FREE DANCE ON THE PAVEMENT

STONE'S ORCHESTRA OF DETROIT AND SINGER WILL FURNISH THE MUSIC.

A big crowd was in town last Saturday night to see the moving pictures and hear the music provided by an orchestra composed of the following young people: Gladys Schrader, Daniel Patterson, Russell VanGilder, Russell Cook, Philip Millard and Lloyd Lundy. The music was splendid and would have been a credit to an orchestra of professional players. Everybody was delighted with it and many favorable comments were heard.

The pictures shown on the screen placed on the Sherman building on Main street drew the attention of a large crowd, who were well pleased with this feature of the evening's entertainment.

Next Saturday evening, July 17, another of those popular dances on the Pennington avenue pavement will be given. Stone's orchestra of Detroit will furnish the music and Howard Jefferies will sing again. Everybody is cordially invited.

PATCHIN SCHOOL REUNION

The fourteenth annual reunion of the Patchin school, District No. 3, Nankin, Wayne county, Mich., will be held this year August 14th, on the school grounds. In former years the "boys and girls" have come from various parts of the state and other states to visit the old school ground and renew friendships. "Teacher" says please bring the oldest, oddest and most interesting relics that you have, with a brief history written and attached to each article. These will be taken care of by a committee and suitable prizes awarded.

If you have a "piece to speak," please report to Mrs. Ella Brown Glympe, Plymouth, Mich., chairman of the program committee.

Last year it was decided to remodel the old school seats into benches to use in the yard. Those who volunteered and any others who will help do this work, please meet at the schoolhouse, Saturday afternoon, July 31st. Everybody welcome both days.

THE ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING

The annual school meeting of District No. 4, P. 2, was held at the High School auditorium, last Monday evening, with about twenty-five voters present. J. W. Henderson, president of the board of education, called the meeting to order. Mrs. S. E. Campbell, secretary and treasurer, read the annual financial report and gave the budget estimated by the board for the maintenance of the schools for the coming year. The estimate calls for the sum of $36,800 as against $29,500 for last year. The increased amount asked for this year is due largely to the fact that the board have had to increase the salaries of teachers and the increased cost of fuel. In the election of two trustees, Fred Bird was elected to succeed Dr. Luther Peck, and J. W. Henderson was elected to succeed himself.

KILLING YOUR TOWN

You don't have to get out and openly knock Plymouth to injure it. There are dozens of ways you can discourage improvements and help to hold back the wheels of progress besides open hostilities. For instance, if a public improvement is suggested and your opinion is asked just hint that you'd rather not have anything to say. Or if you are asked to head a committee or serve on one that is pushing some movement for the public good, just refuse to serve, and make excuses. Or if a meeting is called to discuss something in which the entire town is interested, just remain away, or use as an excuse that you were afraid it might rain. Any of these are sure ways of black-eyeing your home town, and will tend to discourage those who are really trying to go ahead. It is not so much what you do to help the town along, as it is what you refuse to do. Talking in a pessimistic manner of proposed improvements before you have really given them serious thought is a certain way to throw a wet blanket over the proposition. And, whether you have any influence in the community or not, the fact that you appear disinterested is apt to have ill effect upon the man who doesn't know you as well as those who have lived neighbor to you for years.

Get up and say something when an improvement is about to be made or when a public movement is launched. If you have a better way, say so. If you can improve on the proposition, say so. But say something, do something, don't help to kill your town by holding back as though you were anxious for the movement to fail through so you can repeat those words of the born knocker, "I told you so."

FLAX STRAW PAPER

Just now, when the world is in the midst of the most serious paper shortage it has ever known, experiments that are being made with flax straw will be watched with interest. Demonstrations are said to have shown that while wheat straw can be used only in the manufacture of a manila or brownish paper, flax straw makes a paper that is almost as white as any we have today, and that can be used for either printing or writing purposes.

Not only would it be a discovery worth millions to its discoverer, but it would be worth a great deal to the thousands of farmers in the west and middle west who have never found any use for their flax straw, and who have been forced to burn it to get it out of the way. We are growing from 20 to 30 million bushels of flax seed in this country annually, and aside from the seed it is waste, since stock will not eat the straw. More than 3,000,000 acres planted to flax each year could be made to yield a still greater profit could the straw be utilized in the manufacture of paper.

The matter is also attracting the attention of Canada, where flax growing is important, and where paper mills have already experimented in making flax-straw paper with a fair degree of success. At least the experiments bring out the hope that enough paper can be made from it to relieve the strain upon the spruce pulp supply, with the result that paper will again get back to a point where newspapers in towns like Plymouth will not have the sheriff and the bankruptcy courts staring them in the face.

THEY'RE STILL HERE

Residents of Plymouth recall that along about the time the auto made its appearance on the country roads of the United States, certain of our pessimistically inclined citizens predicted that they would soon replace the horses of this land. Some editors wrote long articles on the passing of the horse, and all that sort of stuff. And the price of a good horse has been higher since the auto was invented than it was before.

Then came the tractor, just a few years later, and the same condition was predicted as before. But listen to these figures given out from Washington City and compiled this year: There are 200,000 tractors and 143,444 motor trucks on the farms of this country. The tractors displaced from 1 to 2 1/2 horses per farm where the tractors were owned. But in no case did they displace enough horses to pay for the cost of the tractor. The 100, it is declared, that as horses must be kept to do many phases of farm work, which cannot be satisfactorily or economically done by a tractor, they are available to meet the farm needs for transportation of agricultural products, and must be kept in as large number as ever.

There is no question but the auto solved a lot of problems and the tractor is already showing itself to be a blessing. But the man who figures they will put the horse out of business hardly knows what he is talking about, and hasn't either counted or priced the horses in his community recently.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Owing to the unusual difficulties which the village assessor has met with in making out the assessment roll for the present year, the taxes are not yet ready for collection. It may be a couple of weeks before they will be in the treasurer's hands. Announcement will be made in the Mail when the payment of village taxes is begun. The water rates may be paid at any time now. From this time on all monies received by the village must be paid to George W. Richardson, village treasurer, whose office is at his harness shop on Penniman street.

