DAISY-MARKHAM PICNIC GREAT SUCCESS

TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY-ONE EMPLOYEES AND FRIENDS ENJOY PLEASANT DAY AT BOB-LO.

Saturday, July 31, turned out to be a fine day, and the Markham and Daisy employes, who attended the picnic at Bob-Lo, were correspondingly happy. They were accompanied by the morning boat carried 261 employes and friends, and at 11:00 o'clock they assembled for the sports before dinner. The winners of the 50-yard dash for boys were: Allen, Fox and Herrick in the order named; Clifford Cline and Edna Gotta won the necktie race, while Ed. Watson and Mrs. Honey were second. From the looks of the results, the men had better continue to tie their own neckties. The 50-yard dash for girls brought in Florence Cline, Bernice Cline and Gertrude Mankin in the order named.

A good supply of cats were the next subject to attack, and they were soon stowed away. A leap frog race next took the center of the stage, and returned Jim Honey and Harold Julliffe of Markham, as winners, with Fred Palky and Elmer Schulski of Daisy second. They have got their hops in Amherstburg.

The 50-yard dash for ladies resulted in a win for Grace Miller and Lavina Heister took second. In the three-legged race, Harold Julliffe and Jim Honey were again 1st, and Fred Palky and Elmer Schulski, second.

The tie of war was a walk-away for the Daisy. Markham's clutch must have been slipping.

The ball game was more of a real contest, however, resulting in a 10-6 win for Daisy. Honey and Dethloff pitched good ball and received good support. Homer Williams, Daisy manager, stopped a fast one behind the bat and caved in, but responded to first aid. No other casualties reported.

WELL KNOWN PLYMOUTH LADY DIES

MRS. IRENE PATTERSON DIED AT THE HOME OF HER DAUGHTER IN THIS VILLAGE, LAST SATURDAY MORNING.

Mrs. Irene Patterson, one of Plymouth's oldest and most highly esteemed ladies, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Henderson, last Saturday morning, at the age of 80 years. Mrs. Patterson had been in failing health for some time. The funeral services were held from the home of her daughter, Tuesday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. S. Conger Hathaway officiating. Interment in Riverside cemetery.

Miss Irene Whipple was born in the town of Plymouth, January 25, 1840. She was married at the same place in 1858, to Thomas Patterson, who departed this life February 17, 1912. Four children were born to this union, three daughters and one son: Mrs. J. H. Loomis (deceased); Mrs. J. W. Henderson of Plymouth; Mrs. Frank Duffee of Novi, and John Patterson of Plymouth. There are two sisters living: Mrs. Hulda Everett of Plymouth, and Mrs. Theodore Burden of Thompsonville, Mich; also three grandchildren and one great grandchild. With the exception of a few years lived near Fowlerville, most of her long life was spent in and about Plymouth. In the latter place she became a member of the First Presbyterian church and continued faithfully therein until the time of her death.

PICTURES AND MUSIC SATURDAY NIGHT

The free dance on the Penniman avenue pavement, last Saturday evening, drew out a large crowd. Stone's orchestra and singer of Detroit, furnished excellent music for the occasion, and everybody enjoyed a most pleasant evening.

The attractions for next Saturday evening, August 7th, will be free moving pictures and music by Patterson's orchestra. Everybody is cordially invited to come and bring their neighbors.

POSTOFFICE IN NEW LOCATION

The local postoffice has been moved from the Masonic block, where it has been located for many years, to the new bank building on Penniman avenue, just four doors east of the old office. The office was moved Monday, and Tuesday morning Postmaster Hill and his assistants were serving patrons at the new location. The present office is conveniently arranged, is modern in all respects and a credit to the village. Much new equipment has been provided, which will greatly facilitate the handling of the business. New filing cases, sorting tables, stock cabinets, etc., have been installed. Each employe is provided with a steel locker in which to keep personal belongings. The lobby is large and well lighted. Two writing desks have been provided. A large bulletin board hangs on the wall, on which various notices, etc., can be posted.

TAX RATE IS LOWER THIS YEAR

The village tax roll is now in the hands of the village treasurer, Geo. W. Richwine, and taxpayers can pay their taxes on and after Monday, August 16th. The tax rate this year is 2 mills, a reduction of 6 mills from the rate of last year. The lower rate is made possible by the increased valuation, which is approximately 78 1/2 per cent more than that of last year. The total valuation of real and personal property in the village is approximately $3,104,000. The annual budget as made up by the Board of Estimates calls for approximately $27,982 to run the village for the next year.

