$25.00

For all-round, day-in-and-day-out picture making, the 2C has always particularly appealed to us—we think it will particularly appeal to you. It's compact and convenient to carry, for example, and yet the picture it makes is just short of post card size—2 1/4 x 4 1/4 inches. And then its lens equipment. The Kodak Anastigmat is designed by Kodak experts and manufactured in Kodak factories for the particular Kodak on which it is to be fitted. As a result lens and shutter and auxiliary equipment are in perfect harmony—and better pictures follow as a matter of course.

See it here. We are featuring the "2C Junior" in our Kodak department

THIS COW MAKES SOME RECORD

In the latest "Reported Tests of Holstein-Friesian Cows," published bi-weekly by Malcolm H. Gardner, Delavan, Wis., superintendent of Advanced Registry of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, W. H. Wernett & Son of Plymouth, have one of their pure-bred registered Holstein cows listed.

This cow, Stonesacres Lunde Pontiac Canary, is reported as having made at the age of three years and one month, a record of 550 lbs. of milk and 17 lbs. of butter fat in seven days, equivalent to 22 lbs. of butter.

Tests of this kind are supervised by one or more representatives from the Dairy Division of the College of Agriculture, present at each feeding and milking, to weigh the milk and test it for butter fat. A duplicate sample of the milk is forwarded to the State College, where a careful check is made before the record is reported.

FIELD MEET HERE JUNE 10

The annual field and track meet of the Four Square League, composed of the schools of Farmington, Dearborn, Wayne, Plymouth and Northville, will be held at Plymouth on Friday, June 10th. A big program of track events is being arranged. The athletes of the local schools are training hard for the coming meet, and they expect to make a good showing in the several events.

PLYMOUTH ATHLETES AT EAST LANSING

A squad of nine or ten will compete in the State Inter-Scholastic Track and Field meet at East Lansing, Saturday, June 4th. The High schools of the state are divided into three classes according to their size. Plymouth, with an enrollment of less than 250, is in class C, and should have a good chance in the meet. Medals are given for the prizes, and two silver cups for the first and second places in each class are also given. The following will probably compete: Miller, Capt.; Stevens, Fredy; Wiseley, Taft; Wilcox, Doudt; Walker, Sutherland, Williams.

SHORT PARAGRAPHS

During the Commencement week of Albion College, Rev. Frank M. Field of Plymouth, will be initiated into the Delta Sigma Rho, a national, honorary fraternity to which only those who have represented their college in debating or oratory are eligible, and will receive the Delta Sigma Rho key in recognition of his platform record in college. Mr. Field represented Albion College on a debating team every year of his college course, the opposing schools including University of Illinois, Detroit College of Law and DePauw University.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rattenbury of East Ann Arbor street, received a telegram the first of the week, stating that the remains of their son, Private Harry Rattenbury of the 39th Infantry, Co. C, who was killed in action overseas sometime between the first and sixth of August, 1918, would arrive in New York about June 2nd, and that the government would await further word from them. Mr. Rattenbury immediately wired that they desired the remains sent to Plymouth, and they are expected within a few days. Notice of funeral service will be given later.

A new Ford touring car belonging to George Springer was stolen from his garage, last Sunday morning between 1:30 and 6:00 o'clock. Mr. Springer was down town Saturday evening, and did not return home until about one o'clock, when he put his car away, locking the garage. The next morning he found that the lock had been removed, and the car had been pushed down the alley to Liberty street before starting. Marshall Gleason's garage, also Dan Bentley's were broken into the same night, but neither car was stolen. Mr. Gleason had removed the steering wheel from his car. No clue has yet been found as to the theft.

PLYMOUTH HONORS SOLDIER DEAD

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES IN HONOR OF FALLEN HEROES HELD HERE ON DECORATION DAY.

Plymouth, Monday, paid renewed tribute to its departed heroes with appropriate ceremonies, which included a parade in which veterans of two wars marched. Cloudless skies greeted the marchers as they formed in Kellogg Park, promptly at 1:30 o'clock, and the inclement weather, which has often marred the day's observance in years gone by, failed to materialize throughout the warm afternoon. Only twelve gray-haired veterans took part in the parade, and marched with the younger veterans. The procession led by the Millard band, marched to the High school auditorium, where the exercises of the afternoon took place. There was a large attendance. The platform was prettily decorated with flowers and the national colors. After a selection by the Millard band, the invocation was pronounced by Rev. F. M. Field. Gen. Logan's General Orders creating Memorial Day were read by Rev. Field. The Fourth Grade chorus of the public schools then rendered a selection most acceptably. This was followed by Lincoln's Gettysburg Address by Kenneth Bartlett, given in a most excellent manner. A song by the Fourth and Fifth Grades, most pleasingly rendered, was followed by an exceptionally well given reading by Miss Eva Griffith. The Girls' Glee Club rendered a selection most pleasingly. Rev. S. Conger Hathaway then gave the address of the day. The speaker paid a splendid eulogy to the memory of the great Lincoln and a glowing tribute to the sacrifices and heroism of the boys in blue, in the preservation of the union during the dark days of '61 to '65. He also paid a fine tribute to the younger veterans of the late war. The exercises concluded with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

The procession reformed and marched to Kellogg park, where the G. A. R. conducted a short service at the soldiers' monument.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY

A beautiful memorial service was held in the High school auditorium, last Sunday morning, at ten o'clock. The spacious hall was filled before the appointed hour, and several members of the G. A. R. and World War Veterans attended the service in a body. Rev. H. E. Sayles, pastor of the Baptist church, gave an impressive sermon. He was assisted in the service by Rev. F. M. Field and Rev. S. Conger Hathaway. Several pleasing selections were rendered by a male quartet composed of the following gentlemen: Messrs. F. W. Hamill, Herald Compton, Sidney D. Strong and Austin Whipple. The hall was decorated very handsomely with flowers and national colors. In the afternoon several members of the G. A. R. attended the memorial services at Newburg.

I. O. O. F. TEAM WINS TWO GAMES

The ball game last Saturday at Athletic park, between the local I. O. O. F. team and the Norton's of Detroit, was an easy victory for Plymouth. The score was 10 to 8. Participants: Plymouth—Williams and Norgrove. Detroit—Fredette and Palms. The I. O. O. F. team crossed bats with Eastern Lodge, No. 387, of Detroit, Decoration Day, and gave the visitors a defeat with the score 16 to 7. Batteries: Plymouth—Baker and Williams. Detroit—Lindsay and Rayale.

PICNIC TIME

Here's picnic season again, right around the corner. It suggests old puns about ants in the blackberry pie, and sand in the sugar, and all that, but we are not welcoming the season with any such ideas.

We're glad we're back around to picnic time and family reunion weather, because it will give Plymouth citizens who have been more or less housed up for several months a chance to get out and shake hands and renew acquaintance with each other. It means chautauquas and camp-meetings for many communities, and they mean not only entertainment but educational features that are too good to be overlooked. It gives whole families an opportunity to get together and talk over "the good old days," while nothing brings the farmer and the town man into closer touch than a big out-door meeting of some kind, where they can sit beneath the trees, whistle and talk to their heart's content. They get each other's ideas of business conditions; they discuss agriculture and offer each other helpful suggestions, and in this way each learns much that is going on to prove valuable later on. It gives the young people a chance, too, to get their lungs full of good, pure, fresh air, and to show off their new clothes, and to form friendships, which will last throughout all the years to come. In fact, everybody benefits from out-door gatherings, no matter where or when they are held. And we can only hope this section will see many picnics and family reunions this season, and that each will be marked by record-breaking attendance.

HIGH COST OF GREENS

Any Plymouth resident can take a kitchen knife and a dish-pan, go a few yards from home and return in a half hour with a fine "mess" of greens. Yet they pay little attention to this dish. In the city, however, it's different. The Chicago man, for instance, knows the truthfulness of this. A Texas man raises spinach for greens, and he sells it at $5 a ton. The railroad gets $30.66 a ton for hauling it to Chicago. The consumer in Chicago gets it at his dinner table at the rate of $300 a ton. The farmer got $5 for raising it, the railroad six times as much, and somebody in between raked off sixty times as much as the farmer got. And what is done in Chicago is done in every other big city of the land, every day. Not only with greens, but with a lot of other things that we could get or raise right here at home at little or no expense, but which we let go by because it is plentiful and easy to get.

