Burglars in Plymouth

Last Wednesday night burglars broke into O. F. Beyer's drug store in north village. They entered through a basement window and smashing the large door leading from the basement gained entrance to the store. Quite a sum of money was taken, also stamps, jewelry, kodaks and other articles. Mr. Beyer is unable at the present time to estimate his loss, as things were left in such confusion. They also broke one of the large doors leading into the phonograph room. Mr. Beyer not only regrets the loss of the articles taken, but feels very badly about the damage done to his new store building. This is the second time within the past few weeks that Plymouth has been visited by burglars.

Canton Farmer Struck by Bolt Lightning

Fred Palmer, a well known Canton farmer, was struck by lightning, last Sunday afternoon. He was returning to the house from his wheat field when the bolt struck him. His wife, at the house watching the approaching storm, saw her husband coming up the lane, but after the flash he disappeared. Fearing that harm had come to Mr. Palmer, she immediately sent their son down the lane with the auto to look for him. Only a short distance away they found him lying on the ground face downward, and unconscious. His body had turned black and they could scarcely see that he was breathing. A physician was summoned and it was two hours before he fully regained consciousness. Mr. Palmer was badly burned about his body and sustained several cuts on his face from the rain. However, at the present writing he is improving and able to be about the house, but in a very nervous condition.

Had Big Sale of Ford Cars

William Beyer, proprietor of the Bonafide Garage, and local agent for the Ford cars, reports that he has sold a total of eighty-three cars from August 1, 1916, to August 1, 1917. Mr. Beyer now has a number of cars sold, which he has not yet delivered. The new building, which he has been erecting adjoining his present garage, will be finished this week and ready for occupancy. The new building will give him much needed room to handle his growing business.

Early Morning Fire in the Business District

About two o'clock last Tuesday morning, fire broke out in the fruit store of Andrew Samborn, on Main street, next to the D. U. R. waiting room. The stock of goods and the interior of the store was completely destroyed. The law offices of Voorhies & Dayton in the building adjoining were damaged considerably. How the fire started is not known. It was only by the prompt and able work of the fire department that a more serious conflagration was averted.

Epworth League Entertains at a Pot-luck Dinner

Last Friday afternoon occurred one of the happiest events of the season, when the Northville and Newburg Epworth Leagues met with the Plymouth League on the town flats for a live picnic and pot-luck supper. The guests from Northville numbered about forty and from Newburg ten. Soon after four o'clock the guests began to arrive and were once rushed into a "get acquainted" game, "Good Day." The next game was played with volley balls and called "Right about Face." After this the girls rested, while the boys entertained them with a game of "Leap Frog." The serve-self pot-luck supper was served at six o'clock. Victrola music was played during supper. The last game which was played was "Man, Monkey, Crab," being played under Japanese lanterns in the grove, part of the picnic grounds near the river front. As a grand finale all gathered around a large bonfire and sang patriotic songs and gave yells.

As all wended their way toward the waiting autos, all determined to be better Leaguers and to go into the work in earnest with the same enthusiasm as was shown during the afternoon and evening.

HAPPENINGS in the BIG CITIES

New York Military Census Redolent of Humor

NEW YORK.—Those who took the state military census in this city have added considerably to their knowledge of the human units which make up the industrial fabric of a great city. The answers given to the question in regard to occupation elicited some curious information. One negro who presented himself for registration on the lower West side answered that he was "the man who brushes off the gents after they have had their shoes shined." Cross-examination revealed that this was the only gainful occupation which he had ever pursued in the whole course of his twenty-four years. He brought his whisk broom with him.

Another applicant for a registration card at the same location also brought proof of his occupation in the shape of a portfolio of pictures. He was an artistic photographer, he said, and after submitting the portfolio, as proof of his assertion he endeavored to sell some of his works to the staff of registrars until he was ejected.

Four Greeks who came in together reported to answer to another question that they were the joint owners of one horse. The census blanks were very searching in their inquiries regarding the ownership of horses, mules, automobiles and such things, but apparently no thought had been given to the possibility of joint ownership of these accessories. The problem thus presented to the registrars was solved by reporting each son of Hellen as the owner of one-fourth of a horse.