SIDNEY D. STRONG, Village Assessor.

Wild Herds Increase.
In the ten years since the Montana national bison range was established the 37 buffaloes with which the herd was started have increased to 296. In addition there are on the range 126 elk (not including calves of last year), 33 antelope and 13 mule deer. It is believed that the range is large enough to support 800 bison, 400 antelope, 500 deer and 800 elk.

IS CITY OF CONTRADICTIONS

Irkutsk, Metropolis of Siberia, "Forty Hours From Anywhere," Remarkable for its Peculiarities.

Irkutsk is 40 hours from anywhere, figuratively; five days from Petrograd, literally, in the best of times, and much further, in fact, from the Russian capital than is San Francisco from New York. The Siberian metropolis, too far removed to suffer more than pin pricks from the world war, finally fell to the bolsheviks.

"Among Siberian cities, Irkutsk is noted for its churches, orphanages, hospitals, schools, observatories and museums," Gen. A. W. Greely wrote after a visit to it about ten years ago. "It is a city of imposing buildings, beautiful homes, and is given to lavish hospitality, while its extended business operations are supplemented by all modern municipal equipment, including telephony and efficient fire service."

"It must be added that it has in summer nearly impassable streets, that the prevalence of unpunished crimes is notorious, while it is said by free-speaking Russians that the inefficiency of the police is only surpassed by the corruption of its officials."

The city's normal population is about that of Omaha, Neb., according to a bulletin of the National Geographic society, which adds: "Irkutsk had its beginning from the station established there in 1852 for the collection of a fur tax from the Buriats. This curious people still dwells in the Baital region. In them, it would seem, the ethnological east and west almost meet. Their business is akin to the herdsmen of our own western plains; their appearance, with shaven heads and pigtails, like that of the Chinese. In winter they dress like Eskimos, with sheepskins and furs; their summer attire is the oriental gown of silk and cotton."

"The horses the Buriats raise figure in the religion they cling to most tenaciously. This religion calls for sacrifice of the favorite steed at the owner's grave. The less faithful among the heirs, though, have been known to tie an animal with a tether so frayed that the horse soon broke away to join the herd. "One of the peculiar customs which the traveler encountered at Irkutsk before the war was the closing of the railway ticket office for the sale of tickets two days prior to the departure of a train. He was not expected to decide to take a trip to Petrograd (3,792 miles), to Moscow (3,384 miles), or to Vladivostok (2,008 miles) on the spur of the moment."

Romance of Cotton.
The report that cotton has been discovered growing wild, in what was believed to be an Australian desert, opens vast possibilities of new fortunes. The history of cotton is strewn with El Dorados—except for some of those inventors whose ingenious machines of the eighteenth century have made riches for modern Lancashire. Arkwright is the most conspicuous instance of reward following merit. Most of them, like Hargreaves, died in poverty. It is only in our own times that vast fluctuations in the price of cotton have taken place, and that, of course, is due to the amazing ingenuity of the men who made the human-like machines that now do the work of a thousand men. When machinery was first applied in Britain one of these more fortunate inventors boasted that he had reduced the price of a specially fine kind of cotton from $100 to $4 for a quantity sufficient to make a lady's dress. We need him now.

NOT "MUCH" RIVER

Historic Thames Not Imposing to Americans.

Captain Seth Bullock's Humorous Anecdote Matched by Comment Made by New England Teacher on Famous Stream.

When Capt. Seth Bullock, pioneer roughrider and long-time sheriff of South Dakota, was invited by his friend, Theodore Roosevelt, to join him in London, one of the reasons for the invitation was that after his strenuous African and Egyptian experiences and in the midst of his scarcely less strenuous social and political ones in England, "the colonel said he wanted some fellow over there that could help him laugh," so Captain Bullock related, "and I was elected."

"Upon my arrival, seeing that the colonel was being overworked by his many official engagements of state," he continued in a conversation which Mr. Travers D. Carman recently reported in the Outlook, "I decided that he needed relaxation with some plain chap he didn't have to bother about, so I walked him over the Thames river bridge. The river was at extremely low tide, and knowing that the Thames was to an Englishman what the Mississippi or the Hudson is to an American, I waited until a particularly haughty-looking Englishman with a carefully adjusted monocle approached, and, without an inkling to the colonel of what I intended, asked if he could tell me the name of the creek. The pitying, pained and bored way in which the Englishman replied, "That, my good fellow, is our river Thames," served its purpose, and kept the colonel chuckling at intervals for the remainder of the day."

A New England teacher traveling a few years ago with a party of tourists had the pleasure of hearing a comment on the not-always-impressive Thames, uttered in all sincerity by an American of primitive type from the land of far-stretching prairies and the vast Mississippi. He had inherited a fortune, and to please his young bride had consented to a honeymoon trip abroad. Europe, he admitted, had in some respects exceeded his expectations, but in others it was distinctly unsatisfactory. This river Thames, now—

"Lizzie," he demanded, turning to his wife, "you sure this is the Thames?"

Lizzie was sure.

"The Magna Charta Thames?" he pursued insistently.

Lizzie's guide book was in her hand and she was sure of that, too.

"Well," mused her husband in a meditative drawl, "if us Americans had signed the Declaration of Independence in Dan Skinner's meadow, say, or some such handy stretch of land along Skunk creek, mebbe, fer the sake of history, we'd have named the creek over and turned it into a river. Mebbe 'twould have been the river Skames, or something. I guess it must have happened that way with the Britishers. If it wa'n't fer history, Lizzie, I'd bet my boots this creek would be a creek!"

The Troublesome Teeth.