Jan Olesen's Awakening

By MURIEL BLAIR

(C. 321, Western Newspaper Union.)

From the first moment of his opening the door Jan Olesen felt a presentiment of disaster. There was something in the atmosphere of the boarding house, with its stuffy hall, its gilt mirrors, its glaring plush ornaments, that sickened him, so that when the little maid came forward and asked whom he wished to see he could hardly utter Mina's name.

Jan Olesen, fresh from the west, where he had established himself as a prosperous farmer within three years after his arrival from Sweden, a penniless youth, looked in surprise at the little servant's troubled face.

"You are from my country?" he asked in his native tongue, and at the sound of the words the little fair-haired maid-of-all-work broke down and cried.

"I haven't heard the old speech for so long," she said, and then began smiling through her tears as the sun smiles out of a blue sky.

Jan Olesen looked at her in grave compassion.

"Do they treat you well here, child?" he asked.

She shrugged her shoulders. "Some of the boarders do," she answered. "Theatrical folks are mostly kind. But Miss Dalrymple—she's a terror. She's leading lady in the 'Red Slipper' chorus, you know—and, say," she added, breaking into the easily acquired slang of America, "what do you think? She's Swedish, too, for all her American airs and English name."

Olesen clutched at the wall to save himself from falling. Before his eyes a mist was swimming. His mind went back to the day when he, renting a cheap half bedroom almost in the next city block, had met Miss Jensen. She was just such a little maid as this, newly arrived from the old country. He remembered her shy smile, her engaging frankness. And they had become engaged, and he had gone west to make his fortune. Now after three years he had returned—to what?

Through the mist broke a scent of patchouli. Out of it he saw a woman approach, with fashionably done hair and gaudy dress; and through the floating clouds he saw a slim hand, much bejeweled, stretch forth to his.

"Why, if it isn't Jan!" exclaimed Mina. "I guess you didn't know me, Jan. Well, what are you staring at?" she continued to the girl. "Get busy with your work, whatever it is! Ain't she the impudent thing! Just a greenhorn, you know. Come right in, Jan, and tell me about yourself and if you've brought back a wad to blow in in New York. And say, Jan, can that stuff you wrote me about getting married and show me a good time in this burg instead. Nix on a Minnesota farm for mine!"

"Poor Jan! You haven't learned much in Minnesota, Jan!" she said at parting.

She had refused to discuss their marriage; instead, he was to take her to dinner on the next evening. Now the fabric of ambitions which he had built up was shattered.

But in the loneliness of his room that night his thoughts gradually began to flow in their accustomed groove again.

He had resolved to tell her everything on the following night; all his aims and aspirations; to beg her to come back with him to Minnesota. There, on their lonely farm, they would settle, as the old folks had done in Sweden, they would be happy. . . .

He fell asleep at last, happy in his dreams.

But on the next night the old feeling came over him again at the sight of the hall, the scent of perfume, the faded tawdriness of it. He hesitated upon the threshold; he could not enter.

And the little maid's eyes were red from tears.

"You have been crying, my dear," said Olesen.

"I'm to be sent away," she said, her voice quavering.

"Away! Well, but there are better places."

"O, yes, I'm not afraid. But she said—"

"She? Who?"

"Miss Dalrymple. She said—I can't tell you—well, that I didn't behave—that I talked to the man here—that I talked to you yesterday. And she pays twenty a week, so Mrs. Blumson is afraid to affront her. And she said that if I didn't go she would."

For an instant he pondered; then, taking the girl by the arm, he led her to the door.

"My dear," he said, "in the state I come from there are broad acres of land—land like we have at home, with forests and lakes. And there are no Miss Dalrymples there, and women are treated differently. Would you like to come with me to see the place I'm speaking of? There, don't let those tears come. No, never mind your hat; there's a department down round the corner where you can get all you need. But hurry, for it closes at five, and we've got to get to the city hall first and take out our marriage license."

Proved Anyway.

LET DICE DECIDE

Newlyweds Have Bright Scheme for Keeping Happy.

But Would it Work if One of Them Should Have a Parasitic Run of Ill Luck?

This is a story wherein the dice rule Cupid. For some time the apartment neighbors of the Newlyweds have been wondering what constituted their recipe for marital bliss. Those only a few years married declared they had never seen anything like it, and the old-timers asserted that no pair could be so happy and still be married. It wasn't done in this day and age. Not until just the other day did the apartment neighbors learn the secret of the Newlyweds, and now everybody in the house is trying it.

The old-timers still have some trouble, even under the Newlyweds' system, but those married only a few years say it has promise and may eliminate the divorce courts. The Newlyweds had been having trouble. Married for almost a year, Mrs. Newlywed had discovered her husband dipping his toast in his coffee in the morning and made a gutting sound when he ate it. Such a breach of breakfast table etiquette might be tolerated every other morning, but every morning—that was too much. On the other hand, Mr. Newlywed had found his wife did not judge the steak just the way he wanted it, hid his slippers in the dark corners, and in general committed particular things which irritated him a little.

These things were troubling the Newlyweds when Mrs. Newlywed struck on an idea.

"You want to be fair about this?" asked Mrs. Newlywed.

"I do," said Mr. Newlywed in a solemn voice that almost made him think he was back at the altar again.

"Then we'll get rid of this head of the household question which had been disturbing us," said Mrs. Newlywed.

"Have you got a pair of dice?"

"Sure," said Mr. Newlywed. "What for?"

"See," she said, "we'll throw them for a high point to show who throws first. Then the one who gets five natural first rules the household for a day. The other will do just what the winner dictates. In that way there'll never be any argument as to who is boss."

And there hasn't been. The dice find their boss for Cupid every day.—New York Sun.

Plague of Wolves in Mexico.

Man-eating wolves have killed more than a dozen persons in the San Pedro and Cuatro Ciénegas localities of Mexico. Never in the history of that region have these predatory animals been so numerous and vicious as now. It is stated. They run in packs and do not hesitate to attack travelers upon the roads and trails. Only recently a party of five Mexicans were making their way along a well-traveled highway near Cuatro Ciénegas when they were attacked by wolves. The men made a desperate resistance, but were finally overcome by the hungry animals. The skeletons of the victims, stripped of all flesh were found the following day. At the Tacuba ranch, near San Pedro, a night watchman was attacked and killed by wolves. Many cases of attacks being made by the animals and in which they were killed or driven off are reported.

France's Hunt for Timber.

Numerous practical experiments have been made by the French government in order to determine the resistance and durability of the various woods obtainable in French colonies. Contrary to the general belief, the timber which abounds in the colonies is not the hardwood employed by cabinet makers but common varieties which are adapted to ordinary construction purposes. A uniform commercial name has been given to the many varieties of timber which are closely related from a botanical point of view and suitable for the same purpose. The timber has been divided into categories according to its character and the purpose for which it may be utilized.—Scientific American.

Sanctuaries for Fur-Bearing Animals.

Sanctuaries for fur-bearing animals as one means of keeping up the supply are urged by the department of agriculture, whose biological survey tells the story of the increased worth of fur, says the Nation's Business. One man bought a lynx coat complete in 1913 for $500. After wearing it two years he sold the lining for $1,800 and replaced it with nutria at a cost of $150. In 1917 he sold the nutria lining for $250 and put in a muskrat lining at a cost of $55; in 1918 he sold the muskrat lining for $300 and still has the shell of the coat and a clear profit of $845.

China Planting American Cotton.

The Kuangsi (China) provincial authorities have of late shown an interest in the development of cotton growing. Seeds of the American cotton plant from the Nantung farms in Kiangsu have been purchased and experiments are being made at different places by the Nang Lin Shih Yen Chang. It is hoped eventually when there is a fair output to establish cotton mills, but for the moment no funds are available for the purpose.

R. F. Erwin Regarding His Troubles.

"A year ago last winter I had an attack of indigestion followed by biliousness and constipation. Randal's Great "Catch"

By HAZEL SMITH

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Randal can go to college now, Uncle Seth. All the arrangements are made. It is the happiest thought of my life, to realize that it is my power to show you some appreciation of all you and your family have done for me."

