A GREAT FAREWELL TO THE SOLDIER BOYS

Patriotic Demonstration Exceeded All Expectations in Size and Spirit, Tuesday; Crowd Estimated at 15,000.

Red Cross Unit, Selected Men, Civil War Veterans, Boy Scouts, School Children and Fire Department Features of Big Parade.

Day's Program and Impressive Events Will Long Be Remembered. Banquet Was Fine Affair. Work of Local Committees Was Perfect and Day Not Marred By Single Failure.

The Fourth District, comprising the townships of Plymouth, Northville, Redford, Livonia, Nankin, Canton, VanBuren, Romulus, Taylor, Huron, Sumpter, Brownstown and the special district of Eloise, bade farewell Tuesday, to 125 young men who are to be its representatives in the great national reserve army now forming.

The weather man was exceedingly kind in furnishing a perfect day for an event of this kind. It was neither too warm or too cool, but just right in every way. It was a great day for Plymouth and the young men, and never in the history of this loyal old town has such a multitude of people ever gathered together for any purpose. It was a most magnificent demonstration of patriotism and loyalty to the flag and the country which is now passing through its great trial and crisis.

Citizens from every township in the district participated in the great demonstration in honor of the selected men. They came for the most part in automobiles, while special cars on the D. U. R. also brought a large crowd. Northville, Wayne, Redford and Belleville brought big delegations and the school children. These towns also brought their bands.

In point of numbers there were various estimates from 10,000 to 15,000. The most conservative estimates placed the crowd at from 10,000 to 12,000. From the Main street crossing of the Pere Marquette to South Main street thousands crowded the line of march, standing three and four deep, and at the time of the speaking program the park and the wide pavement in front of the reviewing stand, which was roped off to vehicle traffic, was packed.

Tears and Cheers

There was much cheering as the procession passed, but through it all there was a solemnity that often made it harder to restrain tears than cheers. At times there was a deep silence and suppressed emotion that made the entire scene one that will live long in the memory of those who witnessed it. The future soldier boys made a fine appearance. They were for the most part strong, sturdy and resolute looking company of young men that will sustain the loyalty and honor of the Fourth District.

1800 in the Parade

The parade was started promptly at the appointed hour by chairman of the parade committee, J. H. Patterson, and his assistants. The marching units that participated numbered 1800. Nothing like this has ever been attempted in Plymouth before, but there was no difficulty whatever in the starting. The formation was as follows: Chairman F. D. Schrader, At mounted, five and drum corps, Northville; G. A. R. veterans; Belleville band; Spanish war veterans; recruits carrying large flag, headed by the local board of the Fourth District, Dr. R. E. Cooper, Plymouth; Bert High, Redford, Owen Raymo, Wayne. Mr. High was in command of this unit. The Plymouth Branch of the American Red Cross; Boy Scouts of Redford, Northville and Plymouth and the Pioneer Girls of Redford; Wayne band, school children and citizens of Nankin, Canton, Brownstown, Dearborn, Livonia, and Eureka townships; Northville band, school children and citizens of Northville; Farmington band, citizens and school children of Redford, Romulus, Taylor, VanBuren and Sumpter; Plymouth band, Plymouth fire department and Plymouth school children.

The Red Cross Unit

One of the most interesting features of the big parade was the splendid appearance of the Plymouth Branch of the American Red Cross, eighty-nine strong, led by Chairman C. H. Bennett and E. C. Hough, member of the executive committee. The ladies were all in full Red Cross uniforms and they certainly made a most inspiring appearance that added not a little to the success of the parade, and they were given a continuous ovation along the line of march. The ladies are entitled to much credit for their part in making the parade a success.

The Old Heroes of '61

There was one feature of Tuesday's procession that will never be forgotten by the thousands who lined the streets. It was the one hundred veterans of the Civil War, who with feeble steps, bent bodies, and beards and hair of silvery white, who sixty years ago had offered the supreme sacrifice to save the Union. Never again will so many of them be seen on our streets again. Their appearance, too, served a great and valued purpose, for they furnished to the young men of the selective army behind them an inspiration to duty in their country's service that nothing else could have done. It was a splendid effort on the part of the veterans and had the visitors who had come many miles to see the procession seen nothing else it was well worth their coming. And we want to say right here that the old boys were mighty proud to be in the line, too. Several of the old heroes were unable to march over the entire route of the parade, but joined in the procession at the city hall and marched to the reviewing stand, where all were seated to review the parade. The veterans were led by O. P. Showers, commander of the local G. A. R. Post.

Program

When the procession ended at the corner of Main street and Penniman avenue, the recruits, Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Pioneer Girls and school children formed in front of the speaker's stand on Main street. The bands were massed in front of the hotel. Chairman Schrader was in charge of the program and he promptly called the assemblage to order and called upon Rev. A. L. Bell to invoke the divine blessing. The chairman then introduced the president of the village, Harry C. Robinson, who in a most happy manner welcomed the visitors to our village, telling them it was theirs and to help themselves. The massed bands then played the "Star Spangled Banner," followed by "America," in which the school children and assemblage joined in singing. Three rousing cheers were then given for the Defenders of the Fourth District. Rev. Evans of Redford, chairman of the purchasing committee to secure the gifts for the recruits, was next introduced and gave a splendid talk to the boys before presenting the gifts. Rev. Evans explained the difficulty the committee had in securing a suitable gift, owing to its being almost impossible to purchase articles of this kind at the present time. The gift selected was an American silver case, containing a Gillett safety razor and a mirror. Although every effort was made to get the gifts here for the presentation

Tuesday, it was impossible to do so, and but one gift was distributed to one recruit from each township in the district. The rest of the gifts will be distributed when the boys leave, today (Friday) and October 3rd. Each township or village furnished the funds to purchase the gifts for the men, going from their township. Following the presentation was a song by a male quartet from Northville that was given hearty applause. This was followed by a patriotic address by Judge Clyde I. Webster of Detroit. Judge Webster's address was intensely patriotic and deeply affected every hearer. It was one of the best of its kind ever delivered in Plymouth, and we regret that we are not able to print it in full. After a selection by the five and drum corps, the band and a song by the quartet, the program was brought to a close.

Entertainment

Immediately following the program, the entertainment committee, with W. T. Pettingill as chairman, had arranged for a big free dance on the west end of the Penniman avenue pavement, which was thoroughly cleaned and prepared for the dancers, who in large numbers enjoyed this form of entertainment the balance of the afternoon and until late in the evening. With the flags and pennants and the colored electric lights, it made a very pretty appearance. John Williams' orchestra furnished splendid music for the occasion. At the village hall the great picture film, entitled, "The Slacker," was given free to all. Then there was the merry-go-round for the children, free rides for all, and it is not necessary to say that it was crowded every minute of the afternoon and evening.

Soldiers to Come Home Healthy.

America will attempt to bring back her soldiers as healthy and wholesome as when they left their homes.

Mr. Holt spoke from a wide experience and a familiarity with the subject gained by first hand associations with conditions in Europe.

Mr. Holt told briefly of the dangers of soldier life, declaring that one-third of the losses of the countries now at war were caused by social diseases contracted by the soldiers while in training camps.

"Wherever you go, don't forget that besides being soldiers you are also citizens in the great republic and so conduct yourself that you will come back to your mothers and sisters with as fine a manhood as when you entered the army."

While this work is now going on, the camp authorities complain that at the present rate of building the work cannot be finished before spring.

SEVEN BILLION WAR BILL PASSES HOUSE

IS LARGEST SUPPLY MEASURE IN COUNTRY'S HISTORY—NOW IN SENATE.

$4,830,000,000 Appropriated Directly and $2,314,000,000 Additional Contracts Authorized.

Washington—The $7,000,000,000 war deficiency bill, carrying huge appropriations for the army, fortifications and shipping board, passed the house Tuesday by a unanimous vote.

The bill, the largest supply measure in the country's history, immediately went to the senate, where prompt action is expected.

It directly appropriates $4,830,000,000 and authorizes contracts for $2,314,000,000 additional. The big items include:

Shipping board, $635,000,000 cash as part of the board's construction program limited to an aggregate of $1,749,000,000; fortifications $1,495,000,000 appropriated and contracts authorized for $975,000,000 more; naval emergency fund $100,000,000; war department emergency fund $100,000,000; construction of additional torpedo boat destroyers $225,000,000 to start a $350,000,000 program.

HELEN'S GUESTS MAKE NO EFFORT TO CONCEAL THEIR DOMESTIC INFELICITIES

"I didn't say that at all, William," Mrs. Barton corrected her husband with her usual acidity. "You never get anything right."

"You don't remember what you said. The way you flew out at that poor usher—he was scared stiff."

"Well, I didn't propose to sit behind that post, when we'd bought seats on the center aisle."

"Yes, that is annoying," proppitiated Helen.

"Annoying? I couldn't see a thing! And William would have sat there. He'll take anything rather than make a fuss. If there's any objecting—I always have to do it."

"Well, you seem to enjoy it, my dear. You've a natural aptitude that way."

"There! That's a sample of the pleasant things he says to me."

"Dear, perhaps Mr. Barton will have some more lamb," broke in Helen, tactfully.

"Why didn't you holler?" Warren took up the carving knife. "You've got to stug out for what you want here. How's this? Too rare?"

"No, just right." Then to his wife: "That's the way to cook lamb. We always have it done to death."

"I think Hilda's an exceptionally good cook," combatively. "You never said you wanted lamb rare."

"Want all meat rare—except pork. But I never get anything at home the way I want it."

"Mrs. Barton, is that window too much on you?" interrupted Helen.

