GAS COMPANY EXTENDING MAINS

MAYBURY SANATORIUM AT NORTHVILLE WILL USE GAS FROM LOCAL PLANT.

The Michigan Federated Utilities are extending a three-inch gas main out the Fishery road at Northville to the Maybury sanatorium to give gas service to that institution. The local company will install ten hotel ranges in three kitchens at the sanatorium, also two broilers and roasters and four combination broilers, toasters and griddles and several bake ovens. This equipment is of the very latest type and improved design.

Within the year the company will lay gas mains to tie in the gas line between Phoenix and the Fishery road on the Rock road.

The local plant is now supplying gas for the Wayne County Training school, the men's and new women's prisons of the Detroit House of Correction, and also the Wayne County Jailhouse at Elmhurst.

The securing of the contract for the Maybury Sanatorium is largely due to the efforts of Pearley H. Deal, the bustling assistant manager of the Michigan Federated Utilities at Plymouth. Pearley is ever on the alert to secure new business for his company and give its patrons the best of service.

BALLOON PASSES OVER PLYMOUTH

A big balloon passing over Plymouth about five o'clock Saturday afternoon attracted the attention of many of our citizens. The balloon had four passengers, among them being Eduardo Bradley, of South America, here as his country's entrant in the International Gordon Bennett balloon race. The start was made from the Ford airport at 3:45 o'clock. The huge balloon rose rapidly to a height of about 4,000 feet, found a 20-mile an hour breeze and drifted northward. The balloon was landed about two miles west of Howell and the flight was over. In making the landing a high tension wire was broken, putting Howell in darkness.

SUGAR FROM AIR

What will the chemists and scientists promise the world next? Now comes a report that German chemists have found a way to make sugar from the hydrogen and oxygen in the air. It sounds like a fairy tale, and yet when we stop to think of it, plants that we now get our sugar from get it from the air through hydrogen and oxygen. So if plants can do it the chemists ought to be able to. Nothing hits the average Plymouth family closer than its sugar supply, and if it is true that science will soon be making it possible from a supply that is endless—the air—then it ought to come as mighty good news to every member of every family. We are living in an age of modern miracles, don't forget that. The wisest of men no longer scoff, and neither do they say "it can't be done." So don't be surprised if before long the cane patch and the beet fields have a new competitor, and one that may also make living costs a little lighter on your pocketbook.

"COURTESY MEANS SAFETY"

Quite a few accidents reported around Plymouth from time to time doubtless could be avoided if every driver realized that courtesy means safety. Every now and then we hear of somebody "crowded off the road." And there is no excuse for it. When a driver signals that he wants to pass an auto ahead, and the driver ahead can safely pull over to the right side of the road to let him pass, it is his duty to do so. Forcing the man in the rear to take chances on getting safely around you, or speeding up as he gets alongside, is the kind of discourtesy that causes accidents. Giving a little right-of-way has never yet caused a mishap and courtesy has never resulted in any broken bones. Let us hope that more of our drivers will remember this. There are enough hazards in motoring as it is without creating additional ones through a lack of courtesy. Good drivers never lose sight of the fact that "Courtesy means Safety."

FOR MORE REUNIONS

We are glad to note, in glancing over our exchanges, that the old custom of holding family reunions is not losing its hold in many communities. In fact, they seem to be growing more general, and more people in this state, especially those living in the smaller towns and rural communities, are enjoying this form of entertainment than ever before. If there is one complaint to find with the world today it is that we are not as neighborly as were those of our parents' day. Most of us lose sight of relatives as soon as they move a few miles away, and even letter-writing is not as popular as it once was. Yet family reunions should be more numerous now than ever before. With nearly every one owning an auto, it is easy for relatives to gather at a central point from great distances. It is no trick now for one to drive 50 to 1000 miles to a family reunion. For this reason the reunion is coming back into popular favor, and more of them seem to be scheduled for this year than at any time in recent years. We don't want our friends around Plymouth to lose sight of this means of spending one whole day of joy during the spring or summer months. If your family isn't having a reunion, start now to work up interest in one. You'll find almost all of your relatives have autos and are only awaiting an invitation to assemble for a big dinner, a discussion of relationship. Let's have more of them this summer than ever before. There's nothing better for the community, and nothing more enjoyable for those who participate in them.

A TIMELY SERMON

Asked recently if he expected his plant to continue running at top speed all summer, John N. Willys, head of the Willys-Overland Co., said: "Yes, if we keep advertising at top speed." There's a sermon in those few words for the man who hasn't learned the wisdom of stirring up business during the summer months, when it is most needed. The wisest advertisers in the world are those who advertise when business is slow—knowing as they do that that's the way to make it good. The summer season is almost here. But people have to eat and wear clothes and all that in summer the same as in winter. For that reason the merchant who keeps telling them, in all kinds of weather, of special bargains he has to offer is the one who will have the least cause for complaint when the "dull season," as those who don't advertise call it, has settled down over the community.

Premiums Announced for the State Fair

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS OFFERED FOR VEGETABLE EXHIBITS.

Very attractive prizes for Roadside Markets, exhibits by growers, and individual displays of vegetables have just been announced by the Management of the Michigan State Fair; the dates of the Fair are September 2-8, 1928.

Six hundred dollars, with first prize of $200 and sixth of $25 is offered for the best retail market or roadside stand display. Each grower will be given space, approximately ten feet by ten feet with rear wall space, in which to construct a stand according to his own ideas. Exhibit may include fruit, vegetables, flowers, honey, jam, jellies, canned fruit, fruit juice and other farm products that are commonly sold at roadside markets.

Professional gardeners have a special class for collection of vegetables with $75 as first prize and $10 for fourth and amateurs also have a special class with $30 for first prize and $5 for fourth.

Then there is a big class for individual vegetable displays in which anyone can compete, making the prizes which are open to vegetable men a total of $1008.00.

The State Fair Management will be pleased to answer any inquiries regarding the show or you can get in touch direct with Ralph Carr, Wayne County Agricultural Agent, Dearborn, who is Assistant Superintendent in charge of Vegetables.

Mrs. Josephine Hix was called to Galesburg week before last on account of the sickness and death of her oldest sister, Mrs. S. J. Russell. Mrs. Russell had attained the age of 90 years, three months and sixteen days. She had been a resident of Kalamazoo County over seventy years, having come from New York with her father seventy-two years ago. Her husband, Eli Russell, was killed in the Civil War. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Marjette Youmans, aged seventy-one, of Galesburg; one son, Charles F., of California; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Cornell of Galesburg and Mrs. Josephine Hix, eighty, of Wayne. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hix and Mrs. Ed. Pettibone, of Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reiman of Plymouth, attended the funeral on Monday.

Merchants Win Again

PLYMOUTH MERCHANTS TAKE GAME FROM WHITMORE LAKE, 14-4.

Last Sunday the Plymouth Merchants went over to Whitmore Lake to play a return game, which resulted in not much of a game, as the Plymouth boys had a walk-away, which can be seen by the score. One thing that helped the Whitmore Lake team was ground rules, because any ball that was hit over the second cow-path and in the ball-trushes in left field was a lost ball and the batter was out. This was a big handicap to our boys, as we have a good many right handers with the stick.

Next Sunday, June 24, the Merchants play the Pontiac Athletic club of Pontiac and a good game is expected. The game will be called at 3 o'clock.

Nethem Loses
A Close One

In one of the best games ever played on the local grounds, the Nethem club lost 1-0 to the fast Dexter team before another large crowd, last Sunday.

The game was a pitching duel between Remus and Cunningham for Nethem and Houpt for Dexter. Houpt pitched a well earned, no hit, no run game and passed but one man. Remus and Cunningham also pitched a gift sized article of ball, granting but five scattered hits between them.

The break came in the sixth inning when consecutive errors by Houpt and Leandowski paved the way for the lone Dexter run. Holmes featured in the field with several excellent catches.

Nethem plays Melawk Club, Sunday, June 24th on the home diamond.

Mrs. Mary Powell, who resides at 641 Forest avenue, had the misfortune to fall down the cellar steps early last week Thursday morning. She lay unconscious for some time before she was able to crawl upstairs and finally got out on the back porch, where she was seen by a neighbor, who went to her assistance. Later she was taken to the University hospital by Mrs. Forest Gorton. Both of Mrs. Powell's wrists were broken, and she suffered a severe cut upon the head and was painfully bruised.

Mrs. Arthur Stevens wishes to thank all the ladies and gentlemen who contributed so beautifully with flowers and post cards, to the enjoyment of her birthday. In the evening a number of neighbors and friends walked in with more flowers and well-filled baskets for a six o'clock dinner. Mrs. Anna Root presented the birthday cake, decorated with 17 candles, ten representing ten years each and seven one year each. After supper the boys and girls washed the dishes and the rest of the evening was spent in visiting.

