THE COMPANY ARTISTIC.

This company gives a program of the greatest variety of any company in the Chautauqua field. Every number is different. Their instrumentation is so varied that one selection on each instrument can be used in many different ways. It can be crowded into one program, with the exception of the ensemble, which appears at least three times. Not only do these artists excel along instrumental lines, they are noted for their versatility, their program also including a dramatic reading. The Smith-Spring-Holmes people know the art of program building and how to please discriminating audiences. Hear this splendid company at the Chautauqua.

PLAN DEVELOPMENT OF PERE MARQUETTE

OWNERS OF ROAD EXPECT TO START AS SOON AS GOVERNMENT CONTROL ENDS.

The executive head of the Pere Marquette railroad are planning extensive improvements and development propositions for that property as soon as war control is relinquished. This will not be later than January 1st, next. The Pennsylvania will then take over the roadbed between Carleton and Toledo; also the trackage between New Boston and Plymouth is being considered as part of the new outer belt line for Detroit on which the surveyors have resumed work this year, after lying up during the war.

The Pere Marquette road is of great importance to Michigan as it reaches into so many prosperous sections that are touched by no other line. The terminals in and around Detroit are to be developed to take care of largely increased business. The relationship of the Pere Marquette with the Pennsylvania will be exceedingly friendly, with a large transfer yard where they cross south of Redford.

Also part of the plans for enlargement of the terminal facilities of the Pere Marquette include the construction of large live stock yards in Livonia township with a modern packing house connected in connection therewith. The live stock industry has been growing rapidly in Michigan during the past few years and with the big western cattle men becoming interested in the cut-over lands, the future outlook for the industry is certainly bright. To properly serve the interests of the farmers all along its lines and at the same time, take care of the developed business in its own territory, the Pere Marquette must develop along these lines, a fact recognized by its officials.

With this idea in view the necessary land has been taken under option in the outer edges of Detroit and also adjacent territory, the representatives of one of the leading packing houses of Chicago has not only made a survey of Michigan, but looked into the local situation, so the development plans were undertaken early after matters had settled down.

One of the spots that will reap large benefits from the expansion program will be Plymouth, where land has been secured for extensive shops, repair and construction facilities, which will give year round employment to several hundred men.

PLYMOUTH MAN BUYS NORTHVILLE STORE

Lawrence Johnson, manager of the Pinckney Pharmacy of this village, has purchased the drug store stock of Thomas E. Murdock, one of Northville's long-time business men. Before this store, which is to be known as the Northville Drug Co., is re-opened for business, new and up-to-date fixtures will be installed. Mr. Murdock will continue to be in charge of the Northville store, and Mr. Johnson will divide his time between the Northville and Plymouth stores.

After a few days' visit with friends here, Mr. and Mrs. Willett will reside in Detroit. Mr. Willett is one of Plymouth's well known young men, who recently returned from "Bessie," Plymouth friends extend best wishes to the happy couple.

LARKINS-DOAN

The marriage was quietly solemnized in Detroit, Tuesday, July 23rd. The bride has been in the employ of the Bell Telephone Co. for some time, and is well known here. The groom has a position with the Pere Marquette. They will reside in Plymouth, and many friends here earnestly wish for happiness and prosperity.

"How God May Be Seen"

Is it possible for man to really see the Omnipotent God?

What was the difficulty with the scientist who boldly said, "I have gained my knowledge to all quarters of the heavens, and have not found God!"

Job answered the question, 4,000 years ago.

10:00 A. M.

"His Master's Voice"

This suggests the picture of the Father with hand held to one side and a look of sternness on his face as he interrogates "His Master's Voice."

The question was, "How can you know anything about God?"

There is less of hunger in our cities and villages were more numerous than ever before. The cost of living is excessively high.

It is like it was with the fellow who used to boast that his father once had a chance to buy the present site of Chicago for a pair of boots.

HARVESTING THE GRAIN Latest estimates by government experts on the harvests of grain, which are now being rapidly gathered, while slightly below previous reports due to unfavorable weather in some sections of the west, indicate that the yield will be in excess of the ten-year average.

Theft of $8000 worth of goods from the store of B. V. Barnes & Son, at Clarenceville, near Farmington, was reported to the sheriff of Pontiac, last Friday morning. The burglars cleaned out the store of all the more valuable goods, packing them into sacks from which chicken feed was emptied and evidently carrying the loot away in an automobile. The store was robbed early in the spring, and two young men got penitentiary terms for it.

