MUNICIPAL NOTES BY THE MANAGER

The Commission held a special meeting, Monday evening, and spent nearly five hours discussing various budget provisions.

Our village crew is making good progress putting in the lead water service pipes on South Main street.

Thomas Nolan's men and machines are back in town to finish up their sewer contract, which was not completed last season.

Hulm & Dickerson are making a good start on their 1926 sewer contract. Several hundred feet of creek have been laid in Mill street from Union street north.

On this work and also on the Nolan contract, as the diggers make their way along the streets, the engineers in charge will inquire from each resident where he desires the connection to be left to serve his house.

Mill street is not a street friendly to iron water pipes. A number dug up as the sewer diggers approached have been so corroded that they have been replaced with lead pipe.

A grass fire last Friday morning, called the fire department to the rear of Miss Markham's house on Holbrook avenue. No property damage resulted.

Building in Plymouth, is keeping up a good pace this spring. We have received fifteen applications for water taps so far.

The Village and the Chamber of Commerce will cooperate this year in a clean-up week, beginning May 3rd. As heretofore, if people will place at the street curb, their accumulation of cans and rubbish in boxes or barrels, we will collect and dispose of them.

The Tokheim people have been here checking over your traffic flashing lights and replacing some defective parts. The lights in the signal at Starkweather and Main have been arranged so that a driver can always go through on Main street and can make a left turn from Main street into Starkweather avenue at any time, providing that there is no conflicting traffic bound west on Main street.

MOVED INTO NEW OFFICES

Richwine Bros. and Raymond Bachelder are now nicely situated in their new offices on the second floor of the Woodworth building on Main street.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER BANQUET

Every mother of a girl should be interested in the Mother and Daughter banquet, to be given under the auspices of the Girl Reserves and the Girl Scouts on Tuesday evening, May 11th.

We wish to make this first Mother-Daughter banquet a success. The fathers of Plymouth have for some time been doing what we are attempting to do, and have thought it worthwhile.

SEEKING A CURE

Congress is nearing adjournment, but before doing so its members apparently realized that they have overlooked the farmer, and that it is never a good idea to go back and face the home folks without some kind of an alibi. So co-operative marketing is being discussed, along with the propositions to take up surplus crops each season or to regulate acreage. All of which may look good in theory, but little of it has worked out in practice so far, and the farmer is still 25 per cent worse off so far as the price of commodities are concerned than he has been in years. It strikes us that if congress wants to do something for the farmer it should try closing up the gap between what he gets for his products and what he has to pay for the things necessary to produce them. If there is to be price regulation, then regulate the price of things the farmer has to buy as well as the things he has to sell.

THE PRICE WE PAY

We're certainly starting this season of auto camping with a costly warning against carelessness, since only last week three men were burned to death and farm buildings worth $600,000 were destroyed by forest fires in Minnesota and North Dakota. And while these fires were under way campers set fire to forests near Plymouth, Vt., and eleven more farm houses were destroyed. The fact that such destruction as this hasn't happened around Plymouth is absolutely no excuse for ignoring the fact that it can happen here as easily as anywhere else in the United States. And when it has happened, when the fire started by one carelessly dropped match or one little campfire left smoldering has spread, it's too late to wish someone had been more careful.

Vacationists and auto tourists are starting out by the thousands. Some of them are sure to pass through this territory. The season is here, too, when our own citizens are spending more time in the open. All of which means increased chances of damage from carelessly dropped matches or campfires that are not extinguished before the people who built them move on. Just keep your eye on the daily papers if you want to see what a terrible price this country will pay the next few months in burned homes and burns and forests. Then you will agree with us that it is nothing short of criminal to handle fire carelessly or to permit others to do so without calling their attention to it.

A BENEFACTOR GONE

Everyone who loves flowers, fruits or vegetables must feel regret at the passing from earth of Luther Burbank, known to fame as "the plant wizard." He gave so much to the world, and asked so little in return, that the American people could do no better than to rear to his memory one of the grandest monuments ever erected. We build them to men who fought to preserve human life, and to give us still more humane living conditions, why not build one to the man who battled to conserve plant life that we might enjoy still greater beauty and still more body-building fruits and vegetables?

How many gardeners in Plymouth and farmers in the community surrounding know that even before he was twenty-one, Burbank had given the world the famous "Burbank potato," or that he caused nature to bring forth the thornless cactus, the seedless apple, the pineapple-quince, the stoneless prune, the Shasta daisy; the pomato, a cross between the potato and tomato, and more than twenty varieties of corn? How many realize that he worked over fourteen hours out of every day, and made over 100,000 experiments with fruits, flowers and plants?

Burbank started as a poor boy, one of a family of fifteen children. He died a comparatively poor man, insofar as the dollar is concerned. But in the hearts of those who love the things he loved, Burbank was richer than any man of his day. And all the monuments that have been erected or that can be erected would not be broad enough or tall enough to measure his value to humanity.

ONE WAY TO BOOST

Don't get the impression that because Plymouth isn't as big as New York or Chicago that it isn't worth boosting to a stranger. When an auto tourist hits town and you have occasion to talk to him, speak a word for the schools and churches and good living conditions in this community, and if you get away from home this spring or summer, do the same thing. The man you are talking to may not think any more of your town, but he'll think more of you for boosting it. Nothing gives a neighborhood greater favor in the eyes of a stranger than the knowledge that the people who are living in it are satisfied and are not "a set of knackers." You have an opportunity every now and then to do something for your home town by speaking a few words in its favor. Speak them, and keep on speaking them, and even if the stranger isn't impressed you'll be surprised to find how quickly you will be wondering why you haven't always been putting in a good word instead of letting the other fellow do all the talking about his town.

Picked Up About Town

"Silence may be golden," says Dad Plymouth, "but it sure takes a lot of money to keep some men's mouth shut."

"I've never been able to understand," declares Dad Plymouth, "why the fellow who can't even carry a tune always wants to lead the singing."

Dad Plymouth says the difference between pride and self-respect is that self-respect doesn't consider it necessary to strut.

"I'll never believe the world is getting better," says Dad Plymouth, "until I meet the man who can grow one radish in his back yard at a cost of $10 without bragging about being a gardener."

This is the time of year when auto drivers should tighten up their brakes or loosen up and buy more life insurance.

"I've had one little touch of spring fever so far this season," comments Dad Plymouth, "but I suppose it won't be long now until I'll be in shape to listen to a good fishing lie."

"Times have changed," says Dad Plymouth. "You seldom find a mother nowadays who insists on the kids taking a lot of sulphur and molasses when spring arrives."

Commissioner Henderson was appointed as President Pro-tem to preside.

The minutes of the two meetings of March 22nd and the special meeting of March 30th were approved as read.

On motion the bills as audited were allowed and ordered paid.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Fisher, who moved its adoption, seconded by Commissioner Henderson:

RESOLVED, That all concrete sidewalks hereafter built in the Village of Plymouth in front of any property shall be so laid that the inner line shall be one foot outside of the property line, as shown in recorded plats, or one foot outside the recognized side line of the street in property where descriptions extend to the center of street. Such restrictions shall apply not only to new walks built, but to all replacements of old walks.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That no exceptions shall be made to the foregoing, unless by the unanimous sanction of the Village Commission.

Carried unanimously.

The assessor then reported the special assessment rolls for the Sheridan avenue curb and gutter, Forest avenue storm sewer, and Spring street storm sewer. On motion these rolls were confirmed and the President directed to sign the Treasurer's warrant for collection.

The matter of the Holbrook avenue storm sewer was then brought up and the manager reported that it had been shown that there were more lots benefited by the sewer than were included in the assessment. On motion the Commission voted to rescind all previous action taken concerning the assessment for this sewer. The Commission then on motion directed a new assessment district be laid out to include all the property benefited by the Holbrook avenue sewer.

Property holders on this street also requested additional lights as follows, which request was on motion granted: Corner York street and Pearl street, Corner Holbrook avenue and Hardeburg street.

Light on Mill road at the end of Holbrook avenue to be moved down the hill one pole.

The assessment roll for the opening of Gravel avenue was then taken up as reported by the Board of Review. A number of interested property owners were present protesting against this assessment. On motion the Commission laid this matter on the table until there should be opportunity to investigate this assessment.

