POPULAR YOUNG PEOPLE WEDDED

FREDERICK J. THOMAS AND MISS RUTH JENKINS MARRIED AT METHODIST CHURCH LAST MONDAY AFTERNOON.

A wedding of unusual interest was solemnized in the Methodist Episcopal church, last Monday afternoon, September 6th, when Miss Ruth M. Jenkins of this place, was united in marriage to Frederick J. Thomas, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Thomas, also of Plymouth.

The church was filled with interested friends and acquaintances, and at 3:30 o'clock, Miss Winnie Jolliffe, presiding at the piano, entertained the company with several instrumental selections. During this time the relatives of the bride party were escorted to their seats by ushers Roy Parrott and Robert Jolliffe.

Two pleasing vocal solos were rendered by Miss Frances Meader of Pontiac. The first selection, "The Old Refrain," were words of her own composing to a violin melody by Fritz Kreisler. The second number, "Why I Love You," was impressively sung just before the wedding march.

To the strains of Lohengrin wedding march, the bride party entered the church and slowly marched to the altar, Messrs. James Thomas of Detroit, brother of the groom, and Sidney Geal of Albion, acting as ushers. The maid of honor, Miss Marian Tucker of Flint, was prettily attired in orchid georgette over pink and wore a large white hat. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Laura Meader of Ionia, was gowned in green crepe de chine, and wore a black hat. She carried pink asters. Mrs. James Thomas of Detroit, wore a becoming gown of pink organdy, and large black hat. She also carried pink asters. Large tulle sashes added much to the attractiveness of their gowns. The flower girls, little Doris and Esther Field wore white organdy and carried baskets of sweet peas, which they strew in the bride's path. The Marjorie Field, as ring bearer, was daintily dressed in white, and carried the ring concealed in the heart of a pink rose.

The bride, on the arm of her father, Alfred B. Jenkins, of Morocco, Ind., marched to the altar, where the groom was awaiting her. She was lovely in white headed georgette, and wore a large white hat. Her bouquet was composed of sweetheart roses showered with satin ribbons.

Walter C. MacBride of Caseville, Mich., a college chum of the groom, acted as best man.

The beautiful ring service of the Methodist Episcopal church was impressively rendered by the pastor, Rev. F. M. Field, and "O Promise Me" was softly played on the piano during the entire service.

The church presented a most attractive appearance, as it was effectively decorated with pink and white asters, hydrangeas, gladioli and cosmos, the color scheme of pink, white and green predominating. A large arch of green asparagus, color scheme and artistic arrangement of decorations. During the past few years Mr. Green has been called upon for such work many times, and his willingness to respond and artistic ideas so well carried out, have brought pleasure and delight to many friends.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, to the strains of Mendelssohn's beautiful wedding march, the bride party and the following immediate friends, Rev. and Mrs. F. M. Field, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Jenkins, Alfred B. Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Thomas, marched to the foyer of the church, where they formed a receiving line for congratulations.

Later in the afternoon, a reception was held for about fifty guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. M. Field. The home was attractively decorated with autumn flowers, and a large

DEATH OF PROMINENT CANTON CITIZEN

WILLIAM HARMON DIES SUDDENLY WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON FROM INJURIES RECEIVED BY A FALL.

This community was shocked Wednesday afternoon to hear of the sudden death of William Harmon, a much respected resident of Canton township, who for more than sixty years had resided on the Harmon homestead, a short distance southwest of town. Mr. Harmon fell from the roof of the side porch of his home, last Saturday afternoon, and sustained internal injuries which resulted fatally Wednesday. He was seventy-four years old the 26th of last July, but was exceedingly well and active for a man of his years. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, who has been his ever willing helpmate and constant companion for more than half a century, having celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Christmas day; also one son, Theodor A. Harmon, who is superintendent of schools in Watertown, South Dakota, besides several cousins and other more distant relatives.