"Boy, there never was a truer, better man than you!"

David Prescott walked slowly across the Burton farm. His heart was pretty full. He loved the old man who had been his best friend since he was left an orphan at an early age. The fish and fowl of a good deed, however, were robbed of some of their glamour as David thought of the person most benefited—Randal Burton. In his own mind David did not believe the old man's son worthy of the sacrifice he was making for him.

Things were at a tight pinch at Burton farm, with little or no cash reserves.

"You see," David had explained to his uncle, "there's a reclamation project to drain Rock Valley, and no one knows every crook and turn of the old river as I do. I have convinced the commissioners of it, too. They have offered me a two years' position as superintendent of the upper dam. I am to get $1,500 a year. Half of that for two years will carry Randal through the city law school."

So it was settled. With a great flourish of trumpets Randal Burton departed for the city.

The best that was in David came out. He had said that no one knew the river as he did, and David now demonstrated the fact. Within a month the engineers on the project found his knowledge a valuable adjunct to their technical processes.

At the end of six months the engineers reported that his discovery of a whale obstruction had saved them ten thousand dollars. The commissioners promptly advanced his salary twenty-five per cent.

Time wore on. David found time to take up engineering and study evenings. At the holidays Randal came home. The next vacation David was disappointed to see how little real law education the boy was acquiring. "Confidentially, between me and you," said Randal, "I don't think as much of the law as I did. A smattering will be enough to help me put up my shingle. Truth is Dave, I've used a catch."

"What kind of a catch?" inquired his cousin.

"Miss Dorothy Vance. Father a millionaire. You'll see her when she comes."

In due time vacation days came around, and Randal returned to the farm. Mr. Burton was grieved, and Dave disappointed. Randal went down to the depot one morning to escort Miss Dorothy to the home of the Delcombes.

The little lady insisted on walking. As they crossed a bridge, her attention was called to a gang of workmen sinking a hollow wooden tube in a mud hole at the bank of the river. The man who was guiding it stood below, half sunk in the silty clay. It was David Prescott. He waved his hand in friendly greeting to his cousin.

"Come on," spoke Randal hurriedly. "This is not at all interesting."

"But that man waved his hand to you."

"Oh, some mudlark of the crew, I suppose," responded Randal.

"He doesn't look like a mudlark," said Dorothy.

The irritated Randal managed to draw his interested companion away from the scene. He escorted his charge to her friends. Randal called at the Delcombes' home next morning, printed for that vaunted proposal.

Mrs. Delcombe informed him that Miss Vance had started away for a walk along the river. Dorothy had learned that Randal was not the ambitious striving idol she had made of him. She learned of the noble sacrifice of his cousin.

"The deuce!" exclaimed Randal Burton, as he arrived at the bank of the river.

There was the truant lady. She was conversing with David.

Randal came up, brass and braggart as ever. He tried to take Miss Dorothy under his own special wing. The willful little miss continued interested over the wonderful river project.

"I suppose I can call this evening," submitted Randal in rather a grumbling tone.

"Oh, certainly," smiled the fascinating little miss; "only be sure to bring your cousin, Mr. Prescott, with you. He is the most delightful young man I have ever met."

There is an end to everything, and the end of Randal Burton's careless ambitions was a position in a city office as a second-rate stenographer.

The end of David's acquaintance with pretty Dorothy was a wedding, and David Prescott's noble sacrifice for others led to the winning of a loving wife and a sure start in the world as one of its future great engineers.

Why That Headache?

When you know the cause of a disease a cure may often be effected. This is particularly true of headache. Headache often results from constipation or a disordered condition of the stomach, which may be corrected by taking a dose or two of Chamberlain's Tablets. Try it. These tablets are easy to take and mild and gentle in effect.—Adv.

NEWBURG

Dr. Leonard, district superintendent, will preach at ten o'clock in the morning, next Sunday. A good attendance is desired. All are invited to remain to Sunday-school. Epworth League at 7:30 in the evening. Mrs. James Bassett, leader.

Quite a number from Newburg attended the Epworth League banquet, Friday night, also the convention on Saturday at Wayne.

For the past thirty-five years Newburg has never failed to hold Memorial Day services in their church. This year was no exception to the rule, as the church was filled to do honor to the soldier dead, as well as the living.

Nine old veterans, with a large number of school children, were escorted into the church by four girls, who acted as color bearers, carrying beautiful silk flags. The church presented a pretty appearance with the stars and stripes and a profusion of flowers. Eighteen young people in the choir, under the leadership of Mr. Cochran, with Miss Lillian Lundy at the piano, assisted by her brother, Lloyd, on the organ, rendered fine music. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Rycraft. Mr. Showers, commander of Eddy Post, G. A. R., read the governor's proclamation; Mrs. Donald Ryder, the general orders of the day; Gettysburg address by Thomas Davey, Jr.; readings by Newburg, Stark and Patchen schools. The reading of our teacher, Miss Lawton, "Sail On," assisted by four girls was thrilling and inspiring; also the marches and flag salute by Miss Lawton's pupils, showed the fine training she had given them.

A pathetic story of the Civil war, which brought tears to many an eye, was finely rendered by Mrs. Donald Ryder. The address by the pastor, Rev. Rycraft, was greatly appreciated by all. A chair was draped in memory of one of the boys in blue, Comrade Youngs, who answered to the last roll call during the past year.

At the close of the exercises, the children with their flags and flowers marched to the cemetery, and scattered flowers over the graves of our hero dead, who gave their lives that our nation might not be sacrificed. They are not dead; Beyond the mists that bind us here, Into the new and larger life Of that serene sphere.

Among those who attended the services, Sunday, were: Mrs. Mary Butler and children, Will and Lillian, and families, Mrs. Carrie Marsh and daughter, Genevieve, Mrs. Corn Fournier, Mr. and Mrs. John Marsh and daughter, Mrs. J. Degeon, Burt Paddock and two sons of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Kingsley and son of Wayne, and a large number from Plymouth.

There was a fairly good attendance at the meeting last Thursday evening, at the hall, to hear Mr.

Coffey from Lansing, and Mr. Finber of Belleville, tell their views on the subject of consolidated schools. Mr. Coffey stated there were at the present time 200 such schools in Michigan, mostly in the northern part of the state, where the scholars are given a splendid practical education. A petition will be circulated in the Patchen, Stark and Newburg districts to find out what the sentiment of the people is in regard to such a school.

Mrs. Mary Paddock and daughter, Florence, of Detroit, and Mrs. Burt Hodge of Mt. Clemens, spent Friday afternoon at the Ryder homestead.

The L. A. S. will hold their regular meeting at the hall, Wednesday afternoon. Supper will be served, with Committee No. 2, Mesdames Alma Stevens, Mackinac, Holmes, Sanger, Morrow and Curtis, in charge. A memory service will be held for members who have passed away—Last we forget. At this meeting you are requested to bring needle and thimble. Everyone invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Secord entertained twelve at dinner and twenty-one for supper, last Sunday.

Several Cass City friends called on Mr. and Mrs. W. R. LeVan, Monday evening.

Miss Marguerite Wall of Denton, was the guest of Miss Beulah Ryder, last Thursday and Friday.

Misses Anna and Ada Youngs spent over Decoration Day with their aunt at Kingston in Tuscola county. Mr. and Mrs. E. Dupuy of Detroit, spent over Sunday at the parental home.

Mrs. Gardner Kent, who underwent a serious operation for tumor, last Friday, at Highland Park hospital, is improving rapidly at this writing.

Mrs. Flora Coy of Loveland, Colo., who has been visiting her sister for the past ten days, left Monday, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Emily LeVan, to visit friends in South Lyon. Mr. and Mrs. W. R. LeVan motored there with them.

