EXPLOSION IN FARM HOUSE

ACCUMULATION OF COAL GAS IS THOUGHT TO HAVE CAUSED THE EXPLOSION WHICH RESULTED IN THE DEATH OF MRS. ALEX WNUK AND MR. WNUK IS SERIOUSLY BURNED.

Last Friday morning, an explosion occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wnuik, who reside just north of the town line on a portion of the farm known as the Crawford Safford place. Mrs. Wnuik built a bungalow on his farm last summer, and although it was not fully completed, they were occupying the same. It is thought the explosion was caused by an accumulation of gas in the furnace, which had been recently installed. At the time of the explosion, Mrs. Wnuik was preparing breakfast in the basement kitchen, and the chimney on the lamp which she was carrying, was shattered, causing her to drop the lamp. She was covered with burning oil, and was killed instantly. The neighbors came quickly to their assistance, and as they were both seriously burned it was deemed advisable to take them immediately to Ann Arbor hospital, where Mrs. Wnuik passed away early Saturday morning. Mr. Wnuik is improving, and it is thought he will recover. The deceased was the mother of six small children, the eldest being ten years of age, and the youngest one year old the day of its mother's death. Mrs. Wnuik's funeral was held in Detroit, Tuesday.

The walls of the house were blackened and several windows were cracked and broken, and the front door which was a temporary one, was blown from its hinges. The fire was extinguished before serious damage was done to the building. Fortunately at the time of the explosion the children were asleep on the second floor, and were uninjured. Plymouth friends deeply sympathize with Mr. Wnuik and family in their sad affliction.

"JEDEDIAH JUDKINS, J. P."

HOME TALENT PLAY IN FOUR ACTS NEXT WEDNESDAY EVENING.

"Jedediah Judkins, J. P.," the four-act home talent play, will be staged at the High school auditorium next Wednesday evening, December 8th, derives its name from the principal character, Jedediah Jackson Judkins, a Hoosier farmer and Justice of the peace, who comes to the city and takes a hand in the detective business, finally establishing the innocence of his nephew, charged with a serious crime and caught in a net of circumstantial evidence. He furnishes lots of fun from start to finish, assisted in this mirth-making by Sally, the silly servant, who is not so foolish as she looks, and Prentiss, the detective, who is first one thing and then another.

Following is a brief synopsis:
Act I. Jedediah comes to the city as a delegate to a convention, stopping at the Craincrosses. Windom & Tick's jewelry store is robbed and a suspicion falls on Herbert Craincross. Two crooks, DeCamp and Hardin, get into the house and lay a plot. The American Eagle meets a British lion.

Act II. Prentiss, the detective, disguised as a book agent, displays some skill in the use of the English language. Jedediah signs a doubtful petition and is stung to the tune of $5,000, just as Herbert is arrested for burglary.

Act III. Herbert, in the police station, handcuffed, attacked by the two crooks, who shoot the keeper and escape. Herbert, Hilly to be charged with the crime, also sees. Act closes with scene in the Craincross house, where several people talk, including Windom and the parrot.

Act IV. In a mine's cabin. Famous characters in winter dress. The British agent, in the office, does for I understand that you are dead. Happy termination in the Craincross house.

John Craincross, E. Craincrossman.
Herbert Craincross, E. Craincrossman.
R. Windom, of Windom & Tick, Jewelers.
George Prentiss, a Detective.
Horatio DeCamp, a Crook.
Buck Hardin, another crook.
Police Officer Miller Roes.
Mrs. Craincross, John's wife.
Easter Goldfarb, John's ward.
Bernice Craincross, John's daughter.
Miss Bobbin, a High School.

Lillian Lundy.
The play will begin at 7:30 next Wednesday evening and will be at the popular price of 30c, with 20c for all school students.

BARNES-MILLS

A quiet and pretty house wedding occurred Wednesday morning, Dec. 1st, at nine o'clock at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Mills on Church street, when their daughter, Mildred M. Mills, became the bride of Harold J. Barnes of Plymouth. Rev. S. Conger Hathaway, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony, using the Presbyterian ring service. Only the immediate members of the family and a few of the bride's most intimate friends were present. The bride was charmingly attired in brown beaded georgette and carried a bouquet of pink and cream roses. After the ceremony, the guests repaired to the dining room, where a delicious wedding breakfast was served, the color scheme of pink and cream being consistently carried out in the table decorations; following which the newly married couple started upon their long journey to Florida, where they will spend the winter months. The journey was begun auspiciously to the typical accompaniment of tin cans and coal scuttles and various kitchen utensils, which thoughtful friends had generously signed to the equipment of the auto. The party will stop enroute at the Mammoth Cave in Kentucky and other points of interest along the way. Congratulations and best wishes of a host of Plymouth friends and acquaintances will follow them.

The bride is one of Plymouth's most popular young ladies, a graduate of the Plymouth High school in the class of 1915. She is also a graduate of the Detroit Business University, and for the past year she has held a position in the office of the Dearborn Independent. Her father, Ford's paper. The groom's home is in Lockport, New York, but has been a resident of Plymouth for the past year, having had a responsible position with Henry Ford & Son.

RECEIVES MEDAL FOR VALOR IN SERVICE

GUY ROBINSON OF NANKIN TOWNSHIP, RECEIVES GOLD MEDAL FOR AN ACT OF INTREPID HEROISM BEYOND THE CALL OF DUTY.

