PLYMOUTH FOLKS ENJOYED CONCERT

J. L. HUDSON CO. SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA AND QUARTETTE GAVE THE FINEST CONCERT OF THE KIND EVER GIVEN HERE, LAST FRIDAY NIGHT.

The concert given by the J. L. Hudson Co. Symphony Orchestra and Quartette at the Penniman Allen theatre, last Friday evening, under the auspices of Plymouth Rock Lodge No. 47, F. & A. M., was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season. The house was crowded, every available seat being occupied, 615 tickets being sold, the capacity of the theatre. There were some forty-two members of the orchestra and singers and each number rendered received repeated encores, to which the players and singers generously responded. Beginning with the overture by the orchestra, which was perhaps its best number on the program, the enthusiasm of the audience continued to the very last and they were soon their own to depart. The male quartet and woman's quartet each gave selections that were very pleasing. The Hudson French Horn Quartette rendered several selections most agreeably. Master Angus Pfaff, boy soprano sang himself into the hearts of his audience, receiving several encores. Henry Feiler, violin soloist, was master of his art, and exhibited wonderful skill with the bow and strings. Perhaps the most noteworthy number was the exhibition of skill by Arthur Cooper on the xylophone, accompanied by the orchestra. Mr. Cooper was several times recalled by the enthusiastic audience, who seemed to regard the deft performance on this instrument as most wonderful.

The people of Plymouth will regard this concert as one of the most successful entertainments ever given by a concert company, are lavish in its praise, and hope the "Hudsons" may be induced to come again at no distant day.

THE DRUMMER KNOWS

No set of men who visit Plymouth in a business way know more about conditions in this country than the traveling salesman, whom we once referred to as the "drummers." When there are a lot of them on the road business is flourishing, when they are scarce, it's bad. They are a good barometer of business conditions all over the country. In conversation with one of a few days ago he emphatically declared that increased buying is, in order particularly in the south and west. Merchants who believed that commodity prices would make further drops have, he says, apparently realized that they are mistaken, and they have started again to stock up. Where traveling men have heretofore been unnecessary, and where buying has been so small that the merchants ordered what they wanted by mail, the knights of the grip are finding a revival that is encouraging. Failure and refusal of merchants to buy products was largely responsible for stagnation of manufacture. That, too, is changing now, and factories throughout the country have commenced to take back their men. The big industrial towns report a brighter employment outlook and the labor situation is fast being adjusted. There will be some few additional adjustments, of course, in the price of a few commodities, but they will be gradual, and the traveling man says there isn't going to be a big increase or a big decline in anything in the food or apparel line for a long time to come.

"COEUR DE LION"

Relic of Great British Monarch Found at Rouen.

Intact, Though Shrunken in Dimensions When Discovered in Vault of Famous French Cathedral.

The reported discovery of a coffin containing the heart of Robert Bruce at Melrose abbey reminds the Manchester Guardian that the "lion heart" of King Richard I was not discovered in Rouen cathedral until Queen Victoria's reign. In 1835 some antiquaries obtained permission from the archbishop of Rouen to search for Richard's heart, which tradition stated was near the high altar. Their excavations revealed a rebus figure of Richard, in goul preservation, with the exception of the nose, hands and feet, which apparently had been broken so as to flatten the effigy when the present pavement was laid over it.

The next find was a leaden case inscribed "Richard Coeur de Lion, Duc de Normandie, Roi d'Angleterre." A hole had been made in the lid—probably by robbers, for it is said that the leaden case was originally inclosed in a silver casket and that some coins were placed therein.

The heart, which was enveloped in green taffeta, proved to be intact, though shrunken in its dimensions. After sojourning for a time in the archbishop's palace the heart was transferred to the Rouen Museum of Antiquities, where it has been kept ever since.

Richard's other remains are many miles from Rouen—at Fontevault abbey, where they lay, as he directed, at his father's feet. Napoleon III once promised to hand over to British the Plantagenet relics, but they have not reached England.

In 1805, when Lord Derby became premier for the third time, he reminded the emperor of his pledge, but to no effect.

"If you insist on the fulfillment of my promise," said Napoleon, "the relic shall be transferred to England, but I hope you will release me. The people of Fontevault raised such a storm of protest when I announced my intention of removing them that I thought better of it."

Fontevault abbey now serves as a convict prison, but visitors are admitted to the vault, which contains rebus figures—dressed in their royal robes—of Henry II and Queen Eleanor, their son Richard, and Isabel, widow of King John. These were hidden away by some monks during the Reign of Terror, when the Plantagenet tombs were desecrated.

The royal effigies are admirable examples of medieval workmanship.

No Dogs, Births or Deaths.

No births, no deaths, no dogs. A tract of land subject to these singular prohibitions is the sacred island of Miyajima, situated most gorgeously in the inland sea of Japan.

With the trifling exceptions of entering the world, leaving it, or starting a "house" you may do practically what you please there.

Stringent religious regulations, dating far back into history, forbid these small adventures.

Nevertheless humanitarianism is stronger than Shinto law, and no more terrible penalty is exacted from the unlucky mother than that she should be moved to the mainland as soon as possible, and remain there for 50 days.

As for death, once the poor sufferer at this last pump was carried across to some other shore, his final breath should pollute sacred soil.

Now, it needs must, he is allowed to die in peace, but his body is instantly removed to Ono for burial, and the chief mourners who attend the funeral are obliged to abscond themselves from Miyajima for 50 days of ceremonial purification.—From "Continental Edition of the London Mail.

GARDEN NOTES

(By M. A. C. Horticultural Dept.)
Plant seed for the late cabbage crop at once. See that the seed bed is fine and moist. Danish Ballhead is the most popular variety for winter storage. Drumhead Savoy is a high-quality variety and is excellent for the home garden.
The first early plantings of garden peas are growing well now. Time to make another planting of the mid-season and late sweet wrinkle seeded sorts. Allow 18 to 24 inches between the rows for the dwarf varieties. The tall late varieties need at least three or four feet between rows. These should be provided with brush, wire netting or something similar for support.