The Manager then brought up a request from Mr. Steinhilber for water for a lot on the Plymouth and Northville road. It seems that several years ago during the time when the village was making outside water taps, that the man who owned that lot at that time put in a water tap, which was not put in because there was no house to serve. Since that time the village having refused to put in further outside taps, the question arose as to whether this particular tap could be made or not. On motion the tap was refused and the fee directed to be returned to the owner.

The police report was then presented, received and ordered filed.

The report of the Treasurer for the year just finished was presented, read and on motion received for filing.

On motion the President and Clerk were authorized to obtain the necessary funds for the bills, in the anticipation of taxes.

The President then made the following appointments for the year 1926, which appointments were on motion confirmed by the Commission:

Assessor—Arthur V. Jones.
President Pro-tem—Henry J. Fisher.
Member of Cemetery Board for three years—J. W. Henderson.
Treasurer—George W. Richwine.
Auditing Committee—John W. Henderson, Henry Hendorp.

The Commission then adjourned.

Harry C. Robinson, President.
Sidney D. Strong, Clerk.

FORD LAND IS BEING PREPARED FOR FLAX

CREW OF FORTY MEN WORKING ON OLD BARLOW FARM.

Seven hundred acres of waving, blue flowered flax between Ypsilanti and Rawsonville, is the sight promised as Ford employees this spring prepare land along the flats southeast of the city for the new crop to be introduced this season. The land is already plowed, and is being prepared for seeding. Several tractors are being used on the farm, harrowing the land and putting it in shape for the next step.

Flax is a new crop in this section, but agriculturists have assured the Ford Company it can be grown in Michigan climate and Michigan soil. Accordingly the land along the shores of the artificial lake to be formed by the Ford dam is understood this season to be planted to flax.

With the coming of favorable weather, work on the Ford property is being carried on with renewed vigor. A force of about forty men is engaged in clearing the land and headquarters are maintained at the Barlow farm.

Trees are being taken down daily, and ten men are busy on the saw, cutting logs and putting wood in shape for use, as another force of men cut the trees and brush. About 6,000 feet of lumber is being sawed daily and taken to the plant at Fordson.

All land is being cleared of brush, fences are being taken down or repaired and the property in the vicinity of the dam and supposed factory site on the Barlow farm is the scene of constant activity.

Railroad Work Suspended.

Work this week has been suspended on the right of way which was secured from the factory site to the Michigan Central tracks, where grading had been started earlier in the season. Whether a track will be built to the Michigan Central is not definitely known.

Rights of way to the Wabash line south of the factory site have been nearly all secured, and it is expected by Ford representatives that grading for a spur line to connect with this road will be started during the coming few weeks.—Daily Ypsilantian Press.

Ford

Highest in Quality Lowest in Price

Ford cars are built throughout of the finest materials that can be produced. The very best steels available are used in Ford manufacture. The plate glass for windshields and windows is as perfect as can be made. Upholstery material contains a larger percentage of wool than is ordinarily specified—even for much higher priced cars. The basic features of Ford design have never been improved upon by any manufacturer.

No other car offers greater dependability. The Ford car has won the favor of millions of users under every conceivable motoring condition. Its convenience is known and appreciated the world over; its performance is taken for granted.

Such quality is possible at Ford prices because every operation, from mining of ore to final assembly, is under direct control of the Ford Motor Company.

Iron is taken from Ford mines in Michigan; coal from the Company's mines in Kentucky and West Virginia. Glass comes from Ford glass plants; wood from the Ford timber tracts in the North. Raw materials and finished products are carried over the Company's own transportation routes; coke ovens, blast furnaces, a steel mill, foundries and saw mills—all are part of this complete organization. There are even salvage plants, paper mill, cement plant, etc., to transform waste materials into useful by-products.

In this way every possible economy is effected. Under no other circumstances could Ford quality be had at Ford prices.

EPISCOPAL NOTES

Charles Wesley, our missionary, who presented the candidates to the Bishop for confirmation. After the confirmation, the Bishop spoke a few very encouraging and inspiring words to the newly confirmed. The Bishop's general address to the congregation was very inspiring and appropriate to the occasion. The little church of St. John's was again filled and the Rev. Wesley was pleased to welcome visitors and friends from our community and also from Northville.

FOUR NORTHVILLE MEN BURNED TO DEATH.

We take the following from Thursday's Detroit Free Press:

An inquest into the death of four men, whose scalded remains were found in the ruins of a single room cottage near the west limits of Northville, destroyed by fire of undetermined origin yesterday afternoon, will be held Saturday. Coroner O. C. Farmer, of Oakland county, said last night. The fire is believed by authorities to have followed a protracted drinking party.

Positive identification of the charred bodies as those of B. J. Thompson, owner of the house, and Claude Van Valkenberg, Barney Roach and Virgil Cross of Northville, was made last night in the Schrader Brothers' undertaking establishment in Northville by relatives and friends. Thompson, son of a former wealthy Northville farmer, was about 50 years old. The other men were about 40.

The fire started about 3:00 o'clock, according to neighbors, following an all night party in the house, from which sounds of carousal issued during the night and morning, Coroner Farmer said he learned. Other evidence found in the ruins of the building also led him to believe that the men had been drinking.

Other residents living in the vicinity of the cottage, which is located just over the county line in Oakland county, said that the cottage had been the scene for some months of drinking parties and had come to be known in the district as "Thompson's tavern." The four men whose bodies were found in the ruins were known to be cronies.

William Taft, a neighboring farmer, discovered the blaze and attempted to gain entrance to the place when he found the roof in flames. Finding all the doors and windows locked securely he hurriedly summoned the Northville fire department, which arrived too late to save the building.

It is believed that the fire started either from a carelessly thrown cigarette or an explosion of a gasoline stove found in the place. Two of the bodies were found on the bed, one on a cot and the other on the floor near the stairway leading to the basement. It is apparent, Farmer said, that all four men were suffocated.

Thompson, who was considered by Northville citizens as somewhat of a recluse, had lived in the cottage since the death of his father, dwelling on a small estate left him. The other three men were laborers living in Northville. An automobile, believed to have belonged to Roach, was found on the Baseline road, near the house.

PONTIAC SIX

At the New York Automobile Show—a spectacular triumph! Wherever it has since been presented—a brilliant success! Here in town, a conquest of public opinion which excited interest to fever heat!

Three years ago General Motors determined to develop a Six, so high in quality and low in price, as to win instant public acceptance. To that end were devoted the almost limitless resources of the corporation.

As a result, the Pontiac Six introduces into the field of low-priced sixes, features so new and unique, that a radical revision of the national idea on motor car values is already under way.

Sensible investors, the country over, are turning to a Six that offers beauty, bigness, comfort, stamina, quality and thrilling big-engine performance, for only $825—less than the cost of some four-cylinder cars.

And there can be but one result—not enough cars to go around.

Arrange to place your order now. Assure yourself of getting delivery when you are ready to take it. Hundreds are going to be compelled to wait this spring. Now is the time for you to act!

What Co-operation Is Accomplishing

THE American shipping public since the war period has come to realize a certain responsibility devolving upon it beyond the mere payment of the authorized charges for the transportation service performed.

There is, for instance, the requirement of the prompt loading and unloading of the railroad equipment on the part of consignors and consignees, respectively.

There is the obligation on the shipper of early advice of car requirements to enable the railroads to "mobilize" equipment.

THESE two requirements enter largely and eventually into the cost of steam railroad transportation and they are dependent upon the good-will directly manifested by the shippers and altogether beyond the control of the railroads.

Recognition of these factors has brought about the organization of the Shippers Regional Advisory Boards and enables the country to get more service from the equipment of the American railroads.

THIS is entirely voluntary service on the part of the shippers and is a unique page in the history of business. It has also been a profitable expedient, a lesson in co-operation gained from the world war, a phase in the onward march of the times, which Judge E. H. Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, recently described as the application of the Golden Rule in business, a condition that was inconceivable twenty-five years ago.

It is a manifestation of a quiet but certain revolution in American business thought which is gradually progressing towards the finest ideals, and incidentally tending to the greater well-being of our people and making for greater material returns.