Still another odd occupation was reported by an applicant who gave his occupation as "handy man about the house."

"Mary the Cooper" Prominent Figure in Boston

BOSTON.—Do you know Mary? Mary who? Mary the cooper—Mary of Faneuil Hall Market district. Ask any man down in the wholesale quarter of the city who Mary is and he will tell you all about the old, bright-eyed Italian woman, whose eyes the joys of honest labor have kept sparkling, whose cheeks outdoor work has kept rosy, and whose healthy constitution a cheery disposition has done much to promote.

Mary earns her living—and a prosperous one at that, too—by scouring the market district for empty and broken barrels. With her husband's aid she repairs them, in their little back-room garret down in the North end. She has every dealer, broker and lumper for her friend. Any man will tell you that there is not a more honest woman in the district and that every penny she earns she comes by honestly. Never has she been known to steal or try to "do" a person.

You might well be surprised any day to see a barrel, supposedly suspended in midair, gliding down the street. Upon closer examination you would see that the barrel is supported upon the head of a woman—Mary—on her daily rounds.

Dodging in and out among the enormous trucks, peeping now into this store, now into another, for a stray barrel, as she makes her way along the street, she is greeted on every side by a friendly: "How'dy do, Mary? Got good business today? That's good, Mary!"

No man can put a storehouse to rights as quickly and make it as free from debris as can Mary. And to the question often put to her: "Mary, why do you work so hard?" she replies with a little shrug of her shoulders, as a smile spreads over her wrinkled face and a twinkle comes into her brown eyes: "No work, no can eat."

Mary, however, does not go unwarded for her work. No market man ever forgets her, and every empty or broken barrel is put aside with a word: "Keep it for the 'cooper woman.'"

Intelligent Bulldog Is Pride of San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO.—Mack, the fourteen-year-old registered English bulldog owned by H. C. Flint of 818 West Evergreen street, first acquired city-wide fame several months ago when he prevented a burglar from robbing his master's home. He has long been a neighborhood celebrity, however, his many less spectacular performances gaining him friends among people of all ranks of life, except burglars.

Aside from being an efficient watchdog, as was demonstrated when he seized the burglar, who was escaping through the window with a bag full of silverware and cut glass, he has many other accomplishments. He herds chickens as a collie does sheep, he brings in wood in the evening, and brings in the newspaper and the mail. When all the members of the family are too far away to hear the telephone he calls them to it as soon as it rings, and on one occasion he saved the house from burning when he called his mistress into the room where the rug had caught on fire from the grate. Moreover, in spite of his age, Mack is an expert mouser.

His intelligence is far above that of the ordinary bulldog, and his understanding of speech is said to be so nearly perfect that when people do not want him to understand what they are talking about they resort to spelling, as one would do with a child. Before getting into bed he carefully turns down the cover.

Mack's favorite dissipation is riding in the automobile, and the fact that he has been in wrecks does not seem to have made the pastime lose any of its charm. Perhaps some of his many unusual qualities can be traced to the fact that he was born on Christmas day.

Mother Had Kept Demented Children Hidden

PITTSBURGH.—Mystery growing out of strange noises, like the bark of a dog, coming from the residence of John Sinszki, at 5408 Carnegie avenue, Lawrenceville, and the queer actions of Mrs. Sinszki, who died in St. Margaret's Memorial hospital after an illness of two months, was cleared when neighbors entered the house to view the woman's body and found two children, apparently demented, crawling about the floor.

The two children, both boys, were attired in girls' clothes. John, aged fourteen, the oldest boy, crawled along the floor on his hands and knees, according to the police, and barked like a dog. The other, Joseph, aged nine, was pounding his head against the floor. Policewoman Ethel Cronin was notified and the oldest boy was taken to central police station by the detectives and placed in the matron's department. The younger boy was turned over to the Humane society.

According to the police, neighbors asserted that they had never seen the two children during the five years the family lived there and thought that Steve Sinszki, aged ten, another son, was the only child the couple had. Steve was permitted to play outside. Policewoman Cronin says Mrs. Sinszki never permitted any outsiders to enter the house. The police believe that the woman feared juvenile authorities might take the children from her if their condition was brought to light. Because of the woman's actions, neighbors say that the home was known as "The House of Mystery."