Rights of fishermen to fish regardless of the protests of landowners, who imagine water front property gives them the privilege of restricting anglers' sport, is sustained by the supreme court in a decision of the case of Hiram G. Beach vs. James Hayner and others. Mr. Beach owns practically all the land around Silver Lake, Hamburg township, Livingston county. Five other persons, including Hayner, own properties about the lake, together with cottages which they rent. Beach started suit to prevent them and persons receiving their permission from fishing off his land. The court denies his plea, reminding him that fish are public property. Anyone who can get onto the lake without trespassing may fish, the court holds.—Wash-tenaw Post.

Robert McCully and family of Detroit, expect to move back to Northville soon. Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Lovewell, who have been occupying the McCully residence, will move to their new home on High street, purchased of Mrs. Addie Simonds, who will move to Plymouth.—Northville Record.

Clover seed a failure, hay light crop, fruit, excepting huckleberries, scarce, wheat, potatoes, corn and rye abundant is the crop outlook for Oakland county as outlined by County Agent Cook. Apples promise but 30 per cent of a normal crop, and peach trees that survived rigorous winters have since suffered from peach leaf curl. Early potatoes were injured by the early hot weather, and while grain yields are abundant, scarcity of help has made harvesting them difficult on many farms.—Milford Times.

Talk about bumper crops! The local huckleberry carries off the early season honors in this section. Most of the swamps are producing the largest yield they have ever turned out, and the heaviest part of the picking is yet to take place. The price sticks up between 20 and 30 cents. One of the biggest huckleberry swamps in this part of the state is on the farm of Eli Bird in Groveland. It contains between 20 and 30 acres, and this year every bush is loaded with fruit. People are going there for miles around to pick berries, for which a charge of $1.00 to $1.50 per bushel is made by the owner of the swamp. The swamp will produce several hundred bushels.—Holly Herald.

Today's Reflections

It is consoling to us to believe that when you get to heaven there will be no "drives," or tag-days or money-raising campaigns.

Just let some Plymouth man get there with both feet for a while, and the first thing you know they'll be wanting to use their best friends for a door-mat.

One thing about this bone-dry business is that it gave a lot of newspaper men something to write about just when they needed a subject.

We still contend that no man in Plymouth has a right to spend as much for a shirt as his wife does for a muslin dress.

Maybe the reason Kansas had no trouble getting hired hands this time, is a lot of fellows went out there to see if the water jug really contained water.

If you want a fellow to advertise you as a liar for all the days of your life, just direct him to what you believe is a good fishing hole.

One of the best ways to avoid a typhoid fever epidemic in Plymouth is to let the weed-cutting fever get hold of you first.

Germany is the first nation to ratify the peace treaty, and we're almost tempted to bet that she will be the first nation to break it.

We would like to know what has become of the old-fashioned Plymouth storekeeper, who could once afford to sell two 10c articles for a quarter.

It doesn't seem just right to start a presidential boom for General Pershing, when he is too far away to defend himself.

We wouldn't advise any man to get sick just to see if the doctor bill has gone up along with everything else.

We are always pleased to see a Plymouth girl reach the age where she can go away to school. But it's usually a mighty hard job getting acquainted with her when she comes back.

Pups get their eyes open in nine days, but that is a whole lot more than you can say for the man who casts his hard-earned savings into fake oil stocks.

Every Plymouth man believes his wife is extravagant, but you never saw one of them who could prove it.

MAIL SERVICE RESUMED

Mail service to Germany has been resumed. All mail originating in the United States or its possessions intended for Germany will be accepted and dispatched to its destination when conforming to the postal union rates, conditions and classifications.

Cure for Dysentery
"While I was in Ashland, Kansas, a gentleman heard me speaking of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes William Whitehead of Des Moines, Iowa. "He told me in detail what it had done for his family, but more especially his daughter, who was lying at the point of death with a violent attack of dysentery, and had been given up by the family physician. Some of his neighbors advised him to give Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did, and fully believes that by doing so saved the life of his child. He stated that he had also used this remedy himself with equally gratifying results."—Advt.

You can have it to cheer the leisure hours of your vacation days; you can enjoy its sweet music as you sit in the soft twilight breezes. Find out for yourself what a comfort and a joy Mr. Edison's wonderful musical instrument will be to you and all your family—how it can furnish amusement for every mood and every hour.

