But millions cease not to pray daily. Our God is not deaf. The following prayer every Christian may use; it is from the "Book of Worship for Soldiers and Sailors:" "Grant, Lord, that the officers and men of the United States may be brave in battle, patient in hardship, cheerful in defeat, and gentle in victory. We beseech thee to take into Thine own hand both them and the cause wherein their country sends them, and to give success to our arms, and to the world the blessings of a righteous peace. In Christ's name. Amen."

Plymouth Soldier Given Military Honors

Over One Thousand Citizens Attend Funeral of Private Vernon B. Henderson at High School Auditorium Last Friday.

The funeral services for Private Vernon B. Henderson of Co. I, 338th Infantry, whose death at Camp Custer, was mentioned in last week's Mail, were held in the High school auditorium, last Friday afternoon, and were attended by over one thousand people and was the largest funeral ever held in this village. The large auditorium and gallery were not large enough to seat all who came to pay honor and respect to the first of Plymouth's soldier boys, who had given the last full measure of devotion and sacrifice on the altar of his country, and many were obliged to stand throughout the services. As a mark of respect the business places were closed during the funeral. The Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters, of which orders deceased was a member, attended the services in a body. The auditorium and stage were decorated in the national colors in keeping with the occasion. At one o'clock the remains were conveyed from the family home to the High school auditorium under an escort of eight soldiers from Camp Custer, in command of Lieut. LaRauche, where they lay in state until the funeral hour. During the time the body lay in state, eight comrades, members of the dead soldier's company, acted as a guard of honor and stood at attention. Hundreds of citizens viewed the remains, which reposed in a beautiful grey casket, on the top of which lay an American flag. There were many beautiful floral pieces, which bore mute tribute to the love and esteem in which the young soldier was held by relatives, friends and comrades.

Rev. H. Midworth of St. John's Mission, conducted the Episcopal service in a most impressive manner. A quartette, composed of Messrs. Evered Jolliffe, Calvin, Austin and Elmer Whipple, sang three selections most beautifully. Rev. Karl P. Miller of the Presbyterian church, delivered a most appropriate and eloquent sermon, referring in a most touching manner to the life and heroic sacrifice made by the departed soldier, who had answered the last long roll call. The lesson of the sermon was one which made a lasting impression upon the hearts of the large assemblage. At the conclusion of the services at the cemetery, taps were sounded by the bugler, and the remains were placed in the receiving vault. Sleep in beloved and take thy rest. We loved thee well, God loved thee best. Farewell!

A TRIBUTE

At the afternoon service in St. John's Episcopal Mission on Sunday last, the Rev. H. Midworth, speaking from "St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 13:7-12. Render therefore tribute unto him that is the Lord, to whom honor" referred to the splendid tribute which had been paid by the people of Plymouth to the memory of the late Private Vernon B. Henderson. No eulogy, however able, could have been more eloquent; no tribute could have been more effectively rendered. Plymouth knew how to honor her son and she had risen to the occasion. Nor was the honor undeserved. For nearly 17 years he had lived among them and by his usefulness and uprightness had gained the love and respect of all whom he met. At his death was profoundly felt by the whole village, as shown in the silent tributes to his memory. Reference was also made to a feeling which exists in the new army between the enlisted and drafted men. This, the speaker said, was a feeling which would have to be eradicated and the work of eradication was one which must be undertaken by the chaplains. Because a young man had waited for the draft instead of enlisting right away, was no indication that he was more brave; less loyal to his country than the enlisted men. In many cases there were strong home ties which caused them to tarry; there was the affection for home and mother; there was the influence of loved ones brought to bear upon them, and there were other ties, influences that have their weight. But when the call did come, they were ready to respond—ready to break the home ties—ready to turn a deaf ear to the pleading of loved ones and say to their country, "Here I am, strength, use it; 'Here I am, my life, if it must be surrendered in defense and honor of my country." The drafted man would be found to be just as eager—just as ready to "go over the top" as his brother the enlisted man. All honor to both of them, but let not the honor of the new army be diminished by such unpatriotic feeling. It must be eradicated.

Aged Lady Fatally Burned

A sad accident occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Scovel, about ten o'clock last Tuesday morning, when Mrs. Scovel, aged 78 years, was fatally burned. She went into the basement to fix the furnace fire, and in some unexplained manner her clothing caught on fire. She immediately called for help, but before the flames were extinguished, she was fatally burned about her face and body. A physician was quickly summoned and every possible effort was made to save her life, but to no avail, as she grew gradually worse and passed away at six o'clock Wednesday morning.

The deceased is survived by her aged husband, three grown children, P. E. Scovel of Chicago; W. H. Scovel of Kalamazoo, and Mrs. T. W. Connor of Detroit; one sister, Miss Gertrude Snow, who resided with her the past winter, and one brother, Charles Snow of California. Mr. and Mrs. Scovel moved here from Detroit last October, and their Plymouth friends deeply sympathize with the bereaved family in their great sorrow. The hour for the funeral had not been set at the time we go to press, as their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Connor are in Florida and arrangements cannot be made until word is received from them.

Young Man Seriously Burned

Raymond Lyndon, aged 20 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lyndon, who resides at the corner of South Main and Golden streets, met with a serious accident, last Tuesday afternoon. The accident was caused by the explosion of the kitchen stove, and the boy was standing near the stove at the time was badly burned about his face and hands. The cause of the explosion is unknown, as Mrs. Lyndon was staying in Detroit for a few days and the boy, who was alone in the house at the time of the accident, is unable to tell how it occurred. With his clothing on fire and crazed with pain, he ran from the house toward the home of Winfield Birch, who lives a short distance away. Before reaching there, he forded the creek, which was very high from the recent rains, and in so doing extinguished the flames from his clothing, but when he reached Mr. Birch's home his face and hands were so badly burned that pieces of flesh dropped from them. A physician was immediately summoned, and he was removed to the hospital at Hoboken, N. J., that morning, of pneumonia. The deceased was a member of Co. A, 125th Infantry, and was a young man highly esteemed by all who knew him. At the time we go to press the remains were expected to arrive in Plymouth Thursday afternoon, but no arrangements for the funeral had been made. A more extended notice will appear in next week's paper.

At the time we go to press the remains were expected to arrive in Plymouth Thursday afternoon, but no arrangements for the funeral had been made. A more extended notice will appear in next week's paper.

Mrs. Henry Tanager is in Detroit caring for her cousin, who is ill. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carrington of Northville, visited friends here Sunday. Mrs. Phila Harrison who has been nursing in Detroit for several weeks has returned home. Mrs. Windsor Walsh of Windsor, Ont., visited at the home of W. J. Birch, the latter part of last week, and attended the funeral of Vernon Henderson. Born, a daughter, to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Robinson of Detroit, Monday, Feb. 23rd. Mrs. Robinson will be remembered as Miss Anne Lyndon of this place.

May Replace Gravel on Plymouth Road with Concrete

In announcing their road building program for the year of 1918, the Board of County Road Commissioners have the following to say regarding the Plymouth road: "If conditions permit, the work of replacing the gravel road on the Plymouth road will be started, and when once started will be continued until it is replaced with an 18-foot concrete road 28 feet over all, in its entirety from the Detroit city limits to the village of Plymouth, a distance of approximately 17 miles." Here's hoping that conditions will be favorable for the Board to make this much desired improvement. Another improvement of the Board will make this year is to properly sign board every concrete road in the county.

Furman-Lee

Miss Florence B. Lee, one of Plymouth's well known young women, and John W. The young couple were accompanied by Miss Ruth Jenkins and Frederick Thomas. After the ceremony was over, the surprise was broken to relatives and friends and congratulations began. Mrs. Furman is a graduate of the Plymouth High school and fitted herself for the teaching profession, but ever since completing her school work has been at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lee, on Penniman avenue. Mr. Furman holds a good position as accountant in Detroit.

ASK BIG ACREAGE OF SPRING WHEAT

Government Calls on Farmer to Increase Food Supply.

SOUTH SHOULD FEED ITSELF

Agricultural Program for 1918 Urges Necessity for Producing Large Supply of Foods and Feedstuff to Feed America and Its Allies.