HOLCOMB-RIDE

B. J. Holcomb, a teacher in the Plymouth schools, was married to Miss Jannette Rice, at the bride's home in Birmingham, Mich., at high noon, Wednesday, August 4th, Rev. Frank M. RAILROAD MAN FATALLY BURNED

Norman Drews, who has been employed in the local railroad yards, was fatally burned by an explosion of gasoline, Wednesday evening. Mr. Drews and a fellow employe, carrying a lighted lantern, entered a car which contained a barrel of gasoline, which in some manner must have become open and resulted in an explosion. The injured man was taken to Providence hospital, Detroit, where he died yesterday afternoon. At the time we go to press no arrangements had been made for the funeral.

PIN HIM DOWN

Occasionally you hear a Plymouth man criticizing this country. The next time you do, pin him down. Make him tell you what country he thinks is better than this one, and why. Have him give a remedy for whatever evil he complains of. Let him propose a system of government that would work better than this, or a plan of living that would work out to greater advantage than the one under which we are now living.

Ask him under what government are the conditions of living as good as they are here; where else is food more abundant; where is as easy to earn the price of a meal as in America; where are the people as well clothed as in the United States; where is employment as easily obtained; where is there greater security for life or better protection to property; where can you find as little poverty and want; where are class distinctions so easily broken down; where have the people the power to change their laws like they have in America, and where on the face of the globe is there another country that is run according to the rule of the majority.

There are a thousand more questions along the same line that might be asked of the man who complains. It is all very well to find fault, but when a person does so he ought to have in mind something to cure it. No one ought to have the right to complain at this country unless he can point to a better one, and if he isn't able to do that then he ought to be invited to go to the country he thinks is better, and let us live our lives in peace over here.

IT'S HOW YOU USE IT

We venture to say that in every home in Plymouth, or in the entire state for that matter, there are many things which are not needed and which are not used. They are therefore of no value to the members of the household. They are hung onto, like a miser hangs onto the things he knows are of no use to him.

KODAK

Picture taking opens a new world of entertainment to the children, and they never tire of the fun. The Kodak puts this pleasure in the hands of young or old at small cost. It is simple enough for a child to use with good results—so efficient the expert cannot exhaust its possibilities. Kodaks and Kodak supplies of all kinds always on hand, and always new.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Try a Liner in the Mail.

They could be given away—to somebody to whom they would be of value. This is true of books and furniture and ornaments and clothing.

Some of these days we are going to learn the art of getting rid of something we do not need for something we could use to advantage. We are going to learn the other fellow's wants, and measure our own by them. We are going to learn that a "fair exchange" is perfectly legitimate in the eyes of business, and we are going to have a keener eye for business. The only reason we have the cellar or attic or lumber room littered up now with things we do not need, but which the other fellow would like to have is because we haven't learned to ask him what he needs and what he has to exchange for it.

Almost everybody who is anybody reads the home-town paper these days. There, then, is the solution to the problem. Drop a few lines—at a cost of a few cents—in the home-town paper and tell your neighbors what you have that is no longer useful to you, but which you will gladly sell at a fair price, or exchange for things you are in position to use. Nine times out of ten, as a rule, you'll find someone seeking that very thing you are in position to use. A few cents to try this experiment is the very thing that makes it worth thinking about.

LOOKING AHEAD

It is just as well to practice preparedness in the home as it is anywhere else, for the home should at all times be prepared to meet any condition that may arise. And that is why every man in Plymouth should take pride in helping his wife lay away at this season foodstuff that will come in handy during the winter months.

When vegetables and fruit are put up, canned and preserved during the season of plenty, it is easy for the wife to keep the table filled with an abundance of the good and healthful things of life. But where nothing is put away during the spring and summer for the winter, she finds it difficult and expensive to keep the table properly supplied during that time.