The NEW EDISON

No Needles to Change
Even records of all other makes sound more human when played on The New Edison

A Boon Everywhere Music's Re-Creation

A phonograph is needed in every home. Most of all in the village, small city and farm homes.

Wherever you may be, whatever your station in life, really and truly the Edison Phonograph, with its laughter and merriment, with its refining, educating and soul-stirring influence should prove a Godsend to you.

On the lonely ranch, at the public meeting place, out with a camping party—and above all in the home—the Edison will do more for you to make life worth while than a score of other articles that you might buy for ten times the cost of an Edison.

That is the only term which can really describe Mr. Edison's wonderful phonograph. For it really creates music anew. It does more than merely reproduce music like the "talking machine." Everyone can tell "talking machine" music when they hear it, but actual tests before over two million music lovers have proved that when the music of the New Edison is heard side by side with the living artist who made the record, the ear cannot tell which is which.

Yes, that is wonderful. But it took no less a genius than Thomas A. Edison, the world's greatest inventor, to accomplish such a miracle. The New Edison is his favorite invention. He worked for years and spent a fortune to perfect it. Now, since we make this liberal offer, will you be satisfied to have anything less than Music's Re-Creation in your home?

Don't Wait!

Don't deny yourself the pleasure which The New Edison will bring for another day. Come in and hear it. Bring your family. We'll gladly play any records for you which you would like to hear. Select your outfit and let us send it to your home on our liberal offer.

EPISODE NO. 13.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Dick and Polly hold one of six pieces of a chart map, the only key to the location of a buried treasure. Scarface holds a sword, and he kills Polly's father, gets her bag and starts after the treasure. Other holders join Dick and they pursue Scarface to the gulf, where they capture a schooner from the outlaws. Landing, they are set upon by a tribe of Aztecs, invited by Scarface, and placed upon a hurdle and plunged into a boiling volcano.

It seemed as though no mortal power could save them. Below them yawned the frightful crater of boiling lava and deadly breath, and into this inferno they were slipping as a raft goes down a rapids. Neither coolness of judgment nor physical strength could avail them here, for the elements into which they were so soon to be plunged would strangle and wither them as a furnace does moths, leaving no vestige of their charred bones as an evidence of the fact that they had ever existed. There would be a sudden leap into the throat of the crater, a moment of writhing in the boiling mass and choking sulphuric gases, then would come eternal oblivion and their ashes would be mingled with the molten flow. Even Dick, who never said die, nearly lost hope as his mind flashed over the situation. With a sad smile he turned to Polly.

"Looks as though we were up against it this time, doesn't it, old girl?" he said as he looked into her clear eyes and thought how well life would be worth living with her at his side. Undoubtedly the brave girl answered him:

"Never mind, Dick, dear. We have loved each other, and it is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. And we have the consolation of knowing that if we are going to our deaths, at least we are going there side by side through no fault of our own and without fear. Scarface and his crowd may gain the treasure, but I have a feeling that if they do it will be a curse rather than a blessing to them."

"I am only sorry we did not do for him when we had a chance," said Stebbins. "This comes of our being white men and having a repugnance to killing anyone who was in our power. If I had it to do over again it would be Scarface and Screweyes, who were taking this ride instead of us. But we have the satisfaction of knowing that we did not show the white feather and are dying game."

Dick, glancing back over the way which they had all, saw the priest and Scarface peering down at them over the ledge from which they had been above. Already the fumes of the pit below were winding around them in wreaths, filling their eyes and lungs and causing their breaths to come in wheezing gasps. Then all of a sudden Dick's heart gave a great bound of relief. Sliding over the lava bed, the hurdle slowed perceptibly as it tipped toward the crater, and Dick, who never despaired of life, was able to burst the ropes at his wrists, frayed by contact with the sharp lava. Grasping a rock he held back the hurdle and, at the same time, released Stebbins, who quickly freed the others.

At the left was a continuation of the slope, to where the steam from the volcano ran off into a small stream, and in this they launched the hurdle and were swept from the scene. Their sense of relief, however, was quickly changed to alarm for dead ahead was a cave, into which the stream of hot water disappeared in darkness beneath the mountains. They descended their predicament briefly, when Dick made the decision:

"The old miller of whom I spoke who was shipwrecked upon this coast, told me other things that he had learned of these Aztecs and this particular part of the country. He got this story from the Indians, who finally believed that it was true. Of course it may be a myth, but I will stand it to you and you can decide for yourselves."