Start the cultivator going early. It conserves moisture and means bigger and better crops.
Have you ever grown Swiss Chard for greens? It's better than beets. The leaves may be picked all summer. Fine for canning. A row 15 or 20 feet long will provide a season's supply for an ordinary family. Lucullus is the best variety.
For slugs on roses there is nothing better than a thorough spraying or dusting with arsenate of lead.

Most people sow seed too thickly, consequently many crops require some thinning. When the plants of lettuce, radishes, beets, carrots, etc. are about two inches high, they should be thinned until only the best remain, about two or three inches apart. Thinning allows the plants to develop larger roots, gives the sunlight a chance, and better plants result.

THE LEGION BODY OF FRANCE

Ex-Patriated Former Service Men Remains Abroad and Serves in Important Capacity.

When the last of the American expeditionary forces left France, a considerable number of ex-service men remained in that country as representatives of American firms and in various other positions. Among this group was Col. Francis E. Drake, commander of the department of France, American Legion.
The ex-patriated former service men found that there were mutual ties binding them together and the result was the formation of the Legion's department of France.
Among the achievements of this detached body of Legionnaires are: The direction of the decoration of graves of American soldiers on the battlefields and in the cemeteries of France on Memorial day; aid to stranded veterans in France; the raising of a fund to defend the American sergeants who attempted to capture Bergdoll, the arch slacker, on German soil and cooperation with the French government in furthering memorial plans of the American Legion.
Colonel Drake has returned to France after a visit to America, during which he effected arrangements for the decoration of all soldiers' graves on Memorial day, 1921.
The Legion commander attracted national attention when his investigation of the alleged "Rhine Horror" showed that there was no ground for the assertion of pro-Germans that French negro troops are participating in outrages upon German women in the Rhenish provinces.

AMERICANISM-BILLS GET O. K.
Three Measures Written by the American Legion Become Laws in Oklahoma, June 25.
Three Americanism bills written by the American Legion and introduced in the Oklahoma state legislature at the request of that organization, have been passed by the state legislature and will become laws on June 25.
House bill No. 383 provides that the American flag shall be displayed at all times in every school room in the state—public, private and denominational—and that pupils shall be taught proper respect and reverence for it by the state school superintendent. A penalty is provided for violation.
American history and civil government are made compulsory subjects for study in all schools of the state under house bill No. 384.
High schools, colleges, universities and normal schools must require at least one full year's work in American history and civics of each student graduated.
In the future, each teacher who is granted a certificate to teach in Oklahoma must subscribe to an oath of allegiance to the constitution of the United States and of the state of Oklahoma under the terms of house bill No. 389. Teachers found guilty of public statements against the flag or country shall have their certificates revoked.
The bills have been widely praised in the Oklahoma press and have been made a part of the national Americanism program of the American Legion.

MOTORS SUPPLIES

Thermo-Seal Inner Lining
 THE Thermo-Seal Inner Lining is the very foundation of successful heating with a pipeless furnace. Consider this carefully. Because—
 Warm air must keep on coming from the furnace, and cold air must keep on going in. If this circulation is retarded there will be no heat! Circulation will be retarded unless the cold air is kept cold until it reaches the bottom of furnace. (Note the direction of travel shown by arrows.)
 The Thermo-Seal Inner Lining, consisting of heavy asbestos covered with heavy galvanized steel plates kept the cold air chamber permanently cool. It maintains air circulation—is assurance of plenty of healthful heat.
 It Heats Less Price
 It Ventilates Less Fuel
 It Satisfies More Heat
 The Thermo-Seal is an exclusive Homer feature. Come in and investigate its importance. Call, phone or write for catalog.

Methodist Matters

The May meeting of the Ladies' Aid society is scheduled for next Wednesday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. L. N. Dickerson as hostess at her home on Fairground avenue. Entertainment and refreshments for the social hour will be provided by Mrs. Patterson's division.
 Mothers' Day was fittingly recognized in the primary department, last Sunday, each scholar presenting being given a dainty bouquet of flowers, marked, "for mother." The largest congregation for many weeks attended the morning preaching service, including several visitors from away.
 The monthly supper of the Sunday-school board was enjoyed by a goodly number of the officers and teachers, last Tuesday evening. A bountiful supper was provided by the committee, Mesdames, Cook, Lombard and Thomas. Plans for the observance of Children's Day, June 12th, were made, with the program in the charge of the teachers in the primary department. The June and August meetings of the board will be dispensed with, and the men are to serve the supper for the meeting in July, at which time plans will be made for the annual picnic.
 The material for the darkening apparatus for the church auditorium, has been ordered, and the curtains will be made up next week. About sixty-five yards of material is required. When these curtains are installed, they will not only be a great convenience, making possible daytime projection of pictures, but will also be an artistic addition to the room. The first real use of the darkening apparatus will probably be on Decoration Day, when the Civil War picture, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," will be shown both afternoon and evening.
 The story of Simeon Blas, a wealthy preacher in the Philippines, was told by Lyman Judson for the partnership program, last Sunday, in Sunday-school, the story being illustrated by views thrown on the screen with the stereopticon.
 An effort is being made to make a substantial payment for the reduction of the church indebtedness by May 25th. There is now on hand $517 to apply, and it is hoped to bring the amount up to $1,000 by that time. Contributions to the building fund at this time will be appreciated from all friends of the church, although no canvas is to be made.

"CUPID, THE COWPUNCHER" FOR CHURCH RECREATION NIGHT.

"Cupid, the Cowpuncher," is the title of this picture taken from the famous comedy of ranch life by Eleanor Gates. It has been called "a gale of entertainment blown in on a western whirlwind of laughter." Among the hilarious episodes is the scene where "Cupid" lassoes from horseback a speeding automobile by one wheel until it runs around in a circle like a frightened, tethered horse, to keep a rival from following his sweetheart to New York.

THE U. S. ROYAL CORD
 A famous tire—and a famous tread. Acknowledged among motorists and dealers alike as the world's foremost example of Cord tire building. Always delivering the same repeated economy, tire after tire, and season after season.
 The stripe around the sidewall is registered as a trade-mark in the U. S. Patent Office.