The funeral services will be held from his late home, Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, Rev. F. M. Field officiating. The bereaved family have the sympathy of many friends. An obituary will be given next week.

Beautiful and numerous were the wedding gifts, among them being a dining room suite from the bride's father, several pieces of furniture from the groom's parents, also a handsome check to the bride; a tapestry davenport from the groom's business associates in the office and two beautiful pieces of cut glass from the Methodist Ladies' society.

The bride's gifts to her bridesmaids and maid of honor were sterling silver coin purses and brilliant bar pins; to the pianist and soloist, Maderia handkerchiefs. The groom presented the best man and ushers with gold cuff links and black silk hose, and Mr. Green a scarf pin.

Plymouth friends extend best wishes to the happy couple for success and prosperity.

The following out of town friends attended the wedding: A. B. Jenkins of Morocco, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Jenkins and three children of Saginaw; Mr. and Mrs. William Churchill and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Ham of Pontiac; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Thomas, Mrs. J. E. Gleas and son, Frederick; Mrs. Mary G. Eddy, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O. Yake, H. L. Jenney, Hasen E. Watson, Miss Daugherty and George P. Everson of Detroit; Mrs. J. T. Wrightman of Birmingham; Mrs. C. F. Tucker and daughter, Marian, of Flint; the Misses Frances S. and Laura E. Meader of Ionia; Sidney Geal of Albion; Walter MacBride of Caseville, Mich.

At noon, Monday, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Thomas, parents of the groom, pleasantly entertained at dinner at their home on Main street, the bride party and relatives. Covers were laid for twenty-five guests and a delightful dinner party was enjoyed.

Walter Gorton, who has been in the Reserve Corps of the Aviation department at Dayton, Ohio, has been promoted to captain in the regular army.

Ed Hoisington has a fine collection of relics, that are not only valuable curios, but they have an interesting bit of history attached. Among Mr. Hoisington's collection is a sword that was carried through the civil war by Captain W. W. Wright of the 24th Michigan Infantry; a musket carried by a soldier named Johnson through the Mexican war; another musket, canteen and cartridge belt carried by Kiel Simmons of the 17th Michigan Infantry; a sailor's knife that was carried by a sailor on the battleship Maine, when that ship was sunk in Havana harbor; a horse shoe carried by a soldier in the civil war; knife, fork and spoon used by Col. Henry Morrow, the gallant commander of the 24th Michigan Infantry; a thumb vice carried by his father, Henry Hoisington, through the civil war. Mr. Hoisington lately added to his collection a wooden canteen that Mexican war soldier carried through the war on the battle fields of France.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas and Mrs. Harold, have returned after spending the past week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Thomas, in Manchester.

BOOSTING THE HOME TOWN

Boosting the old home town is a genuine pleasure. What spirit could be finer and what could produce more happiness than to see Plymouth grow and prosper? What a delight when it is crowded with local people all bent on good fellowship, brightening up the place with legitimate pleasure and business. Painting up and cleaning up old buildings, remodeling others, creating new business, are all joy bells in the journey of life through the old home town. Better streets, shade trees, flower beds, attractive store windows and everybody busy—that is what makes a hit with the stranger who comes within our gates. More public wells or drinking fountains, fewer stray dogs roaming the streets, sidewalks that do not stand from an inch to a foot deep in water following every rain—any town can have these things and can keep them forever if it so wills. Such things serve to bring trade from a distance, because it is human nature to want to visit a clean, up-to-date, hustling town. And we all benefit by every dollar spent here, whether it falls directly into our hands or not. We will come into our share of it in the usual channels of trade, so why not invite it here? The slowest way to get anything done is to wait for someone else to start doing it. The surest way to get the improvements we need, and ought to have, right here in the old home town is to start on our own premises. You can bet your life the other fellow will quickly fall in line. And when we're pulling together no town on earth can beat us.