On Tuesday evening, Miss Mattie Lawton and pupils gave as fine an entertainment in the church as has ever been given in Newburg. It was wonderful the way the children were trained to march and sing without the use of the piano. They were so perfectly trained that everything moved off like clock work. The entertainment, consisting of songs, drills and recitations, teaching lessons on loyalty, patriotism, temperance and hygiene, as well as the humorous. Splendid lessons that will never be forgotten by the boys and girls that have been under the influence of this good teacher. There are nine who have passed the eighth grade and they gave the class motto as follows: "We can, we can, we know we can," also their class yell. All pupils were promoted with the exception of three, who are passed on condition. The exercises of two and one-half hours duration closed with the school benediction. The community owe Miss Lawton a debt that money cannot repay for the fine Christian influence she has exercised over their children this past year.

WEST PLYMOUTH

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schroder of Farmington, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Schoch, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Broegman and little daughter, Margaret, visited the former's brother, Fred Broegman, at Salem, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Garlinghouse, Mr. and Mrs. March of Ann Arbor; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur March of Detroit, visited Mr. and Mrs. Otto Wagenschutz, Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Clifford and family of Detroit, visited Mr. and Mrs. Fred Widmaier from Saturday until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Widmaier, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Widmaier and family of Salem, were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Widmaier, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Mulholland, who have been living in Detroit, moved out to the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Widmaier, Monday, and will stay there this summer, while Mr. Mulholland is trucking at Waterford.

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Sackett of Detroit, visited Mr. and Mrs. George Butler from Saturday until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, and family motored to Williamston and visited Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Butler, Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeLair and Mrs. Florence Sackett of Northville, visited at the Butler home, Monday. George Rice and John Butler made a business trip to Detroit, last Saturday.

Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Roulo and family of Highland Park, visited at the Butler home.

Presbyterian Notes

The Ann Arbor team were true to their name, "Young Men of Pep and Power." A number of the young people have said, "Can't we have them here again?" Friday night, a chicken-pie supper was given, and around the table the men were introduced, and each gave a short, spicy talk revealing the motive of their work. Saturday the boys and girls were taken on a hike, the latter being led by Miss Grace Thompson, imported from the University for this purpose. Saturday evening and Sunday morning devotional services were held and the Sunday-school classes were divided among the team for teaching. In the afternoon, a special service was held for boys and girls; chalk-talks and musical stunts being the main features. The concluding services of the day were well attended, and proved to be both interesting and uplifting. During the day, thirty-one boys and girls signed cards consecrating themselves more fully to the Master's service. Incidentally, the members of the team expressed themselves as delighted with Plymouth, where they had the best supper, the best hike, and the most enjoyable time of the whole year. R. O. Mimmack and the pastor drove them to Ypsilanti after the evening service, where they took the car for home. The monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held at the church, Wednesday afternoon. This was followed by a meeting of the session and a pot-luck supper.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Detroit Presbyterian society will be held Thursday, June 9, 1921, in Detroit, at the Woodward avenue church, corner of Woodward and Philadelphia avenues. The executive board will hold a meeting at eleven o'clock, to which all are invited. At 12:30 a pot-luck luncheon will be shared, and the ladies of the church will serve tea and coffee. The afternoon session will begin at 1:45. The principal speaker and guest of honor will be Mrs. Calvin Mater of China, who is supported by some of our Auxiliaries, and who has been in the foreign field 45 years. Although nearly 70 years of age, she expects to return to China in July. Mrs. J. K. Mitchell and Mrs. Samuel E. Morris will give reports from the General Assembly and Annual Meetings of the Woman's Boards of New York, which they are now attending at Winona Lake, Indiana. Others taking part will be Mrs. Oren Scotten, Mrs. John F. Dodge, Mrs. Joseph W. Cochran and Mrs. Robert T. Harris. Mrs. Charles A. Godspeed will have charge of the music, and Mrs. W. B. Johnston will be the soloist. Several will attend from Plymouth.

The NEW EDISON "The Phonograph with a Soul"

Mr. Edison offers $10,000 in prizes

It is an established fact, that good music has the power to steady the nerves and calm the agitated mind. Mr. Edison spent 3 millions of his dollars and over 7 years of his time in research work to develop an instrument of such absolute realism, that the true beauties and full benefits of good music could be enjoyed and utilized in every home in the land.

Mr. Edison wants a phrase of not more than 4 or 5 words, which will emphasize that the New Edison is not a mere talking machine, and which will distinguish the New Edison from all other sound reproducing instruments. Ask us for folder giving full particulars of prize contest.

Three days of Music Free

If you do not own a New Edison, mail or bring us this coupon and we will gladly loan you an instrument for three days, in order that you may experiment with it in your own home and learn what music will do for you. This experience may make it easier for you to win a prize.

Act quickly, as the number of instruments, which we can lend, is limited. Remember you assume no expense or obligation.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by

MEANS VICTORY FOR LEGION

Report of Dawes Committee Embodies Principal Features of Organization's Relief Plan.

All investigation speed records at the national capitol were broken by President Harding's special commission to frame a comprehensive program for the relief of disabled veterans, which was headed by Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago.

He jammed through, in less than two days, an inquiry into treatment of disabled soldiers, recommendations that mean adequate hospital treatment to 10,000 wounded veterans now in poorhouses, asylums, insufficiently equipped hospitals or in no institution at all, as well as payment for disability to thousands of veterans not in hospitals.

The report of the Dawes committee is considered as a great victory for the American Legion program for disabled soldier relief. Its recommendations embody the principal features of the Legion plan.

They are:
1. Appointment of one official to have charge of all disabled soldiers' relief and benefits. There now are three departments.

2. Decentralization of administration, so officials with delegated authority may act without red tape.

3. Appropriation of whatever additional money is necessary for new hospitals.

Other members of the committee were: F. W. Galbraith, Jr., national commander of the American Legion; Franklin D'Olier, past national commander of the American Legion; Thomas W. Miller of Delaware; Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Douglas Robinson of New York, a sister of former President Roosevelt; John L. Lewis of Indianapolis, president of the United Mine Workers of America; Mrs. Henry Rea of Pittsburg; Milton J. Foreman of Chicago; Henry S. Berry of Hendersonville, Tenn.; and T. V. O'Connor of Buffalo, head of the longshoremen's union.

BUCK PRIVATE TO COMMANDER

C. L. Dawson, North Dakota Legion
Man, Rises From Lowest to Highest Rank.

From the lowest rank in the military service to the highest grade conferred by the ex-service men of his state is the record jump made by C. L. Dawson of Beach, N. D., recently appointed national field representative of the American Legion.

From buck private to department commander of the American Legion in North Dakota tells the story of Mr. Dawson's rise. Although well past middle age, he enlisted as a private in the Balloon corps soon after war was declared. After fifteen months at Fort Omaha, he was discharged with the rank of private first class. He was chief clerk of the North Dakota legislature during its last session.

As department commander and national executive committeeman, Mr. Dawson was largely responsible in building up a strong organization of the Legion in North Dakota. He is a graduate of the University of North Dakota and before entering the service was state's attorney at Golden Valley, N. D.

IDEALS OF AMERICAN LEGION

Stand of Bill Dowling Post of Chadron, Neb., Has Brought Much Favorable Comment.

The ideals of the American Legion are explained in a published announcement of Bill Dowling Post of Chadron, Neb., which has drawn much favorable comment from Legion posts in the Middle West. The announcement reads:

"To the public—No, we are not organized to 'run the country' or to 'rob the government.' Read the preamble to our constitution.

"To politicians—We stand for 'politics, not politics.'

"To capital—Some of us are capitalists; all of us are laborers.

"To labor—Read what Samuel Gompers has to say in regard to labor and the Legion.

"To all ex-service men—Let's stick together. We started it over there; let's finish it in the American Legion.

"To all un-Americans—Look out for the American Legion!"

ADDS TO LEGION'S STRENGTH

Commander of Minnesota Department
Has Way of Doing Things That Gets Results.

Under the direction of A. H. Vernon, commander of the Minnesota department of the American Legion, that state has become one of the strongest Legion departments in the country.

Commander Vernon's theory is that success comes to the Legion in proportion to the service it gives to its members and to the state. In carrying out this policy he has built up a Legion Service bureau which handles one thousand ex-service claims a month and a department branch of the American Legion News Service.

