northward along the left bank of the Tcherne, driving the Bulgarians before them. A battle was fought on the Voloselo plateau, in which the Bulgarians were defeated with heavy losses.

A Reuter dispatch to London from Petrograd says that the budget of 1917 submitted to the duma and council of empire has been framed in view of the probability of the war lasting to the whole financial year. Revenue expenditure balance at a total of 900,000.

The largest part of the German trenches west of the road of Eaucourt l'Abbaye-le-Marque, lost to the British on October 18, were recaptured, the German war office announced at Berlin. Three British "tanks" were destroyed by artillery.

Domestic

An automobile containing six persons plunged from the west abutment of the Twelfth street bridge into the river at Chicago. Four were drowned and two were rescued.

L. M. Jones, a mining engineer sent to Barroville, near Fairmont, W. Va., to conduct the work of rescue at the Jamison mine, where more than a dozen men had been entombed, was asphyxiated.

A band of from 50 to 60 Ute Indians from the Uinta reservation in Utah, headed by Red Cap, a Ute chief, are camped along Douglas creek, shooting game and terrorizing women and children.

Managers of the steamer Merida, owned by the Valley Camp Shipping company of Midland, Ont., admitted at Cleveland, O., that the ship was lost in the gale on Lake Erie Friday night. So far as known not a man of the crew of 25 survives the tragedy.

James Walton, alias Gordon, was arrested at Dallas, Tex., by Pinkerton detectives, and is alleged to have confessed getting $10,000 in the recent $30,000 robbery of the Burroughs plant payroll in Detroit. He admitted having shot the Burroughs paymaster.

Miss Louise Martin, manicurist of a New Orleans hotel, and one of the prettiest girls in the city, and Frances Curran, former president of the city, diplomat and international lawyer, eloped and were married.

Indictments naming Chief of Police Healy and his secretary, William Lutzhardt, and Charles T. Essig, secretary of the Sportsmen's club, were obtained at Chicago by State's Attorney Hoyne in a whirlwind finish in his drive on alleged city-hall graft. The indicted men are charged with conspiracy and malfeasance in office.

After killing Sheriff Paul Stier of Queens county, New York, with a shotgun and keeping at bay a posse of police and deputy sheriffs who had surrounded his home here, Frank Taff was killed by one of the besiegers. The sheriff had an order for Taff's arrest in a case pending in the supreme court.

Eighteen men lost their lives as the result of an explosion in the Roden coal mine at Marvel, Ala., and rescuers have brought 16 bodies to the surface. Six were negroes.

Four automobilists were killed and one was probably fatally hurt in a grade crossing accident near Altoona, Pa.

Robbers who entered the Bank of Ringwood, Ill., blew open the safe with nitroglycerin, and escaped with $5,000.

Another tragedy of Lake Erie's "Black Friday," which cost the lives of 21 men, came to light when a life-raft, to which Capt. Walter Grashaw of the whaleback steamer James B. Colgate had clung since she foundered, 34 hours, before being picked up off Rondeau, Canada, and taken to Conneaut, O. Nineteen men were drowned when the steamer foundered.

Waldemar Brown, former mayor of Marquette, Mich., was killed and nine others injured when two automobiles in which they were riding collided while trying to avoid a buggy.

A wreath of flowers entwined with an American flag was dropped from a height of 1,400 feet by John Green, an aviator, on the cemetery at Rome, Ga., in which Mrs. Ellen Wilson, wife of the president, is buried. The wreath was placed on Mrs. Wilson's grave as Rome's tribute to her memory.

Richard Cullen, twenty-two years old, a machinist who was taken into custody after attempting to jump on the running board of an automobile in which President Wilson was riding at Pittsburgh, was examined regarding his sanity. Cullen carried a big knife in a bag.

Washington

The first concrete results of the physical valuation of railroads upon which the interstate commerce commission has been working for three years were announced at Washington when the commission issued a tentative valuation of the Texas Midland railroad and of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad.

An armored railroad car, described as a "moving blockhouse," designed for patrol work and for action against mobile troop organizations, has been given its trial test at the Sandy Hook proving grounds. The car was built for the United States army.

Loss of the German submarine merchantman Bremen virtually was conceded at Washington by ranking Teutonic diplomats in position to be familiar with the movements of the vessel. The Bremen is now one month overdue.

Lieut. Col. George O. Squier, chief of the aviation section of the army, announced at Washington that the war department has placed orders for 120 modern aeroplanes of the high-powered variety. The machines will cost approximately $20,000 each.

Foreign

The assassination of the Austrian premier, Count Karl Stureghk at Vienna, was a purely political act, and was induced by his refusal to convene parliament, according to the admissions of Dr. Friedrich Adler, his assassin, made shortly after his arrest. Doctor Adler is an eccentric and super-radical socialist, sometimes known as "the Liebknecht of Austria." He is editor of Der Kampf.

Requests for the Canadian government to take action to control the prices of food and other necessities were made by mayors and members of many Ontario and Quebec cities and representatives of labor and other organizations.

It was announced at Berlin that Field Marshal Alexander H. R. von Kluck, who commanded the right wing of the German army in its sweep toward Paris in the fall of 1914, has been placed on the retired list, at his own request.

An "Irish Red Hook" has been presented to the pope at the Vatican in Rome and distributed among the cardinals and other high ecclesiastics, as well as among prominent laymen. It contains what is said to be a documentary history of the recent Irish insurrection.

Personal

Rev. Charles F. Laman died at his home at Osborne, Kan., in his one hundred and first year.

A baby daughter was born to Miss Billie Burke, noted stage star, who in private life is Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., wife of the well-known theatrical manager of New York.

Politics

Al J. Jennings, once a bandit leader, according to his formal statement, and now a revivalist, announced at Los Angeles, Cal., he would be a candidate for the second time for the Democratic nomination for governor of Oklahoma.

RULES THAT NAME MAY BE DROPPED

Attorney General Passes on Requests of Progressives.

COUNTY CLERKS UNCERTAIN

Were in Quandary When Orders Were Received From State Chairman to Take Names Off the Ballot.

Lansing.—Telegraphic orders from John S. Smith of Detroit, chairman of the National Progressive party, to county clerks to take the names of that party's candidates off the ticket for the coming election have been causing trouble.

From all sections of the state came requests from county clerks for a decision as to what they should do. In some instances, notably that of Wayne county, the state authorities were informed that his request would not be complied with. Judge Durfee of the Wayne county election commission was reported as having flatly refused to touch the ballot as it had been certified to his commission.

Attorney General Fellows, when asked by Secretary of State Vaughan for a ruling, said that the clerks and election boards should pay attention to Mr. Smith's request. He went further and said that in case the taking off of the names as suggested by Mr. Smith cleaned up the ticket there was no use of putting the Progressive party column on the ticket at all.

Already the proofs of the two ballots from Genesee and Menominee counties have reached Lansing, without any column for the Progressives. The only written ruling which the attorney general's department has ever made has to do with the primaries, Washington Gardner of Albion, a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1914, asked that his name be taken off the ballot. Secretary of State Martindale was advised to take it off.

Much New Road to Be Built.

State Highway Commissioner Rogers and his assistants are hard at work now upon plans for next year and say the program will be the greatest the state has ever attempted.

It is believed that by the end of next summer, when most of the outdoor work has to be stopped, there will be hundreds of miles more of good roads in Michigan than there are now.

The department is now carrying more employees than ever before, because of the additional work, which acts of the legislature have imposed upon it. The last legislature placed upon the commissioner and the railroad commission the authority to pass upon every new railroad and trolley road crossing.

Just how much road will be built next year has not been decided, but with the addition of the federal government money, amounting to approximately $487,000, not available July 1, 1917, it is expected that many of the gaps which now exist in the "legislative trunk lines" will be filled up.

Short Weights Increase.

Peremptory orders have been issued by State Sealer of Weights and Measures Burr B. Lincoln to all of his deputies throughout the state to arrest every person found using short weights or short measures and to prosecute them.

Following the order, Mr. Lincoln heard that several suits had been started on the west side of the state, for short weights in potatoes.

"I do not know why it is," says Mr. Lincoln, "but suddenly we are getting reports of a lot of violations of the honest weight and measure laws."

"What the answer is I cannot tell. I do know that there is a general movement to cheat Mrs. Housewife. We are going to stop it if we have to arrest every dealer."

Captions May Be Changed.

Although it is hardly considered "good form," county election boards may place their own captions on the two liquor amendments to the constitution to be voted on November 7.

In other words, there is nothing to stop the county boards from replacing the caption suggested by the secretary of state with another of their own making. There is nothing in the law to stop them and there is information at hand that changes are going to be made in several instances.

Crawford county, for instance, is considering placing above the prohibition amendment, the words, "Prohibition Amendment," and over the other, "Home Rule Amendment" both in large type, so that the voter can make no mistake.

ALL AROUND THE STATE.

Hillsdale.—Joseph Canfora, who killed Charles Payne, in Jonesville, the night of June 19, was sentenced to from 10 to 20 years, with a recommendation of 15 years, in Jackson prison.

Port Huron.—Stephen V. Ruddock, forty-five years old, of Port Huron, was found dead in his room at the Messenger hotel. He had strangled himself to death with his belt. He had been despondent.

mistake. The Crawford county authorities put the matter up to Secretary Vaughn and he had to reply that the change was clearly within the province of the local board.

A delegation of drys headed by Senator Henry Straight of Coldwater, visited Mr. Vaughn and put the proposition to him personally. They have plans to change the heading.

The peculiar part of it lies in the fact that under the law, while the secretary of state is bound to certify to the county boards the wording of the amendments as proposed, he can only suggest captions. The suggestions which Mr. Vaughn made were practically the titles of the amendments, if such were compiled. Both captions were two and three lines in length.

Butter Dealers Accused.

That a number of dealers in butter and potatoes are making hay while the sun shines on the general high cost of living is the burden of a bulletin issued by the dairy and food department.

Dealers who are bringing in cold storage butter, and treating it in such a way as to make it contain 25 per cent moisture are warned to cease or prosecutions will follow. This practice, according to the bulletin, is being indulged in to a considerable extent.

The bulletin says that potatoes in the northern part of the state are selling for $1 a bushel, while in the southern portion potatoes from Maine and New York are being brought in and sold direct from the cars at $1.50 a bushel. The department wants dealers to arrange to ship Michigan potatoes south as they can be sold much below the $1.50 figure.

Start on Drill Schedule Again.