Washington, D. C.—The planting of an increased acreage of spring wheat and the production of an increased supply of other food products and of live stock, especially hogs, is recommended in a supplementary food production program issued by the United States department of agriculture.

This program re-emphasizes and amplifies the food-production program for 1918 issued by the department in August, 1917, and other suggestions made in the fall and the first of this year regarding increased pork production and increased production of foodstuffs in the South. Taken in connection with the recommendations previously made, it suggests in full the proposals which the department thinks it desirable to offer with a view to secure enough meat and dairy products for the nation, its armies, and the allies. It gives suggestions for the approaching spring operations, based upon the latest available information as to the condition of the fall-planted crops of winter wheat and rye and as to the number of meat and dairy animals reported for 1917. They represent the best thought of the specialists of the department who have had the benefit of advice from agricultural leaders throughout the country.

Our Best Effort Required.

"Notwithstanding an increased production of staple crops in the United States in 1917, there is need for more food," the program states. "Taking into account our own needs, the needs of the nations associated with us in this war, and the needs of friendly neutral nations, our best efforts will be required to provide enough food in 1918. Whether the war continues or not, the demands on this country, because of the increasing population and the needs of Europe will be great. An especially strong demand will be made on this country for meats and live stock. In 1917, notwithstanding the many difficulties encountered, the farmers planted the largest acreages in the history of the nation, harvested record crops of most things except wheat, and succeeded in greatly increasing the number of live stock."

"The situation is such that chief emphasis should be given to the production of the great staple food products, with special stress on wheat and hogs, the leading war foods."

The South is urged to provide food for its own people and feed for its live stock and then to plant as much cotton as can be cultivated and harvested. To raise hogs and beef animals the world need for meats and fats is made clear. Farmers are urged to join with the men on the ranges in providing sheep whose wool is needed to equip soldiers.

Spring Wheat.

In dealing with the question of spring wheat, the program states: "The acreage of spring wheat should be increased in order to make certain that we shall have an adequate supply of wheat for our own uses and to meet the needs of the allies."

"While the area of winter wheat sown in 1917 was the largest on record, the condition of the crop, as reported on December 1, was the lowest ever recorded, indicating a probable production of only 540,000,000 bushels. Whether the actual production will be greater or less than the estimate will depend upon conditions prevailing between now and the time of harvest. If there were planted to spring wheat in the United States this year an acreage equal to the sum of the record planting in each spring wheat state within the last ten years, there would be sown approximately 23,300,000 acres. If there should be planted an acreage equal to the sum of the record planting for each state within the last five years there would be sown approximately 21,900,000 acres. The record planting for any year was 20,381,000 in 1911. The acreage for 1917 was 18,511,000."

"The department of agriculture has carefully studied all these records and other data in connection with the present war conditions and needs, and believes that it will be possible this year to secure an acreage in excess of the record acreage which was planted in 1911. It is believed that increased

The first floor of the home was reached at the rear by climbing a flight of stairs. One evening the family came from town with a good many packages, which the father, mother and son, Eugene, proceeded to carry into the house, Eugene going up the steps first. As they neared the top step the father said, forgetting momentarily that the packages' arms were full, too. "Open the screen door, son," to which the youngster replied: "I can't papa, I'm all used."

acres can be secured in states and sections where spring wheat production is known to be reasonably promising, and that such increases can be made without upsetting farm plans.

It is hoped that many farmers, especially in the northern part of the corn belt, will find it possible to plant five to ten acres additional in wheat. In some cases they will plant more. In a number of states in the eastern and central portions of the country where spring wheat has not been grown in recent years, the crop is now being re-established and it is recommended that this movement be encouraged.

To a small extent the acreage in oats, if necessary, could be reduced in the interest of wheat. Likewise, a very small portion of the acreage which normally would be planted to corn in the northern part of the corn belt might be sown to spring wheat.

If the acreage of spring wheat indicated for some of the states cannot be planted, the barley acreage, which is known to grow better in some localities, might be increased. The use of barley for food is increasing in this country and it is a welcome food in Europe.

This was the statement of Herbert Hoover, United States food administrator. Earnest co-operation is called for. Hoover said congestion of the railways is responsible for the present situation.

CRUSHING A LANGUAGE.

Under the Russian Empire No One Dared to Speak Ukrainian.

Ukrainian differs from Great Russian fully as much as Dutch does from German. In fact, the highest learned body in the Russian empire, the Petrograd Imperial academy, admitted a few years ago that the Ukrainians possessed a distinct language and culture of their own.

"There never has been, is not and never will be a Ukrainian language or nationality," declared a Russian minister of state in 1863, and this was merely the formal expression of what generations of Russian bureaucrats had already considered an axiomatic. All official business was carried on in Russian, a language almost completely unintelligible to Ukrainians. All Ukrainian writings, save certain old books of devotion, were rigidly proscribed, and Ukrainian education was so strictly prohibited that in many parts of the Russian Ukraine even today there are fewer schools than there were two centuries ago.

The only way for a talented Ukrainian to sprout his ideas was in Russian, and many of the greatest names in Russian literature, such as Gogol, Kostomarov, etc., were really Ukrainians forced to employ this alien tongue. What happened to those who dared clothe their thoughts in the native idiom may be judged by the terrible fate of the greatest of all Ukrainian poets, Taras Shevchenko. For the "abominable crime" of having composed some exquisite little verses celebrating the natural beauties of his Ukrainian homeland this youthful genius was sentenced to ten years' penal servitude in Siberia and returned from his hell of suffering a broken, prematurely old man, only to die.—T. TO PURIFY WATER.

Two Safe Ways by Which Typhoid Germs May Be Destroyed.

One cannot judge the purity of water by its looks. Things visible to the naked eye are usually harmless. The invisible germs of disease are by far the more injurious to human beings. Most people feel that drinking water is safe to use if it is cool, clear, sparkling and free from color or odor. Such is not the case. Even the sparkle may be due to decomposition products. The habiting brook usually contains more dangerous bacteria than standing water. Streams do not purify themselves by flowing over their rocky beds. The mistaken notion that they do is responsible for a great deal of vacation typhoid fever.

The safest method of destroying disease germs in water is by actual boiling. Boiling the water for five minutes will kill the germs of typhoid and allied diseases. Chlorine may also be used to disinfect the water. A stock solution is made by taking a level teaspoonful of full strength chloride of lime and rubbing it up to a thick paste free from lumps in a teacup with a little water. This should then be made up to a cupful and diluted with three more cupfuls of water and then poured into a bottle and tightly corked. Add a teaspoonful of this stock solution to each two gallon pail of drinking water, thoroughly mixing it and allowing it to stand for ten minutes. This will give about one-half part of free chlorine to a million parts of water, which will destroy all typhoid organisms producing germs.—Exchange.

WORLD'S BIGGEST REGIMENT NEEDS 6,000 MORE MEN

Second "Lumberjacks" Will Have 10,500 Men When Recruited to Full Strength.

WILL CUT TIMBER IN FRANCE

Loggers, Sawmill Workers, Road Builders and Laborers Familiar With Road Work Are Wanted—Officers of Regiment Are Expert Lumbermen and Foresters.

JOHN L. COBB, JR.

Washington.—A nation-wide effort is being made by the forest service to assist the war department in securing six thousand men needed to complete the second "lumberjack regiment," or the Twentieth engineers (forest) as it is officially known. When recruited to full strength the unit will comprise 10,500 men and will be the largest regiment in the world. Of the men needed now, three thousand should be loggers, sawmill workers and men experienced in building and operating logging railroads, and the remaining three thousand should be trained road builders and laborers familiar with road work.

The regiment will cut from the French forests the immense amounts of trench and bridge timbers, cross-ties, lumber for cantonments and bunk-houses, and fuel, which our armies and those of the allies will need. A similar unit, known as the "First Lumberjack regiment," or the Tenth engineers (forest), was organized in the summer and has been hard at work in the woods for some time.

Canadians Started It

The idea of the "lumberjack regiments" is not original with this country. Early in the war Canadian forestry battalions were sent across to help manufacture the needed lumber and timber products, while last spring soon after the United States entered the struggle ten sawmill units were equipped by lumbermen of New England for service in Great Britain.