THE Michigan Railroad Association is keeping step with the shippers and heartily seconding those ideals of an enlightened business opinion and appreciates that this policy is as important to the stabilizing of business as are the operations of the Federal Reserve Bank System in its particular branch of public economy. In fact, it is the identical application of that principle to transportation. Michigan industry has much to gain through the policy of the Shippers' Regional Advisory Boards.

Carl Forsythe, brother of Miss Forsythe, music and drawing teacher, spoke before the senior assembly Thursday afternoon of last week. His theme was, "Unborn Millions." It was very interesting and set more than one person to deep thinking. Mr. Forsythe won first place on the college state oratorical contest and goes to the national contest, April 30.

The Plymouth staff has been busy the past week taking orders for the Pythian, which will be on sale about the first of June.

Now that the music for the operetta has arrived, both glee clubs are busy practicing. The principal character and the chorus have been chosen. The operetta is called, "College Days," and is going to prove very snappy and attractive.

The Junior class has been divided into committees to even up the work for the Junior-Senior banquet, which will be given May 21st.

The Forensic League, a national honorary society for those interested in public speaking, has been formed, under the leadership of Mrs. Ruth E. Huston Whipple. Ten honor points are required to join. The giving of orations and debating speeches count as points.

The Girl Reserves have all their plans under way for the Mother and Daughter banquet, to be given May 11. The Episcopal ladies are going to officiate in the kitchen.

Miss Wiggins, who has been ill the past few days, is being relieved of her teaching duties by R. Weatherman.

The physical training exhibition will be given some time the first of May. All the classes are busy practicing their dances or other things that will be given then.

The tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade girls had the pleasure of listening to Miss Knowles tell about Smith College and Mrs. Whipple about Mt. Holyoke College, Tuesday afternoon. Through these speeches many of the girls are forming ideas as to which college they would like to attend.

CANTON CENTER

The Canton Center Parent-Teacher Association held its regular meeting at the school building, Wednesday evening, with a very large attendance. A most delicious supper was served at the usual time, after which the meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. A. O. Huston. The minutes of the last meeting were read by our efficient new secretary, Mrs. Albert Griffin, this being followed by a program.

Violin solo, with encores—Naomi Huston. Mrs. Huston at the piano.

Reading—Miss Blackmore.

Music by the Masons.

Piano Solo—Miss Graham.

Reading—Miss MacDowell.

Solo—Miss Hallen.

Six teachers of the Moore school of Detroit, were guests of the evening. Also, five students accompanied Miss Bernice Finnegan from the Normal College. Prof. Sios of the history department of the Central High school, was the speaker. He entertained them by telling stories and also some clever readings. He was much enjoyed by all present. The boys and girls are very busy with their eighth grade work, so every boy and girl will take part at the next and last meeting next month. An entertainment is planned after the program as it will be the last meeting this season.

Howard and Levern Shock have been out of school on account of the spring work. Betsey has just returned after a long illness. We are glad to see her return.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason and daughter, Ellen, and son, Harold, attended the party, given at Sheldon, Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hart entertained at a five course dinner Sunday evening, for six guests from Detroit and four from Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Albert Griffin has returned to the library after a leave of absence.

Mrs. Edward Bulson has been ill with an attack of the grippe.

THE THEATRE

"THE ONLY THING"

Elinor Glyn's latest screen production, "The Only Thing," made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and featuring a cast headed by Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel, and which is coming to the Penniman Allen theatre, Saturday, May 1st, bids fair to be her greatest picture.

Much interest is always manifested in an Elinor Glyn picture, for they all include two very interesting ingredients—love and beauty. Madame Glyn surrounds her pictures with both, then injects whatever else is needed in the way of drama and suspense, and as a result her productions are sought after by an eager public who are crying for that type of entertainment.

"Three Weeks" and "His Hour" were both splendid offerings. She has topped them both in this newest, "The Only Thing," it is said. There never has been such a love story and the tempo of it from beginning to end is perfectly timed, those who have seen the picture aver.

The cast is headed by Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel. Miss Boardman brings a new personality to the screen. She wears a blonde wig and makes a most beautiful fair-haired heroine. As the Princess she represents in type those Mr. Grimms and Mr. Anderson must have had in mind when they unravelled their fairy tales, which to date have lived through two generations. Her dramatic ability is proven in the deeply emotional scenes she is called upon to portray.

Conrad Nagel is a hero that is fascinating, and he brings a fire into the role of the Duke that he has never disclosed before.

Edward Connelly plays the part of the King, and as always he gives a clever performance.

Others importantly cast are: Carrie Clarke Ward, David Mir, Mario Carillo, Dale Fuller, Arthur Edmund Carew and Vera Lewis.

Cedric Gibbons designed the sets, David Mir the costumes, and Chet Lyons is credited with the photography, which is beautiful—each scene giving a fine balance.

Jack Conway directed, while Madame Glyn supervised the production and wrote the continuity as well.

"THE NEW COMMANDMENT"

Hail "The New Commandment!" A modern Moses in the person of Robert T. Kane has created a new commandment in the form of the most brilliant and sparkling photoplay of the season. It is coming to the Penniman Allen theatre, Sunday and Monday, May 2 and 3.

"The New Commandment" is Robert T. Kane's initial production for First National and to be congratulated on the acquisition of such a sparkling film. Penniman Allen theatre is also to be commended on its excellent taste for booking such an excellent photoplay. Manager Harry Lush, who arranges the programs at this theatre, has scored again.

Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Holbrook Hillan, Ethel Shannon, Diana Kane, Pedro De Cordova, George Cooper and many others enact this screen adaptation by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin from Colonel Frederick Palmer's great novel, "Invisible Wounds."

"The New Commandment" is a society melodrama, full of thrills, romance, beauty, gorgeous sets, comedy, drama and pathos. It should take a place in movieland's hall of fame as one of the truly great screen triumphs of the year.

"MANNEQUIN"

A wholesome story of tremendous heart appeal, a cast of popular players, direction that leaves nothing to be desired, drama, mystery and thrills, staged against a background of fascinating New York—you'll find them all in James Cruze's latest Paramount masterpiece, "Mannequin," which comes to the Penniman Allen theatre, Wednesday, May 5th.

This is the picture version of Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize-winning Liberty Magazine tale, and it is the type of homey, human plot that lends itself admirably to visualization on the screen and strikes a sincere, realistic note because it deals with incidents and situations familiar to all.

To relate the story in detail would be to rob the picture of the element of surprise, which is, after all, its greatest asset. Suffice to say that it centers about a family, whom we first meet back in 1907. The father is a struggling young lawyer, trying to keep his head financially above water in spite of his charming wife's innocent extravagances in a number of small ways. The third member is a little baby girl, who is kidnapped by a good-for-nothing nurse, brought up in the slums of the lower East Side, and after a lapse of eighteen years finds her parents under the most dramatic circumstances.

Cruze develops the various situations with a subtlety and skill that keep the interest at fever heat all through the unrolling of the film. But if any single scene is to be especially lauded, it is the murder trial. Here is the climactic highspot, and from the stand point of terrific emotion and gripping heart appeal, has seldom been equaled on the screen. The acting is uniformly good, which was to be expected from such a group of capable players as Alice Joyce, Warner Baxter, ZaSu Pitts and Dolores Costello.

FRED STONE'S FIRST TRIUMPH WAS SWEET

Actor Has Never Forgotten That Greasy Pole.

In a series of articles in McCall's Magazine Fred Stone writes the story of his life. The following extract is his account of his first appearance before the public, in Wellington, Kan., 1822.

"About the time school closed, the year I was going to be nine, my brother Eddie and I—he was twenty months younger than I—looked over the events announced for the Fourth of July celebration and decided we were going to compete for the greased pole. From then on I practiced. Fourth of July was about three weeks away, and I guess there wasn't a telegraph pole in the town of Wellington I didn't shin up some time in those three weeks.

"My little brother didn't work so hard, he just went around telling people he was going to win the greased pole, but when the great day came he did more to contribute to my winning it than all the practicing I had been doing! I can remember just how he looked in those days, a lean, skinny youngster with bare legs, little cloth pants and a cotton shirt with a sort of snake pattern. I knew all about the snake pattern, because I had one just like it, only a couple of sizes larger.