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Motorcycles and bicycles are becoming popular throughout Siam. The book of the Bible called Leviticus is so called because it relates principally to the Levites and priests. The manufacture of airplanes in the United States has increased almost 100 per cent within the last year. Nettles regarded useless weeds before the war, are now being cultivated in Germany in large quantities for textile purposes.

Lake Huron holds the curious record of having more islands than any other lake. It has at least three thousand. What is known as the Australian "bush" is the country beyond the communities. The life followed in these regions is similar to ranch life in New Mexico. Eblim is the plural of Eblon which in Arabic is Allah. This term occurs only in poetry and in a few passages of later Hebrew (Nehemiah 9:17, 2; Chronicles 28:15).

BRITAIN TRAINS YOUTH FOR THE ARMY

Thousands of Boys Given Preliminary Drilling for Service as Soldiers.

RESERVES OF THE FUTURE

Work is Carefully Laid Out to Avoid Strain, Physical or Mental—Education for These Needing It.

London.—Great Britain has something like five million men in its military forces. General Robertson announced that another half-million must be provided in order to maintain reserves and keep the fighting units up to full strength. When this 600,000 has been provided there will be another demand for further augmentations later.

The inexorable demands from the trenches must be met somehow. How they are to be met, how man power is continually to be provided to meet the wastage of war is indicated by the progressive organization of the country's youth for training in anticipation of the time when they shall arrive at military age.

All over the country battalions of boys, none of them beyond the age of eighteen years and eight months, are being systematically trained for the army. Schoolboys, college boys, apprentices—youth of all classes—as soon as they are physically capable of undertaking the work of training, are put into the organizations for preparation.

Careful measures have been adopted to insure that they shall not be overtrained and either physically or mentally injured by the strain. Officers in charge of these organizations of boys have been provided with special instructions as to the service that may safely be demanded. A good deal of discretion in this regard is left to commanding officers and drill masters, but after all the purpose is to equip the national youth for soldierly service as rapidly and efficiently as possible.

Much lighter requirements, however, are imposed on the youngest class of prospective soldiers. They are given graduated instruction in various drills for the purpose of hardening their physiques. Games, lectures and educational work are provided in addition to ordinary military training.

There are twelve fortnightly periods in the training course for youth of this class. In the first period of two weeks 64 hours of work are required, of which 12 hours are given to games and educational work. After the first period 14 hours are set aside in each fortnightly period for these purposes.

Such games as cricket, football and boxing are particularly prized for their effect on the physique of the recruit. Participation in these is compulsory. At the outset every young man is inoculated, vaccinated and given a thorough dental overhauling. This limits the possible activities of many of them during the first six weeks of their training. After these preliminary troubles are over, the organizations settle into a regular scheme involving 84 hours' work per fortnight, or six hours' work daily, including Sunday.

How the Work is Divided. At this stage of his training the recruit gets in each fortnightly period ten hours of general physical training, six hours of bayonet exercises, 18 hours of squad drill, 18 hours of musketry and range practice, two hours devoted to interior economy, three hours on night work, three hours on guard duty, two hours on anti-gas training, three hours of route marching without packs, two hours for special lectures and 14 hours for games and education.

Every soldier must learn all about taking care of his clothes, kit and equipment and instruction in these departments is referred to as "interior economy." Then it is necessary to give very careful instruction to the importance of discipline as a military factor, hygiene, sanitation, first aid and minor casualties, trench warfare, concealment and co-operation of infantry with artillery and aircraft.

The importance of the educational course must not be underestimated. A good many boys with extremely rudimentary schooling are taken into these organizations. Those who need it are given the most elementary educational opportunity, while the more advanced ones are provided instruction in sub-

BOY GIVES LIFE FOR CHUM

Howard Francis of Brooklyn Vainly Tries to Save Friend From Drowning. New Brunswick.—Howard Francis, eighteen, of 471 Hancock street, Brooklyn, was drowned in the South river near here in a vain attempt to save the life of his seventeen-year-old chum, Patrick O'Sullivan of Philadelphia. The boys had been "batting" in the river and O'Sullivan, who could not swim, was dangling from a rope swung from a barge, pulling himself up, and then letting himself go. He lost his hold on the rope and sank. Francis, who was on the deck of the barge, plunged in to help his chum. O'Sullivan grasped him around the neck and both went down. Francis' body was recovered after a half-hour search, but O'Sullivan's is still missing.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Originator of "Their Married Life," Author of "The Journal of a Neglected Wife," "The Woman Alone," Etc.

