FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. S. Conger Hathaway, Pastor

Fourth of July

Since the Great War the Fourth of July has taken on new meaning. For the past three years Great Britain, France, Belgium and other of our late allies have joined in the celebration of the American Independence Day, because they have discovered that the day stands for that for which the whole world longs—the sacrificial spirit and true democracy. The Church calls the people of every community to the noblest patriotism; which includes righteousness in the nation and among the nations.

THE ANNUAL ALUMNI REUNION

The curtain was raised on the last scene of the graduating program, Friday, June 23, when the class of '22 were guests at the annual reunion of the P. H. S. Alumni. At 6:30 all were invited to the auditorium, which was wondrously changed by fairies into a dining room, with many tables beautifully decorated with larkspur, daisies and asparagus. After the invocation was given by Rev. Franklin L. Gibson, a delicious three-course dinner was served to one hundred and fifty members and friends.

Two members of the class of '82 were also guests of honor, Hattie Marshall Baker and Anna Wildie Burr. Mary Andrews, Church of Liberty, Missouri, who last fall entered college with her sons, sent a most helpful letter, and a letter of regret also came from Owen Miller of that class. During the dinner, splendid music was furnished by Doniel Patterson, Gladys Schrader, William Segar, Philip Millard, (all Juniors) and Mr. Cook, to whom a rising vote of thanks was given.

Directly after the annual meeting was called to order by the president, Luella Rosenberg Chappel. The secretary's report of last year, so splendidly written by Sarah Wilson, was very well read by Russell Van Gilder, and loudly applauded. After a short business session, the following new officers were elected:

President—Norma Baker Cassidy, '10.
Vice President—Gilbert Brown, '05.
Sec'y-Treas—Winifred Willett, '22.
Gertrude Smith Hutchins, '11, and Florence Lee Furman, '08, were appointed to complete the executive board.

The retiring officers are leaving the association in a splendid condition financially and full of vigor, and with the able new officers a good year is predicted.

Alumni members are scattered over the whole United States, but return always when possible, and it is most interesting to guess who will be in attendance each year. This year letters and greetings from the absent were numerous: Allan Newman sent a telegram during the evening, and Leslie Hudd arrived just at the close. The letters were from Prof. E. H. Ryder, of M. A. C.; Max Fisher, '99, of Mt. Washington, Mo.; Evelyn Ramsdell, '91, the turkey expert from Iowa, Mich.; Dr. Safford, '86, of Detroit; Maynard Riley, '01, of Chicago; Clay Hoyt, '92, of Chesaning; Miss Cole, a former teacher.

The president introduced Arthur Whipple, '06, as toastmaster, who was so lively he kept everyone guessing and hoping that none would be hit.

Hanna Strasen, '21, gave a piano solo, which was keenly enjoyed, as were also the songs by Hilda Smye Stevens, '16, accompanied by Czarina Penney, '13; the women's quartette composed of Bertha Beals Brown, Norma Baker Cassidy, Hazel Conner Moon, Marguerite Hough Olmstead and Mrs. W. S. Bake, and the whistling solo by Wanda Shultz, accompanied by Gladys Schrader.

Mrs. Chappel, with a strong plea enthused all with love for the association, welcomed classes '82 and '22, and received several pledges from the latter, but not one would guarantee to return in forty years, as the example set by '82.

Margaret Strenge, president of the class of '22, made a gracious response for the class, and Charles Chappel was given a chance to respond to his mother's welcome.

Hattie Marshall Baker, '82, who helped her three children become members, made an inspiring response gained by forty years' experience.

Edwin Crosby, '97, of Detroit, read "A Quarter," before his name and was puzzled until he remembered that the man who first welcomed him said he was "Bobby" Jolliffe, but wore knee pants a quarter of a century ago.

Ada Smith Murray, '02, scored in "Setting Your Own Values." Superintendent George A. Smith was much enjoyed, and impressed the audience that they need have no fear for the welfare of their alma mater. L. Gottschalk, '91, made a few pleasing remarks.

After singing one verse of America, the folks were dismissed, feeling that a most enjoyable evening had been theirs.

A very kindly feeling exists between the Mascabee Guards, who served the dinner, and the Alumni members who were so pleased to be served.

WILL OPERATE LOCAL PLANT

George C. Raviler has leased the plant of the Plymouth Agricultural Association in north village, and will take possession of the same July 1st. Mr. Raviler will operate the plant for the coming year for the manufacture of tomato pulp only, under the name of the Plymouth Preserving Co. He will also handle a line of supplies, such as fertilizer, feed, coal, baskets, etc., for the association in connection with the business. During the coming season Mr. Raviler will buy tomatoes in the open market, and as there is a large acreage of tomatoes in this vicinity, he anticipates no trouble in securing all he will need. Mr. Raviler has had considerable experience in this line of work, having been the organizer of the Plymouth Agricultural Association, and managed its business most successfully for several years previous to accepting a responsible position with the Michigan State Farm Bureau. He is moving his family here from Lansing this week, and they will occupy their home on Starkweather avenue. Plymouth friends will be glad to welcome them back to Plymouth again.

WILL PUT UP ROAD SIGNS

The Plymouth Chamber of Commerce have ordered one hundred signs, 18x24 inches in size to be placed along the roads leading to Plymouth. They have also ordered ten larger signs, 4x6 feet in size, to be placed on the leading highways entering the village.

COMMENCEMENT

The Commencement exercises of the Plymouth High school were held in the High school auditorium, Thursday evening, June 22nd. The program opened with music by the High school orchestra. Invocation by Rev. D. D. Nagle, pastor of the Methodist church. A male quartette composed of Messrs. C. Whipple, E. Jolliffe, H. Jolliffe and A. Whipple, furnished excellent music. The salutatory was given in a pleasing manner by Miss Etha Wieseley, as also was the valedictory by Miss Margaret Clemens.

The address of the evening was given by H. M. Crooks, president of Alma College. Mr. Crooks had planned to speak on "The Growth of Personality," but later decided to speak on "Production and Property." He clearly explained the close relationship of the two. The diplomas were presented by Superintendent George A. Smith, and the Star Spangled Banner sung in unison concluded the program. Field daisies and blue larkspur were used for decoration.

LOCAL NEWS

Correspondents and others will please get their items to us as early as possible next week, on account of July 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Fisher, little son, Kenneth, the Misses Alta and Camilla Fisher and Ernest and Lee Fisher spent Sunday at White Lake.

Clark Sackett, who has been seriously ill, was taken to Ann Arbor hospital, Monday, for treatment. His condition was somewhat improved, Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Rorsbacher and daughter, Dorothy, of Detroit, spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Rorsbacher, and other relatives here.

William H. Sheffield of Laingsburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheffield of Durand, have been guests of their niece and cousin, Mrs. Frank Murray, and other relatives the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tillotson entertained the following relatives over the week-end: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lancaster and daughter, June, of Detroit, also two cousins from Arkansas.

PLYMOUTH DEFEATS PONTIAC

Plymouth I. O. O. F. base ball team defeated the strong G. M. C. team of Pontiac, Saturday, June 24, by the score of 13 to 2. The game was featured by the splendid pitching of Bunnell and Carsons, also the home-run hits by Bunnell, Carsons, and Ostrander.

MARTIN'S STORE RE-OPENING

O. P. Martin announces the re-opening of his store for Saturday, July 1st, in a half page ad in today's paper. A new addition to the store has just been completed, which gives over 1,000 square feet of additional floor space. For the past year Mr. Martin has felt the pressing need of more room to care for his rapidly increasing business, and an opportunity to carry a larger stock of goods, and the new addition will give him plenty of room to expand his business. The entire store has been re-decorated, and presents a very nice appearance. At the rear of the store a space has been provided for several easy chairs, where patrons may meet their friends or rest while shopping. A lavatory for women has also been provided for in the basement, with a stairway leading to the same at the rear of the store. Mr. and Mrs. Martin cordially invite the people of Plymouth and vicinity to visit their store on Saturday, and inspect the improvements that have been made.