Not many people think of France as having much timber. Indeed the extent of the French forests cannot compare with our own. But there is more timber than is generally known. The French have found that it pays to grow a crop of trees on poor, rocky steep land, just as it pays to grow a crop of wheat on the better soils. They have practiced forestry for generations and instead of slashing their timber indiscriminately they handle their holdings with great care and are very loath to cut more than is produced each year.

by growth. They were consequently unwilling to turn a lot of "woods butchers" into their highly prized forests.

Col. James A. Woodruff of the engineer corps was chosen by the war department to lead the Tenth engineers; Col. W. A. Mitchell to lead the Twentieth, while most of the officers under them are expert lumbermen and foresters. Calls for skilled lumberjacks and sawmill men to enlist were sent out broadcast through the land and they came out of the far places of the land to join the new units. As those who could prove themselves adept in some form of lumbering were accepted each man was listed for the particular job with which he was most familiar.

Most of them Lumberjacks. By far the larger part of the recruits were lumberjacks, men who had been raised in the woods and knew every trick of the trade. Others were graduates of forest schools who had had enough actual woods experience in addition to their technical training to qualify for a place. In the ranks of the Tenth are men from Yale, Harvard and Cornell, the Universities of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota in fact, practically every prominent college in the country is represented and the men are working as axmen, teamsters, sawyers, woodchoppers, and the like, as though they had been bred to it and had never done anything else. Many well-known college athletes are included. Jack Hansen, of the University of Minnesota football team; "Eddie" Frey, the Cornell intercollegiate champion two-miler, and George Kephart, coxswain of the Cornell crew, are among the best known.

Sons of rich men are "high privates in the rear ranks," shoulder to shoulder with those who have grown up in the logging camps. Most of these men are members of families long engaged in the lumber business and gave up important positions, at no little sacrifice, to do their bit to help down the Hun.

Given Course of Training.

The recruits were assembled at the American university, D. C., training camp and put through a course of sprouts to acquaint them with military drill and harden them for the work on the other side. As Major DuBois, formerly head of the forest service in California, said, it was "duck soup for most of them." Hardened to out-of-door life under all kinds of weather conditions, familiar with rifle and revolver, and accustomed to carrying heavy packs for long distances, the men were quick to take hold. After a couple of weeks' drill they looked like veterans, and were ready for the big adventure.

As soon as the Tenth vacated the training camp, organization of the Twentieth began. Six of the ten battalions have already been formed and several have already been sent forward to take up their work on the other side. In order to disturb labor conditions in the lumber industry as little as possible, it was decided that qualified registrants under the selective draft law who have not been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for duty may be "inducted" into the regiment. Applicants for induction should write the Forester at Washington, D. C., give their age, a full statement of experience and the names of former employers.

The type of men in the Twentieth is the same as that of the Tenth. Husky, hard-handed, big-boned fellows, who can hold their own anywhere, their officers say they can lick their weight in wild cats any old day and can "log" as many sawmills as there are to cut the lumber.

Go Fully Equipped.

Like the Tenth, they will take with them everything needed to produce lumber, from the "stump to the car," as the trade phrase goes. Axes, cross-cut saws, harness, canthooks, horses, rubbers, cookstoves, complete sawmills, two-ton trucks, grinders, and all the other thousand and one articles found in a well equipped lumber camp are included in their equipment.

Their work will be behind the firing line. They will probably not fight unless the Hun springs a surprise so complete that it becomes necessary to call on all hands. But every stroke of an axe and every cut of a saw is going to count just as much as a shell, and if lumber will help win the war, those 10,000 huskies will more than do their share.

THEATER IS ONE TEUTON WEAPON

Elaborate System of Using Performers to Circulate German Propaganda.

PAY SALARIES OF SINGERS

Paris Sees Benefit of Gayety, Refusing to Close Amusements to Save Fuel—Germans Flood Neutral Countries.

Paris.—Attention has been attracted to the use the Germans make of the theater as a vehicle of propaganda by a recent suggestion that the Paris theaters be closed to save fuel. Fortunately this short-sighted policy has not been adopted. It would have added to the war-worn atmosphere of the capital without accomplishing any good results. But the agitation has served the purpose of revealing that the allies have made no organized attempt to keep alive in neutral countries interest in their language, their ideas, their literature, through their theaters and music, while the Germans have overlooked no opportunity. It is not saying too much to insist that never has the theater been so necessary as now to public life. For today, more than ever, men—soldiers or civilians—need the relief from the strain of war afforded by a relapse into the realm of fantasy, a visit to the unreal world.

Used in German Propaganda.

That it is a mistake to look upon the theater only as a place of amusement is amply demonstrated by the Germans, who have made of it a weapon. Their actors, their singers, their musicians have never been busier at home and abroad as since the beginning of the war. In neutral countries, Switzerland, for instance, from the day of mobilization, the German actors appeared in the Swiss theaters were received from the call to arms.

Since then, in the German-Swiss cantons there has been a positive avalanche of theatrical troupes and of choral and instrumental associations from Berlin, Vienna, Munich, Leipzig, Mannheim, Meiningen, having as conductors men like Max Reinhardt, the two Strausses, Weingartner, Nikisch, etc. This is in addition to numerous German picture shows and dress exhibits with free refreshments, concerts and the procession of pretty models. For all these entertainments free tickets are distributed by the hundreds. The expense of renting halls, advertising in the papers and by posters is borne by subsidies. The Germans don't expect to make any money. On the contrary, they spend much more than the receipts. The word goes out to "paper the house." In Berlin Max Reinhardt was told: "Spend without counting the cost; when you get back we'll settle the bill."

When the theaters are empty it makes no difference, the tour continues. All official Germans and their companions in neutral cities are obliged by military order to go to these performances each night. When the troupe plays its farewell performance the ranking German diplomat or consular representative in each city gives a large banquet, where, so as to make the neutral better understand the meaning of "kultur," champagne is given to him.

Teutons Pay Singers' Salaries.

A German consul sent for the directors of the music halls of the town where he is stationed and told them that whenever they engaged German singers or "turns" they would have to pay them only $1 a day, and the rest of their salary, he said, no matter how large, would be assumed by the German authorities.

That is the reason why, in the music halls of the big neutral city in question, you hear nothing spoken but German.

This striking illustration of the thoroughness of the German propaganda which expends millions for musical and theatrical performances is in striking contrast to the do-nothing policy of the allies in this respect. That is why Switzerland asks: "Does France scorn us, or is she broken spirited?"

In Russia the Germans have established theaters at Petrograd, Moscow, Riga, Mita, Libau, Zoppot, Revel and Odessa.

Emperor William and his satellites thoroughly understand the political influence of the theater. From another point of view, any attempt to close the Paris theaters for economy in fuel or lighting would seem shortsighted. For the theater in the cities takes the place of country gatherings, where several families benefit by the same light and fire. Similarly the thousands of persons—audience, artists and employers—gathered each evening in places of amusement are warmed and lighted in a mass by an amount of coal much less than all these people would have consumed in the same time had they remained at home. To have closed the theaters would have meant increasing the sadness of Paris, the throwing out of work of 100,000 persons, who would have to be fed and supported in some other way, besides antagonizing 48 labor unions. As a high military authority said:

New Value of Crabs.

Milford, Del.—A local factory which converts king crabs into fertilizer and fish into oil has just announced a yearly profit of $98,000. The increased cost of other fertilizer has made the lowly king crab very important.

Johnny Cake Popular.

Boston.—"Johnny cake" (corn bread) is regaining its old-time popularity in New England. The food administrator's order to substitute other products for white flour in bread has revived "Johnny cake."

USE FEWER HORSES ON TRACTOR FARMS

Michigan Owners of Machines Find They Supplant at Least One Man and Team.

TELL POINTS TO LOOK FOR

Michigan Agricultural College Offers Suggestions for Guidance of Users—Simplicity One of Essentials in the Proper Handling.

By PROF. H. H. MUSSELMAN,

Department of Farm Mechanics, Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich.—A virtue of the tractor worth appraising at this time is to be found in the fact that it will release for the production of human food much more land than will be available if horses alone are depended upon for power. Five acres of land, some authorities say, must be devoted to providing grain, hay and pasturage for every horse kept—which, if true, means that for every horse supplanted by a tractor, an additional five acres are released for the production of food for men. The tractor, it must be remembered, operates with fuel which does not require acreage.