Guy Robinson, who lives in Nankin township between Plymouth and Wayne, and a student of the U. of M., has had the honor of receiving a medal for valor, presented to him by the government officials at Washington, D. C. Robinson was in the aviation service during the late war, and was cited for bravery many times. He is officially credited with bringing down eight of the enemy planes. He was wounded several times, and to this day carries two bullets in his body.

Mr. Robinson is well known in Plymouth, and was a guest at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson, Thanksgiving day. He is very modest in talking about his very special honor, but his friends are aware of the signal honor that has been conferred upon one of Nankin township's bravest soldiers.

The medal is of solid gold, and is about 1 1/2 inches square and is suspended by two silk ribbons from a gold bar, upon which appears the word, "Valor." On one side of the medal appear these words, "For an act of intrepid heroism beyond the call of duty."

The particular act for which this medal was given was one that only the most daring and intrepid aviator would attempt. Robinson, with a single companion in a scout plane, unaccompanied by other planes, flew over the German lines at a high altitude, and then maneuvered his plane until he was flying low over the enemy's line, that the bombs which he carried might be dropped with most telling effect by his companion. In performing this act, the daring aviators exposed themselves to a terrific fire from the enemy's guns. The plane was riddled with bullets and partially disabled, Robinson's companion was killed, but he succeeded in guiding the plane inside the American lines to safety and was uninjured.

WEATHER TALK

Possibly it is because coal is a little hard to get this year, but we've heard more talk about the weather in Plymouth this winter than for a good while. Some of the sages in this section have consulted the goose-bone and settled the matter themselves. At the grocery we meet the forecaster who banks on the thickness of the fur on animals, and also the fellow who depends upon the thickness of the corn husk to tell him whether the season is going to be mild or severe. And possibly it is because these three types of weather forecasters do not agree that we are hearing so much talk about the weather.

The U. S. Weather Bureau forecasters reject the predictions of the goose-bone, fur and husk fraternity, and declare they are not scientific. But as a rule the man who makes his own weather predictions has mighty little use for the weather bureau, and takes little stock in its work. The weather bureau contends that there is no such thing as certainty in long-range weather predictions, contending that no one can successfully forecast the weather more than 48 hours ahead.

But whether you believe the weather bureau or the "home-grown" weather prophet, it is always safe to prepare for a severe winter. If we have one, you are fixed for it, and can rejoice accordingly. If it happens to be mild your are out nothing, because coal and wood will keep, and, unless all signs fail, they'll not be any cheaper when you go to buy again than they were this year.

READJUSTMENT IS ON

Daily newspaper reports indicate that the next two or three months are going to witness considerable turmoil in industrial circles in this country, and that we are going to find greater strides made toward readjustment than we have at any time since the world war. We don't want Plymouth people to feel that an industrial revolution is on the way, and that wages are going to smash, that factories are going to close up tight and stay closed, or that banks are going to pull down the blinds and quit. Nothing so bad as that is forecast.

But there are going to be thousands of men thrown out of work all over the country while this readjustment is going on. Factories will release their men and leave them idle while they revise price lists and set new production standards. These prices in the main will be lower, so that it will be necessary when the plants again resume operation, to offer the old jobs at a reduced wage. This is already being done in many places, and is soon destined to become general. It is worth while to note, too, that in most instances the men are accepting the decreased wage. That alone will prevent a serious industrial flareup throughout the country.

The man who has steady work at a good wage is the one to take note of these changing conditions, and stay on the job. Within a short time there will be, for the first time since we entered the war, more men than there are jobs. And it behooves the ones now working to guard their interests accordingly. America is going to come out of it all right, and eventually it may prove better for all concerned. The solution of the problem we are about to face, however, rests with the workers themselves. It is up to them to assist in a readjustment, or to create turmoil by refusing to do so.

THE "HAPPY" FARMER

A certain class of newspaper mis-assert that a farmer is the most independent man on earth, and that he has nothing to do but enjoy life. That when winter comes and the blizzard is on the wing, he toasts his feet in the oven and reads the local paper, the only thing that disturbs him being a call three times a day to a banquet of mince pie and other luxuries.

But they are all wrong, and to prove it we ask a well known farmer of this community, whom we met on the streets of Plymouth a few days ago for an opinion on the subject. In substance he said it was something like this:

"The industrious farmer begins work long before the sun thinks of getting up. With his ax he shovels in gloom, he proceeds to build a fire and soften his boots with a hammer. He then takes a lantern and shovels his way to the barn and feeds the hogs. It is then time to feed the newly-arrived calf, which seems to take a delight in batting a pail of milk over the tiler of the soil, until all he needs is to be stamped to pass for a package of oleomargarine. He crawls through a barbed wire fence, and digs the hay out of the snow, feeds the cows and cleans the stable, gathers up the frozen chickens, chases a stray pig for four miles, and doesn't catch it; doctors a sick horse, freezes his fingers, gets kicked by a cross mule, and when the gloaming comes and quietness broods over all the earth, he has a single half-hour before bedtime in which to meditate and wonder how he is going to get his taxes paid."