Early in 1921, when the Federal board for vocational education prepared to send representatives to sixteen centers in the state to examine disabled veterans, the authorities were handicapped by a lack of publicity. Commander Vernon prepared twenty thousand large posters and placed them on every billboard in the state. This was supplemented with information to every newspaper in regard to where every disabled man should report to receive compensation, vocational training and medical treatment.

When an unexpected number of veterans enlisted for vocational training, Mr. Vernon appealed to 20,000 business men to place the men in their establishments. The merchants and manufacturers responded with a good will and all the vocational students were placed to good advantage.

MERITED TRIBUTE TO LEGION

Leslie's Weekly Editorially Honors Brave Men Who Served in the World War.

"The American Legion begins to look like a full-page composite photograph of biographic Americanism from Putnam to Pershing," reads a recent editorial in Leslie's Weekly. "It moves with the weight of the 'Battle Hymn of the Republic' and the levity of 'Yankee Doodle' with a ululant yell from 'Dixie.' Its large composition is a token of great trust, and the old Roman legions, and other legions of time, begin to look like pop-guns. It neither tries to roar with a lion's heart, nor win a woman's—quite different from the pumaded mustaches of Putnam. Its manners are quiet; its memory is excellent; its emotions are strong, and it is prepared to roll all the refractory elements in one bundle and hang them on one hook.

"Without a proclamation, an agitation or unloosing a pack of schemes, it has created a civil prestige to match its military splendor. Old soldiers of all ages and all lands are prone to harp on one string, but the tramp of the Legion is in time and tune with all the chords of throbbing life. It is not merely handsome clay in uniform; but sinewed in manhood from its toes to its brains. It has that delightful mixture of sense and spirit, of power and chivalry, of shop and farm, which tickles the popular taste. It neither bleats over its woes nor boasts of its prowess.

"When the mighty military machine dissolved in our citizenship the fragments coalesced through the sympathetic attraction of a high purpose—for in defending the institutions of America the Legion learned how to value them. Thus it possesses a moral prerogative to tread down lurking disloyalty. We are proud to be the fathers and mothers, cousins and aunts of the Legion. We shall sleep sound at nights. And when the historian winds up the task of glory-painting its battles we trust that he will use a golden drop of ink in stating that congress dealt a belated, but a glad and generous, bonus."

FATHER MORAN AIDS LEGION

Former Army Chaplain Assists in Obtaining Armistice Day Legislation in Minnesota.

When the Minnesota American Legion state legislative committee at the opening of the state legislature appointed sub-committees to pilot its various bills through the house and senate, Father D. J. Moran of Farmington, was made chairman of the Armistice Day committee.

Attacking the job with Argonne fervor, Father Moran obtained the passage of a bill declaring Armistice day a legal holiday as the first piece of Legion legislation enacted into law.

As army chaplain, Father Moran served ten months overseas. He is an ardent Legion lecturer and worker. When he returned from France in September, 1919, and found no Legion post organized in Farmington, he headed straight for Legion state headquarters, obtained the necessary blanks and within a week had established one of the most active posts in Minnesota.

Winter Chores Made Easy

James carriers do away with the old style, back breaking job of pushing the wheel barrow loaded with heavy, wet litter, perhaps ankle deep in the barnyard slush, up over a treacherous, slippery plank, onto the manure pile.

Cuts Barn Work In Half

A James carrier can easily be lowered to the floor, making it an easy task to load. The loaded carrier runs smoothly along the James special I-beam track out on the swinging crane or arch support. Either the swinging crane or arch support carry the manure away from the barn. James litter carriers make it easy for the boy, keeps the boy happy and cuts your barn work in half.

Maggie's Inheritance

By KATE EDMONDS

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union)
When the boarding house servant announced Dick Mansfield, Maggie put aside the letter over which she had been puzzling and went to the door of her hall bedroom. Next moment she was in Dick's arms.

"Hello! Same old hall room!" said Dick, taking his seat beside her. "Say, Maggie, how would you like to come west with me next Friday?"

"West, Dick?" Maggie Durham exclaimed.

"West's what I said," Dick answered. "I've got a chance to buy a farm in Texas—five hundred down and the rest on mortgage. Then we can get married and start out to make a home for ourselves. You know Maggie, dear," he continued, in a whisper of excitement, "I've got twelve hundred dollars saved now."

They had been engaged two years. Maggie earned eighteen dollars a week as stenographer to Mr. Burman, of the great department store, and Dick twenty as a clerk in the iron works corporation. And they had been saving ever since they were engaged.

"I mean, Maggie, with your five hundred," Dick volunteered. "And we can start in on that and make our way. Is it all right?"

"But Dick, I—"

"But Maggie, you know now Mr. Burman's dead you won't have such prospects as you thought. He took a fancy to you, but his head man dislikes you, you told me, and I guess you'll find the future won't be so bright as you hoped. Come, throw it up and let's get married."

She would let him know her decision. She would let him know the next Sunday, she said.

Left alone, Maggie pulled out the letter again and began studying it. It was from Mr. Burman's lawyer and it hinted at something that she had never imagined in her wildest dreams. And she was to be at the burman mansion on Madison avenue at noon the following day.

The next morning, a few minutes before the appointed hour, Maggie Durham was shown into the splendidly furnished drawing room. Mrs. Burman was seated in an arm chair, her handkerchief to her eyes. Upon the sofa, side by side, were the Misses Burman. The lawyer, Henry Altemus, rose nervously out of his chair to meet her. When he presented her the woman made only the slightest fluctuation of their heads.

"Ahem! Miss Durham, it is my duty to give you some very painful information," the lawyer began.

"Miss Durham," he began, "how long have you worked in Mr. Burman's store?"

"Three years," said Maggie.

"You began as a cash girl and had a phenomenally rapid rise, I believe?" Maggie nodded. "Taught myself stenography and worked up," she answered.

"Miss Durham," said Mr. Altemus, "on going through Mr. Burman's private papers we find that he was—er—married before."

"We hope so," interposed the widow. "And, to be brief, that you are Mr. Burman's daughter."

Maggie looked at the lawyer and at the widow and at the grim faces of the two girls.

"Why didn't he recognize me?" she asked.

"Because," said the lawyer, "Mr. Burman had a position in life which had to be maintained. And you were the fruit of a mesalliance, a juvenile indiscretion."

"I see," said Maggie. "So he put the responsibility on my mother. Where is she?"

"She died when you were born. And now the point is this: Mr. Burman has left you an annual income of seven thousand dollars, to be held in trust for you, upon two conditions. First, that you agree to go to a school in Paris which has been selected for you, and to remain there two years. Secondly, that, after you have been polished, you will reside with Mrs. Burman as her niece, and that no hint of the secret ever passes your lips, under penalty of forfeiting your income. Ah, by the way, there is a third condition, but it is too unimportant to lay much stress upon it. I believe you have considered yourself engaged to a worthy young man by the name of Mansfield? A mere clerk, I think. Of course that episode is ended now and forever. All that is now requisite is that you sign a document which I have here embodying these terms. Here is the paper." He began shuffling among the sheets upon the table.

Maggie rose up.

"Good-bye, Mr. Altemus," she said. She bowed to the widow and her daughters.

"Er?" said the lawyer.

"Declined with thanks," said Maggie. "Do you think I'd sell myself into slavery for the pleasure of mixing with your crowd?" she demanded.

"Why, there isn't a drop of real blood in your veins."

"Mercy!" ejaculated the widow, fanning herself briskly. "Do you think you can get the release signed for certain, Mr. Altemus?"

"If she doesn't change her mind," murmured the lawyer. "In afraid—"

But he had nothing to be afraid of, for Maggie was at that moment telephoning to Dick Mansfield in a public booth.

"Dick! Hello, Dick!" she called. "It's all right, Dick, dear. I'll make it Friday."

IN "DATE GARDEN"

Department of Agriculture Experimenting With Fruit.

Southern California Scene of Attempted Cultivation of Plants From the Nile Valley.

One of the romances which mark the history of the United States Department of Agriculture's plant-exploration work has resulted in bringing to this country 2,800 date palm offshoots of the choicest varieties of the Nile valley and Libyan desert.