But not infrequently there is a vast difference between theoretical and actual saving. A study of the tractor where it has been used shows, however, that it does reduce the number of horses necessary, though not to the extent which some claim. On 27 Michigan farms where tractors are used the number of horses worked has been cut down an average of two, or one team less per farm.

The very light tractors now being offered are in many ways unlike their predecessors in design. They show, among other things, much greater refinement and there is a tendency toward lightness, compactness and the use of roller and ball bearings to lessen friction, while more attention is given to the protection of the engine and working parts of the machine from dust and dirt.

An outline of the features which a good tractor should possess is set forth in the following:

- 1. Simplicity.—This should include good material, good workmanship and good design.
2. Durability.—Under this should come engine parts, bearings and transmission.
3. Well protected working parts.
4. Adaptability.—By this is meant the ease with which it can be used for plowing, tilling, hauling and with belt for cutting wood, filling the silo and so forth.
5. Ease of operation.—That is, its ability to turn in a small radius, visibility of work, and ease with which it can be manipulated.
6. Weight.—This should be sufficient to secure traction and light enough to prevent injury from packing the soil.
7. Interchangeability.—By this is meant the ease with which it can be used for plowing, tilling, hauling and with belt for cutting wood, filling the silo and so forth.
8. Weight.—This should be sufficient to secure traction and light enough to prevent injury from packing the soil.

Among these points enumerated above none are more important in the design of the tractor than the accessibility and interchangeability of parts. It will not be convenient to take the tractor to a garage or repair station as is done with the automobile. Repairs must be made in the field and most of the time by the operator himself, wherefore it is necessary that parts be easy to reach and their removal and replacement made simple. It must also be remembered that the tractor is a rough-season machine and being able to make repairs readily and quickly is highly essential.

The protection of working parts from dust and dirt is also necessary in a successful tractor. The automobile is well taken care of in this respect. All moving parts, gears and mechanisms are well enclosed and arranged to run in oil. In addition the automobile is a machine with speed enough to keep ahead of its own dust.

The tractor, on the other hand, must travel through dry, plowed fields. In the thick clouds of dust, the particles from which are ground into bearings and gears and drawn into the cylinder. The only satisfactory safeguard is complete covering and lubrication of the working parts.

When the farmer purchases an automobile he comes into possession of a machine which surpasses anything he has hitherto used on the farm in complexity, number and quality of parts. He realizes that this machine needs the occasional attention of an expert. The tractor is almost as highly a developed machine from the mechanical standpoint, and it naturally follows,

Another Safeguard.

One of the most curious safeguards taken by motorists is the painting of the spare tire, which is attached to the back of the automobile, with black and white stripes. It is thought that this will aid in the prevention of rear-end collisions.

Electric Dash Light.

An electric automobile dash light of recent invention is mounted on a cable so that it can be used as a trouble light and carried to any part of the car.

therefore, that it should have better care than is sometimes given common farm machinery. The operator should at least have a knowledge of the principles of the gas engine and be familiar with some of the troubles more or less inherent in this type of machine. Further he should have a thorough acquaintance with the particular machine placed in his charge. In the opinion of the writer, a whole week spent in looking over the tractor and in studying the instructions accompanying it will in the end be a saving in time and money. It will be found, if a little time is given to this task, that there really is nothing mysterious about a tractor, and with a few years' use, the characteristics of the tractor will become as well known as those of the horse which man has studied now for hundreds of years.

The tractor, to pay its way, however, must be kept busy, for the investment is large and high costs are entailed by interest charges, repairs, depreciation, taxes and insurance. These charges must be repaid by the tractor during the time it is at work. If it is used but ten days in the year its earnings will need to be great to offset the fixed charges in this time. If the tractor is used a hundred days in the year these expenses per day will be proportional smaller. It may be added that the number of days' work which can be found for a tractor during the year is a better way of determining whether it will be a profitable investment than is the size of the farm on which it is to be used. Some authorities advise 50 days' use of a tractor per year as the minimum number in which a tractor will be profitable.

ORGANIZE POULTRY CLUBS

M. A. C. Puts Man in Field to Interest Youngsters in Raising Purebred Stock.

From Office of Publications, Michigan Agricultural College. East Lansing, Mich.—An extension worker who will devote his time exclusively to the organization of poultry clubs among boys and girls in the rural communities of the state has been placed in the field by the department of poultry of M. A. C. Among other things he will help his energies particularly toward encouraging youngsters to establish flocks of purebred birds.

As in all projects of this kind, however, the success of the effort will depend in a large measure upon the cooperation of men and women throughout the state. Accordingly individuals who would like to see the young people of their district, village or town take up something of this kind—and to learn thereby the value of co-operation—are invited by the college to write in and ask for an organizer. Upon receipt of this petition, and the assurance that at least five boys and girls are ready to become members of a club, the field man in charge of this work will visit them and perfect the organization.

Members of these clubs will be required to select either a hatching and brooding project, or an egg and meat production project, or they can combine the two. Those who choose the hatching and brooding projects will set at least three settings of eggs and rear the chicks, while those who select the egg and meat production project must feed and care for a flock of ten chickens for a period of not less than four months. All members also will be instructed to make an accurate report of cost of operation, income, profit and so on—though in all this, of course, they will be aided and instructed by the boys' and girls' club department of the college.

Clover Seed Supply Short.

Information coming to the college from many sources indicates that the supply of clover seed will be short this season and emphasizes the necessity among farmers for ordering their supplies early. Conditions here have been aggravated by the shortage abroad. England alone has asked us for 20,000 bags—and this in the face of the fact that in ordinary years we import 75,000 bags ourselves.

Pig for Family Meat.

For family meat and lard, an eight-month-old pig, fed during the summer on clover, grass and sweet corn fodder and finished off with a few bushels of old shelled corn, will make the best flavored meat and lard.

Most Satisfactory Churn.

The barrel type has been found by dairy specialists to be one of the most satisfactory churns. The dasher or plunger type requires a somewhat greater expenditure of labor.

Horse is Very Timid.

The horse is an extremely timid animal, and must be handled very gently, though firmly.

Tires Not Doing Nothing.

Few people realize that a tire will decay just by standing idle and doing nothing. Occasional use is of benefit, as it keeps the particles of rubber flexible. So it is well to put your spare shoe on a wheel for a few days every month just to keep it in condition.

To Relieve Tires.

A framework that almost automatically lifts an automobile from the floor to relieve the tires as it enters a garage has been patented.

American Women No Slackers

We can well be proud of our American girls and women. In France and England women are taking up the work of men and showing their ability to do almost all kinds of work. When it becomes necessary women will show their worth in countless ways in factories, offices, and on the battlefields. These are the days when American women have caused to respect love and honor their mothers, wives and sisters. If a woman is borne down by the weakness and sufferings of womanhood, she should be helped by a herbal tonic made with glycerin which has had such uniform success during the past half century. She should be well, instead of sick and suffering; healthy and vigorous, instead of worn-out and weak; bright eyes, clear skin, rosy cheeks—you wouldn't think it was the same woman, and it's all due to the use of a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. All druggists. Tablets or liquid. Tablets, 60c.

What this medicine does for thousands of delicate women, it will do for you. If you're over-worked and debilitated, it will build you up—if you're borne down with the chronic aches, pains and weaknesses peculiar to your sex, it relieves and cures. It regulates and promotes the proper functions of womanhood. This old and tried Prescription of Dr. Pierce's invigorates the system, purifies the blood, improves digestion, and restores health, flesh and strength. Consult the specialist at Dr. Pierce's Invalid Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free confidential medical advice or for free book on Women's Diseases.—Adv.

New Registration Law

A new law passed by the last legislature does away with the boards of registration of the townships, villages and cities of the state. The work of registering is now performed by the city or town clerk, as the case may be.

The object in making the change in the law is said to have been the elimination of the registration boards. It has been figured out that the cost of registering new names under the old plan was about one dollar each.

The law provides that the clerk must be at his office, or at some convenient place designated by the clerk, on the fourth and third Saturdays preceding an election, and on such other days prior to said third Saturday as shall be designated by board, not exceeding five days in all.

It is also important to notice that applicants must appear in person. Persons already properly registered, who have not moved since voting, need not re-register until a general re-registration is called for.