How you can measure tire value in 1921

OFTEN it's surprising the number of different tire views that come out in a chance talk at the curb or in the leisure of a friend's garage.

Almost every day you come across the man human enough to believe he can outguess the cut-price tag on "job-lots," "discontinued lines" and "surplus stocks."

His opposite is the hard pan car owner who sticks year in and year out to a standard brand as the only "rational economy."

Many will remember the scarcity of U. S. Tires last year.

A hardship at the time, but a benefit now. There are no U. S. Tires to be worked off—no accumulations—no forced selling of any U. S. brand—no shipping of tires from one part of the country to another to "find a market."

There are 92 U. S. Factory Branches. Each one gets its share of U. S. Tires. There is a broad, constant, even distribution of U. S. Tires always going on from these Branches to the dealer.

Buy a U. S. Tire anywhere—in a community of 500 people or even less—and you get a fresh, live tire of current production—with all the original service and mileage the factory put into it.

The owner of a medium or light-weight car stands on equal ground with every other car owner.

Any United States Tire is a universal full money's worth—backed up with a leadership policy of equal quality, buying convenience and price for everybody.

NEWS GOES FAST

Drum-Beat in Africa Has Telegraphic Speed.

Marvelous System of Signaling Has Long Been One of the Wonders of the World.

News is carried by drum-beat in Africa at a rate as fast as the telegraph, writes A. S. Crawley in the London Daily Mail.

"The natives of Central Africa have a wonderful system of signaling from village to village by drum-beat," he says. "Generally the property of the chief, these official drums, which are many, forming a set of varying size, are as a rule of the species known as incision-drum. This is a long, narrow, hollow cylinder, made from a tree trunk, with the ends closed.

"The drum is placed in either a horizontal or vertical position, the former producing the best results. Big drums carry more than ten miles. "By relay a message may travel 1,000 miles in little more than the velocity of sound.

"The drum-telephone depends upon an elaborate code of sounds. European travelers often order their dinner and night's lodging at the next village by a drum-message. The villagers use it as we use a postal, telegraph and telephone service—and there are no charges.

"For the home service the drum plays the part also of the church bell, the clock, the town crier and the daily newspaper. For instance, Rev. James Roscoe, whose African adventures and discoveries have recently been reported, notes that it announced a birth or a death, the new moon and the weekly fast day.

"To help understanding of the marvelous code, as complete as a language, the remarks of Sir Arthur B. Ellis (writing of West Africa) are in point:

"To a European the rhythm of a drum expresses nothing beyond a repetition of the same note at different intervals of time, but to a native it expresses much more. To him the drum can and does speak, the sounds produced from it forming words and the whole measure of rhythm a sense."

"Thus, at a dance of 'companies,' in one measure they abuse the men of another company... then the rhythm changes and the gallant deeds of their own company are extolled. All this, and much more, is conveyed by the beating of drums, and the native ear, trained to detect and interpret each beat, is never at fault."

Midget Babies Often Thrive. Parents whose children are abnormally small at birth can take heart, for recent figures show that tiny infants frequently grow up quite robust, and of normal proportions. According to the observations of an English doctor, a girl baby born 13 years ago, to a Mrs. Warwick of Barrow-in-Furness, for instance, weighed only one and three-quarter pounds. She now turns the scale at 150 pounds, and is an exceptionally healthy and intelligent child.

Even more remarkable is the case of Leonard Merrick, who stands over 6 feet high and weighs 180 pounds, all brain and muscle and sinew. At his birth, 25 years ago, he weighed only 15 ounces, his head was not much bigger than a billiard ball, the mouth was only just about the size of the end of a pencil, and the mother's wedding ring would slip easily up the arm as high as the shoulder.

A baby exhibited at one of the meetings of the British Obstetrical society weighed only 20 ounces and the Medical Times once announced the birth of one that turned the scale at exactly one pound. Both these grew up strong and healthy, and of normal proportions. In short, a small infant seems likely to do as well as a big one, always provided, of course, that it survives the perils of babyhood.

Rivals. Gilbert K. Chesterton said the other day in New York:

"I am sick of the great horde of free verse poets that has sprung up among us. These little wretches grind out a few hundred words of silly twaddle that is without rhyme and without reason, and then they think themselves the superiors of Swinburne. "At the Greenwich village tea yesterday a scrawny little free verse poet said:

"I'm awfully sorry D'Annunzio has capitulated, you know." "Are you?" asked an old maid in staid. "Why?" "Notwithstanding our already overcrowded market," said the poet, "that duffer is sure to start writing poetry again."

Naval Coiffure. Oil-soaked hair is a novel form of coiffure introduced by the Russian ballet, which recently opened in Paris. The women dancers have cut their hair short and so saturated it with oil that it looks like a skullcap. Their eyebrows are painted in a long fine line, which runs right back to the roots of the hair, giving the face the appearance of a Polish doll.

Practical. "The time has come," said Mr. Brick's wife, "when woman may forsake the light, ephemeral things of life and take up the heavy subjects." And her husband rejoined, wearily: "Are you going to make bread at home again, Maria?"

Why is it that the big city papers rant about a "society beauty," and then spoil it all by printing her picture?

Lieut. Richardson's Sacrifice

By WILLIAM FALL.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

All through the hot forenoon Lieutenant Richardson had fought like a leader of heroes, braving death a dozen times from the spiteful Filipino bullets that hissed overhead; yet, though man after man had fallen in the thinning ranks, he was unscathed. And the more he sought death the harder it seemed to die.

With a mere handful of the seventy-nine who had been cut off from the main forces by the cunningly contrived ambush, Richardson had fallen back upon a hill, one of those smooth, isolated hills that emerge here and there in the northern region of Luzon. There, hard pressed, the little remnant of Squadron B were holding their own against the enemy's marksmen, waiting for the arrival of the relief column from Santa Catalina. It was strange how it seemed to Richardson as he lay on his face in the blistering sunlight. His mind went traveling back to other scenes, other days—to that last day in Washington before he sailed away.