The permanent teeth, 32 in number, appear between the ages of six years to twenty-five years, more or less. The last to be cut are the wisdom teeth, in about 47 per cent of adults, one or all four may never develop. An ulcerated tooth is an abscess at the root of the tooth. It is caused by neglect of a decayed tooth. When the cavity extends too near the nerve in the center of the tooth, the nerve becomes inflamed and toothache is the result. Thus the nerve and the decayed material in the pulp cavity causes an abscess at the tip of the root in the jaw bone. This may produce a gumboll or break through on the face, causing a scar. It may produce serious results, as damage of jaw bone, blood poisoning, anemia, kidney trouble, heart trouble, rheumatism or other troubles depending upon the part of the body affected by the poison absorbed.

Bagdad's Change of Dress.

The war has wrought a wonderful change in the people of Bagdad, not the least of which is their change of dress, according to the Times of India, which says: "In Bagdad today the young bloods are showing a desire to adopt European dress. We cannot imagine why anyone should want to discard the picturesque Arab headdress in exchange for a billycock hat, but there is no accounting for taste. Relief at getting rid of Turkish misrule had presumably to be celebrated in some way or other, and the acquisition of a new suit of clothes, even if they are ready-made reach-me-downs, is undoubtedly an event which would appeal to the suit of Bagdad who, like nuts all over the world, wants to be unlike his elders."

Australia's Oil.

While Australia is offering a bonus of £10,000 for the discovery of commercial oil in the commonwealth, Mexico is likely to absorb oil activities for some time, according to the verdict of G. D. Mendell, a Victorian oil expert who has been touring in western America. He found, he says, that the leading companies are so heavily committed in Mexico that Australia's bonus is not attractive. The British and Australian governments, however, have agreed to test thoroughly former German New Guinea and Papua for oil-bearing territory.

RUNS ON RAILS OF WOOD

Alaska Transport System Supplies 15 Miles of Territory and Does Excellent Work.

O. P. Gaustad of Fairbanks, Alaska, is owner and operator of one of the "farthest north" railways in the world. His railroad "system" consists of 15 miles of wooden rails that stretch between the head of navigation on the Tolovana river to the rich placer mines above, some 75 miles overland from Fairbanks. The motive power of his railroad is a motor car, and it has done heroic work for the last two seasons in imitating a genuine steam locomotive. Mr. Gaustad went to Alaska in the big rush of '08.

"I have a sawmill half way between the Tolovana placers and the head of navigation on the river," he said recently in Los Angeles. "For two years I have operated the railroad to haul logs to my mill, and from there to haul the sawed lumber to the mines. The track is 15 miles long and is of wooden rails. The motor car is, of course, equipped with flanged wheels, and hauls a little train of three cars behind it."

"In this fashion I have hauled loads as high as six tons. In addition to the lumber I haul all supplies from the head of navigation on the river to the mines, and get $80 a ton for transporting them. Sometimes I make eight or nine trips a day, and this year the car covered over 6,000 miles in the course of the season."

"The war brought great hardship to the gold miners of Alaska, for, owing to the depreciated value of the dollar, their gold is worth but little more than half what it was five years ago. Consequently many of the mines are shut down, for the producers figure it is not worth while to pay excessive labor costs to mine gold worth only half price."

"Few people realize the immense distances in Alaska. From my railroad, for example, it is 1,600 miles to tidewater, by way of the Yukon river."

"The gasoline I burn in my car costs me 85 cents a gallon."—From the Pacific Commercial Advertiser.

Queer War Money.

Some very odd kinds of money were brought into circulation during the war, owing to the scarcity of copper and nickel. Germany issued hundreds of millions of five-pennig and ten-pennig iron coins, the latter output of these pieces being coated with zinc to prevent rust. Iron coins were likewise minted by the governments of Sweden, Norway and Denmark. The Germans issued one-pennig pieces of aluminum, and in Algeria also aluminum coins of five centimes and ten centimes made their appearance in circulation. Germany issued muslin notes, and the local governments in that country and in Austria printed paper money of the smallest value ever known, representing one-fifth of a cent. Even more curious was the postcard money issued in some of the enemy-occupied cities in France. It was in denominations up to five francs, and was of different colors and shapes—square, round, octagonal, oval and diamond shaped. This "card money" was guaranteed by the local municipality, and was good only for use in transaction with merchants of the town where it was issued.

No Birthday Anniversary.

It is possible for a baby born this year never again to have a birthday. For this is leap year, and a baby born on the right spot at the right time will almost certainly have no birthdays to keep. This has actually happened to a baby who was born during the voyage from Yokohama to San Francisco on the last day of February, 1904. It is well known that in order to make the actual number of sunrise and sunsets experienced during a voyage round the world correspond with the calendar an extra day must be intercalated or "thrown overboard," according to the direction traveled. This adjustment is made at the moment of crossing the one hundred and eightieth meridian, which runs to the west of the midway point between Japan and California. And a baby born on February 30 must be content to do without birthdays, unless he or she should happen to be on a similar spot at the same time in some future leap year, which would be a rather wild improbability. —Manchester Guardian.

Donkey Gave "Ha-Ha."

I was strolling along a shady lane with the girl of my choice. On the other side of the fence was a donkey in a pasture. I hardly noticed him, for I was trying to frame a proper proposal. Just then an automobile load of our acquaintances sped along the highway a short distance from us, and knowing they must have noticed my endeavoring manner toward my companion, I became embarrassed. However, I managed to blurt out a proposal of marriage; whereupon the donkey, standing there so dejectedly, suddenly woke up enough to lift his head and bray, to the amusement of our friends, who were still near enough to hear it. To cap the climax, the girl also gave me the ha-ha.—Exchange.

Began to Battle in April, 1918.

American combat divisions were in battle in Europe for 200 days, from the twenty-fifth of April, 1918, when the first regular division, after long training in quiet sectors, entered an active sector on the Picardy front, until the signing of the armistice. During these 200 days they were engaged in 15 major operations, of which 11 were joint operations with the French, British and Italians, and two were distinctly American.

Today's Reflections

Any Plymouth girl knows a skirt had better be an inch too short than an inch too long.

A Chicago man predicts we will soon have 35 wheat. We suppose about the same time we'll have the baked potato.

We'd rather live next door to the man with a bad cold than next door to a man who blows a horn. The man with the cold may recover.