Garland Ranges

The World's Best

"GARLANDS," like any well-raised family, all have points of resemblance, one with the other. The above is just an average "GARLAND" Range selected at random; but it fairly represents the characteristics of all "GARLAND" Ranges. "Built as solidly and as carefully as an automobile," was the comment of the photographer who took this picture. "A woman could not help prepare good meals on a stove like that," was what a certain shrewd judge of cooking appliances had to say of this particular "GARLAND."

Jilted

By CRAWFORD LUTTRELL

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

She felt as if all the blood in her slim young body were pounding in her ears. "You mean—you mean that you don't love me any more?" she found voice to question.

"I didn't say that," he defended sternly. "What I did say was that I think it would be better to postpone the wedding for a few months."

She nervously jerked his ring from her finger with a cold little hand that shook so hard that her heart. "I hate you," she said stormily. She tossed his ring on a little table that stood between them.

"Think it over, Anna," he said, ignoring the glittering erlet that he had slipped on her quivering finger one enchanted night. He picked up his hat to go. "I'll be back in a day or two when we have had time intelligently to think the matter over and your anger has cooled."

"As if it ever could!" she ejaculated scathingly. "I never want to see you again as long as I live."

She ran up the steps, her sharp little heels clicking ominously on the polished stairs.

Bob Raymond shook his head sadly and opened and closed the screen door with a hand that was not quite steady. He lingered for a moment, then, head up, walked briskly down the shrub-lined driveway.

Upstairs, prone on her dimly covered bed, lay a huddled little figure, coking back dry sobs.

When at last the tears came, warm and merciful, they seemed to submerge her intolerably aching heart until it grew numb, insensible to the waves of pain that rolled through her tortured body. Bob had jilted her. She would never be able to hold up her head again. Everybody would talk. Even when she was a placid, sour old maid, people would remember and tell their children and their children's children all about her humiliating experience.

Suddenly her wandering thoughts focused into a resolution. She would not tell anybody about it for two days. At the end of that time she would have assembled her trousseau which was about complete, and she would leave a letter announcing that it was impossible for her to marry Bob, that she was going away and that they would hear from her again soon. She would draw enough money out of the bank to go away—to work somewhere. Of course, she did not know how to do a thing in the world but girls in stories frequently went away from home and made great successes in business. What had been done could be done. Bob would be left to answer all embarrassing questions.

Accordingly she appeared at the luncheon table in such high spirits that her family grew suspicious. "Bob must have brought good news this morning when he came over here so early," said her mother curiously.

Anna's heart missed a beat at that "Bob always brings good news," she said, and tried to make it sound as if she meant it. And the news he brought had broken her heart!

There was a tennis tournament on that afternoon at the Country Club. Bob was one of the star players. So Anna opened her closet door and took from its shrouding wrappings one of the handsomest of her trousseau gowns of filmy white organdie. With it she wore a wide brimmed, drooping white georgette hat that made her look sixteen instead of twenty-two.

To her inquiring mother she explained that so many visitors were expected at the club that day, she had decided to wear something especially pretty.

Out to the court went Anna, her pretty face glowing and dimpling under a four-cornered rose-colored parasol that made a distracting bit of beauty against the green grass.

She was with a crowd of girls who were to have been her bridesmaids, and when by chance they encountered Bob with an out-of-town man Anna was so much the engaged girl that nobody could have suspected the truth about that distressing scene that had been staged only that morning.

Introductions over, the out-of-town man eagerly took the parasol from her hand. Passing on with him, she looked over her shoulder to say to the bewildered vision in white duck and battered white hat, "I am sure that you will win the match. Don't get overheard, Bob, dear!" She took care that only Bob saw the little blue flame that danced in her smocking eyes.

Then the match was on in which Bob was to play, and although he had been in fine form only the afternoon before, he made a poor showing, and after a few minutes' play, even his devoted admirers conceded that a prospective bridegroom was in no condition to uphold the honor of the local men. Five minutes after he had run out, the rose parasol had disappeared from sight.

Anna had believed herself so brave, she had been so feverishly certain that she could see the staggering thing that had come to her through without the flicker of an eyelash, but she had gambled without knowledge of that sensitive, all-deciding little organ of the heart.

The sight of Bob doing the usual things in the usual way, with no thought of the corroding acid of his suggestion that they postpone the wedding eating at the root of all her ardily happiness, had been too much for her.

Anna stepped into her car and ordered the chauffeur to drive to the wonder house that she and Bob had built and had just finished furnishing. In readiness for that great day when he would lift her bodily and carry her into the place that was to be their home forever after.

She dismissed her car and, glancing back furtively, she went up the newly concreted walk for the last time.

She opened the front door and closed it quickly behind her. She started in astonishment. Everywhere—on tables, tallchairs, bookcases and in the wide window sills—there were flowers, her favorites! She tossed off the expensive hat with no care for its perishable beauty, and ran from room to room, looking at everything.

Then a hand, cold and clammy as death, twisted its chilling fingers about her heart. Bob loved somebody else! That was it. He was going to marry suddenly and take the girl there, to the home that she, Anna Tyler, had stumped with her own vivid personality.

She climbed the stairs slowly, like a woman from whose limbs age has taken the light buoyancy of youth. She paused at the doorway of the room she and Bob had selected for their own.