THE CITY MAN'S VIEW

A reporter for a large city newspaper recently asked five persons picked at random: "How can we keep the boys on the farm?" One who was asked this question, a stationary engineer, replied: "Give them a farm. Cut the farms down, and let each man work his own farm. Then he will never leave the farm." Ask the next farmer you meet on the streets of Plymouth if he believes that would solve the problem, and he will tell you that the city man's idea is all right in theory, but that it would be poor when put to practice. But it is typical of solutions of our agricultural problems offered by editors of city newspapers and people not in touch with farming conditions. At a time when labor is extremely scarce, being almost unobtainable at any price in many sections, this city man suggests that we cut up our farms and give each man a small acreage to work for himself. It would be just as sensible to suggest that the labor troubles in our big industries could be settled by cutting up the large factories and splitting them into numerous small shops, each one owned and operated by a single individual. This is utterly preposterous, of course, but it is only slightly more so than to suggest that our large and efficient farms should be split into small ones to be operated by units and with small-sized machines and insufficient equipment, which the small farmer would be forced to buy. It's a poor solution, but it serves to show how far the city man is from solving the problem he knows nothing about.

WHEN WOMEN VOTE

We're hearing a good bit of talk in Plymouth these days about what will come to pass now that it looks as though the women of the nation are to have the ballot. In fact, just at this time it is an all-absorbing topic all over the United States. One man's opinion is as good as another when it comes to predicting the outcome of this new reform. Both old-line parties claim it will help them. Each one claims to be the favorite of the new voter. So you can take your choice of either opinion. The women themselves, or the leaders who have worked hardest to bring about suffrage, claim they can pull ten million votes in the United States. There are others who declare they can't get more than five or ten out of every hundred women entitled to a vote to go to the polls and cast it. And you are at liberty to believe either side of this argument you want to. It's a political year, filled with all kinds of wild-eyed rumors, and all of which can't find something to suit his own personal opinions is certainly hard to satisfy. Personally, we are not venturing an opinion as to just what difference it is going to make. All we know is there are enough good men and good women, honest men and honest women in this country to keep it from going to the dogs. All we know is that the majority is generally right, as our history shows. And we can dismiss the much-talked-of problem of suffrage by saying that the women of this country may be depended on to do what they believe is best for the country. And whatever they do won't be far wrong when everything is summed up.

The NEW EDISON

"The Photograph with a Soul"

There's a way of spending money that spreads incomes over bigger "sandwiches."

Big business calls it financing.
Government calls it budget-making.
We call it the Budget Plan.

Would you like to own a New Edison?
Our Budget Plan will show you how to "swing" the purchase, without cutting in on your present necessary expenditures.

Now is a good time to buy. The New Edison has advanced in price less than 15% since 1914; this includes War Tax. Mr.
Edison has kept prices down by absorbing increased costs out of his own pocket.

"BLAZED" TRAILS IN WOODS

Guides for Travelers and Marking Bounds of Lot or Town Lines
for Many Years

In earlier days, when large sections of the country were covered with forests and there were few roads, travel was often possible only by way of paths "blazed" through the woods. To blaze, as every woodsman knows, is to strike off a chip from the sides of trees, so that the line of marks shall indicate the direction of the trail.

In blazing for a path small trees were marked, but in blazing for the bounds of a lot or town or for a farm line larger trees were usually selected, the blaze being made about breast high. When, however, as was often the case, the blazing was done in winter on deep snow by men traveling on snowshoes, the mark was necessarily higher up. When such a line is traveled in the summer, especially after some years, during which the trees have grown, the marks are sometimes found high up on the trunks and are likely to escape the eye of the inexperienced. As many of them will also be partially overgrown the task of the surveyor who goes over one of these old lines is not always easy.

If the boundary line passes to the left of a tree selected for blazing the cut is made upon the right side. If the line goes to the right the tree is blazed upon the left side.

In running a boundary at a corner, where two lines come together, either a "monument" is erected—a stake supported by four boulders—or a tree is blazed on all four sides to indicate as nearly as possible the turning point of the line.