Boldest of Birds

There is no bird, perhaps, so inquisitive, so familiar, so "cheeky" as the robin, and so it is not surprising that this bird should so often choose some discarded article of domestic use as a suitable receptacle, after sundry modifications, for its eyes and subsequent family. Next to the robin in point of boldness and familiarity with man comes the wren, but the pair who were so self-possessed as to convert a scarecrow into a desirable residence, were gifted with more than ordinary daring. Possibly they knew that the old coat was not hung there over the row of newly-sown peas to scare away such respectable individuals as themselves, or perhaps they did not recognize the apparition as what it was intended to represent.

Reached a Final Decision
By DUFORD JENNE

"SO THAT is the final word, is it, Avery?" he asked, looking off into the fragrant southern night with a sense of desolation.

"Please don't make it hard for me. I do like you, I enjoy being with you; but, Rand, I'm not just—just ready—my music, you know, is half my dream," she said gently.

"I wonder—I wonder if you will do just one thing more for me. I hate to ask you—but if this is really close to the happiness of one I love," he appealed, hesitatingly.

He felt her warm, slender fingers seek his.

"I can't give you myself," she warned him quietly, "but anything else—ask and see."

He pondered his request—should he make it or should he not?

"It's just this, Avery. Father, as you know, is alone. Mother's been dead for twenty years. Father, as we know, has only a few months more to live, and he knows it. I took you to the old home, he says you, and came to love you in those arid hours we were there. He's reached the point where memories are pretty dear to him, and he likes to talk of the old home once more as he knew it—with a lovely girl in it with me, when he had gone. Somehow, I felt sure enough of you to let him believe we were close to engagement. I am sorry the situation is thus.

She smoothed his hand with gentle touch. "I can forgive that deception."

He raised her hand to his lips. "But the trouble is I cannot seem to get courage to tell father. And what I—"

"Go on, Rand."

"—am wondering is, will you go again with me, and I except for the intimate things, act as if we were engaged. It is only a matter of a few months, and next week you go North. I know it would bring comfort to him in these last, hopeless hours. I know it is an unusual request, Avery, and don't hesitate to say 'No.'"

She drew his arm under hers and slipped closer to him.

"It's a noble kind of deception, and I will be party to it, my dear. You make the arrangements, and I will go," she said with finality.

Rand brought the car to her hotel the next morning, and soon the powerful motor was whispering its message of swift miles passing.

He looked down at the dark head at his shoulder, smiled a bit at the chic hat, and wished he could kiss the smooth satin of the cheek he could see under the hat's brim.

"Don't let me make this a sad journey, Avery. Father is a pitiful sight to me, but he has his old courage still. This is the last trip we take until you go North, you know, so I want you to enjoy it," he suggested.

"Oh, I shall," she said, smiling up into his eyes with her dark, winsome glance.

"Then why so still?"

"I'm a-thinking and I never learned to think out loud," she retorted.

He chuckled at her reply and told her a story of an old darky on his father's place whose habit of thinking out loud constantly got him into trouble. The tale lightened the mood of the trip, and he drove the thoughts of her coming departure from him as he spun tales of the country he knew so well.

After gorgeous miles through the beautiful Virginia valleys he swung up a drive over which ancient trees leaned, and stopped before a broad portico.

"Welcome home, my lady," he said as he helped her to alight.

Her face changed, but she answered lightly, "I thank thee, my prince."

The old darky who came hastily if somewhat rheumatically out to greet them led them inward, and Rand took her hand.

"It will be simple, Avery. Just leave it to me, and I'll try not to make it embarrassing for you," he said with doubt as to her attitude.

She pressed his hand. "I promise you."

Rand ushered her into the bedroom. His father turned his thin but fine, aristocratic, high-bred face to them from the great bed.

"Youngsters, I am so glad to see you!" he said gently but eagerly. "I have been counting the hours since I got your word; and Avery—I may call you Avery?" he said to her.

She leaned from the chair which the darky had placed for her and took his hand. "I know a better word," she suggested.

He smiled. "Avery, my dear, to think you will bring back the loveliness the old house has missed so long." His deep eyes grew tender. "I wish I could be here to see you in it for a little while."

She hesitated just a moment, then said gently: "I should love to be, and can be if Rand is willing to marry me right off!"

"Avery—"

The terrible pain in his eyes made her go to him; as she kissed him, she whispered in his ear: "I mean it dear, beyond all doubt. I decided—on the spot." She turned to the bed where the sick man lay, his thin face aglow with happiness. "It's settled—all but the day—and we want you to choose that," she added, a little tearfully as she felt Rand's arms tremble with the shock of his happiness as he drew her closer to him.

Our Rapid Age
"Is this a genuine antique?"
"It is, madam," replied the dealer.
"Why, here's a mark that indicates it was made less than twenty-five years ago."
"—exactly. You must remember, madam, that we are living in a very rapid age. It doesn't take nearly as long to make an antique as it used to."

FIRST CAMPAIGN BANNER IN PLYMOUTH. The first 1928 presidential campaign banners to be seen in Plymouth are believed to have been posted by K. H. Starkweather. Early Saturday morning, a few hours after Charles Curtis had received the vice-presidential nomination the afternoon before, Mr. Starkweather placed a home-made placard, containing portraits of Hoover and Curtis, in his front door window. He captioned the poster with the words "Its Hoover and Curtis and the Dry Plank Now." Later in the day he placed another placard, an "improved model" he called it, in another window. He posted square portraits of Hoover and Curtis on a colored card. Above the portraits are the printed words, cut out from newspaper headlines and reassembled to suit, reading "Vote for the Dry Plank" and below the portraits appear the words "Hoover-Curtis is the Ticket."

Commencement

is through the library that they may accomplish much in educating themselves.

To the out-of-school boys and girls to whom the routine and discipline of the school have seemed irksome, the library is a welcome resort. We are told that every year in this country nearly fourteen million children leave school after completing the fifth or sixth grades. It is easily understood by the public that these children will form loose habits, tendency to lower their moral standards due to their vast amount of free time. The public library is given a large share of the task of providing the right means for their leisure. Under its direction they are supplied with books and magazines which, when once tasted, will be very popular instead of the sentimental and banary Me Fadden magazines. The library is of a voluntary nature and is thus inclined to the boy and girl tenor of discipline.

Then there may be considered those individuals who, having completed their high school, are inspired by what they have already acquired, to learn more although they cannot attend college. The library, working side by side with the public school system, is the youth's university. It offers genuine courses of study on various subjects which may be pursued by reading the prescribed books.

In addition to these there is a percentage of the foreign born who, enjoying the blessings of this land, are anxious to learn more about it. Even these people have special recognition in the library system. We are now distributed books in the simplest English, from which they may glean the cherished knowledge. Yet we would not deprive them of books in their own language while they are learning the English. To do that would be a backward step and so from the library corners of the cities, loans are received by the branches in many foreign languages and especially in the language most widely spoken in the particular community of each branch. These people are invited to the library perhaps by means of announcements in their pay envelopes telling what kinds of books are available for them.

Within the library walls there is something of value for every individual, whether it be professional or not. The chief industry of the community of every branch library is studied and the books are selected accordingly. Yet there is one way in which the library may serve all of these types of people. In fact every individual in any walk of life, of any age and in any profession. That is in its function as a public mental recreation ground. It is the privilege of any within its reach to draw from its resources books of fiction. The reading of fiction affords the most profitable way of spending our leisure—for in this way we not only relax our minds but we see more of life. No matter how extensively we have travelled, nor how unlimited our knowledge, our lives are very narrow. Fiction opens to us other realms of experience. Give anyone a piece of fiction and you give him an intimacy with a world of experience larger by far than his own. To many persons fiction is the only means of knowing a variety of men, of living moments of lives.

With the unlimited opportunities afforded by the public library before us we can but appreciate more fully the value of this institution, aside from the public school, the greatest in the realm of education. We can hope nothing better for the members of our class than that they may continue their education by this means.

Classmates: Our four years in high school have brought us many joys. On reviewing them we feel no regret. As a class it is our right to take pride in our growth in fellowship and knowledge. As we face the future we trust that in whatever tasks we may undertake we may be inspired by that same spirit which has spurred us on to do our best for the white and the blue.

—Joy McNabb.

KIWANIS CELEBRATE "ALL KIWANIS NIGHT." The Kiwanis clubs of Wayne, Plymouth and Dearborn joined in the observance of "All Kiwanis Night" with a dinner-dance at the Hawthorne Valley Country club last Monday night, at which more than one hundred Kiwanians and their wives enjoyed an evening to the utmost.