"These Indians told him that there had been a legend in their tribe that in ancient days one of their members had been captured and condemned to death even as was done to us. The members of the Aztec tribe who questioned him about this and in consequence he was precipitated into a river the Mexican and left him bound to a tree. Turning upon his captive Tomas addressed him, the cold glow of a cobra in his eyes:

"You," said Tomas, "are one of the creeping, poison things of the earth. You are like the snake that has the rattle at the end of his tail, and are like the scorpion that stings and the centipede that bites. I should treat you as my ancestors treated all their enemies." Tomas drew his knife and laid it side against the other's throat.

"In the days of my fathers when we made prisoner of a man like you we staked him out on the red strips of rawhide. Then he suffered until his soul went squealing like a rat into the darkness of the hereafter. But because of the white men who are my friends and who do not believe in such things I will not put you to the torture. I will leave you here and see what happens to you." Then Tomas returned to the village to see what had become of his friends and the Aztecs.

Chu's lot was not much happier, for he was forced at once into a life of slavery, and when Tomas found him he was working in a field under guard of a brutal Aztec and the old priest. Waiting his time, Tomas was able to whisper to Chu, who told him:

"Him and little missy and others fall over cliff." He then described the fate of the party. Chu was certain they were dead, but the Indian still had hope and told the Chinese:

"Get me lariat. Me see for myself."

Under pretense of working, Chu went to the house and secured the lariats and the two started for the volcano brink. Making a mask of his handschieff against the smoke and steam, Tomas lowered himself where the hurdle had plunged, and on the slope found pieces of frayed rope and bits of the hurdle. Then he followed the stream to where it disappeared in the underground, and decided Dick and his friends must have escaped that way and that the river had an outlet.

Greatly relieved, he started to climb up the cliff and had reached a ledge near the brink when he heard a cry from Chu, and looking up saw him in the grasp of the old priest, who was threatening to hurl him into the volcano.

Intent on carrying out this threat, the cruel fanatic leaned far out over the edge and as he did so Tomas threw one of his spare lariats and catching him about the neck dragged him to the fate he had planned for the Chinese. Quickly gaining the top, Tomas and the terrified Chu made all speed away from the Aztec village.

Meanwhile Dick, Polly, Stebbins and Teel were having the wildest ride of their lives. Borne upon the crest of the rushing torrent their raft drifted into the bowels of the mountain as a chip is swept into a culvert. For a few moments after they had entered the tunnel they could still see each other's face in the gray light that penetrated for some distance into the entrance, but soon that faded and they found themselves swallowed by the impenetrable darkness. About them they could hear the rush and roar and hiss of the water as it swept past the rock wall, but the blackness had become so dense that they could not see their hands before their faces. Absolutely powerless to guide their craft, they could but sit helplessly as they were whirled on to whatever fate might lie in store for them. More than once their raft striking some unseen object, careened violently, making it necessary that they cling to each other for their very lives lest they be swept to death in the torrent, but each time the fragile craft steadied itself and whirling and spinning went rushing on its way. Dick, drawing the girl close to him, spoke words of encouragement in her ear.

"I think we are going to win through, but if by any accident I should be swept away from you just clinging to the raft and don't give up as long as there is an ounce of strength left in you. Unless my calculations are wrong, this will take us into the ocean, and once we get out in the light again we will be all right." Above the roar the voice of the girl came back to him.

"You must not worry about me, Dick. As long as we are together I have no fear, so save your strength for my emergency that may arise." Greatly relieved that Polly was not frightened, Dick raised his hand above his head to the full length of his arm. A jagged piece of rock struck it, heating it down, and instantly he called loudly to his companions.

"Lie down flat or we will have our heads knocked off by the roof of this place. We are going about forty miles an hour and the top of this tunnel is close over us." Warned by his cry they immediately prostrated themselves upon the raft as it ground and bumped its way ever deeper into the heart of the great mountain. Thus in the blackness beneath the mountains, the hurdle bearing Dick and the others swept steadily along, and when they awoke the morning of the third day they found themselves in the Pacific a mile off shore, but too weak to attempt to help themselves. So they waited, praying that a kind wind would blow the raft to the beach.

Meanwhile, Scarface and his gang had left the Aztecs and headed for the ocean, camping the night of the second day within sight of its shores. And while they slept, Tomas and Chu came upon their camp and rode off with their horses, saddle bags and rifles.