THEY DISCOVER THE REAL CAUSE OF THE BARCLAYS' EFFUSIVE HOSPITALITY

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mabel Herbert Urner

"Move your chair farther out, Mrs. Curtis, you'll get more air."

Helen dragged over the wicker chair until the rockers scraped the wire netting that screened in the long side porch.

"We always get a breeze out here," declared Mrs. Barclay, who had spent most of the afternoon dilating on the advantages of their country home. "Now, isn't this better than being cooped up in the hot city?"

"Yes, this is very pleasant," murmured Helen, who had conscientiously played the part of an admiring, enthusiastic guest.

"How about mosquitoes?" Warren was scratching his ankle.

"Oh, Howard will leave that screen door open! But they're no worse than they are in town. Mr. Phillips was out last Sunday—he said he'd been almost eaten up in his apartment."

The cooling darkness had relieved somewhat the glaring heat of the day, but the air was still close and sultry, and the "breeze," of which Mrs. Barclay boasted, had to be incessantly stirred by palm-leaf fans.

"Barclay, what time did you say that train went?" Warren reached over to knock the ashes from his cigar.

"Well, tomorrow I've got to get the seven-forty, but you don't have to go that early. Why don't you take the eight-ten?"

"Oh, no, we'll go in with you," suppressing a yawn as he glanced at his watch by the dim light from the dining room.

"Wouldn't you like to see the cellar before you go up?" suggested Mr. Barclay. "You won't have time in the morning."

"Oh, I'd love to," lied Helen, wondering if she could marshal her overworked adjective to a proper appreciation of the cellar.

Since their arrival on the noon train Mrs. Barclay had dragged her through every room in the house, expatiating on the comforts and conveniences of her home, while Helen had kept up a continuous murmur of:

"How attractive! How very convenient! You really have a charming house! Oh, what a delightful view! Yes, this is such a pleasant room! What lovely big closets! Oh, what a cheerful maid's room!"

When she had gushed over the kitchen, pantry, back porch and garden, she felt she had done her full duty, but here was the cellar still to be explored.

"Howard, don't you want to show Mr. Curtis the furnace?"

"Sure," her husband rose with alacrity. "We've got about the best and simplest thing in furnaces. Kept the whole house warm last winter with only ten tons."

"Why, that's very little," ventured Helen, who knew absolutely nothing about coal, but who was trying to cover Warren's unresponsive silence, as with evident reluctance he laid down his cigar.

"Yes, the Petersons just below here used over fifteen. And their house is much smaller—but it's poorly built. That's one thing about this house—it's exceptionally well built."

"The walls are so thick," contributed Mrs. Barclay, "it's a very easy house to keep warm." Then as she gathered up the porch cushions, "It may rain tonight—we'd better take these in."

Through the dining room, out through the pantry, and they made their way down the steep, narrow steps into the damp, musty-smelling cellar.

"Oh, what a lovely large cellar!" enthused Helen, almost before the light was turned on.

"This is only half of it," proudly, "The storeroom and laundry are over here."

While Mr. Barclay demonstrated to Warren the admirable points of the now cold and empty furnace, Mrs. Barclay showed Helen the storeroom.

"You've no idea what it saves in ice bills. We really don't need an icebox at all. Most cellars are damp and moldy—but this is always so perfectly dry."

As the darkened streaks on the cement wall were cooling dampness, Helen refrained from commenting on this statement.

"Here's my jelly closet," drawing a curtain back from some rough shelves on which were a few glasses and jars. In a nervous effort to conceal Warren's silent boredom, Helen admired everything in extravagant terms. She was tired and sleepy, and her feet ached from the heat and a new pair of pumps, but there was no release until they had seen every corner and "convenience" of the cellar.

In the laundry, the patent washing machine, the double wringer, even the revolving clothes rack had to be demonstrated and glowingly commended.