He had sat all the cool afternoon with Lucy Greaves on the porch of the club house. Lucy was an old sweetheart of his boyhood.

On that last afternoon he had asked her to be his wife, to wait for him. Then Lucy, whom he had never seen since, broke down and sobbed in his arms. She was engaged to a fellow soldier, whom she loved, no longer. But the traditions of her family forbade her to break with him. She did not tell him the name. But Richardson had imagined that it was some officer he knew.

The memories vanished with the sudden cessation of the hissing above them. Richardson knew what that meant. The enemy was preparing to charge. They came upward, and, finding that the defenders made no reply, swooped in with a zest, flags flying, keen, razor-edged blades flashing back the light of the declining sun.

Next moment it was hand to hand. For a full minute—hours, it seemed—the fighting was fierce. Then the attackers were suddenly retreating and the besieged drew a little closer together.

"Sergeant, I'm going to put you behind this rock," said the lieutenant.

Hutton was fumbling at his throat. He opened the blood-stained tunic and disclosed a little locket of gold. "Open it," he whispered. Richardson obeyed and found himself looking upon the face of Lucy Greaves.

"She gave it to me," the sergeant whispered. "We were to have been married the day before I sailed. It was postponed at the last moment, till I came back. If I die you'll carry my love to her."

"Till tell her," he said. "But you'll pull through, Sergeant. Now lie still behind this rock and wait till the relief arrives."

A wild yell burst forth from beneath the hill, re-echoed from 500 throats. The Filipinos were charging again. And this time they charged home.

Suddenly, far down the valley, the clear notes of a bugle rang through the air. Then, over the stillness of the afternoon came the faint sound of jangling bits.

"Now, men," Lieut. Richardson shouted, "each of you take a wounded man on his shoulder and retire down the trail. I'll stay here and cover you until you reach the road." And, stepping behind the rock, he seized the rifle of the wounded sergeant, and, crouching over him, began pumping bullets into the ranks of the enemy, and then, catching up the wounded sergeant, crept down the hill. It was a whole minute before the natives discovered that he was gone. "We'll pull through, Sergeant!" he shouted cheerily to the man on his back, and stumbled onward. A yell from the ridge answered him and a renewed volleying. Then s-s-s! a red-hot wire seemed to be pressing against the lieutenant's arm, and, looking down Richardson saw that the pale yellow of his coat was turning a bright claret color. Zip! That one nipped him across the cheek. Gradually a delirium took possession of him. The sky, the earth, the trees spun round him. He seemed to be in Washington again, seated at Lucy's side, under the oak. Only the thought of her sustained him for a few yards more. Then, quite suddenly his legs crumpled beneath him and he reeled and fell forward. Lucy's face was shining out of the blackness of night.

"Tell her I—I wish you all happiness, Sergeant," he muttered.

Out of the profundity he rose through a region peopled by spectres to consciousness of his surroundings. He was lying in a bed and a man in a white linen suit was bending over him.

"Well!" he said, "you're doing far more than well. We'll have you found in short order, Captain."

"Captain! I—"

"Ah, you haven't seen the Gazette. That was a special order of the President. And they're talking about the congressional medal for you."

"But—Sergeant Hutton?"

"Ah, poor fellow! I guess you'll have to know, Captain. You had been carrying a corpse from the first. He was hit by a bullet just before you picked him up, and must have died instantly."

Treatment of Common Colds. "If all who catch cold could be persuaded to remain in bed for the first twenty-four hours of such an attack," says a well known physician, "there would be fewer cases dragging on with distressing symptoms, the weak and often ending in some more serious disease." To make sure of a prompt recovery you should also take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Whether sick or well the bowels should move each day.—Adv.

The Shasta Limited is the fastest train traveling over the 751 miles of magnificent track between San Francisco and Portland.

But Buick clipped 44 minutes off the best time ever made by this train.

A stock 1921 Buick Coupe on January 7th and 8th performed this remarkable feat. Conquering frozen roads and mud holes, winding mountain roads and rocky canyons, Buick once again demonstrated its characteristic inbuilt power, endurance and reliability.

Just a Squatter on Abandoned Land

By KATE EDMONDS.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Cephas Merritt was dead—Merritt, the rich, eccentric, philanthropic old merchant of Grand boulevard, whose name had been a synonym for integrity in Martinsville for forty years. And the big store and the bank and the innumerable pieces of real estate that he had owned here and there in the state capital had fallen to his miserly nephew, Hamilton Hall.

Hamilton spent five days with his lawyer, and at the end of that period discovered that one-fourth of Cephas' tenants had been living rent free for years.

But not all of Cephas' tenants had been poor. One of them, Miss Siodonia Travers, occupied the old Travers mansion on Hurland Heights, which had come to her on the death of her father twenty years previously. When Hall read this name he whistled; and when the lawyer told him that she, too, lived rent free, he whistled again.

"You see, it's this way, Mr. Hall," said the lawyer, "Miss Siodonia believes that the property is hers. She's got only a tiny income of six dollars a week outside it, and if she lost it she'd be practically a beggar—she and her niece, Mary Travers."

Mary Travers was prettier than ever, in Hall's eyes. When he saw her enter the old-fashioned drawing room a flame of jealousy of Blaine burned in his heart. His greeting of Mary was in itself a triumph.

"Sit down, Miss Travers," he said. "I have something to say to you. You know, of course, that my uncle is dead?"

"Yes," answered Mary. "He was a good man and an old friend of my aunt's. I am sorry, Mr. Hall."

"Well, that's more than I am, by long odds," Hall answered. "Don't you know that I've fallen heir to everything he had? Yes, and I find that I'm worth a cool eight hundred and fifty thousand at the lowest estimate. Now, Mary, I want you to be sensible. Be my wife. Don't be infatuated by that man Blaine. He's a good, honest fellow, no doubt, but he'll never be anything."

"Mr. Hall," said Mary, rising. "I cannot hear any more."

"What, you won't marry me now?" "Never!" she cried angrily, confronting him with blazing eyes. "I hate and despise you."