"Oh, no, I like it. You'd better ask William; he's the fragile flower of our family."

"Fragile flower! That's good," grinned Warren. "I'm afraid I come under that class myself, but Helen's never happy unless she has a ten-knot breeze blowing on the back of her neck."

"Then she can sympathize with me. William is simply impossible! He wants to sleep with all the windows down!"

"That's the way you tell it. As a matter of fact, when the thermometer falls below zero—they're all up. Twice last winter I woke to find snow an inch deep on the bed."

"Well, you know what the doctor said. When we build, we're going to have a big sleeping porch."

"Fine! If you sleep out there—maybe I'll have some peace."

"Oh, if that's what you mean—you don't have to wait until we build a sleeping porch."

There was an uncomfortable silence as Mrs. Barton, with heightened color, viciously shredded a piece of celery, while her husband drained his wine-glass.

Helen had heard that the Bartons were always quarreling, but it seemed incredible that they should air their hostilities so openly.

All through the evening they had kept up a running fire of sarcastic repartee. They agreed on nothing, on every subject they had a clashing difference of opinion. Whatever turn the conversation took, they managed to give each other some caustic thrust.

It was a relief when the dinner was over and Helen and Mrs. Barton returned to the library, while the men lingered over their cigars.

"William is so provoking!" drawing the chiffon scarf about her bare shoulders. "He always says something to upset me. Does Mr. Curtis get on your nerves like that?"

"I think we all have disputes at times," Helen conceded.

"At times? It's always like this. He loves to irritate me. He says things deliberately—things that he knows will drive me wild!"

"Perhaps if you didn't show it quite so much—"

"How can I help showing it? Wasn't that a hateful, uncalculated thing he said about the roast?"

"Oh, he just wanted to seem complimentary about the dinner," murmured Helen apologetically.

"No, it wasn't that. Whenever we dine out he delights in depreciating my housekeeping. Does Mr. Curtis say those things? Is he always making insinuations about the way you run the house?"

"I suppose all men are irritating—in different ways."

"Well, William can be irritating in more ways than anyone I ever knew."

"Is Mrs. Barton extolling my virtues?" asked Mr. Barton, as Warren and he now joined them. "That's her favorite theme nowadays."

But his wife, ignoring this pleasantry, adjusted the flowers in her corsage with elaborate care.

"Try one of these," Warren got out a fresh box of cigars.

"William, you're not going to smoke any more! You know you shouldn't have more than one cigar after dinner. That's what makes you so nervous and irritable. Yet you persist—"

"Perhaps it isn't altogether the cigars, my dear," snapping open his electric lighter. "There's other things that get on a man's nerves."

"There, you see?" turning despairingly to Helen. "Those are some of the nice, pleasing remarks he makes to me."

"Mrs. Curtis, do you prescribe for your husband the number of cigars he may smoke?"

"Not much she doesn't!" laughed Warren.

"Then you think a wife shouldn't be Interested in her husband's health?" challenged Mrs. Barton.

"Here's a member of our family you haven't seen," exclaimed Helen gayly, heralding Pussy Purr-Mew's entrance as a welcome interruption.

"Oh, a shaded silver!" enthused Mrs. Barton, as Pussy Purr-Mew having impartially surveyed the group, stretched her graceful length on a Persian rug, inviting admiration.

"Yes, that's some cat," admitted Mr. Barton. "We had a dog last fall, but Barton wouldn't stand for it."

"That vicious little beast! I should hope not! It snapped at Bubble every time he came."

"No wonder, the way that brat yanked it around."

"William, it's hardly courteous to call my sister's child a brat. I only wish your brother's children were half as well behaved."

"Well, they don't sail boats in the bathtub and let it run over and spill all the ceilings. That cunning little prank cost me just $50."

"It wasn't any worse than your angel nephew emptying a box of talcum in the piano."

Here the maid brought in the coffee and Helen rose to clear a space on the library table for the tray.

"And how do you take yours, Mr. Barton?" having served his wife.

"Now you know, William, if you drink coffee you'll be awake all night."

"One lump, Mrs. Curtis, and no cream," disregardingly.

"Barton, how did you ever come out with that L. & A. stock?" asked Warren abruptly. "Had quite a block of that, didn't you?"

"Sold it last spring—lucky to get out even. Dropped ten points since then. I'm carrying some Northwest-ern preferred, but I'm thinking of letting that go."

The men safely launched on the engrossing subject of stocks, Helen entertained Mrs. Barton by telling her of a little waist and lingerie shop that was selling out.

Every woman is interested in lingerie, and when Helen produced her dainty purchase, Mrs. Barton, in exclaiming over their cheapness, forgot to direct snappish remarks at her husband.

It was almost eleven when the phone rang and their car was announced.

"I hope you can dine with us very soon," invited Mrs. Barton, as they were leaving. "I'm afraid my cook is contemplating matrimony," with a laugh, "and I'd like to have you before she leaves."

"Yes, you'd better take your chances with the one we've got now," advised Mr. Barton. "Heaven knows how the next one'll be."

They were still dissenting over the possible inefficiencies of the new cook when they entered the elevator.

"Congenial couple!" shrugged Warren as he closed the door.

"Oh, how could they? What awfully bad taste! Even if they quarrel at home, you'd think they'd try to be courteous to each other in company."

"Yes, we'll throw our beer bottles when we're alone. I'd just as soon not have an audience."

"Do you think it's mostly her fault?" Helen mused, with feminine analysis, as she followed him into the bedroom.

"Well, he's pretty much of a fool!" peeling off his coat. "If she were my wife, I'd have knocked out a few of her front teeth long ago."

"But, dear, he's partly to blame," reflectively.

"Of course he is! You've got to handle that woman without gloves. If he laid down the law good and hard, instead of eternally hickering, they'd both be a darned sight happier."

"I wonder if they'll be like that when we dine there."

"We'll not dine there," emphatically, his chin upheld as he unbuttoned his collar. "One dose of that's enough for me."

"Dear, I'd like to go," admitted Helen. "In a way it's a relief to see that other people get along even worse than—"

"Eh? What's that?" as she paused confused. "See here, when it comes to a show-down, Mrs. Barton hasn't got such a devil of a lot on you. You'd have been a close second if I hadn't always held you with a good stiff rein!"

"Artificial Limbs Not New.

Artificial limbs with movable joints were made by the famous Ambrose Pare—1517 to 1590—the celebrated French surgeon known as "The Father of French Surgery." He was surgeon to Henry the Second—1552—and also to Francis the Second, Charles the Ninth and Henry the Third. Later on Father Sebastian, a Carmelite monk, was renowned for the manufacture of movable arms and hands. About the middle of the seventeenth century Failelli, a Florentine surgeon, mentions artificial eyes of gold, silver and crystal painted in different colors; he also describes gold and silver ears which were either tied to the head with strings or else sewn on the skin of the scalp by the aid of gold and silver wire. Silver noses, too, are spoken of as having been in use for a long time.

Nobody Knows.

Nobody can advise you how to rear your children, because the fact of the matter is that nobody really knows how it ought to be done. Bringing up your child in the way it should go is a pretty big job.

Crucial Comment.

Stout Party—They say a lot of fat is disappearing from the country.

Kind Friend—Why, I didn't notice that you had been reducing any.

The Smart Set in Millinery

Two-piece or three-piece matched sets in millinery are among the smartest things shown in the new displays for fall. The two-piece set is just right and designers have made it possible to select a hat and bag—a hat and collar—or a hat and cape or scarf, made to match; or, if they do not match in materials, some touch in trimming makes them kin. A silk hat trimmed with chinchilla, for instance, is bound for life to a high chinchilla collar by a veil that falls from the hat and is sewed to the upper edge of the collar.

Leading the vanguard of matched sets came the hat and bag to match and this fancy is altogether so pleasing that hat and bag sets are quite likely to be found also in the rear of the fashion parade along about Christmas time. If you contemplate something unusual in Christmas gifts that hat and bag set pictured here ought to prove interesting.

One of the smartest of smart sets is of brilliant green satin brocaded with gold and finished with green chenille tassels in the bag. The hat, to be worn with it, has a crown of black velvet and a narrow rolling brim of the green and gold brocade. At the back a flat tassel made of green chenille falls from the crown, and small, flat flowers, made of chenille are set about the crown.

A successful costume depends more upon handsome accessories like these, than many of us realize. A plain, dark gown of satin in black or other color, is lifted into brilliancy by tricks of elegance, in hat and bag or hat and scarf, and is equal to formal wear by these means.

Small Breaks in Lace.

Where there are only a few threads broken in Irish or Swiss lace they can easily be repaired with a needle and thread the same size as that used in the manufacture of the lace. Place a tiny knot at the end of the thread on the needle and draw this through the place where the broken thread joins the body of the lace. Having done this, draw a succession of loop knots over the floating thread very tightly close to the base. Now follow with the new thread the course that the old thread has taken, and do the same with the other loose end, knotting it securely close to the body lace. Cut away the loose ends and the break is no longer perceptible.

A call has come from France, to the Red Cross, asking for 150,000 woolen garments for the men at the front. These include socks, mitts, mufflers, sweaters, and they must be made by women. Everybody that is anybody is knitting, and everywhere mltidy goes her knitting—in a knitting bag of sorts—is sure to go, too—like Mary's lamb. People who never touched a knitting needle before have mastered the art of knitting socks and find the work fascinating.

When we contemplate the brief history of a pair of socks we realize that the task of furnishing them will never be through with until the war ends. Supplies of sock must be sent in relay, one after the other, because, sturly as the knitted woolen ones are, they will wear out.