"So you do care, after all? Oh, Anna, I love you so. I hoped that you would come here—I knew that if you did—"

Bob was there beside her, his arms holding her close. All her fine resolutions melted at his touch. "How could you—how could you be so cruel—"

Then he told her, his heart hammering a comforting, confirming refrain under her tear-drenched cheek. "You know, Anna, you've been engaged three times before—before I came along, and last night at the club dance I overheard two fellows speculating on how long it would be until you discovered that you didn't love me. I couldn't bear the thought. I didn't sleep a wink all night, and this morning I went over to your house to test you—I would have died if anything had happened to keep us from living in this house of our dreams—I couldn't play this afternoon—I just watched your parasol, and when it disappeared I threw away my racket and came running—hoping—oh, girl, you'll never know how much I have suffered today—"

"Oh, yes, I will," said Anna contritely. "I suffered, too, but I deserved it. I did promise to marry those other men, but I never even put on their rings—I was honest with you. I don't know why girls do such things. They're just flattered—"

"Let's forget it!" begged Bob heartily.

For he had tested Anna and found her true.

UNCLE HENRI

By JACK LAWTON.

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Beatrix and Dora were learning for the first time what it meant to be strangers. They never had been strangers in the home city where hospitable doors were opened in welcome at their coming. This renting a tiny cottage in Wellstown village was one of Beatrix's ideas. Both girls were studying ambitiously for their future chosen careers.

It was Beatrix who heard the remark which first rankled, and later brought amusement. The two girls wondered vaguely, after a time of residence elapsed, why their village neighbors failed to return their overtures of friendliness.

"I was leaving the post office," Beatrix said, "and Miss Callie, the postmistress, thought I was out of hearing."

"Those queer girls in Barton's cottage were at the lawn fete last night," she told a caller, "but I guess they found out that Wellstown doesn't take notice of strangers who belong to nobody."

Dora looked up from her French. "So we are strangers," she said. "Shall we send for the mayor of our city to present us, or settle down resigned in our isolated state?"

"I'm going to astonish this exacting village with my commendable relations," Beatrix precisely answered. "Adopt—say an uncle and aunt of renown and send to them lovely intimate post cards—in Miss Callie. Who shall the receiver be? I'll add a line to the effect that 'uncle' need not reply to my postal messages."

"Stop raving," Dora interrupted. "I've thought out your man—your uncle, I mean. As we are not sisters he can't be my uncle, too." Don't you remember the name Henri Smith on that big lumber factory over in Gaston? Some one said that Henri Smith was a millionaire, owned most of the town. Smith's a good universal name. How would you like an Uncle Henri?"

"Fine!" agreed Beatrix.

Mortally she ran for some village view cards, and with a giggling observer, inscribed her first postal.

"Dear Uncle Henri," it read, "Dora and I are having a quiet time in Wellstown, hope to go over to see you soon. Your loving niece —".
Beatrix hesitated.

"Just sign 'Trix,'" Dora suggested. "No one has ever called you 'Trix.'"
The card was not returned. Neither was a second, which told Uncle Henri how the girls had enjoyed his short visit with them at "Rose Lodge." Love to Aunt Elma was added to this communication. The girls congratulated themselves over the naming of the imaginary aunt.

"Might be her family pet name," Beatrix said.
Miss Callie was certainly interested. Moreover, certain heretofore distant young Wellstown women smiled and bowed to the strangers in passing. The postals had done the work. A piece of the great lumber manufacturer was worth cultivating.

"Reckon," Miss Callie said soundly, as she handed over a square white envelope, "that's an invitation for you to the usual midsummer celebration at Green Acres, your Uncle Henri Smith's place. We always read in the paper of the famous garden party he gives each year."

All at once Beatrix was possessed of an uncomfortably guilty feeling. The letter that Dora had merrily mailed from Gaston during her shopping trip of the day before, might seem opportune, but the joke was going a little too far. It was weighing heavily on the girl's conscience. She wished desperately that the prank had never started. "I must stop now and with some explanation. But who could the honest explanation be? A man was waiting on the steps of Rose Lodge when she returned, a youngish kindly-faced man with a quizzical smile.

"Miss Fairfax?" he inquired.
Beatrix wonderingly nodded.
"I am Henri Smith of Gaston," the man appealingly announced. "I have received several communications from a certain Miss 'Trix' of Wellstown. As I spell my name Henri, to distinguish it from the other Henry Smiths, I could not think the address mistaken. Yet I have no niece. So upon driving through your village today I asked your postmistress experimentally, if she could direct me to the niece of a certain Henri Smith. Directly she sent me here. I'll confess, the man added frankly, "that I was curious concerning the solution of the small mystery."

And then—the overburdened conscience of Beatrix found its relief. Honestly she made confession.

"You cannot think more contemptuously of it all than I do myself," she ended. But Mr. Henri Smith was really a great man. Great enough to understand the humor of the circumstance and to sympathize in its humiliating outcome. So he sank back in the rocker on the flower bordered porch, waiting to meet, he smilingly said, "his niece's friend." It was after he had returned to Gaston that a second square envelope came with a genuine invitation to the two girls for the famous garden party at Green Acres. The invitation began informally "Dear Trix," and was signed "Your Uncle Henri."

Below in small letters was written: "There is no Aunt Elma—I'm an eligible bachelor."
"And the rest of this romance you may figure out for yourself."