Opportunity differs from the knocker, we occasionally meet in Plymouth. For opportunity only knocks once.

Of all the ladies we've ever heard talk, we prefer listening to the one on a silver dollar.

We see in the dailies where a couple of New York millionaires eloped. They possibly wanted to cut expenses so they can have sugar when they start housekeeping.

You never can tell. Many a Plymouth man forgives his enemies only to rub it in on his friends.

There's at least one consolation left us—they haven't raised the price of food for thought.

There's a lot of imagination about this high cost of living business. For instance, the profiteer imagines we are all millionaires.

When a Plymouth woman's heart is all patched up she doesn't wear it on her sleeve.

This day in time a political patriot is one who not only is willing to serve his country, but who is willing to spend a few hundred thousand for a chance to do so.

You've also possibly noticed that it's a mighty easy thing to have a good opinion of people you don't know very well.

These are the days when the job dresses up in the morning and goes in search of the man out of work.

It's pretty hard to tell in Mexico whether the crowd is going to an inauguration or a funeral.

There's at least one thing Plymouth girls can be thankful for—Congress hasn't slapped a tax on spooning.

If you know of an item of news, send or phone it to the Mail office.

ALFALFA SUCCESS ON INCREASE IN STATE

FIRMLY PACKED SEED BED SAID TO BE VITAL—MANY FARMERS PLANTING IN JULY.

That a firm packing of the seed before summer plantings of alfalfa often makes the difference between success and failure with the crop, is the statement of Prof. J. F.

Cox, head of the farm crops department at M. A. C. Many Michigan farmers will seed alfalfa in July, and in lower Michigan during early August. These men cannot afford to overlook the importance of a carefully prepared seed bed.

"Alfalfa is being planted in Michigan at the present time with more success than ever before," says Professor Cox. "This is due to the fact that farmers of the state have learned the necessity of using northern grown seed, of using lime, of insecticidal seed, and finally of preparing a firm, clean seed bed.

"Seed beds can usually be fitted in excellent shape for mid-summer seedings. Were it not for the fact that mid-summer droughts are quite frequent, late July seedings would be recommended above spring plantings. As it is, on ground which is foul with grass or weeds, opportunity is given to eradicate these pests before alfalfa is planted.

"Seed beds prepared during mid-summer are likely to be dry and sandy, however, and since few packing rains as compared with spring, can be counted on at that time, special care must be taken to pack the seed beds firmly with a roller or with a cultipacker. A thorough firming of the seed bed often makes the difference between success and failure with the crop."

Detailed information in regard to securing a stand of alfalfa in Michigan may be had by writing to Director Experiment Station, Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, and asking for Circular No. 97.

THE UTILITOR TAKES THE PLACE OF DOBBIN

If the farmer had a horse that never got tired; a horse that would work all day—twenty-four hours a day if need be—that didn't have to be curried, didn't get sore shoulders and best of all, didn't have to be fed, Mr. American Farmer would say that it was surely "some horse."

The "Utilitor" is the product of one of the world's largest plants devoted exclusively to building dependable power units. It is backed by the Midwest record for nearly fifty years and it is said to have been thoroughly tested under all sorts of conditions.

E. C. Hinkley has sold his bowling alleys to J. Chioiak and N. Jonescu of Detroit, who took possession of the first of the week. Mr. Hinkley has not decided what his future plans will be.—Northville Record.

WIT THAT LIVES

Collection of the Best of Mark Twain's Humor.

Gathered by Albert Bigelow Paine, the Great Humorist's Best Friend—His Brilliance as Editor of Agricultural Paper.

Albert Bigelow Paine, who was a constant companion of Mark Twain for years, who wrote his life and recently edited his letters, has now gone through the writings of the humorist and gleaned the choicest bits. These bits, "the distilled wisdom of many volumes," he has brought out in a small book called "Moments With Mark Twain."

In about half an hour an old gentleman, with a flowing beard and a fine but rather sowing face, entered, and sat down at my invitation. He seemed to have something on his mind. He took off his hat and set it on the floor, and got out a red silk handkerchief and a copy of our paper.

"I said I was. "Have you ever edited an agricultural paper before?"

"No," I said, "this is my first attempt."

"Very likely. Have you had any experience in agriculture, practically?"

"Some instinct told me," said the old gentleman, putting on his spectacles and looking over them at me with asperity, "while he folded his paper into a convenient shape. "I wish to read you what must have made me have that instinct. It was this editorial. Listen, and see if it was you who wrote it:

"Turnips should never be pulled; it injures them. It is much better to send a boy up and let him shake the trees."

"Now, what do you think of that? For I really suppose you wrote it."

"Think of it. Why, I think it is good. I have no doubt that every year millions and millions of bushels of turnips are spoiled in this township alone by being pulled in a half-ripe condition, when if they had sent a boy up to shake the tree—"

"Shake your grandmother! Turnips don't grow on trees!"

"Oh, they don't, don't they? Well, who said they did? The language was intended to be figurative, wholly figurative. Anybody that knows anything will know that I meant that the boy should shake the vine."

Then this old person got up and tore his paper all into small shreds, and stamped on them, and broke several things with his cane, and said I did not know as much as a cow; and then went out and banged the door after him, and, in short, acted in such a way that I fancied he was displeased about something. But not knowing what the trouble was, I could not be any help to him.

Forest Figures. The quantity of lumber cut every year in the United States is three times the natural growth. At the present rate of destruction the forests will have disappeared in less than a generation. The center of the lumber districts has been pushed rapidly westward until today it has reached the state of Washington, and is approaching the Pacific coast.

Graves in House of Commons. Four graves, with real grass growing upon them, are surely an unusual exhibit even in the tea room of the British house of commons, where many strange objects from time to time have been on show. At one end of this apartment there have been for several days past displayed models of the war graves, which have been designed for the war graves commission, which is arranging the battlefield cemeteries in France. Members of the house of commons are thus enabled to see exactly upon what model the graves and the simple memorials are to be carried out.