"On the Fourth of July people came in from all around the countryside, brought their lunch and all the children, came in barracks, and Studebaker wagons, and lined up for the day outside the schoolhouse. It was scorching hot—it always is in Kansas in July—and the pole, when they put it up, ran and dripped grease like a slide trombone. I remember the boy to draw first turn was a darkey about fifteen years old. He walked up and put his hands on the pole, looked at them, and then said, 'No, sah!' and walked away again.

"After that nobody wanted to try, till some one took a rag and wiped off the bottom of the pole about as far up as a boy could reach, to make an easier beginning. The second boy got along pretty well, but he came down all of a sudden, as boys will on a greased pole. My little brother was third. He got up to the point where the other boy left off, and then he reached in his back pocket and pulled out a handful of dirt and threw it up on the pole ahead of him.

"The referee tried to stop him, but the crowd just laughed and said, 'Let him go!' He was the youngest and smallest in the whole outfit and they were for him from the first. He didn't get all the way up, but he managed to throw dirt to the top and then he came down.

"I think you can make it now, Fred," he said to me, knowing my turn was next.

"There was a little American flag at the top and the boy who brought that down was due to win $5—which looked like all the money in the world, forty years ago, to a boy of nine! I think the thrill I got when I reached out and touched that flag was greater than any I've had since, not excepting my opening night on Broadway. I came down with the flag and they gave me a slip of paper, an order on the First National bank, for $5."

Time Spent in Shaving

Statistics were recently computed on the time it takes men to shave. They show that the average man who uses five minutes each day for shaving eventually loses out of his life not less than 75 days, the Pathfinder Magazine reports. Although many men cannot shave in five minutes, that has been allowed as the average time. Figuring on that basis most men lose 30 hours a year in shaving alone. Since each shave covers an average of 83 inches of facial area a man will clear off approximately 17 square miles of whiskers in 60 years of shaving.

Chinese Farewell

Just outside of town we found the amban. He had his rugs spread out in the courtyard of a little house at the roadside, and here we alighted for a parting cup of tea with the inevitable accompanying dish of nuts, raisins, watermelons and variegated colored candies. It is a pretty Chinese custom to speed the parting guest by installing oneself at the wayside where his road leaves town and bidding him there alight for a farewell cup of tea.—Kermit Roosevelt, in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

Prisoned in Snowbank

Some more or less nervous moments were experienced by Stephen D. Monaghan of Gardiner, Maine, when he slid from the roof of the ell of his house. It was a plunge of 20 feet, but was not painful, as the snowbank was soft and deep—so deep that he was out of sight. Losing all sense of direction in his confusion he did considerable aimless scurrying about before he worked his way out of the drift.—Indianapolis News.

Cloth From Human Hair

A section of a large factory located at Amiens, France, is being fitted up for the manufacture of cloth from human hair. The cloth is used for the filtering of heavy oil and similar products—the phenomenal strength of the hair enabling it to withstand high pressures. The hair used comes from China and Japan, as the coarser hair of the Oriental is the only kind strong enough for this service.—Compressed Air Magazine.

Just WHY is OAKLAND

WINNING and HOLDING GOOD WILL?

Why are so many motorists everywhere so genuinely enthusiastic over this car? Why are they favoring it above all others?

Is it because the Oakland Six is more beautiful—because it possesses more advanced features, including Air Cleaner, Oil Filter, Full Pressure Oiling System, Four-Wheel Brakes and The Harmonic Balancer? Or because it reveals greater speed, power, acceleration and smoothness of performance?

Each of these features plays its part; but there is an even stronger reason for Oakland Six popularity.

Oakland combines—not just one or two of these advantages but all them—at prices surprisingly low.

THE DETROIT EDISON COMPANY

It Costs Less to Own a Better Buick

Gasoline, lubrication, water and fair treatment are all the Better Buick needs to deliver its mileage at astonishingly low cost.

The Valve-in-Head engine, as Buick builds it, develops more power from a given quantity of gasoline. Buick Automatic Heat Control, an integral part of the Buick carburetor, still further aids fuel economy, by super-efficient carburetion.

In no other car, regardless of price, will you find the complete set of protection for performance afforded by the Buick "Sealed Chassis" and "Triple-Sealed Engine." Dirt cannot get in, anywhere, to cause wear, looseness and vibration.

Oil—less than most cars.

To know what motor car economy really is, for finer transportation at lower cost, own a Better Buick.

MAY FESTIVAL TO BE A RARE MUSICAL TREAT.

Ann Arbor's renowned May Festival will take place during the four days of May 19, 20, 21, 22. It will consist of six concerts in which many of the world's greatest musicians will unite their efforts in programs which will have wide appeal.

The lists of stars includes Florence Austral, English soprano, Marie Sundell, Swedish American soprano, Louise Homer, greatest American contralto, Jeanne Laval, noted oratorio singer and August Lenska, contralto of the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Three tenors, Giovanni Martinelli, Richard Crooks and Charles Struttton, will participate.

Richard Bonelli, baritone of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, Theodore Harrison, head of the voice department of the University School of Music, and one of America's greatest "Elphinstones" will sing baritone roles, while James Wolfe of the Metropolitan Opera Company and Barre Hill, a brilliant young Michigan artist, will sing bass roles.

Albert Spalding, American violinist, will be heard as well as Mischa Kevitzki, world favorite pianist.

The University Choral Union of 300 voices will sing under the direction of Earl V. Moore. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra of 70 players will participate under the baton of Frederick Stock, while Joseph E. Maddy will lead a chorus of several hundred school children in choral works. Howard Hanson, a noted orchestral conductor, music school administrator and a composer who has attracted wide attention, will appear in a role of guest conductor in the world's first performance of his own work entitled "Lament for Beowulf," written for chorus and orchestra. He will wield the baton over the Choral Union and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

This splendid list of offerings has attracted commendation of leading music authorities all over the United States, such as Rudolph Ganz, conductor of the St. Louis Orchestra, Arthur J. Gaines, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Herbert W. Thierspoon, president Chicago Musical College, James Francis Cook, editor Etude, William E. Walter, executive director, the Curtiss Institute of Music, Ossip Gabrilowitch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Charles Frederick Morse, conductor the Orpheus and Madrigal Clubs, Detroit and many other distinguished people.

Editors have also been extravagant in their praise. The Music Leader of Chicago, Music News of the same city, and the Musical Courier and Music America of New York City are among those who have written words of praise.

Many distinguished musicians have already purchased tickets so that the event promises to be a gathering of music lovers from all over the world.

Today's Reflections

Being a husband is like any other job—it makes it a lot easier if you learn to like your boss.

There is a fortune awaiting the Plymouth man who will invent a device for making both ends meet.

The world is almost as full of people who wear themselves out as it is of people who rust out.

We can't help feeling that most people miss the road to happiness because they insist on trying out all the detours.

It would surprise some Plymouth wives to be kissed as much as it would some of our modern girls not to be.

Good advice will help the average man, but a good scare will prove more effective.

There are plenty of hangings in the United States just now, but what we can't understand is why they spend so much money on the fellows they are going to hang.

We've also noticed that many a Plymouth man makes a monkey of himself by trying to ape somebody else.

They have called another election in Mexico. Must be running out of ammunition.

The best reason for being careful when you cross the street is the fact that Americans spent 14 billion dollars for autos last year.

One of the hardest things for us to do is to believe that the Plymouth man who picks us up for a ride isn't going to run for office a little later on.

If you think you are working too fast get out and watch the brick-layer at work on a government job.

It very often happens that the fellow who thinks he is making love is only making a mistake.

You can usually tell by looking at a Plymouth married man whether his wife calls him William or Bill.

Another good sign that Spring is here is that some fellows are now trying to trade a radio for a spare tire.

We read recently that potatoes grow wild in Chile. And potato prices are growing wild up here.

It may be better to be happy than rich, but we've never found anyone around Plymouth who derived any satisfaction out of believing so.

Girl Who Brought Kiss to Britain Forgotten

It is odd, when you come to think of it, that even the name of the introducer of kissing to the British Isles should have been forgotten by all but a few learned old scholars, says Bassett Digby in the London News.