These offshoots, mainly from the Saldy, or Wahi, and the Sewi varieties were shipped from Alexandria to New York by Prof. S. C. Mason, arboriculturist of the bureau of plant industry, who first discovered their sources in 1913, and are now at the bureau's date garden at Indio, southern California, according to a department of agriculture news bulletin. This is the headquarters for the date work in the Salton basin, comprising the Coachella valley north of the Salton sea and the Imperial valley on the south, the one region in the United States combining the climatic features necessary to the successful cultivation of the choicest old-world varieties of dates.

For nearly twenty years the Department of Agriculture has been seeking offshoots of the large date known to commerce as the Wahi. These were regarded as the choicest dates obtained in Egypt ranking next to the famous Deglet Nour of Algeria and Tunis, and with this difference—that while the Deglet Nour produces few offshoots from which young trees can be grown, the Wahi is prolific in this respect, producing from twenty to thirty offshoots in the lifetime of a tree. However, all efforts to find the source from which the Wahi came failed year after year.

When Prof. Mason went to Dakhla in 1913, the first representative of the United States Department of Agriculture to visit that historic "Inner-oreals," he arrived in the time of the date harvest. When asked about the dates they were sending out in large quantities, for Dakhla has nearly 200,000 date palms, his desert host replied: "This is the one commodity we have for export in all five of these oases. This date packs so well that we can send it on the long journey to the valley." Prof. Mason asked the name.

"We desert people call it the Saldy," said the sheik, "but when these Bedouin traders get over to the valley with it they call it the Wahi."

In this friendly sheik was due the discovery of the true name of this valuable variety of date, and the whereabouts of 250,000 trees in their home fastnesses in the Libyan desert.

Would Be All Right.
The train was 30 minutes late. A man and his wife paced the floor of the battered station. The man approached the ticket window and rapped sharply on the counter.

"Say," he exclaimed to the lanky agent who appeared, "we've got to make connections at Sago with X. Y. Z. Will they wait half an hour for a passenger?"

The lanky agent rolled his quid leisurely and eyed the occupants of the room as he considered the question. "Wah!" he finally decided. "I reckon they'd wait longer than that for two passengers."—Kansas City Times.

Smash Cycle Record.

The great cement oval at Brooklands, England, has recently been the scene of repeated attempts to lower existing world's motorcycle records, not all of which have been successful. The track offers possibilities in this direction not to be had on courses in this country, chiefly because of its great size—nearly three miles to the lap. Riding a stock model Indian, E. Le Yack, a prominent British racing rider, set new records for fifty miles, one hour, and 100 miles on the famous speedway. Le Yack's machine, equipped with a slide car, was the first of its kind to do 100 miles inside of 100 minutes.

Garage Helps Church.

A church in New York city has solved its financial problem in a measure by the operation of a garage which is made use of by its members. The congregation consists of persons who come from a distance generally and during the services the street in front of the edifice was blocked with cars. Now they are stored in the garage at a nominal rate and the money collected in this manner and that received from repairs and accessories helps materially in meeting the expenses of the church.

No Use Making Noise Like $1,000.

To get an interview with J. M. Barrie requires strategy. A lady journalist from America, unable to reach the author by direct means, sought out a friend of his. The best he could do for her, however, was to make a suggestion. Said he: "Your only chance is to go to his flat, crouch down outside his door and make a noise like a lost child. Presently he will be moved to look out; then, if you are quick, you might get hold of him."—Boston Transcript.

W. C. T. U.

The meeting of the W. man's Christian Temperance Union, held in the Kindergarten room, Thursday afternoon, May 26th, was well attended by members and guests. A very pleasing program for the day had been arranged by Mrs. Luther Peck. The audience was delightfully entertained with two vocal solos by Mrs. Casady, two violin selections by Miss Thelma Peck, and two numbers by the High school orchestra.

As George A. Smith was unable to address the meeting, Rev. F. M. Field kindly consented to fill his place. Taking as his subject, "The Sins of the Fathers," the speaker gave some statistics showing how the vices of the parent affects the unborn child both physically and mentally; and how mental defects and physical deformities, resulting from the sins of an ancestor, long since gone from this earth, are handed down through many generations. The subject was well handled, and the speech was very interesting to all present.

The next meeting will occur, Thursday, June 16th, at 2:30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Hulda Knapp, on Pennington avenue. As this is Flower Mission Day, the superintendent, Mrs. Walter LeVan, requests the members to bring flowers, so that bouquets may be made for the sick and the shut-ins.

Today's Reflections

And along in the spring a young man's fancy also turns to thoughts of a new set of tires for the fiver.

About the only consolation a Plymouth taxpayer now has is that the citizen of Germany is just a little worse off than he is.

Another sign of "normalcy's" return is you don't hear so many people asking, "Haven't you something at a little higher price?"

An up-state editor says we'll never get back to the good old days until there are more hammers used on nail heads and fewer on official heads.

The Plymouth man who sits around and waits for his ship to come in, usually finds that the cargo is hand-ships.

Fools are not the only ones who rush in where angels fear to tread. We've seen some wise men do the same thing.

Still another thing that has been holding this old world back is the fact that too many men talk an hour for every minute they work.

When you tell the editor to put you on his subscription list you gladden his heart, but when you tell him and pay him at the same time you make both his stomach and his pocket feel good.

They say elephants were once to be found in Texas. But that must have been before the country went dry.

Our idea of a strong-minded Plymouth man is the one who never has any grouchy comment to make on the weather.

If a man ever yearns to lead a dog's life, it is when he sees a pretty girl fondling a no-account peedle.

Nothing on earth would make the average Plymouth woman happier than for her husband to admit some time that her pies and coffee were as good "as mother used to make."

SPARKLING COMEDY FOR CHURCH PROGRAM MONDAY

Another Reelart picture is the feature of Recreation Night program at the Methodist church, Monday evening, this time a light, sparkling comedy, entitled, "Miss Hobbs." It was written by Jerome K. Jerome, author of "The Third Floor Back" and "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," and concerns a young woman who hates men and has all kinds of modern ideas. Miss Hobbs not only abuses men herself, but interferes with other girls' love affairs, until she has one of her own and here is where the fun comes in.

LIVONIA CENTER

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peck attended the funeral services of William Radford in Detroit, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Landau entertained about fifty friends from Detroit, Sunday. A picnic dinner on the lawn was an enjoyable feature of the day.

Mrs. John Dethloff entertained the Needle Club at her home, Thursday afternoon. About twenty members were present, and a pleasant afternoon was spent socially in connection with the busy hour. Prizes were awarded to Grace Lee and Mrs. Julius Landau in a memory contest. An elaborate pot-luck supper was served. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. William Garchow, Thursday, June 9th.

The Ladies Aid of the German church will give an ice cream social at the hall, Friday evening, June 10. Everyone is invited. The ladies are giving out miniature aprons, the pocket to contain cents to correspond to the waist measure of each person, and those receiving the small socks are asked to give twice the length of the foot. It is a unique way of raising money for the church improvement, and it is expected a neat sum will be added to the fund.

A meeting of the Cemetery society has been called for Friday afternoon, June 10, at the hall. Everyone who is interested in the cemetery is urged to be present, as important business is to be transacted.

The Dress Form Club met at the home of Mrs. William Bell, Tuesday, and made four dress forms.

The Canning Club will meet with Mrs. William Bell on the Waterford road, Tuesday afternoon, June 14. Anyone wishing to join the club will have an opportunity to do so that day. Miss Rogers, the county demonstrator, will be present and demonstrate with strawberries.

Mrs. Alma Sterner returned to her home in Detroit, Tuesday, after a two weeks' stay with her sister, Mrs. Charles Smith.

The social given by the school, Wednesday evening, was largely attended, and an enjoyable evening was spent. A large amount of ice cream was sold. The beautiful quilt, which was made and donated by Mrs. Van Bonn, was won by Miss Lizzie Hewell. The net proceeds of the evening were $31.69, which was added to the piano fund.

Miss Helen Hottenstein returned to her home in Petersburg, Saturday, where she has been engaged to teach school the coming year. The school board at this place endeavored to retain Miss Hottenstein's services here next year, but she preferred being nearer home.

George Coopersmith is quite ill with typhoid fever.