Mufflers are easier for the beginner, and the sort of sweaters required are not very difficult. They are sleeveless and are really chest and back protectors. All the knitted garments must be made according to standards, which will be furnished by the Red Cross to those who apply for them.

A luxury that can be made by women who do not knit—if there are any—will interest them. Feet that get sore in the trenches can be rested and helped to heal by felt slippers, and these can be made by women at home. As we care for the comfort of our men when they are at home working for us, so we must care for their comfort when they are away—working and fighting for us and for those that come after us. No woman can be indifferent now and keep the respect of her associates. Whoever she is she deserves the poor opinion of her character, that her indifference will inspire in her associates.

A new order of things, socially may grow out of the banding together of women for war work. It will be an impossible and hopeless personality that is not benefited and uplifted by helping in the hour of need.

Separate Waistcoats Now.

London and Paris have taken another step toward the masculine in fashions and makers are producing separate waistcoats, to be removed at will. They are made of the softest materials, with a striking pattern and often they are knitted, and are cut roomy. Pockets at the sides with a watch fob hanging out of one of them are customary.

Under these waistcoats, of which plain shirtwaists are being worn, the jabot or fichu and the transparent sleeves are visible. It is customary with women wearing such waistcoats to remove the suit coat.

Use for Out-of-Date Blouses.

Blouses, have a disconcerting way of looking out of date after any length of time. If there is a little girl in the family cut the waist down to make a long-waisted dress, using plain material for the tiny skirt.

Buttons Spots to Be Worn.

Buttoned spots promise to be as popular as ever for fall. The new spots fit beautifully and come in soft shades of gray and tan and in the new olive drab which is fashionable because it is the "soldier color."

A conspicuous pattern should be chosen, because it is not intended to be showy, only a finishing touch. Conventional designs are best. The stitches of the wool are used as a guide in the cross stitching.

According to the Canadian trade commission at Birmingham, England, the present scarcity in England of both sugar and drup offers a favorable opportunity to introduce maple syrup, which is not well known in that district.

Locke & Co

By Alice E. Ives

It was a warm night at Asbury Park. Mrs. Morris seemed to find the piazza of the hotel much more comfortable than the crowded ballroom. She was also quite well aware that she made a more striking picture with the opalescent crystals of her stunning evening gown shimmering in the moonlight than she would in the glare and crowd within. Then too the powder did not melt off one's nose out there, and to be purple and perspiring after one's twenty-nine is to be avoided even when one is good-looking, and is not taken for more than twenty-six.

Dulcie Morris was not having as good a time as she had expected. To have been three days at the seashore without even so much as the beginning of a flirtation was certainly some waste of time and material in the way of handsome frocks. Mrs. Morris was thinking over these things with some disappointment, when a lady she had met at the hotel came toward her with a strange man. He was prepossessing, well dressed, and in the early thirties. Mrs. Morris asked Mrs. Morris if she might present the gentleman, and introduced him as Mr. Locke from New York.

"I do hope Mrs. Morris, you will take pity on Mr. Locke. He is quite strange here, knows no one, and doesn't care to meet the girls in there, because he says he is not a dancing man." And Mrs. Morris waved a good night, and sought the dancers.

"I think you will be taking pity on me," said Dulcie Morris to the man. And smiling, she gracefully waved him to a chair which he lost no time in taking. He murmured something about her being very good, and how fortunate he was, which Dulcie interrupted by saying she could not see the pleasure in being grilled in that crowd on such a warm night trying to dance, even if take pity on Mr. Locke. He is quite she had to sit alone outside. Of course Mr. Locke agreed with her, and they soon found themselves getting on finely toward a better acquaintance.

"How Long Do You Think of Staying?"

"I was just wondering why I chose to come here alone when all my friends were going to Atlantic City, Newport, or the mountains; and I was just making up my mind to leave here and join some of them," said Dulcie with a rather bored look.

"Oh please don't make up your mind to go just yet," pleaded Locke in an appealing tone which penetrated the cold exterior of Dulcie. She caught herself in the beginning of a smile, and looked more bored than ever.

"Oh I don't know," she said. "A pretty villa with a delightful house party would be rather more exciting than this."

"No doubt," he answered. "But I suppose I am selfish, like most men, and I had begun to hope you might oblige Mrs. Mears, and take pity on me."

"I'm not sure you need it," she laughed. "How long do you think of staying?"

"Perhaps not more than two weeks," he answered. "I ought not to stay away from my business longer than that. Of course I might leave it in the hands of others, but I believe in keeping a strict watch on things and you can't always trust subordinates."

when your eye is not on them. Besides I have a big deal pending."

Before the evening was over Locke knew that the fascinating Mrs. Morris had been a widow three years, and was pretty well fixed as to a comfortable income; and Dulcie had been informed that Locke was a bachelor, entirely unattached, and quite capable of supporting a wife in comfort, if not luxury. She inferred from some things he let drop it might turn out to be the latter.

During the next few days the two were seen so much together that Mrs. Mears saw fit to chaff Dulcie.

"It looks to me like a conquest, sure enough," she laughed. "Well he seems a nice chap, and I hear he has oodles of money. Go in and win, and don't forget how I helped."

Dulcie assured her it was "nothing but friendship," but could not help looking conscious while she was saying it.

Mrs. Mears next assailed Locke on the subject of his ardent attentions to the dashing widow. Locke did not deny that he was "wonderfully attracted" to the lady. She was such "jolly good company, you know."

"And furthermore," added Mrs. Mears, "she must be pretty well fixed to dress and live as she does. She has just given up a swell apartment in Riverside Drive, so that she can go to Palm Beach for the winter."

"Well," said Locke seriously, "money or no money, she's too good for any man, myself included."

From which it might have been inferred that Locke was in about as deep as Providence permits.

It was moonlight, they were sitting on the beach together, from a distant pavilion floated the softened strains of the band playing, "Some Day," and the combination was having its effect on both. Dulcie looked receptive, and Locke whispered: "Why wait for 'some day'?"

Dulcie looked her answer. Then he said: "Let us not care for the fuss and feathers, we can be married right here quietly, and go off where we please."

Dulcie agreed to this, and they were married the next day. Then the question arose as to where they should go. The bride was for the White Mountains, where they would not run into the people she knew. Locke drew up his brow in perplexity, and finally had to confess that he was having some bother in transferring a bank account, and could she let him have a little money just for the present emergency. It was the bride's turn to look embarrassed. She was in much the same boat. They both laughed it off, and concluded to go to another hotel in the same place for the present, no one being in the secret of the marriage but Mrs. Mears.

While the newly married couple laughed, both were quietly thinking hard.

After two weeks at the lower priced hotel, where they told Mrs. Mears they had gone for quiet and seclusion, and Locke had paid their board promptly, Dulcie one morning asked him to walk with her to a place out of the reach of the crowd. They sat down, and she sat very still looking at him. Beginning to be uneasy he said: "What is the matter? Why are you looking at me this way?"

"Because," she answered, "I've been putting off something—because I like you—but it's got to be said. I played a miserable fake game. I'm not rich. I'm a cloak model at twenty-five a week. I had a little legacy of six hundred dollars last to me a few months ago. They have given me three hundred of it, and I determined to have a good time for a few weeks—that's all."

He looked at her in a kind of stony surprise, and said nothing.

"Now," she went on, "if you despise me more than you love me, we can part right here. It will not be hard to get a divorce."

"After I have told you something, and you despise me more than you love me, we will talk about the divorce. I came down here with a few hundred dollars to try to buy out that little souvenir booth, but they want two hundred more than I can give. In desperation I turned to you, hoping to better my prospects in that way. If you are in the mood I am a great deal deeper in the mire. I am more to blame. You don't know what it costs me to say this—for I love you."

Dulcie looked at his tragic face. Yes he meant it. Suddenly she burst into a peal of laughter. "Look here!" she cried. "I'll put in that extra two hundred, and we'll go into the business together."

The deal was concluded next day.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezeone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding skin.

A small bottle of freezeone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezeone for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

A Sticky Story.

Mr. Barry Pain, the famous humorist, is as clever at telling a good story as he is at writing one. Some time ago he was present at a gathering of artists, and in the course of the evening he rose to make a speech. "Gentlemen," he said, "being present at a gathering in which art is so largely represented, I feel it incumbent upon me to say a few words concerning the subject of painting. Speaking personally, my only efforts in that direction were on an occasion when I enameled our bath. My friends said to me, 'My dear fellow, it's no good your going in for painting unless you're prepared to stick to your work.' Well," concluded Mr. Pain, amidst the laughter of his audience, "I did."—London Tit-Bits.

Full Speed Ahead.

They had lost their way in their new and expensive car.

"There's a sign, dear. Are we on the right road?"

With his flashlight he read, "To the Poorhouse."

"Yes," he answered. "We're on the right road and we didn't know it."—Christian Register.

SAYS ALL CHILDREN DO IT

University President Startles Hearers by Declaring Youths Like to "Take" Things.

Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark university, speaking on "Religion and Education," the other day, tossed off a number of opinions that rather startled some of his hearers. "Say, 'damn' once in a while if the occasion demands," Doctor Hall advised, and when the gasping had subsided he gave it as his belief that slapping children was a good practice if the slappings were administered vigorously and "not more in sorrow than in anger."

"Be very kind about stealing," said the wise doctor, "for all children do it."

That appears to be a pretty broad assertion, says the Dayton News. Perhaps the doctor is right, but let us hope that he has overstated the case. In justice to him it must be added that he qualified his assertion concerning the thievish propensities of children by saying:

"Possibly there is not a person here, a man at least, who has not stolen apples, turnips or watermelons. If they had been caught in the city they would have been branded as criminals."