If the men folks will make it possible for the women folks to prepare for the winter table needs they will soon find it one of the best investments they can make. Help her to secure the vegetables she is willing and anxious to can; advance without being asked the money necessary to secure sugar and spices and jars and cans for the fruit she knows she must have during the winter. Don't begrudge her a dollar now for something she will have to pay more than a dollar for if she goes into the winter season without it. And remember that the burden of the work, after all, falls upon her shoulders, though you will get just as much—and generally more—benefit out of the canned stuff in the long run.

SHAW-LYNDON

Miss Irene Lyndon was united in marriage to Harvey C. Shaw, formerly of Rockville, Indiana, on Friday, July 30. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. S. Rice, pastor of the North Woodward avenue M. E. church, Detroit. The bride was a Plymouth High school graduate of 1918, when she incidentally took a position in the Detroit postoffice. The groom enlisted in the army and served three years, being in eight different camps here. He then was sent overseas, where he remained about a year. In November, 1919, he returned and was last stationed at Camp Taylor, Kentucky, where he received his honorable discharge June 16 of this year. The happy couple left for a few days' trip to Saginaw and Freeport. On their return they will reside in Royal Oak, where the groom is manager of one of the A. & P. stores.

White Handkerchief

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE
(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

They had called the four hornlike piles of rock that arose like a stupendous monument over two thousand feet in the air "The White Handkerchief." Seen from a distance the prospect was that of a perfectly white, perfectly square handkerchief.

Nature had been lavish in the bestowal of her rarest beauties and all save the spirit of man seemed divine. It was the roughest section of a sparsely settled country where the law had failed to drive out fensim, moonshining and organized banditti.

At Center Hollow Wanda Brookes realized how potent and cruel was the fate that had placed her at fifteen in the charge of a distant relative, Mort Zander. Her father had died amid utter poverty and had looked to Zander to care for his only child. Grudgingly the man who lived by outlawry took the girl into his household. He had crushed all of hope or contentment out of his sullen-souled slave of a wife, and she had no affection to bestow upon the lonely girl. The hardest tasks were awarded to Wanda. She was surrounded by the sinister faced, evil-minded men who appeared from time to time bringing stolen live stock or the booty of outright highway robbery and from whom she hid in terror.

There was one man among them who, after the first time his eyes fell upon Wanda, sought to gain her confidence and favor. He was Bart Dawson, apparently one of the most valued of the thieving scoundrels of Zander; for he never returned from his raids without boastfully displaying their proceeds to his well satisfied employer. Wanda shrank from him and her heart sank when one day Mrs. Zander remarked casually:

"That Dawson fellow seems to have eyes only for you, Wanda. According to pop you're sure of a good home and a man who knows how to provide for it."

"Why, what do you mean?" questioned Wanda, half smiling and shuddering.

"You can guess," was the casual reply, "and don't be foolish. Anything is better than the lonely life you live with us. I'll give you a word of warning, too. That young school teacher, Raymond Thorne, over at Cross Corners, has been seen abiding around you. Don't encourage him. He's spotted."

"You—you don't mean that your husband or his man would do Mr. Thorne any harm?" quavered Wanda. "If he stands in the way of Dawson, yes," was the definite response. "They got him let out from the school and he had better find another place right away."

Wanda managed to get away from the house about dusk and steal to the village. They had been simply friends. Thorne and herself, but their meeting that evening eventuated in a closer companionship. He told her of his love and asked her to leave his wretched home and become his wife. "It will have to be a fast and furious ride on horseback for over fifty miles to successfully evade the pursuers, who will surely be sent on your trail when you are missed," said Thorne. "Once at my mother's home at Alandale we will be safe and you, as my wedded wife within that hour, can safely defy Mort Zander. I will have to make preparations that must not fail. I am going to give you a fieldglass. After I have left here I will not dare to return nearer than the White Handkerchief. Next Thursday night about ten o'clock keep the glass focused on the middle rocky cone of the plateau. You will see a light signal."

Thursday was a busy day for Wanda, the evening hours replete with suspense. In the kitchen all day long she had been assisting Mrs. Zander in making catsup. The latter had retired, but Wanda feigned to put things in order. In the next room Zander and his favorite aids were engaged in revelry. About nine o'clock Dawson put in an appearance.

Twice Wanda heard her name mentioned and glasses clinked as if in conversation with some toast given. The kitchen clock struck ten. She ran outside and focussed the night glass on the White Handkerchief. A blotch of dark color, a human figure and then a quick glow showed.