Mrs. Richard Wolff, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Bond of Farmington, left Wednesday for California, where they will be the guests of friends for a month.

Mrs. Dr. McLean entertained a number of neighbors at her home on the seven mile drive, last Wednesday evening, in honor of Mrs. Wolf, before her departure for the west. Music added pleasure to the evening, and light refreshments were served.

Charles Bentley, William Garchow and Fred Lee attended a party given by Mr. Millard at Redford, Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Cannuelle entertained about twenty friends from Detroit, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Halstead and Mr. Pierce of Farmington, were callers at the Palmer Chilton home, Monday.

SCHOOL NOTES

The new jumping standards for the sixth grade boys were made in the manual training department, last week.

Inez Cook has left school, and has moved with her parents back to Oklahoma.

Mrs. Wigle, principal of the Northville High school, visited here last week Thursday afternoon. Senior examinations occur June 2 and 3.

A week from today, June 10th, is the date set for the Four-Square League track meet in Plymouth, Wayne, Dearborn, Northville and Farmington will be in Plymouth. The meet will start at 10 o'clock in the morning. Coach Brewer, director of physical education at the Michigan Agricultural college, will probably be the referee. All these events will be so arranged that the finishes may be seen from the bleachers. The admission at the grounds will be 35c. Tickets are good for both morning and afternoon. The tickets may be obtained at the High school.

Mrs. Caroline Seiting of Livonia, is visiting Mrs. Edward Egloff, this week.

John Snyder, Sr., was pleasantly surprised, Sunday, by his children and grandchildren paying him a visit to remind him of his sixtieth birthday. A dainty supper was served, after which they departed for their homes, wishing Mr. Snyder many more happy birthdays.

THE THEATRE

One of the most successful writers for the screen in the world, James Oliver Curwood, supplied the work from which "Isobel; or, The Trail's End," which is to be offered at the Pennington Allen theatre, next Saturday evening, June 4th, was adapted. This film is a version of his famous novel, "Isobel," which is said by many persons to have been his greatest romance. Curwood's stories have been proved the most entertaining material for the screen of the past two years, all of his better known novels having been adapted, and having been successful as photo-dramas.

The day of greater pictures has arrived. "Mid-Channel," a six-reel photodrama from the pen of the great English playwright on modern married life, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, with beautiful Clara Kimball Young in the leading role, marks a new step in screen history. Never were such lavish settings and scenes, and such gorgeous gowns and wearing apparel exhibited in any picture as in this powerful play of domestic strife, a production that sets the heart a-tingle. This great picture will be seen at the Pennington Allen theatre, Tuesday, June 7th.

Katherine McDonald is star of "My Lady's Latchkey," from the famous novel by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. It is a mystery story, and the role of Annesley Grayle, an English girl, is said to afford Miss MacDonald one of the best roles of her screen career. Katherine McDonald believes that luck is always attached to the numeral, "Seven." And by that token is positive that "My Lady's Latchkey" is among her most successful pictures. It is her seventh production for Associated First National. This big feature reel will be shown at the Pennington Allen theatre, Thursday evening, June 9th.

of business on Wednesday afternoons during the summer season.

The Farmington State Savings Bank at Farmington, have awarded the contract for construction of its new bank building and mercantile building.

Saturday, May 14, W. E. Hastings of South Lyon, and W. B. Purdy of Milford, went up to the St. Clair Flats on a commission for the U. of M., and M. A. C., to endeavor to locate a colony of the black-crowned night herons, a rare bird known to have been found in only one other place in Michigan. They were more than successful in their quest, finding a large colony of these birds, also the great blue and the great white herons, which are rapidly becoming extinct. They secured valuable specimens, pictures and data that will be given over to the university and college at Milford Times.

A petition is being circulated by Ypsilanti and Washtenaw county get a new trial for Berry Green, convicted of murder in Detroit, for which he was given a life sentence in Marquette prison. Green has not been taken to Marquette and if the efforts of his friends count, he may never see the place. He has been granted a trial, and Attorney Kennedy, a long friend, has been engaged to defend him. The Merchants' Delivery association of this place, of which was at one time an employe, is circulating the petition here, and one also being circulated in Sapeen township and among Ford employes.—Ypsilanti Record.

PENNIMAN ALLEN THEATRE

SATURDAY, JUNE 4

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD'S "ISOBEL" OR THE TRAILS' END

AN ALLURING LOVE STORY OF THE GREAT NORTHWEST WITH HOUSE PETERS AND JANE NOVAK AN EDWIN CAREWE PRODUCTION

Billy McVeigh, driving into the face of a blinding blizzard, comes face to face with—Isobel! Beautiful, pure and sweet, but the wife of another man—the man whom he had sworn to take, dead or alive. A situation that will thrill you—a denouement that will amaze and delight you.

An epic of the Northland is "Isobel; or The Trail's End." One of the most powerful and compelling romances James Oliver Curwood ever produced.

House Peters and Jane Novak in the most remarkable story of the Great Northwest ever filmed.

Made doubly valuable through the fact that it is an Edwin Carewe production of a James Oliver Curwood story.

Loved by two men and loving two men! A romance that takes you into the barren wastes of the Northland—into the land of the midnight sun and the gentle glare of the Aurora Borealis. An epic of that country "north of sixty."

Teaching Harold a Lesson

By HAROLD SINCLAIRE

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)
"Don't be too hard on me, Milly."
"I'm not. You are hard on yourself, Harold. Just think of it; when we were getting along so nicely, and everything was going so well, I can't bear to think of it," and pretty Milly Wells burst into tears.

"I am sorry," began the young man in a contrite tone, "I meant to be soothing. He placed a gentle hand on Milly's own. She switched it away, wilful and petulant.
"You never would have done it if I had known," declared the young girl between sobs. "I never want you to show me the bank book again. I've lost all interest in it forever, and I'm glad I'm going to visit Aunt Margaret. People may have some consideration for me there."

"Listen to me, dear," said Harold tenderly. "You and I would never have met, and I might still be a drudge in a poor country store, if it were not for John Gregory."

"Oh, that's an old story," replied Milly impatiently.

"Yes, it is an old story," pursued Harold, "and a good old story—how he gave me, a penniless lad, enough money to reach the city, and a recommendation that enabled me to win my present position. There is a new part to the story now, Milly. His son, a prodigal, came to me today. He was in trouble—something worse than trouble, dear, almost disgrace. A hundred and fifty dollars might save him. I remembered what his kind old father, now dead, had done for me, and—"

"You let him have the money—our money!" said Milly. "All that great sum earned so hard and saved so slowly. Oh, dear! oh, dear! it is almost heart-breaking!"

So Harold Brown walked slowly home, wretched and serious. But next afternoon he called at the Wells home as agreed.

To his disappointment, he found that the aunt whom Milly was going to visit had stopped over from a train to take her home with her. Amid the bustle of luggage and parting with half a dozen fond girl friends, poor Harold had barely a chance to hurriedly kiss his fiancée good-bye on the depot platform.

Two letters came to Harold that first week. Only one the second week.

Harold winced over the careless tone of the missive. It was still harder to bear when succeeding letters told of gay times at her aunt's home—plenty of company, a merry round of parties, picnics and pleasure.

Then there was a week and no letter at all. It was Saturday afternoon, and the anxious lover went up to the Wells home, hopeful of some news. As he neared it he heard the voices of Milly's sisters and some friends on the side porch of the house. He was about to join them, when his eye caught sight of a figure gliding in among the shrubbery towards the little arbor in the garden.

"Milly! Milly!" cried Harold, his eager steps overtaking her as she sank to a seat in the arbor and covered her face with her hands.

He sat down beside her, trembling with his emotion. She did not shrink. "Oh, Harold," she cried, "take me back!"

Airid sobs and tears she confessed it all; a perverse maiden, piqued and unstable, fooling her silly little heart with the thought that she was "teaching her lover a lesson," cheating herself with the delusion of new faces.

"I will never complain again," promised Milly when they were alone again. "We will have to wait to make up what—we gave to help your poor friend, but I will be patient—and happy, Harold."

"Why, that doesn't count, Milly," cried Harold brightly. "Young Gregory paid me back that money last week."