Today's Reflections

Every married man welcomes the discovery of a potion that will prevent talking in the sleep.

Now they define the three great powers in this country as the pulpit, the press and the petticoat.

Little girls believe in the man in the moon, and big girls in the man in the honeymoon.

The Plymouth man who begrudges himself a hearty laugh is the worst kind of a miser.

President-elect Harding certainly believes in "safety first," for he wears both a belt and suspenders.

Beef is down one dollar per 100 on the hoof, but the trouble is very few retail dealers sell the hoof.

The Plymouth man who can accurately describe a woman's dress, made a mistake in not being born a dressmaker.

A lot of fellows kick on the high price of timber, then go out in the woods every fall, build a fire and burn up a million feet of it.

Some autos have automatic attachments, and others sheriff's attachments.

It isn't facing the music at home when he comes in late that a Plymouth man hates—it's listening to it.

Some fellows refuse to save up for a rainy day, on the ground that this country is never again going to be "wet."

The profiteers may be getting what is coming to him, but we have failed to find one man in Plymouth who feels that they are getting it in too big a chunk.

If we had a little more back to the farm movement, we could have a little more front to the dining table movement.

MOTORISTS CAN BUY LICENSES NOW

1921 PLATES WENT ON SALE WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1ST.

Plymouth auto owners can now secure their license plates for 1921. They were placed on sale at the Detroit office by the Secretary of State, which recently was moved to Cass avenue and Peterboro street.

E. L. Dooling, manager of the Detroit office of the Secretary of State, has put on additional help at the new office, where several thousands of applications can be handled each day.

The charge for licenses for both passenger cars and trucks is the same as last year, 25 cents per horsepower and 35 cents per hundredweight. Weight slips must accompany truck applications. Electric cars are charged as before, $1 per horsepower and 35 cents per hundredweight.

With plates for sale for 30 days before the first of the year, there is ample time for every person to secure new licenses.

Lingering colds and coughs that follow the grip or influenza are difficult to overcome, but many such sufferers have found relief in Foley's Honey and Tar.

COUNTY HOLSTEIN BREEDERS TO HOLD IMPORTANT MEETING

The Holstein cattle breeders and dairymen of the county are planning to hold a big meeting at the Plymouth High school, on Thursday, Dec. 9th, at 7 o'clock p. m., fast time.

This is one of a series of thirty meetings which will be held over the state for the purpose of interesting the Holstein breeders in what is known as the accredited herd plan of tuberculosis eradication. The meeting has been arranged for in co-operation with the Michigan Holstein-Friesian Association, and the state and federal authorities in charge of bovine tuberculosis eradication in Michigan.

Under the accredited herd plan, the herds are placed directly under supervision of the state and federal authorities as far as disease control is concerned, and the tuberculin test is applied at regular intervals to the entire herd. The subcutaneous or tuberculin test is the one most commonly employed, though the intradermal and ophthalmic tests are used in some cases. These tests can only be applied satisfactorily by experts, and only men who can qualify as such are employed. State supervision of this work comes within the domain of H. H. Halladay, Commissioner of Animal Industry, while the work done by the federal government in this state is supervised by Dr. T. S. Rich.

These two branches of the state and federal governments, working together on this problem, are securing remarkable results, and the purpose of this meeting is to acquaint the breeders with the plan, and secure their co-operation in carrying on the work. Great progress has been made since the work was started in 1917, and there are now something over six hundred herds under supervision in the state, and it is hoped that this drive will bring a great many more. This is a matter of great importance to the breeders of pure-bred cattle, and the added value which accrues from having a herd pass clean under supervision is an item that no one can afford to overlook.

Field Secretary Norton of the state Holstein organization, states that nearly all inquiries received from outside buyers mention specifically that only animals from herds under state and federal supervision are known to be free from disease will be considered. Michigan has long enjoyed a reputation for having clean, healthy herds of Holsteins, and it is up to the breeders to continue the work and keep up the record established.

Dr. Rich and Mr. Halladay and a representative of the Michigan Holstein Friesian association will address the meeting, and a large attendance is anticipated. All dairymen and Holstein breeders are urged to take advantage of this opportunity of learning about the best method of keeping tuberculosis out of their herds.

FURS AND HIDES LOWER

I have been paying all of as much again for Furs as many others, who would not give you as good a sort. I regret very much I am obliged to cut prices to prevent furs from collecting faster than I can get them ready for tanning, as green skins will soon spoil and become loose and worthless in warm or damp weather, when only science with a hide fluter beam and heat treating can prevent it. For all prime furs reaching me not later than December 5th, I will pay the following:

Skunk—No. 1, $2.50; No. 2, $1.50; No. 3, 75c; No. 4, 25c.
 Coon—No. 1, $3.00; No. 2, $2.00; No. 3, $1.00; No. 4, 50c.
 Mink—No. 1, $6.00; No. 2, $4.00; No. 3, $2.00; No. 4, $1.00.
 Rats—$1.00, 75c, 50c, 25c. Kits and damaged, 5c to 25c.
 Beef Hides—No. 1 cured, 10c per lb.; green, 8c.
 Horse Hides—No. 1, $3.50; No. 2, $2.50.

These prices are absolutely void on skins caught out of season. Call, phone or write, and I will call for fair sized lots.