NEW RESTAURANT WILL OPEN SATURDAY

We call the attention of our readers to the ad of the Plymouth Hotel Restaurant and Lunch Room, which appears in today's paper. The new Restaurant and Lunch Room will open to the public Saturday, July 1st. The office and dining room of the hotel have been remodeled and re-decorated, and with the up-to-date fixtures which have been installed, presents a very nice and attractive appearance. Arch W. Mathewson, the proprietor, is a restaurant man of wide experience in catering to the public, and there is no doubt that the new enterprise will meet with splendid success. Read the ad.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING

The annual school meeting of District No. 1, Fr., will take place at the High school auditorium, Monday evening, July 10th, at 7:00 o'clock. Besides the general business of the meeting there are two members of the board to be elected. The terms of office of J. W. Henderson and E. V. Jolliffe expire at this time. Every taxpayer should be interested in the annual school meeting and be present.

GRANGE PICNIC SATURDAY

The Plymouth Grange picnic will take place Saturday, July 1st, at the home of Perry Campbell on the Canton Center road. A basket dinner will be the feature at the noon hour. During the afternoon, a ball game and other sports have been scheduled. All members of the Grange, their families and friends are most cordially invited to attend the picnic and enjoy a good time.

SANE VACATIONS

Thanks to the auto, a big part of the annual vacation problem has been solved for many of our citizens. While some Plymouth auto owners may contend their machine is an expensive proposition when taken all the year round, they must admit that in the matter of saving money at vacation time it is in a class by itself. Not only is travel by auto cheaper than by rail, because the whole family can go along on one gasoline bill, but it has the advantage of being ready any minute you want to go and right there the minute you want to come home.

Tourists are out by the thousands now, and many of our own people are joining in the hot-weather pilgrimages. Hundreds of others, of course, will be forced to remain at home. But these should have no more enjoyable vacation that a few days spent close at home, with relatives and friends you don't meet as often as you would like to. There's lots to be had in the way of scenery without going miles away, and after all hunting something to see or jostling with thousands who are only out for the same purpose is a poor way of having a good time and leaving the vacation in worse shape upon return than he went away.

Try spending a vacation close at home once. Take it easy; keep in the shade; eat sensibly and dress comfortably. And when the days you have set aside for this purpose have been used up, we'll guarantee you'll decide that, while you have not seen wonders, others picture to you upon their return, you have saved a lot of money and—what's best of all—you've returned to work feeling a whole lot better.

"GOOD OLD DAYS"

Speaking for the farmers around Plymouth, we do not believe they want to go back to "the good old days," within the memory of the present generation, when butter brought ten cents per pound, eggs were five cents a dozen, chickens were twelve and one-half cents each or a dollar for twelve, while oats and corn brought from ten to twenty cents a bushel. Even with these prices, the farmer often got paid in "due bills," which he had to trade out with the merchant who bought his produce. The basic reason for these low prices was impoverishment of the industrial worker, who received only from 90c to $1.25 a day for his work.

So long as hundreds of thousands of workers' families had to live on less than $7 a week, farm produce brought almost nothing, and the farmers got only a niggardly living in return for their toil. On the other hand, the so-called high wages of war time brought farmers the greatest prosperity they ever had.

These are facts underlying the rapid spread of the farm labor unions of the southwest. They explain the expanding alliance of the two practicing classes for political action. The most revolutionary of modern agriculture is not the magic of irrigation, nor the marvelous yield of scientific crop production. The greatest discovery of the present day is the farmers' discovery of the industrial worker as his best friend, his necessary customer and his natural ally.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

We're around again to the season when we unloosen all our pent-up patriotism, and join in helping to make the eagle scream; back again to the one big day of auto accidents and powder-burns. Insofar as Plymouth is concerned, we are going to observe the Fourth in a safe and sane manner—that is, the older ones of the community. And if the older ones have their way, the younger generation will use just as much judgment. It is no longer fashionable to get wild and reckless, even destructive, on the Fourth. It's no longer necessary to split the eardrums of everyone in the neighborhood with horrible noises to prove that you love your country. Neither is it considered patriotic for a fellow to load up on the first thing he can get his hands on and endanger the lives of others by his reckless auto-driving. No, there's a newer and better way than all of this of spending the Fourth of July. And we sincerely trust, for the peace and dignity of the neighborhood, that everyone in the community, old and young alike, will join in celebrating the event in the new, the safe and the sane manner in which it should be observed.

THE EXCHANGE OF IDEAS

One of the best services rendered by the modern Chamber of Commerce movement, is to get people in the same line of trade or production together to exchange ideas. No one man can know it all. If men in the same line just get together and talk over their problems and experiences, they often learn more than could be gained by years of study or individual effort.

For instance, the Rochester, N. Y., Chamber of Commerce has one group of men studying production problems, another studying employment and service problems, another discussing cost accounting. In this manner it could be arranged so as to give every business man a chance to perfect himself in his specialty.

In smaller cities the same idea can be worked out by having groups of men from nearby communities gather to swap experiences. The exchange of ideas is one of the best ways for promoting gains in business efficiency.

Mrs. H. J. Green entertained a company of ladies at a miscellaneous shower at her home on Union street, last Monday, in honor of Miss Dorothy Albro of Detroit. Luncheon was served at one o'clock and the table appointments and decorations were beautifully carried out in pink and green. Miss Albro received several lovely gifts, and the afternoon was greatly enjoyed by all. Guests were present from Detroit and Plymouth.

THE MORRISON GIRLS ORCHESTRAL COMPANY was organized by Bess Gearhart Morrison herself and the program she has selected for them is of music the people love to hear. All are young women of refinement and excellent training. They possess the tone Chautauqua spirit and will please by their personality and fine playing and singing.

NORTHVILLE WILL CELEBRATE

Northville will celebrate the glorious Fourth with a base ball tournament and race program in the afternoon and there will be three racing events, and Northville and Pinckney will play ball. During the forenoon there will be a band concert, and street sports of various kinds and immediately after noon there will be an automobile parade.

In the evening there will be a free dance on the pavement and the day's festivities will close with a fine display of fireworks.

The people of this section are invited to spend the day and evening at Northville. They will be assured a good time.—Advertisement.

Death was caused from meningitis. The funeral was held Tuesday morning from Miss Burrell's home, near Ypsilanti. Burial was at Denton.

VICKSTROM-NELSON

About twenty-five relatives and intimate friends witnessed a very pretty wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vickstrom, 2405 Avenue A, Flint, Saturday evening, at 8:30 o'clock, when Miss Thyra Nelson became the bride of Ernest Vickstrom of Plymouth. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Swanson. The bride's gown was of white crepe, trimmed in white satin. Her tulle veil was arranged in a coronet effect about the head, and was held in place with rose buds. She carried a showy bouquet of yellow rose buds. Miss Helen Parsons was her only attendant. She wore a gown of pale lavender and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. Wilfred Nelson, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man to Mr. Vickstrom. Little Gunhild Markstrom, who was gowned in pink, carried the ring, concealed in a basket of pink rose buds, and Miss Jannette Parsons played the wedding march. Following the ceremony a dainty lunch was served. The out of town guests were: Miss Hilda Carlson and Nels Nelson, brother of the bride, both of Plymouth. Mr. and Mrs. Vickstrom will be at home to their best of friends at Plymouth, after July 1st.

POLITICAL CHRONOLOGY

For the benefit of our readers we give the following chronology of political events for the present year:

August 12—Last day primary nominating petitions may be filed.

August 26—Last day of registration for primary election.

September 12—Primary election.

October 21—Last day of registration for November election.

November 7—General election.

Candidates will be nominated September 12, by the respective parties for governor and lieutenant governor on the state ticket, for United States senator, for congressman in the First, Second, Sixth and Thirteenth districts, for state senator from the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth senatorial districts and for state representatives from the First, Second, Third and Fourth districts; also for circuit judge to fill an unexpired term. (This is the vacancy on the Wayne bench temporarily filled by Governor Groesbeck's appointment of Judge Richter.)