"C-o-m-e," in quick succession against the light appeared the welcome letters. Later Wanda knew that her ingenious lover had devised a frame and transparent alphabet screen plainly visible through the powerful lenses with which he had provided her.

Wanda hurried back to the kitchen and threw a shawl over her head and shoulders. At that moment Dawson staggered into the room.

"You're wanted in yonder, sweet," he mandered. "We are to plight our troth before father Zander, hey?"

The wretch made a dash to seize her. Instantly Wanda snatched up a saucer filled with cayenne pepper, an adjunct of the catsup making. Straight into his eyes she dashed the fiery stuff. There was a frightful yell.

Klappety-klap—klappety-klap! Once in the saddle of the waiting horse Wanda made the rocky road echo with the thundering hoofs. A tortuous winding through a thicket, the rapid ascent of the White Handkerchief, and an hour later, keeping pace with the charger Raymond Thorne rode Wanda was on her way to freedom, home, mother and love.

A Strange Wedding

By RALPH HAMILTON
(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

How to live on a three hundred dollars a year pension and the sparse produce raised on a small area surrounding the house he had the free use of during his lifetime, was a problem Morris Vehon had solved, although at a cost of close pinching. It was a lonely spot at the edge of a quiet little village, and life for the old man and his motherless daughter, Eulalie, was a round of dull monotony.

They had been now five years at Rosecrest and Eulalie had grown into a lovely, graceful girl of twenty. From the wreck of a former fortune her father had saved quite a library, a piano and some choice pictures, and these graced the humble little home and surrounded it with something of the refinements of intelligence and culture. The girl had always done her full duty as helper and daughter. Often in a fit of melancholy Mr. Vehon would upbraid himself for caging her bright spirit away from the joys of life.

"I am very happy and contented as it is, dear father," Eulalie would insist. "I must inherit from dear dead mother a love for the charms of nature amid which she was brought up, and I find no false friends among the flowers and the birds."

They were seated one evening on the porch, both dreamy and lulled to a sweet serenity by the balmy air and the soothing perfume of many flowers. The pale starlight showed the rose-hung gate with the stretch of purple firs beyond. A lurking moon on the far horizon had just begun to tinge the landscape with a delicate silvery glow. The distant chug! chug! of an automobile aroused them. It seemed coming down the road passing the house, but the sounds became less distinct finally, as though the machine had turned off at some side road, and at this Mr. Vehon wondered, for even the one main thoroughfare was a rutty, uneven highway.

Perhaps half an hour passed by when down the latter came a madly rushing auto. It halted directly in front of the house and one of three men it held sprang from the machine and unceremoniously rushed up to the porch.

"Limousine," he spoke rapidly, "red and black, two men aboard. Has it passed here within the past two hours?"

"None such, none at all," replied Mr. Vehon. "Not many of any kind do," and the man hastened back to the road, and the machine, turning, retraced its course amid an excited confusion among its passengers.

The incident somewhat disturbed the serenity of Eulalie and her father. Within half an hour the latter made a movement as if intent on going into the house and Eulalie joined him.

"I'll take the lantern and see if everything is all right in the barn, father," she said, and a few minutes later crossed the rear yard for the purpose stated. She drew back as a hot breath of air came through the open door of the structure. Then the lantern gleam fell upon the front of an automobile. Eulalie lifted the lantern. Its rays showed a man in chauffeur attire standing at the step, and half reclining on the rear seat, a pale young man, suggesting an invalid.

"We ran in here because we were in trouble," hastily spoke the chauffeur. "It there a man about the house?"

"My father, yes," said the bewildered Eulalie. "I will send him at once."

Mr. Vehon went to the barn. Soon he and the chauffeur came carrying the young man between them. He was borne to a room upstairs. The chauffeur, an hour later, left the house. Mr. Vehon came down to Eulalie with a serious face.

"We have become unwillingly a part of a tragedy," he said. The young man is Burton Gray, and he is seeking to evade relatives who are after his fortune. They have been giving him a slow poison, and his chauffeur was trying to get him beyond their reach. The automobile which we saw earlier in the evening held the pursuing plotters. The chauffeur thinks his young master is dying. He has left him in our care while he goes away, striving to throw their enemies off the trail. We must get a doctor for this, Burton Gray, and nurse him until it is safe for him to be removed."