"Then why don't you marry Blaine?" sneered Hamilton Hall. And, as she did not reply, he continued:

"I'll tell you why. You're waiting until your aunt dies so as to get her property. But it isn't hers—it's mine."

"This house is not my aunt's!" she cried.

"No, Miss Mary, it's mine," Hall answered. "But if you'll throw Blaine over and marry me I'll settle it on Miss Travers for life. Give me a kiss and then I'll make you love me."

Vincent Blaine was at the door. Hall turned, to see Blaine advancing upon him with clenched fists.

"What's the matter with you?" Hall shouted.

Blaine did not strike him, for Hall, was a much smaller man. Instead, he quietly wrenched his chair from his grasp and, taking his shoulders in a firm grasp, shook him backward and forward till the man's head wagged foolishly upon his shoulders.

"What do you mean?" asked Blaine, grimly. And Mary told him.

"Vincent, dear," she said presently, "we have a hard fight before us. Now that we must fight shoulder to shoulder—help me out, Vincent."

He pressed her to his arms.

"When?" he asked, kissing her.

"Next month," she whispered back.

But long before the date set for their marriage arrived Hamilton Hall had begun his legal battle.

"We're at the end, Mary," said Blaine, despairingly. "The case is scheduled for next Tuesday, and we've no answer to make."

"That means a death sentence to Aunt Siodonia," answered Mary, weeping.

"By the way, did I tell you I've got a new lawyer?" asked Blaine presently. "He used to be a partner of old Fingall—the man who acted for Mr. Merritt so many years. He wants us to attend a conference the day before the trial, to be held in his office. He seems to have a card up his sleeve. I'll call for you on Monday at nine."

Blaine called for Mary and took her to the lawyer's office in a cab. There they met Hall with his attorney, and the Ave seated themselves around the table. Blaine's lawyer, a lean New Englander named Robertson, made his proposal.

"I see," said Mr. Robertson, fumbling with his papers, "that Miss Travers has occupied the premises unopposed for—er—twenty years, four months, and nineteen days. You are aware, of course, that under the common law, as amended in this state that gives her indisputable ownership."

"But she thought it was her house," said the other.

"A great blunder," answered Mr. Robertson. "We confess unreservedly that it was not. She was a squatter—just a plain squatter on abandoned land. But I guess she'll squint there for a good many years longer, gentlemen."

SEA'S OLD TALES

Superstitions That Are Held by Cornishmen.

Phantom Lights and Phantom Ships Implicitly Believed In by Sailors Who Fear Nothing.

All along the Cornish shores the phantom ship is thoroughly believed in, as also are the phantom lights. Some years ago a schooner-rigged vessel made signals of distress to the west of St. Ives bay. A cable that put out reached her, and one of the seamen made a grasp at her bulwarks in order to jump on board; but his hand met nothing solid, and as he tumbled back into the boat the schooner and her sailing high disappeared in the darkness. Next morning a schooner out of the port of London was wrecked within the same vicinity, and all on board her perished. The phantom lights are seen generally before a gale; the Cornish seamen call them "Jack Harry's lights," and the ship seen resembles the one that is subsequently wrecked.

The death ship is a superstition peculiar to Cornwall. With black hull and stumpy bowsprit, she comes in, with all her canvas set, against the wind and tide, and as she turns to reach to seaward again the doomed person dies. Most famous of the traditional stories grouping round the death ship is that of a wrecker, who lived at Tregaseal, beguiling vessels with false lights and doing to death those who escaped the waves. When he lay dying a black ship full rigged with all sail set was noticed coming in upon the land against the wind and tide; and as the man died she bore out to sea again in a half gale.

Portburcove, near the Logan stone, has also a ship of doom. Sometimes there is seen when the mists are rising off the marshes a black square rigged craft, which stands over to Bodelan and Chywidan and suddenly vanishes. Upon whosever sails, her ill luck and death are sure to fall.

Near St. Ives, too, is a churchyard haunted by an apparition, sight of which entails disaster to seamen. In the sixties of the last century a vessel was wrecked on the coast here. The men who went off to the rescue found on board a lady with a child in her arms. She refused to part with her charge, and in drawing her by a rope from the wreck to the boat the child was lost in the raging seas. The lady died through shock and exposure and was buried in the local churchyard. Today her wraith is said to haunt the shore, whether the day or the night is tempestuous or dark or clear or fine. And on whoever sees her, be he a seafaring man, disaster falls.

The coasts of Cornwall are second to none in the wildness, the variety and originality of their sea superstitions. For nowhere else in Europe has the sea taken such a toll of dead, and still takes. Only Cape Ushant, and, perhaps, the Goodwin sands off the coast of Kent, may rank behind Cornwall in the sea's colossal ledger of death and disaster.—National Marine.

Yes you can have such a phonograph

LET us show you the Certificate of Authenticity which Marie Morrisey has signed. This is the outstanding fact which comes to you out of the memorable tone-test recital given recently in the High School Auditorium. A new era in music is here. Mr. Edison has lifted the phonograph to the dignity of a new art.

You can no longer be satisfied with a phonograph that imitates. Now, you want a phonograph that equals the human voice.

You know there is such a phonograph. Mr. Edison made an astounding test with the Official Laboratory Model of the New Edison to prove it. Plymouth heard the New Edison Re-Created Marie Morrisey's voice in direct comparison with Miss Morrisey's living voice. So realistic was the New Edison performance that no one in the entire audience could distinguish it from Miss Morrisey's living voice.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph With a Soul"

You yourself can have such a phonograph. Let us show you exact duplicates of the Official Laboratory Model, which triumphed in the tone-test. Let us show you the Certificate of Authenticity which Miss Morrisey has signed, after inspecting these instruments, and in which she declares that these instruments are the equals in every respect of the instrument used in the tone-test.

You can buy your New Edison on a Budget Plan which so distributes the payments that you'll hardly feel them.

Fordson

The Fordson cuts the cost of preparing land almost to half of what it costs with horses. But even more important is the fact that the Fordson saves from thirty to fifty percent of the farmer's time. And time saved—getting fields in shape to plant in the proper season; getting things done when they should be done—means money to the farmer. Besides it solves the labor problem.