Mrs. Winfield Scott spent last week with friends in Saginaw. Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Passage entertained their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Corbushly, from Lansing, several days this week.

GRANGE NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. James Gates and Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Spicer attended the Pomona Grange, last Saturday. C. L. Coffeen, Lenawee County Agent, gave a very interesting talk on the cost of production. The time has come when the farmer must figure more closely on this cost as a basis for fixing selling prices of his products, which should be the cost of production plus a fair profit.

The next meeting of Plymouth Grange will be held Thursday, March 7th. The subject of "Farm products and prices and the culture and manufacture of sorghum syrup," will be discussed at this meeting.

Mr. Fletcher delivered his lecture, entitled, "The Martyrdom of Fools." It was not only inspiring, but was filled with live facts which he presented in such a powerful and fascinating manner that it was not one dull moment in the entire evening. What the audience lacked in numbers was surely made up in enthusiasm. It is to be regretted that more people did not hear this magnetic speaker, for everyone who heard, was not a well attended as the other numbers on the Citizens' Entertainment Course have been. Mr. Fletcher lectured in the afternoon to the pupils of the High school. The last number of the course will be given Tuesday evening, March 26th.

"ROARING BILL" FINALLY ADMITS HE IS TAKING HAZEL TO HIS CABIN IN THE MOUNTAINS

Synopsis.—Miss Hazel Weir is employed as a stenographer in the office of Harrington & Bush at Granville, Ontario. She is engaged to Jack Barrow, a young real estate agent. Mr. Bush, Hazel's employer, suddenly notices her attractiveness and at once makes her his private stenographer. After three months Bush proposes marriage. Hazel refuses, and after a stormy scene, in which Bush warns her he will make her sorry for her action, Hazel leaves the office, never to return. Shortly after this Bush is thrown from his horse and killed. Publication of his will discloses that he left Hazel $5,000 in "reparation for any wrong I may have done her." Jack Barrow, in a jealous rage, demands an explanation, and Hazel, her pride hurt, refuses. Hazel's engagement is broken and, to escape from her surroundings, she secures a position as schoolteacher at Cariboo Meadows, in a wild part of British Columbia. There, at a boarding house, she first sees "Roaring Bill" Wagstaff, a well-known character of that country. Soon after her arrival Hazel loses her way while walking in the woods. She wanders all night when she reaches "Roaring Bill's" camp fire in the woods. He promises to take her home in the morning, but she is compelled to spend the night in the woods.

CHAPTER V.

In Deep Water.

The dawn thrust aside night's somber curtains while they ate, revealing a sky overcast with slaty clouds. What with her wanderings of the night before and the journey through the dark with Roaring Bill, she had absolutely no idea of either direction or locality. The infolding timber shut off the outlook.

"Do you suppose I can get home in time to open school?" she inquired anxiously.

"Roaring Bill smiled. "I don't know," he answered. "It all depends."

"You know where you are now, don't you?" she asked.

"Not exactly," he responded. "But I will before long—I hope."

The ambiguity of his answer did not escape her. She puzzled over it while Silk ambled sedately behind the other horses. She hoped that Bill Wagstaff knew where he was going. If he did not—but she refused to entertain the alternative. And she began to watch eagerly for some sign of familiar ground.

For two hours Roaring Bill tramped through alders bordered with pine and spruce and fir, through thickets of berry bush, and across limited areas of grassy meadow. Not once did they cross a road or a trail. Eventually Bill halted at a small stream to get a drink. Hazel looked at her watch. It was half past eight.

"Aren't we ever going to get there?" she called impatiently.

"Pretty soon," he called back, and struck out briskly again.

Another hour passed. Ahead of her, leading one pack horse and letting the other follow untrammelled, Roaring Bill kept doggedly on, halting for nothing, never looking back.

They crossed a ravine and slanted up a steep hillside. Presently Hazel could look away over an area of woodland undulating like a heavy ground swell at sea. Here and there ridges stood forth boldly above the general roll, and distinctly she could descry a white-capped mountain range. They turned the end of a thick patch of pine scrub, and Bill pulled up in a small opening. From a case swinging at his belt he took out a pair of field glasses, and leisurely surveyed the country.

"Well?" Hazel interrogated.

"Nothing in sight, is there?" Bill said thoughtfully. "If the sun was out, now, Fanny I can't spot that Soda Creek trail."

"Don't you know this country at all?" she said gloomily.

"I thought I did," he replied. "But I can't seem to get my bearings to work out correctly. I'm awfully sorry to keep you in such a pickle. But it can't be helped."

He took up the lead rope and moved on. They dropped over the ridge crest and once more into the woods. Roaring Bill made his next halt beside a spring, and fell to unlashing the packs.

"What are you going to do?" Hazel asked.

"Cook a bite, and let the horses graze," he told her. "Do you realize that we've been going since daylight? It's near noon. Horses have to eat and rest once in a while, just the same as human beings."

The logic of this Hazel could not but heed, since she herself was tired and ravenously hungry. By her watch it was just noon.

Bill hobbled out his horses on the grass beside the spring, made a fire, and set to work cooking. He worked silently at the meal getting, fried steaks of venison, and boiled a pot of coffee. They ate. He filled his pipe, and smoked while he repacked. Altogether, he did not consume more than forty minutes at the noon halt. Hazel, now woefully saddle sore, would fain have rested longer, and, in default of resting, tried to walk and lead Silk. Roaring Bill offered no objection to that. But she hit a faster gait. She could not keep up, and he did not slacken pace when she began to fall behind. So she mounted awkwardly, and Silk jolted and shook her with his trotting until he caught up with his mates. Bill grinned over his shoulder.

"You're learning fast," he called back. "You'll be able to run a pack train by a day by."

The afternoon wore on without bringing them any nearer Cariboo Meadows so far as Hazel could see. Traversing over a country swathed in timber and diversified in contour, she could not tell whether Roaring Bill swung in a circle or bore straight for some given point.

She called a halt at four o'clock.

"Mr. Wagstaff,"

Bill stopped his horses and came back to her.

where?" she asked soberly. "I'm afraid I can't ride much longer. I could walk if you wouldn't go so fast. Aren't there any ranches in this country at all?"

He shook his head. "They're few and far between," he said. "Don't worry, though. It isn't a life-and-death matter. If we were out here without grub or horses it might be tough. You're in no danger from exposure or hunger."

"You don't seem to realize the position it puts me in," Hazel answered. "A wave of despondency swept over her, and her eyes grew suddenly bright with the tears she strove to keep back. "If we wander around in the woods much longer, I'll simply be a sensation when I get back to Cariboo Meadows. I won't have a shred of reputation left. It will probably result in my losing the school. You're a man, and it's different with you. You can't know what a girl has to contend with where no one knows her."

Roaring Bill looked up at her impassively. "I know," he said, as if he had read her thought. "But what's the difference? Cariboo Meadows is only a fable. If you're right, and you know you're right, you can look the world in the eye and tell it collectively to go to the devil. Besides, you've got a perverted idea. People aren't so ready to give you the bad eye on somebody else's say-so. It would take a lot more than a flash drummer's word to convince me that you're a naughty little girl. Pshaw—forget it!"

Hazel colored hotly, but for the latter part of his speech she could have hugged him. Bill Wagstaff went a long way, in those brief sentences, toward demolishing her conviction that no man ever overlooked an opportunity of taking advantage of a woman.

"Well, let's get somewhere," he said abruptly. "If you're so saddle sore to ride, walk a while. I'll go slower." She walked, and the exercise relieved the cramping ache in her limbs. Roaring Bill's slower pace was fast enough at that. She followed till her strength began to fail. And when in spite of her determination she lagged behind, he stopped at the first water.

"We'll camp here," he said. "You're about all in, and we can't get anywhere tonight. I see plainly."

Hazel accepted this dictum as best she could. She sat down on a mossy rock while he stripped the horses of their gear and staked them out. Then Bill started a fire and fixed the roll of bedding by it for her to sit on. Dusk crept over the forest while he cooked the supper, making a bannock in the frying pan to take the place of bread; and when they had finished eating and washed the few dishes, night shut down black as the pit.

They talked little. Hazel was in the grip of utter forlornness, moody, wishful to cry. Roaring Bill humped on his side of the fire, staring thoughtfully into the blaze. After a long period of abstraction he glanced at his watch.