El Paso, Tex.—Michigan troops have begun a repetition of the drill schedule they went through in El Paso three months ago. Orders to begin again with the fundamentals of military training came through General Kirk. It was the answer to the question of the men as to what work would be given next. Whether the full three-months' schedule will be given is not known.

The men started with squad drills, special attention of the commissioned officers being paid to the work of the squad leaders, the corporals. This is supplemented with eight-setting, eight-practice, first aid and bayonet exercises.

The orders provide that every officer, from the colonel of the regiment to the corporal, participate in the drills.

All three Michigan regiments have gone through this schedule since the muster-in. The Thirty-third got the same drill at Grayling that was given the Thirty-second and Thirty-first on the border. It is likely that the drills will be taken up in order until the entire brigade is given the brigade test and maneuvers.

Soldiers Kept Busy.

Practically every minute of the time from morning to noon mess is now taken up with work, and in the afternoon one hour is devoted to school for both commissioned and non-commissioned officers.

The cancellation of entraining orders for the Massachusetts field hospital is the chief gossip of the camp today. This organization was one of the first outfits to reach the border, and had been ordered home. After they had turned in all their extra equipment and horses, the orders were canceled.

It was so unexpected that the troops found themselves without rations. Whether the cancellation came as a result in a change of policy in the war department, or through some fault of the outfit itself, could not be learned.

Many favorable remarks are heard in camp concerning the speedy manner in which the government is taking care of the allowances for men with dependent families. The $2,000,000 fund was no sooner available than the soldiers began to get their pay checks.

It has taken only a few days after the filing of applications to get action. General Kirk said that, in his opinion, the Michigan troops would not go out on drill after November 1. He said he thought the men would be given theoretical instruction in schools.

Private Harry L. Phillips, Company L, Thirty-first Michigan, has been discharged because of dependents.

Private Floyd Butcher of the supply company, Thirty-first Michigan, has suffered a recurrence of trouble as the result of a mule kick received two months ago, and has gone to a hospital.

To Play No Favorites.

Gen. John P. Kirk called officers of his brigade together and talked to them on alleged favoritism to enlisted men.

He had been informed, he said, that in certain cases men were punished while others equally guilty went free. Incidentally, the general announced he intended to be on the job at all times and to see that others did the same.

Die Abtheilung ist für die Familienglieder, welche am liebsten Deutsch lesen.

Vom Schauplatz des europäischen Völkertrieges

Selbst dem gelegentlichen Zeitungsleser muß es aufgefallen sein, das London und Paris bedeutend ruhiger geworden sind, so daß man beinahe zu der Ansicht kommen könnte, die Somme - Schlacht sei zum Abschluß gebracht worden.

Nichts wäre falscher als eine solche Annahme. Die Somme - Schlacht wird mit derselben Mut, derselben Verschwendung von kostbaren Menschenleben und demselben oft sinnlosen Drauflosprüffern der Artillerie fortgesetzt; aber das Blatt hat sich gewandelt. Zwar befinden die Deutschen sich noch nicht beständig in der Offensive und noch ist die Kraft der Alliierten nicht erlahmt, aber die Deutschen haben erheblich Verstärkungen erhalten und namentlich die Artillerie ist bedeutend verstärkt worden.

Kurz nach der Einbringung der Ernte trat diese Veränderung zu Tage. Zuerst mußte der große Sieg zu Hause erzwungen werden, der Sieg über die englischen Ausbungerungspläne, die Ernte mußte unter Dach und Fach gebracht und der Winterernte befreit werden. Als das geschehen war, der deutsche Bauer den Pfug und die Sense in die Erde und griff wiederum zum Schießpulver, nicht um, wie in früheren, schönen Tagen, auf die Jagd zu gehen, sondern, um sein Vaterland gegen den vor den Toren tobenden Feind zu schützen.

Es scheint eine gesunde, urkräftige Sippkraft gewesen zu sein, die von den deutschen Feldern in die Schützengräben trug, denn seitdem sie da sind, haben Briten und Franzosen, Russen und Rumänen zu fügen aufgehört. Am meisten hatten die Briten unter diesen für Deutschland günstigen Umständen zu leiden. Sie sind, darüber besteht kein Zweifel, der gefährlichste Feind, was Zahl und Fähigkeit anbetrifft, und die Entladung des Somme - Schlacht hatte es gefügt, daß gerade ihre Front, die britische, dem deutschen Gegenstoß am stärksten preisgegeben war. Bis Combes und etwas darüber hinaus hatte man die Alliierten vorlügen lassen, dann wurde dem Vorstoß ein fähigerer, aufsteigender unerschütterlicher Riegel vorgehalten. Die britische Front nach Norden hin war inzwischen 22 Kilometer (von Thiepval bis Combes) lang geworden, eine schöne Angriffsfläche für die auf der Linie schließlich von Soponaue stark besetzten Deutschen. In den drei und einhalb Monaten, die es Briten und Franzosen nahm, bis Combes vordringen, hatten die Deutschen mehr als genügende Zeit gefunden, sich auf der nördlichen Flanke der Briten einzunisten. Die nachfolgenden Ereignisse haben das bewiesen.

Obgleich sie immer wieder neue Menschenmassen und neue Schiffsladungen von Konstantinopel gegen die deutschen Reichen schleuderten, sie schwant und wanken nicht. In unermesslichen Strömen floß britisches Blut, nahezu 4,000 Mann wurden alle zwölf Stunden aus ihren Reihen ausgeschieden.

Bei Sailly brachen die Briten jedesmal vor, aber alle diese Vorstöße brachen unter den schwersten blutigen Verlusten zusammen. Die deutsche Infanterie kam aus ihren Unterständen und aus den Granatstrichtern, in welchen sie den Ansturm abgemerkt hatte, sie das Geschrei an die Schützen und machte den stürmenden Gegner in aufrechter Stellung im Wahnsinn und Gewehrfeuer nieder.

Offenbar hatte die Gegner der Hoffnung hingesehen, daß seine enorme artilleristische Tätigkeit seiner Infanterie den Weg zu einem leichten Siege öffnen würde, und das erlitt auch, warum die Infanterie in geschlossenen Massen vorging, wobei sechs bis zehn Sturmwellen aufeinander folgten.

Ginter diesen Sturmwellen waren Millionen aufgestellt, welche von Distanz zu Parade geführt wurden, was gar nicht zu erklären wäre, wenn der Feind nicht absolut überzeugt gewesen wäre, daß die deutsche Infanterie unter dem gewaltigen Feuer vernichtet worden sei. Unter Hurraufen und Geschrei wälzten sich diese Massen einem, wie sie glaubten, sicheren und leichten Siege entgegen.

Es wird mehr und mehr wahrscheinlich, daß sich der Feind an dieser unerwartlichen Weise eben so verhalten wird, wie es mit den Russen bereits an der galizischen Front der Fall war.

Neunzig Quadratmeilen von den 10,000, die sie nehmen müssen, um die Deutschen aus Frankreich zu vertreiben, haben die Alliierten in den vier Monaten ihrer verlustreichen Offensive genommen. Nur 9,910 weitere Quadratmeilen sind zu nehmen übrig. Und doch gibt es noch Leute, die an den Sieg der Alliierten glauben.

An der südlichen Front haben die Russen ihre Angriffe nicht wieder erneuert. Diese Zufallsfälle auf ruffischer Seite ist ein stummer Beweis für die furchtbare Nichtigkeit der deutschen Werbung, in der die Deutschen den Russen auf eine Witterung Wenden geschickt werden. Auch hört man, in der Gestalt von Demosthenes, wiederum von russischen Separatfriedens - Wünschen. Ob vielleicht doch etwas mehreres daran ist? Von einiger Zeit her ist es, Rußland sei im Augenblick zum Separatfrieden bereit gewesen, habe aber wieder Hoffnungen geschöpft, als Rumänen in den Krieg einztrat. Heute schon, nach kaum einmonatlicher Kriegsführung, ist Rumänien keine Hilfe mehr, sondern eine Bürde, die auf Rußlands schon schwer belasteten Schultern ruht.

Die Antwort Frankreichs und Großbritanniens auf die amerikanischen Forderungen betreffs Einmischung seitens der genannten Länder in den Vorkriegeserwerb auf hoher See und der gleichzeitigen Verschleppung von U-Booten nach britischen Häfen, ist eine unveränderte Ablehnung aller Behauptungen und Forderungen des Staatsdepartements.

Die Note giebt im Prinzip die Unverletzlichkeit der Post, wie im internationalen Gesetz niedergelegt, zu, spricht ihr dieselbe aber in der Praxis ab. England wie Frankreich behaupten ein Recht zu haben amerikanische Post in infizieren, während sie nach Kontinenten suchen.

Die zwei verbündeten Regierungen beanspruchen das Recht neutrale Postbriefe von ihrem Kurs nach alliierten Häfen zu bringen zum Zweck, die Postfächer zu untersuchen, jenseits oder zu konfiszieren. Dieser Anspruch wurde wiederholt von den vier Staaten abgewiesen, nicht allein betreffs von Post sondern auch von Kargos.

Das einzige Zugeständnis, welches die beiden Regierungen machen, ist in folgendem Vollzug der Note enthalten:

„Betreffs Verwendung von Dokumenten und Korrespondenzen, welche auf neutralen Schiffen und selbst in Häfen der Alliierten gefunden werden und in keinem Zusammenhang mit dem Kriege stehen, haben die alliierten Regierungen die Behörden angewiesen, solche Schriftstücke nicht aufzuhalten, sondern dieselbe womöglich ohne Verzug weiterzubefördern.“

Schließlich erklären die alliierten Regierungen in einem weiteren Vollzug sich bereit, für Schäden, welche durch Inspektion von Postfächern aus Versehen entstanden, später auszugleichen.

Neutralitäts - Verletzung.

Nach den Bestimmungen des Marineabkommens sind von der Batterie-Station des New Yorker Gerolds, in der Verkleidung harmloser Nachrichten, Warnung an Spanische und Kriegsschiffe der Alliierten ausgegangen, als das deutsche Kriegstauchboot U-53 in der Nähe des Vantudet - Feuerziffes seine Rüstungsarbeiten begonnen hatte. Diese Telegramme wurde von der Marineinspektion im Brooklyner Schiffsbauhof aufgefangen und nach Washington gemeldet, das Lieutenant Welton von der „Arkansas“ sofort als Senior einlegte und durch Kommandierendes Tobd den Leiter des Radiobüros unterer Marine eine rigorose Untersuchung einleiten ließ.