As ever, the machine-way is proving more efficient, faster, easier than the old hand way. In the factory, the machine increases production, saves labor—produces more at less cost. And that is what the Fordson does on the farm. The Fordson way is the machine way of farming. Besides it solves the labor problem.

The Fordson's first cost is the lowest on the market; and the after-operating-cost is lowest. It is a compact easily handled tractor, backed by the greatest tractor service organization in the United States.

We are Fordson dealers. Not only do we sell Fordson tractors, but we carry a stock of Fordson parts and employ Fordson mechanics to help the farmers get the best results from the Fordson.

Old Holzapfel's Jar of Peaches

By HAZEL SMITH.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

People said that old Rogers was a miser, but that statement was incorrect. Rogers had been a miser. He had scraped and hoarded during thirty years of labor, so that now, though he was barely fifty years of age, he looked older. But Rogers had retired three months before, thanks to some wisely made investments, and now, with fifteen thousand dollars at his disposal, he was still living on in his little two-room flat on the East side of New York, and trying to stretch his cramped imagination and plan his life anew.

Bitterly he regretted that he was an old bachelor without a friend or wife, sweetheart or child.

Rogers had gone to the delicatessen store of his acquaintance, Holzapfel, to buy something for supper. He cooked his own supper upon a tiny stove in his apartment.

"I think," he said after he had made his purchases, "that I'll take some preserved fruit."

"Why, Rogers, you're becoming a spendthrift, a regular spendthrift," said Holzapfel jestingly.

"Well, I've got some preserved peaches," said the old fellow. "But they wasn't put up yesterday, Rogers. I'll let you have them for a dime. They're home-grown, and they're worth twenty-five—if they was fresh."

Rogers took the peaches and walked out of the store.

The peaches were bad. But that fact had nothing to do with the case. For inside the jar was a little folded square of oiled paper. And in this was a folded piece of paper on which was written:

"Lucy Morrell, Egan, N. Y."

That compensated old Rogers for the loss of the peaches. It was one of those little harmless pranks played by country girls who put their names into bottles of fruit preserved by them and destined to go long distances and fall into strangers' hands. Often they had led to correspondence and sometimes to romance.

Old Rogers racked his brain. He could not remember anyone in Egan named Morrell.

But that evening the loneliness of his flat oppressed his spirit; and the very word Egan, written out on the paper, made him homesick for the little town. In the end he sat down and wrote:

"Lucy Morrell: I found your note in the peaches."

Days passed; old Rogers resumed the tenor of his life. He had not found the courage to break loose from his surroundings. But about a week later the postman left a letter in his box. It was the first he had received for months, except bank notices and bills. It was addressed to him in a delicate, feminine writing, and inside he read:

"Dear Friend: 'I got your letter, but you didn't say how you liked the peaches.'"

That was the beginning of a correspondence, and it brought a new happiness into old Rogers' heart.

He had asked for her photograph, but she had not sent it, nor alluded to the matter again.

She wrote less often. But one day came a despairing note in which she confessed something perilously like love. And then old Rogers knew that he had no alternative. So he wrote back, a wild letter such as he would not have been capable of a year before, in which he told her:

Then a week passed, and then her answer came, and it said simply:

"Come up to Egan. The third house from the depot. LUCY."

On that same afternoon old Rogers drew his money from the bank. Then he turned his back upon Thirteenth street forever and set forth for Egan. He reached the little place at five on an autumn afternoon. It had not changed as he had expected.

He descended at the depot and walked slowly toward the cottage. So he passed through the latched gate and knocked at the door. A pleasant, gentle-looking lady of about forty years opened to him.

"I am James Rogers," said the visitor simply. "I have come to see you daughter." He said the last word with a tone of interruption. Yet he felt sure that this was Lucy's mother. This was just such a mother as he would have expected Lucy to have. And yet it was strange that she had never mentioned her in her letters.

"I am Lucy Morrell," she said, trembling.

He knew then that he loved her the more truly because she brought to him a mind ripened by experience and a love whose strength was only the deeper for the passing of the years. And she had feared as he had feared, when the correspondence began in jest, had ended in earnest. And then his letter had come!

"But there's one thing I can't understand, dearest," he said that evening, as they sat before the fire. "Why did you write your name on the paper and put in the bottle of peaches? I could imagine that of you as a young girl, but not now."

"My dear," she answered, smiling. "I bottled those peaches 26 years ago."

The eighth grade is preparing for the examinations in seventh grade for their two weeks.

Battery Foresight

It pays to look ahead when you buy a battery. It only takes a minute or two to be sure you are getting Willard Threaded Rubber battery with insulation—insulation of separators—between plates.

Threaded Rubber Insulation will save you dollars and cents later, because it keeps on doing its work as long as the plates last. No bills for replacement—insulation—as there always for replacing wood separators.

Drive in. Let us tell you the whole story.

Today's Reflections

Uncle Sam said he wanted nothing when he entered the war, and it begins to look like that is what he's going to get.

Another thing you can't do is make a Plymouth girl believe dish-washing will make her hands as soft as a drug store lotion.

Now that the season for beating a train across the track is here, the fool killer is in the height of his glory.

Funny how a law can change popular expressions, but you seldom hear a man say, "Here's to you" any more.

Our sympathy goes out to the Plymouth man who saves his money only when he can't think of something to spend it for.

The price of steel billets is coming down. That would be good news if you could pay the rent and grocery bills with them.

We heard a Plymouth man declare yesterday that raising taxes by raising the tariff is like drawing cider out of the east end of the barrel to save the cider that is in the west end of it.

Maybe the reason we always have the poor with us is because they can't get anywhere else at the present high cost of traveling.

A scientist says more married men than bachelors have heart trouble. It was heart trouble that caused them to be married.

It seems to worry some Plymouth women when they can't remember what they were worrying about yesterday.

After a fellow has figured out an income tax blank he knows everything about his income except where it went to.