Of course she was a woman, but no statue commemorates her, though even the unpleasant Boudicca, who romped through the enemy lines in a chariot with scythes fixed to the axle, has her dingy metallic perpetuation in the shape of discarded train tickets on the Thames embankment outside Scotland Yard—surely an appropriate locale.

When the Pictadilly cupid is restored I should like to see set up as his vis-a-vis across the circus a graphic presentation of the lovely and enterprising Princess Rowena, daughter of King Hengist of Friesland, who gave that red-blooded and hairy, but socially gauche, King Vortigern of the ancient Britons, the first kiss ever brought to this country.

Kissing seems to have met with general approval. It fitted, as the advertisements say, a long-felt want. Speedily it became a general salutation, and throughout the Middle Ages it flourished to an extent incredible to us moderns. Undoubtedly this played a large part in spreading the dreadful epidemics of plague, typhus and cholera that caused such lamentable ravages. Whenever a medieval guest entered the house of his friend he invariably kissed his host's wife and daughter. Chaucer frequently alludes to the custom.

John Bunyan, however, turned a sour eye on the prevalence of kissing, and placed his views on record in "Grace Abounding."

In the time of James I and Charles I for a pretty hostess, daughter or maid to kiss each new arrival was an absolute sine qua non for every rural inn. Foreigners were struck by the amount of kissing that went on.

But, alas for the amorous rustic diaphanous, the June heyday of promiscuous kissing passed, never, one may hazard, to return. In the hard-drinking and roistering times that followed the mental eclipse of George III a sort of Indian summer of the custom had set in, outlasting the regency, indeed. But soon came the frost, and kissing the pretty chambermaid at the inn, so long a cherished privilege of the wayfarer, now took its place in the Newgate calendar of Victorian crimes.

Mattresses Her "Bank"

When the old Overbrook hotel, for years a landmark on the White Horse pike, near Lindenwald, N. J., was sold, $4,545 in cash was removed from mattresses and cupboard corners throughout the old hostelry. The money, property of Mrs. George Thomas, proprietor, was first discovered by a realty agent helping Mrs. Thomas remove her personal belongings from the hotel after its sale. The agent pulled five $100 bills from a mattress, the sight of which seemed to jog Mrs. Thomas' memory. "It's wonderful," she said. "I can remember now back as far as 25 years ago when, not having confidence in banks, I used to tuck small sums under these mattresses."

Attracted Attention

She was extremely high hat as she entered a Tutane belt car and made her way to the front end. Her coat was the very latest, and she wore a nifty little turban with "celine" written all over it. On the unglazed left hand flashed a large solitaire.

She apparently appreciated the glances at her trim ankles and patent leather shoes until she became aware that the glances were directed not so much at the ankles and shoes as at the children sticking their heads and noses around and had fallen to fold across her feet. The glance she gave the nearby passengers registered about seven degrees below freezing. How did you like that?

"Nuts" Were Present

As a matter of duty two nut cracker boys in red and blue livery stood by. Every leg was swept on the surface, and in due time they sat down at the tables and then—

"Mother," a red four-year old Betty, after looking on and down the table two or three times, "where are the nuts?"

"What nuts, dear?" inquired the puzzled mother.

"Why," explained Betty, "I heard you tell the cook we were going to have a couple of nuts for dinner tonight." Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Auld Scotia"

Scotia is merely a former name of Scotland, and is used at the present simply as a poetic designation. Scotia was originally applied to Ireland, which country was afterwards called Scotia Magna, or Major, to distinguish it from Scotia Minor, or Scotland. According to the Venerable Bede, who lived the latter part of the Seventh century, Scotland was known as Caledonia until 258 A. D., when the country was invaded by the Scott and Irish tribes, and its name changed to Scotia.—Kansas City Star.

OWNER HOLDS ALBUM BEYOND ALL PRICE

Contains Signatures of Famous Americans.

A letter, written by Lafayette to Andrew Jackson 100 years ago, has been handed down through two generations of the McLaughlin family, and is now the treasure of Miss A. Lida McLaughlin, Fairfax apartments, Alexandria, Va.

It was presented to her grandfather, James A. McLaughlin, by General Jackson. Mr. McLaughlin was a relative by marriage of Amos Kendall, whose estate, known as Kendall Green, so named in honor of his wife, is now occupied by the Gallaudet School for Deaf Mutes.

Miss McLaughlin, who lives with her mother, now Mrs. Lida A. French, has an autograph album bearing the signatures of every President from Jefferson to Grant, as well as letters written to her grandfather by Henry Clay and other statesmen of that day.

There is some correspondence concerning her grandfather's writing of General Jackson's biography, a work which he finally decided not to undertake.

The Lafayette letter concerns a visit of his to General Jackson. It has so mellowed with age that a few words cannot be transcribed. It follows:

"On Board the Mechanic, May 2, 1825.
"My Dear General: Your kind invitation to (retire?) to your house on my reaching the good soil of Tennessee is perfectly conformant to what I had promised myself to do. I hope to be tomorrow living with my companions under your friendly roof. The hour of our arrival next day at Nashville will be, of course, regulated by the arrangements of the governor, corporation and committee. You know, and feel for me, what sacred engagements prompt me, to my great regret, to shorten my visit, but I most cordially anticipate the pleasure, some time tomorrow, to present my respects to Mrs. Jackson and to repeat to you that I am, very affectionately your friend."
"LAFAYETTE.

"P. S.—May the 3d:
"I am informed, my dear general, by the kind committee on board that the arrangements have been changed and that in consequence of an invitation to Nashville it is there that I am to meet you tomorrow morning. Then I will be with you in town."

Births in United States

The number of children born every year in the United States, not counting Alaska, the Philippines, etc., is not known, to the last infant, because a number of states do not have adequate birth registration, and only 70.3 per cent (in 1924) of the population of the United States was within what the census bureau calls the "registration area." However, among these 85,539,000 residents of the registration area, there were in 1924 1,930,614 births. If the same rate—22.6 births per 1,000 of the population—prevails throughout the country, there were about 2,328,000 births in the entire country in 1924, and about 2,550,000 in 1925.

Cheap

They had not been married very long and so it is not very strange that until this day they had never had a quarrel.

However, now they had had their first little tiff and she turned to him with tears in her eyes.

"Well, John," she said, "even though I have been extravagant I got a bargain today."

"Yes?" he replied. "I'll bet it was a bargain! You have no idea of the value of money, I suppose you think you got something for nothing?"

Her eyes gleamed for a moment. "Yes, dear," she said sweetly, "I got a Christmas present for you."

"Coins" Made of Ice

A French electricity undertaking was convinced that one of its consumers was obtaining electricity for nothing through a franc-in-the-meter meter, but inspectors could not discover how the electricity had been obtained.

In despair, the consumer was offered a monetary reward, when he confessed that he had frozen water in molds to the diameter and weight of the coin normally used. After a short time in the meter the ice melted and left no trace.

Geranium for Window Box

It is conceded that the piebald geranium is one of the most effective ways of introducing color into the house in winter. A window box of the gay and cheerful pink, rose and red blooms and some English ivy is ideal for keeping the room alive and bright.

Geraniums require little care or attention. They seem to thrive best in rich, sandy garden loam. Sunlight is a requisite for the growth and beauty of these hardy flowers, but they are not so particular as to the amount of heat.

Toothbrush Users Limited

Only 4,000,000 of all the people of the United States ever owned a toothbrush, so it is claimed by Research Director Kettering of the General Motors company, yet the companies manufacturing brushes for the clean-teeth brigade had unusual prosperity during the past year, made liberal dividends and put handsome sums in the surplus account, the 4,000,000 members of the clean-teeth army being steady buyers year after year.—Ohio State Journal.

Palace Now Playground

Tsarok-Selo, once the favorite summer home of the emperors and empresses of Russia, is now a playground for the children of the Russian masses. The great estate, which was the gift of Peter the Great to his wife, Catherine I, now resembles a vast American recreation center. The former palaces, villas, churches, gardens and lakes have been converted into museums, schools, hospitals and sanitariums for children.