Der „New York Herald“ unterhält an der Batterie ein Schiffsbureau und in Verbindung damit eine kleine Zinkenbrückenanlage, die in Zwischenzeiten zum Auffangen von Nachrichten ankommender Dampfer und zur Beobachtung von Schiffen auf hoher See, auch zur Hebermittlung eines drahtlosen Nachrichtenendienstes für solche Schiffe benutzt wurde.

Neues Nischenhotel.

Die Stadt New York wird in nächster Zukunft das größte Hotel der Welt, das neue Hotel Commodore heißt, besitz. Die Nischenkaminerei wird ein vollständiges Strahlgewölbe einnehmen, 23 Stücker, hoch sein, 2500 Zimmer belegen und $15,000,000 kosten. Der Plan erfolgt nach kooperativem Plan, indem 150,000 Personen aus allen Teilen der Vereinigten Staaten je $100 investieren, und niemand kann mehr als eine Aktie zu $100 erwerben. Es wird darauf gerechnet, daß das neue Hotel zum großen Teil von seinen Besitzern, den Aktienthabern, frequentiert wird.

San Juan, Portorico. Der Ertrag der diesjährigen Zuckerrnte beläuft sich auf 483,590 Tonnen. Es ist dies die größte Zuckerrnte in der Geschichte der Insel. Im vorigen Jahre stieg sie die Zuckerrnte auf 346,490 Tonnen. Die gesamte diesjährige Ernte ist bereits verkauft und zwar zu 5 1/2 Cents pro Pfund oder mehr, was einen Erlös von $53,000,000 ausmacht.

MICHIGAN BREVITIES

Cadillac.—Wexford superintendence appropriated $3,000 for a tuberculosis sanitarium.

Grand Rapids.—The Western Association of Shoe Wholesalers met in Grand Rapids.

Kalamazoo.—Twelve freight cars were wrecked at Glenwood, when a broken wheel flange tossed a car into the ditch. No person was injured.

East Lansing.—Alumni of the Michigan Agricultural college will hold a banquet at the Chamber of Commerce building, Grand Rapids, November 3.

Albion.—Miss Anna Kabel and Herman Kiek were married here by Rev. A. G. Spiegel of the German Lutheran church.

Port Huron.—The supervisors voted down a proposition to pay the two circuit judges an annual salary of $500 each.

Fullman.—James U. Gilpin, thirty-six years old, postmaster here for many years and owner of a drug store, died here.

Hastings.—Scores of persons were examined here at a tuberculosis clinic conducted under the auspices of the Hastings Academy of Medicine.

Marquette.—City Physician Dr. J. J. Siffer and Miss Anna Carroll of Fort Wayne, Ind., were married Thursday morning there.

East Lansing.—The Boys and Girls club work movement was given an early boost when announcement was made that Handcraft clubs will be organized during next year.

Alma.—Louise Rasinger, aged sixteen, a domestic at the home of Malcolm McLaren, was taken with infantile paralysis. This is the first case in Gratiot county.

East Lansing.—The establishment of a new course at the Michigan Agricultural college, which in reality will be one of industrial arts, is promised, according to information received here.

Grand Rapids.—The annual county budget was presented to the board of supervisors Thursday and called for approximately $300,000, $70,000 less than the 1915 schedule.

Albion.—Marcus Pahl, assistant sales manager of the Gale Manufacturing company, this city, was married here to Miss Ethel Linton, at the home of the bride's parents in Homer.

Albion.—The Albion college band elected the following officers: President, Leland Dexter, Crosswell; secretary, Herbert Stankraft, Albion; treasurer, Carl Tobias, Battle Creek; director, Ralph Hunter, Albion.

Port Huron.—The committee on equalization equalized St. Clair county at $48,000,000. The board did not wait for the figures of the state tax commission, which will not be ready until November.

Muskegon.—What was at first believed to be a suicide but later proved to be an accidental drowning, occurred here when John R. Porter, aged twenty-one, of Norton township walked into a mudhole in Road's bayou.

Hastings.—After a discussion which lasted two days, the supervisors voted to levy a two-mill tax for the county road fund, thus placing about $43,000, exclusive of state reward money, in the hands of the county road commissioners.

Grand Rapids.—County employees' request for an increase in salary met with a cool reception from the supervisors, when, by unanimous vote, it was decided that no salaries would be increased, and that an expert be brought here to survey conditions.

East Lansing.—White pine blister rust, which is causing large losses in the eastern states and in Wisconsin, has failed to invade Michigan so far, according to Prof. A. K. Cullendren, head of the forestry department of the Michigan Agricultural college.

East Lansing.—Reforestation work dropped off considerably during the spring and summer, because of the dry season. Many persons were afraid to plant trees, while others delayed until it was too late, because they expected to see a change in the conditions.

East Lansing.—E. C. Mandenburg, the new extension worker in forestry for the Michigan Agricultural college, has gone to Owosso and Ionia to help wood-lot owners to get better prices for their timber and to show them how to handle their wood lots without overcutting.

Ypsilanti.—Howard Boyd, twenty-eight years old, of Tecumseh, thought he would make some easy money and told Rev. John D. Finlayson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, that he was a member of his church in good standing, and that he needed $2 in a business deal he was making. The pastor did not remember Boyd and after asking him a number of questions decided he was an impostor. Failing to find an officer, the minister took Boyd before Justice Stadtmiller where he signed a complaint charging him with begging. Boyd pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 65 days in the Detroit house of correction.

Albion.—The state board of health has asked the Albion city council immediately to turn in complete plans of the city's water and sewer systems or face action by the attorney general. The plans were requested two years ago.

Grand Rapids.—Superior George W. Welch wants the superintendent of the county work farm appointed by the supervisors and subject to the work farm committee of that body. Sheriff Berry opposes the plan, and threatens to stop sending men to the farm, if any other than the man he appoints is placed in charge.

Perry.—The end of the Perry fire cases against the Grand Trunk railroad occurred when Attorney Roy Matthews of Owosso settled with each loser in the fire of July 6, 1913. The fire destroyed the greater portion of the business section. The railroad paid $88,000.

Hillsdale.—After hanging fire in the courts for two years, and being put over seven times, the case of John H. Ely against J. H. Edinger for $20,000 damages for alleged abandonment of his wife's affections, has been discontinued. Since the case was started the Highways have been strayed.

CONCEALING THE BIG BRITISH GUNS

British big guns are hammering the Germans with the heaviest artillery fire in history. Photograph shows the camouflage being thrown up in front of the gun to keep it hidden. Often the guns are covered with the surrounding verdure to make it harmonize with the background, disguising it perfectly.

BUILD A SUBWAY TO VERDUN FRONT

Tunnel, 45 Feet Underground, Leads to Within 300 Yards of Germans.

AMERICANS MAKE THE TRIP

New York Lawyer Narrowly Escapes Shots as He Views Trenches—Tunnel Cook Was Formerly Chief to an Ambassador.

Verdun.—Just west of here, in the forest of Argonne, there is a remarkable military tunnel, 45 feet underground, running right up to within 300 yards of the German trenches. It is one of the most hard-pressed points around Verdun, but through this tunnel reinforcements move forward without danger, relieving every two hours the men on the firing line.

There was a very American atmosphere about this tunnel when the writer visited it, for the curious fact developed that the two officers in command were American residents, one a stock raiser in Alberta, Canada, and the other a bank official of the Franco-American bank at Los Angeles, Cal.

Creeping through this tunnel toward the front line, the members of the visiting party knocked their steel casques on the roof, and plunged through the water ankle deep. Paul D. Cravath, the New York lawyer, a man of large build, 8 feet 6 inches tall, was bent double in the struggle through the tunnel.

Chief to an Ambassador. "Let me introduce you to our chef," said the commandant, as a young soldier cook came forward. "He is now the cook for this tunnel—and he ought to be a good cook, for before the war he was chef to the French ambassador at Rome."

Emerging from the tunnel into the front line, the German trenches were plainly visible on the crest only 300 yards away. The intervening space was swept clear as though by a cyclone. Instead of the beautiful green of the forest, that was left at the other end of the tunnel, here the whole outlook was gray and desolate; the ground jagged and torn as by eccentric plows, but a vestige of grass or verdure, and the few gaunt trunks of trees stripped of their last leaf and looking like so many scarecrows.

"This has been a rather quiet day—only two mine explosions," said the commandant, "two men injured, one in the shoulder, the other in the leg. That is little, for often we have forty to sixty men killed or injured in these mine explosions, which go on continually as the Germans try to mine under our trenches and we try to mine under theirs."

Even beyond the front line French trenches the French soldiers had pushed their observation posts into the fire-swept dividing line, 300 yards wide. Some of these daring men could be seen almost up to the crest, where the German line ran. They were crouched behind heaps of bowlders, rifles ready.

"Those men are only ten yards from the Germans," said the commandant. As he spoke, Mr. Cravath of New York, said: "I see a German; and there he is on the crest; you can see his uniform with the round cap."

"And he sees you too," said the commandant. "You have been under fire," he added as he led Mr. Cravath and the others to a more secure position.

Americans Are Lucky. "It's good that German didn't fire," remarked Cravath. "It might have been an international incident. Think of it—killing an American visitor to the French trenches."

ITALIAN FINDS LOCKJAW CURE

Professor Ingianni Invents Portable Bath for Hot Immersions.

GIVES SATISFACTORY RESULTS

After Few Days Treatment the Wound Begins to Heal, Suppuration Disappears, Swelling Subsides and Fever Ceases.

Headquarters of the Italian Army in the Field.—Surgeon Major Professor Ingianni of the Italian medical corps, in charge of a field hospital, has applied on a large scale a special treatment for lockjaw which is giving most satisfactory results.

The antitoxin treatment of lockjaw is extensively used in the Italian army as a preventive and, thanks to it, the cases of tetanus have been greatly diminished. Naturally in field hospitals local conditions are such that it is impossible to resort to prolonged antiseptic bathing of the wounded or infected part, and the most effective remedy consisted in amputation. But even early amputation often proved of no avail when the germs in the wound already had set free a lethal dose of their toxin.

Doctors Amputate Too Freely. Often for fear of infection surgeons in the field resort freely to amputation knowing full well that it would be impossible for them to keep the wound clean until it is completely healed.

Professor Ingianni instead is convinced that amputation should only be resorted to in extreme cases, as a doctor's first duty is to cure, not to cripple a man. Prolonged warm bath of the wound is an almost infallible remedy against lockjaw, and nothing prevents its being administered even in the field under ordinary conditions.