A couple of weeks ago, a cow belonging to Harry Peters, who lives near South Lyon, was taken sick. A veterinary surgeon was called, but treatment seemed to do no good. The doctor said heart trouble was indicated. The cow died on Tuesday, and a post mortem examination showed a handful of nails in the animal's stomach. One of the nails had worked through the walls of the stomach and punctured the heart. Where the cow got the nails or why she should manifest such strange dietary propensities are mysteries.—Milford Times.

With the completion of the pavement west of Howell last season and the recent opening of Grand River road between Indian Lake and New Hudson, the last stretch of bad roads has passed, and the final link of the Lansing-Detroit road is completed.

Washtenaw county has let the contract for the building of five miles of road to connect the Dexter and Pinckney roads. This road runs between the Portage lakes and is a very bad piece of road, and also one of the most important connecting links between Ann Arbor, Howell and Lansing.

The executive board of the Wayne County Fair Bureau has selected William Boman for the new club leader in boys' and girls' work in Wayne county, and he took up the work on the retirement of G. O. Stewart the first of May. G. O. Stewart, who enters business for himself, will leave many friends among old as well as young, to wish him the best of success in his work.

"Joe Dempsey, the Renegade," the play of the Odd Fellow band, will get its final production at the Pennington Allen theatre, Plymouth, Friday evening, May 13. The play has been presented with such success on several occasions, including three nights at Wayne, two in Flat Rock, once in Belleville. The players will disband after the next date until fall, when several other plays are to be rehearsed and presented.—Wayne Weekly.

Meadames J. M. Burgess of Detroit, and J. A. Huff, whose birthdays fall upon the same day, celebrated the happy event at the home of Mrs. Huff in this village on Tuesday. At 12:30 a bountiful dinner was spread for fourteen guests, and both the spread and the afternoon visit which followed were thoroughly enjoyed. Dr. and Mrs. Burgess and daughter, Mabel, of Detroit, and Mrs. Arthur Scott of Plymouth, were out of town guests.—Northville Record.

THE THEATRE

That mother long may triumph even when science has failed, is the story told in "The Woman in His House," a remarkable photoplay, which will be the attraction at the Pennington Allen theatre, Saturday evening, May 14. It deals with the sacrifice and devotion which went to the cure of a child who science had said would always be a hopeless cripple.

An all-star cast appears in this picture, headed by Mildred Harris, who plays the role of the neglected wife and mother, and Ramsey Wallace, who has the part of the over-ambitious husband and father, a great physician. The other principal players are: Thomas Holding, George Fisher, Gareth Hughes, Winter Hall, Catherine VanBuren, Bob Walker and Little Richard Hedrick.

The latter has the part of the afflicted child. The locale embraces the picturesque, rockbound coast of eastern Canada, and the home and environment of the busy New York physician. "The Woman in His House" is a Louis B. Mayer production, released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. It was directed by John Stahl.

As you know nothing is so exhilarating as a good laugh unless it be half a dozen good laughs. That's why you ought to see the motion picture version of that irresistibly funny farce, "Officer 666," which will be shown at the Pennington Allen theatre, Tuesday evening, May 17th, with Tom Moore in the leading role.

This farce is so crowded with fun that you have to count the laughs by the dozen. Or perhaps we'd come nearer the truth by saying the entire piece is one laugh—one continuous roar. Don't miss it.

"The Stranger" will visit the Pennington Allen theatre, Thursday evening, May 19. Who is the Stranger? Nobody knows until the end of the picture. But suffice to say, he is a very worth-while sort of a chap.

One knows instinctively that his mysterious purpose involves the righting of a wrong of some kind. The lovable little heroine trusts him from their first meeting, and her trust proves in the end to be most happily placed. Millard K. Wilson, as The Stranger, a man of action rather than words, and Beatrice La Plante of Paris, France, as Betty Lugo, the brave little lady of the story, will surely win the love and admiration of all. Billy Gettinger is the villain, but he is a new type of a villain and puts up some pretty hard problems for the stranger to cope with.

The association have been greatly handicapped by not being able to purchase more land in connection with the cemetery. A number of people have been turned away who wanted to buy lots there. The assessment of lots is $5.00—that includes back taxes. It should be handed in as soon as possible, as they are greatly in need of the money to repair and paint fences, cement in stones that have fallen over, stumps to be dug out from trees that were blown down, some monuments are on the verge of toppling over. Your money and any assistance you may render will be greatly appreciated.

Lord Alwyn's Bride

By MURIEL BLAIR.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Everybody on board the ship thought that Lord Alwyn and Signora Pasquale would be engaged before the vessel sighted Sandy Hook. Their acquaintance began at the captain's table on the first day; on the second, since the intermediate passengers were all seafarers, Lord Alwyn took the chair next to the opera singer; thereafter they appeared to be inseparable. They had not much to say on that evening, for the realization of his love for the beautiful singer had come to the Englishman quite suddenly, and when it was too late to withdraw.

"You know I love you?" he began, as they walked slowly under the stars. "Yes, there was never any pretense between us. And our love should naturally end in marriage. Well—I am already married!"

"Let me tell you briefly the story of my life," he said. "When I was ten years younger I quarreled with my father. My elder brother was alive then; I had no hope or thought of succeeding to the title. I was sent to Colorado to a ranch. I was twenty-three, impressionable, hopeless for the future, and very lonely. Old Aaron Hopper, the ranchman who had undertaken my education in return for five hundred dollars, had a daughter, a more slip of a girl, good, sweet, pretty, and charming but hopelessly infatigable. To this day the sound of a concertina sets my heart beating. When I heard you sing 'My Old Kentucky Home' at the charity meeting—that was the first time we met, do you remember—the remembrance of those days come back to me as fresh and keen as ever. Well, we were engaged. We were wildly in love, in a boy and girl fashion. And we were to be married."

"The day before our marriage I received a letter from England. My father and brother were dead; both had been killed instantly in a train wreck. I was heir to the title and the family estates and fortune. In my elation I told Eva."

"I shall never forget the scene that occurred. How she refused to marry me at first. Finally I overcame her opposition and we were married the next morning, and Eva cried all through the ceremony."