The wound of a blazed tree heals over, but never so completely that the scar may not be readily recognized by the experienced woodsman; hence it follows that so long as the blazed tree escapes fire and the ax of the lumberman so long it remains a faithful record of the line as surveyed.

Blazed trees also fix dates almost as accurately as they preserve boundaries. The outer shell which has grown over the scar is cut away, and the rings in the wood beneath the bark testify to the number of years which have elapsed since the blaze was made.

Golf by Plane.

Two modern touches in golf were introduced at the big professional tournament at Glenageary, in Perth-shire, recently.

Airplanes, bringing spectators, arrived at regular intervals from Glasgow, 47 miles away, and every competitor wore a distinctive number on his jacket to facilitate recognition.—
Daily Mail, London.

What He Said.

Paul and Gerald, twins, were visiting their grandmother in a distant city. One afternoon grandmother walked to the nearby grocery, taking Gerald with her, Paul being asleep.
The grocer gave Gerald an apple which he silently accepted.

Grandmother turned to Gerald and said: "Now, what do you say?"
"Give me one for Paul."

If you know of an item phone or send it to the Mail office.

FRANK Ground Up

By JESSIE E. SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

He was a good deal of a hero, although he was too modest to realize it.
As the nephew of John Marchmont, the Iron King, a certain prestige and prominence was awarded him, but with his close friends Arnold Sherman frankly stated that he was in no way an heir apparent to his uncle's millions, not even a protégé.

"Mr. Marchmont has a large family of his own, most of them girls," he explained. "The boys are all young and because I inherit from my father a certain liking for construction, Mr.
Marchmont generously offered to put me through college, provided I would qualify as a structural engineer. Then I shall go to work in some one of his big foundries, I suppose, earning my living by hard, practical work."

By a very close margin Arnold Sherman graduated creditably, for the reason that the last month of the college term he had worked double day-times and stayed awake half the nights to aid a young fellow named Pierce Arden, to whom he had taken a great liking. For a month after the term was over Arnold lay prostrated from his arduous efforts, but he had a grateful and a faithful nurse. Young Arden postponed accepting a lucrative position until his friend was fully on his feet again.

"I'd nurse you the remainder of my life if it was necessary," he declared.
"Never was there a friend like you! I owe you everything. I wish I had saved to show you the letter my sister Genevieve wrote me when I told her that you had risked your own chances and your health to help me get my diploma. That is her picture," and Arden extended a photograph. "She is smiling there, but she was crying when she wrote about my noble, self-sacrif-cing friend, for the letter was stained with tears. I shall not be back home permanently until toward the end of the year. Then you've got to come and see the folks. They'll greet you with open arms, I tell you!"

Arnold smiled and whimsically wondered if Arden included also the open arms of the lovely girlish original of the picture. Two hours later he sat down and wrote a long letter to his uncle. In it he told John Marchmont that he would not report at the mills for some months to come.

"I remember," a part of the letter ran, "that you once told me that the really successful man in your line of business was the one who, aside from his office and technical ability, had been through the practical end of it.
I wish to prepare myself in this way.
I have a large iron works similar to your own in view, intend to enter its services under an assumed name, hope to glean at least a fair surface knowledge of the details of the different mechanical departments and come to you something better than a theoretical engineer."

The plant Arnold had selected for his initial training was located at a distance in a section where he was not likely to be identified. He added to his neat usual stock of clothing various suits adapted to rough shop work and he smiled to himself as he glanced down at his white, smooth hands. A few weeks would do considerable in hardening and transforming them. He settled down where the mills were located and was apportioned to a task as helper of a forger man.

There was a transfer to the casting room a week later and then to the shipping department. All this was the kind of education Arnold desired, to know just how things were done, and evenings he would recall the various processes he had studied and figure out estimates of weight, tensile power, chemical attributes and waste and cost.