We can understand the doctor's conclusions concerning apples and watermelons, but why should any boy want to steal turnips? As well accuse all boys of preferring work to play. No, we refuse to believe that Doctor Hall was not too general in his accusation.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter: wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

SOLOITUDE HAS ITS VALUE.

Proofs of growth due to solitude are endless. Milton's greatest work was done when blindness, old age and the death of the Puritan government forced him into complete seclusion. Beethoven did his best work in the solitude of deafness. Bacon would never have been the great leader of scientific thought had not his trial and disgrace forced him from the company of a grand retinue and stupid court to the solitude of his own brain.

Willing Work Always Prized.

That man will be a joy to his "boss" who will give willing obedience under any and all circumstances. Whatever work falls to his lot will be performed in the best possible manner, even when it is not the kind he chose. An army of such workers would win anywhere against much larger numbers. The pity of it is, that compared with the host that works under protest, the faithful are pitifully few.—Exchange.

OVERTURE INSPIRED BY FLY

Humble Insect Said to Have Aided Mendelssohn in Composition of Immortal Melody.

It appears that no source is so humble as the true—and trained—musician cannot gather inspiration from it. It is told of Mendelssohn that his beautiful "Midsummer Night's Dream" music is indebted for at least one of its effects to the buzzing of a fly.

One summer day in the year 1826 Mendelssohn lay on the grass in the Schopenhauer gardens in Berlin, planning the overture. A friend was with him, and as they lay there a fly buzzed busily about their heads.

Mendelssohn said "Hush!" and listened intently for a time. Afterward, when the overture was finished, the composer-polished to the modulation of the celler from B minor to F sharp minor in the middle section and said "There, that's the Schopenhauer fly."

That overture has become one of the world's musical classics and Men-

Local News

W. B. Lombard and family have moved into their new house on West Ann Arbor street.
 George Vealey and daughter of Wayne, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Vealey, Tuesday.

Mrs. William Gayde has gone to Toledo for a two weeks' visit with her sister.
 John Sprague and brother-in-law, Fred Sloto, of Detroit, visited the former's mother, Mrs. L. Vickery, Wednesday.
 Mrs. Ida Stoneburner and son, Harvey, and Mrs. G. N. Dean are visiting at Albany, N. Y., and other eastern places.
 Miss Rose Hillmer, who has been assistant dietitian at the Warren City hospital at Warren, Ohio, for the past few months, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hillmer.

Farewell to Soldier Boys

The Banquet
 The banquet for the boys and their lady guests, G. A. R. and bands at 5:30 o'clock was in charge of C. H. Bennett, chairman of the banquet committee, and his assistants. The decorations and serving of the supper were in charge of the ladies of the local Red Cross and represented one of the best efforts ever made by the ladies of Plymouth. It was simply splendid. The banquet was held in the dining rooms of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches. The decorations were beautiful and suggestive of the occasion, and the well served things on the menu could not have been surpassed. The favors were in the shape of novelties that created much amusement when they were opened. The quartet from Northville rendered several selections at each church during the banquet hour that were greatly appreciated. Rev. Karl P. Miller gave a short talk to the boys at the Presbyterian church and Rev. Frank M. Field at the Methodist church. Both talks were received with hearty applause.

Patriotic Day Notes
 Patriotism was everywhere. We've got to hand it to the ladies of the Red Cross.

Plymouth has done herself proud with the verdict of our visitors. All of the bands were liberal with their music.

Northville came a thousand strong and with two bands.
 Marshal Springer and his deputies handled the crowd in fine shape. Not an arrest was made and there were no accidents to mar the pleasure of the day.

How the kiddies did enjoy the merry-go-round. Free rides. Why, they could hardly believe it.

Every village and township helped us make the day the great success it was. We thank you most heartily.

The recruits under the command of Bert High of the local board, made a good showing for their first formation.

One old civil war veteran was heard to say: "I would not have missed that parade for anything and especially the ladies of the Red Cross. That was the finest thing I ever saw."

The street decorations, which were in charge of Harry J. Green, chairman of the decorating committee and his assistants are deserving of special mention.

Chairman F. D. Schrader led the big parade in fine style. He was mounted upon as beautiful a horse as has been seen on our streets for some time, and the spirited animal drew considerable attraction along the line of march.

The exhibit made by the Plymouth Branch of the Red Cross in the vacant store room in the Coleman block was visited by many people during the day and evening. The exhibit consisted of the various articles made by the Red Cross and was in charge of Miss Ada Safford.

Each one of the soldier boys wore a badge with the following inscription upon it: "U. S. Defenders of the Fourth District, at Plymouth, September 18, 1918." Each parent of the boys who was present wore a badge bearing this inscription: "My Boy's in Line."

The local committee in charge of Tuesday's demonstration are entitled to particular praise and credit. Their work was perfectly done, and this includes the decorations, the raising of the finances, the work of preparing the banquet, the entertainments, publicity and everything pertaining to the big successful day. The town never before was so lavishly and beautifully bedecked in the national color and emblems. The spirit of loyalty and patriotism was everywhere manifest, and the committees found a ready and willing response to all efforts.

Several from here attended the Milford fair, this week.

Mrs. R. G. Terry is visiting her daughters in Detroit, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burch of Detroit, were Plymouth visitors, last Tuesday.

Mrs. E. P. Lombard was a weekend guest of friends in Northville and vicinity.

Mrs. Rose Bernstein of Omaha, Nebraska, was the guest of Mrs. Albert Gayde, last week.

Mrs. Charles Curtis and brother, Henry Atchinson, were guests of Salem friends, Saturday.

Miss Vera Hengsterfer of Ann Arbor, is spending a few weeks with her mother, Mrs. Carl Heide.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Olaver and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Nugent and daughter, Harriet, of Rushton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Samsen, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Len Vickery and daughter, Esther, were guests of the former's nephew, George Vickery, and other relatives in Detroit, over Sunday.

Richard Vealey and family have moved from H. Willis' house on Maple avenue, and are staying for the present with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Vealey.

William Rosenberg has purchased a lot at the corner of Pearl street and Hobcock avenue, of the late Franklin of Detroit. R. R. Parrott negotiated the deal.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. C. Wahr, the Misses Martha Merkel and C. Herbert, Dr. Chase and A. Heiz of Ann Arbor, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Heide, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Stratfield, W. M. Cleaver, William and Ernest Harrington of Detroit, Mrs. Hays of Chicago Junction, Ohio, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Parrott, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Beyer and daughter, Elizabeth, Miss Amelia Gayde and William Hillmer, with a party of friends from Detroit and Toledo, motored to Monroe, Sunday, where they were guests of Rev. and Mrs. G. D. Ehnis. Mr. Ehnis was a former pastor of the Lutheran church here.

Regular meeting of the O. E. S. next Tuesday evening, September 25th. All members are urged to be present as there is important business. The degrees of the order will be conferred upon candidates at this meeting. The officers are requested to meet in the hall Monday evening at 7 o'clock for practice.

"Heart Tag Day," Saturday

A heart tag day will be conducted in Plymouth, Saturday, September 22, for the benefit of crippled children in care of the Michigan Hospital School. The Michigan Hospital School is a consolidation of the Van Leuven Brothers' School and the Michigan Child Welfare League. It is the work of the school to secure for the crippled children and physically defective children such treatment and surgical science as is required and other needed help. Many children of this county have received aid through the services of this school.

A local committee of ladies, assisted by Mrs. Nina Lewis, district superintendent of the school will have charge of the Heart Day. The Plymouth United Savings bank will receive the collections and through them sent directly to the school. The headquarters of the Heart Day will be the vacant store in the Coleman block. The committee hopes that many of the young ladies will volunteer to sell "heart tags" on Saturday. The surgical directors of the school include the leading orthopedic surgeons and physicians of Detroit and other cities, who command high fees, but they give their skill and time gratis to the children of the poor whose parents are unable to pay, with the same cheerfulness and fidelity as to the children of the well-to-do. The work is non-sectarian and is supported by the free-will gifts of the people entirely. The larger and more numerous the gifts the greater number of children can be benefited. Your gift will be most highly appreciated.

Plymouth Pastor Returned

The M. E. conference held at Flint, has returned Rev. F. M. Field to the pastorate of the local M. E. church for another year. This is very gratifying to the members and congregation indeed. During the year that Rev. Field has been here the church has prospered and grown. The handsome new church home which they are now occupying was built, and every department of the church work is in a flourishing condition. Rev. Field is a splendid organizer and his work is bringing results. The citizens of Plymouth are glad that Rev. Field and his estimable family are to be residents among us for another year at least.

THE FIRST PERFORMANCE OF "THE GIRL UPSTAIRS" IS GIVEN WITH HUGE SUCCESS FOR ROSE — JIMMY WALLACE, DRAMATIC CRITIC, MAKES A DISCOVERY

Synopsis.—Rose Stanton, of moderate circumstances, marries wealthy Rodney Aldrich, on short acquaintance, and for more than a year lives in idleness and luxury in Chicago. The life falls on her, she longs to do something useful, but decides that motherhood will be a big enough job. She has twins, however, and they are put in the care of a professional nurse. Rose again becomes intensely dissatisfied with idleness, so over the protest of her dotting husband she disappears into the business world to make good on her own initiative, gets a job in the chorus of a musical comedy in rehearsal and lives in a cheap rooming house. Her taste and intelligence soon get her a place as assistant to the producer. Her fashionable friends think she has gone to California.

CHAPTER XIX.