"What are you going to do?" Hazel asked.

"Cook a bite, and let the horses graze," he told her. "Do you realize that we've been going since daylight? It's near noon. Horses have to eat and rest once in a while, just the same as human beings."

The logic of this Hazel could not but heed, since she herself was tired and ravenously hungry. By her watch it was just noon.

Bill hobbled out his horses on the grass beside the spring, made a fire, and set to work cooking. He worked silently at the meal getting, fried steaks of venison, and boiled a pot of coffee. Hazel, now woefully saddle sore, would fain have rested longer, and, in default of resting, tried to walk and lead Silk. Roaring Bill offered no objection to that. But she hit a faster gait. She could not keep up, and he did not slacken pace when she began to fall behind. So she mounted awkwardly, and Silk jolted and shook her with his trotting until he caught up with his mates. Bill grinned over his shoulder.

"You're learning fast," he called back. "You'll be able to run a pack train by a day by."

The afternoon wore on without bringing them any nearer Cariboo Meadows so far as Hazel could see. Traversing over a country swathed in timber and diversified in contour, she could not tell whether Roaring Bill swung in a circle or bore straight for some given point.

She called a halt at four o'clock.

"Mr. Wagstaff,"

Bill stopped his horses and came back to her.

"Aren't

where?" she asked soberly. "I'm afraid I can't ride much longer. I could walk if you wouldn't go so fast. Aren't there any ranches in this country at all?"

apparently tireless. He asked no questions. What was the use? He would eventually come out somewhere. She was resigned to wait.

After a time she began to puzzle, and the old uneasiness came back. The last trailing banner of cloud vanished, and the sun rode clear in an opal sky, smiling benignly down on the forested land. She was thus enabled to locate the cardinal points of the compass. Wherefore she took to gauging their course by the shadows. And the result was what set her to thinking. Over level and ridge and swampy hollow, Roaring Bill drove straight north in an undeviating line. She recollected that the point from which she had lost her way had lain northeast of Cariboo Meadows. Even if they had swung in a circle, they could scarcely be pointing for the town in that direction. For another hour Bill held to the north line as a needle holds to the pole. A swift rush of insidious seized her.

"Mr. Wagstaff!" she called sharply. Roaring Bill stopped, and she rode Silk up past the pack horses.

"Where are you taking me?" she demanded.

"Why, I'm taking you home—or trying to," he answered mildly.

"But you're going north," she declared. "You've been going north all morning. I was north of Cariboo Meadows when I got lost. How can we get back to Cariboo Meadows by going still farther north?"

"You're more of a woodsman than I imagined," Bill remarked gently. He smiled up at her, and drew out his pipe and tobacco pouch.

She looked at him for a minute. "Do you know where we are now?" she asked quietly.

He met her keen gaze calmly. "I do," he made laconic answer.

"Which way is Cariboo Meadows, then, and how far is it?" she demanded.

"General direction, south," he replied slowly. "Fifty miles more or less. Rather more than less."

"And you've been leading me straight north!" she cried. "Oh, what am I going to do?"

"Keep right on going," Wagstaff answered.

"I won't—I won't!" she flashed. "I'll find my own way back. What devilish impulse prompted you to do such a thing?"

"You'll have a beautiful time of it," he said dryly, completely ignoring her last question. "Take you three days to walk there—if you know every foot of the way. And you don't know the way. Traveling in timber is confusing, as you've discovered. You'll never see Cariboo Meadows, or any other place, if you tackle it single-handed, without grub or matches or bedding. This is a whopping big country. A good many men have got lost in it—and other men have found their bones."

He let this sink in while she set there on his horse clucking back a wild desire to curse him by hell, book and rattle for what he had done, and holding in check the fear of what he might yet do. She could not escape the conclusion that Roaring Bill Wagstaff was something of a law unto himself, capable of heaving to the line of his own desires at any cost. She realized her utter helplessness, and the realization left her without words. He had drawn a vivid picture, and the instinct of self-preservation asserted itself.

"You misled me," she found her voice at last. "Why?"

"Did I mislead you?" he parried.

"Were't you already lost when you came to my camp? And have I mistreated you in any manner? Have I refused you food, shelter or help?"

"My home is in Cariboo Meadows," she persisted. "I asked you to take me there. You led me away from there deliberately. I believe now."

"My trail doesn't happen to lead to Cariboo Meadows, that's all," Roaring Bill coolly told her. "If you must go back there, I shan't restrain you in any way whatever. But I'm for home myself. And that," he came close and smiled frankly up at her—"is a better place than Cariboo Meadows. I've got a little house back in the woods. There's grub there, and meat in the forest, and fish in the streams. It's home for me. Why should I go back to Cariboo Meadows? Or you?"

"Why should I go with you?" she demanded scornfully.

"Because I want you to," he murmured.

They matched glances for a second, Wagstaff smiling, she half horrified.

"Are you clean mad?" she asked angrily. "I was beginning to think you a gentleman."

Bill threw back his head and laughed. Then on the instant he sobered. "Not a gentleman," he said. "I'm a plain man. And I sometimes sometimes for a mate, as nature has ordained to be the way of flesh."

"Get a squaw, then," she sneered. "I've heard that such people as you do that."

"Not me," he returned, unflinched. "I want a woman of my own kind."

"Heaven save me from that classification!" she observed, with emphasis on the pronoun.

"Yes," he drawled. "Well, there's no profit in arguing the point. Let's be getting on."

He reached for the lead rope of the nearest pack horse.

Hazel urged Silk up a step. "Mr. Wagstaff," she cried, "I must go back."

"You can't go back without me," he said. "And I'm not traveling that way, thank you."

"Please—oh, please!" she begged forlornly.

Roaring Bill's face hardened. "I will not," he said flatly. "I'm going to play the game my way. And I'll play fair. That's the only promise I will make."

She took a look at the encompassing woods, and her heart sunk at facing those shadowy stretches alone and unguided. The truth of his statement that she would never reach Cariboo Meadows forced itself home. There was but the one way out, and her woman's wit would have to save her.

"Go on, then," she gritted, in a swift surge of anger. "I am afraid to face this country alone. I admit my helplessness. But, so help me heaven, I'll make you pay for this dirty trick! Wherefore she took to gauging their course by the shadows. And the result was what set her to thinking. Over level and ridge and swampy hollow, Roaring Bill drove straight north in an undeviating line. She recollected that the point from which she had lost her way had lain northeast of Cariboo Meadows. Even if they had swung in a circle, they could scarcely be pointing for the town in that direction. For another hour Bill held to the north line as a needle holds to the pole. A swift rush of insidious seized her.

"Where are you taking me?" she demanded.

"Why, I'm taking you home—or trying to," he answered mildly.

"But you're going north," she declared. "You've been going north all morning. I was north of Cariboo Meadows when I got lost. How can we get back to Cariboo Meadows by going still farther north?"

"You're more of a woodsman than I imagined," Bill remarked gently. He smiled up at her, and drew out his pipe and tobacco pouch.

She looked at him for a minute. "Do you know where we are now?" she asked quietly.

He met her keen gaze calmly. "I do," he made laconic answer.

"Which way is Cariboo Meadows, then, and how far is it?" she demanded.

"General direction, south," he replied slowly. "Fifty miles more or less. Rather more than less."

"And you've been leading me straight north!" she cried. "Oh, what am I going to do?"

"Keep right on going," Wagstaff answered.

"I won't—I won't!" she flashed. "I'll find my own way back. What devilish impulse prompted you to do such a thing?"

"You'll have a beautiful time of it," he said dryly, completely ignoring her last question. "Take you three days to walk there—if you know every foot of the way. And you don't know the way. Traveling in timber is confusing, as you've discovered. You'll never see Cariboo Meadows, or any other place, if you tackle it single-handed, without grub or matches or bedding. This is a whopping big country. A good many men have got lost in it—and other men have found their bones."

He let this sink in while she set there on his horse clucking back a wild desire to curse him by hell, book and rattle for what he had done, and holding in check the fear of what he might yet do. She could not escape the conclusion that Roaring Bill Wagstaff was something of a law unto himself, capable of heaving to the line of his own desires at any cost. She realized her utter helplessness, and the realization left her without words. He had drawn a vivid picture, and the instinct of self-preservation asserted itself.