One evening Arnold had taken a stroll beyond the lights of the town and was returning along a lonely road when he came upon a stalled automobile containing two ladies. He recognized at once that they were in trouble and went over to the machine and suggested that he might be of some assistance. He then restored the auto to working condition and the elderly, feagome and timid, asked him to drive them into the town. When he surrendered control of the wheel and alighted, the spot light crossed his face. He fancied that he caught the echo of a snarly ejaculation on the part of the young lady. Then a passing machine flooded her own face with the radiance of its headlights and he knew her at once—the original of the photograph Pierce Arden had shown—the sister, Genevieve.

Several times during a month he passed her in the automobile. She always smiled and bowed and one afternoon halted the car at the curb. She was consciously flushed and embarrassed as Arnold approached.
"My mother is anxious to see you, Mr. Sherman," she said.
"You— you know my name!" exclaimed Arnold, coloring up.
"My brother's friend— oh, yes!" replied Miss Arden. "He sent us your photograph."

There were mutual explanations and that was the beginning of a perfect understanding. A month later John Marchmont sent word for his nephew to prepare to take charge of a large department of his plant. Then young Arden came home and Arnold Sherman was indeed greeted with open arms—and an open heart on the part of Genevieve when he confessed his love for her.

The only quadruped that is known that can not swim is the camel.

Fordson
TRADE MARK
The Fordson cuts the cost of preparing land almost to half of what it costs with horses. But even more important is the fact that the Fordson saves from thirty to fifty per cent of the farmer's time. And time saved—getting fields in shape to plant in the proper season, getting things done when they should be done—means money to the farmer. Besides it solves the labor problem.

As ever, the machine-way is proving more efficient, faster, easier than the old-hand way. In the factory, the machine increases production, saves labor—produces more at less cost. And that is what the Fordson does on the farm. The Fordson way is the machine way of farming. Besides it solves the labor problem.

The Fordson's first cost is the lowest in the market; and the after operating cost is lowest. It is a compact easily handled tractor, backed by the greatest tractor service organization in the United States.

We are Fordson dealers. Not only do we sell Fordson tractors, but we carry a stock of Fordson parts and employ Fordson mechanics to help the farmers get the best results from the Fordson.

Our exposition of cool-weather garments is an index to the fashion thought of the world and a tribute to the thorough workmanship of American makers. We feel that our selections have brought us models that are in every way as desirable as you might find anywhere in the land—as sure in point of stylishness, as evident in point of quality, and without peer in point of value. You will not need to look beyond this store for exactly the garment to fit either your fancy or your purse.

COATS

Fabrics chosen not merely for show, but for tailoring qualities that ensure enduring shapeliness and intrinsic qualities that mean long and profitable wear. The silk linings are quality linings and exquisite to a degree. Where furs are used they are of carefully selected quality.

SUITS

The variety runs from severely simple tailor models to elaborately embroidered, fancifully cut and richly fur trimmed styles meeting every need and every purse.

We diligently sought—and found—that unmistakable quality in material and workmanship without which there can be no real

The last resting place of a Revolutionary soldier, Joel Phelps, in the cemetery at Rose Center, was marked with fitting ceremonies, last Saturday, by a delegation from General Richardson Chapter, D. A. R. of Pontiac. Mr. Phelps died in 1838, and it has been ascertained that he fought in the Revolutionary battles at Trenton, Princeton and took part in many of the minor engagements. He was pensioned in 1818, and was among the very early residents of this section, coming here in 1836, where several of his children had located.—Milford Times.

Harold Gamon, fifteen year old Detroit boy, attempted to drive away an Overland car belonging to C. V. Bovee, local manager of the Standard Oil Co. station, Saturday morning. Mr. Bovee happened to see the boy as he was starting off and gave chase in another automobile, catching the young man several miles down the cement road. He was brought back to Northville and lodged in the jail, later being taken to the Detention Home in Detroit by Officer Lyke. The boy claims that this was his first offense. He had been wandering around this vicinity for several days.—Northville Record. Mr. Bovee resides in Plymouth.