Success—And a Recognition. There is a kaleidoscopic character about the events of the ten days or so preceding the opening performance of most musical comedies which would make a sober chronicler of them seem fantastically incredible. This law of nature made no exception in the case of "The Girl Upstairs." There were rehearsals which ran so smoothly and swiftly that they had done so performances; there were others so abominably bad that the bare idea of presenting the mess resulting from six weeks' toil, before the people who had paid money to see it, was a nightmare.

Of all the persons directly, or even remotely, affected by this nerve-shattering confusion, Rose was perhaps the least perturbed. The only thing that really mattered to her was the successful execution of those twelve costumes. "The phantasmagoria at North End hall was a regrettable, but necessary, interruption of her more important activities.

She wakened automatically at half-past seven and was down-town by half-past eight, to do whatever shopping the work of the previous day revealed the need of.

At nine-thirty—an unheard-of hour in the theater—the watchman at the Globe let her in at the stage door, and Rose had half an hour, before the arrival of the wardrobe mistress and her assistant, for looking over the work done since she had left for rehearsal the day before.

She liked this quiet, cavernous old barn of a place down under the Globe stage, liked it when she had it to herself before the two sewing women came and later, when, with a couple of sheets spread out on the floor, she cut and basted according to her cambric patterns, keeping ahead of the rhythmic needles of the other two. After her own little room, the mere spaciousness of it seemed almost noble.

In keeping with the good luck which had attended everything that happened in connection with this first venture of hers, she was able to tell Galbraith that both sets of costumes were finished and ready to try on on the very day he announced that the next rehearsal would be held at ten tomorrow at the Globe.

She persuaded the girls to wait until all six were dressed in the afternoon frocks and until she herself had had a chance to give each of them a final inspection and to make a few last touches and readjustments. Then they all trooped out on the stage and stood in a row, turned about, walked here and there, in obedience to Galbraith's instructions shouted from the back of the theater.

It was dark out there and disconcertingly silent. The glow of two cigars indicated the presence of Goldsmith and Block in the middle of a little knot of other spectators.

The only response Rose got—the only index to the effect her labors had produced—was the tone of Galbraith's voice. "All right," he shouted. "Go and put on the others."

There was another silence after they had filed out on the stage again, and this time in the evening gowns—a hollow, heart-constricting silence, almost literally sickening. But it lasted only a moment. Then: "Will you come down here, Miss Dane?" called Galbraith.

There was a slight, momentary, but perfectly palpable shock accompanying these words—a shock felt by everybody within the sound of his voice. Because the director had not said, "Fame, come down here," he had said, "Will you come down here, Miss Dane?" And the thing amounted, so rigid is the etiquette of musical comedy, to an accolade. The people on the stage and by the wings didn't know what she had done, nor in what character she was about to appear, but they did know she was, from now on, something besides a chorus girl.

Rose obediently crossed the runway and walked up the aisle to where Galbraith stood, with Goldsmith and Block, waiting for her. She was feeling a little numb and empty.

Galbraith, as she came, held out a hand to her. "I congratulate you, Miss Dane," he said. "They're admirable. With all the money in the world, I wouldn't ask for anything handsomer."

The rest of it didn't matter to Rose—the more guarded but nevertheless cordial approval of the two owners, who had yet to make sure on the figures; and the details of settlement which left her more than a hundred dollars profit, even after she had deducted the hundred she owed Rodney. The point—the point—settled by Galbraith's praise—was that she had succeeded.

drove another bargain, principally to their own advantage. "You've certainly got a good eye for costumes, Miss Dane," Goldsmith said, "and here's a proposition we'd like to make. A lot of these other things we've got for the regular chorus don't look as good as they might. You'll be able to see changes to make in them that'll improve them maybe fifty per cent. Well, you take it on, and we'll begin paying you your regular salary now; you understand, twenty-five dollars a week, beginning today."

Rose accepted the proposition with a warm flush of gratitude. But, from the moment her little salary began, she found herself retained, body and soul, exactly as Galbraith himself was. They'd bought all her ideas, all her energy, all her time, except a few scant hours for sleep and a few snatched minutes for meals.

She gave her employers, up to the time when the piece opened at the Globe, at a conservative calculation, about five times their money's worth. Even if she hadn't been in the company, she'd have found something like two days' work in every twenty-four hours, just in the wardrobe room. There wasn't a single costume outside Rose's own twelve that didn't have to be remodeled more or less.

On top of all that, the really terrible grind of rehearsals began; property rehearsals, curiously disconcerting at first; scenery rehearsals that caused the stage to seem small and cluttered up, and, last and ghastliest, a dress rehearsal, which began at seven o'clock one night and lasted till four the next morning.

If you had seen them that morning, utterly fagged out, unsustained by a single gleam of hope, you'd have said it was impossible that they should give any sort of performance that night—let alone a good one. But by eight o'clock, when the overture was called, you wouldn't have known them for the same people. There was the feeling, on the edge of this first performance, that they were now on their own.

The appearance, back on the stage, of John Galbraith in evening dress, just as the call of the first act brought them trooping from their dressing rooms, intensified this sensation. He was going to be, tonight, simply one of the audience.

Rose herself was completely dominated by the new spirit. Her nerves—slack, frayed, numb an hour ago—had sprung miraculously into tune. She not only didn't feel tired, it seemed she never could feel tired again.

It wasn't until along in the third act that the audience became, for her, anything but a colloid mass—something that you squeezed and thumped and worked as you did clay, to get it into a properly plastic condition of receptivity, so that the jokes, the songs, the dances, even the spindling little shafts of romance that you shot out into it, could be felt to dig in and take hold.

But along in the third act, as she came down to the footlights with the rest of the sextette in their "All Alone" number, one face detached itself suddenly from the pasty gray surface of those that spread over the auditorium; became human—individual—and intensely familiar; became the face, unmistakably, of Jimmy Wallace!

It is probable that of all the audience, only two men saw that anything had happened, so brief was the frozen instant while she stood transfixed. One of them was John Galbraith. In the back row, and he let his breath go out again in relief almost in the act of catching it. He guessed well enough what had happened. But it was all right. She was going on as if nothing had happened.

The other man was Jimmy Wallace himself. He released, too, a little sigh of relief when he saw her in her stride again after that momentary falter. But he hardly looked at the stage after that; stared absently at his program instead, and presently availed himself of the dramatic critic's license and left the theater.

As for Rose herself, in her conscious thoughts she didn't recognize the hope already beating tumultuously in her veins, that he would tell Rodney—that perhaps even before she got back to her dismal little room, Rodney, parsing it, would know.

It was so irrational a hope—so unexpected and, as well disguised, that she mistook it for fear. But fear never made one's heart glow like that.

That's where all her thoughts were when John Galbraith halted her on the way from the dressing room after the performance was over. "I know you're tired, but I must have a word with you in the morning, and I have to leave for New York on the fast train. So you see, it's your last chance."

Strangely enough, that got her. She stared at him almost in consternation. "Do you mean you are going away?" she asked. "Tomorrow?"

"Of course," he said, rather sharply. "I've nothing more to stay around here for." He added, as she still seemed not to have got it through her head: "My contract with Goldsmith and Block ended tonight, with the opening performance."

"Of course," she said in deprecation of her stupidity. "And yet it's always seemed that the show was you; just something that you made go. It doesn't seem possible that it could keep on going with you not there."

The sincerity of that made it a really fine compliment—just the sort of compliment he'd appreciate. But—the old perversity again—the very freedom with which she said it spoiled it for him.

"I may be missed," he said—it was more of a growl, really—"but I shouldn't be regretted. There's always a sort of 'Hallelujah chorus' set up by the company when they realize I'm gone. "I shall regret it very much," said Rose. The words would have set his blood on fire if she'd just faltered over them. But she didn't. She was hopelessly serene about it. "You're a person who's made the six weeks before, and in a way, wonderful. I can't thank you enough for all the things you've done for me, though how I may try to, some time."

"I don't want any thanks," he said. And this was completely true. It was something very different from gratitude that he wanted. But he realized how abominably ungracious his words sounded, and hastened to amend them. "What I mean is that you don't owe me any. You've done a lot to make this show go as well as it did. In more ways than you know about, it wasn't for me, personally, that you did it. But all the same, I'm grateful. You'll stay with this piece, I suppose as long as the run lasts. But in the end, what's the idea? Do you want to be an actress?"

"The notion of just going on—changing anything or improving anything; doing the same thing over and over again for forty weeks, or four, seems perfectly ghastly—just keep going round and round like a horse at the end of a pole. What I like to do, now that this is finished—well, to start another."

His eyes kindled. "That's it," he said. "That's what I've felt about all along. I suppose it's the reason you never could be an actress. See the thing the way I do—the fun of the game is getting the thing done. Once it's got . . . He snatched his fingers, and with an eager nod agreed.

"Well then, look here," he said, "an idea that I could use you to advantage as a sort of personal assistant. There'll be a good deal of work just of the sort you did with the sextette, teaching people to move about like the sort of folk I supposed to represent. It wouldn't be more if we could teach people to act human. Well, you do that better than I, that's the truth. Under this new contract I expect to sign in a two, I'll simply have to have some. And then, of course, there's the timing. That's a great game, I think you've a talent for it."

"There you are! The job will be paid from the first a great deal better than what you've got here. And the constraining end of it, if you succeed, would run to real money. Well how about it?"

"Hut," said Rose, a little breathlessly. "I don't see how I can stay here with 'The Girl Upstairs'! I couldn't just leave, could I?"

"I'll write you just yet anyway," he said. "I'll write when I can, and by that time you'll be perfectly free to give them your own words' notice. They'll be annoyed of course; but after all, you've given them more than their money's worth already. Well—will you come if I write?"