"That night, when I came home, Aaron stood at the door, waving a letter, frantic with rage and humiliation. Eva had run away. I don't know what became of her. Detectives failed to find her. Old Aaron died cursing her and asking my forgiveness for having ruined my life."

"You did not want a divorce?" asked the woman softly. "No. How could I! I knew that the brave little spirit that had given itself into my keeping was mine always; that I was morally responsible for her; if ever she appeared I should have taken her home and asked no questions."

He ceased and the woman withdrew her hand and placed it on Lord Alwyn's shoulder. "Stop, dear!" she said. "Now look at me. I want to ask you a question. Do you love her as much as you love me?"

Lord Alwyn laughed rather bitterly. "I don't love her at all," he said. "And how much I love you you know. But, my dear, because I do not love her, I feel my duty the more strongly. So I am going to try to find her—and so—"

"Good-bye," she whispered, and raised her lips to his. Then she was gone and he was alone in the starlight and with his sorrow. Lord Alwyn spent three days in New York. He called on his detective agency, but they had learned nothing. Then he took the train for Colorado.

It was not until he reached the ranch that he came upon signs of cultivation. Alwyn drew rein at the door, hitched his horse to the old post, and knocked. A woman opened it. It was Eva, dressed as a rancher's daughter, a rake over her shoulder, her hands dusty with hay, but Eva matured—No, it was not Eva. It was Alice Pasquale!

Lord Alwyn staggered against the door and his hands, groping feebly, found hers and held them. "Do you know me now, dearest?" she whispered. "Have you found her again, this Eva, this ignorant girl?" "Alice!" he said, chokingly. "It is you? You are Eva?"

She placed her arms round his neck and drew his head down to her breast. "You couldn't have known, dearest," she whispered. "It was cruel of me to try you so long. How could you have recognized the ignorant farmer's girl in Alice Pasquale, the singer, the fugitive nobleman's adopted daughter? But I have waited for you so long, my dear!"

"When I left you that day it was with the resolve to claim you when I had become worthy of your love. I suffered in New York three years until I had acquired an education at night; then a woman engaged me as her companion to go abroad. She believed in my powers as a singer, she had me taught by the best masters; then Count Pasquale adopted me—and you know the rest. And every year I have come back as Alice Pasquale. I bought the ranch again. I come here during haying time—because I know some day you would come back."

"Never to leave you, dear," he answered. "This is our honeymoon at last."

Bremerton's Human Story

By FREDERICK CLARKE.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Everybody on board the ship looked out of the window of the West-bound Limited.

The train slowed, drew into the station, waited a few moments, and then puffed out again. A man came into the carriage and stopped at Bremerton's side.

"Excuse me, sir, but are you John Bremerton?" asked the other. "Well?" Bremerton demanded very curtly.

"I was sure that I was on your track. I knew I had recognized you. I want the inside story of the failure of the Cornucopia bank. I am a representative of the Iowa Free-Seller."

"You see, sir," the reporter continued, "of course we have all the details of the failure. I want a real human story."

"A real human story!" repeated Bremerton mechanically, and smiled a little bitterly at the irony of events which had left his life, except for his widened experience, just where it had been when he had left Framington, a penniless country boy, 15 years before. And his first sweetheart—Lizzie Gray! He had written—every day for a month; after a year his letters ceased. After two years he had stopped thinking of her. He had heard, not long afterward, that she was married.

"Framington! Change here for Des Moines!" shouted the conductor, and Bremerton started up hastily and seized his suit case. He had wanted to see the old town again.

Standing upon the platform he found the reporter at his elbow. He had entirely forgotten him.

"I'm afraid there's a wait of two hours for the Des Moines train," he said. "We just missed the connection. Now, Mr. Bremerton, won't you please help me with this story? It will mean a great deal to me, sir."

Bremerton was a man of quick decisions. He pulled out his watch.

"Three o'clock," he said, glancing at the dial. "I'll be back at four, and I'll give you that story."

He strolled out of the station. Except that a few new buildings had sprung up it was astonishing how little the town had changed, during the 15 years of his absence. And at the end of the lane was the Grays' cottage. There was the rustic stile where Lizzie and he had met those 15 years ago.

A woman was walking up the lane. She had turned in from below, just where the Gray cottage abutted on the pike. She would see him when she came out of the bend a few feet from the stile. Bremerton remembered how his heart had hammered that morning he had first kissed her. It was here, and Lizzie had walked just as she walked now, unconscious that he waited there. He had wanted to run away, as he wanted to run now. And she had looked up suddenly and seen him, just as she looked up now.

And both had trembled, just as both were trembling now.

And he had kissed her, just as he kissed her now.

She had hardly changed except that her figure had grown mature and her face more thoughtful, graver. "You are—not married, then?" he stammered.

She looked at him coldly, the flush of shame slowly fading out of her cheeks.

"How can you ask me that, John?" she said.

"But I heard—I heard—"

"That's why you ceased to write?" "No," he answered. "I ceased to write before I was told. But still, I am sure that if I had not heard so I should some day have come back."

"To redeem your pledge, John? Well, I release you from it. So let your conscience rest. My school occupies all my life and is my whole interest. While you—you are, or were, a very busy man and a very famous one."

"Then you have heard?" he asked. "Of course I've heard of you, John Bremerton," she answered. "I—we have all followed your career with the greatest interest," she continued, coloring faintly. "You know we are all proud of you in Framington."

"Oh, if only I had never gone!" he cried. Lizzie, I've come back to stay—with you."

"With me?" she repeated. "With me, John?"

"I want you," he cried. "I have never known what happiness meant since I went away. Will you be my wife?"

"You—you mean that, John?" she stammered.

He drew her into his arms, and she lay there at last, happily.

"Tell me you love me," he whispered.

"I have always loved you, John," she answered back. "And somehow I always knew that you would come. Oh!"

She disengaged herself hastily, looking up the lane in terror, and, following her glance, Bremerton perceived the reporter approaching them.

"I was just taking a walk—" he began. "I thought I need not sit in that station till four. I didn't know—"

"That's all right, son," answered Bremerton. "Never mind that appointment, but sit down on that stile. I'm going to give you a real human story."