Sotokichi Katsuzumi of Taubata Kaga, Japan, gave an interesting talk to the Christian Endeavorers and a few words of greeting at the evening service last Sunday night. Mr. Katsuzumi has been in this country about ten years, and has lectured in various towns and cities of Kansas, Colorado and Michigan. He has spoken before churches, women's clubs and business men's organizations, and has delivered an address before the legislature of Michigan. His wife, Nobu Furuya Katsuzumi, A. M., is a graduate of Oxford College for Women, and together with her husband, is a graduate student at the University of Michigan. Just now an infant daughter, named Anne (pronounced On-e) is teaching them both domestic science.

D. W. Hathaway, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Foster of Battle Creek, and John H. Hathaway of Ann Arbor, arrived last Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving day at the manse. Thursday night, Mr. Foster was taken with a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism, and has been obliged to prolong his visit in bed. Wednesday he was sufficiently improved to be driven to Ypsilanti. Mrs. Hathaway's mother, Mrs. A. P. Warner, who has been staying in Plymouth for several weeks, returned with the party to her home in Battle Creek.

A larger audience than is usual on Thanksgiving day came out last Thursday morning and heard an inspiring sermon delivered by Rev. Horace E. Sayles, the newly arrived pastor of the First Baptist church. Mr. Sayles took for his text, Psalm 116:12-13, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord." A collection, amounting to seventeen dollars, was taken for the relief of the suffering peoples of the near east. Such meetings help to increase the cordial feeling of fellowship, which now obtains between the congregations of the several churches.

W. R. Shaw, superintendent of the Presbyterian Sunday school, was able to take charge of the school again last Sunday. A meeting of teachers and officers was held at his home last Tuesday night to arrange plans for Christmas.

The trustees of the church held their regular monthly meeting in the pastor's study, last Monday night. Arrangements were made for securing an extra set of letters for use on the bulletin board.

When it is not announcing sermons and special meetings, the new bulletin board is kept busy disseminating practical wisdom; such as apothegms, for example, as Josh Billings' sententious maxim, "Consider the postage stamp, my son. Its usefulness is in its ability to stick to one thing until it gets there." Keep your eye on it and watch it philosophize.

The Ladies' Auxiliary held its monthly meeting and pot-luck supper at the church, last Wednesday.

Funeral services for Patrick Sullivan were conducted at the Schrader Bros. Funeral Home, Thursday afternoon, by Rev. S. Conger Hathaway, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

Two boxes, instead of one, were sent this week to Albion Academy at Franklinton, North Carolina, by the Y. P. S. C. E. Plymouth will be praised in the far south this Christmas for its generous soul.

Residents of Plymouth can secure books from the public library in Detroit at a cost of one dollar a year. This will provide an annual card, upon which books may be drawn and kept four weeks at a time—not one volume at a time, but any reasonable number of volumes. Exchange can be made by parcel post if one dollar is deposited with the librarian to cover the cost of transportation. Such a card provides the holder with all the privileges of the library.

Roy Clement, John Snyder, Lem Clement and Henry Clement were up north on a hunting trip the latter part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Shields of Newburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Clement and two sons, Donald and Harold, all took Thanksgiving dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Lem Clement's.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kerhl and family took Thanksgiving dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krumm's in Detroit. Mrs. Kerhl and children remained over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bentley and two children and Mrs. Anna Hutchinson of Detroit, took Thanksgiving dinner at Mr. and Mrs. William Maynard's in Stark.

Rev. 21 opens with a beautiful picture of the millennial kingdom—"the new heaven and the new earth;" "the tabernacle of God with men;" "No more tears, no more sorrow, no more death, neither any more pain." 33,027 FORD CARS
MADE IN MONTH
ONE EVERY 1 1/2 SECONDS—ONE DAY'S RECORD.

During October 29, 1920, Ford cars were made in the Ford factory at Detroit, and shipped out to join the four and one-half million already in service. This is the highest record ever reached by the Ford Company, or any other company. Thirty-three more cars would have brought production up to the 100,000 mark for the month. Oct. 28th was the banner day, having brought forth 4,638 cars. This was also a record breaker. It means that one car was completed every eighteen and one-half seconds for the entire twenty-four hour day. The Ford estimate for this year is one and one-quarter million cars and trucks. It was during the fall of 1909 that Henry Ford placed on the market his now famous Model "T"—the car that brought Ford unquestioned supremacy in the motor car industry. To date, more than four and one-half million of this one model have been built and distributed to the four corners of the world. Of models prior to the "T," thirty thousand were manufactured. During 1910, 18,644 Ford cars were built, a tremendous output for those days. Yet in ten years from that time Ford production has grown to more than one million a year. Almost half of the motor cars in the world are Ford cars. In the United States and Canada, a little better than one-half are Fords. Subscribe for the Mail today.