"Paid you back, Harold?"
"Yes, dear. The timely help I gave him bridged a crisis in his career. He went back home a humble prodigal. His mother after a while is going to start him in business, and if he holds out she has asked me to become his partner in an arrangement that means double what I am getting now. It will be June, Milly, after all."

"Oh, Harold, I am so happy," murmured the fair penitent; "foolish, wicked girl that I have been, never realizing that your dear, kind heart was casting bread upon the waters."

Getting the Meaning.

One night recently a porter made a speech before his negro brethren which created a sensation on account of the number of big words it contained. On the following day his employer heard of it and coming upon the porter looking through the dictionary, he said, "What are you doing, Sam; looking up some more big words for another speech?"

"No, sah," replied Sam. "Tain't that. Ah's jes' translating the speech ah made las' night."—Youth's Companion.

As to Money.

After asking where all the money has gone, as nobody seems to have any, a Canadian paper remarks, "An Englishman once said that money was made round to go 'round. A Scotchman replied that it was made flat to pile up. The Scotchman's idea is all right in theory, but just now it is the individual that is flat, and the money isn't round."

Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy

Every family should keep this preparation at hand ready for instant use when needed. Severe attacks of colic and cholera often prove fatal before medicine can be procured or a physician summoned. The uniform success that has attended the use of this remedy and the prompt cures which it has effected have made it a staple article of trade.—Advt.

THE SHADOW FOLK OF TAHITI

Pretty Legend Fall of the Peculiar Romance of the Fascinating South Seas.

We were in the land of the Little People of the Shadows. We had been told that we must offer them all our possessions, but that they would take for themselves only the shadows of the things they wanted. So we put slender sticks on the ground, all along the open side of our room, between the high tree-roots, and hung on them our tapa garments, our necklaces and ornaments of feathers and of pearl and of green jade-stone. One precious thing we could not offer them, and that was the bracelet of iridescent pearl-shell set with cat's eyes of the sea: it had been put on my sweetheart's arm when she was a little girl, and now she could not take it off.

We hoped the Little People of the Shadows would understand that the bracelet also would have been offered them if it had been possible. I feared—and resolved to stay awake, to protect my sweetheart if they did not understand, but I was tired and soon fell asleep on the soft mat beside her warm body.

Suddenly I awoke. The Ribbons of Light were all about, going and coming, rolling and unrolling, lighting up the open spaces, where hundreds of the Little People were carrying off the shadows of all the ornaments we had hung on the slender sticks. They were dancing in the light of the Rolling Ribbons, and the place where my sweetheart had been lying was no longer warm.

She was dancing in the midst of the Little People. I saw my sweetheart—my full-bodied woman, my beautiful one, the Flower of the Mountain—becoming smaller and smaller.

She became as a little child. As the bracelet of shining pearl slipped from her tiny wrist, the Little People picked it up and hung it on one of the slender sticks, where its cat's eye glowed. Soon, as they danced, my sweetheart, was no larger than the other Little People and was among them.

The Ribbons of Light rolled away among the trees and all was dark again. The Shadow Folk were gone; my sweetheart was gone to be with the souls of all the other people who have been lost in the forests of purple Orehena.—From the Shadow Folk: A Tahitian Legend, by E. Lloyd Scherist, in Asia Magazine.

Has Own Idea of "Progress."

A different idea of progress from that usually held is given by A. Edward Newton, who, in the Atlantic Monthly, writes: "I was dining once in London, quite informally, with a great electrical engineer, a very trig man in attendance. On the table near my host's right hand was a small block of white marble and a tiny silver mallet. When he wanted the mallet he struck the marble a resounding blow. I was somewhat amused and asked him if he had ever heard of a push-button for the same purpose. 'My boy, I have,' was his reply, 'but I get enough of electrical devices in the city; I don't want a single one of them in my own home. I've not yet come to using gas; I prefer candles; they are not so likely to get out of order. I hate this pushing a dimple and waiting for something to happen. When I make a noise myself I begin to feel a sense of progress that's what we stand for in this country'—with a knowing wink—'progress.'"

MADE LEGION DRIVE SUCCESS

Dare Devil Louisiana Man Put Real Thrills Into Campaign for New Members.

When Anthony Kelley was discharged from the navy in New Orleans, La., he found the life of a land-lubber terribly devoid of thrill and peril. He had been going to sea since the age of fifteen and he missed the excitement of stormy nights in the dizzy heights of the crow's nest and hair-raising trips on the ropes far above the deck.

With the start of a membership campaign of Rollin post of the American Legion in New Orleans, Kelley blossomed out as a professional dare-devil to assist his fellow Legionnaires in attracting attention. He climbed a flag pole atop the city hall, several hundred feet above the pavement and poked back and forth trying to break the pole. A net stretched below was all that was between the daring Legionnaire and some exceedingly hard terrain.

Kelley was unable to break the flag pole, however. So he scaled an eight-story building and hung from the coping by his toes. Film companies rushed camera men to take motion pictures of the feat and the Legion membership drive was a success.

"None of it was as thrilling as the four years and four months I was in the war zone," Kelley declares. He was plying between American and European ports when war was declared. He entered the navy as an ensign and was discharged in April, 1919. He continued in service as an officer of the Merchant Marine until December, 1920.

Do Not Have to Pay Poll Tax.

Backed by the American Legion, a law providing for the registration of all ex-service men of all wars in the state of Montana was passed by the legislature. The new act exempts all ex-service men from payment of the poll tax and requires each county assessor to keep a record of the names and organizations of all veterans within his county. It is expected that other states will take similar action soon.

Old Almond Trees Bear Well.
That age is one of the assets of an almond orchard in point of bearing is claimed by Edward Wyckoff, pioneer resident of the Woodland district, who has on display in the board of trade rooms limbe from almond trees on his place planted in 1837 by his brother, David Wyckoff, former sheriff of Yolo county, writes a Woodland (Calif.) correspondent. Though 64 years of age, the orchard is the best bearing in the valley and the trees are strong and virile. Records of the production are being kept for grandchildren that they may make some comparisons of crops when the orchard reaches the century mark.

People Looking Curiously.
If there is a skeleton in your closet, rest assured that the few inhabitants of Easter Island, 2,300 miles off the coast of Chile and the easternmost inhabited Polynesian island, will make no effort to bring it forth into the light as one traveler says of them that they are not curious enough to turn around on the dock to look at the boat that calls there about once in eighteen months. Gigantic statues, stone houses and sculptured rocks, relics of an ancient people, are found on the island. —National Geographic Society Bulletin.

INTRODUCING

and at the same time emphasizing to our department of Children's the importance of this new addition Wear

The New "WIRTHMOR" Dresses for Girls

Made of the loveliest, cheeriest ginghams and other desirable tub fabrics, in coloring and patterns that are the newest.

Each garment is protected by a guarantee that insures the durability of the fabric, the fastness of color and the all round satisfaction in her purchase that any mother, who invests in a pretty frock for her daughter, has a right to expect.

We want YOU, if you're the mother of a young daughter, to come and see these attractive new dresses.

We want to tell you more about them than we can in this space.

We want you to compare them with any dresses that you have seen—if you do this, we are sure that you will share in our enthusiasm and genuine delight in securing the representation of this new line.

From now on there will be six entirely new models at $3 to show you each month and four new models that will sell at $2.

Wirthmor Georgette Waists of the latest style, at $5.00.

Wirthmor Cotton Waists at $1.00 and $2.00 each.

Cadet Hosiery of cotton, lisle and silk. They satisfy.

Warner's Rust Proof Corsets—every pair guaranteed.

The simple announcement that this store has something new and different in the way of dresses for girls of 7 to 14 years, is sure to interest mothers of such maids, and it's safe to predict that these self-same mothers are coming, at the first convenient moment to view these newcomers.

Mothers with girls to clothe, are unerring judges of quality in children's wear—they consider well the modishness of the little frock; the excellence of materials; the stitching, the colors, patterns—and are critical, as is their right, when examining buttonholes, seams, hems and the details of finish and trimming.

These new "Wirthmor" dresses are going to pass, "with flying colors," the most careful scrutiny of the most exacting mother. She is going to pronounce them "O. K."