"You misled me," she found her voice at last. "Why?"

"Did I mislead you?" he parried.

"Were't you already lost when you came to my camp? And have I mistreated you in any manner? Have I refused you food, shelter or help?"

"My home is in Cariboo Meadows," she persisted. "I asked you to take me there. You led me away from there deliberately. I believe now."

"My trail doesn't happen to lead to Cariboo Meadows, that's all," Roaring Bill coolly told her. "If you must go back there, I shan't restrain you in any way whatever. But I'm for home myself. And that," he came close and smiled frankly up at her—"is a better place than Cariboo Meadows. I've got a little house back in the woods. There's grub there, and meat in the forest, and fish in the streams. It's home for me. Why should I go back to Cariboo Meadows? Or you?"

"Why should I go with you?" she demanded scornfully.

"Because I want you to," he murmured.

They matched glances for a second, Wagstaff smiling, she half horrified.

"Are you clean mad?" she asked angrily. "I was beginning to think you a gentleman."

Bill threw back his head and laughed. Then on the instant he sobered. "Not a gentleman," he said. "I'm a plain man. And I sometimes sometimes for a mate, as nature has ordained to be the way of flesh."

"Get a squaw, then," she sneered. "I've heard that such people as you do that."

"Not me," he returned, unflinched. "I want a woman of my own kind."

"Heaven save me from that classification!" she observed, with emphasis on the pronoun.

"Yes," he drawled. "Well, there's no profit in arguing the point. Let's be getting on."

He reached for the lead rope of the nearest pack horse.

from the mountains. And in that case she was far north, and in a wilderness indeed.

Her muscles gradually hardened to the saddle and to walking. Her appetite grew in proportion. The small supply of eatable dainties that Roaring Bill had brought from the Meadows dwindled and disappeared, until they were living on bannocks baked a la frontiere in his frying pan, on beans and coffee, and venison killed by the way. Yet she relished the coarse fare even while she rebelled against the circumstances of its partaking.

"Do you realize," she broke out one evening over the fire, "that this is simply abduction?"

"Not at all," Bill answered promptly. "Abduction means to take away surreptitiously by force, or by violence, or by kidnapping. Now, you can't be any stretch of the imagination because me of force, violence or kidnapping—no by a long shot. You merely wandered into my camp, and it wasn't convenient for me to turn back. Therefore circumstances—not my act, reformed—made it advisable for you to accompany me. Of course I'll admit that, according to custom and usage, you would expect me to do the polite thing and restore you to your own stamping ground. But there's no law making it mandatory for a fellow to pilot home a lady in distress. Isn't that right?"

Hazel, arriving at "Roaring Bill's" cabin, learns that she cannot hope to get word to anyone in the outside world before spring and that she must make the best of the situation, which she finds not so bad as it might be, owing to "Roaring Bill's" consideration for her. The next installment tells of Hazel's introduction to this new life in the woods.

BALLOON LIKE BIG TADPOLE

Latest French Aircraft for Observation Purposes Requires Fifty Men to Maneuver It.

Among the latest triumphs of the French aerial service is an observation balloon, named "Le Cigouet," writes a Paris correspondent. In shape it resembles a great tadpole. Whereas other types are inconvenienced by a wind of from 50 to 55 feet a second, Le Cigouet can remain in the air unless the wind exceeds 60 to 75 feet per second.

It takes 50 experienced men to maneuver it, for as soon as it leaves the shed great attention must be paid to the wind currents, so as to save the envelope from being torn. Attached to the balloon is a wicker car, in which the observer is installed with his maps, charts, arms, barometers, and telephone, the latter fixed over his ears so as to leave his hands free. He is also provided with glass and a white silk parachute for an emergency.

When the balloon attains an altitude of from 2,000 feet to 3,000 feet the windlass to which the cable is fixed is drawn by horses or motor car at a moderate pace to a point near the enemy lines, where a refuge excavated in the soil has been prepared. This accomplished, the observer transmits his instructions by telephone.

Two anti-aircraft posts are established nearby to keep off enemy airplanes. If the balloon is manœuvred the crew bring it down from 5,000 feet in seven to ten minutes.

Kate Field's Prophecy.

When a good many years ago, Kate Field wrote those clever verses beginning: "They talk over a woman's sphere as though it had a limit," little she guessed how tremendously that sphere was destined to be enlarged by the coming of the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventeen. As a matter of course, observes an exchange, the great world war is responsible for the very rapid advance of the world's work. We are no longer surprised to find that women are doing anything and everything that men can do, from driving warplanes to shining shoes. A shoe-polishing "parlor" in which only women are employed is now doing business in Boston, yet even this innovation scarcely challenges attention in these times of shifting conditions.

Our Beliefs.

Aln't it the truth, exclaims a contributor to an exchange; that we believe what we like to believe? That's not an original observation, but its truth was made manifest to me one day last September. We were walking in the fields, a young woman and I. (This is not a sentimental tale—be calm.) And she picked a brown-eyed Susan and began plucking off the petals, one by one, murmuring softly to herself as she did so.

"He loves me—he loves me not—he loves me—he," she whispered.

"Do you believe in that stuff?" said I, scornfully.

"Why—er—wait till I see how it comes out," she answered.

Malze From Venezuela.

As a result of a suggestion from the American consulate, based upon the higher prices for malze in the New York market than in Venezuela, shipments of malze from Venezuela to the United States have been undertaken for the first time on record, and already 80 tons have been sent. If present New York prices hold until the large shipments, as the crop is extraordinarily good.

Win the War by Preparing the Land Sowing the Seed and Producing Bigger Crops

Work in Joint Effort the Soil of the United States and Canada CO-OPERATIVE FARMING IS MAN POWER NECESSARY TO WIN THE BATTLE FOR LIBERTY

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat are available to be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operation.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

Natural Gas

Natural gas is probably formed in the earth by a process of natural distillation from the animal and vegetable remains of past geological epochs, and is nearly the same product as is distilled from the coal in the retorts of gas factories only instead of the heat of fires, the internal heat of the earth, aided perhaps by chemical decomposition, has caused its formation on a huge scale.

Several weird stories written by a philosophical aviator "are told in a recent issue of the Occult Review published in London. One of these is as follows:

"A very experienced pilot, who has flown as often as any other man, told me confidentially that at a very great height he had seen a curious colored dragon-like animal apparently floating in the air, and approaching him rapidly. The pilot became a little unnerved, and at once descended to earth."

BOYS and GIRLS FIGHTING the KAISER

THE boy and girl energy of the country is worth the services of half a million men on the firing-line.

aid Judge Ben B. Lindsey, the famous juvenile court judge, when asked how the children of America could help win the war.

"We are in the greatest war of the world's history," said Secretary of the Treasury William McAdoo in his message to the youth of America, "and we must win this war. We can and we shall win, if the boys and girls of America say so, and mean it, and feel it, and live it, as the boys and girls of '76 felt and lived and helped."

"The nation needs that sort of boys and girls today. Not to beat our drums, nor to load our muskets, but to start a great work which must be done. It is the part of the boys and girls today to give an example of self-denial and sacrifice, to teach fathers and mothers, to teach the grown people of the nation that we still have in every young heart the spirit of '76 when the boys left our soldiers into battle, and the girls fought beside their fathers at the cabin walls. The lesson is 'thrift'—saving to the point of sacrifice—self-denial of everything unnecessary."

Young America needs no urging to do its part for victory. Reports from the schools show that the youngsters are making sacrifices and doing their share of war work with the spirit of the boys and girls of '76.

In Greenwich, Conn., is a remarkable school. It is self-governing, the boys and girls having equal vote in school affairs with the faculty. Every Monday morning the children and teachers hold a war council. Government policies of importance and reports of the nation's needs are discussed. Letters and messages of human interest from soldiers of the allies and friends in service are read and the inspiration of brave deeds and patriotic self-denial is impressed upon the young minds.

Every member of the council who does at least one hour of war work daily is awarded a badge of citizenship. The council owns a large and businesslike gray book, in which is recorded each citizen's activities for the day, and you will find such jottings as these:

"Leigh, age seven: Cutting snips for pillow pads for the wounded, 30 minutes. Knitting squares for comforts, 20 minutes. Pasting scrap-books for soldiers, 15 minutes: 1 hour and 5 minutes.