A warm antiseptic solution can be easily kept in it at the same temperature for five or six hours. As a rule a 3 per cent solution of hypochlorite is used or else corrosive sublimate in the proportion of one-half per 1,000. But permanganate of potassium, iodine or lead water also can be used to advantage. It has been found better to alternate the employment of these antiseptics.

The results of this treatment are wonderful. After a few days the wound begins to heal, suppuration disappears, swelling subsides and fever ceases. Recovery follows as a matter of course even in cases where amputation was considered the only remedy. The danger of lockjaw is entirely obviated.

Court Decides Crime is No Cause for Divorce—Defines Habitual Drunkard.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa supreme court, in session here, has handed down several Solomonian decisions. In one ruling, the court held that confession of a crime on the part of a husband does not constitute grounds for divorce proceedings.

"It ill becomes a wife," said the court, "to prefer criminal charges against her husband. She took him for better or for worse, and she should try to redeem him."

In the same decision the court defined a habitual drunkard as "one who becomes even moderately intoxicated whenever the opportunity is presented."

Is Single Again. Chicago.—Adolph Kausal, musician, is a single man again because his wife was so anxious to hold his love that she put love powders in his food and even his shoes. Kausal told Judge Thomson the powders ruined his stomach. He was given the divorce he asked.

Fortune and Fame in Pisa. Cleveland, O.—Pisa has brought fortune and honor to Fred C. Elmer, father of the nickel pie—once a prized lunch in itself. "I became so well known as the original pie baker that when I ran for State Senator I was easily elected," he says. "I was the first to see the possibilities of nickel pies and to make them go. From Dec. 10, 1877, when I opened my shop, pies went like wildfire. The kids were my best customers."

In Woman's Realm

Coats for the Small Girl Are Shown in Great Variety and Are Made in Many Materials—Cap and Muff to Match—New Coiffures That Are Inspirations of Hairdresser

FAMOUS FASHION WRITER

Julia Boatmanley is recognized as one of the best informed women's fashion writers in the United States. She knows exactly the needs and desires of women in the small towns and country, for not many years ago she conducted a dressmaking and millinery shop in a little city in Colorado. And the articles she prepares for us are written with a view to meeting the conservative ideas of the ladies of our community. The tawdry and extravagant are taboo with her. Leading wholesale and retail dealers and manufacturers of women's apparel recognize in Mrs. Boatmanley an authority and the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal has consulted her frequently. She is at present associate editor of one monthly fashion periodical, a regular contributor to another and is fashion editor for an important newspaper syndicate. Before the war Mrs. Boatmanley went annually to the Paris fashion center, and since then has kept in touch by personal correspondence. We publish these articles by special arrangement.

FASHIONABLE COAT FOR LITTLE MAID.

After reviewing coats made for the small girl it seems that they range through as great a variety of materials, and almost as great a variety of styles, as coats for grown-ups. All the soft, woolly goods, several fur-fabrics and plushes, velvet in various colors, and all-fur coats promise a season of rich and comfortable outdoor wear for the little miss.

It is a fad of the season to have a hat or bonnet and a tiny muff made of the same material as the coat. From top to the almost everything small ladies wear is of one kind of cloth. For trimming, narrow bandings of the shorthair and least costly furs are used. Smoking and shirring play important roles in making coats of wool velvets, Bolivia and similar cloths, and they are at their best on velvet. But coats of fur-fabrics or plush, like that shown in the picture, must be made on the plainest lines.

All-fur coats of white rabbit with caps and muffs to match make the most captivating and imaginable. Baby Bunting's father spends his time to good advantage when he manages to clothe his small daughter in these

They have added coiffures with loops of hair to other high and stately styles, and are showing others with small puffs and several short curls pinned at the crown of the head in the back. For those who like a lower hairdress.

Among high coiffures there is one design in which a band of waved hair is wound about the head like a wide band of ribbon, near the forehead. It allows a few orderly waves and ringlets to escape about the face, and the back hair is arranged in puffs at the top of the crown. This is an unusual and very finished-looking hairdress.

A similar coiffure is shown in the picture. In this design all the hair is waved and the front hair is combed back over a foundation which raises it at the top of the head. At the back a cluster of curls is pinned below the crown and a band of waved hair is brought across above the nape of the neck. It will be seen that ornamental pins are an essential part of this coiffure—they finish and support it.

The coiffure at the left is much simpler. All the hair is marcelled for it and combed toward the top of the crown. It is finished in a small coil snowy skins. Rabbit is frankly rabbit this year, and costs money, at that. There are fascinating coats of white broadcloth trimmed with bandings of brown fur, and they are quaint replicas of models made for grown people.

The coat shown in the picture is a practical model of brown plush very durable and warm. It is so simple that there is almost no reason for a description of it. It has a turnover collar and cuffs of the same material as the belt. The belt slips through straps at the sides, and odd silk buttons provide the means of fastening.

Now that the waved and puffed and otherwise elaborated coiffure has come back, hairdressers appear to be working under the spur of new inspirations.

fastened with a shell comb. This is one of many styles to which a side part on the forehead gives a youthful touch.

Jersey. Paris likes it. America likes it. So it will go merrily on. It will not pass with the summer. Silk jersey is expected to remain all winter. It makes a smart and useful all-round rig. In a coated belt dress it is altogether modish.

The Tartan Skirt. Tartan time is here once more. It seems to come as regularly as the fall of the leaf, and is always welcome, for to the woman of taste in clothes, tartan, with its sombre background and gay stripes, is irresistibly fascinating. The French woman discovered its becomingness ages ago, and the love of it seems ineradicably planted in her bosom. She nearly always has a tartan skirt or blouse in her wardrobe, and she is fond of dressing her children in it. At present the vogue is for wearing the plaid skirt arranged in plaits as much like the kilt as possible, and strung from a beautifully modeled yoke. Brogue shoes are, of course, a sine qua non with it, and tartan stockings, too, if you will, are absolutely en suite. Little coats with square-tabbed basques in dark green or blue are the natural allies of the tartan skirt.

Some of the smart between-season frocks of serge are trimmed with soft-tack braiding.

Inflammation of the Mouth. An acute catarrhal inflammation of the mouth occurs frequently from mechanical, thermal or chemical irritation. It is a frequent accompaniment of specific fevers and wasting diseases. In children it is commonly seen in association with digestive disturbances, the result of improper food or faulty hygiene, especially of the mouth. They are restless and disinclined to nurse. The temperature is slightly elevated, the breath is fetid and the mucous membrane of the mouth is red and swollen.

Then this touch of the human side of that extraordinary money getter: "Mr. Weightman was very fond of flowers and generally had clusters of two or very choice blooms." He could well afford them with those innumerable "fat pocketbooks."

Invisible Clock. A public clock which can be heard but not seen is one of London's curious possessions. It is in the tower of St. Mary Abbot's church, Kensington, and is the only public clock in the immediate neighborhood. It chimes the quarters and the hours, but commits itself no further. It has no dial, no hands, no outward and visible sign of any kind to show that it is a clock. This eccentricity, it is explained, is the result of two causes, one esthetic, the other financial. When the tower was built in 1379 a clock was suggested as an afterthought, but the architect protested that it would mean the addition of 15 feet to the tower, and the ruin of its cherished proportions. A second point was that the church, having but slender funds, could not afford a clock with a dial. A compromise was arrived at by installing the works of a chiming clock in the belfry without dial or hands.—London Tit-Bits.

Old Paisley Shawls. There was something about the family Paisley that was almost, if not fully, as respectable as the family carriage. A great deal depended on its quality, of course. It had to be double, and it had to have cashmere "centers" in salmon, scarlet, green or lavender. Doubtless thousands of Paisleys, carefully laid away by grandmothers, will be brought out, in case the garments again become stylish. But one cannot refrain from regretting that so many of them were cut up to make the wraps that followed the disappearance of the shawls.

Fashion in Haid. It is the ambition of almost every Haitian to possess a black suit for special occasions. If he is a private citizen without hope of political preference or place, he is content with a coat cut in sack effect. If he pretends to fashion, he likely wears a long cutaway. If he happens to be a general, or a member of congress, or an ex-member, or a minister, or ex-minister, he affects the extreme frock or prince Albert, and the heavier and thicker the cloth, the happier the wearer, though he swelter in his raiment. It is also the ambition of every Haitian to have a pair of shoes for Sundays and funerals at least, as their possession raises him considerably in the social scale. If caught out with shoes on during a rain, the owner usually takes them off, puts them carefully under his jacket, and finishes the journey barefooted.

COARSE JOKE IS PUNISHED

Would-Be Wit Doubted Fright Which Made Him See Things in a Different Light.

Some years ago it was the custom in France to conduct condemned criminals through gaping crowds of idle spectators to the public guillotine. On one such occasion, the unfortunate, seated upon his coffin in the cart, heard a would-be wit in the crowd remark to a companion: "Well, I'll bet that fellow doesn't feel much like laughing." The coarse attempt at a joke stung the prisoner, and when he arrived at the scaffold, he asked that the proceedings might be stayed a moment as he had a confession to make. "Although I denied it at my trial, I had accomplices in the crime for which I have been sentenced; and there," pointing to the joker, "stands one of them!" Great excitement ensued. The person designated was seized by the gendarmes with no gentle hands and placed on the scaffold beside his accuser. Such a fearful spectacle of abject terror as the joker presented was never before witnessed in that somber locality. After enjoying his helpless fright for a few moments, the fated convict said to the official in charge: "He tried to make sport of my sufferings, but the man is innocent. And as soon as he seemed to be sure that it was no laughing matter for me to be here, I was curious to see how much such a funny fellow would laugh under similar circumstances himself."

MONEY AT HIS FINGER TIPS

Scores of Men Borrowed From William Weightman as They Would From a Bank.

William Weightman, the old quinine king, was one of the three or four richest men who ever died in Pennsylvania. No man in this city ever kept so much real money as his finger tips as did Mr. Weightman, a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger states. Scores of men borrowed money from him as they would from a bank, and it was his custom to give them cash and not a check. Here is an example of the old millionaire's method which I have from Frederick A. Kiehl, whose plant for making testing machines is a neighbor of the Weightman chemical factory. "We often had occasion to borrow money, and we used to go to Mr. Weightman's office and ask him for the loan of some cash. Mr. Weightman never refused, and after listening to our story quietly and patiently would reach around to one of his many great purses and open the door, get out one of his fat pocketbooks and pick out the banknotes for the amount that we needed. Mr. Weightman never gave me a check."

Then this touch of the human side of that extraordinary money getter: "Mr. Weightman was very fond of flowers and generally had clusters of two or very choice blooms." He could well afford them with those innumerable "fat pocketbooks."