Would Have Meant Duel. In the heat of argument in court at Kinshel, one lawyer said to another, "It is the meanest thing I ever saw done by a practitioner in court, but I could not expect decency from you or your family, from your rearing. We do not know who you are, or where you come from, you workhouse brat."

Loss of Appetite. As a general rule there is nothing serious about a loss of appetite, and if you skip a meal or only eat two meals a day for a few days, you will soon feel a return of your usual appetite. However, if you skip meals for a long time, or if you skip meals between meals, or if you skip meals at all, you will find that the stomach is a part of you, and it will be a long time before you get back to your usual appetite.

A startling and comforting lecture, a reasonable and satisfying solution to the conflicting claims of orthodox creeds and faith healing sects, this is not a fool's catch, but Biblical facts.

RUSS FEAST DAY

Pretty Ceremonies Described by American Traveler.

Singing and Dancing by Peasant Girls and Boys Chief Feature of the Occasion—Survival of Primitive Customs.

It was the Feast of Transfiguration, and from all the countryside around came the poor, the crippled and the aged. Again and again we heard the tapping of a cane and a plaintive voice asking alms for Christ, for the Christ's sake. Yantsev and I dropped a few kopeks into the bags they thrust before them. The women followed with large pieces cut from the big black loaves, while Ivan in each sack solemnly deposited a great green cucumber. This year cucumbers were scarce, as it was from Ivan we gave cucumber or bread or kopeks, back to each of us came the plaintive sing-song blessing of the beggar. Even the roughest, poorest Russian peasant is moved to profound pity by the spectacle of human misery. His own life teaches him the meaning of pain and privation. But they do not dull his sympathy. They make him more sensitive to the sufferings of others.

New from the farthest end of the village came the strains of music. There was a chorus of young voices accompanied by the thrumming of the balalaika, the clanging of cymbals and the thrumming of the bouben, a kind of tambourine. Clearer and clearer came the music until suddenly around the corner of the church emerged the procession of players and singers. The girls were in the gay rich costumes of the peasants, and the boys wore smocks of green and orange and brightest blue, belted by cords with tassled ends. The instruments were in the hands of the boys. The girls sang in response to the precursor. He was a clean-looking, round-haired lad of seventeen or one of the last to be drafted to the front. In a clear, lusty voice with an abandon of emotion he sang an old folk song, adding new verses of his own as he strode along. Three times they circled the village green, and then gathering on the grass before the church, they sang and danced till morning. The rish and joyous fling of the dancers, the flaming, colored costumes in the light of the pine torches, the laughter and snatches of song rising out of the dark, the young lovers with their caresses frank and unashamed, the church bell at intervals crashing like a great temple gong, and the startled birds wheeling overhead made an impression of primitive energy and beauty. I was carried back across the centuries to the days when the race was young and the men drew life and inspiration directly from the soil.—Albert Rhy Williams in Yale Review.

In the limelight. Wagners are treacherous devices. My first experience with one was in a traffic jam just before I reached the busiest corner in town. I did not know that the horn I gave the wagon had done any damage to either of us, and so, when I swung into the main intersection I planned a perfect remedy. I turned the steering wheel and I felt it lock. I felt for the brake, but in my excitement struck the gas and began circling the traffic cop at four-wheel speed. He dodged me at least three times before I stopped, the exact center of downtown attention. Then he regained his breath and raised his voice for all the world to hear. "If ye are finished with this grand exhibition," he advised, "please go somewhere else so the traffic can get by!"—Exchange.

Necktie Banks Now. The latest thing in coin-carrying devices is reported by the woodmen who are drifting into Virginia, Minn., in increasing numbers. Instead of the old scheme of carrying their stake in their wooden socks, these fellows carry it in a wallet, the lumber jacks and miners now carry it in their neckties. They insert the bills in the lining of the necktie, pin the tie and then tuck it in the front of their shirt. The advantage lies in the fact that one has his bank directly in front of him at all times. Incidentally, these woodmen are wearing neckties this year than ever before.—Philadelphia Record.

Houses for Scotland. Scotland is undergoing an almost ceaseless agitation for more and better houses, and the inquiries are more numerous than ever for American lumber, hardware and machine tools. With all her war loss Scotland needs more than 100,000 new homes. In many cities six and eight families have been living in small dwellings, sometimes one or two families in a room. The Scottish program for 1920 calls for 10,000 houses.

Famous Holliston Elm. Elms at Holliston, Mass., planted about the year 1747 have been nominated for a place in the Hall of Fame of the American Forestry association at Washington. They may have been six or seven feet in circumference during Washington's time.

The idea. "The baker of the show complained that his cake was dough." "I suppose the star gave him to understand that is what angel cake generally turns out to be."

Try One Brunswick Then Decide

The best way to know for yourself the superiority of the Brunswick Tire is to buy one and compare it.

That is, if the very name of Brunswick isn't sufficient proof to you, as it is to most men, that here is an extraordinary tire. Thousands of men who have known the name of Brunswick for years, realize that a Brunswick Tire has to be the best—for a mediocre product could never bear this historic name.

Long before the Overland Trail became famous, the House of Brunswick was established. It was one of the chief users of rubber for fifty years before our mobiles came into use.

No concern with such a history could afford to offer anything but the best. For reputations are built slowly, but can be quickly destroyed.

This is a practical guarantee that Brunswick Tires offer more than the usual, yet at no added cost.

WENERLY "OLD MAN JONES"

Old-timey Citizen, But He Drew Something of a Salary From California Newspaper Writer.

Maybe you didn't know Old Man Jones. He was a printer, and he died last week, and there was a piece about him in the paper. The piece was four lines long and it was on the thirty-sixth page of the paper in the lower right-hand corner under an advertisement about soap or something.

Maybe you didn't see the piece in the paper. No? Well, it is no wonder. There is so much in the papers, and old Jones didn't amount to anything, anyway. At least, he was of no importance. You could not expect the paper to give him any more room when he died. That same day there was a big scandal in high society, there was a revolution in Germany, seven people were caught drinking liquor, a movie "ramp" said her diamonds were stolen, and a lot of other very important things happened. Old Jones was lucky to get even those four lines in the last hidden corner of the last page.