KNITTING THEIR BIT

"Billy, age thirteen: Chopping wood for 1 hour and 30 minutes and giving money to Liberty loan fund."

"Helen, aged twelve: One and one-fourth hours knitting one sock. One-half hour making newspaper candies."

Who will say Leigh, Billy and Helen are not hard-working patriots?

Every morning the school sends a parcel of knitted work, pillows for the wounded and other much-needed articles to the Red Cross headquarters.

Students of a fashionable girls' school in Connecticut have pledged themselves not to use sugar, or eat bon-bons while the war lasts.

A series of pamphlets containing war lessons which will instruct the school children in the aims and needs of the United States is to be distributed by the government. The first will deal with types of social organization. By the experience of the war it will be shown how interdependent are members of a modern social group. The lesson for the seventh and eighth grades and the first year of high school will describe the life of a colonial family as an example of a fairly independent economic unit. The lesson for the lower grades will deal with the things society makes and uses.

The second pamphlet issued will deal with production and conservation.

In a letter to school officials President Wilson said last August:

"The urgent demands for the production and proper distribution of food and other resources has made us aware of the close dependence of individual on individual and nation on nation. The effort to keep up social and industrial organizations, in spite of the withdrawal of men for the army, has been revealed to the extent to which modern life has become complex and specialized."

"These and other lessons of the war must be learned quickly if we are intelligently and successfully to defend our institutions. When the war is over we must apply the wisdom which we have acquired in purging and enabling the life of the world."

"In these vital tasks of acquiring a broader view of human possibilities the common school must have a large part. I urge teachers and other school officers to increase materially the time and attention devoted to instruction bearing directly on problems of community and national life."

TO OUR BOYS IN SERVICE

By HARRIOT GAYLORD OF THE VIGILANTES

Many of you are in France already; others ply a strange new business on waters beneath which treacherous iron devils hunt human prey; the greater part are making ready to go somewhere "over there" to uphold the honor of our nation.

Once it was your dream to cross smiling oceans to gay lands which stretched out beckoning hands; now the hands that beckon are bleeding and torn, and you are slipped off secretly, suddenly, carrying little except the clothes on your backs, the laughter on your faces, and the courage in your hearts. Winged and followed by our prayers, our "Good lucks," our "God speeds!" our devotion, yes, our reverence, you set forth on this greatest of all crusades.

Yes, a crusade. You were born and reared in a different era, an era of padding living and trivial interests; an era when comforts were good and luxuries better; when making one's pile in the stock market was the goal toward which a large part of mankind was selfishly, unconcernedly striving. Heroism? Yes, you had read about it in books at school. Odysseus, Richard the Lion Hearted, Napoleon, had once given you dreams and thrills. But heroism was out of date in the sophisticated world in which you were setting down to live tame, sophisticated lives. Suddenly this world burst into flame. Across the seas the old era became over night a forgotten age. Uncountable heroes are flashed into being and all in the day's work blew their souls out for God, for homes, for country, in their effort to stem the avalanche of evil which sought to overwhelm the earth. The Crusaders of old were dreamers, fighting for high sentiment and an empty tomb. These later Crusaders were at throat grips with the Giant Evil, broken loose with his legions from hell organized, disciplined, concentrated, and nursed on the unsuspecting forces of God—forces never able to grip him in an iron embrace and stain their eager daggers with his treacherous life blood.

Could you by any chance keep clear of such a fight? We didn't raise our American boys to be soldiers—or did we? Are unseen hands these days crowning our very commonplace brows with laurel wreaths and pinning on our breasts two huge M's as our Disinquinced Service Order? Makers of Men! For this new nation of ours has had its ideals and its heroic examples to which we could point you, and men we have tried to teach you to be sometimes spasmodically, sometimes with white flame earnestness,—men in outlook, men in practice,—and in this strange new world which has replaced the old, to be men at your age today means to offer life and hopes and dreams willingly, gladly, for this man's job of cleaning away the slime the Hun has spread over the earth and making it once more safe for decent generations to come. If the war drags out a weary length, no boy with red blood in his veins will want to face his future unless he has grided himself up as you have done to the splendid, terrifying pitch of heroism demanded in this hour of the world's agony.

Many of you could not wait, but went out in the first white heat, telling the lie which sent you Canadians and thrilled the hearts of listening angels. When at last our American shackles were broken, the rest of you leaped into the ranks of heroes at grips with Apollonius. You have passed beyond and above us! Your fathers and mothers, your teachers at school and college, used to scold and threaten and punish you; now you can hold them up with the bayonet and shoot them if they argue or disobey! We used to shake our heads sadly and fear some of you would come to evil ends; now you are all our heroes! We may not tell you how we feel. We greet you with a glad "Howdy!" and speed you with a gay "Good luck!" while we try vigorously to choke down that lump of pride, regret, gratitude, confound-the-Huns, apprehension, reverence, and still other things which will get into our throats and dim our eyes as we watch you march gallantly away on your crusade.

Where will it end, we sadly ask ourselves? You go out with your fine young bodies, your good brain stuff, your sensitive hearts, because that is the game for men and gentlemen to play. Will you come back with all that is splendid in you crystallized by this experience into vivid, honorable manhood, or are there still to be consecrated spots in France and Italy which you will make forever America's? In the lap of the gods lies your scroll? It isn't the goal that matters but how you run! That American boy whose man's heart drove him to France at the first outbreak of war and who splendidly ran his race to its end beneath a white cross in the soil hallowed by the blood of innumerable heroes, left behind words for you from the heart of his own experience. Listen to Alan Seeger:

"Nothing but good can come to the soldier, so he plays his part well. Come out of the ordeal safe and sound, he has had an experience in the light of which all life thereafter will be three times richer and more beautiful; wounded, he will have the esteem and admiration of all men and the approbation of his own conscience; killed, more than any other man he can face the unknown without misgiving,—that is so long as death comes upon him in a moment of courage and enthusiasm. Not of faltering or of fear."

You will not falter, our fighting men from America! All that is best in us goes with you beyond the seas. Fight for us also a little, we beg you, when you fight for your homes, your country, and your God! Keep us in your hearts as we keep you in ours, and come back to us when the big job is finished, clear eyed, clean hearted heroes, ready to tackle that job of building up a new and better tomorrow above the ruins and chaos of today!

Woman's Christian Temperance Union

The W. C. T. U. has held two meetings during the past week. The one on March 14 was a postponed one, and the one on March 21 a tea meeting. The former was held at the home of Mrs. M. A. Patterson. There was a very good attendance. It was "Mother's Day—The Past," and a splendid paper was prepared and read by Mrs. L. Galpin. After the singing of "America" by members, several members regret very much that they were not there.

The tea meeting was at the home of Mrs. Arthur White. It was one of the best, in every way, that the union has had for some time. The attendance was large, and the program splendid, and the social hour and home-made refreshments were enjoyed by everyone. Mrs. S. E. Campbell, in the absence of Miss Cora Pelham, had charge of the meeting, which was opened with scripture reading and prayer, followed by the singing of "America" by members. Mrs. Robinson presented the Union with a gavel, which is needed by the president, at times, for the W. C. T. U. is a woman's organization. The Union will be proud of it, as it was made by Mr. Robinson from a piece of black walnut furniture owned by Mrs. Robinson's father, Ezekiel Anderson, and is about sixty-five years old. After all business was disposed of, Mrs. R. E. Cooper was asked to explain the purpose of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense. She explained it in a general way, but it will be explained more fully to the ladies of Plymouth at a public meeting, very soon.

The afternoon was then given over to the program committee, Mrs. Lila Humphries and Mrs. Karl Miller. Mrs. Cooper sang two delightful solos, "Morning" and "Night." Mrs. Humphries gave a reading, which was very appropriate, after Mrs. Cooper's talk, "Woman behind Man." Miss Madeleine Bennett played two piano solos, "The Carnival" and "Saxette from Texas," the last one played entirely with the left hand. Little Winifred Draper sang two songs, "His Buttons were Marked U. S." and an encore, which everyone declared just splendid. The meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Rose Thibotson, Thursday afternoon, April 7th.