And that was why the house was turned into a hospital for a week. The physician made secret daily visits and expressed the belief that his patient would not survive, but Burton Gray seemed to be content and relieved at the kind ministrations of Morris Vehon and his daughter.

"I am a doomed man," he said one day to the former. "The relatives after my fortune have probably destroyed the will I have made. 'I shall bequeath them. You are poor, your daughter deserves a broader life than she is passing here. I ask her to marry a dying man, who wishes to reward her great kindness and your own by providing for all your future.'"

It was a solemn ceremony, the marriage performed with only the doctor and a clergyman present, yet from that hour Burton Gray seemed to revive. He passed the crisis of his illness, and the happiest moment in the life of Eulalie was that in which, able to get about at least, she supported his swaying steps as she led him out into the lovely little garden that was a paradise to both.

A Traveling Man's Experience
You may learn something from the following by W. H. Ireland, a traveling salesman of Louisville, Ky. "In the summer of 1900 I had a severe attack of cholera morbus. I gave the hotel porter my card and told him to buy a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and Dr. Williams' Kidney Pills and take one each. I took a good dose of it according to directions and went to sleep. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my name. I got up and found the hotel porter standing by my side. He said: 'I have just bought your pills and they have cured you. You are now well and strong.'"

Twirling-Arms Dance.
Many new dances were shown at the dancing congress in Paris recently. Most of them, however, appeared to lack originality. An exception is the "Telega," which is danced to the strains of Hindoo music. The "Telega" would never meet with the approval of the British dancing masters, as it is most unsuitable for the English ballrooms. It consists of fantastic movements in which the arms are twirled round the head while the dancer performs short hesitation.—Daily Mail, London.

An Incongruous Role

By ALVAH J. GARTH

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Young and beautiful, you say?"

"Barely eighteen. Oh, Dexter! you must meet Verda Burton to appreciate real loveliness."

"Anything to alleviate the dullness of the old place here?"

"You will not complain on that score when the summer home people begin to arrive. As to Miss Burton, I know you will like her and, confidentially, she is quite as much interested in you."

Pretty Estelle Lang glanced aside, long at her handsome brother as she spoke. Verda was a beloved college chum, one of their set, and might cure Dexter of his tendency to rave when the impulse seized him. The young man since his graduation had done little but travel. Brazil, Alaska, Labrador—he chose odd and long trips and his people often saw nothing of him for six months at a time.

"I shall be gone all day to see Aunt Virginia," said Estelle, "and will need the chauffeur and the limousine. You can put in the day with the runabout and fishing, I suppose?"

"Don't worry about me while there are woods to explore and new birds and flowers to get acquainted with," replied Dexter. "I think if I followed my bent I would be a naturalist."

"You look one with that hideous coat of tan on you and wearing the corduroy outing suit that you say has been through Death Valley and the mining reaches of Nome. Really, Dexter, you must get more in touch with civilization before the season begins."

"I am rather proud of my sturdy health and strength, Estelle," replied Dexter. "They have carried me through tests that show what a real man is capable of."

Estelle had been gone for an hour when the telephone rang. A servant started to answer it but Dexter intercepted her.

"I will attend to the call," he said and took up the receiver. "Rommers?" he spoke. "Yes, and this is Miss Burton? I will take the message, please."

"Won't you ask Miss Lang if she can spare me her chauffeur for an hour or two? Our own has left us and I cannot drive the machine myself."

Dexter's eyes sparkled. Here was the opportunity of seeing the paragon of beauty his sister had so boasted of, and under circumstances which would afford him a chance to scan and study her under an assumed identity.

In his rough and ready attire Dexter would pass very well for an average chauffeur. When he arrived at the Plymouth School, all pupils to be picked up at their nearest point on the cement road. All bids should be in the Director's hands not later than August 10. The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

HAVANA A BABEL OF SOUND

New Yorker Alleges That Metropolis is Silent in Comparison With the Cuban City.

Havana may not hold the noise championship of the world, but at least little old New York is silent by comparison. Unmuffled motors beyond computation, tram cars that seem far more interested in producing clamor than speed, bellowing vendors of everything vendible, are but the background of an unbroken uproar that permeates every nook and cranny of the city. Honest hotel keepers tell you frankly that they can offer every comfort except quiet. Even in church you hear the tumult outside, broken at rare intervals by the voice of the preacher. It is not simply the daytime uproar of business hours, it increases steadily from twilight until dawn. In olden days the sereno, with his dark lantern, his pike, pistol, bunch of keys, whistle and rope, wandered through the streets calling out the time and the state of weather every half hour. His efforts would be wasted nowadays.