OAKLAND COUNTY FAIR

It is worthy of note in connection with the Oakland County fair, which occurs at Milford, September 15-18, that anyone may become a member of the county fair association by payment of $1, and that memberships are solicited all over the county.

The old Milford Fair Association was a stock company and occasionally stock dividends were declared. In the Oakland County Fair Association, on the contrary, no stock is sold and every dollar made over necessary expenses will be turned into improvements and premiums with the intention of making the fair a valuable asset to the county.

The officers have booked a fine list of attractions for the coming fair and all signs point to a fair that will eclipse anything before attempted. Premium lists and information will be mailed on application to the secretary, W. S. Lovejoy, Milford.

Beside the Gentleman.

A few nights ago a lady, as the tale is told in the Boston Herald by Philip Hulse, arriving after midnight by train at the Fair station with two traveling bags, saw only one cab for passengers. Two men were getting into it. They looked at her and—got in. The driver, a negro, seeing the lady's plight, asked her where she wished to go. She answered: "The Chilton club." He said: "Would you mind, ma'am, sitting up here with me?" The two men inside heard this talk. They did not ask her to share the cab with them; they were not shamed by the negro's courtesy and solicitude. One said to the other: "I think I'll try the Algonquin club." They drove off, the men inside, the lady on the box, sitting next to a gentleman.

An Unbiased Critic.

Two artists were exhibiting their paintings in one of the store buildings in our town, each having a room for his exhibit. I went to see the pictures, and did not fancy those in the first room I entered. I went into the second room, where a polite attendant showed me about, and joined me in warmly praising several landscapes. As I was leaving he accompanied me to the door of the other room, saying: "Have you seen the pictures in here?" "Yes," I answered, "but I don't like them very well." "Neither do I—I painted them!" was his astonishing reply.—Chicago Tribune.

Change in Turkish Rulers.

Philip Marshall Brown, professor of international law at Princeton university, met Mohammed VI in the Palace of Yildiz, where ten years ago he had met and talked with Abdul Hamid. "Sultan Mohammed Sixth," says Mr. Brown, writing in Asia, "is a man with a scholarly stoop to his shoulders. He wears a gray mustache and a pair of gold-rimmed eye-glasses, which heighten the resemblance to a benevolent college professor." And in the palace "where previously reigned dark suspicion, insane fear and hideous cruelty," the visitor found an "atmosphere of kindness and serenity."

Today's Reflections

Looking at some Plymouth men, we're constrained to believe it's hard to keep tobacco chewing a secret.

Wherever there are mosquitoes there's a hum of industry—with the mosquitoes supplying the hum.

However, the price of sugar hasn't yet come down to the point where both presidential candidates are claiming credit for it.

Increased railroad rates mean nothing to a lot of us who have been used to paying as we go.

Authorities on the bible are not agreed as to just how tall Adam was, but any boy in Plymouth could tell you if Adam had been a foot ball player.

The mosquito that bites some of our up-to-date girls is apt to die with painter's colic.

Ponzi says he owes three million dollars. A fellow who can get credit for that much isn't crazy.

We heard a Plymouth man say yesterday that it'll cost a good deal more to hold elections now that women can vote, as there'll have to be a mirror furnished for every voting booth.

While mother is learning the mysteries of politics, father can learn the mysteries of cooking.

We've always noticed that the more a girl knocks another fellow, the more anxious he is to meet the other girl.

Every Plymouth man should so love that the neighbors who talk about him will have to make up what they say.

And the man who only gives three cheers is sometimes offering just as convincing an argument as the one who is doing the speaking.

Why is it that folks who never work for bread are among the first who want to eat it?

"You might say if you wish," whispered a well known Plymouth man yesterday, "that marriage is a silent partnership, with the man the silent partner."

An eastern woman wants to sell her husband to get money with which to feed their children, but some women know their children would starve to death on what their father would bring at a sale.