On the county ticket, the various parties will nominate two for prolate judge, also candidates for sheriff, county clerk, treasurer, register of deeds, prosecutor, circuit court commissioners, coroners, county surveyor, county road commissioner and drain commissioner.

There also will be named at the September 12 primary, delegates from districts and wards to the respective county and state conventions of the various parties.

Under the old convention system, directly following the primary, at dates to be set by the respective parties, there will be nominated candidates for secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor general and attorney general.

In addition to passing on candidates named through the primary and convention process, the voters in the general election in November will consider the proposed constitutional amendments submitted by the legislature to provide for a state income tax, excess condemnation of land for park purposes and the incorporation of port districts. It is probable there will be submitted also initiated amendments for which petitions are now being circulated for a revision of county government, for requiring attendance of children at public schools, for abolishing the society clause in constitutional provision for reapportionment and for making the superintendent of public instruction an appointive rather than an elective office and reorganizing the state board of education.

Why Suffer from Rheumatism?
Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to anyone afflicted with rheumatism.—Advertisement.

JERSEY BREEDERS TO HOLD COUNTY MEET

STATE CAMPAIGN IN INTERESTS OF BREED UNDER WAY
JUNE 26 TO JULY 8.

Greater interest in Jersey cattle in Michigan is the aim of a series of county meetings being held over the state from June 26 to July 8. The meetings are to be held in the form of county tours and picnics, with R. T. Lee, field man of the American Jersey Cattle Club, and an extension specialist from the Michigan Agricultural College in attendance.

There are more than 2,000 farms in the state on which Jerseys are kept, with a total of more than 8,000 animals," says H. E. Dennison, of the M. A. C. dairy department. "The meetings have been planned by the Jersey men, so as to reach as large a percentage of the breeders as possible."

Renewed interest in Jerseys is expected to result from county meetings. Jersey breeders have felt in the past that their breed has not been given the emphasis and support in the state which it deserves.

The schedule of special county meetings, local arrangements for which are being planned by the county agricultural agents, includes: Shiawassee county, June 26; Kent county, June 27; Allegan county, June 28; Kalamazoo county, June 29; Lenawee county, June 30; Washtenaw county, July 1; Mecosta county, July 5; Jackson county, July 7, and Hillsdale county, July 8.

Advocates Right Training For Boy Farmers of State

G. W. Dickinson Sees Need of Constructive Work For All Youngsters.

The true mission of the Michigan State Fair, as seen by George W. Dickinson, secretary and manager of the exposition for the past decade, is one of educating the rising generation of farmers in the correct atmosphere.

So far, the Michigan State Fair has been a splendid force in the lives of boys and girls on the farms in this state. This has been indicated by the enthusiasm with which the youngsters have participated in the competition to win a place in the Boys' State Fair School.

Speaking before the farmers' club division of the board of commerce at Detroit, recently, Mr. Dickinson outlined the course in manual training, judging of stock and other valuable training which is given the boys who are brought to the fair.

"I believe the Michigan State Fair can be of invaluable service in educating our boy farmers," declared Mr. Dickinson, "and I propose, this year, to concentrate on making the educational division for boys better than it ever has been before."

"The Michigan Agricultural College and the government now are co-operating with us through an extension course and fine results are being apparent. The course for boys will be confined to stock judging and similar instruction and the training for girls will include cooking, canning, poultry culling and other things."

As has been the policy in the past, the expenses of 150 boys and the same number of girls to and from the fair and during their visit at the exposition will be defrayed by the fair.

Forrest Lord of Mt. Clemens, will head the department of Boys' and Girls' clubs, R. A. Turner, state club leader at M. A. C., East Lansing, is superintendent.

E. T. Cameron, of Lansing, will be superintendent of the educational department, assisted by F. W. Frostic, of Wyandotte, this year.

While discussing the educational department, the fair manager branched into a discussion of the interest in dairying in Michigan. Being a frank man he doesn't hesitate to criticize what he terms lethargy.

"There is a great opportunity for improvement in the Michigan dairy world," said Mr. Dickinson, "and I have had visions of the State Fair playing an important role in the realization of a greater dairy Michigan."

"This year, visitors to the fair will see the finest butter sculptural exhibition ever put on anywhere. We also will show the various cheese products manufactured in Michigan, domestics, and dairy machinery of most modern type in operation."

Fred W. Warner, of Farmington, is the member of the board of managers, in charge of the dairy department.

Today's Reflections

Swatting the fly is far better exercise these warm days than cussing Congress.

We've often noticed that the Plymouth man who howls about everything is usually treated like a dog.

The quickest way to find a baby's toy is to turn out the light and hunt for it with your bare feet.

Some Plymouth men curse the weather as if they expected winter this summer.

The old world is getting better. We read recently where they have a moving picture that doesn't end with a kissing affair.

A bachelor is a man who never

Another way Plymouth parents can keep their daughters at home is to feed them onions.

We suppose it won't be long now before they'll be staging "Ten Nights at a Soda Fountain."

Plymouth still has a few men who should have been lawyers. They could demand pay for attending to other people's business.

Do You Know Why?

The grain in the siding and finish of some houses stands out, while it doesn't in that of others.

Why some hardwood flooring "cups" after a little wear;

Why some windows rattle after a little while and let in cold drafts; Why some roofs always seem to have a new leak;

Why some houses seem to deteriorate much quicker than others.

We will tell you why without obligation.

Being able to answer the above questions and advise prospective builders how to avoid such defects in building is A PART OF OUR BUSINESS.

In Dykeman's Gulch

By MARVIN ST. JOHNS

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"Go tell that to the marines—foot soldiers won't stand it!" The little spare man with soft, dreamy eyes and the face of a poet bowed in a deprecatory manner and left the noisy messroom of the Kimberly diamond mines.

"One man among the group arose and followed him. "Wait a moment," he spoke, laying a gentle detaining hand on the man who had preceded him.

"What is it you want?" inquired the latter.

"I heard your story in yonder."

"Well?"

"And I believe it. You want some one to share your venture. I am your man, if you will accept me."

A great calm and soft content over-spread the features of the man addressed. He simply put out his hand to clasp that of the other.

"They laughed at me in yonder," he said; "I, who located the big Rhodes claim and have spent ten years in the district. I am still John Brazelton, expert—I still know when I see a bit of glittering spar and a real diamond, even a mile away. There is one at Dykeman's Gulch. I have seen it and it is mine. You heard my story and believe it, you say. Then we become partners."

"To the extent of my limited means—a bare $200, all—all I have in the world."

"It is more than sufficient. All we need is a wagon, a team of mules, some tackle and provisions."

"And then?"

"Patience and—riches!"

Bruce Beresford led his new partner to his room. As they entered it a mild-faced, blue-eyed man arose from polishing a rifle and some pistols at a little table.

"This is my friend and to be trusted. He is Vaclav Polski," introduced Beresford. "Now, then, Mr. Brazelton, tell your story over again."

In few words the gem prospector related his story. In a lonely mountain gulch 200 miles away, while camping at night he had awakened to have his eye fixed hundreds of feet up a perpendicular cliff side upon a great lustrous mass of prismatic light.

Just at that phase of the moon, just at that hour the lunar rays rested for perhaps fifteen minutes across a surface, small but distinct, studded with sparkles of prismatic brilliancy.

"Diamonds!" pronounced the old expert positively. "In-bled in the petrified clay, thrown there by some upheaval of nature they shone down—a promised fortune. Then the glow passed with the shifting moon rays."

"You could not fix the spot?" questioned the interested Beresford.

"How could I? Why, I dared not move to lose the focus I might not later regain."

The plans for proceeding to Dykeman's Gulch were talked over and Beresford pledged himself to the enterprise.

Two years previous he had left home and pretty Ethel Rayner to seek his fortune.

Just after his arrival at Cape Town he had come across a poor fever-stricken wretch, homeless, friendless. This was his present companion, or rather his pensioner, Vaclav Polski. The young man had been a crack target performer with a show that had become stranded. He had been abandoned to his misery and poverty.

Polski was just recovering from his illness. His gratitude, his fidelity toward Beresford was touching.