A founce of Helen's thin gown was snagged on a nail of an empty soap box, and there were several smudges on the pink whiteness of her buckskin pumps, yet her gushing enthusiasm was undampened.

As Warren's unresponsiveness grew more marked, the more profuse and superlative became her admiring exclamations.

It was after ten before they finally escaped and made their way up to the great room, followed by Mrs. Barclay's assurance that they would sleep well in this "pure country air."

"Why the Sam Hill did they drag us through that cellar?" exploded Warren, as he peeled off his coat and flung himself into a chair by the window. "It was tiresome," Helen, stopping over the wicker chair until the rockers scraped the wire netting that screened in the long side porch. "And you wouldn't say a thing—I had to do it all."

"Yes, you laid it on pretty thick." "Did I overdo it?" anxiously. "Oh, they swallowed it all right."

"Well, they expected us to admire things. They built the house themselves—I suppose that's why they're so proud of it."

"Huh, I wouldn't live out in this god-forsaken place if they'd give it to me. See here, can't we raise this infernal thing, trying to shove up the window screen. Can't get a breath of air?"

"Oh, don't put that up! The room'll be full of mosquitoes."

"Well, it's hot as Hades up here. I'll go down and have a smoke and cool off while you potter around."

Fortunately, the guestroom had its own bath, and Helen was soon in a tub of cooling water.

While in relaxing weariness she lay there, her idle glance traced a long crack in the painted wall. She had noticed a similar crack in the papered ceiling of the dining room. And yet Mrs. Barclay had repeatedly insisted that the house was "so well built."

When she was ready for bed, a murmur of voices came from the porch below. If Warren was down there with Mr. Barclay, he might stay another hour. She turned out the lights, for they only added to the heat.

The bed was by the window. Musingly she gazed out at the dark country road, occasionally lit by the searchlight of a passing motor. There is nothing more tiring than "visiting," and Helen, thoroughly exhausted, soon dozed off to the murmurous treble of the tree frogs.

A slamming door and the glare of a disturbing light.

"By George, what do you think?" Warren was standing before the dresser unbuttoning his collar.

"Oh, I was asleep," resentfully, shaking her blinking eyes.

"Well, this'll wake you up," scratching the back of his neck with a reminiscence grin. "Barclay's been trying to sell me the house!"

"No!" Helen sat up in bed, now thoroughly awake.

"Yep, that's why they shot off all that hot air and dragged us over every inch of the blooming place."

"But they're wild about it! Why should they want to sell it?"

"Sh-sh, not so loud—these walls are pretty thin. He put it square up over my head, and I had to do some mighty quick sidestepping. Didn't want to turn him down too hard. After your fool gushing over everything—he thought he had a snap."

"But why?" persisted Helen. "What excuse did he give?"

"Oh, he's string a long yarn about needing the money in his business. Said he had a pretty hard year and they really couldn't afford it. Of course that's all bunk. He's sick of the place and wants to dump it. That's why they've been trying to get us out here all spring—the whole thing's a frame-up."

"No—no, I can't believe she wants him to sell."

"You can't, eh? Well, she came out while we were talking—had her part down pat. She threw in a lot of slush about it breaking her heart, but since they had to sell, she'd rather we'd have it than anyone else."

With a contemptuous grunt, Warren disappeared in the bathroom, while Helen, still sitting up in bed, tried to digest this astounding piece of news.

"Dear, I can't understand it," when he came out.

"Got an elephant on their hands and want to unload it, that's all," as he bed creaked under his weight. "But they tackled the wrong party," with a chuckle. "I'll be pretty far in my dotage before anybody'll wish a country place on me. More heat, more mosquitoes, and more discomforts to the square inch."

"Yes, this room's disgusting," admitted Helen. "There's not a breath of air."

"And we've got to get up in time to catch that seven-forty. Darn glad I don't have to catch it every morning," adjusting his pillow with a vicious punch. "You can thank your stars we're cooped up in a city apartment—with none of the 'comforts of country life!'"