And, besides all that, we are very sure that old Jones didn't and wouldn't give a whoop if the paper never even mentioned that he was dead. He had left the country and was in another country far more to his liking. He was with Socrates and Homer and the old gods and fighting men that he knew and loved in greasy books that he found in cheap second-hand stores and garbage cans where they had been discarded.

Maybe a sunny hour he spent with old Jones, learning from him things we never knew before. For 50 years he had read books that opened up Paradise to him. His life was spent happily. Death meant to him merely another journey which, at the last, he was eager to take. He was very wise and always very kind, and usually poor.

Now, he is with 10,000 yesterdays and as quickly forgotten as though he had been a king or a millionaire. Good-by, old Jones. Give our kindest regards to Socrates and all the other fellows out yonder in the Shadow Land.—Los Angeles Times.

No Flirting in Fiji Islands. Serequloni meet in any form of social intercourse in the islands of Fiji. The boys never flirt with, nor even seem to notice the girls. In public there is a never diminishing distance between them, giving the island an appearance of being a world without love-making, and portraying primitive life as unromantic. The girls are shy, and unmailed a timid reticence.

Sydney Greenbie, writing in Harper's Magazine, says the male Fijian is extremely timid, but, for all that, none the less fastidious. The care with which he trims and curls his hair would put to shame any impatient husband of the vainest of white women. The Fijian is particular about his hair without being necessarily girlish in his ways. Curls are made by a fine substance for soap, made of a mixture of burnt coral with water. This is left in the hair for a day or two. When washed out and dried the hair is curled and combed and anointed. It is excellent from the point of view of sanitation, and makes the Fijian proud of his hair.—Exchange.

Florida's Old Sugar Mill. The old sugar mill at New Smyrna, Fla., about 12 miles down the coast from Daytona, stands amid moss hung trees, as a picturesque and legend haunted relic of the ill-fated colonizing enterprise that in 1769 brought 1,500 Minorcans, Greeks and Italians to that region, and for a few brief years thereafter transformed seven miles of vine tangled swamp land, along the coast into orderly little plantations where grew Indian corn, cotton, rice, indigo plants and sugar cane. And it was probably for the crushing of this cane, a plant no longer grown in the vicinity, that the colonists built the old mill. The walls and machinery beds they made of coquina, a soft, whitish stone formed of broken shells and corals, cemented together by nature. The iron crushing machinery itself probably erected at a later period to replace the colonists' cruder apparatus, is nevertheless remarkable for its century long resistance to the fierce corrosion of the tropic damp, which quickly consumes unpainted ironwork.

MARKS END OF TWO TOWNS

Abandonment of Ill-Starred Western Enterprise Has Now Been Definitely Established.

The final chapter of the tragedy of two abandoned cities in the Antelope valley was written by the board of supervisors when the names of the towns of Little Rock and Tierra Bonita were erased from the records, says a recent issue of the Los Angeles Express.

By formal resolution the streets and avenues of the dead cities were abandoned and the sites returned to the status of agricultural land.

W. C. Petchner, representing agriculturists of the Antelope valley, who now seeks to plant pear orchards on the sites of the two "boom cities" of 30 years ago, told the story of their ill-starred existence.

"Little Rock and Tierra Bonita were laid out about 30 years ago by a Chicago syndicate, following the chimerical colonization of the district by Englishmen who came over the sea, sponsored by the London Daily Telegraph, to manufacture newspaper print paper pulp out of the fiber of the yucca palms that covered the desert at that time," said Petchner.

"The scheme sounded great and looked fine on paper, but it lasted only about one year. The towns, which had been formally laid out, still persisted on the records, and the streets, avenues and squares could not be abandoned until a law had been passed making it possible to do so.

"The English colonists long since have scattered to the four corners of the earth and but few remember the boom that was created over the yucca pulp mill and the shipping of fiber. Now the forbidding desert of those years has been changed into the abundant pear orchards of today. The remains of the houses are being cleared away, and where the coyote and jack-rabbit roamed among the stark remnants of the collapsed boom the pear trees are blossoming forth a promise of a bumper crop."

About Bread.

Bread is the staff of life, but few of us know why certain kinds of bread make a more sturdy staff than other kinds. An expert has stated that if while wheat bread had been eaten and white bread forbidden, the present national decay of teeth would never have happened. Flour made from the whole grain has twice the protein and only a third of the water in ordinary "white" flour. Bread is such an excellent food because but 4 1/2 per cent of its solids escape absorption by the body. If milk were drunk with bread practically every crumb would be absorbed in nutriment. Ordinary white bread contains 40 per cent of water. The "fat" in bread is just 1 per cent of its total ingredients. The rest is made up of protein (the basis of life), starch, sugar, dextrin, cellulose (indigestible), and mineral matter. New, moist bread is extremely hard to digest because it produces no appreciable flow of saliva in the mouth during mastication. A slice of ordinary day-old bread is not digested until it has been in the stomach two and a half hours. Wheat can be eaten in its entire state, if soaked for a long time in water, then boiled in milk, and sugar added. This is the ancient "frumenty." Real brown bread is made from stone-ground flour, manufactured from the whole grain.

BIBLE FOR CHINA

New Translation Has Been the Work of Many Years.

Said to Be the First Ever Put into the National Language of the Race, and Almost Perfect Literary Production.

After continuous labor extending over more than a quarter of a century by Chinese and foreign scholars, the announcement is made a new translation of the Bible has been completed for the Chinese people. The publication of this translation at an early date, under the title of the "Revised Mandarin Bible," is announced by the American Bible society. The completion of the work will, it is stated, place this particular version in the hands of more individuals than were ever reached by any other translation. There have been Bibles in China for many years, of course, millions of them, but the forthcoming issue will be the first translated into the national language of the Chinese, and it is claimed that it will be the most nearly perfect literary production in the Chinese republic.