At dawn they had reached the wreck of the Lion and nearby a roofless stockade, which they proceeded to put in a defensive condition in case of an attack by the outlaws.

The latter, cursing the loss of their horses, finally gained the beach and a few rods offshore saw the raft with its now unconscious passengers. Swimming through the surf they towed it ashore and revived its hapless crew, whose fate became a subject of discussion, ended by Scarface, who remarked:

"You all look tired and I am going to give you a good, long rest. Realizing that was coming, the captives could not refrain from shuddering as they contemplated what was to be their fate. It would have been had enough had they been drowned like rats in the depths of the mountain, but to be buried alive in these sands and left a prey for the oncreeping tide was enough to turn the bravest heart cold. Yet they were incapable of resisting, and knowing that it would be useless to ask for mercy, they faced the ordeal that lay before them calmly.

"Go ahead and bury us and be hanged to you," said Dick to Scarface. "If you think you are going to have the pleasure of seeing us show the white feather you are badly mistaken. We will show you how decent women and men can die. You are a pack of miserable hyenas and we have nothing but contempt for you."

Deep holes were dug in the sand and into them Dick and his companions, securely bound, were placed and sand packed tight to their necks. And thus they were left in the path of the retreating tide.

Meanwhile, miles back from the ocean, great excitement prevailed among the Aztecs when the fate of the priest was learned from a child who had seen him dragged into the volcano. War was declared and a large body of warriors laid at once on the trail of the whites.

Scarface's gang found the wreck of the Lion and were making for the nearby stockade when Chu opened fire. The outlaws retreated, little knowing one lone Chinese was holding them at bay.

By a ruling of the federal court of appeals for the Eighth circuit, in a case involving violation of the Harrison drug law, a physician who administers narcotics to an addict must be in personal attendance on the patient and is prohibited from supplying more of the drug than is necessary for immediate needs. Italian Town, Industrial Center, Still Retains a Reminder of the Middle Ages.

Arona is best known to travelers as the station on the railroad from Milan where Lake Maggiore first bursts into view. To Italians it is best known for its plantations of American corn, a novelty in Europe.

Today, Arona is an industrial center, but off in the northeast corner the castle of Angero adds a touch to the landscape which bespeaks medieval importance. The famous Borromeos—they who produced Cardinal de Medici, who became Pope Pius IV—dwelt in ancestral halls on the outskirts of the village.

At the Hotel Reale, a tablet calls attention to the fact that Garibaldi was a guest there in 1848.

That "Arona, Lago Maggiore," Turner's wonderful canvas, was not made from photographs can be gathered from Ruskin's letter, in which he says, "No such hills are, or ever were, in sight from Arona. They are gathered together, hill by hill, partly from the Battles of Oleggio, partly from above the town here, partly from half way up the lake near Baveno and then all thrown together in one grand imaginary chain."

Santal Indian Bridegroom Must Lay Up Money Before He Can Aspire to a Wife.

The Santal Indians must literally purchase their brides. They pay a sum of money to the girl's parents—usually about 100 rupees—and, in addition, they present the mother and the female relatives with new saris or shawls.

Should the bridegroom choose a widow for his wife, she will only cost half the sum mentioned. The reason why the Santal Indians hold widows in less regard than unmarried females is because they assert that in the next world man and wife are reunited, hence a widow who marries again is only "lent" to her second husband.

When a young man courts a girl who does not favor his suit, he adopts an eccentric way to cure her stubbornness. After having dipped his finger in red paint, he goes in search of the lady and imprints his mark on her forehead. Then he may claim her as his wife.

"I will tell you a secret. I cannot marry Emily. There is an insuperable bar to our union."
"God heavens! What is it?"
"She won't have me."

WERE "POOR FISH" ONCE

They were poor fish fifty million years ago. That is the story of the fish industry, which has been the basis of our civilization. It is a story of the fish industry, which has been the basis of our civilization. It is a story of the fish industry, which has been the basis of our civilization.

In the wake of that illustrious vessel, this information may not be as new to students of evolution, but to those who have been too busy to do any research work fish industry may come as something of a shock. Especially if you're a fisherman and have been unwittingly feeding your distant relatives all these years. Some students of evolution are beginning to wonder if man is not a fish.

He told them that they were all more than 50,000,000 years ago, which is going back beyond their earliest recollections, and since then the fish industry has become a center of interest. The starting point of the evolution of man, and how he has come to be a man, is a subject of great interest to all who are interested in the history of our race.