The long-seasoned inhabitants seem to have grown callous to the constant turbulence. I have yet to meet a newcomer who confesses to an unbroken hour of sleep. If you move out to one of the penitents of Vedado, the household itself will keep you constantly reminded that you are still in Havana. The Cubans seem to thrive on noise. If they are so unfortunate as to be denied their beloved din, they lose no time in producing another. From their own throats. After a week in Havana we took ferry across the harbor and strolled along the plain behind Cabana fortress. For some time we were aware of an indefinable sensation of strangeness, amounting almost to discomfort. We had covered a mile or more before we suddenly discovered that it was due to the unaccustomed silence.—Century Magazine.

There are more than 3,000,000 Ford cars in daily service throughout the world, and fully eighty per cent of these are Ford Touring Cars. DISHES NOT ALL SHE'D DO

School Teacher Made Her Position Quite Plain to the Man of Her Choice.

She is a schoolteacher, who is anxious to marry, and he is a bashful restaurant owner. For three years she has dined at his restaurant and at some time during every meal he has come to her table to talk to her. But he never suggested any sort of engagement. Yet from the expression in his eyes and his general demeanor she has long been sure that he cared for her. "All he needs is just a little help," her best friend told her the other day.

A few days afterward when she was in the restaurant he came to her table as usual. "I see you'll soon be out of a job," he laughed, and added: "Since your school is going to close Friday you might answer that," and he pointed to a sign on his wall reading "Dishwasher wanted." "Would you wash dishes for me?" he continued.

Back came the reply: "Yes, and cook and sweep and keep house in every way."

He took the hint. Also she is going to quit teaching for all time.—Indianapolis News.

Chlorine May Prevent Flu.

Breathing air impregnated with chlorine gas may prove to be a real preventive of influenza. During the recent epidemic, 184 volunteers were subjected to a total of more than 800 treatments at the University of Arkansas. Several children and a nurse engaged in caring for "flu" patients were among the subjects, of whom only one developed a new case, and that evidently had been previously contracted, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The treatment consisted merely of confinement in the chlorine room for five minutes a day, the gas content carrying from 48 to 278 parts in 1,000,000 of air.

One Dozen Giraffes in America.

There are but 12 giraffes in this country—eight with circuses and four others in the zoos of New York and Philadelphia. Four of the 12 were raised by a Belgian named Andrew, in the employ of a circus, who used to be a hunter in Africa. He has made pets of them all, and Mary, who is almost nineteen feet high, responds instantly to his call and is delighted to eat sugar from his hand.

Public Benefactor Dead.

The inventor of the ice-cream soda—Robert McCoy Green—recently died in Philadelphia. While exhibiting at the Franklin Institute exposition in Philadelphia two years before the centennial, Mr. Green, to get ahead of a competitor, conceived the idea of mixing the ice cream with the soda, and before the close of the exposition his receipts were more than $200 a day.

Red Grenadiers Band and Male Chorus Coming at Chautauqua

The Red Grenadiers Band and Male chorus will be one of the greatest features at the Redpath Chautauqua this season. In fact, it has been long, indeed, since Redpath presented on this big circuit a better or bigger attraction than this great singing band. Their concerts will be greeted with enthusiasm everywhere. William Maupin, director of the Red Grenadiers band, is one of the well-known band men of the United States. A singing band has always been a remarkably successful entertainment attraction. Combining, as it does, instrumental and vocal features, a singing band makes an appeal to the entire audience. The Red Grenadiers Band and Male chorus will appear in a concert prelude on the fourth afternoon of the Chautauqua and in a full concert at night.

THE UNITED GUN CLUB MEET

August 1, 1920.

The day was ideal for the regular shoot held last Sunday. The scores were much higher than usual. Merle Murray made a new record for the year with his 48 out of 50 score, and missed two easy ones at that. Matt Powell was runner up with 47 out of 50, and only one to spare on that. Our president, Frank Hills, was there with a 45.