Two weeks to a day after leaving the mines the little party of three arrived at Dykeman's Gulch. They camped in the valley.

It was shortly after eight o'clock when the moon, clearing a lofty ledge, cast its full refulgence upon the face of the great steep bluff.

"It is there—see! look! I have not deceived you!" shouted the exultant expert, as way up the cliff there shot out a thousand rainbow-tinted threads of light.

"It we could only mark the spot," murmured Beresford.

"Bang!" Beresford turned, startled—bang! bang! bang! bang!—and so a dozen times. He viewed Polski standing with his repeating rifle directed forward.

"It is done!" cried the skilled marksman. "I have marked a circle directly about the focus of light."

"But the marks will not show in the daytime?"

"Plainly," declared the ingenious fellow. "I shot chalk bullets."

And with the dawn the adventurers saw way up there aloft an unmistakable series of plain white marks, denoting the center of the diamond glow.

It was the intrepid Polski who insisted on being lowered over the cliff. It was he who brought aloft a dozen radiant gems by a freak of nature planted far out of ordinary human reach.

A fortune for each of the three adventurers lay in the precious jewels. "See," cried Brazelton, as he held the largest of them in his fingers, "a king's ransom. Oh, it is the most beautiful thing in the world!"

"Except Ethel!" breathed Bruce Beresford fervently, "and Ethel means home, friends, happiness and love!"

And Vaclav Polski kissed the hand of his almoner and friend, tears of joy in his faithful eyes, and asked only to go back to civilization and hope with him.

The Home of the Soul

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions normally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.—Advertisement.

Avery's Inheritance

By MYRA C. LANE

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"And I shall not see you again?" "No, I am going on to Tulapang." Avery clasped the girl's hand, looked squarely into her eyes and, seeing nothing more but true good will, raised his hat and turned away.

He shrugged his shoulders. He had been attracted to her on the voyage to the Philippines; but he was no chicken, and he resolved to set it down as a passing flirtation and forget it. He was well past thirty, and had more important matters afoot.

His great-uncle, Lionel Avery, the explorer, had left him, in his will, a native kingdom, consisting of several hundreds of square miles, unlimited copra, pearl fishing, gold in the mountains, jungle, swamp, head-hunters, and eighty-five wives, the legacy of his predecessor, when the aged explorer appears to have supplanted by some political legislator.

But then, Lionel Avery had been a national character in his day, and his conquest of this wild territory was nothing remarkable. Avery had been famous from Peking to Singapore, and all up the China coast, as the last of a race of intrepid American adventurers.

As to a young man, who had never known anything but the drudgery of a clerkship, who had no relatives except Lionel Avery—whom he had seen only once in his life—and a remote female cousin, Anne—who was probably a gorgon—the inheritance of an entire kingdom was an event. And Avery had sailed to take up his inheritance.

There were thirty miles by railroad from the port, ninety by coach, a hundred by bullock wagon, and then about a hundred more over a trail through a dense tropical jungle to the cluster of huts that was the capital. Long before Avery reached it he had put his fellow passenger out of his mind.

He had kept his secret till he was beyond the bounds of civilization, and there three headmen, who had been apprized of his coming and spoke a smattering of English, met him to conduct him "home," with royal salutations. It was a six days' march, and on the fourth day emissaries arrived.

They sat round the camp fire and engaged in an animated and protracted palaver, which lasted until Avery fell asleep. In the morning the emissaries were gone. The headman, Ngrolles, came up to Avery.

"This is bad business," he said. "It is doubtful whether the people wish you to arrive, my lord."

He went on to explain that the queen of the tribe had raised the standard of rebellion, and was supported by fully half the population in her resolution not to acknowledge Avery.

"The messengers say that a war party of our men will meet us five miles from the capital," the headman continued. "We may number three hundred spearmen against four hundred of the other side. Is it your wish that we go forward, my lord?"

"Yes, let 'er go—I mean, forward," said Avery.

Nevertheless the headman looked graver and graver as they approached the capital, and the next night they left the trail and camped in the jungle to avoid surprise. On the following morning the bush gave way to vast rolling plains, with here and there evidences of cultivation.

About noon they perceived a body of men advancing toward them. For a few moments the little party were left in hesitation; but then they proved to be the friendly recruits who had flocked to Avery's side.

They gathered about him raising their spears aloft, in salutation. Avery turned to Ngrolles.

"Translate this speech," he said. "I will lead them to victory. To every widow of a man who falls a water buffalo shall be given. There is to be no killing of the wounded."

Ngrolles translated, and the party went frenzied with approval. In a compact body they moved forward, until an hour later they came in sight of the capital on a low hill.

In front of it, massed in solid phalanx, were the partisans of the tribal queen.

Avery restrained his men and went forward accompanied by Ngrolles, holding up a white flag.

The black ranks opened at the word of command, and out strode a white woman—the woman passenger! She wore a short, white skirt and a sun helmet.

"John Avery," she said, "I call on you to return and leave me in possession of my rights. I knew all about your mission, but I hope that there may be no bloodshed. This territory is under American protection, and the United States will avenge any act of place on your part."

"Pracy!" snorted Avery. "I inherited this kingdom legally from my great-uncle Lionel Avery, and I have the papers to prove it!"

"What?" she cried. "Why, Lionel Avery was my great-uncle, and I thought you had falsely taken his name. I am Anne Wickham."

"Then we are cousins," said Avery.

"Let's call a truce till we can go over our papers together."

Anne looked at him doubtfully. "The people will never agree," she said mournfully. "Whichever of us gives way, it will mean bloodshed. They are very turbulent."

Avery hesitated. "Then—perhaps—if our papers are in order—we—it's something I wanted to tell you of on board the ship," he said.

A burning blush crept up under Anne's skin. "I—I'll think about it after I've seen your papers, John," she answered.

Smoking by No Means Always Confined to Men.

In Olden Times Women, and Even Children, Participated in Enjoyment of the "Weed."

William Penn has a fine record in the history books. Controversy and colonial muck raking has not sullied his name. But William Penn smoked with the women. He smoked with women in America. No, not in sylvan privacy in a small select party down near the City of Brotherly Love.

He smoked with them right out in public. In fact, they took puffs from the same pipe. Twice at least did this happen, says a New York Sun writer. Yes, of course it was a pipe; a Calumet which he smoked with the big chiefs and the braves and the squaws of the tribes, that were selling him land. A friendly social time was had by all and he made a fine trade for a first-class piece of land, paying for it in part with 300 tobacco pipes, 100 handfuls of tobacco and 20 tobacco boxes.

In the old country in the good old days the women took to smoking as quickly as did the men. At least the ladies of the courts did. In France tobacco was the special possession of the queen mother, who received some plants from her ambassador in Portugal, Jean Nicot. This is the real original chap of Lady Nicotine fame.

The weed was called "the queen's herb," "incense," "Yorba Santa," "panacea," and half a dozen other names of the same sort. In the English court the ladies as well as the men followed the fashion introduced by Sir Walter Raleigh. Tobacco smoke was considered the best medicine for all ills, and so late as the time of Charles II boys were flogged at Eton for refusing to learn to smoke.

Of course, it has not all been plain sailing for the smokers. So gentle and mild a punishment as a $25 fine or a short sojourn in that gray castle with the towers and battlements and the bridge of sighs that we call the Tombs would have been considered laughable by those who in earlier days were really out after the smokers. Church and state alike have gone right after them.

Imprisonment, excommunication from the church, the death penalty, whipping on the bare back with the knout, have all of them been on the statute books of one or another country of Europe in the course of attempts to grub out this habit, root and branch, ladies and gentlemen alike. No less a person than a king of England wrote publicly for the ants.

He calls it "loathsome to the eye, hurtful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs and in the black stinking fume thereof, nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of that pit which is bottomless." This referred to all smokers. He was not doing any sharpshooting at the women. He was leading the firing squad against the whole tobacco brigade.

Oldest Flag.