If he is a private citizen without hope of political preference or place, he is content with a coat cut in sack effect. If he pretends to fashion, he likely wears a long cutaway. If he happens to be a general, or a member of congress, or an ex-member, or a minister, or ex-minister, he affects the extreme frock or prince Albert, and the heavier and thicker the cloth, the happier the wearer, though he swelter in his raiment. It is also the ambition of every Haitian to have a pair of shoes for Sundays and funerals at least, as their possession raises him considerably in the social scale. If caught out with shoes on during a rain, the owner usually takes them off, puts them carefully under his jacket, and finishes the journey barefooted.

WISE DOG DODGES A TRAIN

Found in Chase Across Bridge Hangs From Tremble While Quarry Is Killed.

Princeton, W. Va.—Several persons witnessed a remarkable display of canine intelligence here when a foxhound belonging to James McPherson saved himself from death under a train on the railroad bridge at Black Lick, four miles west of here. The bridge is 200 feet high.

Fortune and Fame in Pisa

Cleveland, O.—Pisa has brought fortune and honor to Fred C. Elmer, father of the nickel pie—once a prized lunch in itself. "I became so well known as the original pie baker that when I ran for State Senator I was easily elected," he says. "I was the first to see the possibilities of nickel pies and to make them go. From Dec. 10, 1877, when I opened my shop, pies went like wildfire. The kids were my best customers."

NEW INSPIRATIONS OF HAIRDRESSER

Paris likes it. America likes it. So it will go merrily on. It will not pass with the summer. Silk jersey is expected to remain all winter. It makes a smart and useful all-round rig. In a coated belt dress it is altogether modish.

OLD PAISLEY SHAWLS

There was something about the family Paisley that was almost, if not fully, as respectable as the family carriage. A great deal depended on its quality, of course. It had to be double, and it had to have cashmere "centers" in salmon, scarlet, green or lavender. Doubtless thousands of Paisleys, carefully laid away by grandmothers, will be brought out, in case the garments again become stylish. But one cannot refrain from regretting that so many of them were cut up to make the wraps that followed the disappearance of the shawls.

FASHION IN HAIR

It is the ambition of almost every Haitian to possess a black suit for special occasions. If he is a private citizen without hope of political preference or place, he is content with a coat cut in sack effect. If he pretends to fashion, he likely wears a long cutaway. If he happens to be a general, or a member of congress, or an ex-member, or a minister, or ex-minister, he affects the extreme frock or prince Albert, and the heavier and thicker the cloth, the happier the wearer, though he swelter in his raiment. It is also the ambition of every Haitian to have a pair of shoes for Sundays and funerals at least, as their possession raises him considerably in the social scale. If caught out with shoes on during a rain, the owner usually takes them off, puts them carefully under his jacket, and finishes the journey barefooted.

Worth Careful Thought

Do you read the label to know whether your baking powder is made from cream of tartar or, on the other hand, from alum or phosphate?

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes, and adds to the food only wholesome qualities.

Other baking powders contain alum or phosphate, both of mineral origin, and used as substitutes for cream of tartar because of their cheapness.

Never sacrifice quality and healthfulness for low price.

Making a Fine Improvement

Oliver G. Idsmith is doing a fine piece of road building on Junction Ave. in the new Auburn Heights subdivision. Mr. Goldsmith has made the roadway fifty feet in width and is graveling the same from the Northville road to Ann street. When completed it will be as pretty a street as can be found in the village, and will be a fine drive for automobiles next summer. A pretty view of the village is obtained along its course at the highest point. The road also passes very close to the new plant that the Plymouth Motor Castings Co. are now building. The Northville road along Mr. Goldsmith's property has also been gravelled. Mr. Goldsmith will make some other improvements next spring in the way of sidewalks and the setting out of shade trees. There will be considerable building in this section of the village next summer, several already have made plans to erect houses in the early spring.

A Pleasant Surprise

Rev. and Mrs. Frank M. Field were delightfully surprised this week in the receipt of a complete china set of 106 pieces and a beautiful oak china cabinet with inlaid design, gifts from the Methodist church at Gladstone, which they have just left in coming to Plymouth. The set of dishes was expected as this gift had been announced at their farewell reception, but the piece of furniture was a total surprise.

A Pleasant Event

"Home rule"

in the deceptive sense in which the brewers use it is saloon rule!

It has nothing whatever to do with the home!

It is a trick to get home-loving workmen to lend their vote to something that they SUPPOSE will benefit their homes and the homes of their drink-addicted co-workers!

"Home Rule" is a wolf in sheep's clothing. It hides its fangs under the cloak of apparent respectability, in the hope that it may lure the unthinking into voting for a measure that would help perpetuate the saloon!

Under "home rule" ONE "WET" TOWN could debauch fatherhood and young manhood and impoverish homes in EVERY DRY TOWN NEAR IT!

Statewide Prohibition

will knock out every saloon in the state and stop this foul liquor traffic

Statewide prohibition of the liquor traffic will prevent any possibility of ONE "WET" Town or County debauching the surrounding dry towns or counties!

Statewide prohibition will cure this state of the saloon and liquor traffic with its trail of slow death, crime, insanity and poverty!

Statewide prohibition will insure food, clothing, shelter and peaceful security to thousands of families who now lack these things because the saloon gets the money that should be spent for them!

Statewide prohibition will remove the corrupting influence of the saloon from politics!

Statewide prohibition deserves your vote if for no other reason than that it will absolutely

Wipe Out the Saloon!

Vote "YES" on the amendment to Article 16, to be known as Section 11, providing for STATEWIDE PROHIBITION!

Vote "NO" on the amendment to Article 8, to be known as Section 30, this being the saloon's deceptive "home rule" measure.

"AUF WIEDERSEHN"

By EARL REED SILVERS.

They sat in the swinging couch of the Country club veranda. Mildred Terrill spoke first.

"We haven't been together at a dance for five weeks," she said. "No," he answered, "not since you put the last waltz at the Assembly hall."

"Are you still angry about that?" "Yes," Cliff Hillman's lips were compressed tightly.

"I didn't do it purposely." She looked at him with big, appealing eyes.

"No, it was worse than that. You just forgot me."

"Will you let me explain?" "I don't see that there's anything you can say to better it."

"But there is."

"What?" He looked gloomily over the rolling golf links.

"I didn't know that the last dance had started. I was walking with Arthur between dances, and we went just a little too far. We couldn't hear the music where we were."

"Do you know what the waltz was that you forgot?"

"It was 'Auf Wiedersehn.'"

"Yes, our dance." He turned to her directly. "Do you remember how, when we first heard that piece, you said that we should always dance it together?"

"Yes, I remember."

"I was crazy about you that night, and 'Auf Wiedersehn' was the most wonderful dance I had ever heard. You seemed to care a lot then."

"I did." It had been the light in her eyes, he would have thrilled at the message it conveyed. But he was looking into the distance.

"And still, just a week later, you cut it to go walking with Arthur Hale."

"What's past is past," she continued. "Don't you want to be good friends again?"

"Of course, but it isn't much use now."

"Why?"

"Because of something I heard."

"What was it?"

"I heard this morning," he spoke slowly, "that you are engaged to Arthur Hale."

"It isn't true; I'm not engaged to any one." She looked fairly into his brooding eyes.

"I'm glad." He smiled for the first time during the conversation. "Maybe we might have 'Auf Wiedersehn' together tonight," he suggested.

She glanced at the order in her hand.

"It's the tenth dance," she said hesitatingly, "and I am to have that with Arthur."

He scowled.

"I knew it. And that was always going to be our dance."

"I'm sorry."

"I'm sorry, too." He rose as the orchestra struck up a lively fox trot. "Here comes Arthur now," he said.

"This is probably his dance, too."

"Yes, it is." She hesitated. "Maybe—" she began. But before she could speak further Arthur Hale appeared on the scene.

The girl threw a glance over her shoulder as she walked away, but Cliff did not see her. He was thinking of "Auf Wiedersehn" and all that it had meant to him.

While the others were dancing, he walked to the end of the porch and seated himself in the shadows. The music died away, but he did not stir. Suddenly he heard a girl's voice. It was Mildred's.

"Do you mind," she was saying, "if I give the tenth dance away?"

"Of course I do," Arthur spoke with the self-assurance which was his most notable characteristic. "That's 'Auf Wiedersehn,' and it's mine."

"No," the girl said, "not yours. I'm sorry, but I'll have to give it away."

"What?" The man's voice rang out angrily.

"You have ten others, and I think you can very easily give one away. At any rate, I'm going to take it."

"Well, of course you can do what you want to."

"And you won't be angry?"

"Yes, I shall be."

"Well, you'll have to be then." She spoke as if she didn't care. "I'm going to give it to Clifford."

"Who?"

"To Clifford Hillman."

"Oh, so you're going back to him?" There was a sneer in his voice.

"I think you've said enough, Arthur." She spoke quietly.

"I beg your pardon." He accepted his defeat like a man. "I'll see if I can find him for you."

"Thank you! I'll wait here."

After he had gone, Cliff emerged from the shadows.

"Mildred!" he said.

"Oh!" She blushed deeply. "Did you hear what I said?"

"Yes," he answered.

When Hale came back to tell Mildred that his search was in vain, he could not find her, for she was hidden in the shadows which bordered the golf links.

The ninth dance was just starting when she and Cliff returned to the veranda. She glanced at her card.

"This with Arthur," she said. "I must tell him."

"And the next is 'Auf Wiedersehn.'"

"Yes," she answered, "the next is our dance." She laid her hand on his arm. "Good-by, dear," she whispered.

"I'll see you again," he returned. (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

How Catarrh is Contracted

Mothers are sometimes so thoughtless as to neglect the cold which their children contract. The inflammation of the mucous membrane, at first acute, becomes chronic catarrh, a disease that is seldom cured and that may prove a life's burden. Many persons who have this mucous membrane cold remember having had frequent colds at the time it was contracted. A little forethought, a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy judiciously used, and all this trouble might have been avoided. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

BIRDS SPOILED GOOD SCHEME

Women's Ingenious Idea Failed Because She Was Unable to Take Them Into Her Confidence.

She planted some young fruit trees in her back yard last fall. Among them was a cherry tree, just a little thing that will consume several years in its valiant effort to acquire a reasonable standing in the community. But it is doing its best, and already it is large enough to attract attention. A man in the neighborhood has watched the career of that tree with much interest, and he has not lost a chance to jolly the woman about it. At least 4,000 times, thus far this season, he has asked her about the tree and about the prospects for the crop of cherries. The woman finally decided "to put one over" on him. She would show him that a young cherry tree could bear a full crop of fruit the first year.