"All Kiwanis Night" is an annual institution and is observed by clubs throughout the North American continent at a pre-determined hour simultaneously with a "zero hour" at the International convention. At this moment Kiwanians everywhere stand in silence and with bowed heads to contemplate the objects of this great international organization.

The chef at Hawthorne Valley served one of his famous tenderloin steak dinners, after which an enjoyable program was listened to. The principal speaker was the Rev. Ralph M. Crisman, pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian church, who extolled the virtues and aims of Kiwanis in a scholarly fashion. Dick Valentine's masterful rendition of three vocal solos was Plymouth's contribution to the evening's entertainment.

Dancing to the strains of Patterson's seven-piece orchestra rounded out one of the most pleasing of Kiwanis socials. Thirty-five Plymouthites were in attendance.

He is survived by three sons, four daughters, 11 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The Last Dance With Her

MARION WOODS heard the news the week after her misadventure standing with Rolfe Burton—Sadie Smith brought the word, as she always did, of every event in the town. "My dear," said Sadie Smith, "I just came in to talk to you with you—of course you would know all about it."

"If I knew what you were talking about—" began Marion when Sadie burst in with an amazed expression on her chubby face. "Why—it's about Rolfe—they say he is going to sail for South America the last of the week. Why, Marion, how pale you are!"

"That need not stop your flow of news, Sadie," smiled Marion. "To reassure you, really, I did not know that Rolfe expected to go to South America."

Sadie's large bright eye had flashed to the third finger of Marion's left hand. It was quite bare! Always she had seen Rolfe's engagement ring on the slim finger. Now it was gone!

"I thought you were engaged to Rolfe," she said suddenly. "Did you?" asked Marion sweetly. "They say that Mrs. Burton will give a party for Rolfe before he sails," went on Sadie. "I suppose you will be there, Marion?"

"I have not been invited," said Marion. "None of us have, silly. I suppose Mrs. Burton will write notes to us or telephone. Well, I must be on my way—so busy this morning." And she was away. Marion knew, primed with the additional information that as she was no longer wearing Rolfe's engagement ring, the engagement must be broken.

Among those who heard that phase of the affair was Tom Lincoln who was studying law in Judge Carter's office, and he closed his books, attended to one or two important matters and went home early. That evening he called upon Marion Woods.

"It isn't a matter of the law," he said with a grimace on his hand some face. "I came up for air," remarked Tom. "And speaking of frivolity, did you receive an invitation to Mrs. Burton's dance?"

"Yes—this morning." "I am hoping that you will let me be your escort!"

"Not you, Tom, but father will drive me there. I am very glad that you will be there, though."

"How many dances may I have?" "Ask me afterwards, Tom. I am usually engaged for the last dance—I think the others are open."

Tom swallowed hard. "Who is she saying that last dance for?" he asked himself savagely, and suddenly before his jealous eyes was a vision of gay Rolfe Burton. Still, Marion was not wearing an engagement ring this evening and Tom took hope.

On Thursday evening Mr. Woods drove his daughter to the Burton house, and as Marion ran up the front steps, she felt the old thrill that used to come when she went to her first dances—the quiver of uncertainty now that Rolfe no longer protected her.

When she came down stairs and was greeted by a rather cool Mrs. Burton, Marion was chattering in a pale green georgette party frock. "There was a little rust of young men toward her but Tom Lincoln reached her first."

Marion danced every dance, and at times she quite forgot Rolfe, who, dressed a great deal with a pretty, dark-haired girl, Maizie Flatler. Once his eyes intercepted Marion's merry gaze and he bowed stiffly, angrily, in response to her gay nod of greeting. Deep in her heart was a little sore spot. Would Rolfe ask her to dance? Would he ask her to dance the last dance just for old time's sake?

She was afraid he would not, but he did come and ask her to dance toward the end of the evening. As they danced, she could feel the almost savage pressure of his arm.

"I could run away with you!" he said savagely. "But you won't," she suddenly laughed at him. "You know that you are angry because I will not marry you at once and rush off to South America with you—I couldn't do that, Rolfe. And I think it must have been the real test of my love. As for you—your family is wounded and—"

"May I have the last dance?" he asked roughly. "I am sorry—" she was beginning when he flung himself away. Marion looked around the room, seeing the whole scene with new vision. There was a sense of freedom that she had not known since her engagement to Rolfe Burton. She had not realized how he had dominated her, and how his proud, overbearing disposition had at last worn her love to brittleness. Now it had snapped, and she was free.

When Tom Lincoln came and asked again for the last dance, she nodded gladly, and under Tom's guidance she found that dancing was a new pleasure. When he put her in her father's car, Tom whispered: "Is this just a dream—or might it happen again?"

And she murmured: "I hope, very often."

And somehow, the pinky rose from her shoulder found its way into Tom's outstretched hand.

Blame the Women! "Poor George!" "What's his latest hard luck?" "After saving tobacco coupons for seven years he figured that in a couple more years he'd have enough to get a fishing rod he coveted."

"What happened?" "His wife and daughter started smoking, and in three months they all had enough coupons—" "To get the fishing rod?" "No, to get a hand-carved moose burner."

The girls of the junior department of the Sunday school had a picnic at Cass Benton park on Tuesday afternoon. The guests of honor were Miriam and Jean Joffine, who so soon are to leave us. We shall miss them both as they have been so active in all our Sunday school affairs. We hope they will like their new home at Oklahoma City.
The June meeting of the Philatelia class last Friday was a very pleasant affair taking the form of a farewell party for our leader, Mrs. I. N. Dickerson, who with Mr. Dickerson and Miss Hazel Raynor leave next week for a motor trip to Colorado and other western points. We met at beautiful Cass Benton park and at one o'clock some forty members and friends sat down to a delicious picnic dinner. Following this was an informal program of stunts, etc., at which time Miss Mabel Spicer presented Mrs. Dickerson with a lovely fitted traveling case, a gift from the class, who all wished her a pleasant trip and a safe return next fall.

Build Against Any Kind of Weather

The folks nowadays are particularly interested in the quality of the material that goes with their homes. They are looking more definitely for permanence.
The material that is used in the construction of an A-HOME is weather resisting—its preservation does not depend solely on paint as the quality of the lumber used gives permanence that appeals to particular people.
A visit to our factory for inspection of material places you under no obligation.

GERMAN AND HUNTER COME THROUGH

DE-HO-CO LEADS IN INTER-COUNTY LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP RACE.

The account of last Sunday's Inter-County League game between Rochester and De-Ho-Co would not be complete if German and Hunter, battery for De-Ho-Co, were not credited for a major part in the engagement. The veteran German hit Rochester to three hits and blanked them for eight innings, just missing a shut-out by one in the ninth. Hunter, De-Ho-Co catcher, who has been on the sidelines recently, due to an injury, came back strong in support of German.

By walloping Rochester, De-Ho-Co leads the League, as Holly was put to rout by West Point, the same day at West Point.

Smith, Denniston and H. German each copped two hits, out of four times up, increasing their batting average considerably.

Rochester's six errors, back of Morehouse, was responsible for four of De-Ho-Co's runs against them.

Next Sunday, June 24th, Selfridge Flyers of Mt. Clemens, play De-Ho-Co at De-Ho-Co Park. This game promises to give the local fans a real thrill as the Flyers have a reputation, since their entry in the League, as an aggressive bunch of ball players. Last week the Flyers defeated the Mules, 6 to 4, and the Mules are by no means an easy team to beat.

Below is the De-Ho-Co-Rochester box score:

"PLYMOUTH" CAR COMING.

The trend toward naming new cars after historic figures is to be continued, according to an intimation from a Detroit maker last week that a new car, soon to make its bow, is to be called the "Plymouth."

According to the announcement the car has been under construction for some time, but formal decision as to its name was not determined until a few days ago.

It was said the name Plymouth was chosen because the car was to typify the endurance, strength, rugged honesty, enterprise and other virtues of the Pilgrim band who were the first American colonists.

Ancient Rome Gave World Money System

EMPIRE BEFORE "DARK AGES" CONTRIBUTED IDEAS USED TODAY.

The startling contrast between Rome in the years of its greatest conquests under the Caesars and the world in the period of the Dark Ages which followed forms the main theme in an interesting folder distributed by Plymouth United Savings Bank as a part of the history of Money and Civilization which the local institution has prepared for its friends in this community.

While it may seem a long step from Roman victories to modern banking, there nevertheless is a very real connection. Mr. C. A. Fisher, President of the bank, emphasizes the importance of past events when viewed from the standpoint of the present business and financial systems of the world.

To most people the story of Rome's rise and fall as an empire in the early days is well known. They also are familiar with the manner in which the barbarians, overrunning the once powerful nation, wiped out all traces of its advanced civilization within a comparatively short time.