Our royal standard, in which some changes will possibly be made as a result of Ireland's new status, is not so venerable as the Danish royal standard—the oldest national flag in existence. The white cross on a red ground of the Dannebrog is traditionally traced to a vision seen in the sky by a Danish king, Vlodemar the Victorious, when leading his army against the Estonians near Reval in 1219. According to one version of the legend, the blood-red flag fell from heaven into the Danish ranks. There is no doubt that about the date of this battle it was adopted as the Danish flag and that it had the religious associations which belonged to most national standards in medieval times.—Montreal Family Herald.

In spite of repeated warnings from his father, little Bobby persisted in driving nails into blocks and boards. He had arrived at play-at-carpenter stage.

One morning dad heard the familiar pounding, and looking out he saw Bobby busily banging away—his little sister, Mary, down beside him, apparently looking on.

"Haven't I told you, Bobby, that you will mash your fingers if you drive nails?" the father asked.

"Yes, I know dad, but Mary's holding the nail."—Judge.

HURT BY UNREQUITED LOVE

Sternier Sax Said to Feel Most Keenly Disappointments Over Affairs of the Heart.

"When an engagement is broken off," said my friend the other night, according to a London Answers writer, "it is the man who feels the blow more than the girl."

I was about to disagree with him, but upon thinking the matter over I had to confess that it was so.

Often and often you read in the newspapers: "The girl I was engaged to run off with another man, and then I didn't seem to care what became of me—I started drinking. I took to gambling," etc., etc. The speaker being, of course, a man.

Why is it? It seems curious, because it is the popular belief that a man's greatest power of loving cannot compare with a woman's. Man has his business, his sports, and other attractions, but woman's principal object in life is "to love and be loved."

And yet man, so much stronger than woman in other things, does not seem able to bear the strain of "disappointed love." It drives him mad; he tries to drown his senses, or stifle his memory, and in doing it sinks lower and lower in his own and other people's estimation.

Of course, nearly every "old maid" has had her love story. Probably in silence she nurses the pain caused by a man's disloyalty, but her grief has never—or very rarely—overwhelmed her; she has never lost control of herself, as the rejected men appear to do.

"Many a man will tell you he owes much of his success in life to the inspiration given to him by his wife. Nevertheless, although that proves that she has helped him, it does not prove that she changed his nature. Probably the woman was inspired by love just as much as he was.

Does man generally bear pain with less fortitude than woman? There are many people who are ready to agree with this statement. And yet on the whole, could women have stood what so many men went through in the dreadful years of the war?

There is one theory well worth considering. Man, from childhood, grows up in the belief that he is of the stronger sex.

When he meets the girl he loves she becomes his to provide for and protect. If the girl is taken away, he just "chucks everything."

His Chance Came.

As the years roll by, each remembers some certain piece of information culled from the autocratic reader of school days.

One man remembered the family name of the king of England. For ten years he waited for some one to ask him for this information. Time and again he had the opportunity of volunteering the information, but he withheld it. He wished some one to ask him, so he could very easily reply.

And then one day his big chance came.

"Can any one tell me the family name of the king of England?" some one asked.

"I can," proudly answered the man with the knowledge. "It is Guelph."

"How did you happen to know that?" he was asked.

"Just ask me anything, old ton, just ask me anything, I'm obligin'. I'll answer you any time." And he got away with it.

Diamond an Inch Wide.

The largest diamond in China, once worn by Guby Deslys, and having a romantic, mysterious history, has been purchased by a wealthy Chinese of Pekin, whose name is not known. It is centuries old and is said to have been worn in the jeweled turbans of famous court beauties, to have shone as the eye in the forehead of a goddess in a temple in Egypt, and to have played a part in the wars of the ancient world. It was sold for $62,500, but the price would have been $218,000 if the color had been perfect. Its shape is slightly square round, it weighs 102.69 karats and it more than an inch wide.

All They Were Worth.

The minister dropped into the shop of the village barber, with whom he was at loggerheads, for a shave. When it was finished he proffered the barber three pence.

"I'll take it in preaching," replied the barber, refusing the offered coins.

"My friend," rejoined the minister with some dignity, "I haven't three penny sermons."

"That's a right, sir," replied the barber, "then I'll come three times!"—London Telegraph.

A Spiritual Courtship

By CLARA DELAFIELD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

Nope, Greatuncle Bateman ain't got no use for spiritualism. And as for mediums, they drive him plumb crazy. Cut off his grandson, Abner, for attending a table-tapping bee, he did. But there was a time—you see, it's this way:

Greatuncle Bateman had been sort of hanging round the Widow Judberry for years—on and off, the way old people do. Now he fancied her, and she'd have taken any one being only sixty, and three times married before. Sort of got set in her ways, she had, and hated single blessedness.

But it was when the Widow Judberry came into a cool eight thousand from her brother, Tom—him that was killed by a shark when he fell overboard the Christina Marlina off Cuba, when she'd told him not to spend his money on that excursion—what was I saying? Oh, about that eight thousand.

That sort of determined Greatuncle Bateman, but now it was the Widow Judberry's turn to be coy. Some women are that way. So long as Greatuncle Bateman wasn't sure in his own mind, the Widow Judberry was crazy about him. But just as soon as he made up his mind she began to run shy. Maybe that eight thousand helped a lot, too.

Now the Widow Judberry was mad on spiritualism. Used to call up the spirits of her third and second husbands—the first wouldn't speak to her because he was mad she'd let No. 2 smoke in the parlor when he had to go in the woodshed. Used to take their advice per Nat Blodgett, who sells hardware and runs spirits as a sideline.

Nat Blodgett come along every so often with his goods and spirits, and then there'd be a seance up to the Widow Judberry's house. And what Nos. 2 and 3 said went with the Widow Judberry.

Well, Greatuncle Bateman was a wise old chap. He saw that his best chance of getting hold of the Widow Judberry lay through Nos. 2 and 3. So what does he do but get hold of Nat when he come around.

"See here, Nat," he said, "I want you to form a sort of co-operative society. I want the Widow Judberry. She's my taste and she's got a tidy little bit in the bank—eight thousand from her brother, Tom, him that was killed and eaten—" but I told you that already.

"You fix it up with Nos. 2 and 3 and there'll be a thousand clear for you the day I lead the Widow Judberry to the altar."

Nat Blodgett was on like a flash. "I got you, Mr. Bateman," he answered. "I'll sure try to fix it with the spirits of Nos. 2 and 3."

There was a long seance up to the Widow Judberry's the next night, and the next morning Greatuncle Bateman waited impatiently for Nat.

"It's all right," said Nat. "I fixed it. The spirits said they think it'll be best for her to marry you, but you got to go a little further 'n that, Mr. Bateman. I'm thinking of gettin' married myself, and that thousand 'd come in very handy before I tacked the spirits again."

They flickered and haggled, but neither of 'em could trust the other, and at last Nat said:

"Tell you what I'll do, Mr. Bateman. There's my horse and wagon and my connection—they're worth a thousand easy. Now spose you was to buy me out, say at that price, and after you're married I guess you might be willing to hand the business back to me, seeing as you'll be rich."

Well, they struck the bargain and Nat brought his horse and wagon round to Greatuncle Bateman's barn and gave him a list of his customers and had debts.

"I'll fix it with the spirits," he said. "Don't you worry, Mr. Bateman."

That was Friday night. That night there was to be another seance, and Greatuncle Bateman he waited all the Saturday, dreaming of the time when he'd lead the Widow Judberry to the hymeneal altar. Saturday come, but no Nat Blodgett.

When night come Greatuncle Bateman was gittin' a little nervous, and as he usually courted the Widow Judberry Saturday nights, he goes up to the house. To his surprise, it was shut up.

"Wonder where the widow's gone!" he ejaculated. "Tain't often she goes away."

He'd just finished ruminating when a buggy drives up to the door. In it sits the Widow Judberry and Nat Blodgett. They jump out brisk, and in a minute Greatuncle Bateman sees something's wrong.

The smiles on their faces drive him mad. "How about them spirits?" he yelled, forgetting himself.

"That's all right," says Nat Blodgett. "The spirits said we two was to git married, so we've ben over to Mapleville and got hitched up this mornin'."