As many members as possible are requested to attend the merchandise and sweepstake shot of the Lakeside Gun Club at Rockwood, next Sunday, the eighth of August. Lunch and shells will be for sale on the grounds.

Regular program (50) scores are:
M. Murray 48
M. Powell 47
F. Hills 45
A. Balden 45
W. Murray 44
N. Schrader 43
H. Hall 41
H. Passage 40
C. Merritt 31
A. Hall 31

The twenty-yard handicap resulted in the following scores:
H. Passage 40 out of 50
M. Powell 37 out of 50
A. Balden 37 out of 50
L. Cameron 34 out of 50
F. Hills 23 out of 25
N. Schrader 23 out of 25

their purchases, but some of them are becoming a little faint-hearted and think their money has gone for naught.—Chelsea Standard.

To make the Milford fair on September 15-18, the success it ought to be and to bring it up to present-day standards, somebody has to get busy many weeks before the event. That is what the 1920 officers and directors are doing, and the indications are that their efforts will be well rewarded. So far there are quite a number of important changes that deserve notice. In the first place, the date is changed so that the fair opens Wednesday instead of on Tuesday and holds over on Saturday. This will give many of the former residents an opportunity to come here for the week-end and spend the Saturday half-holiday at the fair. This will add to the success of the home-coming feature.—Milford Times.

Fruits and nuts, growing along the highways and byways of Oakland county, do not belong to the general public and cannot be picked up by any tourist who happens along in an automobile, without danger of arrest. The same question comes up each year, and was last year decided in a test suit brought for that purpose, in which the courts ruled that the property owners outside of cities own the land to the center of the highways and are entitled to all fruit and nuts that grow outside his fence lines, the same as if they were on the property within the fences. Each summer many Oakland county farmers are greatly annoyed by automobilists, who drive through the country and take all the fruit that is accessible to the road.—South Lyon Herald.

WILL GO OVER OLD ROUTE

Charles J. Morse of Lowell, Mass., Plans to Revisit the Historic Santa Fe Trail.

"I'm going over the old Santa Fe trail once more," said Charles J. Morse, former municipal commissioner, as he made the rounds of his friends preparatory to starting for his visit to the West. The Lowell Courier-Citizen states:

Mr. Morse had desired to leave some time ago and he looks forward to covering the whole 1,400 miles of way between St. Louis, Mo., and Santa Fe, N. M.

It won't be covered now as it was in 1872, when Mr. Morse, then a young man went over the famous southwestern trail on the back of a fine little piece of horseflesh. Times have changed and nowhere more than in that section of the country.

"In those days," he says, "Cody and Wild Bill had been scouring the plains to the north and the West was pretty wild. At that particular time Buffalo Bill (Cody) and Wild Bill were in the eastern part of the country. Even then they had a wild west show.

"Eleven years ago I was in Denver, and at that time I met just one man whom I had known in 1872. There probably isn't a soul along the old trail now that I knew then.

"In 1872 the Apaches under old Geronimo were raising rumpuses every now and then. They were bad Indians; quick as lightning, and they had first rate leadership. Up around Denver were the Utes, who were peaceful, and farther over were the Hopis, who were also on good terms with the whites. But in 1872 when a Wells Fargo coach went out, there were always men with shotguns guarding it.

"I want to cover that old trail again. If I can't do anything else I can imagine things as they used to be and compare them with things as they now are. I was young then. I could stay in the saddle all day long. I loved a good bit of horseflesh then and I've never got over it. Of course, there will be cowboys and Indians and all that, but they won't be the hard, tough-as-nails men they were in 1872. That was a pretty rough country then."

Mr. Morse intends to take about three months for his trip. He is making it alone.

AUTO THIEVES MULCT BUYERS

IF FOUND, PURCHASER IS LOSER

Before Buying From Strangers Make Sure They Are Rightful Owners of Car—They Are Trying to Sell.

"At the present time a great many automobile thieves are operating in the State of Michigan. In 1919 the City of Detroit alone lost 3,482 automobiles, the value of which was $3,165,227.00. The Detroit Police Department recovered 2,709 stolen automobiles the value of which was $2,697,689.00. From these figures it will be seen that 773 cars of a value of $467,538.00 were never recovered. For the first six months of 1920 Detroit has lost 1,593 automobiles of which 1,278 have been recovered, leaving 315 cars still unrecovered. This is only for the City of Detroit. Complete statistics of stolen cars for the whole State of Michigan, cannot be accurately compiled. The conclusion follows, however, that a vast amount of valuable property is being stolen each day thru automobile thefts.