That early Rome had developed a comprehensive system of banking and of coinage is not brought out in most courses in history, however. Nor is the influence that the policies of Charlemagne the Great had upon modern currency presented in the usual high school instruction.

These happenings of years long past have been described in this unique and intensely interesting series of folders. To supplement the text, handsomely executed color illustrations and attractive pen-and-ink drawings have been used throughout the series. An immense amount of research work is evident in the enlightening character of the text.

The person who can pass a test in the fundamentals of our every-day economic life as brought out in the story of Money and Civilization may be credited with being well informed in one field of knowledge that touches us all, but of which most people have only a very slight knowledge. The old Romans, filling up the capital city of the Empire with great treasures secured by conquering other nations, realized that a stabilized currency was needed—and coins stamped with the head of Caesar were accepted without question throughout the empire. There is a real significance in these cherished old museum pieces which survive today—for all through the Dark Ages, when civilization had a setback, coins of this character were hoarded by people who realized that world progress would bring back a system in which gold would be the medium of exchange. Early Rome pointed the way to many things of great importance today in our commercial and private life.

Fish Long Used as Food

From the misty past we can see an example of how much fish was relied on for food for the toilers of time. In Egypt, before 1461 B. C., the consumption of fish as a regular article of food was confined to the workers on the land and the foreign captives who had been made the industrial slaves of the nation. The workmen who constructed the Pyramids—those gigantic memorials of the past—were fed almost exclusively on fish, and it was not till 200 years later that it became a food of luxury for the rich.

In "L'Alimentation Animale," by Monsieur Husson, an accepted authority in France, it is stated that Monsieur Moncharlat, who was entrusted with the drawing up of a report on hygienic progress, divided fish into different categories, according to their nutritive qualities.

Wild Animals Take Toll

In spite of constant warfare waged against the predatory animals by federal and state officials, hunters and trappers, predatory animals cost the farmers and stock raisers of the United States more than $10,000,000 every year. These animals are coyotes, wolves, wildcats, mountain lions and a few bear, together with smaller animals commonly termed "vermin," which include foxes, weasels, mink and skunks. Of these losses, the permittees grazing live stock on the national forests in 1926 lost more than 150,000 head of sheep and cattle, valued at more than $2,000,000.

The Salesman Type?

Two men were sitting opposite each other in a Tube train. Presently one of them produced a notebook and proceeded to make a sketch of the other. After he had completed the drawing he closed the book and put it in his pocket.

The man opposite was both interested and gratified by this attention, and, leaning forward, said, "I presume you are an artist, sir?" "No," replied the other, "I'm not exactly an artist, I'm a designer of door-knockers."—Pearson's Monthly.

COUNTRY WEEKLIES VITAL. THE PYGMIES LEARN HOW. FIJI ISLANDERS.

H. Z. Mitchell's "Sentinel" at Bermuda. Mimi, was the prize as best weekly in the National Editorial contest. This is a good time to remind the public in general, and national advertisers in particular, that country weekly newspapers are most important organs of public opinion and protectors of public welfare.

And their advertising value, per mill line, is not excelled by any publication of any kind.

The reader of a country weekly buys everything, from shingles on the roof to cement in the cellar floor, and every advertiser has in him a possible customer.

Miss O'Brien, adventurous young explorer, returns to St. Paul, Minn., disappointed in the African pygmies. She shot all kinds of game, endured all kinds of hardships and says Africa is all right for a woman, but a little too rough for a man.

"The pygmies are startling little creatures," says she, "but I had to teach them to act wild." She wanted moving pictures of them.

Many American girls could teach any pygmy to act wild, and do so.

Fiji Islanders, bushy haired, active, gave a warm welcome to the monoplane Southern Cross, landed at Suva.

Those Fijians once had an annoying habit of eating white men. This time they only cheered them.

The fliers have beaten all records, including Lindbergh's long distance flight over water. It is 5,538 miles of ocean from Oakland, California, to Suva, Fiji Islands, via Hawaii.

The next hop, 1,700 miles, will take the fliers to Brisbane, Australia, on the way to Sydney. The world is really flying.

The 250 Fiji Islands, about eighty of them inhabited, belong to old grandmother Britannia. She rarely overlooks anything.

When young people that now read this column get their around-the-world flying machines they may find chances to grow up with the country on some of those uninhabited, unexplored Fiji Islands.

Crops in the corn belt have taken an upward turn. The Arkansas River Valley reports, "Wheat will make thirty-five bushels to the acre."

All that is cheerful for the Republican candidate.

Nothing melts irritation on the farm like good rains, good crops, and good prices.

The Fourth of July is almost here, and all over the country preparations are being made. Father is busy purchasing fireworks for the Great Day, while mother is hurriedly replenishing the family medicine chest.

Slow Evolution From Cave as a Dwelling

There was no fireplace in the cave home of the cave man. The fire was built outside the entrance, for it was very seldom that a cave had a hole in the roof which would allow the smoke from a wood fire to escape, and a fire in a cave without a vent was impossible. The fire at the cave's entrance served another purpose. It prevented ravenous beasts from entering and preying upon the occupants. In course of time man learned to build but his early attempts at architecture were very crude. In some cases he burrowed beneath the ground, almost like a rabbit, and dug a kind of cave in which to dwell. Then he learned to build rough houses with trees, and later he acquired the art of building with mud and stones. The brick, as we know it today, was not made until very late in the history of mankind. In the time of Pharaoh, it will be remembered, the Children of Israel were in the habit of making bricks with clay and straw. They had not learned the art of burning bricks, by which the plastic clay would have assumed a nonplastic and hardened form, and the straw was necessary in order to bind the clay together.

Clock Close Approach to Perpetual Motion

The clock which an ingenious Swiss engineer has constructed depending for its energy solely on changes in temperature and air pressure, is certainly novel, but it is not an example of perpetual motion. It does not create its own energy, but utilizes external sources.

The nearest approach to a perpetual motion clock is one invented by Lord Kelvin. It consists of a microscopic piece of radium in a glass tube supported in an exhausted glass vessel. Two aluminum leaves attached to the tube are expanded by a positive charge from the radium until they touch the sides of the containing vessel, when the charge goes to earth and the leaves fall back. This operation is repeated every minute, and will continue for many years, so slowly does radium exhaust its marvelous energy.

Ocean's Strangest Creature

The ocean harbors no creature more strange and interesting than the sea elephant. Considering that the sea elephant measures 21 to 22 feet in length and from 15 to 18 feet around, he is actually bigger than our land elephant.

The male has an extraordinary snout, or trunk, 18 inches from tip to eye. When sleeping, this snout rests in a shapeless mass on the sand. When the animal is crawling, the snout is flaccid and pendant. Often the trunk will relax and fall into the open mouth, or when the head is turned up it may even fall back. Despite the ungainly looks of these animals, they are able to bob along on a level surface as fast as a man can walk. In the water they are very active and agile. Diving in graceful curves and nosing into the crest of a wave, they come up with their catch. —Field and Stream Magazine.

Beauty

Beauty is the fragrance of life; it yields an attraction apart from its form, and glorifies the atmosphere of its being with an excitement that adds to the universal peace of goodness. Beauty is truth, and truth is goodness. Give us the beauty of simple, truthful human conduct, and the painful dissensions that characterize our relationships would cease, and the vast and expensive machinery required to keep law and order might be turned into productive channels. The opportunity is ours, and its neglect is disastrous, as with all the laws that exist for our progress and our well-being.—Henry Brew.

Country's Gold Coinage

Free and unlimited coinage of gold exists in the United States. Standard gold bullion may be deposited at the mints and at the assay offices in any amount, to be coined for the benefit of the depositor, without charge for coinage, but when other than standard bullion is received for coinage a charge is made for parting or for refining, or for alloy, as the case may be. Refusal of gold bullion of less value than $100, or when it is too base for coinage, may be lawfully made at the mints.

Requisites for Collies

No color standard has been set by the Collie club for individuals of the breed, but the dogs of black or tan with a white frill and collar, and the showy sable with white markings, and the blue merles are most sought by present-day fanciers. The collie standard requires that males of the breed measure about 24 inches at the shoulder and females approximately 22 inches. The weight for a mature dog should approximate 60 pounds and the bitch 50 pounds.

When Drawer Sticks

When the summer moisture swells the drawers of a dresser, sideboard or cabinet, the handy man of the house usually can make them work smoothly without much trouble. The edges of the drawer openings and the parts of the drawer that stick may be rubbed with a piece of paraffin wax or wax candle; even a piece of hard soap will answer. Usually this will relieve all but the worst places, and these may be touched lightly with a plane.—Popular Science Monthly.

President Coolidge will have a hard time saying "I Do Not Choose to Run" to the Wisconsin mosquito borders!