Time brings wonderful changes. Nowadays the Plymouth man who wears old clothes gets mad if you don't notice it.

TRY A LOWER IN THE MAIL—IT PAYS BIG

It's a man's job to keep up with Michigan

In the passing of a decade, almost, Michigan, by a phenomenal growth, has leaped from comparative industrial obscurity to a commanding place among the commercial centers of the nation.

Hand in hand with this expansion, has grown the demand for telephone service in Michigan. Some idea of the problems confronting the Michigan State Telephone Company as the result of this advance in industry and population may be gained from consideration of these facts:

In 1910 the state had a population of 2,810,000, served by 143,300 of our telephones, or one for every 19½ persons.

In 1920, it is estimated from the available census returns, the population is 3,210,000, a growth of approximately 400,000, and is served by 292,851 of our telephones, meaning one for each 11 persons.

Therefore, while the population has grown 14.2 per cent, the number of telephones has grown 104.3 per cent. The company has, in the face of war conditions, material and labor shortage and skyrocketing costs, more than kept pace with Michigan's growth.

It has been necessary, in order to meet the myriad problems confronting the telephone service, for the company to make surveys and estimates, years in advance, of the volume and direction of population and industrial growth in order to intelligently build to meet it. All this company's resources and efforts have been used to meet Michigan's requirements, as indicated in these surveys.

Had the 14.2 per cent increase in population been evenly distributed the problem would have been simplified, but this growth has been greater at some points than at others. There have been times, therefore, when the surveys did not compare with requirements and times when the engineer's estimates could not be met.

But the telephone people, facing these and many other obstacles, carried on and are still carrying on, determined that their future efforts shall exceed even those of the past.

They are anxious to have the people they serve know what they are doing to solve these problems and that despite all difficulties they are determined to make Michigan's telephone service the best obtainable anywhere.

NORTHVILLE TO HAVE 'NOTHER BIG FAIR

FOURTH ANNUAL PROMISES TO BE BIGGER, BETTER THAN EVER.

The fourth annual Wayne County Fair at Northville, dated for Sept. 29-30, Oct. 1-2, inclusive, has every indication of being even a greater success than the three preceding ones, which is certainly saying much. More permanent improvements will be made this year, including the erection of an addition to the main building and grandstand.

Practically all the live stock exhibition space has already been taken, insuring another fine show along that line. The entries will embrace some of the finest dairy and breeding stock in the state.

The poultry and pet stock section under the supervision of Wm. H. Ward, one of the foremost poultry breeders of the state, is expected to be better, if possible, than last year. The woman's department will occupy one whole side of the main building, with many new features and increased premiums.

The four-day program includes a baby show with a long list of special prizes, ball games for every day, with $275 in prizes, and a fine list of horse racing events is scheduled for three of the four days, with purses aggregating $1,500.

Numerous free special attractions have been secured, including a drill by the famous Moslem Patrol and band of Detroit, 100 strong, Saturday, and the Flying Levans every afternoon and evening. The night entertainment will include a $1,000 display of fireworks and dancing on a specially built platform.

The officers and committees are sparing no possible effort to outdo their creditable past achievements and make "the only fair in Wayne county" (State Fair excepted) more than ever worthy of that honor.

The Fulfillment

By GEORGE ELMER COSS

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

They were a high school pair, and both Darrel and Elinor Isham recognized the fact before they had been married a month. As Elinor knew she had been left penniless and alone by the death of her father, Isham and he had worked side by side at a desk in a large wholesale house and Elinor had often spent the evening at the Dawes home. He had been very kind and thoughtful in seeing that any due respect was paid to her dead father and had confidentially relieved her of many distressful details accompanying the funeral. Then, alone with her in the silent house, a great wave of pity had swept over him and she, desolate, caring little for life or its awards just at that moment, longing only for consolation and sympathy, they drifted into the mistake of believing their destiny to be mutual. They were married and settled down in the old humble home.