Burrowing by Wombat Made Melbourne 'Dry'

The wombat, in spite of its disarmingly comic name, has won itself an unsavory reputation by causing a landslide and interfering with Melbourne's water supply, according to Australian cablegrams. Burrowing wombats let loose 20,000,000 gallons of water by undermining an aqueduct.

The wombat can be easily recognized as an animal that looks like a little bear, has a pouch like a kangaroo, and can only hiss unless it can grunt. As it is only from two to three feet long in full growth, it is available as a pet.

A wombat was once noted in London. It belonged to Dante Gabriel Rossetti, who had a feud with William Morris' pet owl and stuck stanchly by his wombat. The beast, it is said, was forever getting away, and as the wombat sleeps by day and wanders at night, late pedestrians on London's gas-lighted streets sometimes got the shock of their lives.

The animal is shy and gentle, though it can bite. The hairy-nosed variety, which grunts, is found in southern Australia. There are other varieties in Tasmania and the islands of Bass straits. Some of these are shaggy, some silky and smooth. They all shuffle on short legs and live on the ground or in burrows and rock holes. None of them has a visible tail, but only a rudimentary stump hidden by the coat.

They come in brown, gray, black or yellow. The soles of their feet are full of bumps. Their teeth grow continuously, with persistent pulps, and are chisel-like, although the wombat diet is chiefly grass, roots and herbs. The creature burrows, and that is why Melbourne's taps ran dry the other day.

Collared

A professor, becoming confused in a big department store, approached a dapper clerk as an uncertain but possible source of information.

"Can you tell me where I can get a collar?" he inquired.

"Certainly, sir, right at this counter. Do you want a hard one or a soft one?"

"Why, a soft, I guess."

"Detachable or attached?"

"Well, really now, I think it should be detachable."

"Silk or linen?"

"Come now, don't be silly. I want leather."

"Leather, sir! Why your neck will be raw!"

"My neck! I'm trying to buy it for my dog!"

Ancient Medical "Cures"

Purgings and bleedings, a century or so ago, were considered the safest and sanest cures. Records of the times show that babies three days old were bled, and men and women in their eighties were bled repeatedly. For toothache the patient was bled on the side of the body on which the pain had occurred. In the case of an attack of paralysis the well side of the body would be bled first and the paralyzed side next. As to the curious medical ideas there was no end. Moderate drinking was supposed to insure longevity. Human milk was a cure for grown-ups as well as babies. It was supposed to insure infants against smallpox.—Exchange.

To Map From Airplanes

Forty thousand square miles of country covered by snowcaps, great forests, glaciers and volcanoes in southeastern Alaska will be mapped the coming summer from the air. For years the geological survey has been struggling to complete its maps of this part of Alaska, but the ground survey has been slow and in many places almost impossible. So the navy has been asked to assist. The territory to be mapped extends from the Aleutians and the Valley of the Ten Thousand Smokes to Ketchikan. The rough country, fogs and clouds present hazards. The mapping will be done from an elevation of 10,000 feet.

Russia's Capitalists Few

Only 640 persons of the 138,700,500 in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics live on interest received on invested capital, according to the report of the commissariat of finance. However, 1,082,730 persons paid taxes on revenue, most of them dealers, owners, lessees of property, partners in commercial undertakings, contractors and speculators on the bourse. Such revenue amounted to $184,600,000 in six months.—Chicago Daily News.

Cleaning Furniture

The best and simplest way to remove water spots on furniture or any other woodwork is to rub the stain with a cloth dampened with household ammonia. A coat of wax or polish with a prepared dust cloth will restore the luster to furniture. The lint on a table top, caused by the table pad, can be removed by rubbing it gently with a soft cloth and a good wood cleaner.

Old Deed Recorded

A quit-claim deed presented at the Penobscot county registry probably breaks all records in Maine for age before being placed in the records of the county. The deed was dated November 24, 1823, having been in hiding more than 102 years before the official action was taken. By it James Mayo and Robert Young of Hamden conveyed to Micajah Shaw, also of Hamden, a certain lot of land of 24 1/2 acres in that town.

Made Frank Journey

For reasons known to himself a German named Eradilo Schlerm traveled from Manchester, England, to London mounted on a wooden globe. The globe was a little less than three feet in diameter and weighed but 87 pounds. Schlerm successfully accomplished his task, covering the distance between the two cities at an average speed of eight miles an hour.

WINDSTORMS

Are With Us Again

Arkansas and Mississippi have inaugurated the 1926 Windstorm season. A tornado and heavy windstorm are responsible for the loss of many lives and considerable destruction of property. The entire town of Tisdale, Mississippi, was virtually demolished.

It recalls to mind the terrific destruction caused in five mid-western states just about a year ago. Then there was the visitation to New England last fall when wind ripped its destructive way through Woburn, Massachusetts, and adjoining towns.

WINDSTORM INSURANCE with this agency will protect you against this unpreventable cause of loss. The cost is very low, only $4.00 for $1,000.00 worth of insurance for three years.

REAL ESTATE EDUCATION

JOINT COMMISSION ADOPTS REVISED CURRICULUM FOR THE REAL ESTATE INTRODUCTORY COURSE FOR VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS TO BE REORGANIZED, WILL EMPHASIZE FACTORS CREATING VALUE AND STUDY BUYER'S MIND.

Changes in the standard two-year vocational course in real estate outlined three years ago by the Joint Commission on Real Estate Education and now being given under the auspices of real estate boards in approximately 200 cities have been adopted by the Commission at a meeting held recently in Chicago.

The changes, chief of which is the reorganization of the introductory course of the series so as to make it primarily a practical study in real estate values, rather than a general survey in real estate methods and principles, were made following suggestions of the United Y. M. C. A. Schools, and are the outgrowth of the experience of the past three years in regard to student needs in distinctly vocational courses.

While a general survey of real estate principles is the logical approach to an extensive study such as is being offered in a full collegiate course, it was the opinion of the Commission that in a distinctly vocational course, particularly where more complete and detailed courses are later available, the best introduction is one which will bring the student immediately to the subject matter of the real estate man's daily business.

The re-organized introductory course will be concerned with three fundamental matters, real estate values, the mind of the buyer, and the mind of the seller. It will be planned with these objectives:

1. To furnish the student with a basis or source for an understanding of what makes real estate values.
2. To describe the physical, social, psychological and economic factors which create values in real estate.
3. To teach the student how to recognize and apply these factors.
4. To help the student understand and analyze the reasons why people buy and sell real estate.
5. To give the student a description of the customs of the real estate business and of the ethics of the business.

Outline of the new revised course in fundamentals of the real estate business will be prepared for use this Fall. The revised two-year curriculum adopted by the joint commission as the officially recommended curriculum for extension divisions of Universities, Y. M. C. A. schools and other vocational schools is as follows:

First Year—
First Semester—Real Estate Law or Real Estate Practice; Fundamentals of the Real Estate Business. Elective—It is suggested that one of the elective courses listed below be offered.

Second Semester—Real Estate Contracting Practice; Real Estate Sales Practice. Elective—It is suggested that one of the elective courses listed below be offered.

Second Year—
First Semester—Property Management or Building Construction and Design; Real Estate Finance. Elective—It is suggested that one of the elective courses listed below be offered.

Second Semester—Real Estate Appraisal Methods; Real Estate Business Administration; Problems in Land Utilization (Land Economics). Electives—

Building and Loan Associations; Accounting Principles; Practice Speaking; Principles of Salesmanship; Principles of Economics; Advanced Conveyance Practice; Business Statistics; Advertising Fundamentals; Psychology in Business; Property Insurance; Business English; City Planning.

CODE OF ETHICS OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REAL ESTATE BOARDS.

Article 8. Negotiations concerning property which is listed with one Realtor exclusively should be carried on with the listing broker, not with the owner.

Article 9. The schedules of fees established by the various real estate boards are believed to represent fair compensation for services rendered in their communities and should be observed by every Realtor.

Article 10. A Realtor should not solicit the services of any employee in the organization of a fellow-Realtor without the knowledge of the employer.

Article 11. No sign should ever be placed on any property by a Realtor without the consent of the owner.

Part 2.—Relations to Clients

Article 12. In justice to those who place their interests in his hands, the Realtor should endeavor always to be informed regarding the law, proposed legislation, and other essential facts and public policies which affect those interests.