Superstition Still Lives. Old actors believe the witches' song in Macbeth to possess the power of casting evil spells and the majority of them dislike to play in the piece. Some of the creatures met with at sea are considered unlucky. If a shark is seen following a ship for days, it is thought that someone on board is doomed to die shortly. The birds known as Mother Carey's chickens, when they perch upon the rigging of a vessel, are believed to be messengers of a storm. Dolphins or porpoises seen in a calm are unfavorable omens. The naming of a warship after stinging or venomous things is considered unlucky. In Newfoundland the superstition says that if a ship has a starboard list it is a sign of a quick passage; a port list, it is a sign of a long passage. The throwing overboard during a calm of all clothes on board is wear, which has been saved for the purpose, is supposed to bring a wind.

French Fond of Bystand. The French are great lovers of bystanders. Their custom is to stand close by, looking on at the most exciting scenes.

Many Seeking Exemptions in First Draft Call

Sixty-eight Per Cent of the 118 Men Who Appeared at the City Hall, Tuesday Ask Exemptions.

Ninety Per Cent of the Men Examined Tuesday, Pass Physical Tests.

At an early hour Tuesday morning, young men began to arrive in Plymouth from all parts of the Fourth District in response to the orders which had been mailed to them to report at the city hall, Plymouth, for the first examinations for the new national army. The members of the board have been working hard for the past few days getting everything in readiness for the big task before them. The work had been so carefully arranged and every board member had been particular to prepare himself for his own special duties, and with sufficient clerical assistance that the line of waiting men were kept moving without any delay or confusion all day.

The numbers are called and a preliminary examination is given the men at the headquarters in the city hall, and then each man is given a card properly filled out, and in groups of ten or a dozen are escorted by a clerk to the basement of the Methodist church, where they are turned over to the doctors for the physical examinations. The doctors conducting the examinations are as follows: Dr. Berry, Detroit, eye specialist; Dr. Saunders, Wayne, Dr. Cooper, Patterson, Kimble, Plymouth; Dr. Olsaver and Champe, Plymouth, teeth.

The quota required of the Fourth District is 207 men, and to secure this number a total of 414 notices were mailed out for the first call. One hundred and forty were called for Tuesday and out of this number about eighteen failed to show up. The examinations for the first day showed that ninety per cent of the men examined passed the physical tests. Of the 118 men examined sixty-eight per cent claimed exemption, chiefly on the ground of dependents. We give below the names of the men who receive their mail from the Plymouth office, together with their serial number and their number in the order in which they will be called for examination.

McCormick - Binders

Buy a McCormick—Get the Latest Improvements in Binder Construction

McCormick binders sold now are better than ever before. Years of experience in binder building have eliminated impractical features and substituted in their place features that assist in better work, easier handling, and more years of service.

Few binder manufacturers have had these years of practical experience, and it stands to reason that unless they imitate McCormick construction they must be going through experimentally what the builder of the McCormick binders did several years ago. Imitators, while silently commending the original and genuine, are always a few years behind in improvements and refinements.

IT'S TOO LATE

to lock the barn after the horse has been stolen, also it is too late to think about automobile insurance after one of the numerous automobile gangs known to be operating in this country has driven your car away.

The time to insure is now—before any one of the hundred or more things may happen. The proper way to insure is with a reliable company, who has been in the insurance business long enough to base their rates upon actual experience and whose policy is free and clear from any "ifs and ands."

The Travelers of Hartford, Connecticut, is just such a company, having written automobile insurance since automobiles were first invented, and their rates are reasonable for the service rendered. YOU CAN'T GET SOMETHING FOR NOTHING is a well known business axiom that applies to the so-called cheap automobile companies in this state.

NATIONAL GUARD LOSES IDENTITY

STATE TROOPS, BY DRAFT INTO REGULAR ARMY, GET NEW REGIMENT NUMBERS.

MICHIGAN GUARD IS NO MORE

Except for a Few Officers Who Have Not Been Called, Troops Are Now in Federal Service.

Lansing. Except for a few officers who have not been called to active duty, there is now no more Michigan national guard. In fact, the national guard of the United States went out of existence Sunday.

Under the president's call, which brought the last state troops into federal service August 5, on that date all the guardsmen were drafted into federal service. By drafting the guard on the same date, though groups were called at different times, the question of seniority of officers is settled. All are in federal service as of August 5.