"I seem to me wonderful to be sure," he said. "Yes, I'll come of course, if you'll let me in on a few of the things you've done. I'll be in the morning, and I'll have to leave for New York on the fast train. So you see, it's your last chance."

breathing. But the eyes weren't looking at him. Another vision filled them. The vision—oh, he was sure of it now!—of that "only one," whoever he was, "that mattered."

"I won't keep you any longer," he said. "I'll have them get a taxi and send you home."

She said she didn't want a taxi. He didn't demur to her wish to be put on a car, and at the crossing where they waited for it after an almost silent walk, he did manage to shake hands and tell her she'd hear from him soon.

But he kicked his way to the curb after the car had carried her off, and marched to his hotel in a sort of baffled fury. He didn't know exactly just what it was he'd wanted. But he did know, with a perfectly abysmal conviction, that he was a fool!

CHAPTER XX.

Anticlimax.

It was out of the limbo of the unforeseeable that the blind instrument of Fate appeared to tell Rodney about Rose. He was a country lawyer from down-state, who had been in Chicago three or four days, spending an hour or two of every day in Rodney's office in consultation with him, and, for the rest of the time, darning about, more or less at a loose end. A belated sense of this struck Rodney at the end of their last consultation.

"I'm sorry I haven't been able to do more," Rodney said—"do anything, really, in the way of showing you a good time. As a matter of fact, I've spent every evening this week here in the office."

"Oh, I haven't lacked for entertainment," the man said. "We hayseeds find the city a pretty lively place. I want to see a show."

ORDER

WHEREAS, The assessment rolls for the townships of Plymouth, Sumpter, VanBuren, Canton, Grosse Isle and Monguagon, in the county of Wayne and State of Michigan, for the year 1917 have heretofore been made by the supervisors of said townships and reviewed by the regularly constituted boards of review of said townships; and

WHEREAS, Said assessment rolls are now subject to inspection by the Board of State Tax Commissioners of the State of Michigan, or by any one thereof; and

WHEREAS, It has been made to appear to said Board of State Tax Commissioners that property in said townships has been so irregularly and unlawfully assessed that adequate compliance with law cannot be secured except by a review of said assessment rolls; it is

ORDERED, That in accordance with the provisions of Section 162 of the General Tax Law, as amended by Act No. 153 of the Public Acts of 1913, said assessment rolls be subject to review and that William T. Rittenbury, supervisor of said township of Plymouth, be required to appear in the village hall in the village of Plymouth on Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of September, A. D. 1917, at nine o'clock in the forenoon; that Decatur Gotts, supervisor of said township of Sumpter, and Charles F. Voorhies, supervisor of said township of VanBuren, be required to appear in the village of Bellefontaine on Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of September, A. D. 1917, at nine o'clock in the forenoon; and that Leonard Wilton, supervisor of said township of Grosse Isle, and A. F. Lister, supervisor of said township of Monguagon, be required to appear in the village of Trenton on Friday, the twenty-eighth day of September, A. D. 1917, at nine o'clock in the forenoon; and have with them at the aforesaid places the assessment rolls for their respective townships for the year 1917 and all statements filed with them for said year; and it is

FURTHER ORDERED, That public hearings be held as follows: For the township of Plymouth on Thursday, September 27, 1917, in the village hall in the village of Plymouth; for the townships of Sumpter and VanBuren on Thursday, September 27, 1917, in the village of Bellefontaine; for the township of Canton on Friday, September 28, 1917, in the village of Bellefontaine; for the township of Grosse Isle and Monguagon on Friday, September 28, 1917, in the village of Trenton; and it is

FURTHER ORDERED, That each of the aforesaid hearings shall begin at nine o'clock in the forenoon on the days mentioned and that the members of the Board of State Tax Commissioners, or any member thereof, shall hear and determine as to the proper assessment of all property in said townships and shall take such action as will correct any irregularities that may be found to exist; and it is FURTHER ORDERED, That any person affected or liable to be affected, by said review of assessments and aforesaid hearings, and that is not present at said hearings, shall be given notice by publication in accordance with law.

WITNESS our hands and seal this tenth day of September, A. D. 1917.

ORLANDO B. BARNES,
THOMAS B. KEARNEY,
CASS R. BENTON,
Members of the Board of State Tax Commissioners.

He knew now that he was afraid. It et the thing he was afraid of refused to come out into the open where he could see it and know what it was. He still believed that he didn't know what it was when he walked past the framed photographs in the lobby of the theater without looking at them and stopped at the box office to exchange his seat, but he was in front, for one near the back of the theater.

But when the sextette made their first entrance upon the stage, he knew that he had known for a good many hours.

He never stirred from his seat during either of the intermissions. But along in the third act he got up and went out.

The knot that fogged his soul had a wave of lashes, "I with the sting of its own peculiar venom. Everybody who knew him his closer friends and his casual acquaintances, as well, must have known for weeks, of this disgrace. His friends had been sorry for him, with just a grain of contempt; his acquaintances had grinned over it with just a pleasurable salt of pity. "Do you know Aldrich? Well, his wife's in the chorus at the Globe theater. And he doesn't know it, poor devil."

The northwest wind which had been blowing lately since sundown, had increased in violence to a gale. But he strode out of the lobby and into the street unaware of it.

He found the stage door and pulled it open. An intermittent roar of hand-clapping, increasing and dimming with the rapid rise and fall of the curtain, told him that the performance was just over.

A doorman stopped him and asked him what he wanted.

"I want to see Mrs. Aldrich," he said. "Mrs. Rodney Aldrich."

"No such person here," said the man, and Rodney, in his rage, simply assumed that he was lying. It didn't occur to him that Rose would have taken another name.

He stood there a moment, debating whether to attempt to force an entrance against the doorman's unmistakable intention to stop him, and decided to wait instead.

The decision wasn't due to common sense, but to a wish not to dissipate his rage on people that didn't matter. He wanted it intact for Rose.

He went back to the alley, braced himself in the angle of a brick pier, and waited. He neither stamped his feet nor flailed his arms about to drive off the cold. He just stood still with the patience of his immemorial ancestor, waiting, unconscious of the lapse of time, unconscious of the figures that presently began straggling out of the stage door that were not she.

What do you suppose happens when Rodney meets Rose at the stage door? It is a thrilling meeting they have—and the emotional stress takes them almost to the breaking point. The next installment tells you all about what happened.

WARRING ON INFANT PLAGUE

Medical Scientists Place Themselves in State of Preparedness to Repel Advances of Foe.

The best war news of home significance published the other day related to the new state of preparedness in which our medical scientists find themselves for the fight with infantile paralysis and its microbes, observes the New York World. In case of a fresh advance by these foes of childhood in the coming summer, the prospects for a distinct repulse are encouraging. It is from the research forces of the Rockefeller Institute that the bulletins come of a progressive readiness.

Not least encouraging among the discoveries of the doctors is the fact that two centers of generally efficient defense are characteristic of the body itself. One of these is in the secretions of the nose and throat, the entrance avenues of the microbes. The other is in certain membranes, when intact, surrounding the spinal cord and brain. A slight injury to these membranes will let the virus in when the disease germs have once passed the other barriers. How frequently the defenses succeeded all around is shown by the record of last summer's attacks, only 1.50 cases of paralysis occurring to every 1,000 of population in this city. This would mean about 10 cases to a city of 10,000 people.

Passing from natural preventive to discovered remedies, the doctors tell of a better serum and of methods of administration made more effective by a winter's study and experiment. Although the research bulletins go far to strengthen the counsel, found to be well based even in last summer's epidemic, against panic and nerve-racking worry.

As beneficial as it is enjoyable—in other words, doubly beneficial; that's why

Feed the Fighters! Win the War!!

Harvest the Crops — Save the Yields

On the battle fields of France and Flanders, the United States boys and the Canadian boys are fighting side by side to win for the World the freedom that Prussianism would destroy. While doing this they must be fed and every ounce of muscle that can be requisitioned must go into use to save this year's crop. A short harvest period requires the combined forces of the two countries in team work, such as the soldier boys in France and Flanders are demonstrating.

The Combined Fighters in France and Flanders and the Combined Harvesters in America WILL Bring the Allied Victory Nearer.

A reciprocal arrangement for the use of farm workers has been perfected between the Department of the Interior of Canada and the Department of Labor and Agriculture of the United States, under which it is proposed to permit the harvesters that are now engaged in the wheat fields of Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin to move over into Canada, with the privilege of later returning to the United States, when the crops in the United States have been harvested, and help to save the enormous crops in Canada which by that time will be ready for harvesting.

Rare Animals Coming. The American Museum of Natural History is looking forward to adding to its collection specimens of gorilla, senoia and sambura. For Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, its president, has received word from Roy C. Andrews, in charge of the museum's expedition to Yunnan, China, that he has succeeded in getting some splendid specimens on the mountains of Tibet and Burma. These animals, which are of the stag tribe, are exceedingly rare.

Puppy Love. The bride was found in tears, clutching her little woolly dog Muffin and at intervals moaning to herself "Sweetheart, sweetheart," said her terrified husband, "what is the matter? Tell me; what is the matter?" "Oh, he," she wailed between agonized sobs, "Muffin is going to be sick—I know he is. He bit a piece out of a peddler's leg today."

Keeping Good Work Going.
A young man was being examined by a Delaware county exemption board as to his qualifications to serve as a soldier, says the Indianapolis News.

"Any dependents?" he was asked. "Yep, lots of 'em," was his answer. "Name them—tell who they are," a board member suggested.

"Lawse, man, I can't name them all," said the one examined. "They're all my wife's relatives. They've been dependin' on me ever since I was married."