It will be interesting to many observers the world over to take careful note in the years to come of the effect of this translation upon the masses of the people of China. From the point of view of the western world, China is not rich in literature. This estimate is not disputed by many of the Chinese educated in America and European colleges. Confucius, when he edited what the Chinese denominate the sacred canons, in the sixth century before the Christian era, prescribed the model of Chinese literary form, and reached, in the belief of his followers, the pinnacle of philosophic wisdom. These classics, including the works edited and actually written by those who called themselves his disciples, possibly excel, in literary merit at least, the works of any other ancient civilization, and it is true that no other written words have for so many centuries molded the character, culture, morals and government of so great a nation. The generation given throughout the centuries to the wisdom of Confucius has, because of the constant study of his philosophy, preserved the language almost unchanged for thirty centuries, and set a permanent standard in the nation's literature. In one of the books of this great series, that known as the "Analects" of Confucius, in which his views and maxims are recalled by his disciples, there are given what purport to be accounts of the habits and records of the teachings of the great Chinese moralist. In it there is found the sage's text on altruism, called the golden rule in its Chinese form, which, translated, reads: "What you would not others should do unto you, do not unto them."—Christian Science Monitor.

The Longest Tunnel.

The longest and largest tunnel in the world will probably soon be built under the Hudson river to connect New York with New Jersey. There are several tunnels large enough for a railroad train but the new tube under the river is to be large enough to allow two or three large teams of automobiles to run abreast. The tunnel will be much more than a mile in length and thirty feet or more in diameter. It is estimated that 6,046 vehicles can pass in both directions every hour in such a tunnel, which is more than twice as many as pass up and down Fifth avenue, probably the busiest street today in the world. The great problem of the tunnel is to provide ventilation, since the tube will be 3,800 feet long between the ventilating shafts. Fresh air will be forced in and the bad air allowed to escape by an elaborate system of pipes.—Boys' Life.

To Irrigate Egypt.

A project for obtaining control of the waters of the Upper Nile is being seriously contemplated. The work will extend over a generation, and involve the expenditure of tens of millions of dollars, affecting the entire future of irrigation throughout the Nile basin. A commission has already been formed and consists of three members; an irrigation engineer, nominated by the government of India, as president, and a British physicist, nominated by the University of Cambridge, and an irrigation engineer, nominated by the government of the United States, constitutes the third member.

Jimmy's Role.

Billy's mother heard a great commotion in the yard when he was playing with some other boys. Looking out, she saw him chasing one of his playmates around the yard, who was making an outcry at every jump. "Why, Billy," she called, "whatever are you doing?" "Oh, I'm running a blind pig and Jimmy's playing he's the pig," was the breathless reply.

Chance to Experiment.

"Our girl is anxious to get into the wind." "Then let her come down to our office building and try the entrance revolving door when a crowd of messenger boys are going through."

Very Cheering.

"The man who never makes a mistake never makes anything." The chap who originated this remark was a friend to humanity.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

During the past month members of the state police have been heavily engaged in the vicinity of Howell, Pinckney, Fowlerville and Brighton, checking up the auto drivers who were not equipped with drivers' licenses.

WHEN THEY DROVE THE HUNS

No American Who Took Part in the Capture of Berzy Will Ever Forget the Thrill.

The fall of the plateau south of Solissons and the thrust across the Chateau-Thierry road sealed the fate of the great Marne salient. The idea of the Twenty-eighth Infantry, First Division, made this success possible by their grim tenacity in driving the Germans out of Berzy after being repeatedly repulsed in their brave efforts to take the place.

But, despite every effort, the grim walls of Berzy still loomed ahead beyond the shell-pocked strip of upland as the summer twilight faded from the sky. Through the night its guns, like those of a beleaguered fortress, continued to flame. In it stood at bay the last German garrison of that "plateau south of Solissons," with the whole western front of the Marne salient planned upon it, which had for so long held a black menace over Paris.

Now and then there is a man who conceals a timid heart behind a long, drooping mustache and the general appearance of a western sheriff of the days of Jesse James, but Gen. Beaumont E. Beck is not one of them. As the second hand of his watch marked 30 minutes past 8 and the large bell, General Beck stretched his long legs out in front of the first wave, advised his men in no mincing words to follow him and get the "H" boches this time, and led off the streaming rush across the open.

They followed—who would not with such a leader? On and on they went toward the hot muzzles that flamed through the cracks of split walls and behind fallen masses of masonry, on past those muzzles, yelling, cursing, striking down with swinging blows the desperately resisting Germans behind; on by the massive quadrangle of buildings in the western edge of the village, past the ravished church and down the crooked main street until they pulled up where the road pitched down into the Crise valley and against the last eastern walls of the hamlet on which patterned bullets from the German nests clattered beyond the valley.—Joseph Mills Hanson in the House Speaker.

That Troublesome Apostrophe.

The woman living next door to the schoolhouse was a splinter of uncertain age. And she seemed to put in most of her time watching the schoolhouse so that she could find some reason for complaints. Many had come and many had been settled in a way that had caused sorrow to the boys of the school. And this spring came a new one. During a ball game in the school yard several of the boys had occupied as their grand stand seats the roof of the lady-next-door's chicken house. The principal was inclined to stand with the boys, so she made their punishment very light. They were to write a note of apology to the woman. The note was written and dispatched one morning. That afternoon brought a fiery splinter to the building. She said the note was insult added to outrage. The principal took the note and read, "We, the boys of the N— school, offer our apology for sitting on the old hen's house during our ball game last Friday." The boys said it was all the fault of a misplaced apostrophe. The teacher was wise.—Indianapolis News.

Locomotive's Low Rank.

Rated according to their efficiency, the locomotive stands at the bottom with an average efficiency of 6 per cent, followed by the compound non-condensing engine, 10 per cent; the compound condensing engine, including boiler, 13 per cent, and the Parsons turbine, including the boiler 17 per cent. When we come to the internal combustion engine there is a decided jump. The automobile motor is credited with 23 per cent, the airplane motor with 27 per cent, the coal gas stationary engine with 30 per cent, and the average Diesel engine with 34 per cent. On reaching that modern development in which the internal combustion and the steam engine are combined, we get for the Still engine an efficiency (actually obtained) of 41 per cent, and Doctor Dawson sets down the probable future efficiency of the Still-Diesel combination at 44.5 per cent.