Those who looked forward to a real exciting convention are quite disappointed that it is not being held in Chicago. Scarsdale, N. Y., has won a legal battle to close its air to airplanes. Seems to us there will be some difficulty in putting up the notices!

AT THE THEATRE

"THE HAWK'S NEST"

The gravest enemy of society, the dapper criminal who looks like an ordinary business man, is portrayed by Milton Sills in his new First National starring production, "The Hawk's Nest" which will be seen at the Penniman Allen Theatre Sunday and Monday, June 24 and 25.

In this thrilling underworld photoplay, criminals are depicted on the screen as they actually look and act, according to Sills.

"Modern criminals," said Sills, "do not have homely, leering countenances. They do not wear loud-colored, ragged sweaters and wear 'safe-blowers' caps, as is often misrepresented in literature and on the stage and screen.

"To all outward appearances they are respected members of society, well dressed, quiet spoken men, seemingly of important affairs and big business deals. The homes they live in are as fine as the bank presidents. For this reason they are the greater menace for to them crime is a smooth functioning, organized business.

"I have spoken with police authorities and they told me that I would be surprised to find a notorious crook living in the same block with me, but that it was not at all impossible. The ordinary citizen, they said, would be amazed to find how often he rubs elbows with dangerous gunmen, bandits and criminals in theatres and cafes. It is this type of criminal which we have portrayed in 'The Hawk's Nest.'"

Doris Kenyon plays opposite Sills. The supporting cast includes Montagu Love, George Kotsaros, Sajan, Frances Hamilton and Yola d'Avril. Benjamin Christensen directed.

"LADY BE GOOD"

Do you ever wonder what is going on in the wings and backstage when you attend a legitimate theatre?

You'll find out, at least to a certain extent, in "Lady Be Good," First National's latest comedy featuring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mullan, which comes to the Penniman Allen Theatre, Thursday, June 28.

"Lady Be Good" is a story of vaudeville performers, with most of it occurring in the dressing rooms and backstage. Arguments, quarrels, disagreements, all sorts of things, may be happening just a few feet from the stage. But when the entrance call comes, sentences are halted, arguments are temporarily abandoned, fixed smiles appear like magic and the barbers go whispering out to do their turn.

"Lady Be Good," as a musical comedy, had a long run in virtually every large city in America, and its success promises to be duplicated on the screen.

Within the last few years musical comedies have been the inspiration for many successful pictures, mainly of the farcical type.

First National produced "Irene" and "Sally," both with Colleen Moore in the starring role, and Miss Moore is scheduled to start in "Oh Kay" in the near future.

"Lady Be Good" was directed by Richard Wallace.

The supporting cast includes John Miljan, Dot Farley, Nita Martin, Yola d'Avril, Edith Clayton, Jay Eaton and others.

"CHINATOWN CHARLIE"

A large portion of Hollywood gathered excitedly at the 'Top Art Studio' recently to watch the filming of a "thrill sequence" conceived some years ago by the prolific playwright, Owen Davis.

The screen in question is a feature of Johnny Hines' new First National picture, produced by C. C. Burr, "Chinatown Charlie," which comes to the Penniman Allen Theatre Saturday, June 30. The thrill was performed by the comedian, Louise Lorraine, his leading lady, and five vaudeville acrobats, the Mazzetti Troupe, who were engaged by Producer Burr to perform the difficult feat of making a "span of life."

The acrobats were coupled together securely, then swung down to form a human bridge thirty feet wide between two buildings and thirty feet from the ground, enabling Louise

Lorraine to cross and effect her escape from a Chinatown den in a street set built to represent Pell Street in New York's Chinatown.

After his leading lady made the crossing successfully, Johnny Hines followed, gagging his own version of the thrilling escape.

Keep Plants Healthy

by Frequent Bathing

"Many women do not realize that their indoor plants need baths almost as often as do their children, if they are to thrive," declares Prof. O. A. Johannsen of the entomology department at the Cornell university.

"Plants as well as persons need regular cleansing to keep them healthy. Some sort of spray must be used at fairly regular intervals to kill the insect parasites which constantly infest them.

"One of the best home treatments for plants, not only because it is cheap and accessible, but also because it is effective, is soap solution, which can be made at home in five minutes."

"This solution is made by shaving a quarter of a pound of soap or putting a quarter of a pound of soap chips in a gallon of boiling water. Allow it to simmer slowly until the soap is dissolved, then remove it to cool. This will keep for a long time, and can be used at regular intervals. A whisk broom will serve as a sprayer. Dip it into the solution and give the plant a good bath, shaking the soapy water under and over the leaves. The soap cleans the leaves, but a film remains over the breathing apparatus of the bugs.

Many Old Cloisters

in City of London

Ancient cloisters, or parts of them, are still to be found in many parts of London; they are reminders of the days when the city boasted spacious monastic establishments.

In St. Bartholomew-the-Great at Smithfield—relic of a wealthy priory—are some bays of the old cloister. A Zeppelin bomb in 1915 helped to reveal a further portion of this, buried under the present ground level.

Cloisters in miniature, with wooden archings, may be seen at Ely place adjoining the chapel—all that remains of the palace of the bishops of Ely. The cloister garth is planted with fig trees.

St. Paul's has only a few fragments of its old cloisters. They were destroyed with the fabric of old St. Paul's in 1666. It is at Westminster abbey that you may see the finest cloisters in London. Besides the Great cloisters there are the Little cloisters, where the monks' infirmary once stood, and the Park cloister that leads to the Norman undercroft.

Duties of Marine Corps

The United States marine corps is an independent branch of the military service, and though under the direction of the Navy department, may be detailed by order of the President for service with the army. The duties assigned to the marine corps are to garrison the navy yards and naval stations and the defenses erected for their protection; to furnish to all battleships and cruisers and other vessels when necessary a detachment for guard duty and also to assist in the handling of the ship's guns. A mobile force is also always held in readiness at the marine barracks as the first line for foreign service when the occasion may arise. The corps is organized as prescribed for infantry and artillery (serving dismounted) in the army regulations. Officers and men wear the same designating rank as the army, with some slight exceptions, and are armed with the service pistol and rifle.

Not the Right Kind

Perhaps it was the fault of the clerk, who was new to the job. Or some of the blame may rest on the shoulders of the grim-faced old lady. At any rate, it happened a few days ago in a downtown book store.

The old lady approached the clerk, who was standing behind the counter, and, evidently, preoccupied, "Have you got 'A Pitiful Wife'?" she demanded sharply.

"What?" exclaimed the surprised man. "I've got one, but she's not pitiful."

Then another clerk whispered that the customer was asking for a book.—Indianapolis News.

Congratulations

Scholarship is but the foundation on which to build success. We congratulate the graduates on the good foundation represented by their diplomas.

As they launch out into the business or professional world may the years come to them laden with golden opportunities, and may they be prepared to make the most of each opportunity.

There is no preparation as substantial as a growing bank account, for while it is building a ready-cash fund it is also developing thrift, character and a standing in banking circles that is often a greater asset than the money banked.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

THE MAN WHO KEEPS HIS WORD

It is like the shadow of a great rock in a weedy land to run across, as we do occasionally, a man who keeps his word.

You may be able to sue on written promises and contracts put in writing, which are usually binding, but somehow the man who does not keep his word strictly is a slippery customer and it is hard to get hold of him, even with a piece of writing.

The fundamental security for a man doing what he promises is, after all, character.

If a man has character and is upright you are safer in lending him money than if he gives you a mortgage on his farm. Doing business with a liar is never satisfactory. Somehow he will attempt to wriggle out of his promises.

It is easy to detect an honest person. When he owes you money he does not avoid you, but openly and frankly pays you something on account right along. If he cannot pay the whole amount.

The test of the fundamentally honest man is his punctuality in meeting his engagements or in frankly explaining to you why those engagements cannot be met.

The courts are full of people trying to evade their plain engagements.

A man who is in debt sincerely tries to meet that debt whether it hurts him or not. It is very trying and very disturbing to our faith in human nature to find a person who is always looking for alibis, always seeking explanations for not doing as he said he would do.

The good loser, the man who loses and yet is cheerful is the man who is after all one of the chief pillars of the social fabric.

The Test of Peter Keer

By AD SCHUSTER

THE little room on the fourth floor of the ramshackle building in which lived the family of Peter Keer shook whenever an elevated train passed below.

"We'll get out of here," Peter promised again. "I'll get a job of some kind, see if I don't. And then, we can go to the country where I can always work, and the kids will get fat."

Then it was Peter who wrote his advertisement and spent most of the money he had left for its publication.

"For a term of years," it said, "I will bind myself to work as a servant. Will be at your beck and call, do anything that is honest. My family must live and I am for sale. Who will bid?"