"Unless you are more specific than that we cannot see any ground for exemption," he was advised by the board.

"Who said I wanted to be exempted? I want them still to be dependents, but I want them to be dependent upon themselves."

After a little further investigation of this case, he was accepted.

A PHYSICAL WRECK

Laid Up in Bed, Barely Holding Onto Life. Doan's Effected Marvelous Recovery.

"Without warning I was dragged to the brink of the grave by malignant kidney trouble," says Robert Wengatz, 114 Cypress Ave., Bronx, N. Y. "My kidneys seemed to stop acting and the pain in my back were terrible. Big, bloaty puffs came under my eyes and attacks of dizziness often blinded me. My limbs swelled twice normal size and I could press big dents into the flesh."

"I was confined to bed and had convulsions several times a day. Despite the best of treatment, I grew worse and was taken to the hospital. I didn't improve, however, and was brought home again, barely holding onto life."

"Toward the last of 1913, a friend persuaded me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I cannot put into words what they did for me. The first box helped more than all the other medicines and treatments I had taken. I continued and from an emaciated wreck of a man I have taken on good, solid flesh until I now weigh 225 pounds and am in the best of health. Doan's alone deserve the credit."

"It's Been Twenty-Five Years Since I've Felt as Well as I Do, Since Taking Tanlac," He Says.

"It's been twenty-five years since I felt as well and strong as I do now after taking this Tanlac," said O. H. Mahaffey, chief engineer of the Life & Casualty Building, Nashville, Tenn., in an interesting interview a short time ago.

"After I had suffered for two whole years with a serious stomach trouble and was told that only an operation would relieve me," he continued, "I grew so despondent over my hopeless suffering that I was just about to give up my job. I had gotten to the place where I couldn't eat a thing but oatmeal and sweet milk and even then the pains in my stomach and through the small of my back kept me in misery nearly all the time. I couldn't sleep at night and grew weaker and weaker until I didn't think I'd ever get any better."

"It's no wonder that I praise Tanlac now and am telling all my friends about it. After taking it a day or two I found that I could eat most anything I ever could, and from that time on I have improved. Those pains in my back and stomach left me shortly and I began to pick up. I have actually gained forty pounds in weight since I started taking Tanlac and I feel better than I have in twenty-five years. I can sleep all night like a healthy child and get up in the morning full of life and energy. I am glad to tell anybody who wants to know just what Tanlac did for me."

"Oh, never mind, George," she interrupted. "Even if it is a chestnut, I'm sure I never heard it. Go on, please!"

ITALIAN LEADER GREAT GENERAL

Rome.—It is said in the little Italian water town of Pallanza on the border of the Lago Maggiore, away up toward the Swiss Alps, where Lombardy and Piedmont meet, that some years ago a learned German with a particular interest in heraldry paused at some length before a weather-beaten crest embossed in a quaint old-fashioned doorway, and observed to those in his company:

"Remarkable—most remarkable. The composition of this coat of arms points to a line of fate running in the same family from father to son, and to tremendous achievements to crown the family tree. I wouldn't care to be pitted against the star of that family."

And he marched himself off, growling: "Remarkable, most remarkable!" But it never occurred to him to ask the name of the family who had once gone through the deserted gateway, nor, at the time, did his reflection strike his Italian host as anything but a freak of "kultur."

Time has proved that the German was right for once. The star and the oak tree and what not that had struck his fancy so are the crest of the Cadorna, who come from poor but un-sullied provincial nobility, with two chief ideals running in the family: Faith in God and devotion to Italy. The present General Cadorna's grandfather was minister to King Carlo Alberto, who led the movement for Italian independence, granted the constitution to his kingdom (then restricted to Piedmont and Sardinia), abdicated in favor of his son when he thought that such a course of action would help the formation of new Italy, and died an exile at Oporto. General Cadorna's father, Gen. Count Raffaele Cadorna, led in 1867 the Italian advance on the Isonzo, which was cut short by diplomatic interference and the subsequent granting to Austria of the Italian lands beyond that same Isonzo and the Adriatic; an unjust and therefore unwise move which ultimately resulted in the war of today.

The "line of fate running in the family from father to son" is evident now, when Gen. Count Luigi Cadorna takes up the reshaping of history left unfinished by his father, as all Italy of today takes up the strand of fate intertwined and distorted by the unfortunate events of 1866.

Luigi Cadorna himself was born in Pallanza on September 4, 1850, and he was barely 15 years old when he entered the military academy, graduating therefrom as a full-fledged lieutenant in 1870, and receiving his captain's commission in 1875 in an artillery regiment. Opportunity for experience in infantry work was afforded him by his appointment as a major in the Sixty-second Infantry regiment in 1883; but since 1882, when he got his colonelcy, he has been identified with the Bersaglieri, the "wideawakes" of the Italian army.

All these years were spent by him in active study of general military problems, as well as of Italy's particular characteristics in the military line. To this day his essay on the Franco-German war of 1870 and his pamphlet about tactics and the proper use of infantry in legitimate warfare are consulted by the experts to advantage, as are his studies on the Italian boundary lands. These he knows to perfection, so that he hardly ever needs to resort to charts and maps for his plans; he has it all mapped out in his head, and the facility with which he draws from his memory the names and positions of intricate passes, valleys, mule paths and roads is nothing short of marvelous.

When he took command of the Tenth regiment of the Bersaglieri, he started to work on it after his own mind, and brought it out in the grand maneuvers of 1895 in splendid form, practicing, in fact, on the adversary forces that same type of offensive and surrounding move that worked so capably on the Carso today. Again, in 1911, (he had attained his generalship then since some years), he led in the "grandes maneuvers," the Blue party against the Red, with all the strategic odds against his party, and astonished all experts by the working out of a capital plan first; and when this fell through on unforeseen circumstances, by the promptness with which he sized up the new situation and turned it once more to his advantage.

But nothing then seemed to point out the magnificent heights to which he was called. In fact, the breaking out of the European war in 1914 still found him a general on the list for the command of an army in case of war. And the Italian chief of staff was General Pollio, who, by the way, was blessed with an Austrian wife. His timely death was a good turn of fate for Italy, for the king appointed General Cadorna to his place.

General Cadorna, it may be frankly stated now, found the Italian army in practically desperate conditions of unpreparedness. The way he went to work and reorganized and equipped it was as remarkable and as brilliant an achievement as any of his most brilliant achievements in the fighting line; in fact, it was only the preparation of 1914 that makes victory possible in 1917.

He is the only commander in the allied world that has retained his position, we might say, kept steadily his job, throughout the war, without ever as much as a hint of a breakdown either in the wholesome confidence that his country, his king, his army—and the allies—have placed in him, or in the lively, energetic, all-around quality of his action and command. In fact,

General Luigi Cadorna, Italian leader.

But when, about one year later, Goritz was taken, the mayor received this rather cryptic telegram from the general himself:

"You may now send along that objection," Cadorna.

Which rather reminds you of Dante's famous answer about the egg with salt, at one year's distance.

On New Year's day of 1916, an acquaintance sent him, with good wishes, the offering of a shaggy fur coat, and the general answered accepting "the fleece" as a good omen "for the conquest of our ideal golden fleece," and added: "But then, you know, in Jason's time there were no barbed-wire fences nor other infernal devices, and it was possible to step more lively."

Which, by the way, is a mighty good hit at the closet-critics of the war. It is characteristic of the general that such a gift he may accept with a smile; but he definitely waives any collective token or demonstration. Knowing his affection for his native place, and his regret at circumstances having compelled his father to part with the family homestead, it was proposed to purchase and present to him the house by national subscription. He stopped that, and desired the proceeds to be given to the home for mutilated soldiers and victims of the war. Other demonstrations were similarly thwarted, but it is believed that he will not refuse to accept a sword once owned by Garibaldi, since it is planned to present it to him "at the end of the war."

If a general proves unfit he is "forpedooed" on the spot; if a soldier shows the right stuff, he is rewarded. His constant preoccupation is: "Find the men who have the stuff. With such men as the Italians, first values must have been developed during the war; find them and put them up."

His ruddy, genial, open countenance, his boyish freedom of movement and gesture, interestingly contrasting with the whiteness of hair and mustache; his clear, forceful voice and the definite, resolute things that it expresses, with a breezy sense of vitality that is quite refreshing to the hearer, all come in for a share in the exceptional, attractive personality of this "gentleman warrior," who, as a young lieutenant in 1870 stood by his father and helped him give Rome to Italy, and as a mature leader of men may or may not give Trieste to Rome in 1917, but will forever stand in the eyes of Italy and the light of the world as the true representative of the righteous fight of Latin civilization against the barbaric brutality of the Huns.

Audience Cheers Soldier Who Prevented Building Burning in Texas.

San Antonio, Tex.—In the course of the "5-10-15-cent" theatrical performance in a Houston street theater Sunday afternoon, one of the actors had "died" and had been stretched out upon the "cooling board" with the conventional candles at head and feet. After the action, which was somewhat rapid, one of the actors, alone, stood before the audience and sang. Soon a candle fell from his position and lay burning on the sheet that lay over the "dead" person.

In the commotion that quickly followed, civilians whistled, called, stirred about and motioned to the singer to put out the flame. A soldier, however, mounted the stage and put out the fire with his bare hands, receiving a hearty cheer from the audience.

And the singer continued his song.