Article 13. In accepting the agency for property, the Realtor pledges himself to be fair to purchaser or tenant, as well as to the owner whom he represents and whose interests he should protect and promote as he would his own.

Article 14. A Realtor should not buy for himself property listed with him, nor should he acquire any interest therein, without first making his true position clearly known to the listing owner.

Article 15. When asked for an appraisal of real property or an opinion on a real estate problem, the Realtor should never give an unconsidered answer; his counsel constitutes a professional service which he should render only after having ascertained and weighed the facts, and for which he should make a fair charge.

Article 16. The Realtor should encourage the naming of the actual or an obviously nominal consideration in a deed.

AUTOMOBILE HEADLIGHTS

Nobody will know how many automobile headlights are out of focus until they have been pushed back into normal position again.

This is the conclusion reached by Raymond Bachelder, secretary of the local branch of the Detroit Automobile Club, following a study of the causes of glaring headlights. Mr. Bachelder cites mishandling of cars in garages as a conspicuous cause of wild headlights.

"For some odd reason, however, many garage people and motorists prefer to pick out the headlights as the proper part of the car's anatomy to take hold of when pushing. Naturally this throws the lights out of focus.

"Rules for focusing headlights as used by the American Automobile Association and this club stress the importance of the position of the headlamps themselves. It is possible to have a bulb of the correct candlepower and focus, a lens of the approved type and a headlamp the legal height from the ground, but if the lamp is out of line and bent out of its normal position it will glare.

"What is even more important is the fact that with the lamp out of focus the driver of the car will not enjoy the safety of proper road illumination.

"We have got to push thousands of headlamps back into position now that Spring is here and night driving is on the increase. And motorists have got to learn not to push their cars around by the lamps. Bumpers are provided for the rough treatment, where necessary."

The pleasing light gray color of concrete dresses up any street

Money Saving Facts About Concrete Street Paving

Concrete is durable. It will not shove, roll or rut. It remains as true and even as built.

Concrete pavement is now satisfying taxpayers in hundreds of cities throughout the United States. 1000 cities built concrete streets in 1925.

Maintenance cost is low. No expensive special equipment is required. Concrete provides a safe surface for traffic. It is never slippery after rains.

Concrete's light gray surface harmonizes with the green of lawns and trees, also with sidewalks, curb and gutter and in-drives, which are universally of concrete. This light gray color is of special value at night. Passing vehicles and people crossing the street are more easily seen.

Concrete pavement is not noisy. 95 per cent of traffic today is rubber tired. Rubber on concrete does not make noise.

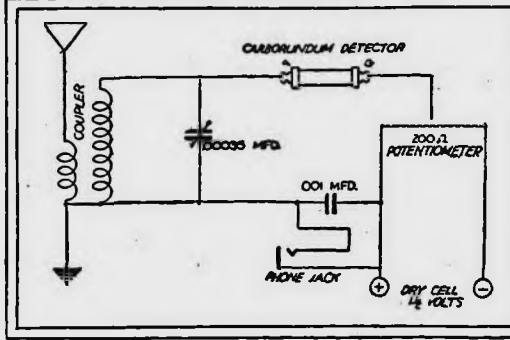

Oil drippings will not cause concrete to disintegrate.

35,500,000 square yards of concrete pavement placed on city streets in the United States in 1925.

Concrete gives you more pavement value for each dollar invested than any other type.

Crystal Set Circuit. Adjustment of Detector is Fixed by the Manufacturers and Remains Permanent.

By WILMER S. TRINKLE
in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

One of the greatest drawbacks in the average crystal receiver is the lack of selectivity. To separate successfully broadcasting stations when several local stations are on the air is an absolute necessity if good uniform reception is to be obtained.

The set here described is one designed to meet the above requirements. The selectivity is quite good and testing this set in the heart of the city the writer was able easily to separate the Philadelphia stations and also to receive programs from WJZ, when that station was broadcasting through 2XAR, its 50-kilowatt station at Bound Brook.

The detector circuit here shown will be familiar to the old operators who regarded it as one of the most reliable in a fixed type and is shown in the circuit diagram. It may be used in the usual type of circuit, which does not require a battery, but detector sensitivity is materially increased by the use of an applied voltage that can be regulated to a fine degree. This is regulated in the set here described by a potentiometer.

The adjustment of this detector is fixed by the manufacturers and remains permanent. The crystal here used is of the carborundum type and the contact pressure is quite heavy.

The Parts Needed.

The parts used to construct the set here described are as follows:

- One fixed carborundum detector.
- One aero-coil coupler.
- One variable condenser .00035 mfd. capacity.
- One fixed condenser .001 mfd. capacity.
- One potentiometer, 200 ohms.
- One single-circuit jack.
- Four engraved binding posts marked as follows:

Ant. Gnd., A-, A+,

One panel, 7 by 10 inches.

One wooden sub-base, 7 by 8 inches.

One 4-inch dial.

Two lengths of No. 14 bus wire.

One dry-cell, one and a half volts.

The coupler used is of the single-layer solenoid type of the air-core variety and consists of two windings. The outside coil is the secondary. It is three inches in diameter and consists of 61 turns of No. 22 double cotton-covered wire. The primary is wound inside of the secondary and near one end. It consists of seven turns of the same size wire as the secondary and is space-wound. This coupler covers the broadcast wave-length band when tuned with a .00035 condenser.

The condenser used is of the new straight-line frequency type and has a maximum capacity of .00035 mfd. It is quite compact and requires but little more room than the old-fashioned, straight-line capacity type. The use of this condenser in conjunction with the specified coil gives uniform frequency spacing on tuning dial. The crystal detector used is a fixed carborundum and is completely sealed in. The user does not need to make any adjustments at all. One terminal is marked A and the other G. These figures are indicated in the circuit diagram, and the detector hooked up in that fashion. However, try the detector both in the position shown and also reversed to ascertain which way it works the better in your own particular set. The voltage of the battery used in this particular detector circuit is varied by the use of the potentiometer so that the best operating point may be found.

Laying Out the Panel.

The laying out of the panel is quite simple, and the drilling is cut down to a minimum. Starting from the left of the panel, measure in three inches and up three and one-half inches to locate the center of the condenser.

The potentiometer is mounted two and one-half inches in from the right hand edge of the panel and is on a line with the center of the condenser. The phone jack is mounted four and one-quarter inches in from the right-hand edge and one inch and a half up from the bottom. By studying carefully the rear view of this receiver, the other instruments can very readily be mounted in their respective positions.

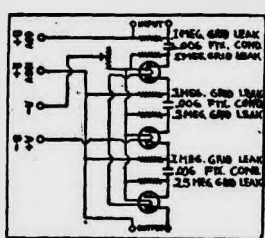

Wiring the set may then be begun, and by carefully following the circuit diagram, no trouble should be experienced.

After the entire set has been assembled and wired, the antenna and ground should be connected to their respective posts, and a one and one-half-volt dry cell connected to the A posts. By manipulating the tuning dial and potentiometer adjustment, it should now be possible to tune in broadcasts. It is then time to try reversing the polarity of the dry cell and also of the crystal detector. After the best combination is found, do not change it.

Best Amplifier for Reducing Distortions

No doubt there are a number who have one-tube sets with which they would be quite satisfied if they gave more volume. Adding amplifications will accomplish this object.

The resistance coupled amplifier is one of the best amplifiers for distortionless reception. It is a very easy amplifier to build, costs less than any other form of amplifier, takes up little room, and compared with other amplifiers, draws less current from the "B" batteries.

On the other hand, it has some disadvantages. It requires three tubes to give about the same results as are secured with two tubes in a transformer coupled amplifier. Another disadvantage of this amplifier is that it takes more "B" battery voltage, up to 135 volts, as against 90 volts required for other types.

As you can see by the circuit diagram shown, it consists principally of a series of resistances. The condensers used vary from .006 to .05. The best capacity will be found only by experiment. However, in most cases .006 is correct. If you are using dry cell tubes, you will have to vary the resistors which make up the secondary until you find those that give the best results.

Slow Charge Is Best for Your Radio Battery

Storage batteries are charged by sending a direct electric current through them in the opposite direction to the current flow on discharge.