Cost of Marriage in Austria.

The high cost of marriage is causing general discontent in Austria, according to a Vienna newspaper received in New York. The cost of marriage now is 240,000 crowns for the bride alone. This is equivalent to about $8,000, counting the crown as worth 2 1/2 cents. This amount would buy 33,000 crowns worth of dresses, linen 44,000 crowns and furniture 104,000 crowns. In Austria it is customary for the bride to furnish the house as well as provide her trousseau.

London Road to Last a Century.

A system of road-making, which is described as likely to last 100 years, has been adopted by Marybone borough council in repaving a portion of Oxford street, London. The old foundations have been cleared and concrete to a depth of about eighteen inches is being put down. On this wooden blocks with one coating of concrete and two of tar are being fitted.

The following resolution was offered by Henderson and supported by Daggett:

Resolved, That whereas under the franchise now held by the Plymouth & Northville Gas Company providing for the manufacture and sale of gas within the village of Plymouth, and an amendment thereto, being Section 3 1/4 thereof, passed affirmatively by the vote of the people at a special election held on the 30th day of June, 1920, it is provided that a readjustment and revision of the rates to be charged for gas in said village be made at each three year period, beginning July 1, 1920.

And Whereas, it appears through certain facts and representations that have come to our attention that it is impossible, without serious loss and damage to such gas company, to furnish gas to its consumers at the price named in such franchise and that from such information we believe that a fair and reasonable charge during the current three year period beginning July 1, 1920, would be the sum of $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, subject to a discount of 20c per thousand cubic feet. Therefore, be it Resolved, That under the power contained in such Section, the Village of Plymouth, on its part, does agree that the maximum price to be charged for gas by said company during the three year period beginning July 1, 1920, shall be $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, subject to a discount of 20c per thousand cubic feet if paid at any time on or before the 15th day of the month next following the fiscal month for which bill for said gas be rendered, and that no change shall be made in the minimum charge of 50c per month at which gas will be furnished to consumers through any one meter. Upon the acceptance, in writing, of said Gas Company of the proposed revision, as above outlined, at any time within thirty days from this date, the said provision as to the price for the three year period beginning July 1, 1920, shall be effective.

Yes—Commissioners Burrows, Daggett, Henderson, Robinson. No—None. Carried.

On motion of Henderson, supported by Robinson, the Commission adjourned.

FIRE BLIGHT HITS MICHIGAN ORCHARDS

PARASITIC DISEASE REPORTED ON INCREASE FOLLOWING TREE GROWTH AFTER LAST RAINY PERIODS.

Fire blight, a parasitic disease common to apples and pears and sometimes found on plums, is reported as having developed considerably in the state following the recent rainy periods which caused rapid tree growth. Great orchard damage is caused by the disease, as it can destroy flowers, leaves, twigs, branches and even the entire tree. Prompt action is necessary to prevent serious damage in orchards, according to Dr. G. H. Coons, plant pathologist, at the Michigan Agricultural college. Dr. Coons gives the following information regarding fire blight, which will be of value in aiding orchardists to recognize the disease:

"Fire blight attacks all parts of the tree except the roots. The different kinds of attack are sometimes given special names, but it is important that growers recognize that these are all evidences of the same disease. For example, fire blight exists as a blossom or twig blight. It also produces a rot of the fruit, but in its most serious form it produces a limb canker, which may develop into a 'body blight.' This disease shows very distinctive signs. In the case of blighted twigs we have a very well-marked indication, viz., the twigs are killed and the leaves, browned or blackened, cling to them tightly.

"Fire blight is a quick-working disease and the leaves wither on the dead stems exactly as if the twigs were broken from the tree. If the effect on the twigs were the whole story, no fruit grower would need be greatly alarmed on account of fire blight, but the disease does not stop at the twig, for it works down into the smaller branches and from them into the large limbs, reducing cankers. The limb canker may take a good-sized limb or it may even kill main branch and thus cut a tree in two.

"The bacteria which causes the disease live over winter in the limb cankers. When the growth begins, the bacteria increase in number and ooze out in sticky drops from the cracks in the bark. Insects visiting these bacterial masses carry the germs to the flowers, twigs or leaves. In the case of flowers the disease works down the flower stalk into the twigs. In the case of water spots, the disease gets to the trunk of the tree immediately and produces a body blight. This results in the death of the entire tree.

GUN CLUB MEMBERS TAKE NOTICE

A meeting of the gun club will be held at the trap grounds, at Northville, Saturday afternoon, for the double purpose of erecting a small shed for storage purposes, and electing a captain for the club. The business meeting will follow immediately after the erection of the shed. John Patterson will be in charge of the building. We ought to decide on a name for the club at this meeting. Someone has suggested the name, "The United Rifle & Gun Club." Bring your hammer, your saw and your suggestions, and bring your friends. There will be no shooting. There will be some work. Let's all turn out and no one will have to do any more work. The shooting section to the club would attract the attention of a large number, and would be a valuable addition to the club. Perhaps the ladies would like to try archery. This is a fine, clean amusement, and offers unusual opportunities for the development of skill and quick judgment of eye.

The following are especially requested to attend and bring their friends. All interested are most cordially invited. This is a meeting in the open, with no attempt at concealment of the purposes of the club. From Plymouth: Matt Powell, W. W. Murray, Merle Murray, Fred Rhead, Roy Wheeler, A. Esser, J. Patterson, L. Cameron, C. Rathburn, W. Baxter, W. Tadd, P. Woodard, F. Whitbeck, T. Passage, W. Pettigill, F. Rambo, A. Hall.

Applications for membership will be accepted at this meeting. We ought to launch a trophy event. How about it. Everybody come and boost.