Gilson Blagg, the remains of a once active man anchored to a chair by rheumatism, read the advertisement and marked it.

"I was just wondering," he said, "if there was any adventure left in the world, and how far a man would go for it. This appeal may be bunk calculated for sympathy, or it may be real. I'm going to find out."

So Peter Keer was sent the money to travel to the country estate of Gilson Blagg, a servant bound to his master, and the family was assured enough money to keep from want.

"You're mine, you understand that?" Gilson glared at the younger man. "You are to take your orders from my family, and work for me. I'll ask you to do strange things and expect you to do them. Are you ready?"

Peter nodded. There was nothing else he could do.

Then Gilson drew forth a map, a chart, and a bundle of paper.

"You will see," he explained, "they are directions for finding something a treasure perhaps. I got them long ago and was going to do the hunting myself but," he motioned to his legs, "my rheumatism won't let me out. See what you can make of them."

Peter studied over the papers all one night and a part of the next day. When he reported, Gilson smiled.

"Yes, I could have told you that. You go along the ridge to the stunted oak. Somewhere under the oak, you'll find something. It may be the treasure or it may be more directions. That is all I could make of it, too."

So Peter went to digging and it took him more than a week before he found the box. Inside was a small bag of gold coins, no great treasure but the promise of more, for a faded paper with them carried instructions for still another search. The servant brought the bag and paper back to Gilson and was ordered to continue.

It was a fantastic job; at any rate it was paying wages. Three more boxes were uncovered, and with them old Gilson told a story of the eccentric man who used to live in the hills and of this way he had taken to hide his fortune from all but the determined and energetic. In all Peter had dug up several thousand dollars to see Gilson Blagg toss them into a safe. The master shared nothing with the servant. It did not occur to Peter how easy it would have been to run away with one of these bags.

In the last box were directions which seemed ridiculously easy. It meant a journey through a thicket, over a hill, and then: "This is the last stop, the big reward." Peter thought of going on but remembered his instructions. He was to bring each box in as found, to report each discovery to his master.

"H'm, this is different," Gilson agreed. "It says open the door and the treasure is there. Must be a cave or another box. Wish I could go and see. Take your directions carefully and when you reach the spot, look for a door. Look in the tree trunks anywhere, open the first door you see."

So Peter, expecting to find a mysterious hiding place for gold, followed instructions and stumbled out of the thicket into a grove in which nestled a hut. He looked at the house in amazement and remembering his instructions, opened the door.

They were waiting for him, the wife and children, and they set up a great cry when he entered!

"We have been here for several weeks," the wife said. "He told us not to tell a soul or leave the place and that when you came, if you came, we would know you passed the test and were foreman of the ranch."

Blessed Twin Senses

We mortals are asked to walk a pretty straight line. There are pitfalls on both sides of that line and the ones we are apt to overlook are pointed out by Sir C. C. Wakefield in the following passage:

"Of every good quality there is an excess which is undesirable. Excess of self-reliance leads to secretiveness and mullish obstinacy; of curiosity to impertinence; of imagination to hesitation and inaction; of foresight to indecision; of patience to weak submission, and so on. To give due weight, and no more than its due weight, to each ingredient in the composition of our character, we are fortunate if we are blessed with those twin senses, a sense of proportion and a sense of humor. As a sweetener of life, preserving the rich from odious self-satisfaction and helping all to banish the demons of discontent and ill-will, there is nothing to compare with a sense of humor."—Boston Transcript.

Today's Reflections

Dad Plymouth says that when a woman starts out to lead a man a dog's life she often overestimates the hardships of being a dog.

About all that is needed to make your car a public utility is always increasing.

Dad Plymouth says that if everything and everybody has not been investigated then congress will look into it at its next session.

"I see where seats on the N. Y. Stock Exchange are selling for $395,000, so I've about decided to stand up awhile longer," says Dad Plymouth.

Better be broad-minded than broad-shouldered, but a little of each is a good combination.

"I'm not anxious to have time turn backward in its flight," declares Dad Plymouth "because I got too many lickings when I was a kid."

According to Dad Plymouth a man who is married to the wrong woman can get a mighty long ways from home without getting homesick.

Why is it a Plymouth man will take it as a compliment if you say "he's level-headed" but consider it a knock if you say he's far-headed?

Married life would be bliss if a wife would try as hard to hold her temper as she tries to hold her complexion.

We often wonder why the Department of Agriculture is always trying to exterminate every kind of bug but the humming.

Plymouth people don't seem to be any happier now than they were in the old days when they called it "greens" instead of "dandelion salad."

A Michigan court rules the owner of a car is responsible when a relative is driving? Does that include a relative by marriage who drives from the back seat?

When a Plymouth woman becomes ill she puts on a newly ironed nightgown and fixes up her hair, but when a man takes down he lets himself go to seed and looks like something the cats dragged in.

There are many gasoline saving devices on the market but a good pair of comfortable shoes is the best one.

When we hear a Plymouth man talking bossy to his wife in public we know he's going to do a lot of re-nudging when he gets home.

It has just about gotten so in this country that a girl's knees makes no impression on the public unless they knock together.

The oldest postmaster in the country is 96. Wonder if he regrets having formed the habit of reading postcards in early life.

Why is it that when a Plymouth woman can't think of anything else for her husband to do she orders him to get his hair cut?

A Seattle Judge rules a married woman's beauty is not separate property. That's right. The husband who buys the paint and powder has an equity.

Ever stop to think what an awful life a moth leads? It spends the summer in a fur coat and the winter in a bathing suit.

The only objection some Plymouth husbands have to the vacuum sweeper is they can't get a straw out of it to clean their pipes.

The Maine hen that laid 363 eggs in your nest believe that a cackle a day keeps the bachelorette away.

A bell may be worth 85, as the doctors say, but we're not taking any on subscriptions.

Some people are beginning to think that "Father's Day" celebrations are made just as a ruse to keep Father home at least one day in the year!

Trace Art of Weaving to Prehistoric Times

Spinning was the invention of Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, in the lore of the ancients, and Arcas, King of Arcadia, developed the art about 1300 B. C.

The wife of Tarquin was credited with being an expert spinner, and a garment that she wove was worn by Servius Tullius and afterward preserved in the Roman Temple of Fortuna.

According to Pliny, the honor of inventing weaving belongs to the Egyptians, but its origin is prehistoric, relating Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, managing editor of the New Standard dictionary. There are many Biblical references that indicate that the Israelites were expert at this intertwining of threads to form cloth, but so also were the Persians and Babylonians, as well as other ancient nations, all of which earned fame through their products. Even the ancient Britons seem always to have had some knowledge of clothmaking, probably derived from the Gauls, who once peopled England.

According to the Roman historians, Caesar's legions, when they landed in Kent, found the natives well advanced in the arts. The inhabitants of southern Britain were familiar with the dressing, spinning and weaving of flax and wool before the arrival of the Romans, but their neighbors, the Gauls, had practiced them even longer.

—Detroit News.

According to the American Museum of Natural History, New York, is all for the wedding bells and orange blossoms. He believes from a study of the facts and figures that a man has a much better chance married to survive the terrific strain of modern existence than if he stays single.

Doctor Osborn bases his theory on a study of the careers of graduates of the class of 1877 of Princeton university. He had a record of those who married in the last 50 years and of those who remained single. Forty-two per cent of the married graduates survived their fiftieth anniversary, while only 25 per cent of the bachelors are living today.

The graduating class of 50 years ago averages seventy-two years; with only 52 of the 172 men who matriculated with the class still living. Once married, the men of each profession not only lived 12 years longer on the average than the bachelors, but 45 per cent of them still survive, as opposed to 25 per cent of the single men.

"Some credit for this record must be given to the good housewives," says Doctor Osborn, "and to their ceaseless vigilance over overcoats and rubbers."

Elkhart, Indiana—Doc, a "common cur" owned by Homer Mercer, has proven himself a brave, thoughtful dog.

Queen, a German police dog owned by George Merrill, has been missing for ten days and many searches had failed to find her.

Doc was observed to have acquired a new trick. Instead of eating all his food, he carried some away, presumably to bury it. When Mercer heard Queen had disappeared, he recalled having heard a dog howl and investigated.

The alert Doc led his master to a vine-covered wire fence under a tree and there was Queen with one hind foot caught in the wire. Doc had kept Queen from starving by carrying food to her.

Queen is hobbling about on three legs, recovering from her ten days' imprisonment.

LONG LETTER TO MOTHER ANSWERED BY FIREMEN!

New York, N. Y.—Bridget Daly, 14, who came to this country a week ago and obtained employment as a maid, wrote a long letter to her mother and then inquired how to mail it.