She bought a box of nice, big red ripe cherries, and tied about twenty of them on the tender little limbs of the cherry tree with thread. When she had completed the work the tree loomed up bright and red as an anarchist flag. Then she sent word to the man, who lived two doors away, to come over and see what the tree had produced.

He was not at home at the time, but he arrived soon afterward, and he ambled over to have a look at the tree. But its branches were as bare of cherries as a Mexican desert is of ice water.

Birds had discovered the cherries and they "beat him to it." They had eaten every cherry. The woman does not know what to do next to convince the man that a young cherry tree grows cherries.—Indianapolis News

FEW PURE WHITES IN MEXICO

Remarkable Mixture of Races in the Inhabitants of That Much-Troubled Country.

Of every 100 persons in Mexico only 19 are of a pure white race; 38 are Indians and the other 43 are a somewhat sorry mixture of various races, but chiefly of Indian and negro.

There are fully 15 times as many Indians in Mexico as dwell in the United States. An Indian was really the George Washington of Mexico, and the name of Benito Juarez is perpetuated in a town mentioned every day in the troublesome dispatches from that unhappy land.

The whites or real Mexicans are descendants of the Spanish conquerors. Those Spaniards didn't wish to share a good thing with anybody and so they shut out all other immigration. Hence it happens that today, with a population twice that of Pennsylvania, Mexico has only about sixty thousand foreigners dwelling permanently in the republic, "Girard" writes in the Philadelphia Ledger.

The mestizo is a common variety of the mixed race in Mexico. He is a son of a white father and an Indian mother.

A "chino" is another prevalent type. He is the product of an Indian father and a negro mother. He is not a handsome specimen of the human race nor a reliable one.

Then there is the zambo, also numerous, and he is the son of a negro father and Indian mother.

These three types of mixed races, plus the ordinary mulatto, form the major portion of nearly half the Mexican population.

It is a curious thing that the Indian blood does not mix well with the African and it seems to depart further from the original than does the negro.

If American missionaries seek a fertile field for education they may find it among Mexican Indians. The red men of that republic are so backward in modern science that 50 out of every 100 children die in infancy.

LABOR'S ENEMY— THE PROHIBITIONIST

- Big Interests want prohibition in Michigan.
- 50,000 jobless men, who would become job-seekers instead of wage earners under a program of state prohibition, would be a great help to Big Interests.
- Big Interests could then tell every worker that—"50,000 other men are looking for a job—your job."
- Big Interests could strangle organized labor in Michigan—
- IF—
- PROHIBITION WERE IN EFFECT.
- Big Interests are doomed to disappointment.
- Prohibition will not carry in Michigan.
- Sane voters will protect 50,000 workers and property valued at $30,000,000.
- Sane voters will vote "NO" against prohibition November 7.
- Big Interests will still be forced to meet with organized labor.
- Big Interests will be denied the weapon wanted—50,000 jobless men.
- In Colorado, after prohibition went into effect, thousands of men marched in a body to the state capitol to DEMAND WORK.
- Big Interests are now slowly strangling to death organized labor in Colorado.
- Big Interests favor the "dry" agitators in Detroit.
- Big Interests would throttle labor organizations in Detroit.
- In Witness whereof—read labor's own story, from the Detroit Labor News, the publication of organized workers.

Cadillac Company Can't Break Up Machinists' Noon Day Meeting

Not all the power of the poorly paying open-shop Cadillac Motor Car Co. with the Detroit Employers' Association, founded according to his own statement by Henry Leland, president of the Cadillac concern, was able to stop the organizers of the International Association of Machinists from speaking near the big plant out Woodward avenue last Monday noon.

Organizers went there Friday noon, but police officers stopped them, several organizers being taken to the police station.

General Executive Board Member Nicholson interviewed Detroit's new police chief, James Couzens, Monday morning. He gave permission to hold noon-day meetings at the Cadillac or any other plant. Nicholson and others proceeded to the Cadillac plant. The police were there to receive them. They declared no meeting would take place. Speakers for the "dry" campaign were not bothered, but were permitted to continue their talks. The police declared that the union men were blocking the sidewalk as soon as they opened up, although the "dry" men were not criticized. One of the union officials called Police Commissioner Couzens on the telephone. He ordered the lieutenant of the Bethune station to go at once to the scene. He did so and he and all others could see five mounted policemen and seven patrolmen, all the men from the neighboring fire station and a crowd of from five to seven thousand men.

He ordered the police to let the machinists talk. But even then a sergeant did his best to break up the meeting.

The meeting was successful and considerable literature given the Cadillac employees.

"Commissioner Couzens and the police superintendent gave us a fair shake; it was a sergeant down there who was giving all the orders against us," declared James Henderson, the I. A. M. union organizer.

FORD

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Three strong reasons urge you to buy the Ford car: First, because of its record of satisfactory service to more than fifteen hundred thousand owners; Second, because of the reliability of the Company which makes it; Third, because of its large radiator and enclosed fan, streamline hood, crown fenders front and rear, black finish, nickel trimmings, it is most attractive in appearance. To these must be added its wonderful economy in operation and maintenance—about two cents a mile; likewise the fact that by reason of its simplicity in construction anyone can operate and care for it. Nine thousand Ford agents make Ford service as universal as the car. Touring Car $360, Runabout $345, Coupelet $505, Town Car $595, Sedan $645—f. o. b. Detroit. On sale at

PRESBYTERIAN.
Rev. B. F. Farber, Pastor.
Services of this church will be held on Sunday, Oct. 29th, as follows: Morning worship at 10 o'clock. The pastor preaches on "A Little Child." Sunday school at 11:30 a. m. Morning service at 7 o'clock. In the evening this church unites in the mass meeting in the village hall to hear Mr. D. M. Robbins bring a message on temperance. No prayer meeting on Thursday night as we unite in the meeting in the village hall to hear Dr. Clarke.

ST. JOHN'S EPISCOPAL MISSION.
St. John's Episcopal Mission, 114 Madison Street.
Sunday, Oct. 29, Divine service at 10:15 a. m. Holy communion. The Rev. Dr. McCarroll of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, will have charge of the service and will preach. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend this service.

METHODIST.
Rev. Frank M. Field, Pastor.
"Letters of Recommendation" is the pulpit theme for the service Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Before the sermon the pastor will tell a story specially prepared for boys and girls, "A Boy Who Started a Church." Parents are urged to bring their children with them to the church service. Sunday school at 11:20. Classes for all ages. The Epworth League service at six o'clock will be led by the pastor. Subject, "An Evening with the Gaiety." There will be no evening service in the tabernacle, there being a union prohibition meeting at the municipal hall, addressed by D. M. Robbins, a prohibition speaker of note.

LUTHERAN.
Sunday school at 9 o'clock standard time. Subject, "The Hallowing of God's Name." Reformation festival will be celebrated in this church next Sunday morning. Services at 9:45 standard, will be in German. Text, Acts 26:22. Theme, "How Christians shall show their thankfulness for the work of reformation." The evening service at 7 o'clock will be in English. Text, Revelations 3:11. Theme, "Hold that fast which thou hast." Every Lutheran should attend these services. The Ladies Aid will meet immediately after the morning service. This will be the last meeting of the year and all members are urged to be present. German services at the Livonia church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

BIBLE STUDENT.
Services as usual October 29. Topic, "The Deliverance and Exaltation of the Church," continued from last week. One of the interesting questions will be, "What is the difference between the church's morning and the millennial morning?" How grand that the world will have a glorious morning after this terrible war is over. Tuesday, October 31 the class will have with them Traveling Brother W. M. Wisdom from New York. Pastor Wisdom is not a stranger in Plymouth, having been here twice before. He is a good speaker and doubtless will have an interesting topic. All are invited to hear him. Time and place not yet decided. Inquire 333-F13.

A DIFFICULT MISSION

By NAPOLEON S. ZARICK.

Both Rowley and Hart have long honored me with their confidences. Even when we were chums at school I was the repository of their secrets, the mediator in their quarrels.

It was one day when I sat by my studio window that Rowley and Hart arrived together at my door. They sat down. Rowley looked at Hart. Hart returned the compliment. Silence ensued.

"Boys," said I, at length, "you had better toss up for who speaks first." They grinned uneasily and then Rowley, who is, perhaps, just a thought quicker than Hart, opened the conversation.
"Jack," he began, "you know Miss Annie Seymour?"
I nodded affirmatively.

"Well," he continued, "it's about her. You see, we're both very much in love with her."
"And she?" I asked.
Hart took up the thread. "She has been nice—very nice to both of us," he said. "In fact, Jack, we cannot decide which of us she prefers. And we don't want to take any unfair advantage."
"But—" I began.

"You don't see what we're driving at, eh? Well, I'll explain, if Hart will allow me. We just want you to be the same kind old Jack you've always been. We want you to—well, dash it all—we want you to find out for us which of the two she really does want to marry."
I set up, and lit a cigar.
"You see, boys," said I, "there's a little difficulty in the way which you don't seem to have considered. Miss Annie Seymour barely knows me."
"Oh, but she does, and likes you, too!" This from Hart.

"Boys," said I, "it's a ticklish mission, but I promise you I'll do my best."
"Dear me, Mr. Winton! You have been an unjustifiable time about calling."
"My dear Miss Seymour, one cannot set lightly about important functions."
"You call on the muses daily, I am told."
"But they are never at home, I assure you."
"I wish I were a muse," remarked Miss Seymour, with an adorable smile.

"But you are," I protested. "You certainly are the tenth muse. The muse of—"
"Of afternoon tea, of course. Won't you have some tea, Mr. Winton?"
"By the way," was my first shot, "I saw John Hart yesterday."
"Indeed? Sugar, Mr. Winton?"
"And Bob Rowley, too. Saw them both together."
"Really? Cream, Mr. Winton?"

Both of my shots had failed! For a young woman supposed to be deeply interested in two young men, Miss Seymour's matter-of-fact reception of those young men's names seemed singular indeed.
It were useless to detail our conversation. Suffice it that, although I returned again and again to the charge, I failed to arouse in Miss Seymour the slightest evidence of interest either in Hart or Rowley.

And the odd part of it was that she changed the subject from my friends' affairs to mine—displaying, indeed, a flattering, if unaccountable interest in all my humble doings. In the end, I became desperate. Daring tactics, I felt, were the only means at hand.
"Miss Seymour," I said, "you do not seem to be enthusiastic over either Bob Rowley or Jack Hart."
"Up went Miss Seymour's eyebrows.
"Well, hardly!" she exclaimed. "I don't see why I should be."
"Now suppose—just suppose—that me of them were to fall hopelessly in love with a certain Miss Seymour, would there be any hope for him?"