Michigan's regiments will not be known by the numbers they bear now. Neither will the other guard organizations of the United States. The organizations will be kept intact, but the guardsmen will receive numbers where the regular army regiments end. That means that Michigan's numbers will be well up in the hundreds. All officers will have to purchase new collar devices, while the government will have to change the collar ornaments of the men.

The president may send the guardsmen anywhere now, the discharge from the national guard and the draft into the federal service doing away with restrictions which made the national guard only a national defense. For all practical purposes, the guard is the same as the regular army, the officers and men being entitled to the same pay and allowances. Promotion of officers is governed by a special law, however.

There is hope among former guard officers that they will receive "fogies." These are 10 per cent increases in base pay for every five years of service, up to 40 per cent of the total base pay.

For example, a regular army captain receives $2,400 a year for his first five years. The second five years, he receives $2,640, and so on until he receives $3,360. There are Michigan officers entitled to the full 40 per cent, while most of them are entitled to at least one fogie. They did not get their fogies in the Mexican campaign. Enlisted men are entitled to extra pay for each enlistment also.

State Guard Complimented. Although they discharged every eighth man from the Michigan National Guard, the mustering officers who examined the troops paid the boys a fine compliment.

They insisted the state guard was a remarkably fine set of men physically, ranking in some cases with the regulars.

But, nevertheless, 17.6 per cent of the artillery battalion was kicked out of service and other units suffered in lesser degree. The Signal corps at Spartan made the best record, with 9.2 per cent of its men discharged. The average for the entire state was 13.8 per cent, a net total of 820 men.

The Thirty-first Infantry lost 293 men, the Thirty-second lost 270, the engineers 54, the medical department 35 and the cavalry squadron 45. This leaves 5,119 still in the service.

Nearly one-half of the men rejected, who appeared for re-examination, were accepted and will remain with their companies, but a number of the men are taking advantage of their rejection to avoid military service.

Since the men were ordered discharged, they cannot be compelled to undergo a re-examination and those who were in the service prior to June 5 have not registered and consequently are immune from call.

M. E. & W. R'y Wants to Quit. Another little Michigan railroad has started up the legal machinery of the state in its efforts to tear up its tracks and quit business.

The Manistee East & West Railway Co., operating 72 miles between Manistee and Marion, Osceola county, did not bother to ask the railroad commission for permission to discontinue service. In the usual mode of procedure such a petition would have been granted or denied by the commission following public hearings for the affected district.

The railroad, however, went into Judge Withy's court, in the nineteenth circuit, and obtained an order against the commission to show cause why the road should not be permitted to tear up its tracks.

The case will come up during the October term.

State Finances Good. Deposits amounting to $7,242,225, of which balances in various state funds aggregate $6,987,314, are shown in the July report of the state treasury department. The month's receipts in the war loan fund was $104,267; the expenditures, $107,009, leaving a balance of $35,226. There is a balance of $57,468 in the state insurance fund and a balance in the primary school fund of $2,543,137. There is an excess of $4,000,000 in the general fund balance.

Thirty-first Given $15,230. Four hundred Detroit citizens, desirous of assisting in providing for the comfort and welfare of Detroit's 13 companies in the Thirty-first regiment prior to the regiment's departure for its training camp and the trenches of France, presented the troops with $15,230. The money will be apportioned among the companies, and will be deposited in the company funds to be expended for little luxuries that the government does not provide.

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

MODES ADAPTED TO FULL FIGURES.

Designers of apparel for stout women are confronted with two problems; one, to make accepted styles becoming to full figures and the other to create styles exclusively for them. The first problem takes most of their time and thought, for all women like to dress in the mode, and the perverse modes continue to be designed for the slimmest of youth. But specialists are doing more than their bit toward making life happy for women whose figures have rounded out to the fullness of matronhood.

Just how successfully they can design becoming clothes is set forth in the costume of wool and satin shown in the picture. The underskirt and upper part of the sleeves are of satin, the overdrapery of serge, and it might be any of the more substantial woolen fabrics. Every line in this model

What Can We Do?

The American Red Cross is organizing 30 base hospitals and preparing the equipment, supplies and personnel for them. The magnitude of this undertaking can be glimpsed when we consider that each unit has 23 surgeons, two dentists, 50 graduate nurses with assistants and attendants making up 250 persons; for the 30 units, 7,500 persons, trained to care for the wounded.