She was told to walk to the corner and place it in a mail box attached to a telephone pole. Instead of placing the letter in the mail box, she pulled a lever in another box and then stood to one side to wait for the postman.

Instead of a postman a half dozen pieces of fire apparatus drove noisily to the corner! As it was decided she had not rung the alarm with "malicious intent," Bridget was not arrested.

A cow was found on the roof of a metropolitan apartment house, and everybody wondered how it got there. We know. It had to go on the roof, as there was no room for it in any of the apartments!

Hints for the Home
by Nancy Hart

Next time you want to make a Bou Voyage gift, try baking a variety of home-made cookies cut in fancy shapes and attractively packed in separate boxes.

Wrap each box in a different fancy paper of futuristic design in high colors and use gold seals or gold paper tape for tying. Then tuck the boxes into a gay raffia bag, with a clever greeting card to speed the traveler on his way.

Use only half quantities for the recipes, and you will find this an economical gift—with plenty of delicious cake left over for the family.

COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD

Drain juice from pint can shredded pineapple, add water to make a pint; bring to boil and dissolve in it a package lemon-flavored gelatin. When slightly thickened, fold in pineapple, a cup cottage cheese, and season with salt and cayenne. Lay strips of pimiento in mold, fill with gelatin mixture and chill. Serve with cream mayonnaise.

COLORLED MELON PICKLES

When making melon pickles, divide fruit into three parts of white, red and green pickles. Prepare syrup of one cup water and one pound sugar (beet or cane) to each pound fruit. With syrup for white pickles boil one sliced lemon for flavoring. For red, spice with cloves and color with "Red Hot." For green, use cinnamon and green vegetable color. Seal separately.

MAKES THEM LIKE PRUNES

Prune Toast is a delicious breakfast dish made by browning thick slices of Vienna bread in butter or margarine. Then turn into the pan a half pound stewed seeded prunes cooked very soft. Heat, pour over toast, dust with powdered sugar and serve with cream.

TO REMOVE CHEWING GUM

Place a piece of ice over chewing gum that adheres to cloth; scrape off as much as possible with a dull blade, then wash spot with gasoline or alcohol.

KEEPS PENS CLEAN

One dip of the pen in a small quantity of ammonia makes the pen as bright as new. This is helpful when using various colors of ink.

HAVE A BRIGHT OVEN

If you will paint the inside of the oven with aluminum paint it will be much easier to see what's going on inside.

CHANGING PICTURES

An occasional change of pictures in a room has a freshening effect that is quite comparable to bringing in a bright bouquet of flowers. It is a mistake to leave the same pictures in the same positions year after year.

WHEN HUSKING CORN

To remove corn silk with the least effort, first husk the ear, then brush towards the stem end with a clean whisk broom.

IF YOU HAVE NO EGG-BEATER—

A fruit jar can be used for beating eggs quickly. Rub jar with cold water to prevent eggs sticking; break the eggs into the jar, seal and shake.

SALT CLEANS SINK

Sinks and drains can be kept free of grease and odors by pouring hot salt brine through them once or twice a week.

Chilly Forecast

The earth is growing in bulk on account of the meteoric dust that falls on it. It has recently been estimated that 100 tons fall daily over the surface of the globe and that millions of years hence this will have increased the thickness of the earth considerably. This would have a tendency to bring us closer to the sun. But centrifugal force is augmented at the same time in greater proportion and counteracts this tendency; consequently the earth would be swept away from the sun, with the result that its distance from that body would be considerably augmented. This is spoken of as having possibly happened to some of the larger, outer planets—notably Jupiter—in the remote past.

Why Bishop Quit Betting

That he spoke from experience when denouncing betting, was the declaration of Stirling Woodcombe, bishop of Whitby, at a meeting in York, England, recently. "While at Oxford I was lucky and became extremely interested," he said. "My last bet was ten shillings on a five-to-one winner of the Chester cup, yet my friend and I received after the race never to bet again, not because we had lost—we had won a considerable sum—but because we were finding out that when betting enters into you it saps your highest interests. I believe it would have driven me to hell if I had gone on with it."

For Preservation of Fine Colonial Homes

More than any other city in the country, the atmosphere of the Seventeenth century is retained by the city of Annapolis. It has many landmarks and institutions of the pre-revolutionary days, including ancient trees, structures and customs around which the romance of history has been woven. There are several particularly fine specimens of homes of that period, but the touch of modernism has threatened some of these and the movement to preserve them for all time has been inaugurated by the administrators of St. John's college. It is one of the oldest institutions of higher learning in this country. Three signers of the Declaration of Independence aided in the formation of the college and their homes, still preserved, are but a short distance from the college campus. The houses which the college proposes to preserve are the Pinckney house, the Brice house, the Hammond-Harwood house and the Peggy Steuart house. The latter was built by the owner of the vessel which caused the Peggy Steuart Tea party, which was a counterpart of the Boston Tea party.

Query as to "What's in a Name?" Answered

Mitchell Kennerly, the art expert, said at the Lotus club in New York: "What's in a name? Lots."

He laughed and then went on: "There's too much in a name. All the French art world is agitated just now over an old painting found in a cellar. Is it a Goya or not? If it's a Goya it's worth a fortune. Merit has nothing to do with the matter. The name alone will determine this faded and moldy picture's worth."

Indians' Use of Metals

The bureau of American ethnology says that Indians and Eskimos were not skilled in the working of metal previous to the coming of the whites, although copper had come into use in the Great Lakes region. However, the copper implements were made by hammering the soft metal. Ivory and bone were used by the Eskimos, and there have been a few occurrences of meteoric iron being worked to a limited degree. The Indians used stone, bone and shell implements extensively. Metal working in copper and bronze was quite highly developed among the Indians of Central America and northern South America before the arrival of the whites.

New Mesopotamia

In the northern part of Argentina, touching the borders of Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, is found a country whose physical condition is strikingly similar to that of Mesopotamia, earliest cradle of civilization. It is bordered by two rivers, the Parana and the Uruguay, corresponding to the Asian Tigris and Euphrates. Formed between them is a fertile valley, as yet little developed, says the Department of Commerce, but capable of supporting a large population. Its climate, too, is much like that of ancient Babylonia, for it is just about as far south of the equator as the latter country is north.

Self-Education

Ignorance is no sin, but to remain in ignorance and not to strive for the acquisition of knowledge is sin. The most important and most vital lessons of life may be learned without a college education. Love and kindness and usefulness and gentleness need not be learned in colleges. They are within reach of all who desire to attain them. Men and women of energy and character should not be dismayed by their lack of education. They can educate themselves. The hard and rugged facts and truths of life will be the objects of their pursuit.—True Experiences Magazine.

Mazamet Wools

Mazamet is a small town in southern France, where the principal business is the pulling and scouring of skin wools; that is, wools imported on the skins. These skins may be from Australia, South Africa or elsewhere. Therefore, there is no such thing as Mazamet wool entering into direct competition with our domestic product. Wools pulled and scoured in that town are known in the trade as Mazamet wools, but that has little significance, as such wools are actually classed as Australian, or what-not, when they come to be resold.

An Up-to-Date Girl

On his first visit to the hospital to see a new baby sister, four-year-old Paul seemed much interested in the strip of tape about her wrist, which bore a number.

On his second visit several friends of the family were present. As soon as the baby was brought in he rushed to the bedside and began to undo the blanket about her.

"What are you doing?" his mother asked.

"I want to show them her license," was his matter-of-fact reply.—Children, the Magazine for Parents.

Proponents of a third party have evidently forgotten the old saying about two being company and three being a crowd.

There are more automobiles than farms in Iowa, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce proudly announces. The farms may be outnumbered by the automobiles, but, for one thing, they never leave the state!

No Way of Recovering Time One Has Wasted

Punctuality in daily life is of prime importance to the individual who would succeed, points out an editorial in Liberty Magazine. "Punctuality," warns the editorial, "is a business asset. If you have an appointment with a man and are ten minutes late, you lose. You have made a big mistake. If the appointment is with your wife or sweetheart, to meet her in the lobby of the Whoois theater at 2:30, and you get there at 2:35—well, it makes the matinee considerably less pleasant. If the lady in the case is your best girl you probably won't be late anyhow. But she may keep you waiting; that is just discipline.

"But, on the whole," concludes the editorial, "if you and everybody would go through life five minutes ahead of time, the course of things would be much more pleasant. Desires would be fulfilled more swiftly and success would be more willing to perch on the proper banners. We have a definite capital of time—just so much in a day or a week or a year. It is just as bad to waste money or health. The rewards of conserving it are just as sure, and the penalties of not doing so just as inevitable."