"Scoundrel! Where's my money?" yelled Greatuncle Bateman.

"Oh, the spirits says you was to go into the hardware business," answers Nat Blodgett, leading the Widow Judberry—now Mrs. Blodgett—inside, and shutting the door.

Since when Greatuncle Bateman's had no use for spirits.

HERE'S HARD NAME TO YODEL

Paging Los Angeles Arson Suspect Wears Down Attache of Superior Court.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Attache of the Superior court here are hoping for a decision soon in the appeal of the man they call "Mr. Soda Fountain," who was convicted of arson. They are hoping principally that they will not have to write his name in the court records much longer. This is his name:

Liellulessuusseszszos Hurrullzissatiz-el. Colloquially, however, he is known as Leo Hirst.

Smashes Pipe He Smoked 42 Years.

Middletown, N. Y.—What is believed to be a clay pipe record for the United States, if not for the world, is held by Henry Heath, veteran printer of Ellenville. He smoked one pipe for forty-two years until one day while at work it fell on the floor and was shattered. The pipe was purchased by Heath following the discovery by his father that he was smoking cigarettes.

JUNIOR PROGRAM LOCAL CHILDREN

INTERMOUNTAIN ARTISTS RECITAL

A quartet of individual artists. A happily blended program.

DOCTOR W. L. MELLINGER LECTURE

"International Roads."

DR. W. L. MELLINGER, who speaks both afternoon and evening of the last day of the Chautauqua, is a man highly recommended. He is to speak in the afternoon on "Gringo and Greaser"—a lecture based on his several years of residence in Mexico. This subject is especially important at this time.

His evening lecture—"International Roads, or Freedom of the Seas"—is even more timely. "It sounds too heavy and dry," do you say? You will not think so when you hear it. On the contrary, you will likely say it is the best lecture you have ever heard. By the use of a big chart, with which he makes clear his subject, even the children from the grammar school will understand and appreciate this lecture.

BESS GEARHART MORRISON, famous reader and story teller, will never be forgotten after hearing her. She appears with her own orchestra company on the fourth day, afternoon and evening. Many are looking forward to this as the greatest day of our Chautauqua. The afternoon program will consist of popular selections by the orchestra and some of the stories that have made her famous. In the evening Mrs. Morrison will deliver a stirring message from her experience in the movies behind the footlights in New York.

The great war has left the land of the Turk and adjacent countries in a more perplexing situation than before. Therefore Sumayeh Attieyeh's lectures the afternoon and evening of the second day of Chautauqua should be of great interest. The New York Herald recently devoted an entire page to pictures and a narrative from her pen concerning Turkish life. Although born in Syria, Miss Attieyeh is thoroughly Americanized. Her home is now in New York.

HOME TALENT WILL FEATURE FARM DAY

PRESIDENT DAVID FRIDAY AND L. WHITNEY WATKINS HEADLINERS ON M. A. C. PROGRAM AUGUST 4TH.

With President David Friday, and L. Whitney Watkins, chairman of the State Board of Agriculture, listed as the main speakers for the summer Farmers' Day meeting at M. A. C. on August 4th, home talent will feature the great gathering.

The program, as announced this week by E. B. Hill, chairman of the Farmers' Day committee, will be short but interesting. President Friday will discuss the present economic situation of Michigan agriculture, tracing influences which have led up to the present and weighing the possibilities for the future.

Mr. Watkins, one of the state's most active and successful farmers in addition to his official duties with the State Board of Agriculture, will represent the "practical" farm side of conditions, and at the same time discuss the plans for future development at M. A. C.

Dean R. S. Shaw of the agricultural division at the M. A. C. will preside, while the famous Red Motor Car Company band is to play numerous selections during the program. One or two speakers may be added later, according to the committee.

Inspection of the college experimental plots, laboratories and barns; a picnic lunch on the college campus; and interviews with the various agricultural specialists are other features which will make the day a busy one for the assembled farmers and their families. More than 3,000 were in attendance last summer, and an even larger crowd is expected on August 4th this year.

HOW MANY FOLKS IN PLYMOUTH REMEMBER WHEN MAIN STREET LOOKED LIKE THE ABOVE?

NEWBURG

Don't forget the Epworth League ice cream social to be held on the church lawn, this Friday evening, June 30th. Ladies bring cake. Everyone cordially invited. The old shed at the hall has been torn down. The lot would make a nice tennis court for the young folks. The pupils passing the eighth grade from Newburg school were: Lenora Joy and Milo Thomas. The only graduate from Newburg in the Plymouth High school this year was Miss Margaret Clemens, who was valedictorian of her class. Miss Louise Geney, who graduated from the Wayne High school, left last Saturday to take a trip to Washington, D. C., with her class. George Conway of Detroit, was an over Sunday guest of George Clemens, Sunday. Mrs. Nettie Bovee and son, Howard, visited her mother, Mrs. A. Farwell, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Youngs and family of Redford, visited their sisters, Misses Anna and Ada Youngs, Saturday. W. R. LeVan motored to Detroit, Saturday afternoon, bringing his wife home from the Highland Park hospital. Mrs. C. E. Ryder and daughter, Beulah, called on Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Riggs, Monday evening, and also attended Miss Youngs' piano recital, the young people acquitting themselves nicely. The telephone lines are being repaired in the country, which everyone will greatly appreciate. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Petroff and baby called on Mr. and Mrs. C. Donald Ryder, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Geer entertained Rev. Wise at dinner, Sunday. Charles Duryee, Jr., has been under the doctor's care this week. A great deal of cabbage is being drawn to market this week. Miss Margaret Clemens and Thelma Davey left for Albion, Monday, to attend the Epworth League Institute. Fred Geney had the misfortune to have his hand pierced at the Ford factory last week, and is unable to work. The trustees of the L. A. S. hall are planning for a band concert and social to be held on Robert Holmes lawn on Plymouth road, the week after the Fourth. Further notice next week.

NOTICE

The Newburg Cemetery Association wishes to notify all lot owners that lots on which taxes are not paid by August 1st, will be subject to sale. Please notify relatives and friends.

CHARLES D. RYDER, Secretary.

ELM

Ice cream social at the Elm school house, Friday evening, June 30th. Cake will also be served. All invited. Mrs. Frank K. Learned and children, with guests, are enjoying a week's outing at Silver Lake. A small blaze in the roof at the home of John Lunsford on Hubbard avenue, called out the fire department early last Sunday afternoon. The fire was extinguished before great damage was done.

LOCAL NEWS

DO YOU USE 1900 FLOUR? If not, you probably soon will. A good-looking young man, Thomas Meard, representing the William Hayden Milling Company from Tecumseh, is calling on Plymouth housewives this week, advertising 1900 Flour. This is a comparatively new flour in Plymouth, but has already attained a remarkable sale. The William Hayden Milling Co. is one of the oldest concerns in the country. It was established in 1823, and is now under the management of the third generation of the firm. We understand that no premiums are being given away to introduce "1900." The value is put into the flour.

ON BURIED TOWN?

Speculation Over City of Mexico's Foundation.

Grounds for Belief That the Modern Capital May Have Taken the Place of Ancient City.