"Bargains" Are Apt to Be Boomerangs

The people themselves are largely to blame for this state of affairs. A great many unsuspecting persons purchase an automobile cheaply from whatever person offers it for sale. No investigation whatever is made as to whether the vendor is legally the owner. The purchaser in a great many cases never requests to see the registration card, which is issued by the Secretary of State. The only question involved when a great many people purchase a car is the price. If it is a bargain the deal is closed.

It is a simple matter for thieves to change the various Manufacturer's numbers on a car in such a way as to deceive any one not making a very thorough inspection. If actual cases are cited showing how automobile thieves operate, it may be of some help in showing the reader how easily he may be deceived in purchasing a stolen car.

One Farmer Sells Stolen Cars.

About the 15th of May 1920 a Deputy Sheriff in a certain County noticed that a farmer, apparently of good reputation, was in possession of a new car every few days. The farmer was posing as a Used Car Dealer and stated that he had purchased the cars in Detroit "on the market". Investigation disclosed that the cars were stolen and following this lead forty stolen cars were recovered. Automobile thieves in this particular instance operated as follows:

One of the organization stole the car from the streets of Detroit, ran it to a secret garage and changed the motor and serial numbers in such a way that the change could not be easily detected. The car was then transferred to this certain County and easily disposed of because it was offered for sale at a very attractive price, and no one in this county had any reason, of course, to believe that the possessor of it was not the legal owner.

The authorities upon discovering that the car was stolen, simply took possession of it, and after it had been identified by its original owner, was returned to him. One farmer who had purchased a stolen car when asked whether he missed it when the authorities took it away from him stated, "that he did not miss it half as much as the old horse he sold to purchase it." This particular farmer had sold a good horse to purchase a stolen car. As a result of his foolish investment he lost both.

Make Sure Seller Owns The Car.

If you desire to purchase a car go to some authorized dealer and pay the market price rather than take a chance of purchasing from a "fly by night dealer". Buy from some one who you know will be in business tomorrow and the day after. Do not think you are getting "a good thing" because some one is offering you a practically new car "dirt cheap". Since thousands of cars are being stolen it stands to reason that some one must purchase these cars. Thieves steal to sell; they do not steal automobiles to use themselves, the chance of detection is too great.

At any rate if you cannot resist the temptation to purchase a new car from an unknown person, cheaply, at least take all the reasonable precautions in protecting yourself from purchasing a stolen car. Inspect the serial and engine numbers yourself. Always secure the registration card as issued by the Secretary of State. Demand a Bill of Sale properly made out; establish the identity of the vendor, so that you could locate him in case you desire. If you are in doubt, call some police officer or sheriff and have him look at it.

The Detroit Automobile Club has issued a warning as set out in various posters distributed over the State. This is for your protection and is not to serve any selfish purpose whatever. The people at large should know what is going on within the borders of Michigan, and the figures set out at the beginning of this article show what a great traffic is going on in stolen automobiles. Think twice before you purchase a car whose title you know nothing about.

Utopia. Gibraltar seems to fulfill all the conditions of a desirable residence for people. There are no taxes, except an alcoholic liquor tax, and the revenue, mainly derived from customs and port dues, shows a handsome balance on the credit side. The colony has no public debt, and the prosperity of its inhabitants is shown by the savings bank deposits, which doubled in a year, and at the end of 1919 gave an average of $250 for each depositor. At present the British civil population numbers about 16,000. There is room for a few more on "the Rock" because the census of 1911 enumerated nearly 17,000 besides Maltese and aliens, who have also diminished since then.

East of Africa. Whichever there is coal in the earth it is more and more becoming a matter of business to know it, whatever be the theoretical chances of any year and unworked fields in England, France, Germany, and elsewhere.

So Africa has been the scene of much and when international goods were in 1918 were reversing the coal resources of the world it was found that Africa as far as they could make out had less coal than any other continent. The total estimated reserves for 1919 were 100,000,000 tons, and the United States Africa, that is the estimated reserves, contain 10 per cent of this quantity.