Penetrated Secret of Statue's Golden Head

Hannibal Tosci, a wealthy Italian who died recently, is said to have acquired his wealth in a most romantic way. Years and years ago there was erected on a highway near Naples a stone which bore this inscription in French: "On the first of May in every year at six o'clock in the morning I have a golden head." For many years persons flocked to the scene at the appointed hour for the purpose of witnessing some miracle, until finally, as nothing ever happened, they concluded it was a fraud and no attention was paid to it.

One morning in 1841, Tosci, then a lad, happened along and an idea occurred to him. So, on the succeeding May day he was on the spot at six o'clock in the morning and dug a hole at the point where the shadow of the head of the monument fell. Soon he discovered an old leather knapsack which was filled with gold amounting in value to 50,000 francs.

Old Belief a Myth

There is a popular belief that a dog is not permitted to cross large bridges, such as the Brooklyn bridge, because of the vibration and consequent danger to the bridge that his regular and even tread would cause. Of course it is a myth. It is based on the same theory that one soldier walking over such a bridge in regular step would produce more vibration than a regiment of soldiers marching "rout step." For the reason when troops march over a bridge the officer gives the order "rout step." If all the men kept step on a long bridge the vibration would be considerable and might cause danger. But a cat or dog would have no appreciable effect on a large modern bridge.

He Had Tried It

Mother is fond of pointing a moral when she tells stories, but young Clifford is not always properly impressed. One morning when she was uncertain whether or not he would relish the nourishing cereal she had prepared for him, she began telling him a story as she dressed him, a story about a big, healthy boy who was big enough to go to school. "And," she said in an impressive tone of voice, "what do you suppose this fine, big boy had for breakfast?" In the uncanny wisdom of his three years, Clifford replied: "Oh, I know. Something he didn't like, but it was very, very good for him."

Junior's Discovery

Walter, Junior, persisted in sucking his thumb. His mother had made small progress in breaking the habit, when his grandmother decided to take a hand. One night, as she prepared him for bed, she surreptitiously anointed his thumb with a harmless, ill-tasting drug. She tucked him into bed and returned to the living room. Soon she heard a startled and insistent wail. "Grandmother, come here. My thumb thmelt green and tathth thomthing awful."

Which Paper Is That?

Toots was the sort of twenty-year-old maiden who believed anything and that the moon was made of green cheese. She was famous for that. One evening at a social gathering Toots was harkening to the speech of a new bride who said she was going to join the Eastern Star, as it was an excellent organization. Toots blinked her eyes comprehendingly and asked, "Is that a newspa-

Early English Coinage

A penny of gold, struck during the reign of Henry II, was England's first gold coin. Edward I followed with silver half-pennies and farthings, for the first time made round instead of square. Then, in succeeding reigns followed the gold florin and noble, the silver groat and half-groat. Edward IV added the gold angel and half-angel and in Henry VII's reign came the sovereign, double and half-sovereign and the testoon, a shilling, of silver.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Asman, teacher of history in the High School, took her Ancient History class on a trip to the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor last Saturday and they had a very enjoyable and profitable time there.

Those of the class who went with Miss Asman were: Doris Jewell, Eleanor and Margaret Sackett, Mildred Towle, Anna Golden, Frances Ingall, Lois Martin, Charles Root and Frank Clemens.

Rose Neldospal, of the B first grade at the Central School, was the only one in the room who was neither absent nor tardy during the whole semester and she was rewarded by receiving a present from her teacher on the last day of school.

Dorothy Barnes, Doris Buzzard, Dale Ford, Virginia Hood, Isabell Naim, Rose Neldospal and Barbara Zeitsch, of the B first grade, received silver star pins from the Palmer Company for excellence in writing at the honor assembly at the school last Monday. This is the first time that Palmer pins have been given to the little people who have been in first grade less than five months. Those from the A first grade to receive pins were: Carol Campbell, Lloyd Ellis, Charles Hadley, Harold Hills, and Elton Williams.

Odd Reason for Delay

Mr. Jones rang the bell at the new doctor's house. Usually he went to his old family doctor, but the new man happened to live nearer and it was an urgent call.

The doctor's wife answered the ring. "You wish to see the doctor?" she said. "Couldn't you come tomorrow morning?"

"Why," said Jones, "isn't the doctor in?"

"Oh, yes, he's in," said the woman, wistfully, "but you're his first patient, and I'd like you to come as a surprise for him tomorrow. You see, it's his birthday."

Ancient English Dance

In the English morris dance, which evolved from the sword dance, swords are discarded for sticks or handkerchiefs. The morris men, six in number, are dressed in short trousers and jerkins adorned with bright-colored ribbons, gay rosettes, flowers and greenery. They wear a pad of bells on each knee. The dance is usually done in the spring, especially during Whitsun week. Years ago the men in it blackened their faces to disguise themselves, which made them look like Moors, and this led to the dance being called Morisco, and later morris.

Only in Spots

Man is well on in the scientific plane of thinking, but he is not scientific all over and through and through, so to speak. There are large areas in him that are primitive, ancient and medieval; he walks about with vestigial and atavistic mental as well as physical organs and processes. He carries in him not only the Twentieth century, but probably all the centuries that have gone before, since the beginning of life. Consequently, he is Twentieth century only in a spot of two.—Plain Talk Magazine.

Henry and His Resolutions

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

THERE is no doubt but that Henry had risen to be assistant cashier in the local bank by what might be termed the "schedule process."

That is to say, he had for years got up, lived and gone to bed by neatly typed cards which laid out his twenty-four hours to the best advantage. So many minutes for meals, so many for work, so many for sleep, so many for "advancement," which latter meant study of one sort or another that would give him a boost up.

He had, as a matter of fact, had several boosts, and all of them he laid to the fact that he lived by rule and wasted no time.

It had been fairly easy to follow his self-planned schedules because there had been no outside interference of any sort. His health was excellent, he had no family to make demands of him, and he gave all feminine creatures the icy shoulder.

Then he met Hortense. To be frank about that first meeting, one must say that she fell into his lap. Without intention, however.

His twenty-minute bus ride from work each night was the period Henry devoted to learning a foreign language in fifteen minutes a day. This winter it was French, and he was zealously asking himself questions about the brother of his aunt and the sister of his uncle when Hortense sat down on his book, as the bus swung around the corner.

Henry had never had a young lady on his lap before, even for so brief an instant. And when she stood up and apologized and he looked up into the loveliest pair of blue eyes he had ever seen, he wanted her back again. In lieu of that, he jumped up and offered his seat.

For Hortense took the same bus each night that he did and, having given up his seat to her once, it seemed natural to do it thereafter.

Within a short time their acquaintance had ripened to friendship. And a little later the other bus riders expected Hortense to appear most any day wearing a sparkling ring. They would have been surprised and even politely incredulous had Henry informed them that so far not one word of love had passed between them. Yet it would have been the simple truth. How could it have been otherwise? Henry's schedule gave no time to Cupid.

Came the holidays. For seven years now it had been Henry's custom to take an inventory of his life on that occasion.

So we find him sitting there, this evening in front of his desk heavily stacked with little piles of indexed cards ready for the coming year's schedules. There was also a sheet of paper for his usual list of resolutions.

There were several that he could write down at once:

I will let no outside interest come between me and my work.

I will smoke but one cigar a day.

I will go to bed each night at eleven o'clock.

Resolutions that he had kept without trouble the last seven years.

He paused to dream a moment. How wonderful it would be if he ever became a cashier! As for vice president—

At that instant the telephone rang in the hall below and a moment later his landlady called up to him:

"Mister Archibald. Oh, Mr. Archibald! Young lady on the phone?"

His brow frowned, but his heart skipped gleefully, and he took the stairs two at a time.

"Is that you, Henry?"

"This is Hortense—yes, really."

"I'm having a little party, a very, very small one, and a boy has fallen me. Would you be willing to help me out?"

Now was the time for all good men to go to the help of the schedule. Henry hesitated. Then, and it was really to his great surprise, he heard himself saying: "Why, certainly. I'll be up right away!"

Hortense had correctly called it a very small party. After she had introduced him to her father and mother, she led Henry out to the den where there was a radio. Also a stand with the latest magazines, a box of opened cigars, and two comfortable chairs.

"Where are the others?" asked Henry.

Hortense had the grace to blush. "There are no others," she said.

With that remark it was all over for Henry but the wedding bells. When he went home that night he stood looking down for a moment at the three resolutions he had penned so brief a time before. Then he crumpled them up and threw them in the basket. He had already broken them all.

Several years afterward two men met on a street corner. One of them said: "Saw Henry Archibald today with his pretty wife. Understand he has been made president of the bank."

"Yes," replied the other. "He has. He married Hortense Garvin, daughter of old Garvin, one of the directors."

"Full helps," said the first speaker.

"You bet," said the other. "So long."