Is there a second Pompeii under the city of Mexico? Does the largest city of the southern American republic have as a foundation the ruins of an ancient city of which it knows nothing? Recent excavations have indicated that this surprising possibility exists, writes Fred Gilman Jopp. While doing some construction work, one of a party of workmen in the heart of the City of Mexico suddenly disappeared from view. In the process of rescuing him from the deep pit into which he suddenly fell it was discovered that he had literally fallen into another town. Naturally, great excitement at once prevailed and crews of workmen were at once brought to the place and started on the work of removing the ground level of the modern city. When this was done, and the existing earth removed, it was found that a complete building, in excellent condition, was supporting the supposed solid ground. Walls of brick, not a bit crumbled, divided the house into rooms and passageways of various sorts and depths. Tiled floors, comparable to modern tiled floors, were found intact, and other elements of building construction indicated that the builders knew as much of the principles of construction as modern contractors and architects. Most characteristic of the builders of the ancient city were the carved stone images found in the walls and about the floors in various places. Of these the large stone image which guarded the entrance is probably most noteworthy. This huge affair has been carved out of the hardest stone with an exactness that would do credit to a marble worker of the present day. Detail to the extreme is to be found in this figure; yet the instruments with which it was fashioned must have been altogether crude. In another place a complete bake oven in perfect condition, built of adobe bricks, was unearthed. According to scientists, the presence of the bake oven would indicate a fairly high type of civilization among the residents of the mysterious city. A pile of "nails" for use in further construction work is of great interest. These consist of stones, pointed, artificially at one end. A pile of hundreds of these is surprisingly uniform. To fashion them from the hard rock of which they are made must indeed have been a tedious task. Apparently the inhabitants had intended to do further building, for there were many of the "nails" stacked up in a pile, ready for use. The bricks used in the walls are of two kinds: first, those made by chipping rocks into regular shapes, and second, those made of adobe mud. In the case of the bricks made of stone, the walls are frequently built sloping back instead of straight up, evidently to avoid a cave-in or slide. The walls are extremely thick. Now that this much has been unearthed, the City of Mexico residents are wondering what lies under their own property. Is it possible that a whole underground city is there waiting to be uncovered? Or is the ruin that has been discovered simply that of an ancient Mexican dwelling that has been gradually covered up and forgotten? Advocates of the latter theory offer the recent finding of a complete boat under a San Francisco city lot as support for their theory. Many, however, are equally positive that under the modern city lies a second Pompeii, waiting for someone to dig it up again. And still others, who take little interest in the situation one way or the other, are speculating about a more practical question. They are wondering just how secure the foundation of their property is. The possibility of living over an ancient city, with one's dwelling supported only by wedged earth, is not exactly conducive to the most comfortable of feelings.—Montreal Family Herald.

What's a Woman Worth?

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union. It was not the fact that Hartley had seen Blayds kiss his wife in the hall. Anice Hartley was true to him according to the law—he knew that, and it was because she was utterly cold and heartless. She had let young Blayds kiss her as she had probably let a dozen others of the men with whom she flirted, merely out of contempt for the man who had given her his name and lavished his fortune on her. That was not what made Hartley clench his fists in resolution as he softly withdrew. It was the fact that he had been made a fool of, that he, the rich dilettante, with an income of a hundred thousand, was the mockery of Anice's friends, who despised him as a spineless creature unable to keep his home in order. Yet there was good in Anice. He should have taken the firm hand from the beginning, as she had secretly wanted. Instead, he had given way to her in everything. Her whims had been his laws. Well, that was going to end! He went in after Blayds had departed. Anice looked at him coldly. "Well?" she asked. "We're starting for my new country place on Thursday morning, my dear." At the endearment her lip curled. "Speak for yourself, Phillip!" she answered. "Of course, if you'd rather stay here, dear—in fact, I was going to suggest it—" said Hartley craftily. "Oh, well, I think I'll go," said Anice. She had stepped into the trap, because it had not occurred to her that the incident of Blayds had clinched Hartley's resolution. He knew Blayds was mad about his beautiful wife, and that she was fooling him as she fooled all men. He was going to break her—for young Blayds' sake as much as his own. "Where is this estate?" asked Anice scornfully, as they got out of the train at the tiny station in the forests. "It's five miles up the trail," said Hartley. "We'll have to wait for the chauffeur. Pity you can't walk, dear." "I can outwalk you, Phillip!" she retorted. "Do you think so, dear?" For a moment she thought his tone sinister; then she shrugged her shoulders. "Let's walk," she said. Five miles! "Are you too tired, darling?" A scornful shrug. Ten miles. Pride held her silent. The trail twisted and turned. Fifteen. Anice was almost dropping when they came upon the wretched shack in a clearing. "Well?" "This is home, Anice." "Home? How dare you?" He took her by the wrists, and she was astounded at the grip of his fingers. "Anice, I know all about Blayds. You fooled him as you fooled me. From now, until I give the order, you are my—woman. You are going to cook, bake, sweep, wait upon me." "How dare you! I demand—" "You can't find the trail back. There is no one within twenty miles of here. You are under my orders. Come in!" She glared at him, and looked contemptuously inside the miserable place with its kitchen and single bedroom. "I insist—" she began. "Get sticks and light the fire!" "Oh, I'll kill you, Phillip, you beast, you—" He held her hands in an iron grip. "Get sticks or I'll thrash you!" She shrunk back. Phillip released one hand and picked up a whip. "Into the woods!" he bellowed. She burst into terrified sobs. In a few moments she had gathered an armful of sticks. "Put them in the grate!" She flung them down and stared at him, terror in her eyes. He lit the fire. "There's flour! Make cakes! Make ten!" She obeyed, watching him silently. He wondered what was passing in her mind. "Now eat! Then clear away!" he ordered. He smiled that night when, thinking him asleep, she arose and dressed furtively. At dawn a tired, rainsoaked figure came back, guided by the beacon he had lit. Anice had wandered for hours. "Get breakfast!" he commanded harshly. "Phillip!" "Get breakfast and wash up! You can talk after!" She obeyed him. Submissively she came to him later in the morning. "Phillip, you've taught me a lesson. I needed it. I—" "How about Blayds?" "It was—don't you see? I needed humbling, guidance, and—it was because you wouldn't assert yourself." "Fine words, but if I take you home, I've lost my grip of you. You'll stay here till—" "But I want to stay!" She broke down in bitter sobbing. "Phillip, I wanted what every woman wants, a little home, a husband who'd be the head, not the provider only. Let me stay here with you, Phillip, till—till you've learned to trust me. Will you?" "We'll try," said Hartley. And with a glow on her face that he had never seen there before she sprang to her feet. "Come on, then, let's get the wood for dinner!" she said happily. Arm in arm they went into the woods together.

FORMER SUPERIOR TOWNSHIP RESIDENT DIES

Edward Morgan, an old resident of Superior township, passed away at the home of his son, Harry Morgan, in Superior, Saturday afternoon, at four o'clock. Mr. Morgan came from his home in Middleville six weeks ago to make a visit, and one week later was stricken with paralysis. Mr. Morgan was born in New York state 75 years ago. When a young man he came to Michigan, settling first near Plymouth and later on what is known as the old Morgan farm in Superior. Forty-seven years ago, he was married to Miss Metta Parkhurst, who with his two sons, Harry of Superior, and L. J. of Denver, Colorado, survive him. Mr. Morgan lived all his early married life in Superior, moving away several years ago. Funeral services were held at the home, Monday afternoon at three o'clock, with Rev. Moon of Ann Arbor, officiating. The body was shipped to Middleville for burial, Tuesday.

CALL FOR MEETING BY TOWNSHIP CLERK

To P. B. Whitbeck, T. F. Chilson, Phoebe L. Patterson, Constituting the Township Board of the Township of Plymouth. You are hereby notified, that on the 31st day of May, A. D. 1922, application was made to the County Drain Commissioner of the County of Wayne for the cleaning out of a certain drain which traverses the Township of Plymouth, and that on the 1st day of June, A. D. 1922, I was notified by the said Drain Commissioner of the filing of said application. Now Then, by virtue of the power vested in me by the statute in such case made and provided, I hereby call a meeting of said Board to be held on the 8th day of July, A. D. 1922, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the Farm of William Bakewell, being the place designated by said County Drain Commissioner for the purpose of determining the necessity of said drain and whether the same is necessary and conducive to public health, convenience and welfare, at which time and place aforesaid you are hereby notified to be present. LINA DUFFEE, Township Clerk of the Township of Plymouth.

How did your neighbor's last bargain tire turn out? PROBABLY you know at least one car-owner who is always on the look-out for the cheapest tires he can find. He likes to get them by mail or at a sale or at some place where they have big red bargain signs over the door. It would be fine if he could get "the edge" in every tire trade. But the dealer can't afford to let him have it. Even if a man saw any slight percentage in tire shopping at all—it disappeared when the "USCO" brought the price down. Mrs. Will Smith and daughter, Ruth, spent Monday with their mother, Mrs. Orrin Cook of West Salem. They also called at William Mager's.