GRIFFITH PRODUCES
COMEDY IN EAST
D. W. Griffith has turned to comedy. From the time when his noted picture "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "Hearts of the World," "Broken Blossoms," and other special productions started the motion picture world by his gigantic spectacles and tragic tales, he has been petitioned to produce a comedy. And it is of more than a passing interest to note that the very play in which he has allowed comedy to predominate, was produced in the very midst of tragedy. "The Idol Dancer" is the name of the picture, and it will be remembered that it was while journeying to the Bahama Islands to secure scenes for this story that the entire Griffith party was nearly shipwrecked off the coast of Florida. But all the tragic happenings that overcame Mr. Griffith and his players did not prevent the producer from injecting a wealth of delightful humor into "The Idol Dancer," which will be seen at the Penniman Allen theatre, December 4. Children come in for special attention by Mr. Griffith in his latest production. It is a well known fact that Mr. Griffith is particularly fond of children, and his very devotion to the kiddies inspired him to let them romp and play throughout the story of the South Seas. One of these scenes in particular concerns a fight between a twelve-year-old son of a missionary, and a young native boy of about the same age over the subject of wearing pants. The little heathen boy refuses flatly to don clothing of any kind, and so the missionary's son throws him to the ground and forces onto his body a pair of perfectly good American knickerbockers.

LITTLE MOTHER
By EDNA BOUTWELL
The old-fashioned clock chimed 6. As if it were a signal, the Winsome Lady opened the door, and peered down the dusky hall, her eyes filled with welcome for the little figure hastily approaching. "Oh, I'm so glad you came," whispered the Winsome Lady, drawing the tiny figure within the room and closing the door. The frail hands carefully stroked the brown hair. For a moment there was silence, then the Littlest Mother spoke. "You are a dear girl, Ruth, and I love you. I'm sorry you're going. But it's better, as you weren't made for settlement work. Are you going to marry the Doctor Man?" The girl raised her head quickly. "Marry him?" she scoffed. "I'd sooner die!" "You say things so beautifully. But talk to me," begged the Winsome Lady, as she resumed her former position. "I think you need a love story. It sometimes proves a cure for a certain sickness. I'll tell you my own love story."

"Yours!" smiled the girl, her brown eyes filled with a tender light. "It was long ago," began the Littlest Mother, bending her white head. "When I was a girl, I lived in Ireland, by the sea. I loved and was loved by Tammas Wynne. One lovely moonlight night as we strolled hand in hand up the side of a woodland hill. I told Tammas that I was sure there were fairies about."

"Fairies—little men!" mocked he. "There are no such things!"

"We heard a peal of shrill laughter, but could see no one. Then Tammas turned boyishly to me and said: 'Wait for me, Ellen, wait for me!' With this he was gone. I waited for a long time and then, being childishly afraid, I went after him." Here the speaker's voice broke, but she continued gravely as if grown weary with the telling: "At the top of the hill I found Tammas—dead. I dead with a smile on his face, and in his hands—a tiny silver button! The fairies had punished him and left their sign."

The girl's eyes were luminous with unshed tears. "But you don't believe that—do you?" queried the girl as they both arose.

"Of course! Everyone believed it! But it's children I've always wanted. At night I dream of them, with their little hands that they hold out to me. I went to night school for long years—to be a teacher; but I came here, out of pity. I think today is my birthday, and I've saved enough to buy a ticket to Ireland. I don't feel like cleaning—in fact I don't feel very well!" She hesitated as the door opened and revealed the handsome, debonaire doctor.

"I heard the story," he announced, flushing, "and Ruth, forgive me! I'm not in the service, because I belong to the secret service."

"Oh, my dear," and the girl kissed him. "Why didn't you tell me? I thought you were a slacker!"

And the Littlest Mother, being worldly wise, slipped quietly out, into the crowded street.

Suddenly she heard her name called. She turned and confronted a big Irish policeman known as Tim Reilly. By the arm he held a girl with painted lips and wide, frightened eyes.

In his rich brogue he narrated to the tiny lady, how the "slick up," as the girl was famed, had been caught stealing again.

"An' it's me as will give 'er her doos," he grinned.

"Let me whisper in your ear, Tim," commanded the Littlest Mother, as if she did not mind the curious throng.

"Sure an' I will," shouted Tim, straightening up; "ye air a saint. Take her if ye can find good in the likes of her."

The wee lady's eyes twinkled like stars as she drew the girl into a doorway, while Tim dispersed the crowd.

"Take this," she said, giving the girl a roll of bills, "and try to be a better girl."

The girl looked shrewdly after the disappearing figure. "God—what a fool!" she sneered, and fled.

The Littlest Mother reached her cheerless room at last, and sank wearily down in a chair facing the distant sunset.

Below the window stood a wanderer, his violin tucked lovingly beneath his chin. Seeing the weary figure, he started to play a haunting melody.

The weary look fled, and the Littlest Mother, chancing to raise her eyes, gave a cry of rapture. For there, hung on the faded wall, was a picture of the Madonna and Child—the birthday gift of her friends.

"Tammas!" whispered the Littlest Mother, "see the baby—and look—the mother smiles at me."

She stretched out eager, trembling hands toward the picture and almost unconsciously repeated these sweet old words she loved so well:

"Do you think what the end of a perfect day
Can mean to a tired heart—
Well, this is the end of a perfect day.
Near the end of a journey, too—
Her voice broke as the wanderer ceased his playing, and she bowed her head on her hands, murmuring: "The waited long, Tammas—I'm coming—I'm coming!"

And the dying sunset touched with a lingering caress the bent head, and the glory of it filled the room.

ONE WOMAN TOLD US

"Five minutes in the morning with an electric iron makes wash day so much lighter."

This woman realized how often blouses, frocks and even lingerie found their way into the laundry bag ahead of time, just slightly mused.