Besides the permanent equipment of these hospitals with the most modern appliances for the care of the sick and for surgical cases, it is necessary to provide great numbers of articles that are quickly consumed by a hospital in service, such as bandages, splints, pads, drains, garments worn by the wounded and all sorts of surgical dressings. These are called consumable hospital supplies and these are the things that women are making and will continue to make while war lasts. Every woman can help in this work in some way. Not to do something is a confession of indifference or of cold-hearted lack of sympathy or of selfishness—a betrayal of cheap character that dishonors womanhood.

But indifference often springs from lack of knowledge and not from coldness of heart. Red Cross headquarters have been deluged with letters from women all over the country, offering to help in any way they can. For their benefit one of the important chapters of the Red Cross has issued a circular of information concerning the work of base hospitals and in it a vivid picture is painted of the experiences of the wounded soldier from the time he falls until he reaches a base hospital. Here he must be given every available assistance to recovery. Briefly, this circular tells us that, when a wounded soldier is too badly injured to drag himself to shelter, he lies on the field or in the trenches, until army litter bearers can reach him. They carry him back to a first-aid station, located in any available shelter—in a wood—behind a hill or in a trench, or dugout or tent. Here surgeons staunch the flow of blood, put splints on shattered bones and dress wounds, so that the soldier may be moved to a place back of the danger zone.

He is carried by the ambulance column to one of the small field hospitals set up to the rear of the fighting line. The field hospitals are usually housed in tents, with capacity for temporary care of 125 wounded, who lie on blankets or tarpaulins on the ground. Further back of the line there are evacuation hospitals each designed to receive the wounded from three field hospitals. But none of these are permanent resting places or equipped with appliances of a real hospital. The wounded man must be sent still further away from the danger zone, to some place where he will not have to be moved even if the army is forced to retreat. He is finally taken to a base hospital, with all the equipment of a regular military hospital. Here he has the best of care and may remain until the base hospital is filled, when he is again transferred to a permanent interior hospital to complete his recovery. It is the base hospital that gives him his chance for life.

All-Whites Hats in Demand. As the season advances all-white hats are more and more in demand. No matter how firmly one may determine not to wear white, because it is always more or less a matter of expense, yet as the days come, we all forget our resolutions, realizing that there is nothing more attractive for summer than pure white, says a fashion writer. All-white hats are many of them in toque shape. But the most attractive are those with brims be-

HE HIT BULL'S EYE THEN

Governor Cox of Ohio Explains Why His Marksmanship Improved Suddenly on Rifle Range.

James M. Cox, governor of Ohio, told this story when he visited Fort Benjamin Harrison, says the Indianapolis News:

"I was over at the fort this afternoon, and out at the rifle range Major Darrow asked me if I wouldn't like to try shooting. The men then were shooting from the 600-yard range, said 'yes,' so Major Darrow borrowed a rifle for me from one of the men and another for himself, and we lay down across the sand bags and began pepping away.

"After each shot that either of us made the man down in the pit waved the red flag that meant we had missed the target altogether.

"Finally after about a half dozen shots apiece, the major said: 'Young man, telephone down to that man in the pit that Major Darrow is shooting,' and so the young man did, and then the major shot again, and the pit man waved the emblem that signified the major had hit the bull's-eye.

"Then I said to myself, 'um hum,' and so I turned to the man on my right and I said, 'Young man, telephone down to the pit man that the governor of Ohio is shooting, and then the next time I hit the bull's-eye, too.'

Took Him Literally. A clergyman in a remote part of the Scottish Highlands was speaking at length to his congregation of the many things round us that are shrouded in mystery and of which we know little. As he warmed to this theme, he became eloquent, and frequently repeated the oft-quoted saying of Goethe: "More light! Oh, for light!"

His surprise may be imagined, says the Scottish American, when, after one of these utterances, the old beadle, who had been dozing since the commencement of the sermon, woke with a start, then got up, tiptoed softly into the vestry, seized two additional candles and, ascending the pulpit stairs, placed them beside the two already there, and in a loud whisper, heard all over the church, exclaimed: "Ye maun do, wi' these, for there's nae mair!"—Youth's Companion.