They were dissimilar in temperament and mood in every way. Isham was not fitted for combined work at the desk and dragged himself home evenings well nigh at the point of exhaustion. Elinor never flinched from strict duty. She realized that her husband would never be hardy and strong, and gave herself up to solicitous care for his health and comfort. She never complained of the monotonous life they led. Only once did her thoughts revert to the past. They expressed their poignancy in seven words, the agonizing cry of a wounded soul trying to forget: "Oh, why did not Herbert Wade speak?"

He was a young lawyer, a close friend of Isham. For a time both had come to the Dawes home, but at that time went on Wade conceived the idea that his friend and Elinor were attached to each other and reluctantly ceased to call.

About a year after Isham had married Elinor he came to the Wade office one day looking pale and careworn. "Wade," he said, "I am not regarding my health, and I fear I shall be unfit for work. A relative has left me a thousand dollars, and I want you to take charge of it and invest it." "Very well," replied Wade. "I have had a proposition to take some bonds in a new industrial concern at eight per cent and a bonus of stock which looks very promising. Suppose we go in jointly?"

"I shall be glad to follow your direction," said Isham, and Wade gave a receipt for the money, specifying the fact of a mutual investment.

At the end of six months Isham was able to work only a part of the time. He was compelled to draw the principal in installments until it was all gone.

"I am sorry I have to use it," he said, "but I am forced to do so. I don't know what will happen when I die. Elinor will be left penniless. Look after her as far as you can; won't you, old friend?" The tears stood in his eyes as he spoke, and silently Wade extended his hand.

Wade was away when Isham died. He had been telegraphed to from the city offering him a large amount for the stock he had purchased in the industrial company, and was tendered over $3,000 for the $2,000 investment. The funeral was over when he returned to town. He hastened at once to Mrs. Isham. Kindly, as though he were a brother, he told her of his pledge to her husband. He asked her as to her plans.

"I shall go to the city," she told him. "If I had means I would take up the training of my voice. That was always my ambition. Perhaps I can do that, also, if I can get a good paying position."

"It costs money, Mrs. Isham, but I am glad to inform you that a partnership your husband and myself entered into two years ago has matured in a joint profit," said Wade. "I shall deposit half of it—$4,000—for your account at bank," and he recited the primary details of the partnership, but said not a word of Isham drawing out all his investments, or how he died.

It was a year later when he received a letter from Mrs. Isham. She stated that she was coming to see him on a matter of business.

He had heard of her success as a singer in the city churches and with choral societies, and a portrait in a musical journal had shown her more beautiful than ever. The evening that he called her to his home she fairly dazzled him.

"I have come to return to you the money you so kindly loaned me," she said. "Mr. Wade, you are the noblest friend a woman ever had! Only last week I found some old papers that belonged to my husband—this."

It was the copartnership memorandum, and upon its back were the endorsements made by Darrel Isham, showing that he had drawn all the money he had invested.

"I need only a part of what you so generously gave me," said Elinor, "and I have made a great deal by my singing. True to the dead, true to the living, how I bless you for the courage you put into my life at its darkest moment! If ever I can brighten yours—"

She paused wistfully. Their eyes had met and it seemed to both that after all the years, in that silent glance love, cherished, true, and true, and smiling, had found its way to the summation.

Mrs. A. H. Hall, Cassville, Mich., says: "I was in need of a good, reliable, and durable shoe. I bought a pair of the 'Dawson' shoes from the Central Meat Market. They are the best I have ever worn. They are comfortable, durable, and stylish. I highly recommend them to all who are in need of a good shoe."

Mrs. Mary Catherine, Cassville, Mich., says: "I was in need of a good, reliable, and durable shoe. I bought a pair of the 'Dawson' shoes from the Central Meat Market. They are the best I have ever worn. They are comfortable, durable, and stylish. I highly recommend them to all who are in need of a good shoe."