PERRINSVILLE

The ice cream social at Mr. Whitwell's was very largely attended.

Miss Beatrice Holmes, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Holmes was married Saturday, June 24th, to Gerald Hix. The young couple are residents of this place, and all join in wishing them a long life of happiness and prosperity.

Ed Holmes has purchased a new Ford car.

Perrinsville School Notes

The eight boys and girls of the eighth grade class of '22, who received their diplomas are: Clarissa Hix, Rozelina Shotka, Leona Krauter, Mildred Schultz, George Hix, William Roach, Harold Holmes, Wilbur Krauter.

We have had an enrollment of fifty. Clarissa Hix of the eighth, and Jennie Barnes of the third grade, have been neither absent nor tardy during the entire year.

Perrinsville has had a good year, characterized by hard work, interest and enthusiasm.

We have had two public evening entertainments, which were greatly enjoyed. At the one given at the close of school at the Perrinsville church, the audience was large and enthusiastic. The church was beautifully decorated with leucis blossoms and green branches. Added to these, over the platform were branches of yellow roses, as the eighth grade class colors were yellow and green. The program was a treat to the audience, and a big satisfaction to the boys and girls of the school and their teacher, Miss Lawton. It was an uplift to those who gave it and to those who enjoyed it.

The school board, with George Hix as director, has done much for the school this year, and is planning even better things for the coming year.

Miss Lawton will remain as teacher, to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Episcopal Notes

A very successful camp of Boy Scouts was held here this week-end when about 20 boy scouts of Troop No. 17, Detroit, came out Saturday afternoon. They were in charge of Franklin L. Gibson, layman in charge of St. John's church, Plymouth, who is also an excellent scoutmaster. The troop was met by Sidney D. Strong with a conveyance to convey their baggage down to the camping ground on the banks of the river, where they were joined by some of our church boys. The ordinary boy scout rules and discipline were observed and as evening came on, a camp fire was lighted, around which there were songs, yarns, etc., and Mr. Strong gave a talk on Boy Scouts and his experiences in that organization when he was a boy scout. After prayers and the scout benediction by Mr. Gibson, "Lights Out" was sounded. The boys were up again by daybreak, and after swimming and breakfast, they prepared for church and marched down to St. John's church for the morning service. Daniel Murphy read the lessons and Mr. Gibson gave a most appropriate address for young people; the little church was filled with members, friends and visitors.

At the end of the service, the color sergeant presented the flag at the altar during the singing of the national anthem. A gloom, however, was cast over the little troop for on coming out of the church, an auto from Detroit was waiting with an elder brother of two of the scouts to take them back, as their mother had died suddenly. The father and mother had gone down to the depot the day before to see their boys off and were going to have such a happy time. Upon returning home, the mother was stricken with heart failure. What a true illustration of the warning, "in the midst of life, we are in death."

Next Sunday will be Independent Sunday. The service in the morning will be a patriotic service and Franklin L. Gibson will preach. Everybody will be welcome at this service at 10:15.

EPISCOPAL NOTES

by missionary schools and the christian religion has become a cultured woman. She spoke to the Sunday-school, as did Rev. Samuelson, explaining his work in Detroit—Americanization work among foreigners.

The B. Y. P. U. held its meeting at the usual hour in the afternoon. They voted to continue the meetings during the summer and hope to have all the young people interested.

There will be an ice cream social on the church lawn, next Friday evening, June 30, directed by the Sunday-school.

PRESBYTERIAN NOTES

At the communion services last Sunday, seven were welcomed into the fellowship of the church.

The large congregations which have been at our Sunday morning services, continued to the very last. C. E. Stevens of Ann Arbor, sang a fine solo, and Calvin Whipple and Miss Genevieve McClumpha gave a beautiful duet at the Sunday-school hour.

Edwin Schrader received special mention, last Sunday, for his one hundred per cent attendance, scholarship and deportment. Francis Hathaway was a close second.

A joint meeting of the pastor's and superintendent's Sunday-school classes will be held in Ann Arbor, this afternoon. Members will meet at Mr. Shaw's residence on Union street at three o'clock. Bring your swimming suits, as the municipal beach is now open, with life guards continually on duty. After the "cats," the party will invade the University campus.

LIVONIA LUTHERAN CHURCH

There will be no services at the Livonia Center Lutheran church on Sunday, July 2nd, as all members with their friends are invited to attend the celebration of the first anniversary of the dedication of the church at Wayne. Two divine services will be held at Wayne to which all are heartily welcome. The morning service begins at 10:30 Eastern time and will be in the German language. The Rev. Prof. Adolf Sauer of our college at Saginaw will deliver the sermon. The afternoon service will be in English at 2:30, and the Rev. Albert Tong of Detroit, will deliver the sermon. At noon the ladies of the Wayne church will serve a warm dinner to all present, in the basement of the church. Come and enjoy the day at Wayne. Everybody welcome.

If you have anything to sell, a liner in the Mail will bring you a buyer.

Tubercular Tested Milk

W. D. McDonald wishes to state to the public that he is now prepared to take on several more customers on his milk route. All milk from tubercular tested Jersey cows, is put up in bottles in sanitary manner, and kept on ice until delivered. Word may be left at the Shack restaurant, on Pennington avenue, or call 247-F-22—Advertisement.

Demand for Draught Horse Increasing, Says Dickinson

Fair Manager Discusses Plans of Michigan Exposition to Aid State's Farmers.

Geo. W. Dickinson, the state fair and exhibition manager, is discussing plans for this year's exhibit, and also intends to show this class in its true form.

There is a greater demand for the draught horse today than there has been in the past several years, and this demand is constantly increasing, believes George W. Dickinson, secretary and manager of the Michigan State Fair.

Mr. Dickinson brings his belief on his years of practical experience with the farmers of Michigan in connection with his administration of the Michigan State Fair.

Mr. Dickinson is anticipating a great exhibition of sheep at the fair here, September 1 to 10. He sees Michigan as one of the really great sheep raising states and stresses the importance of the fair visualizing Michigan's future in this respect.

"Vast acres in both the upper and lower peninsulas of Michigan are now being devoted to sheep grazing and I see no reason why Michigan sheep raisers should not present as educational an illustration of this work at the fair as could be hoped to be viewed anywhere in America."

Frank Coward, of Bronson, treasurer of the Michigan State Grange, and a member of the board of managers will be in charge of the sheep department, Mr. Dickinson announced.

show and which won the praise of those who were fortunate enough to witness it.

"The draught horse is here to stay, and we intend to give it the finest presentation possible at the State Fair this year," Mr. Dickinson asserts.

The fair manager also announced Charles T. Prescott, of Tawas City, would be the member of the board of managers in charge of the horse department, and Howard C. Allen, Washington Court House, O., would act as superintendent.

"It is surprising the popularity of the horses and jumpers," said Mr. Dickinson in discussing plans for this year's exhibit, "and we also intend to show this class in its true form."

Prizes in the horse department will exceed $12,000.

C. OF C. TWILIGHT BASE BALL

Chamber of Commerce base ball fans were somewhat disappointed over Monday's game between Wood's Indians and Rathburn's Braves, for it had somehow been rumored that the Braves were sure of a decisive victory. "Alas! the Indians said, 'we'll take 25 and give you 6.'"

On Tuesday, Shattuck's Farmers, being a congenial bunch, didn't deem it advisable to run their score too high, so let Rambo's All-Stars down on 10 to 11.

There is now a rumor afloat that Captains Rambo and Ruthburn have their heads together. Should that be so, we know what to look for.

Utilize War-Time Ambulances. Many ambulances owned by volunteer organizations during the war have been converted into commercial vehicles—many of them without undergoing any great physical changes with the exception of the removal of equipment required only in an ambulance.

About the streets may be seen delivery vans easily recognized as war-time ambulances, the New York Sun states. The name of the original donating organization and its insignia are discernible in some cases under the new coats of paint on the vehicle, and from the rear one can see still the long benches on each side that were marked the ambulance, but now are used for piling merchandise on.