Even a hint of untidiness made dainty things un-wearable and added to the weekly washing.

Now she uses an electric iron: With just a twitch of the switch and a few moments of gentle ironing, crumpled garments become smooth and lovely—altogether wearable.

Methodist Matters

This evening, Friday, Dec. 3, a family get-together, gathering of the church people for supper and a reception to the new electric superintendent, Mr. A. B. Dickson, will be held at the church. The occasion is the local church conference which always comes early in the conference year, but as this is Dr. Leonard's first conference in Plymouth, the occasion is being made a reception in his honor. Six o'clock is the hour set for the reception in the auditorium, and supper will be served shortly after 6:30. A bountiful supper has been provided by a competent committee, no one has been solicited to furnish it, and the price charged will be just enough to cover the expense, not more than 30¢ per plate, perhaps only 25¢. The business of the conference, with reports from different departments of church activities, and greetings from Dr. Leonard, will be arranged as an after-dinner program. About one hundred people are expected.

The Tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock in December, 1620, which is being observed by churches all over the country this month, will have fitting commemoration in the Plymouth Methodist church, this Sunday evening, Dec. 5th. There will be special music, and the pastor, Rev. F. M. Field, will preach on, "The Faith of Our Pilgrim Fathers." This service ought to be attended by many patriotic citizens, who appreciate the heritage of a christian country handed down to us from our forefathers.

The young people of the Epworth League have been working hard for the past four weeks in their rehearsals for the new student play, "Jedediah Judkins, P.," which they are to present to the public next Wednesday evening in the High school auditorium. Mrs. Clifford Jones has given faithful and efficient directorship, without which such a difficult production as this would have been impossible. The plot of the play is intense and interesting, the moral teaching is of a high order, but there is lots of fun all the way through.

The first Sunday in December is the quarterly communion Sunday, and at the morning service the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. This service will be preceded by a half hour fellowship meeting for testimony and confession, beginning at 9:30. A new feature of the communion service will be the chanting of the Sanctus by the quartet.

The Sunday-school officers and teachers enjoyed a bountiful supper in the church dining room one evening last week, and then considered important business of Sunday-school administration. The supper was one of the best ever served at such a gathering. About forty-five were present, including a number of new instructors, who have been added to the Sunday-school faculty. The December meeting will be omitted on account of the holidays, and the next meeting will be the second Tuesday in January. Mrs. M. Field and Mrs. B. J. Holcomb will have charge of the supper.

Illustrated sermons covering the entire life of Christ, presented on six successive Sunday evenings, with beautifully colored stereoscopic views, will be the special feature of our evening services during parts of December and January. It is thought the series may be ready for our use, beginning a week from Sunday, but definite announcement will be made Sunday.

The Women's Bible Class, of which Mrs. G. H. Whitney has been the teacher for the past two years, gave a farewell party for Mrs. Whitney and Mrs. W. J. Stewart, who will spend the winter in Florida. The party was given at the home of Mrs. H. A. Spicer on Ann Arbor street, Wednesday afternoon.

KING'S CORNERS

Owing to sickness in the home of Mrs. Ben Hill, the meeting place of the Helping Hand society has been changed and will meet Wednesday, Dec. 8th, at the home of Mrs. Ed. Pettibone in Plymouth, for dinner. All are welcome. The word for roll call will be brought with M.

Including in the improvements which the Pere Marquette are making here will be a rest room, a wood working shop and a storehouse for castings, etc. There are pretty good indications now that next spring will see a new depot under construction in Plymouth.

The bazaar given by the Lutheran Ladies Aid society last Wednesday afternoon, was a success in every way, although the weather was unfavorable. The ladies had many useful and fancy articles, which found a ready sale, and at the close of the bazaar they found they had netted about $140.

The concert given by the Millard band, under the direction of Frank Millard, in the High school auditorium last Wednesday evening was attended by about two hundred people. This entertainment was given under the auspices of I. O. O. F. No. 32, and as usual the band presented a delightful program that was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Deaths

In loving memory of Clara E. Spicer, who passed away on the 2nd of December, 1919. When her life was brightest, And her hopes were the best; She was taken from this world of pain To a home of eternal rest. Sad and sudden was the call, Of her so dearly loved by all; She is remembered as well today, As the day she passed away. Days of sadness still come o'er us; Tears in silence often flow; For memory keeps her near us. Husband and Daughter.

ON THE WAY. Harvard astronomers are watching a celestial conflagration which happened so far from this world that the light rays have just reached us after two hundred thousand years. Inversely, in a few more centuries, perhaps the Martians will enjoy a little speculative gossip as to what is causing the big flare-up on the Planet Earth. And it will be Emperor Nero's jazzy bouffe at Rome. Like an order in a restaurant, the light rays are "on the way."—Arthur H. Folwell, in Leslie's Weekly.

A SUPER-GENIUS. "So you don't believe there is such a thing as genius?" "Not nowadays," replied Mr. Dustin Stux. "What is your idea of a genius?" "A man who could think of some way to help the railroad business without raising rates."

SYSTEM. "Did you tell your boss you had a sick grandmother or anything so you could get off for the ball game?" "Didn't have to tell him anything. His boss and his boss' boss were busy looking for excuses of their own to get out and play golf."