Miss Seymour set down her tea cup and looked at me sternly—that is to say, as severely as she could. "Mr. Winton," she remarked, "you were asked to come here and put that question to me."
"No," I said, "not that one—I have overstepped my mission."
I began studying the shape of my boots, and wondering which was the foot I had just "put into it."

Then there was a little final chat as I took my leave. I don't quite know how it came to pass, but just before I departed Miss Seymour asked me, "You don't read your Longfellow, do you Mr. Winton?"
"Well—no," I replied; "not Shakespeareally, as one might say."
"There is some really excellent common sense in Longfellow. Good by, Mr. Winton."

About half way down the street I stopped suddenly.
"Longfellow?" I remarked to myself, "Longfellow? Now what has Longfellow got to do with my little schemes? She is not a young woman who makes remarks without reason or connection. And then her look when she said—! I'll swear there is some consoling message for poor Bob and John concealed between the covers of Longfellow?"
And then, all of a sudden, a pre-mptuous thought set my mind awhirl.

I hastened home and took down a copy of Longfellow's poems from my library shelf. As fate would have it, I opened the volume at the line, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

Drive It Into the Barn

AS we told you, a Low Cloverleaf gives the manure a double beating, and spreads manure eight feet wide or better. But the wonderful thing is that it does this from a box only 45 inches wide. The spreader itself is so narrow that it can be driven into any modern barn and loaded from the gutters. Only one handling of the manure for the quickest, best job of spreading you ever did. How does that sound to you?

If you have even begun to think about buying a spreader, come in and see this Low Cloverleaf. You will say you never saw a better manure spreader. It won't take long to look it over. We have one set up for you to see.

Last Sunday morning the congregations of the Methodist Episcopal and First Presbyterian churches united in a union service in the Presbyterian church. The house was filled and an attentive congregation listened to an earnest talk given by Miss Gamlin of the Billy Sunday party on the "Responsibility of Parenthood." At the close of the service Dr. Laa, who accompanied Miss Gamlin sang a solo. During the Sunday-school hour Miss Gamlin addressed the young people.

What might have been a very serious accident occurred at the corner of Dodge and Main streets last Wednesday noon, when the eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Munger, who reside a short distance west of town, ran across the street. The child was looking at a car which had stopped and did not notice a car driven by George C. Ravlier approaching from the opposite direction, nor did Mr. Ravlier see the child in time to avoid hitting her. The little girl was unconscious when picked up and was immediately taken to Dr. Peck's office where upon examination it was found she was only slightly injured. Had Mr. Ravlier been driving fast, the child would probably have been killed. Let this accident be a warning to both children and motorists. Parents and teachers should impress upon the children the need of more caution in crossing the streets, and motorists are urged to be especially careful during the hours children are going to and from school.

A Pretty Home Wedding

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Glass in Livonia, last Wednesday evening, when their daughter, Camilla, was united in marriage to Clyde Ford of Dearborn, by Rev. Walters, pastor of the Methodist church at Elm. The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion with palms and autumn leaves, the bridal party standing in front of a huge bower. The bride wore a becoming gown of white net over white crepe de chine and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Bessie Faulger of Redford, who was groomed in pink pussy willow taffeta and carried pink roses. E. J. Glass, brother of the bride acted as best man. Little Dorothy Fitzpatrick of Detroit, and little Dorothy Bentley of Elm, as flower girls, were prettily dressed in white with pink sashes. The bride was given away by her father, and Mrs. Clyde Bentley of Elm, presided at the piano. About one hundred guests were present and after the ceremony a wedding supper was served. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. After a short trip to Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Ford will spend the winter with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Eckles and daughter, Myrtle, Mrs. W. A. Eckles and son, Floyd, and Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Willett of this place, were among the guests.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 138 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy." — Mrs. Wm. Green, 322 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy. If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

NATURAL FOR THEM TO CRY

Adults, as a Rule, Pay Too Much Attention to the Bawling of the Youngsters.

There are too many youngsters who know that they can get anything if they cry long enough for it. Then there are children who cry over anything, whether crying is justified or not. It is quite natural for children to magnify every disappointment and to make a huge outcry over everything that displeases. Parents should remember this and discount a large percentage of this bawling. Most adults are too easily annoyed by a child's crying. They think he ought to control himself, and attach too much importance to his lack of restraint in this regard.

Of course, it is very probable that there is physical cause for the child's crying, in that case, the cause should be found out as quickly as possible. The chances are that a normal child, say three years old or over, with plenty of muscular activities and games, who is healthy looking, eats and sleeps well and otherwise good natured, does not cry because of temper. There must be some physical reason. There must be some bodily irritation somewhere. It may be his teeth. In many cases a developing tooth will press upon some nerve or nerve center, creating a general disturbance throughout the body. Then there may be other causes, which can be discovered on close examination.—Exchange.

Is Work Too Hard?

Many kinds of work wear out the kidneys, and kidney trouble makes any kind of work hard. It brings morning lameness, backache, headache, nervousness, rheumatism and urinary troubles. If your work is confining, strains the back, or exposes you to extreme heat or cold or damp, it's well to keep the kidneys active. Doan's Kidney Pills are reliable and safe. HISTORIC CRIMES and MYSTERIES

ROYAL REVENGE.

QUEEN CHRISTINA of Sweden, only daughter of the great and good Gustavus Adolphus, kept all the gossip of Europe in a ferment for many years. After holding down the throne of her fathers for four years, she voluntarily abdicated in favor of her cousin, in order that she might travel and enjoy herself. At that period she was young and beautiful and the most learned and accomplished woman of her time, and it is not strange that "Welcome to Our City" signs were hung out whenever she deigned to visit a burg.

Toward the close of the year 1657 she honored France with her presence, and the palace of Fontainebleau was turned over to her with the compliments of the season. She was attended by a royal retinue of servants, and also by her grand equerry, Marquis Monaldeschi.

This gentleman, as his name suggests, was an Italian, and for a considerable time had been the queen's favorite. They were recognized as lovers and, since the queen had abdicated, it seemed more than possible that they would be married and go to housekeeping. The marquis was extraordinarily handsome and gifted in all the graces and polite manners.

"Look Again," said the Queen sternly.

of the time. He was a charming man, but entirely unscrupulous. When duty took him away from his royal mistress they wrote love letters, just as ordinary people do, and the letters of the marquis always breathed undying devotion. And, while thus convincing the queen that he lived for her alone, he was quietly laying siege to a young Roman girl of wealth and beauty.

In his letters to this girl he ridiculed the queen shamefully, applying contemptuous names to her; and, not satisfied with this business, he sent several of the queen's love letters to her, that she might enjoy a good laugh. But Nemesis was on the false lover's trail.

There was a certain cardinal who had long been jealous of the marquis, and who was anxious to be the queen's favorite. The cardinal had his spies, and soon learned the details of Monaldeschi's treachery. By some means he secured possession of the entire correspondence with the Roman girl, and turned the letters over to the queen. Christina must have had a bad hour when she read those letters, in which her love and trust were ridiculed.

On Saturday, November 10, the marquis was summoned to the galerie des Cerfs, a long and gloomy apartment of the palace. He entered, bowing and smiling in his accustomed manner. The queen was there, with Father le Bel and three armed strangers. Christina's face was as cold and rigid as marble. As the marquis advanced, smirking, her glance brought terror to his heart, although he had no inkling of what was in store. Turning to Father le Bel, she said: "Hand me those papers."

He produced the letters, which had been intrusted to him by the queen. She in turn handed them to the marquis.

"Do you recognize these?" she asked. There was an icy sweat on the brow of the marquis, and his legs trembled under him.

"I have never seen them before," he stammered, at last.

"Look again," said the queen, sternly. "Are those not your letters?" He could say no more. Helpless, speechless, trembling in every limb, he could only look imploringly at the merciless woman. The three men closed around him and drew their swords.

ROMANCES OF RAIL

Men Who Rose to Head Great American Railroads.

Some Went Up From Ranks and Some by Way of Learning—More Wonderful Than Some Arabian Nights Tales.

Not yet are the days of romancing passed. They are making more wonderful romances under your very eyes than they used to make in the days of Bagdad and the Arabian Nights. What son of Mustafa by rubbing a lamp could be elevated more wonderfully than a grimy locomotive fireman, who opens a book, and presently finds himself head of a great railroad?

Take Daniel Willard, for instance. He is president of the Baltimore and Ohio great railroad now. Mr. Willard is a great executive. He is an art connoisseur, a musician and a scholar besides. His collection of portraits of Napoleon is one of the best in the world. His interest in most of affairs is world-wide. Some time ago, when he was in the midst of negotiating a $110,000,000 expenditure for improvements of the Baltimore and Ohio, he began to study French.

It is only a few years ago that Willard was fireman on an old Vermont road that is now part of the Boston and Maine. Willard was a locomotive fireman, that's all. But one day he found a book that interested him, in spite of its forbidding title. It is "Wellington's Economics of Railroad Locations." Willard bought it. He tucked it beneath the cushion of his seat in the engine cab, and when he wasn't keeping up steam in the boiler head he was reading about railroad economics. It gave him a wholly new view of railroading. The rest you can read.

"Fred" Underwood, now president of the Erie, the most jovial railroad president of all, was the conductor of Willard's train. Underwood was coming along fast then—so fast that pretty soon he was Willard's boss—"Mr. Underwood" to Willard. But they became close friends, and each recognized the other's worth. Some years later Mr. Underwood was in line for the presidency of the Erie. Then the chance came, and almost the first man he called to the road was Willard as vice president. The two men are closer chums than ever now.

With the exception of a few every-one has climbed the ladder from the lower run. One could almost count the college-bred men on the fingers of his two hands. And Louis W. Hill, head of the Great Northern, is practically the only one who inherited a big railroading job to start with. That was as vice president under his father, the late James J. Hill.

C. P. Markham, president of the Illinois Central, prominent socially as well as financially in Chicago, began his career as a section hand—a common laborer—on the Santa Fe, in Kansas City, then one of the toughest railroad yards in the country. He is remarked today as one of the most dapper-looking of these powerful railroad men. No one looking at him or studying him closely would say he was other than the son of a rich man who had all the trills of a course at a leading university.