For the usual six-volt battery, the charging current ordinarily used will be from two to five amperes.

In order to obtain such a rate of current flow various types of battery chargers are used. These convert the source of supply to which they are connected into direct current, if the source is alternating current, and reduce the voltage to the proper value for charging the battery at the current rate it requires.

Cells should not be overcharged, because of the danger of buckling the plates, due to surface expansion.

If the plates become sufficiently buckled, internal short circuit may be caused, resulting in bad sulphation. Overcharge, however, is not nearly so liable to damage the battery as over-discharge.

How to Tell Values of Different Grid Leaks

A suitable set of values for a grid leak would be one megohm, two megohms, three megohms, five megohms and seven megohms. A means may be provided for bringing these values in action which may be secured by wiring a tap switch so that it may be used to switch any one of a number of grid leaks into the circuit. This will provide a definite, positive value of grid resistance to suit the requirements of various groups of stations, according to their distance and power.

How Condenser Operates

The fixed condenser in the grid circuit of a resistance coupled audio-amplifier is an important part of the apparatus, as it allows the radio frequency current on the plate of the previous tube to reach the grid of the next, but prevents the D. C. plate battery voltage from reaching the grid.

NORTH SIDE ALL SET FOR BIG NEW SCHOOL

Should Cost at Least $200,000.00

By the time these lines are in press it is probable that the north end Walker school site property will have been bought and paid for. A newly drawn abstract was delivered to Mr. Walker on Saturday. On Tuesday it was authoritatively stated that the instrument had been tentatively accepted by the Board of Education and turned over to Mr. John S. Dayton, local attorney, for examination. Positive assurance has also been given that the property will be purchased before Wednesday, May 5th, expiration date. The finding of possible defects in the title need not, it is now asserted, delay matters. Furthermore, Mr. Henderson has just informed this writer that he had on the same day (Tuesday) inspected the Walker site, was pleased with general appearances, and that he now believed that it would provide a suitable location for a school.

Thus let north side residents hope that the old time opposition is vanishing. Folks living on the hinder side of "Mason and Dixon's line" can now begin to settle down, perhaps, to some degree of satisfaction. Progressive citizens all through the local school district will likewise share in this satisfaction. Plymouth cannot have all that she should have, nor be all that she should be, without a more uniform growth and development in every direction. A school site in north village, and a GOOD SCHOOL BUILT UPON THAT SITE, will help tremendously in the general development.

It is superfluous to say that north side parents and taxpayers are elated over their first victory. Yet the battle is not yet entirely won. THE SCHOOL COMES NEXT. The matter of the school building should not be unnecessarily delayed. It should be a good school, a modern school with every necessary equipment, and a school erected not for the needs of today alone, but one which will suffice the north end and adjacent community for at least five years to come. It should be a school of real proportions and sufficient ornateness, and erected on lines to make all Plymouth justly proud. Such a school, no doubt, would cost at least $200,000.00.

The north side is an old established and component part of our village. The ancient Pere Marquette depot, while not exactly a thing of beauty, is located in the north end. Here all the railway interests are located. The north side has its own complete shopping center, including bank, barber shops, grocery and dry goods stores, drug store, men's clothing store, hotel, real estate offices, restaurants, hardware store, the oldest established greenhouses business in several townships, toy and novelty works, Ford tap making plant, lumber and coal yards, elevator and feed stores, and nearly all institutions that go to make up a complete town, EXCEPT A SCHOOL. In no other like area in our village, outside the established down town central district, can be found so much varied activity.

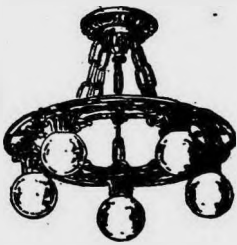

North side residents are not selfish. North side residents are not unmindful of the school need, or what will soon be the school need, in the east Ann Arbor street, or the south Main street sections. We north side residents claim that theirs is the next logical location for school activities. By right of seniority, and for other reasons, north side residents believe that they should rightfully come in for first favor. The north side school site is selected. The centralized schools idea is dead. The town is growing. The children are coming. Altogether, NOW, let's build our north side ward school.

Another school message next week.

Plymouth, Mich., April 27, 1926.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION KNOWN TO ANCIENTS

Records Show It Was Practiced Centuries Ago.

The ancients have a way of bobbing up from their graves and presenting their claims to have originated some supposedly modern method or invention. The comparatively new method of introducing some drugs directly into the blood stream by injection or even the principle of blood transfusion, for that matter, had their origin far back, centuries before even the most advanced scientist suspected the existence of the circulation of the blood.

Those were the days of hopes, when men dreamed of the wonders of things to come, according to Dr. W. F. Dutton, former chief of the Polyclinic hospital, Philadelphia.

"Transfusion of blood and the idea of injecting drugs directly into the veins," said Doctor Dutton, "had their scientific origin in the Seventeenth century. But for many hundreds of years before that the idea of transferring blood from human being or animal to the veins of a human suffering from loss of blood or afflicted with disease had been present in the minds of those who carried on the medical tradition.

Several centuries before Harvey discovered the phenomenon of the circulation of the blood there is in Villari's "Life of Savonarola" an account of the unsuccessful attempt made by a "Jew" doctor to prolong the life of Pope Innocent VIII by means of transfusion.

"The account reads:

"Accordingly the blood of the decrepit old pontiff was passed into the veins of a youth, whose blood was transferred into those of the old man. The experiment was tried three times, and at the cost of the lives of three boys, probably from air getting into their veins, but no effect was obtained, the pope was not saved; he died on the twenty-fifth of April, 1492."

"In 1613 William Harvey began lecturing to his London classes concerning his discovery of the circulation of the blood. Two years later in a book published at Frankfurt, 1615, Andreas Libavius, writing of transfusions, said: 'Let there be a young man, robust, full of spirituous blood, and also an old man, thin, emaciated, his strength exhausted, hardly able to retain his own soul. Let the performer of the operation have two silver tubes fitting into each other. Let him open an artery of the young man and fit into it one of the tubes, fastening it in. Let him immediately after open the artery of the old man and put the other tube into it, and then, the two tubes being joined together, the hot and spirituous blood of the young man will pour into the old one as if it were from the fountain of youth.'

"In 1623 Giovanni Colle of Padua, writing of diets and drugs valuable in prolonging life, mentions transfusion and suggests the mingling of medicines with the infused blood, thus offering a suggestion of possible intravenous medication. English, German, French and Italian scientists took up the work, but it was finally discarded as 'one of the curiosities of medical history.'

"More ancient than transfusion is the act of bloodletting. Without doubt it is one of the oldest therapeutic measures, and of such antiquity that we are unable to trace it."

Rude Joke

A middle-aged bachelor, who has a wide acquaintance in the theatrical profession, was at lunch recently with an old friend, a ventriloquist, who was appearing at an Indianapolis theater. In the course of the meal, the ventriloquist invited a young woman who was appearing on the same bill, to join them. Suddenly, to the surprise of the bachelor, he heard the woman say: "Stop holding my hand." Again, on taking his leave, he was startled to hear her say: "See you after the show tonight, old scout." It did not dawn on the man that his ventriloquist friend was playing a joke on him. His friends have not been able to find out whether or not he was waiting at the stage door that night.—Indianapolis News.

Educated Dog

Dogs have not such good brains as monkeys. Yet from long association with man the dog has learned to make better use of his brain than the monkey, and therefore appears more intelligent.

Dogs have been taught to spell. Rolf, the Skye terrier of Mannheim, actually did sums and dictated letters, and his feats are attested by British as well as German observers.

One night Rolf woke his mistress, who lit a lamp and took the alphabet. Rolf spelled out, "Listen! Birds!" His mistress told him that what he heard was an owl hooting, and Rolf went back to bed satisfied.

Improving on Nature

The production of synthetic camphor from turpentine oil in this country appears to be an accomplished fact. Exact details are not known, but from one to three tons a day have been quoted as estimates of the production.

The camphor industry until recent years has been a monopoly of the Japanese, who have continually increased the price of the natural product and have thus forced European consumers to manufacture camphor synthetically. Such manufacture is indeed satisfactory, especially as it has spread to Britain on a fairly large scale.