Delta Proving Bonanza.
Greewood, Miss.—Land in the Mississippi Delta has doubled in value within the last two or three years. A

Cadorna has brought to the expectant Italy the daily word of her great general and the unspoken assurance of his faith in ultimate victory, every day made nearer and more resplendent, for the general believes in what might be called the contagiousness of faith, and the identification of the ideal with the reality in ultimate achievement. He believes that victory, before materializing as a fact, must be potentially blaring as an absolute certainty in the hearts of the soldiers and their leaders—in fact, must descend from the leaders to the masses as an irresistible, joyous flow of truth. He believes that discipline is the spiritual flame of victory. Never for one instant has he doubted the ultimate issue of the war; never once doubted his own power to win, not on account of personal conceit, but because he considers himself as an agent of necessity, an exponent of the inevitable march of history.

His will is inflexible, because he never seeks strength in the opinion of others. On the other hand, he never makes up his mind until every side has been considered and every item of the contention outweighed. After that his conclusions are drawn, and anything that may follow finds him unswerving. His strength lies largely in his absolute, naive unconsciousness of anything that might disturb it; that, in fact, would disturb another man. No useless anxiety in him; no nerve-racking impatience.

Once, away back in 1915, a mayor of an Italian city sent word that his constituents had an Italian flag ready for Goritz. Cadorna dismissed the subject with a whimsical smile.

"Tell him to put it away in a drawer for now."

But when, about one year later, Goritz was taken, the mayor received this rather cryptic telegram from the general himself:

"You may now send along that objection," Cadorna.

Too Sick To Work

Many Women in this Condition Regain Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Convincing Proof of This Fact.

Ridgway, Penn.—"I suffered from female trouble with backache and pain in my side for over seven months so I could not do any of my work. I was treated by three different doctors and was getting discouraged when my sister-in-law told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her. I decided to try it, and it restored my health, so I now do all of my housework which is not light as I have a little boy three years old."—Mrs. O. M. RUMBLE, Ridgway, Penn.

Mrs. Lindsey Now Keeps House for Seven.

Tennille, Ga.—"I want to tell you how much I have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About eight years ago I got in such a low state of health I was unable to keep house for three in the family. I had dull, tired, dizzy feelings, cold feet and hands nearly all the time and could scarcely sleep at all. The doctor said I had a severe case of ulceration and without an operation I would always be an invalid, but I told him I wanted to wait awhile. Our druggist advised my husband to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has entirely cured me. Now I keep house for seven and work in the garden some, too. I am so thankful I got this medicine. I feel as though it saved my life and have recommended it to others and they have been benefited."—Mrs. W. E. LINDSEY, R. R. 3, Tennille, Ga.

Historical Research.

The pupils in one of the schools of Indianapolis are from time to time in their history lessons providing their teacher with answers to her questions on the subjects under consideration that are worthy of the distinctive name of "howlers," a term recently adopted from Great Britain. Here are some that she has recently added to her collection:

Question—Who aided Columbus on his voyages?
Answer—Patrick Henry of Virginia.

Question—What part did George Washington play in the Revolutionary war?
Answer—He played in the band.

Question—What were the relations of Capt. John Smith to the Indians?
Answer—He was related to the Indians because he married Pocahontas.—Indianapolis News.

Did He Know Colors?
He couldn't see anything but green and he wasn't Irish, either. The trouble with Hyrum A. Bonicus of Payson, who sought enlistment at the local office of the Marine corps, was his inability to distinguish colors, says the Desert News.

He was blind as a bat—color blind, that is.

After passing his general physical examination even to the eyesight test with a good showing, he slipped up on the yarns.

When confronted with a basket of colored yarn and told to pick out reds of similar shade he choose a deep green, and when asked to match the yellows he also picked greens.

Told he could not be accepted by the service he went away with the remark: "How could you expect me to; I never did any sewing in my life."

Every Dollar Expended For Lumber Is Well Invested

The buildings you construct with the lumber you buy, mean not only economy in the conservation of crops, machinery and stock, but add to equipment and value of the farm.

Lumber purchased for repairs, is an especially wise purchase, as its use prevents the buildings from deteriorating in value and usefulness.

Experience the Best Teacher

It is generally admitted that experience is the best teacher, but should we not make use of the experience of others as well as our own? The experience of a thousand persons is more to be depended upon than that of one individual. Many thousands of persons have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs and colds with the best results, which shows it to be a thoroughly reliable preparation for those diseases. Try it. It is prompt and effectual and pleasant to take.—Advt.

Soldier Boys Left Early This Morning

Cortrite, Edward Remus, Clarence Schawb, Harry Mumby, Allen H. Warner, Clarence D. Schaffer, Harry E. Brown, Earl A. Ryder Wm. T. Kruger.

The best wishes of the entire village and community goes with them.

Moves Into New Building

Karl W. Hillmer has moved his laundry, which has been located on Penniman avenue for many years, to his new building on West Ann Arbor street, opposite the hotel. The new building, which has just been completed, is 24x40 feet in size. The business office is located on the east side at the front of the building. On the west side is the tie-up and sorting room. The back part of the building is given over to the drying and ironing room. In the large basement is the boiler and wash room. The whole building is light and airy and is most conveniently arranged and well equipped to handle the work to the best advantage. Mr. Hillmer will be pleased to welcome all his patrons and friends at his new location on Ann Arbor street.

A Pleasant Occasion

One of the pleasantest events of the summer took place last Friday afternoon, when a post-nuptial shower, which took the proportions of a cloud burst, was given in honor of Mrs. Ada Pitcher Hubbell at the home of Miss Ada Safford on Penniman avenue, assisted by Mrs. Karl Hillmer and Miss Anna Baker, as hostesses. The house was profusely decorated with beautiful flowers of the season, and a white umbrella, suspended from the chandelier in the living room, served as a receptacle for copies of the favorite recipes, which each guest had been requested to bring. Below this, on a round table, were piled the gifts of admiring friends, gifts of real value, both large and small. In addition to this, there were about three dozen towels, given by the hostesses, which were passed among the guests to be hemmed during the afternoon. A pleasing program consisting of the following numbers was rendered: Piano solo, Miss Evelyn Thomas; original poem, dedicated to the bride, Miss Nettie Pelham; vocal solo with encore, Mrs. F. F. Bennett, and a group of songs by Dr. Willis A. Moore, pastor of the Church of Our Father, Detroit. Late in the afternoon dainty refreshments were served: Besides the Plymouth friends, there were several ladies present from Farmington, and Dr. and Mr. Moore and little son of Detroit, making a total of sixty guests present.

That marriage at the present time, is really rather scary.

And that the young folks of our land should be most awful wary—

Is proven by the papers, all—

Just see the stuff they're printing.

At conservation of all foods

Continually they're hinting.

In fear and trembling, Ada sits,

The papers swiftly scanning,

And, from the points that it contains,

Her daily menus planning.

With eggs at forty-four per doz.,

With butter upward soaring,

With meat so high it can't be seen,

And Hoover fairly roaring.

Of meatless days and wheatless days

And where's the cash to buy it?

She wants to help poor Hoover out,

She reads his exhortations;

She knows how anxiously he longs

To feed the starving nations.

But she has got a man to feed,

She's anxious now to try it;

She's bound to have good things to eat

If there is cash to buy it.

Her hubby, thus she makes a vow,

Shall never lose a ration;

She's not going to starve her Winn

To feed a far off nation.

But, if perchance, a meal is plain,

And he some dainty misses,

We're sure that she will do her part

And make it up in kisses.

And now, kind friends, enough is said,

So let us join together,

And wish this pair a happy life,

Devoid of stormy weather.

Let joy and comfort be their part,

With ne'er a sign of trouble,

And may Dame Fortune be most kind

And bless the name of Hubbell.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcelle E. Peters and children of Detroit, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sherman.

Presbyterian Week

The Plymouth Presbyterian church will observe "Presbyterian Week," October 1 to 6, leading to Rally Day, Sunday, October 7. The pastor of the church has secured a large amount of material in the way of charts, maps and lantern slides in order to thoroughly present before the members of the congregation the vast achievements of the American church last year. This method of church education is being widely used today. The program is as follows:

Monday, October 1.
Afternoon—Exhibit of American protestant colleges in large colored photographs and explanatory charts.

Evening, 7 o'clock—Lantern lecture, "Protestant Higher Education in America."

PATRIOTIC DAY
Tuesday, October 2.
Afternoon, 2 o'clock, Woman's Missionary Society in church parlors.

Evening, 7 o'clock—Lantern lecture, "How the Church is Preventing the I. W. W. from Ruining Our Country."

Wednesday, October 3.
Afternoon, 2 o'clock—The Woman's Auxiliary in the church parlors.

Evening, 7 o'clock—Lantern lecture, "Making the World Safe for Women and Children."

Thursday, October 4.
Afternoon at 2 o'clock—The W. C. T. U. of Plymouth in church parlors.

Evening, 7 o'clock—Lantern lecture, "What Becomes of the Worn-out Veterans of the Cross?"

Friday, October 5.
Afternoon—Charts, pictures and literature will exhibit the work among the young people.

Evening, 7 o'clock—Lantern lecture, "The People the Sunday-school is Reaching."

Saturday, October 6.

W. C. T. U.

The first meeting of the W. C. T. U., after the summer vacation, was held at the home of Mrs. Merrylees, Thursday afternoon, Sept. 13. After the business was all attended to, it certainly proved that many of the members did not forget the state motto, "Not for self, but for Humanity," during their vacation. The talk given by Mrs. Merrylees, on "Reform Work," was very interesting and it is regretted that many more did not hear it. Several new names for membership were brought in.

People Speak Well of Chamberlain's Tablets.

"I have been selling Chamberlain's Tablets for about two years and heard such good reports from my customers that I concluded to give them a trial myself and can say that I do not believe there is another preparation of the kind equal to them."