There's E. P. Ripley, president of the Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe. Years ago a young man named Ripley went to work as a clerk in the traffic office of the Boston & Maine. But his stay there was not long. Pretty soon someone higher up spotted him as a coming railroad chief and gave him a job as general manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. And when the Santa Fe was reorganized E. P. Ripley assumed the presidency. His friends celebrated his seventieth birthday last year in Chicago, and the gathering was one of the most distinguished ever brought together. A man is a man to Mr. Ripley, whether he is a section hand or a general manager.

Then there is Fairfax Harrison, bearer of the proud name of Fairfax of Virginia, president of the Southern railway, one of the few college men in the executives' group. He is an eminent lawyer and a Greek scholar, besides a leading railway executive. Some time ago he translated Cato's "Farm Management," considered by many scholars as a literary gem.

But then, he isn't altogether to blame for that. It has been traditional among the first families of Virginia that their sons must go to college. It only goes to show that it is the caliber of the man which counts, in railroading as in everything else.

Chinese Advancement. Forty years ago China's first locomotive killed a man who was trespassing on the track. Promptly the people executed judgment on the little seven-mile road. The rails were torn up. The locomotive was sold. The road was no more. Now there are 6,000 miles of railroad in China; it is in prosperous condition and additions are being made to the mileage every year. China will yet rival the foremost countries of Europe in the extent of her railroads and the profits from them. The new China gives promise of becoming a nation.

PUT MOTOR TRUCKS ON RAILS

An Engineering Journal Suggests the Feasibility of "Automobilizing" the Railroads.

Motor trucks are already "stealing" much of the short-haul freight traffic. Why not automobilize the railroads? Because Carranza would not permit American troops to use Mexican railroads, some genius in our army temporarily transformed motor trucks into railroad rolling stock by fastening detachable steel flanges to the motor-truck wheels. Thus the trucks were driven over the railroads, where there were railroads available, and over dirt roads when no railroads were available. The change from a rail vehicle to a dirt-road vehicle is quickly made, and thus the problem of automobilizing one railroad system was speedily effected in part.

Innumerable rail lines carry only a few trains daily, and the trainloads are not great at best. There is every reason to believe that much of the freight traffic over such lines could be more cheaply handled by motor trucks adapted to run on rails as well as on roads.

May not the pressing and perplexing problems of furnishing adequate terminal facilities in large cities be solved by automobilizing the terminals? Why will it not be economic to transfer nearly all freight from cars to motor trucks outside the limits of large cities, run the trucks into the cities on rails, remove their temporary wheel flanges, and thus enable them to run over paved streets to their destination?

Railway managers, wake up! Come out of your narrow path, and beyond its extremities, into all the highways of transportation. View transportation in its entirety as your field of action, and you will add more to human wealth than you have already added—which is a vast deal.—Engineering and Contracting.

UNUSUAL USE FOR CULVERT

Structure Near Lake Superior Has Been Utilized as a Most Effective Boathouse.

A large culvert through which water passes under a railroad track skirts the shore of Lake Superior in used by the owner of a fair-sized motorboat as a boathouse. The level of the culvert's floor is a few inches above the lake and rollers have been laid at intervals from the edge of the water back into the passageway along which the boat is drawn. This unusual shelter furnishes ample protection in the severest storms. Ordinarily the amount of water which flows through the culvert is of very little inconvenience. The roof is composed of old iron rails to which the boat is chained when it is brought in from the lake, so that it will not be swept away in case the flow is greatly increased by a storm.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Building Hard to Wreck. Dynamite, oxy-acetylene torches, fire and wrecking cranes were employed successfully in raising five tall, thin walled, reinforced concrete, cement storage bins, built 15 years ago at South Chicago, says the Engineering Record. Heavy charges of dynamite in the supporting columns produced no effect. Oxy-acetylene torches were then employed to cut the steel rails that reinforced them, the weight being shifted to wood shores. Even the effect of the heat and flames of burning kerosene-soaked supports, roaring up through the barrels of the tanks, apparently had no disintegrating effect, as the structure was not wrecked when it dropped on edge. Wrecking cranes finished the work, starting at the top and pulling the tanks apart in chunks.

Discoverer of Corn Oil. Lucius Elmer Sayre, discoverer of a process for making corn oil, which is calculated to take the place of lard and similar articles to some extent, is dean of the school of pharmacy of the University of Kansas. He has devoted himself to the study of chemistry, and for a number of years was in business as a manufacturing chemist. He is the author of a number of works, including "Chart of Materia Medica," "Pharmaceutical Botany," and "Essentials of Pharmacy." "The fat can be produced at a lower cost than any of the other vegetable fats now so generally used throughout the country," says Professor Sayre. "It is just as efficient as other fats for the same purposes."

Railroads Earn $545 a Mile. Sixty-seven of the largest steam railroads earned a net revenue of $545 per mile during last July, an increase of $43 a mile over July, 1915. A summary made public by the Interstate Commerce Commission shows net revenues totaled $41,355,921, compared with $36,828,588 in July, 1915. The largest gains were made in the East.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

Wash and unhealthy kidneys cause so much sickness and suffering and when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results may be expected.

Your other organs may need attention—But your kidneys should have attention first because their work is most important.

If you feel that your kidneys are the cause of your sickness or run down condition commence taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because if it proves to be the remedy you need and your kidneys begin to improve they will help all the other organs to health.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease. Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalence of kidney disease. While kidney diseases are among the most common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patients, who usually content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease constantly undermines the system.

SPECIAL NOTE—You may obtain a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. This gives you the opportunity to prove the remarkable merit of this medicine. They will also send you a book of valuable information, containing many of the thousands of grateful letters received from men and women who say they found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed in kidney, liver and bladder troubles. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample size bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. ONE WAY OUT

By ELSIE GEE.

"Oh, you're in for a romance, Dick." "I can't see any romance where a penniless youth falls in love with the richest girl in seven states," grumbled Dick.

"Things do look dark," admitted Jerry. "But I've seen you save the day too many times on a football field when things looked dark to doubt that you'll come out of this tangle with colors flying and the lady in your arms."

"You get out—I've got an idea!" Dick almost yelled, and his glittering eye told Jerry that a prodigious plan was forming in his mind.

For the next month, while Anne Morrison danced and motored and golfed, and while Jerry, Dayton did likewise, Dick Stanford kept to his insurance office by day and to his apartment by night until Jerry gave up trying to draw him into social life or to draw from him the secret of his nightly labors. At the end of a month, however, Jerry's curiosity and his vanity were gratified by an invitation to Dick's apartment to be the audience of one to hear the first reading of Dick's play entitled, "Out of the Tangle."

"Bully for you, old boy!" and "Richard, you'll back the dramatized best sellers of the boards," were comments that came from the delighted Jerry during the first part of the reading, but later he protested: "Oh, come now, Dick, whoever heard of a rich uncle from Alaska turning up to back an impetuous nephew in a scheme to drive his prospective father-in-law to the wall as a means of making him succumb gracefully to the relationship?"

"And whoever heard of people going to the theater to see something they've heard all about every day of their lives?" retorted Dick.

"I throw up my hands!" said Jerry, making an exaggerated demonstration of his acceptance of defeat. "On with the play!"

Dick did go on with the play, and the play went on the boards almost immediately, bringing so much money into the box office and such flattering offers to its author that he was soon in sight of affluence. Dick began to hope that he dared approach Anne Morrison's hopelessly rich father as a prospective son-in-law, but it was Jerry's unhappy lot to knock those hopes flying.

"Old man, I've got some rotten news for you," said Jerry, as he rounded a corner of a shady country lane, whither he had taken Dick for a spin in a remarkably new yellow car. "Our company is closing a deal with Edith Montague for that big lot adjoining the Morrison home in Hurley place, which seems like a confirmation of all those reports that Anne and old Montague are engaged."

"You're a regular storehouse for comforting thoughts, Jerry."

"The other cheek, please," said Jerry, with mock humility, but smiling so benignly that Dick laughed in spite of his dejection. "I'm making myself the bearer of unpleasant tidings to give you a last chance to go in and win."

"A great chance I've got to go in and win now," muttered Dick.

"The smaller your chances the bigger your victory—if you win. Chirp up, old man. Don't you know that while there's life there's hope! If you act like a dead one, of course there's no hope for you. I might add, incidentally, that this deal will keep Montague here until next week, and if you're the poor but deserving lover I take you to be, you'll cut in ahead of him by spending this very week-end up where the Montagues are summering and where Montague has been hanging out a goodly number of week-ends."

"I'll let you and Anne, too, know that I'm not a dead one. Will you get me back to town right away, Jerry?"

With Jerry's aid Dick managed to get the train, and the next morning, on the hotel piazza in an Adirondack resort, as Anne appeared all in soft white costume, he had the joy of seeing pleasure shine in her eyes as she blithely met his own rapturous gaze. She consented to show him the wonders of the place, their first objective point being a high point overlooking a wonderful panorama of stony little mountains.

"Don't you love it?" exclaimed Anne blithely.

"Love it! No—I love you," said Dick in headlong recklessness. "Anne, is there any hope for me? Once I did hope a little, Anne, but I had something then but a wealth of love to offer you. I haven't great material wealth to offer you now, but enough to begin on and promising prospect. People are saying that you are engaged to Edith Montague, but I can't give you up without telling you that neither he nor any other man could love you more than I do."

"Why, Dick, Mr. Montague is going to marry my mother's sister out in Denver," said Anne, in surprise. "Then she added, with a pretty little pout: 'If you hadn't been so busy becoming a famous playwright, you would have found out long ago that looking in the wings and leaving the stage to other men is no way to get a heroine out of a tangle.'"

"Do you mean that I may choose my own method of getting you out of this tangle?"

"Yes," whispered Anne, and the method which Dick chose was one established by long usage as both appropriate and adequate.

NEWBURG

Friday last was the most unpleasant day and evening of the season. However, it didn't keep all the people from attending the Newburg homecoming and fair. Two hundred thirty partook of a fine chicken supper and enjoyed a social time. The different booths were well patronized and the society will clear over $100. The ladies wish to thank all those who so generously contributed for the supper and the booths; also the girls who waited table in such a nice manner. They especially wish to thank the Teller Coffee Co. of Detroit, for donating the coffee and tea and also the little cakes that were placed on each plate with the dessert. They also furnished a fine parolator and one of their men to attend to making the coffee. Friends were present from Detroit, Farmington and Plymouth.

Everyone invited to attend the church service and Sabbath school. Mrs. M. Eva Smith has resumed her teaching of the adult bible class and will be glad to welcome any members to the class.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Wm. Farley is not so well at this writing.
